George A. Mayfield, editor of the Arvesia (Cal.) News, is visiting in Louisville, Neb. His son, John Mayfield, also a newspaper man, will have charge of the News during his absence.

Edwin S. Underhill, publisher of the Corning (N. Y.) Leader, has been nominated by the Democratic party for Congress in his district, which he represented in the lower house for two terms and declining a third nomination. Warren S. Morey, editor of the Dansville (N. Y.) Advertiser, likewise has been nominated by the Democrats for the Congressional seat from his district.

A. M. Snook, general manager of the Aurora (Ill.) Beacon-News, together with his family is spending a month in the Canadian Rockies.

Andrew J. McWain, editor of the Batavia (N. Y.) Daily News, has been elected president of the board of education at that city.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

THOMAS J. GILMORE for several years connected with the advertising department of the Memphis Commercial Appeal, has resigned to become the head of a local advertising firm.

Harold L. Goldman, classified advertising manager of the New York Sun is spending his vacation in New Rochelle. During his absence Frank J. Schwarz will be in charge.

Lyman E. Comey, for five years connected with the advertising staff of the Springfield (Mass.) Union Republican and Daily News has resigned to become advertising manager of the Rutland (Vt.) Herald.

Robert R. O'Brien, business manager of the Council Bluffs (Ia.) Nonpareil, is on a hunting and fishing trip in northern Minnesota.

Lou Hoffman, of the classified staff, Chicago Herald and Examiner, and Miss Minerva E. Price, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Price, of Benton Harbor, Mich., are engaged.

J. F. Coss, former managing editor of the Walsenburg (Col.) Independent, has become editor and business manager of the Needles (Cal.) Nugget.

Miss H. Christian, national advertising manager, Omaha (Neb.) World-Herald, is in Colorado on a two weeks vacation trip.

C. E. McGillis, manager of street circulation, Salt Lake City Tribune, and Mrs. McGillis are parents of a son.

Eugene Kelly, general manager of Sioux City (Ia.) Tribune together with his family is spending a two weeks' vacation in the lake region of Minnesota.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

CARTER FIELD, head of the New York Herald Tribune's Washington bureau, joined the presidential party at Paul Smith's, N. Y. on Aug. 16, and will cover the summer white house for the Herald Tribune for the rest of the summer. Mr. Field has just recovered from a severe illness following an operation.

Arthur Wilhelm, head of the St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press art department, has obtained a year's leave of absence while he fills a contract to paint several pictures for the new Lowry Hotel in St. Paul.

F. A. Friedrich, managing editor of the Paterson (N. J.) Morning Call, is touring Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine with his wife and two sons.

James D. Fearin of the reportorial staff, Worcester (Mass.) Telegram, has resigned as chairman of the Veterans Council of the combined patriotic organizations of Webster, Mass.

Edward Price Bell of the Chicago Daily News staff of foreign correspondents is writing a series of articles on Europe's economic and financial crisis.

Norman MacDonald, former night city editor, Springfield (Mass.) Union, has joined the copy desk of the Evening Union.

Hugh Durigan, editor of the daily picture page of the New York Herald Tribune, has returned from a two weeks' vacation.

Ralph Millet, for many years news editor of the Memphis News-Scimitar, is now engaged in special advertising work for the Commercial Appeal.

Bert Klopfer, Dayton, O., newspaper man, has returned to Dayton after several months publicity work in Miami, Fla.

Leland H. Reese of the Chicago staff of the Chicago Daily News has been assigned to cover the Mexican religious crisis and is sending daily stories from Mexico City.

John Clayton, staff correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, has completed a month's investigation of conditions in Mexico and is writing a series of articles for the Tribune.

Warren James Mulroy, reporter on the Chicago Daily News, winner of the 1924 Pulitzer award for reportorial work because of his handling of the Leopold and Loeb murder case and Mrs. Mulroy are parents of a daughter. Mrs. Mulroy was formerly Miss Fayette Krum of the sport staff of the News.

Virgil A. Wyatt, former owner of the Oxnard (Cal.) Tribune, recently purchased by Norman H. Park, is back with the San Diego (Cal.) Sun, with which he was connected before going to Oxnard. Mr. Park was formerly editor of the Holtville (Cal.) Tribune.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smothers announce the birth of a son. Mr. Smothers is a staff reporter on the Chicago Daily News.

Chanler Chapman, son of John Jay Chapman of New York, and a reporter and copyreader on the staff of the Springfield (Mass.) Union for the last two years, has resigned to go to Barrytown, N. Y.

Clarence L. Moody, city editor, Quincy (Mass.) Patriot Ledger, and Mrs. Moody and little daughter Barbara, are spending a vacation at Rangeley Lakes, Me.

Miss Emma Bugbee of the staff of the New York Herald Tribune is spending her vacation at Center Lovell, Me., with Miss K. Phelps, secretary to the managing editor, and Miss E. I. Toms, secretary to Ogden Reid, editor of the Herald Tribune.

Wm. Clift has been named sports editor of the Knoxville Journal.

Robert W. Read, formerly sports editor, Daytona Beach (Fla.) Journal, has returned to his home at Columbus, O., to do publicity work.

J. R. Kennard, feature editor, Salt Lake City Deseret News, is on a motor trip to Yellowstone National Park.

Albert S. Piers, dean of Kentucky newspaper photographers, has resigned after a decade with the Louisville (Ky.)

(Continued on page 28)

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

M. F. HANSON, lately elected vice-president of Consolidated Publishers, Inc., the holding company of the Paul Block newspaper and special representative enterprises, and vice-chairman of the executive board which directs the policies of that business, has had almost four decades of newspaper experience. For 30 years Mr. Hanson was associated with the late John Wanamaker, first as advertising manager and later as business manager and publisher of the Philadelphia Record.

M. F. Hanson

Six years ago he became associated with Mr. Block in his purchase of the Duluth (Minn.) Herald, and has since been the active resident head of that daily. He was interested in several of the other newspaper properties controlled by Mr. Block prior to the organization of Consolidated Publishers, Inc., several weeks ago, to acquire the stock of the Duluth Herald, Toledo Blade, Newark Star-Eagle and Lancaster New Era, and Mr. Block's newspaper representative business.

The Toledo Blade

the leading newspaper of Northwestern Ohio and one of the best edited newspapers in the Middle West, has just subscribed for the Central Press Association's Daily Picture Page.

The News and Courier of Charleston, S. C., one of the South's oldest and best edited dailies, has just subscribed for the Central Press Association's daily News Mat and Feature Service.

Hundreds of good newspapers are depending upon the Central Press for their news illustrations, cartoons and features. If you are not, we suggest you get in touch with us.

The Central Press Association

V. V. McNitt, President — Central Press Bldg., Cleveland — H. A. McNitt, Editor and Manager

A Red Letter Day In The Comic Calendar—

SEPTEMBER 19

When

ELLA CINDERS who has been receiving a veritable avalanche of letters from readers of the daily strip, steps forth in

THE ELLA CINDERS COLORED PAGE

By Bill Conselman and Charlie Plumb

on

SEPTEMBER 19

Order the First Release Now!

Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Maximilian Elser, Jr., General Manager — Earl J. Hadley, Associate

150 Nassau St. New York City

(Continued from page 27)

Herald to join the staff of the Courier-Journal and Times.

Cy Berning of the Miami Daily News staff is making an auto trip to Seattle, Wash., and back to Miami, via Yellowstone Park.

Paul Norwood is now doing "Over the Gangplank," the ship news column, for the New York Morning Telegraph and Running Horse.

Francis P. Daily, Washington Herald; T. J. Norton, Daily News; Henry Jones, Post; and L. R. Neely, Star, went by airplane to the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition last week.

Whitney Bolton of the night rewrite staff, New York Herald Tribune has just returned from his home in Spartanburg, S. C., where he went to attend the funeral of his mother.

George V. Blackburn, reporter on the city staff of the Springfield (Mass.) Union for the last seven years, has entered politics as a candidate for the State Legislature from the 2d Hampden District. He is a World War veteran and entered newspaper work after his discharge from the army.

Joseph Schreck, of the Wall Street Journal, has returned from a motor trip in the Catskills.

Ralph Hinkson, of the Dayton (O.) Journal staff, is now in publicity work.

John Gunther of the Chicago Daily News staff of foreign correspondents recently travelled through the Druse country in the hills of Syria first with the French army and later with a Druse guide. He is writing a series of articles for the News describing the life and manners of the Druses.

Storey Buck, northwest editor of the Spokane Chronicle, has filed for the primary election as representative in the legislature in the sixth district. He served one term previously, in the early 1900's. He has also covered the legislature for the Chronicle and at one time was private secretary to the speaker of the house. He has been connected with Spokane newspapers since 1890.

MARRIED

HOWARD L. BROWNLEE, assistant city editor of the Spokane (Wash.) Spokesman-Review, to Miss Sadie G. Johnstone of the advertising department of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, Aug 2, in Portland.

Edward Wolff, editor of the Platte (S. D.) Tribune, to Miss Emiline Tanner of Lake Andes, S. D.

Bessie Beatty, former writer on the San Francisco Bulletin, to William Sauter, Shakespearean actor, Aug 14.

Jack Davis, an electric printing press operator for the Chicago Herald and Examiner, to Miss Sophie Orchel.

Miss Helen Wells, file clerk in the merchandising department of the Chicago Herald and Examiner, to Mr. George Mueller, contributor to the "Line of Type Or Two" column in the Chicago Tribune, Aug. 11.

Sam M. Ballard, former city editor, Miami Daily News and managing editor, Daytona Beach Journal, to Miss Lydia Foster, former staff member, Miami Daily News, at St. Paul's Episcopal church, Richmond, Va.

Ralph McKinley Weltmer, circulation manager of the Pittsburgh Gazette-Times to Miss R. Elizabeth Saylor in Trinity Reformed Church, Altoona, Pa., Aug. 14.

Al Mueller, statistician with the Chicago Herald and Examiner, to Miss Gerlinda Frederichs.

Frank Reighard, editor of the Wauseon (O.) Republican, to Miss Olga Stuemple of Wauseon, Aug. 10.

Roy O. Nevius of the mechanical force of the Monmouth (Ill.) Review-Atlas, to Miss Mary Alice Gawthrop, in Monmouth, Aug 7.

Miss Amy Maguffin, society editor, St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press, to Dudley W. Birdsall, city clerk, Aug. 11. A reception was held at the bride's home, was attended by most of the editorial forces of both papers. Mr. Birdsall resigned from the Dispatch a short time ago when elected city clerk.

Martin Pokrass of the display advertising staff, Chicago Herald and Examiner, to Miss Lenable Freeman on July 21. They are spending their honeymoon in Colorado.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENT

DAVID R. CARLSON, publisher of the Owensmouth (Cal.) Gazette, is erecting a new office building for his plant and business.

Canon City (Col.) Daily American has just completed the erection of a Goss Comet Flat Bed press.

A new Hoe 12-cylinder multi-color press has been purchased by the Cincinnati Enquirer and will form part of the extensive press equipment which the Enquirer is to install in its new $3,000,000 home.

Flagstaff (Ariz.) Sun is erecting a new home. Col. Fred W. Breen is the owner.

A new building has been erected by the Winslow (Ariz.) Mail, and a web press is to be installed. The Mail is owned by Giragi Bros.

Pulaski (Va.) Southwest Times, has just installed a Goss Comet Flat Bed Press.

Hartford Times has placed with R. Hoe & Co., Inc., a press order for two more Heavy-Design Units.

Chicago Tribune has just added ten Goss High Speed low construction press units to their present battery, making a total of 60 Goss press units and 20 pairs of folders.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

T. S. MARTIN, from telegraph editor, Greenwood (S. C.) Index Journal, to state news editor, Asheville (N. C.) Citizen. He is succeeded in the Index Journal by C. B. Williams, a recent graduate of the school of journalism, University of South Carolina.

Ed Mayl, from Daytona Beach Journal editorial staff, to copy desk, Philadelphia Evening Ledger.

Arley Ballard, from Miami Daily News, to editorial department, Kokomo (Ind.) Dispatch.

Lester E. Richwagen from reporter, Concord (N. H.) Monitor to copy desk, Portland (Me.) Express.

Harry D. Jones from city desk, San Pedro (Cal.) Daily Pilot to staff, Compton (Cal.) News-Tribune.

NEW PUBLICATIONS

WITH Ralph Rollins and Robert W. Weekes as owners and editors, the Arizona State Journal, a weekly, is soon to make its appearance.

With Roy W. Coutant as editor, the Independent, twice-a-week, has made its appearance at Flagstaff, Ariz.

Frank M. Colville on Aug. 12, began the publication of the Baldwin Park (Cal.) Progress, a weekly. Mr. Colville was formerly the editor of the Puente (Cal.) Journal.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

KARL BOLL, who has been publishing the Red Oak (Ia.) Sun, a weekly with his brother Frank, since the death of their father several years ago, has disposed of his interests to Frank Boll and Mrs. William Boll.

Will B. Kelly, owner of the Safford Guardian, Clifton Copper Era, Duncan News and Tombstone Epitaph, all Arizona papers, has purchased the Benson (Ariz.) News.

P. H. McCarty has acquired the Hoven (S. D.) Review and this week assumed management of the weekly.

J. C. Jacober has purchased the Tolstoy (S. D.) Journal, a weekly.

Charles Hillebrandt, formerly with the Flagstaff (Ariz.) Sun, has bought the South Pasadena (Cal.) Federated News, a weekly.

E. T. Kreftling of San Francisco has bought the Healdsburg (Cal.) Sotoyome Scimitar, a semi-weekly.

F. A. Wilson and Williams Evans have bought from Mrs. Anna Pier the Almira (Wash.) Big Bend Outlook.

C. F. Brown has bought from J. L. Asbury the Stanwood (Wash.) News.

ASSOCIATIONS

MEMBERS of the WASHINTON AND NORTHERN IDAHO ASSOCIATION of the Associated Press will meet in Spokane August 20 to consider A. P. policy and service.

Annual picnic of the BRITISH COLUMBIA INSTITUTE OF JOURNALISTS was held at Tunstall Bay, Howe Sound, July 25. About 75 members attended.

Annual midsummer outing of the DES MOINES, (IA.) AD CLUB was celebrated Aug. 10, at Waveland clubhouse with the presentation of golf trophies the feature of the evening's events. Roland Harrison, chairman of the golf committee, won the championship flight trophy with Guy Beckett, runnerup. Nearly a score of awards were made.

George M. McCormick, assistant managing editor of the Memphis Commercial Appeal, was recently elected president of the NEWSPAPER MEN'S CLUB OF MEMPHIS, succeeding H. F. Durward, of the Associated Press. Al Capley, city editor of the News-Scimitar was elected vice-president. James C. Caruthers, secretary, and George L. Fossick, treasurer, both of the Commercial Appeal, were reelected. The following were elected directors: William E. Clark and Harry Cherry, of the Press; Thomas Fauntleroy, W. H. Adler and Ralph Millett, of the Commercial Appeal. Mr. Durward, the retiring president, was elected editor of "The Gridiron," the annual publication of the club which is issued each year simultaneously with the annual gridiron banquet.

WITH THE SPECIALS

WILMOT M. ARMSTRONG of Everett, Wash., has joined Lindenstein-Kimball, Inc. newspaper representatives, as a salesman.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

TURNER JORDAN, formerly Alabama state mail editor for the Associated Press, stationed at Montgomery, has been transferred to the Memphis bureau of the A. P. He will go to the night desk.

SCHOOLS

M. E. SELECMAN, director of information, Northwest Missouri State Teachers College, has obtained a year's leave of absence to study at the Medill School of Journalism.

JOINT PRESS MEETING

The Central Missouri Press Association and the Ozarks Press Association are holding a joint convention at Forsyth, Mo., Friday and Saturday of this week.

FLASHES

That large magnanimous figure, in conversation with the little man in the photograph, is the Dictator telling the King that it will be all right and he can have Saturday off.—Detroit News.

The California reporters have a snap. They're never called upon for follow-up stories of an earthquake.—J. R. Wolf in Milwaukee Journal.

As editor of the prison newspaper at Atlanta, former Congressman Langley, is not worried over meeting the Saturday payroll.—Florence (Ala.) Herald.

They've found a wild wheat that can stand drouth, but wild oats seem to require as much moisture as ever.—St. Joseph News-Press.

Brookhart is back in the G. O. P. fold. The way it happened is they moved the fold.—Dallas News.

It now develops that we were paying an admission price to get into the war.—Portland Oregonian.

The old songs are best because nobody sings them any more.—El Paso Times.

No doubt Pennsylvania could simplify the matter greatly by merely providing that anyone who makes a million dollars is entitled to be called Senator.—Detroit News.

The California enforcement officer recently indicted for irregularities in the disposal of liquor said: "I am no lily." Well, at least he is not a water-lily.—Seattle Times.

It is a rare nomination nowadays that does not have a few purse strings on it.—Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.

Europeans are queer, and it may be that they call Santa Claus Shylock except at Christmas-time.—Baltimore Sun.

Uncle Sam is in an uncomfortable position. All he got out of the World War was near beer, and Europe now denounces him as a grasping Shylock.—New York Sun.

France has an abundance of statesmen. What she needs is a tax collector.—Dallas News.

LYNN VETERAN HONORED

George M. Clark, for 36 years with the Lynn (Mass.) Item, received congratulations from his many friends on the anniversary of his 74th birthday. Mr. Clark is head of the stereotyping department. He shares with two other men in New England the record for service in this line of work. He has been a stereotyper for 54 years.

FOR PROMPT SERVICE

TYPE

BORDERS ~ ORNAMENTS ~ BRASS RULE

Printers' Supplies

KELLY PRESSES ~ KLYMAX FEEDERS ~ PAPER CUTTERS
HAMILTON WOOD AND STEEL EQUIPMENT, INCLUDING OUR AMERICAN CUT-COST EQUIPMENT

Carried in stock for prompt shipment at the following Selling Houses of the

American Type Founders Company

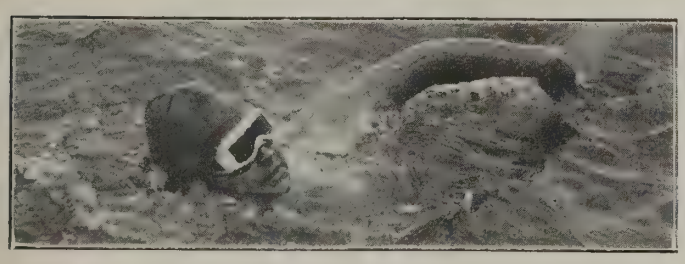
BOSTON	RICHMOND	DETROIT	MINNEAPOLIS	SAN FRANCISCO
NEW YORK	ATLANTA	CHICAGO	KANSAS CITY	PORTLAND
PHILADELPHIA	BUFFALO	CINCINNATI	DES MOINES	SPOKANE
BALTIMORE	PITTSBURGH	ST. LOUIS	DENVER	WINNIPEG
	CLEVELAND	MILWAUKEE	LOS ANGELES

To Scoop America

P&A Spent $8,000.00!

TRUDY girds for the Channel

THIS is the package that meant a 24-hour beat to P&A clients at no extra cost!



Excerpts from telegrams received

"The P & A machinery ticked like a clock on the whole Ederle job."—Edward J. Dunn, Boston Post.

"You gave us great service and showed that resourcefulness that makes us proud to be subscribers to P & A."
—D. S. Freeman, Richmond News Leader.

"Congratulations. Beat all opposition on Ederle."
—Moses Strauss, Cincinnati Times Star.

"Congratulations on splendid service with Ederle pictures, enabling us to secure a 24 hour beat."
—Frank L. Nelson, Philadelphia Public Ledger.

GOING STRONG after seven hours of Channel fighting

GERTRUDE EDERLE'S hour of triumph was zero hour for P&A! Not long after her amazing swim, P&A prints of the feat were on their way to America on the fastest available steamer. Last Friday morning the precious package of photos was dropped at the mouth of the St. Lawrence River, picked up by the waiting P&A seaplane, which flew the first leg of the record-breaking four-plane relay to New York City. After battling through one thousand miles of dense fogs and terrific electrical storms, the first plane succeeded in getting the prints to the P&A office at 3:00 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The alternate plane with duplicate prints of the swim landed four hours later. P&A had gone over the top with a 24-hour beat all over the country!

$8,000 in cables, boats, planes and man hire had been spent to produce the greatest *news*picture beat of the year for P&A, the picture syndicate maintained by the Chicago Tribune and the New York News. Every P&A subscriber received this epoch-making 24-hour scoop at no extra cost! This job illustrates forcibly the extra-exertion push that P&A generates to give its subscribers "*News*pictures for *News*papers"!—All included in the regular moderate rates!

MAT SERVICE P & A mat services make the output and resources of this organization available to even the smallest papers for a few dollars a week. Write or wire any P & A office for further details on the best value in the *news*picture field today.

PACIFIC & ATLANTIC PHOTOS, INC.

CHICAGO - BOSTON - SEATTLE
PHILADELPHIA - WASHINGTON
LOS ANGELES - SAN FRANCISCO
LONDON - PARIS - BERLIN

Home Office:
25 Park Place, NEW YORK
Telephone, Barclay 3500

WOMEN IN ADVERTISING AND JOURNALISM

How Florence Brobeck Manages a Household Department for N. Y. Herald Tribune—Applications for League Advertising Scholarships Closed Aug. 20—Cupid Cuts Capers in Pittsburgh

A NEWSPAPER job well handled by women is the editorship of household pages, and many a good tip on this sort of work may be obtained from Florence Brobeck, editor of the New York Herald Tribune's Household Institute.

Miss Florence Brobeck

Of Miss Brobeck the Literary Digest has written: "If she can cook as engagingly as she can write on cooking, she must be something of a superwoman."

The fundamental purpose of the Institute, established ten years ago by the old Tribune, is to test housekeeping appliances and foods, and to report on such products in news style on two pages every Sunday. To accomplish this the paper maintains a staff of home economics experts, a graduate engineer, a chemist, and has equipped a kitchen, laundry, and engineering laboratory.

Besides the testing of foods and appliances, other housekeeping information is offered on Institute pages. The Institute staff under Miss Brobeck's direction writes articles on home decoration, child health, shopping and marketing, plans menus, offers a free dietary service prepared by a graduate dietician, a member of the Institute staff, and in general keeps the two pages full of live, homemaking news. No syndicate material appears on these pages. The stories are prepared in the Institute, based on kitchen and laboratory work, on the city markets, shops and restaurants and on interviews with housekeepers, restaurant owners, chefs, and anyone else who has something practicable as well as interesting to say.

Miss Brobeck was well prepared for the job of managing such a department and editing such pages. She was graduated after a four years' University course in Home Economics with a B. S. and M. S., was head of the home economics in a Middle Western college, then began writing for magazines and newspapers on housekeeping subjects.

Miss Brobeck has been associated with the Institute for a little more than five years. She was assistant editor for five years and was appointed editor two years ago.

Applications for the two advertising scholarships which the League of Advertising Women of New York is offering at New York University this fall closed on Aug. 20. Miss Helen Rockey, president of the League, reported this week that applicants had written in from all over the United States.

"We are gratified to see that they come from girls doing varied kinds of work," she said, "Newspapers, agencies, advertising departments and printing companies are all represented. It is an opportunity for two young women to get out of the rut they are now in."

Cupid is cutting funny capers in Pittsburgh. He is determined that there shall be no single society editors in the "Smoky City." There are five papers, two morning and three evening, and four of the society editors are married. While they have not yet joined the "Lucy Stone League," they manage to convey through their pen names that they still retain a little individuality. They all claim that it is possible to be successfully married and still have a "job." It is not work to attend a bridge party, a ball, a debutante party, a luncheon or dinner, according to some of the editors, nor is the work at night for the morning papers of any inconvenience, when friend husband does not "sit by the fireside waiting for the wife to come home." He is with the wife at a dance and they are having a gay time. There is plenty of time between working hours for necessary household duties and the married society editors find it easy to manage two jobs.

The married editors are: Mrs. Claude Burnell (Elizabeth Hobe Burnell), Gazette Times; Mrs. Joseph Lesh (Anne Ryan Lesh), Pittsburgh Post; Mrs. Kenneth A. Love (Madeline Young Love) Chronicle Telegraph; Mrs. Robert Wesley Spear (Mabel Steele Spear) also club and school editor, Pittsburgh Sun. Mrs. Burnell and Mrs. Spear have been married a little over a year, Mrs. Love was married on Saturday last, and Mrs. Lesh has been married about seven or eight years. Mrs. Spear was formerly with the Pittsburg Dispatch, serving at different times as society editor, and secretary to C. A. Rook, Sr., then president-editor. The others have been with the papers mentioned, Mrs. Burnell about three years, Mrs. Love about nine years, Mrs. Lesh about fifteen years and Mrs. Spear nine years on both papers.

Virginia Davis, formerly of New York City, is now on the society staff of the Dayton (O.) Journal.

Ruth Ohmer, former society editor, Dayton (O.) Journal has joined the editorial staff of the Young Catholic Messenger, published in Dayton by Marie Fischer.

Mrs. F. J. McCormick, a former Daytonian, is on a special assignment for the New York Times in Southern Europe.

LAWYER PRAISES STORY BY WOMAN REPORTER

N. Y. Herald Tribune's Libel Expert Commends Ishbel Ross' Handling of Hall-Mills Hearing — Calls It "Artistic Work"

Henry W. Sackett, senior member of the law firm of Sackett, Chapman, Brown and Cross, and an expert on libel law, sent the following letter last week to Endicott G. Rich, city editor of the New York Herald Tribune:

"My dear Mr. Rich: I can not forbear giving an enthusiastic expression of my admiration of the report of Miss Ishbel Ross of the proceedings before the Magistrate in the Hall-Mills Murder case as published in the Herald Tribune on Saturday, the 14th instant.

"It is one of the best of reports of such judicial procedings that I have seen in a long time. The legal rules governing such publications seem to be observed with accuracy, and without in the slightest degree interfering with the value of the report for newspaper purposes. There is no evidence of prejudice; there is no unfairness to any one. At the same time there is a vividness of presentation of the dramatic phases of the situation that makes the article most readable and interesting. It is a most artistic piece of work.

"If there was any departure, even the slightest, from the strict 'rules of the game,' it was where Miss Ross says that 'it is believed' that a pistol had been in the steel box of the former prosecutor; but it seems almost hypercritical to point out such a small flaw in such a remarkably fine piece of journalistic work.

Yours sincerely,
Henry W. Sackett."

The Newark Star-Eagle now has 100,000 net paid circulation per day

The recent progress of the NEWARK STAR-EAGLE is probably unprecedented among New Jersey newspapers.

Although during the hot weather our circulation figures are always at their lowest point, our present circulation is about 100,000 net paid copies per day. This is about 17,000 more than last summer.

Our advertising is keeping up with the progress of our circulation. So far, for the first two weeks of this month (August) we are 24 per cent ahead of last August.

I believe the STAR-EAGLE is today one of the best and most interesting evening newspapers of the East.

Paul Block

After several years of investigation and experimentation, the Mergenthaler Linotype Company announces the introduction of a new newspaper body face. This new Ionic is an exceptionally readable face. The openness of the rounded letters—the height and width of the lowercase—the clearcut capitals—the size and fullness of the figures—the absence of marked contrast between thick and thin strokes—the maximum of these things go to make a most desirable newspaper face. There are no "pin holes" or sharp corners to fill up with ink; no fine lines to break down in stereotyping. The even color of the characters is particularly adapted to the "roughness" of newspaper stock. The outstanding advantage of the new face is its conservation of vision. The even tone throughout is restful to the eyes without being monotonous. There is enough variation to avoid tiresomeness, yet not enough to be disconcerting. A happy medium has been effected. It is easier to read than seven point faces, yet gives the same word-count to the column as six point. Various degrees of leading can be used to advantage, or the lines may be cast on a solid six and a half point body. The comparative shortness of the ascenders and descenders gives good legibility even when set solid. Cast on seven point body, the 6½ Point Ionic gives the effect of being well leaded—and with a decided gain in word-count over the seven point faces. The first paper to adopt the new face was the Evening News, of Newark, N. J. After a trial of several weeks, the management of the paper is more enthusiastic than ever about it, and readers continue to send in words of commendation daily. One of the most appreciative is Dr. Joseph H. Salov, a leading optometrist, and past president of the New Jersey Optometric Association. Says Dr. Salov, addressing the editor of the Newark Evening News: "It would be unfair for me or any one else who realizes the amount of good that will result from your recent change in the style of type you use in the makeup of the News if this was not recognized, appreciated and so acknowledged by every one interested in the conservation of vision; for it is the accumulated unnecessary strain on the eyes, due to the extremely small and poor type used in many newspapers, that hastens the day when artificial aid must be sought. Although not versed in the nomenclature of the type you have been using for the last few days, it is of a style and character that immediately makes itself felt, and is far more readable and comfortable than the former style. I am sure that there are many thousands of readers who, possibly unknowingly, feel the added comfort." After several years of investigation and experimentation, the Mergenthaler Linotype Company announces the introduction of a new newspaper body face. This new Ionic is an exceptionally readable face. The openness of the rounded letters—the height and width of the lowercase—the clearcut capitals—the size and fullness of the figures—the absence of marked contrast between thick and thin strokes—the maximum of these things go to make a most desirable newspaper face. There are no "pin holes" or sharp corners to fill up with ink; no fine lines to break down in stereotyping. The even color of the characters is particularly adapted to the "roughness" of newspaper stock. The outstanding advantage of the new face is its conservation of vision. The even tone throughout is restful to the eyes without being monotonous. There is enough variation to avoid tiresomeness, yet not enough to be disconcerting. A happy medium has been effected. It is easier to read than seven point faces, yet gives the same word-count to the column as six point. Various degrees of leading can be used to advantage, or the lines may be cast on a solid six and a half point body. The comparative shortness of the ascenders and descenders gives good legibility even when set solid. Cast on seven point body, the 6½ Point Ionic gives the effect of being well leaded—and with a decided gain in word-count over the seven point faces. The first paper to adopt the new face was the Evening News, of Newark, N. J. After a trial of several weeks, the management of the paper is more enthusiastic than ever about it, and readers continue to send in words of commendation daily. One of the most appreciative is Dr. Joseph H. Salov, a leading optometrist, and past president of the New Jersey Optometric Association. Says Dr. Salov, addressing the editor of the Newark Evening News: "It would be unfair for me or any one else who realizes the amount of good that will result from your recent change in the style of type you use in the makeup of the News if this was not recognized, appreciated and so acknowledged by every one interested in the conservation of vision; for it is the accumulated unnecessary strain on the eyes, due to the extremely small and poor type used in many newspapers, that hastens the day when artificial aid must be sought. Although not versed in the nomenclature of the type you have been using for the last few days, it is of a style and character that immediately makes itself felt, and is far more readable and comfortable than the former style. I am sure that there are many thousands of readers who, possibly unknowingly, feel the added comfort." After several years of investigation and experimentation, the Mergenthaler Linotype Company announces the introduction of a new newspaper body face. This new Ionic is an exceptionally readable face. The openness of the rounded letters—the height and width of the lowercase—the clearcut capitals—the size and fullness of the figures—the absence of marked contrast between thick and thin strokes—the maximum of these things go to make a most desirable newspaper face. There are no "pin holes" or sharp corners to fill up with ink; no fine lines to break down in stereotyping. The even color of the characters is particularly adapted to the "roughness" of newspaper stock. The outstanding advantage of the new face is its conservation of vision. The even tone throughout is restful to the eyes without being monotonous. There is enough variation to avoid tiresomeness, yet not enough to be disconcerting. A happy medium has been effected. It is easier to read than seven point faces, yet gives the same word-count to the column as six point. Various degrees of leading can be used to advantage, or the lines may be cast on a solid six and a half point body. The comparative shortness of the ascenders and descenders gives good legibility even when set solid. Cast on seven point body, the 6½ Point Ionic gives the effect of being well leaded—and with a decided gain in word-count over the seven point faces. The first paper to adopt the new face was the Evening News, of Newark, N. J. After a trial of several weeks, the management of the paper is more enthusiastic than ever about it, and readers continue to send in words of commendation daily. One of the most appreciative is Dr. Joseph H. Salov, a leading optometrist, and past president of the New Jersey Optometric Association. Says Dr. Salov, addressing the editor of the Newark Evening News: "It would be maximum le… things go to mak… desirable newspaper … "pin holes" or sharp c… with ink; no fine lines … in stereotyping. The ev… aracters is particularly … oughness" of newspap… tstanding advantage … s conservation of … throughout is … being …

LINOTYPE MARK

Study the design of this NEW face

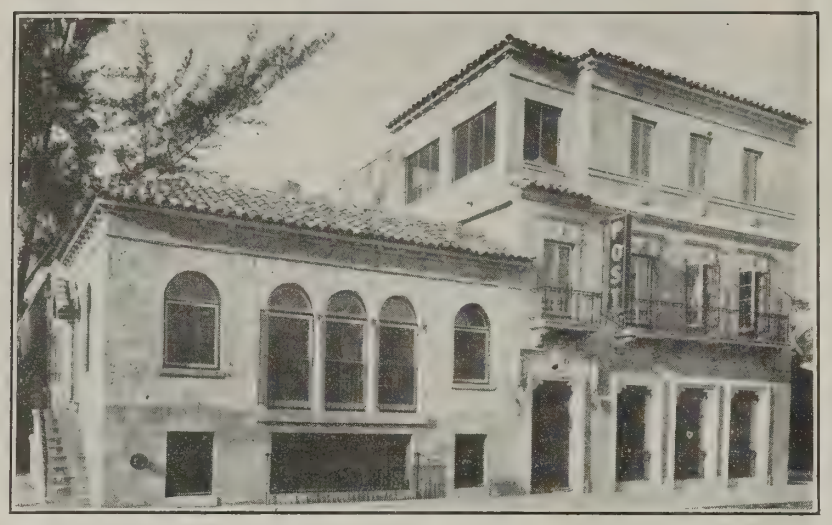
Linotype 6½ Point Ionic No. 5

See how perfectly it meets the difficult requirements of modern newspaper printing conditions. Notice the full, round contours of the letters; no "pin holes" or sharp corners to fill up with ink; no fine lines to break down in stereotyping.

Ask the nearest Linotype Agency for copies of newspaper set in this face and compare it with the body type you are now using both for legibility and word count. You will find it easier to read than 7 point faces and that it gives the same word count as a 6 point.

The 6½ Point Ionic is made with italic and small caps and also in combination with Bold Face No. 2.

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY



BROOKLYN, NEW YORK

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS

CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

PALM BEACH POST COMPLETES NEW PLANT AND A WAREHOUSE BUILDING

THE West Palm Beach (Fla.) Palm Beach Post is now publishing from its new home.

The business office and advertising departments occupy the main floor in the East portion of the building, while the right side is given over to the news and editorial departments.

In the rear of these offices is the composing room, which is 75 by 80 feet. The third floor of the west side of the building is given over to a conference room, file room, telegraph rooms, and photo-engraving department.

The basement, 71 by 153 feet, is occupied by the press and stereotyping departments and leaves storage room for more than six carloads of news print paper.

The equipment includes 14 Intertype machines, two Monotypes and a Ludlow. The press room is equipped with a 64-Page Scott Multi-unit press, while the stereotyping department includes new, modern equipment.

In addition to the Post Building, which is occupied exclusively by the various departments, the company has just completed a warehouse in the Terminals which provides storage space for 16 car loads of paper.

D. H. Conkling is president and editor of the Post, and W. A. Payne is general manager.

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

Anne Austin Signs Fiction Contract With NEA Service, Inc.—New Daily Intelligence Questionnaire for Newspaper Readers—George Matthew Adams Returns From Coast Trip

ANNE AUSTIN has signed a contract with NEA Service, Inc., to furnish three fiction serials for newspaper publications, and an interesting true story lies behind the announcement.

ANNE AUSTIN

Mrs. Austin, who was born in Texas, is only 30 years old. When she was 17 she was married, and for the past 12 years has been forced to earn her own living. Her first fiction was a serial written for the Kansas City Post. Later she became the editor of People's Popular Monthly, Des Moines, an experience followed by a period of free lancing in New York.

Her daughter, Elizabeth, 12 years old, was not long ago judged a champion human being. She has an intelligence quotient of 214 per cent—a world's record. She will enter college this fall at the age of 12. Soon after this became known, NEA looked the Austins up for an interview, and Mrs. Austin wrote a series of articles for that service on child rearing. Next the fiction contract was discussed, and now has been agreed upon.

King Features Syndicate, Inc., New York, is offering a new daily intelligence questionnaire for newspaper readers under the title "The Knowledge Test."

Robert L. Ripley's "Believe it or Not" sports cartoons, handled by Associated Newspapers, began Aug. 16, appearing in the New York Evening Post.

Prosperous newspaper conditions were reported by George Matthew Adams, president of the syndicate bearing his name, on his return to New York this week from a two months' trip to the Pacific Coast. He visited more than 75 newspaper offices and said he heard "no whining."

Edwin Muller, treasurer, Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, has returned from a trip to Europe.

"Prisoners of Destiny," by Leroy Durand, is King Features Syndicate's latest serial.

Ben Lucien Burman, one time member of the New York World's staff, is now writing a daily news ode for NEA Service, Inc.

Lee Pape of "Little Benny's Notebook" fame is back in New York from a Maine fishing trip.

"Telling Tommy," comic strip by Paul Pim has been taken over by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Percy L. Crosby, "Skippy's" creator, is convalescing from an illness at the Central Park West Hospital, New York.

Dr. Lulu Hunt Peters, writer of "Diet and Health" for the George Matthew Adams Service, arrived in New York last week from a three month's visit to the continent.

North American Newspaper Alliance was handling Frank Powers' "Kitchener's Coffin" story in this country.

Jack Dempsey's and Gene Tunney's by-lines will appear in client newspapers of King Features Syndicate beginning Aug. 30.

America's Last Frontier
-for the Manufacturer

In most parts of the country, buying habits and selling organizations are more or less fixed, and competition is keen between manufacturers to see who can get the largest share of business.

But Florida is a comparatively new market. New population is swarming into the state by the thousands. New cities are being built. New sales agencies and distributors are being appointed. New buying habits are being formed.

Here is a unique opportunity for the manufacturer to intrench himself strongly in a great market that is steadily growing and that is destined to be one of the most important in the entire United States. This is a new frontier for the manufacturer. Here and now, by the use of judicious advertising and selling, he can place his product at the forefront of popular demand.

Come to Florida—with advertising. And remember: to cover Florida completely and economically, use the Associated Dailies.

ASSOCIATED DAILIES of Florida

510 Clark Building Jacksonville, Florida

Bradenton News
Clearwater Sun
Daytona Beach Journal
Daytona Beach News
Deland Daily News
Eustis Lake Region
Ft. Myers Press
Ft. Myers Tropical News
Ft. Pierce News-Tribune
Ft. Pierce Record
Gainesville News
Gainesville Sun
Jacksonville Florida Times-Union
Jacksonville Journal
Key West Citizen
Kissimmee Gazette
Lakeland Ledger
Lakeland Star-Telegram
Lake Worth Leader
Melbourne Journal
Miami Daily News
Miami Herald
Miami Tribune
New Smyrna News
Ocala Central Florida Times
Orlando Morning Sentinel
Orlando Reporter-Star
Palatka News
Palm Beach Daily News
Palm Beach Post
Palm Beach Times
Pensacola Journal
Pensacola News
Plant City Courier
St. Augustine Record
St. Petersburg Independent
St. Petersburg News
St. Petersburg Times
Sanford Herald
Sarasota Herald
Sarasota Times
Stuart Daily News
Tampa Times
Tampa Tribune
Winter Haven Chief

No National Advertiser or Agency of Today is guided, as Catherine the Great once said she was,

"By Circumstances, Conjectures and Conjunctions" in the planning and placing of campaigns in the daily newspaper, the great primary medium of advertising—"every day, a daily paper in every home."

Especially if they use

EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S

MARKET GUIDE

For it takes all the conjecture out of advertising, with its vivid portrayal of actual trading conditions in each of the 1300 American and Canadian cities in which daily newspapers are published, markets in which billions are annually spent for nationally advertised products.

It answers all the questions which the modern merchandiser must ask before starting to capture coveted markets—with its from 150 to 500 facts and sets of figures intimately setting forth the buying habits of each city, and the conditions under which its people live.

The getting of this information, but for the Market Guide, would entail digging into a mass of undigested, unedited, unverified, irrelevant matter in a thousand and one cumbersome books, costing a mint of money and taking a terrific toll of time, to whip it into usable shape.

What is more logical—what more inevitable—than when a national advertiser has determined upon his market, from the data he gets in this book, while he still has that book in his hands, and before he passes to another state, he will begin thinking about the best medium to use in covering that market. THAT'S THE MOMENT for the daily newspaper publisher to get across to him the story of his newspaper. Isn't it? Let us tell you about it—no obligations.

A.B.C. EDITOR & PUBLISHER A.B.P.

Times Building [Suite 1700] New York

VIRGINIA A. P. MEMBERS MEET

Associated Press of Virginia met at Pulaski last week in connection with the annual meeting of the Virginia Press Association. In the group are L. E. Pugh, business manager of the Newport News Daily Press and Times-Herald; J. P. Rowe, Jr., business manager, Fredericksburg Star and Free-Lance; J. P. Fishburn, editor Roanoke Times and World News; B. E. Hood, Roanoke Times and World News; Colonel W. S. Copeland, president, Newport News Daily Press Corporation; U. L. McCall, of the Associated Press office, Atlanta; F. J. McDermott, Richmond A. P. Bureau; Robert Glass, editor, Lynchburg News and Advance; Earnest C. Pollard, managing editor, Richmond Times-Dispatch; William Atkinson, associated with the Roanoke papers; and Thomas H. Pratt, of the Kingsport Press.

WITH THE GENERAL ADVERTISERS

W. K. Kellogg, Entertaining Advertisers, Tells How Cereal Business Was Built—Advertising Brings Big Sales Increase to Canada Dry Ginger Ale—Hartmann Tie-Up Copy

A GROUP of 160 advertising men were entertained recently by W. K. Kellogg, president of the Kellogg Company, at the firm's plant in Battle Creek, Mich., and to them the story was told of how newspaper advertising had built up a vast cereal food business.

The story, as told by Mr. Kellogg, dates back to 1906 the year corn flakes were first made.

"We decided to try newspaper advertising to see what it would do for our sales," Mr. Kellogg said. "Our first appropriation was $150. It was spent in a newspaper schedule in Canton, O. Due to production difficulties, the test campaign was discontinued, but it is interesting to note that Canton, the first town opened by advertising is today one of the best towns in the country per capita sales of corn flakes."

From this insignificant appropriation 10 years ago, the Kellogg Company has steadily increased its newspaper advertising expenditures, until last year approximately $1,500,000 was spent in this one medium alone, according to the estimate made by the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association. Last year's total appropriation was in the neighborhood of $2,000,000.

"This business was built by advertising, even from its earliest days," Mr. Kellogg said.

Net earnings for the first quarter of this year reported by Canada Dry Ginger Ale, Inc., were more than 43 times those of the corresponding quarter in 1923, the year the company first began to advertise.

In 1922, with no advertising, the sales amounted to 1,690,050 bottles. In 1923, with an advertising expenditure of $110,268, the sales were 6,230,100 bottles.

In 1924, when the appropriation was $361.988, the sales amounted to 23.480,250 bottles, and in 1925, with $838,571 invested in advertising, the sales reached 51,783,300.

The advertising investment in 1923 amounted to 1.7 cents a bottle. In 1925, although the company had increased its total advertising investment eight times, the cost per bottle was only 1.6 cents.

Local dealers are placing considerable tie-up copy in newspapers promoting the Hartmann wardrobe trunk, product of the Hartmann Trunk Company, Racine, Wis. The account is handled by H. W. Kastor & Sons Company, Chicago.

The Hicks Advertising Agency, New York, has been appointed to direct the advertising of Jules Schwab & Co., importers and wholesale jewelers, of the same city. An advertising campaign is being planned.

Newspapers are being used in an educational advertising campaign being conducted by the Association of Lighting Fixture Manufacturers, New York. The account is directed by J. X. Netter, Inc., New York advertising agency.

The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, Chicago, has sold its business to the Cracker Jack Company, Inc., makers of Cracker Jack and Angelus Marshmallows.

Newspapers, magazines and business papers will be used to promote Ted-Toys, product of the Ted Toy-lers, Inc., New Bedford, Mass.

L. C. Lincoln has been appointed advertising manager of F. A. D. Andrea, Inc., New York, manufacturers of Fada radio products.

SEMI-WEEKLY IMPROVES PLANT

The Greenville (Ill.) Advocate, semi-weekly, owned and edited by Will C. Carson, has just installed a web perfecting press and changed from a six-column to a seven-column paper. The basement of the Advocate building has been entirely remodeled into a press room which houses its new press, a Babcock drum cylinder and job press.

The Most Wonderful Book in the World

MORE than thirty million Bibles or Books of the Bible were sold or distributed in 1925.

Would you not love to have companion volumes to help you discover the treasures in that Wonderful Book?

SWEDENBORG

[1688-1772]

explained the Bible's practical application to daily life; how it describes the life hereafter; what the Bible parables mean when spiritually interpreted.

His theological works—as issued by himself—have been published by the Houghton Mifflin Co. in most modern translation from the original Latin, in the Rotch Edition of 32 volumes.

The first twenty give the spiritual sense of Genesis and Exodus as understood in Heaven; and volumes 26, 27, 28 give likewise the spiritual sense of the Book of Revelation.

Volume 29, Marriage Love, views from the union of the Divine Love and the Divine Wisdom the Law of Sex throughout all creation. It shows the crown and jewel of the Christian Religion, the union of one with one only. Price $2.00.

Volumes 30, 31, 32, contain a full statement of the True Christian Religion as revealed from Heaven. $3.00 the set.

The whole 32 volumes in half-morocco at $125; in buckram, $40.

The following are the best introductory books to the Revelations of SWEDENBORG. They are in large print, bound in buckram, and contain from 260 to 485 pages.

TITLES	PRICE
HEAVEN AND HELL from things heard and seen	$1.25
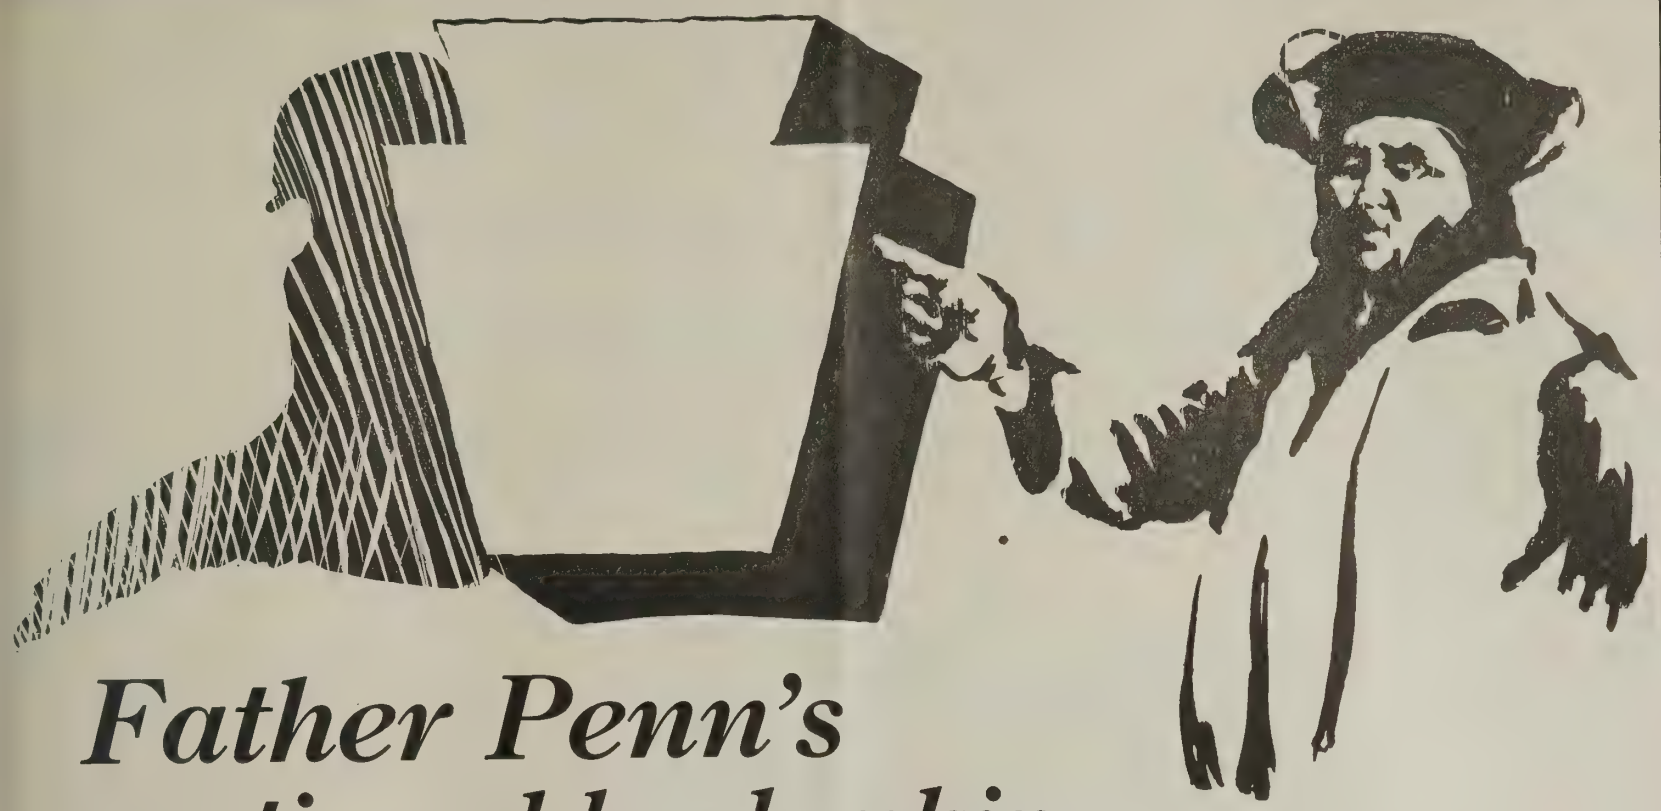
Angelic Wisdom Concerning—
THE DIVINE PROVIDENCE, which governs the Universe and the Heavens and the Hells, and the least as well as the greatest of all things in creation; and in the everyday life of man.	$1.25
THE DIVINE LOVE AND WISDOM, the profoundest book and revelation concerning God and His Creation ever written, first published in Latin at Amsterdam 1763; along with this is the "Intercourse Between the Soul and the Body" first published in Latin at London 1769.	$1.25
Price of all three at one time, including postage	$2.75

Who Was Swedenborg?

Emanuel Swedenborg, the son of a bishop, was the great Swedish scientist, philosopher and theologian, whose vast range caused Emerson to term him the mastodon of scholars. Dr. Parkes Cadman recently named him the Universal Genius.

Officially connected, by appointment of the King, with the great mining industry of Sweden, he mastered all the sciences of his time, and wrote the most useful books on metallurgy, minerals, geology, astronomy, and the human brain.



His life search was for the human soul. How his spiritual senses were opened, after he was 50 years of age, that he might reveal the human soul, the life after death, and the Bible itself, may be read in the above named, uplifting, useful books

Send orders or inquiries to

B. A. WHITTEMORE, Agent

137 BOWDOIN STREET, Boston 9, Mass.

Ager's Life of Swedenborg sent postpaid for 10 cents; Heaven and Hell in paper covers for 30 cents; Galli-Curci on Swedenborg for 10 cents; or all three for 40 cents.

Father Penn's continued leadership— as a buyer of nationally advertised goods . . .

Pennsylvania still continues in the premier position as a buyer of nationally advertised goods. A chain of circumstances has brought this about.

Its nearness to the Eastern Seaboard where shipments can be sent by water, its great railroads traversing the state in every direction, and its natural resources, in coal, oil and minerals, give Pennsylvania an assured income for its industrious citizens.

Pennsylvania has always been a great market and every indication points that this leadership will be maintained indefinitely.

Information is available to national advertisers which will aid them in merchandising and the distribution of their products thru the daily newspapers listed below.

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Allentown Call .....(M)	31,400	.10	.10
Allentown Call .....(S)	22,349	.10	.10
††Beaver Falls Tribune.....(E)	6,553	.03	.03
††Bethlehem Globe Times.....(E)	13,272	.06	.06
††Bloomsburg Press .....(M)	7,673	.04	.04
Chester Times .....(E)	18,295	.06	.06
††Coatesville Record .....(E)	6,783	.035	.03
Connellsville Courier .....(E)	5,928	.02	.02
Easton Express .....(E)	25,473	.08	.08
Erie Times .....(E)	28,596	.08	.08
††Greensburg Tribune Review...(EM)	14,883	.05	.05
††Hazleton Plain Speaker.....(E) ††Hazleton Standard-Sentinel..(M)	19,852	.07	.06
Mount Carmel Item .....(E)	4,307	.0285	.0285

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Oil City Derrick .....(M)	8,588	.04	.04
Pottsville Republican and Morning Paper .....(EM)	15,346	.08	.07
Scranton Times .....(E)	43,230	.13	.12
Sharon Herald .....(E)	7,236	.0357	.0357
Sunbury Daily Item .....(E)	5,224	.03	.03
Washington Observer and Reporter .....(M&E)	17,589	.06	.06
††West Chester Local News .....(E)	11,860	.04	.04
Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader ....(E)	26,204	.06	.06
††Williamsport Sun and Gazette & Bulletin.....(ME)	28,000	.09	.09
††York Dispatch .....(E)	19,632	.05	.05

A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, March 31, 1926.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1926.

BUILDING NEWSPAPER CIRCULATION

Teaching Newsboys to Know the Paper They Are Selling—Backing Local Sports Events to Make Friends and Readers—Some English Circulation Stunts—"Reader Service"

TEACHING newsboys to know the product they are selling, and the placing of papers at every turn of the corner on the street, are two of the methods used by the Chicago Evening American to build up circulation in Chicago, according to W. J. Parker, director of circulation sales.

"It is my belief that a newsboy should have just as much knowledge of his product as any salesman," said Mr. Parker. "He should know the value of head lines, the value of local stories and the significance of features.

"The more places that papers are on sale the more papers will be sold, we think. We want the paper easy to buy —that's why the American has 1,600 newsboys in Chicago and has specialized on boy organization for increasing circulation in addition to boys at corner stands."

The American has a boy selling only the one paper in almost every available nook on the streets of Chicago's loop. The boys are young—between the ages of 9 to 12—as Mr. Parker believes they are the best for the work. After they are 16 they are not much interested.

"The boy circulation problem lies, of course, in getting boys and in teaching them the right principles of selling the paper," Mr. Parker went on. "In order to do this an assistant circulator rents halls and talks to the boys often. He tries to inculcate in the boys the feeling that they, too, are assistant circulators for the paper.

"With a circulator talking to them and discussing different circulation problems with them in this intimate way, they feel closer to the paper they are selling and are more enthusiastic. Then they are willing and able to talk for the paper.

"We encourage the boys to build up a regular clientele and thus sell more papers. This is steady work for the assistant circulators."

The American also owns an independent home delivery in Chicago, which was put in three years ago. There are 83 branches where the boys get their papers. In addition to money received these boy salesmen are given coupons which may be saved to obtain certain articles. Clothing predominates over playthings in these selections by the boys.

It's an old circulation stunt, and still a good one, for a newspaper to get behind local sporting contests, staging championship meets, and offering prizes and medals to winners. But, although ancient, there are many new ways of conducting such stunts and new contests to sponsor.

In New York, the Evening Graphic, Macfadden tabloid, with O. O. Scattergood circulation manager, has organized what it calls a "punchball league." Punchball, a modified game of baseball, played in the streets of New York and other cities, has spread with astonishing rapidity. Nine hundred teams entered the Greater New York championships, initiated by the Graphic. The field has been narrowed down to some 250 survivors.

Every day the Graphic carries the scores of teams playing in the punchball league, and rivalry for the championship of Manhattan is intense. Managers of the teams scheduled to play games after work each evening are instructed to telephone the Graphic after play is over to report these scores.

The New York Evening World is another paper that believes in sponsoring sporting matches for youngsters. Only recently this paper gave prizes to girls playing in a jackstone contest. The same paper every year gets the boys of the town to contend in a harmonica playing meet.

Last Sunday the Milwaukee Journal Athletic Association's first A. A. U. river swimming marathon was held, and considerable reader interest was developed by the event.

Not long ago the Denver Post held an amateur ad-writing contest in conjunction with 38 Denver business firms. Weekly prizes were offered for the best ad for any one of the products or concerns participating, with a grand prize of $500. This indoor sport becoming common in newspapers is pleasing to the business office as well as the circulators.

Everyone knows of the marble championships conducted each year by the Scripps-Howard newspapers.

And so it goes.

Tomorrow some enterprising circulator will think up some new sporting contest that will keep local boys and girls at happy play and sell papers in the bargain.

The London News of the World on Aug. 16, offered a prize of 1,000 pounds to any British subject who will beat Gertrude Ederle's time record in swimming the channel. The announcement focuses the attention of American circulators on other British methods of winning newspaper readers.

There was the combined cross-word and ode writing contest initiated by the London Daily News. Contestants were called upon to solve monthly cross-word puzzles, finding in them a Christian name. They then were instructed to write an ode to an imaginary person bearing this name. The writer of the best ode was given a cash prize.

The London Daily Graphic recently published a number of children's pictures asking the question "Which Child Do You Think Is the Best Looking?" Cash prizes were given readers making the best selection from the series run. The choice was determined by the average selection.

Weekly prizes were offered by the London Daily Mirror for the best one paragraph true story telling how the reader of the paper had benefited through a turn of chance.

Capitalizing on the international card playing habit, the London Daily News recently sponsored a bridge whist tournament. Clubs were organized throughout England to hold a series of whist parties. The man and woman making the top scores in these local tournaments received prizes. The prize was doubled if the winner had been a subscriber of the News over a given period. The pairs winning in their own localities were guests of the News in London at a final tournament to determine England's champion whist player.

Who is the champion bridge player, five hundred player, pinochle or mah jong (if it's still played) player in your town?

Have you ever tried to find out?

Maybe parties could be organized in suburban communities and nearby towns by your newspaper to discover the champion of the county.

Wouldn't it get your newspaper talked about along with other usual card table topics?

"Service"—that's what every newspaper promises its readers.

The Wheeling (W. Va.) Intelligencer prints its promise in the following two-column box:

"If for ANY REASON you do not receive your INTELLIGENCER promptly and properly delivered, call Wheeling 823 and your paper will be immediately dispatched to your door by special messenger. All complaints of missed papers received up until 10 o'clock in the morning will be given immediate attention and delivery."

A resolution protesting against Los Angeles newsboy cries of "Aimee" while selling papers near the Angelus temple was adopted Aug. 15 by followers of Aimee Semple McPherson at a mass meeting held at the evangelist's tabernacle.

Carrier boys of one Florida newspaper roll their papers and paste a full-sized wrapper around each in the mailing room before starting on their routes, according to Rober B. Miller, of West Palm Beach, Fla.

"This plan saves the carriers' time in delivery," Mr. Miller wrote EDITOR & PUBLISHER. "The papers can be tossed or thrown accurately from a bicycle or automobile. The paper will not curl up or fly away. A good aim is all that is necessary.

"A full-sized wrapper, length of a folded newspaper, serves another advantage. In rainy weather it prevents the newspaper from being soaked if not picked up by the subscriber immediately after delivery. Scrap newsprint or old newspapeers are cut for wrappers."

STARTS FLOWER SERVICE

The Danville (Ill.) Commercial News last week instituted its Flower Service to carry surplus garden flowers from its readers' gardens to the local hospitals, infirmaries and old peoples' homes. Special telephone accommodations were provided during the week, the newspaper inviting all donors to the flower service to report if they would contribute bouquets. Lists were made and the auto, appropriately decorated, toured the city collecting flowers. The Commercial News announced it would continue the service each Saturday forenoon during the summer season.

Largest Weekday Circulation in THE CITY

The Item Tribune

NEW ORLEANS

Special
RADIO
Section
The New York Times
SUNDAY, SEPT. 12, 1926

The New York Times will publish September 12, as a part of the Sunday edition, a Special Radio Section, full size, inaugurating Radio Week in New York, when there will be a radio exhibition at Madison Square Garden.
Radio news in The New York Times Sunday edition thoroughly covers information of radio progress and invention, legislative measures pending and proposed, tested suggestions for improvement of reception, programs of stations all over the country, with ten outstanding broadcasting events of the week, radio trade notes and comment.
A greater sum is spent in The New York Times for radio advertising than in any other New York morning newspaper.

Advertising forms close Wednesday, Sept. 8.
Rate 95 cents an agate line. Circulation in excess of 600,000 copies.

Not LINAGE–
Not VERBIAGE– but IDEAS–

THAT PORTRAY YOUR MARKET WILL SELL YOUR SPACE

We act as the Service Department for the publisher who is looking for new ideas that will sell his newspaper space to the national advertiser.

We create copy and layout campaigns pictorially illustrated that visualize the publisher's field and tie up his market with the newspaper.

PUBLISHERS SPACE SELLING SERVICE
49 W. 45th St., New York City

COPY - LAYOUT - ART
- TYPOGRAPHY -

MISS CECIL I. DORRIAN, NEWS WRITER, DIES

Was First Accredited American Woman War Correspondent and Covered Europe for Newark News Since 1914

Miss Cecil I. Dorrian, since 1914 European correspondent of the Newark Evening News, and the first accredited American woman war correspondent to visit the battle front in France in 1918, died Wednesday night after a long illness, at a sanatorium in Towson, near Baltimore. Her body will be brought to Newark where the funeral will be held. Her only surviving close relative is her mother, Mrs. Marie C. Dorrian, who was with her when she died.

Miss Dorrian was born in Troy, N. Y., daughter of the late C. A. Dorrian, and was graduated from Barnard College in 1905.

Soon after leaving college Miss Dorrian began writing short dramatic sketches. Her first position was with the Century Company and later she became a member of the New York Tribune staff.

She was in London when the war broke out and wrote some articles for the Newark Evening News. Later she became the European correspondent for that newspaper. In 1916, her play, "The Age of Reason," was produced in the Band-Box Theater.

Constantly at the scenes of greatest action in the World War, she was several times under fire in her pursuit of news.

Miss Dorrian went to the front while the 78th Division, made up largely of New Jersey men, was in battle and sent her newspaper a first-hand story of the division's activities.

Miss Dorrian was given a war decoration by the French Government and was highly praised by Gabriele D'Annunzio as a commentator on public affairs.

She contracted pneumonia in Germany last February and returned to this country July 20. She went to Baltimore for treatment and subsequently entered the sanatorium at Towson.

NILES S. HYATT

Niles S. Hyatt, 48, well-known advertising man of San Francisco and former advertising manager of the Oakland Inquirer, and his five-year-old daughter were killed when their automobile went over an embankment and burst into flames. Hyatt was making a business trip to Burlingame, Cal.

MILTON FEASLEY DEAD

Writer of Famous Listerine Advertisements Dies Suddenly

Milton Feasley, of Lambert & Feasley, Inc., New York advertising agency, died suddenly in New York on Aug. 19, following a recent major operation. With Gerard Lambert, Mr. Feasley organized Lambert & Feasley, Inc., four years ago. One of the agency's chief accounts was the Lambert Pharmacal Company of St. Louis, Mo., makers of Listerine. Mr. Feasley wrote all the Listerine copy, which, featuring halitosis, attracted widespread public comment and was largely responsible for enormous increases in sales made by the Lambert concern. Appropriations for this account grew from nothing to $4,500,000.

Before organizing the New York agency, Mr. Feasley was for 11 years connected with Williams & Cunnyngham of Chicago.

PELHAM NEWS LAUNCHED

The first issue of Pelham (N. Y.) News, weekly, appeared Aug. 5. It is published by Garrison Publications, Inc. at 105 Wolfs Lane, Pelham. James Carr Garrison, president of the corporation, was for several years until lately the vice-president and one of the owners of the Providence News. Prior to that he was attached to the Providence Journal and his newspaper experience includes many years as associate editor of the New York Press. Also he served on the New York World, the New York Mail and the Milwaukee Sentinel.

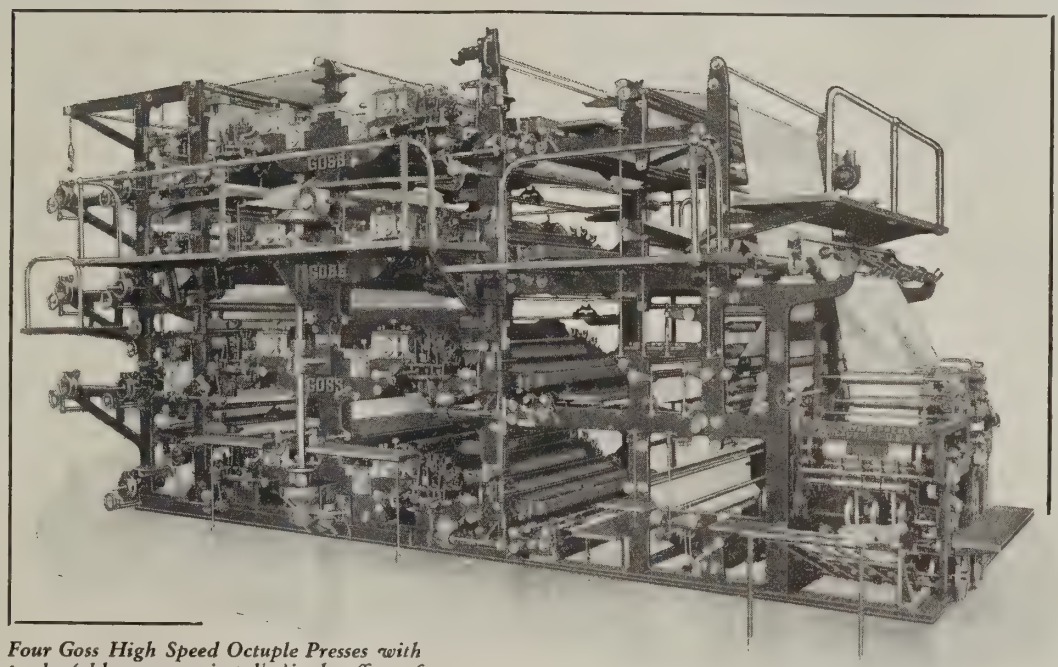
NEW A. P. MEMBERS

Newspapers elected to membership in the Associated Press, according to an announcement made this week, include: Shamokin (Pa.) Daily News; Lansford (Pa.) Evening Record; Clarkston (Wash.) Evening Herald; and Little Falls (Minn.) Transcript.

ADDS AUTOMOBILE SECTION

The Rutland (Vt.) Herald, publishing six days a week, has established an automobile section to run on Wednesday of every week. Two pages of news and advertising is the present make-up.

Only One Paper Really Covers Akron District!



National advertisers should bear in mind that the economical way of reaching the great Akron district, rubber center of the world, is through the one DOMINANT newspaper in this district, the

Akron Beacon Journal

Leading Other Northern Ohio Newspapers by Many Thousands in Circulation in this District—Second in Ohio of Six Day Evening Newspapers in 1925 Linage.

DAILY AVERAGE CIRCULATION FOR SIX MONTHS 51,973—GAIN of 4,647 OVER PREVIOUS SIX MONTHS

The Argus Press of London, England Relies Day and Night on Goss Presses

Four Goss High Speed Octuple Presses with twelve folders are now installed in the offices of the Argus Press, London, England to meet to a large extent alone the multitudinous needs of this great establishment.

Why the Largest Firm of Contracting Newspaper Printers in Europe Favors Goss High Speed Presses

THE extensive and varied daily and weekly issues, over 20 in number, regularly printed at the Argus Works, severely test the reliability and versatility of high-speed printing machines. Long runs of various sizes ranging from 32 pages 19 x 24 to 8 pages 12 x 17 are the regular order of the day. Invariably good work turned out at high speed has given the Argus Press of London an international reputation.

This company—probably the largest firm of contracting newspaper printers in Europe—does not own any of the 20 odd daily and weekly newspapers regularly printed at their works in Temple Avenue and Tudor Street. Although these fine premises, in the heart of newspaperland, have the appearance and contain the equipment of a large daily newspaper office, the whole of the business done is the printing of newspapers for publishers who either do not run a newspaper plant or whose resources are taxed beyond the capacity of their equipment.

Newspaper presses in an establishment of this kind must be capable of quick changing from the largest to the smallest size newspaper and of continuous high speed printing day and night. Goss Presses ably fill the bill, reports E. Foster, General Manager.

The world renowned Sunday newspaper "The Observer", The Financial News and many other British newspapers are regularly printed on Goss Presses.

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

The Goss Printing Press Company of England, Ltd., London

Messers. Edwards Dunlop Company Ltd., Sydney, Sole Australian Agent

GOSS STRAIGHT LINE GOSS HIGH SPEED

F. G. BELL, SAVANNAH PUBLISHER, LEFT $500,000 ESTATE IN TRUST FOR FAMILY

Began on Business Side of News Under Col. Estill's Ownership and Assumed Complete Control After 42 Years of Service

AN estate valued at $500,000 was left by Frank G. Bell, proprietor and manager of the Savannah (Ga.) Morning News, whose sudden death on August 12, was reported by EDITOR & PUBLISHER last week. Mr. Bell's will was filed for probate Aug. 17. It leaves all his property of every character in trust with the Citizens' & Southern Bank of Savannah as trustee. Mrs. Bell is to receive an annuity and at her death the property is to be divided between the two sons, F. G. Bell, Jr., and Malcolm Bell. The trustee is relieved of making any returns or reports.

FRANK G. BELL

Frank G. Bell, born in Alexandria, Va., in 1858, joined the Savannah News circulation and business department in 1884, when the paper was owned by the late James H. Estill.

Col. Estill had the faculty of surrounding himself with capable men. He sought them from various sections of the United States and when they evidenced their worth he rapidly promoted them.

That is what happened to Frank Bell. He was engaged to travel South Georgia and Florida for the Morning News, and he did the job so well that promotions came rapidly. At the death of Col. Estill, 25 years ago, Mr. Bell, who had been gradually promoted was ready to take his place at the business helm of the newspaper. Col. Estill left him some of the stock of the publishing company and he acquired other shares by purchase. The end of a service of 42 years saw him the largest individual stockholder of the Morning News and in complete control of the paper's business and editorial policy.

He was a modest man, and except when required to do so by the federal laws he never permitted his name to appear to show his intimate connection and control of the News. His name appeared neither on masthead nor stationery. He shared with others the honors that came to the newspaper. He consulted with his editor as to editorial policy, directed his city editor as to the manner in which local news should be handled; weighed its importance with those in control of the local features and consulted with the state news and political editors as to the policy to be pursued in handling information that came from outside.

He found time, too, to confer with the business office as to business policies and advertising features of the paper. He had the faculty of guiding through suggestion and of bringing into his service capable men. He was the final arbiter as to the conduct of every department.

Before the death of Col. Estill, who was the founder of the News, Mr. Bell became "the man to see," on the paper. From traveling representative to advertising solicitor was a short step and later the post of personal representative of Col. Estill was filled with perfect success by the Virginian.

Under Mr. Bell's direction the News entered aggressively the field it had built up in Southeast Georgia and parts of South Carolina. Mr. Bell believed in spending money to further the interest of the Morning News. He had an ambition to see it among the best equipped newspapers in the state if not in the South, and before he died his ambition was gratified. Within the past year the Morning News has completed a well-equipped home. It has endeavored to make a community house of its editorial quarters. The building constructed under the personal direction of Mr. Bell and planned by him, has among other features a town hall open to organizations that wish a place to meet and a branch of the Savannah Public Library. These are but two evidences of the desire of Mr. Bell to make of the News a community agency in more than a mere news sense.

As a public servant Mr. Bell was indefatigable. He was an earnest advocate of the Savannah Board of Trade and at the time of his death was a director. Less than a year ago, he had been given a six year term as a member of the board of education of Chatham County and was vice-president of that board when he died. One of his last acts of public service was to sit as the presiding officer at the August meeting of the Board of Education.

His work for humanity and for the good of others was exemplified in many ways. He was president of the Georgia Infirmary Board for many years. The Georgia Infirmary is a colored hospital in Savannah. He was also vice-president of the Union Society, a body dating back to Charles Whitfield the co-worker of John Wesley in the days of Oglethorpe, conducting an orphans' home for boys.

In Savannah he was vice-president of the Chatham Savings & Loan Company—an individual name for what is really a building and loan association—and he was a director in the Citizens and Southern Bank, one of the Mills B. Lane chain of of banks in Georgia and South Carolina.

During the World War, he was too old for service in the field but he served in many capacities at home.

In the affairs of the Associated Press he was also active and was intensely interested in the work of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association. For two years he served as president of that body.

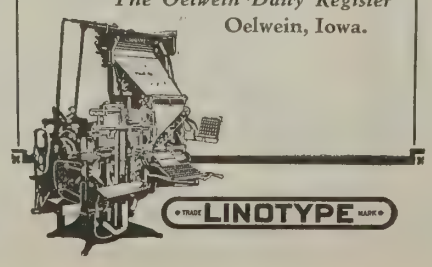
Mr. Bell for years served as an officer in the St. Paul Episcopal church. He was repeatedly elected to responsible positions in this work, until realizing that his health was giving way he reluctantly declined to serve longer as an active layman.

He was buried from St. Paul's Episcopal church, which he helped to found, on Aug. 14. The church was crowded to the doors. Part of it was reserved for the employees of the Morning News. The chancel was banked high with floral tributes, from friends, from firms, from corporations and from organizations.

He was borne to his grave in Bonaventure Cemetery by six of the employees of the News—W. Roy Neal, editor; Boykin Paschal, advertising manager; E. D. Hood, circulation manager; D. G. Bickers, associate editor; Richard M. Charlton, city editor; and J. F. Meyer, foreman of the composing room.

J. M. STEELE, WAR WRITER

John M. Steele, famous throughout the west and middle west as a war correspondent, died Aug. 15 in Denver. At his death he was secretary of the Denver Real Estate Exchange. Steele started his newspaper career in Kansas, working in Lawrence, Emporia and Leavenworth before joining the staff of the Kansas City Star. As a correspondent in the Spanish-American war, he is generally credited with having made General Frederick Funston famous in the sense that his press dispatches gave the country vivid accounts of Funston's daring exploits, including the capture of Aguinaldo, insurrectionist leader.



DOMINANT!
in
Pinellas County, Florida
Daily News
ST. PETERSBURG'S PICTURE PAPER
Owned by Frank Fortune Pulver
Edited by Major Alfred Birdsall
America's Biggest Tabloid
Florida's Fastest
Growing Newspaper
To be assured of Complete Coverage—
USE THE NEWS
Represented by
GEORGE B. DAVID COMPANY
NEW YORK: 110 East 42nd Street
CHICAGO: 1010 Hartford Building

From the Linotype Mailbag

"Some service"

"I am in receipt of your letter of this date regarding the shipment of the two motor driving pulley pinions. They arrived this morning all right and were put on and working at eight o'clock this A. M. They went out yesterday at two o'clock P. M. That tied the machine up three hours of working time. I say this is some service, and I want to congratulate you on it."

The Oelwein Daily Register
Oelwein, Iowa.

Still Gaining!

The net paid average daily circulation for THE BALTIMORE NEWS for April was 124,636—the highest under its present management.

The net paid average for the American was 57,503.

You need these papers to cover Baltimore, they reach more than half the City.

Sold separately or in combination.

THE BALTIMORE NEWS
and
Baltimore American

ANNOUNCEMENT

To National Advertisers and Advertising Agencies

The National Advertising Departments of
New York Evening Journal
Baltimore Evening News
Baltimore American
Washington Evening Times
Washington Herald
Atlanta Evening Georgian
Atlanta Sunday American are combined with offices in
New York—Chicago—Detroit

New York Office:
W. G. HOBSON, Eastern Manager
2 Columbus Circle
Telephone: Circle 5400

Chicago Office:
F. E. CRAWFORD
Western Manager
913 Hearst Bldg.

Detroit Office:
FRANKLIN PAYNE
Representative
1351 Book Bldg.

All under direction of:
JAMES C. DAYTON, Publisher
NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

Central Press Photos

Picking Winners

What publishers think of Central Press service is exemplified by this quotation from Mr. F. W. Spaulding of the Binghamton (N. Y.) Press:

"We have been with Central Press for years and do not believe the service as a whole is equalled by any other on the market."

Since the C. P. are constantly on the que vive for ways and means of not only upholding their high standards of quality and service, but where possible, also of improving them, it was only natural that they chose Certified Dry Mats, and are using them exclusively.

We, too, are constantly striving to produce only the best. We have but one quality of newspaper mat—the best that we know how to make—and the price of it is governed solely by the quality.

Thickness and thinness of our mats do not affect the quality and therefore do not influence the price.

And in Certified Dry Mats, please bear in mind, thickness is not merely a matter of calendering. With us uniformity of thickness is controlled during our exclusive manufacturing process, and therefore does not depend upon sorting and calendering.

We leave it to you to judge Certified Quality and that is why we repeat—COMPARE.

CERTIFIED DRY MAT CORPORATION
340 Madison Avenue
New York, N.Y.

For wet mat printing with DRY MAT facility — use Certifieds

Made in the U. S. A.

DETROIT VETERAN DEAD

ın Barr, 70, Was for 40 Years Commercial Editor of Free Press

ohn Barr, 70, commercial editor of Detroit Free Press for the past 40 rs, died in a Detroit hospital last ek from an illness believed to have n caused by injuries received in an omobile accident several weeks ago. the time of the accident it was be- ed Mr. Barr's injuries were slight, although he returned to his work he s never as well again.

ohn Barr was a brother of Robert and es Barr, both of whom were at one e on the staff of the Free Press. ert, author and playwright, writing er the nome de plume of "Luke rp," was one of the galaxy of inter- onally known writers that included Quad (C. B. Lewis), who died re- ly, George P. Goodale and Theodore Quinby.

esides his activities on the Free Press, n Barr was widely known as a con- utor to American periodicals and spapers, being a prolific author of t stories. He was a gifted artist, his early cartoons in the Free Press acted wide attention. He was also t in the use of water colors, and ialized in marine studies.

e is survived by his widow, Grace, two sons, John, of Ford, Ontario, Frank, of Windsor, Ont.; and two hters, Edna and May.

uneral services were held Monday, . 16, with interment at Windsor, Ont.

LUTHER P. STEPHENS

of Nine Founders of Columbus Dispatch Dies at 73

ther Pierce Stephens, 73, one of the ders of the Columbus (O.) Dispatch last Sunday, in Columbus, following ur months' illness. He was born in inia but came to Columbus as a lad e he gained his newspaper experience the Courier.

e was prominent throughout Ohio rnally, having been active in the of the Masons, Odd Fellows, and for many years. He had held of their highest offices.

s widow and a daughter Mrs. Bertha hens Dietz, of Cincinnati, survive e and nine other men founded the mbus Dispatch in 1871.

MRS. COBLENTZ DIES

of San Francisco Examiner Publisher Was Native of France

rs. Denise Roux Coblentz, wife of ond D. Coblentz, publisher of the Francisco Examiner, died Aug. 4, an illness of several months. She 35 years old and was born in France. des her husband she leaves a daughter ears of age. Mrs. Coblentz's mother two sisters reside in France.

ıe funeral, which was held in the rch of Notre Dame Des Victoires, 6, was attended by all the Examiner utives and many employees, Mayor h, and other city officials.

T. A. GALLAGHER

ıomas A. Gallagher, news editor of Universal Trade Press Syndicate, York, died at his home, Jackson hts, Long Island, Tuesday morning, 17th, of spinal meningitis. Mr. agher was associated for two years the syndicate. He built up an active of 350 correspondents throughout country with which he served many ng business and industrial papers.

WILLS PAPER TO EMPLOYEE

the will of Frank E. Johnson, late er and publisher of the Roseville Leader, Miss Eva Kildow, one of mployees becomes owner of the pub- ion. Mr. Johnson who died recently the entire newspaper plant to Miss ow for her assistance in editing and ishing the paper during his last ill-

MRS. J. A. BEANE DEAD

Mrs. Joseph A. Beane, wife of the publisher of the Goshen (N. Y.) Daily Democrat, died last week.

Obituary

HARRY L. BECK, 67, for many years purchasing agent of the former Pittsburgh Dispatch, died in the Mercy Hospital, that city, Aug. 15. He was an uncle of Charles A. Rook, the president-editor of the Dispatch. Mr. Beck is survived by his widow, one daughter and three sons.

JEFFERSON HOWARD LAND, 85, the first manufacturer of paper in the south, died last week and was buried near his home at Austell, Ga. Mr. Land's first mill for making paper was burned during the Civil War by Sherman's army in the march to the sea. The first issue of the Atlanta Constitution, the Atlanta Journal, the Sunny South and the Marietta Record are said to have been printed on paper turned out by the Land mill.

RICHARD M. MOORE, 76, for more than 35 years Boston (Mass.) Globe correspondent at Wilton, N. H., died at his home in that city Aug. 16 after a short illness.

FRANK HENNESSEY, 58, for 20 years a member of the composing room staff of the Boston (Mass.) Globe, died at his home in Rosindale, Mass., Aug. 16. His father, Thomas P. Hennessey had been a printer and was a member of the Boston Herald composing room staff for many years.

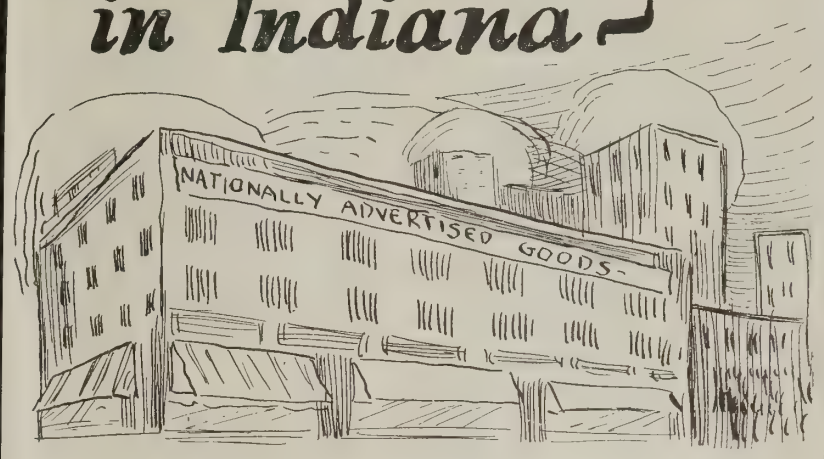
CARL DOWNING, on the copy desk of the Oakland (Cal.) Tribune and formerly with the Fox Film Company and Associated Editors of New York, died in San Francisco Aug. 3.

MRS. BERTHA SEELEY DAVIS, 49, newspaper writer and wife of W. E. Davis, advertising manager of the Santa Cruz (Cal.) Sentinel, died Aug. 5.

CHARLES RAY, 91, former publisher of the Milwaukee (Wis.) Sentinel, died in Pasadena, Cal., Aug. 12. He was a native of New York but went west with his parents at the age of 4 years. He had made his home in California since 1895.

PRESCOTT WARREN, of Newton, Mass., formerly in the advertising business for several years, and husband of Emily Stanley Warren, special writer on the Boston Transcript, died Aug. 11 in Peter Bent Brigham hospital, Boston.

JOHN L. WILDER, 77, for 61 years an employee of Palmer, Mass., newspapers, died Aug. 14 in his home. He was one of the oldest printers in the East. In 1915 he celebrated his 50th anniversary in the employ of the Palmer Journal. When the Palmer Register was consolidated with the Journal Mr. Wilder was retained despite his age and kept at his work until three months ago.



E. O. SEIWERT, 68, father of Walter Seiwert, day foreman of the composing room of the Detroit Free Press, and of Edward Seiwert, a linotype operator on the Free Press, died last week at his home in Detroit.

ELI DEWOLFE ROBINSON, 71, former publisher of the Butler (Pa.) Eagle and a former postmaster of that city, died at his home in Pittsburgh, Aug. 11. He was a graduate of Witherspoon Institute and on his graduation purchased the Eagle from his father and for 30 years was its publisher. In 1904 he sold the Eagle to the present owners. He was postmaster from 1905 to 1910. Two sons and two daughters survive.

MRS. MARY AUSTIN, 68, for many years a member of the editorial staff of the Taunton (Mass.) Gazette, died Aug. 10.

Mrs. H. S. GRIMES, mother-in-law of Harry Taylor, publisher of the Portsmouth (O.) Times, died a few days ago. George Taylor, a brother of Harry Taylor, was drowned recently in the Ohio River, while rescuing his daughter from drowning.

How to increase sales in Indiana

Indiana retailers and dealers appreciate the value of newspaper influence in creating demands for advertised products, and co-operate readily with advertisers.

The best method to increase sales in Indiana is to reach the buying public direct—thru the daily papers listed below.

These are the papers read in the homes of Indiana, the papers that influence the buying habits, and the mediums in which the people believe in.

Let us show you how you can cover this highly intensified market of Indiana, efficiently and economically.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Columbus Republican	(E)	4,912	.03
††Connersville News-Examiner	(E)	4,681	.025
††Decatur Democrat	(E)	3,215	.025
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(M)	35,247	.08
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(S)	28,468	.08
Fort Wayne News-Sentinel	(E)	43,365	.10
Gary Evening Post-Tribune	(E)	15,514	.06
Huntington Press	(M&S)	4,079	.025
††Indianapolis News	(E)	128,341	.25
Lafayette Journal & Courier	(M) 7,878 (E) 13,583	21,461	.06
††La Porte Herald-Argus	(E)	6,726	.04
Marion Chronicle	(E)	9,364	.04
†Shelbyville Democrat	(E)	4,012	.025
South Bend News-Times	(M) 9,751 (E) 16,603	26,354	.07
South Bend News-Times	(S)	24,500	.07
South Bend Tribune	(S) 21,431 (E)	22,254	.06
††Terre Haute Tribune	(E&S)	23,442	.06

A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, March 31, 1926.
†Government Statement, October 1, 1925.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1926.

MILLS MADE 16% MORE PAPER THIS YEAR

U. S. Newsprint Production for 7 Months Tops Last Year by 11 Per Cent, Canada by 22 Per Cent, for Total of 321,359 Tons

Newsprint mills in North America continued to work at practically full speed during July, according to statistics just issued by the Newsprint Service Bureau, New York. Production by United States mills during the month amounted to 140,516 tons and shipments to 142,690 tons. Production in Canada amounted to 163,037 tons and shipments to 161,824 tons, making a total U. S. and Canadian production of 303,553 tons and shipments of 304,514 tons. Newfoundland mills produced 16,850 tons and 950 tons were made in Mexico, making a total North American production for the month of 321,359 tons. Newsprint mills also made 1,742 tons of hanging paper, 315 tons of which were made in Canada.

During July, U. S. mills operated at 95 per cent of rated capacity and Canadian mills at 99 per cent. United States mills made 11 per cent more in the first seven months of 1926 than in the same period of 1925 and Canadian mills exceeded the 1925 record for this period by 22 per cent. Combined production of U. S. and Canadian mills was 16 per cent above that of Jan. 1-July 31, 1925. Mill stocks of newsprint at U. S. points totaled 16,524 tons on July 31 and at Canadian mills 12,963 tons, making a combined total of 29,847 tons, equivalent to 2.5 days' average production. This is less than half the mill stock tonnage as of July 31, 1925. Mill stocks have shown an almost continuous decline since August, 1925.

Publishers' stocks on hand and in transit on June 30, 1926, totaled 30 days' supply, against 26 days' supply at the end of May, 1926, and 38 days' supply on June 30, 1925.

Production tables follow:

UNITED STATES MILLS

		Production Tons per Month	Shipments Tons per Month	Mill Stocks
1926—First Quarter.		138,519	136,771	18,352
April		145,327	144,600	19,478
May		141,032	142,294	18,207
June		142,166	141,521	18,852
July		140,516	142,690	16,524
Seven Months.		984,599	981,418	16,524
1925—	" "	884,503	872,131	34,079
1924—	" "	874,448	868,106	28,521
1923—	" "	884,971	880,724	21,584
1922—	" "	810,981	813,759	21,156
1921—	" "	709,695	708,939	25,519
1920—	" "	889,477	882,824	22,022

CANADIAN MILLS

1926—First Quarter.		143,148	141,053	14,800
April		151,739	154,015	12,415
May		153,969	151,990	14,331
June		158,601	161,108	11,795
July		163,037	161,824	12,963
Seven Months.		1,056,790	1,054,097	12,963
1925—	" "	869,386	867,752	23,258
1924—	" "	793,276	788,395	18,840
1923—	" "	726,960	718,981	14,927
1922—	" "	604,209	606,162	11,459
1921—	" "	440,455	430,155	19,367
1920—	" "	514,618	512,190	9,500

UNITED STATES AND CANADIAN MILLS

1926—First Quarter.		281,667	278,491	33,152
April		297,066	298,615	31,893
May		295,001	294,284	32,538
June		300,767	302,629	30,647
July		303,553	304,514	29,487
Seven Months.		2,041,389	2,035,515	29,487
1925—	" "	1,753,889	1,739,883	57,337
1924—	" "	1,667,724	1,656,501	47,361
1923—	" "	1,611,931	1,599,705	36,511
1922—	" "	1,415,190	1,419,921	32,615
1921—	" "	1,150,150	1,139,094	44,886
1920—	" "	1,404,095	1,395,014	21,522

S. D. PRESS OUTING

150 Members Gather at Brookings Aug. 13—Roe a Speaker

Following an afternoon of sports, the South Dakota Press Association closed its annual summer outing at Brookings, Aug. 13. All previous records of attendance were broken with a registration of more than 150.

The editors were guests of the Brookings Commercial Club and the Brookings Retail Merchants association. During the day the association went on record as favoring continuation of the struggle to eliminate government competition in printing and pledged its efforts to President C. W. Pugsley in his policy for a greater agricultural college for South Dakota.

Herman Roe, Northfield, Minn., president of the National Editorial Association was a speaker.

COAST EDITOR HELD FOR MISUSING MAILS

Arrested by U. S. Authorities Charged with Printing Obscene Matter in Connection with McPherson Case Editorial

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 19.—Publication recently of an outspoken editorial discussing the Aimee Semple McPherson case, has caused the arrest of A. R. Sauer, editor of the San Diego Herald, a weekly, in which the editorial appeared. Postal authorities arrested the 73-year old editor on the specific charge of sending obscene literature through the mails. He was arraigned before a Federal Commissioner in San Diego, Saturday, and bail set at $5,000.

With the arrest in Los Angeles of four news vendors on charges of selling obscene literature the case took a new turn. While the news vendors' counsel had hoped to bring nine residents of Carmel, who recently testified in the McPherson kidnapping case, into the impending trial, efforts so far have been fruitless. Besides the Carmel residents the defense plans called for the appearance of Mrs. McPherson and District Attorney Keyes. Efforts were also made to have Mrs. McPherson produce Kenneth G. Ormiston, former radio operator at Angeles Temple, and through him bring about the appearance at the trial of "Miss X," whom Ormiston in an affidavit asserts is the woman who stayed with him in a Carmel cottage during part of the time Mrs. McPherson has stated she was being held by kidnappers. Mrs. McPherson and Keyes have already been subpoenaed.

Mrs. McPherson's counsel meantime have been studying ways of blocking all attempts to question her on any facts not pertinent to the case.

The news vendors' original plans were to ask the Carmel residents to attempt to identify "Miss X" from those in the courtroom, where the case will be heard before a municipal judge Monday night.

The following letter was sent to Mrs. McPherson by defense attorneys: "I understand that you know the present whereabouts of Kenneth G. Ormiston and the woman with whom he occupied a bungalow at Carmel, known as 'Miss X,' I hereby demand you to bring them into court on Aug. 23 at the time of the trial."

Last Monday Sauer had his hearing before Federal Commissioner Ben B. Head, who did not rule on the motion of Sauer's counsel to have the bail of $5,000 reduced. He left this to be passed upon by the San Diego Commissioner before whom Sauer originally appeared.

Whether the editor will face trial on the obscene literature charges rests with the Federal Grand Jury, which meets Sept. 8.

In the impending trial of the four news vendors on charges of selling obscene literature, the result of sales of the offending issue of the Herald, defense plans to date have gone awry. Mun cipal Judge Rosenkranz has refused issue subpoenas calling the nine witness of Carmel for the case which opens ne Monday, on the ground that the affida was insufficient in that it did not s forth the materiality of their testimon Defense counsel will present a new af davit showing materiality of testimon

Acting presiding Judge Valentine, d to pressure of business, was unable hear defense argument yesterday to c tain a temporary restraining order pr venting city officers interfering with s of the Herald. Other judges declar they were "too busy" to hear the ca Tuesday.

S. D. EDITOR BOWS TO CHAMP. MILKER IN CONTEST

CASPER NOHNER, editor of the Lake Norden (S. D.) Enterprise pailing the festive cow in the milking contest at the summer meeting of the South Dakota Press Association. Did he enjoy it? Look at that smile! Wearied by the strain of milking steadily for ten minutes, Nohner finally admitted the superior ability of his opponent, Robert Morrow of Mitchell, S. D., South Dakota champion farmer-milker. Morrow extracted 25.8 pounds of milk, but Casper was unable to obtain more than 14.8 pounds in the allotted time.

B.B.B. ISSUES BOOK ON FURS

As part of its move to establish high ethical standards for retail fur selli and advertising, the Better Business B reau of New York, has issued a pamp let called "Concerning the Correct Nam of Furs." It warns against imitatio parading under misleading names.

Our Customers Write Our Ads

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE, of the EMPORIA, KANSAS, GAZETTE Says—

"We have used The DUPLEX PRESS, Flat Bed and Tubular, in my office now for more than twenty years, and a fine press they make."

DUPLEX PRESSES

FOR ALL NEWSPAPERS

Duplex Printing Press Co.
BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

AUTOMOBILE PRIZE CAMPAIGNS
Get the Circulation
Get the Money For It
Get It Quickly
Get It Right
Conducted on THE KENDALL PLAN

Contracts for FALL and WINTER CIRCULATION DRIVES are being made
—NOW—
WIRE OR WRITE FOR DETAILS, REFERENCES OR SPECIMEN CONTRACT.

W. S. Kendall Company
104 NORTH BAILEY AVE.
LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY

1st in ALBANY N for Over 75 Yea

Albany, N.Y., has the largest per capita savings deposits in the U. S.

The Times Union
Albany's Leading Newspaper

Make Your Title A Mark of Pride with Hardened Steel Newspaper Heads
—they last forever
::
A. J. SOSSNER
361 West Broadway
New York

Use the COMBINATION RATE
OF
The Gazette Times
(Morning and Sunday)
AND
Chronicle Telegraph
(Evening)
in order to cover Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania thoroughly at the lowest cost.
Member A. B. C.
URBAN E. DICE, Nat. Adv. Mgr.
GAZETTE SQ., PITTSBURGH, PA.
National Representatives:
E. M. BURKE, Inc.
42nd and Broadway, N. Y.
122 S. Michigan Blvd., Chicago.
Constitution Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.
R. J. BIDWELL CO.
742 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.
Times Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

MICHIGAN
is growing faster than any State in the Union.
Its increase in manufacturing products surpasses anything in the world.
BOOTH NEWSPAPERS
cover Michigan outside of Detroit—Eight principal cities with the only or leading Newspaper in its respective community.
The Grand Rapids Press
The Flint Daily Journal
The Saginaw News Courier
The Kalamazoo Gazette
The Jackson Citizen Patriot
The Bay City Times Tribune
The Muskegon Chronicle
The Ann Arbor Times News
National Advertising Representatives
I. A. KLEIN — 50 East 42nd St. New York City
J. E. LUTZ — Tower Building Chicago, Ill.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

Testimonial Campaign Pulls Well for St. Louis Globe-Democrat—Protecting Used-Car Buyers—New Classified Regulations Adopted by National Association

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING A PUBLIC SERVICE

CHARLES W. NAX, of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, and president of the Association of Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers, this week paid the following tribute to EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S new department, "Classified Advertising":

"You are to be complimented, I am sure, on your department which began in your issue of July 17 on classified advertising. The four pages that have appeared to date (Aug. 11) have been quite interesting and I am sure that you will find a sincere appreciation from every classified manager in our association.

"Classified advertising is a great public service, which the newspaper performs because it fills a big public need. It grew and developed because it is a general meeting place of all who want to obtain or want to dispose of anything, no matter what it might be. It is today the most wonderful of any of the many developments of the newspaper, and strange as it may seem, it has grown of its own accord, with practically no constructive thought from the publishers, until the last decade."

TESTIMONIAL copy for classified promotion is upheld as a most effective business getter by Charles W. Nax, classified advertising manager of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. The Globe-Democrat is now conducting a drive based on this principle. In each advertisement the name and the address of the advertiser is used.

"After trying many forms of promotion, we are convinced that this series of advertisements has created more comment than any service we have used," Mr. Nax told EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

Typical of the series is the full-page advertisement that appeared in the Globe-Democrat Aug. 8. About a catch-line reading, "If Yours Is a Renting Problem—Try This," testimonials from six successful classified advertisers were grouped.

The experiences of the advertisers were told in detail. This one may serve as an example:

"My Want Ad in last Sunday's Globe-Democrat pulled just a little too fast," reports Mrs. W. R. Wilkinson. Mrs. Wilkinson was unprepared for the results she got . . . She rented her apartment to the first people who offered $100 . . . Among the other 26 who answered the ad were some who offered as much as $125 for the place . . . But at that Mrs. Wilkinson is mighty well pleased."

Results obtained from a short ad that read "Auto Mechanic—Bring tools. 2616 N. 13th," was used for the text of one two-column advertisement in the series under the headline "A Want Ad That Went to Work for an Auto Repair Man."

"To find the right workman for the job in a city the size of St. Louis is like picking the proverbial needle from the haystack," was the comment of the text "but the Globe-Democrat Want Ads are doing the job every day."

Ten mechanics answered the ad.

Recommendations for classified advertising standards made by the National Better Business Bureau, have now been adopted by the Association of Classified Advertising Managers, and were this week mailed out to members and non-members. The recommendations follow:

I—HELP WANTED:

Insert under "Help Wanted—Male or Female" only those advertisements which have specific positions to offer respondents.

All Help Wanted advertisements should state explicitly the nature of the work the applicant is to do. If employment is on commission basis advertiser must so state.

(a) Advertisements for schools or training (local or foreign) must not be placed under this classification.

(b) Advertisements of Employment Agencies should not appear under this classification. They should be placed under "Employment Agencies."

(c) Advertisements which promise a stated salary conditioned upon the investment of a certain sum or the purchase of stock, should not be placed under this classification. (If carried, they should be inserted under "Business Opportunities.")

II—SALESMEN WANTED:

Advertisements under this heading must clearly designate the article or service to be sold, also the basis of the compensation, whether salary or commission is paid.

(a) Where employment is contingent on the purchase of an article, the advertisement should so state.

III—AGENTS WANTED:

Agents Wanted advertisements must name the business the agent is to represent.

(a) Advertisements whose main purpose is to sell goods to agents and by them to be re-sold to the public, must so state.

IV—INSTRUCTION:

Advertisements of schools or colleges, correspondence courses for any trade or industry (local or foreign), must appear under one of the following headings: "Educational," "Vocational Training," "Trade Schools," or "Instructions."

The fact that instruction is offered and not immediate employment should be made apparent in the advertisement.

(a) Such advertisements must not be placed under Help Wanted Male or Female.

V—EMPLOYMENT AGENCIES:

Advertisements for Employment Agencies must be inserted under the heading, "Employment Agencies." (As required by Law in New York State.)

(a) They should not appear directly nor unqualified under "Help" or "Situations" wanted.

VI—CLASSIFICATIONS:

All classified copy must be offered for insertion under headings which accurately describe the nature of the proposition.

VII—PHRASEOLOGY:

(a) Base possible earnings on average rather than exceptional performance.

(b) Avoid ambiguous or confusing statements.

(c) Describe employment features as and for what they are.

Are you doing anything to get people into the habit of turning to your classified pages?

An idea suggests itself in a stunt started this week by the New York Evening World. This paper is running a "Then-and-Now" series of photographs, which jump the reader from page three to page 21, which contain real estate display ads.

On Monday, for instance, it carried the photograph of a young man on page three captioned: "Who Is This?", with the underslug, "Turn to page 21 and find out." On page 21 was a new picture of Gov. Al Smith of New York, captioned "Of Course It's Al Smith."

Almost any newspaper library could yield a good series of pictures that could be used to advantage in introducing readers to the classified department. Think, also, of the possibilities of attracting attention to your real estate listing by using a "then-and-now" series of local building sites and buildings.

Ely S. Hewitt is now handling all of the classified display departments of the Hearst Boston newspapers.

As a protection for used car buyers, the New York Herald Tribune this week started printing the license and motor serial numbers of stolen automobiles as a new listing on its classified page. The listing follows that of "Motor Bus Routes" recently added to the classifications of the Herald Tribune.

L. L. Heaton, classified manager of the New York Herald Tribune, left this week on a two weeks' automobile vacation trip to Canada. D. C. Patterson, his assistant, is in charge.

Irving J. Silberg has been transferred from the classified advertising department of the New York Herald Tribune to the local display advertising department of the same newspaper.

have you been following the remarkable growth of the Detroit Times

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's
Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and New Rochelle and The Vicinity Towns
Are Covered Completely by
THE DAILY ARGUS
of
Mount Vernon
THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle
Both Members of A. B. C.
Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

The Normal Season in Miami
23%
MORE CIRCULATION
Herald July circulation figures this year as compared with the same period for 1925 show a net increase of 23%—substantiating the continued phenomenal growth of Miami and its market under normal conditions—at a time when nearly every reader is a bona fide resident.
No other market in America is in as healthy a state as the Miami market. No other market offers greater possibilities to the national advertiser.
The Miami Herald
"Florida's Most Important Newspaper"
Frank B. Shutts, Publisher.

42 football training talks
By Bud Hovan
Sold to
Baltimore Evening Sun
The International Syndicate
Baltimore, Md.

FIRST IN NEWS
Since 1869
LA PRENSA
OF BUENOS AIRES
has been foremost in giving unbiased news of the world. Two thousand correspondents in Argentina and foreign correspondents that send eight to ten thousand words by cable daily at a cost considerably exceeding ten thousand dollars weekly help to make the Argentina people the best informed in the world.
For information and rates apply to
JOSHUA B. POWERS
Exclusive Advertising Representative,
250 Park Avenue New York
"South America's Greatest Newspaper"

CLINE SYSTEM
CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO. CHICAGO
QUALITY RANK SERVICE FAME
CLINE WESTINGHOUSE
Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control is used by SEATTLE STAR
Seattle, Wash.
Ask them about it.
CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO.
Chicago: 111 West Washington Street
New York: 47 West 34th Street
San Francisco: First National Bank Building

creating Impression!
nearly half the 2013 national advertisers using the Cleveland Plain Dealer in 1925 used it exclusively.
The Plain Dealer
ONE Medium — ONE Cost ALONE Will sell it
J. B. Woodward, 110 E. 42d St., New York
Woodward & Kelly, 360 N. Mich. Ave., Chicago

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

H. W. Kastor Agency Joined with Phelps & Pietsch—New Agency Organized in Philadelphia—Calkins Back from Europe—Neff Joins Bellamy-Neff Company

HARRY E. PHELPS and Charles F. Pietsch, who formerly conducted an advertising agency in Chicago under the name of Phelps & Pietsch, have joined the H. W. Kastor & Sons Advertising Company, Chicago. Prior to organizing his own business Mr. Pietsch was with the New York and Chicago offices of the Kastor Company. Mr. Phelps was formerly with the Brennan-Phelps Company, Chicago.

I. Raymond Spector and Milton E. Goldensky have formed the advertising agency of Spector & Goldensky in Philadelphia, and their new offices are located in the City Centre Building.

Goldensky, a mechanical engineer, was formerly head of the advertising department of the Music Master Corporation, while Spector has been the president of the Blue Book Publishing Company.

Special emphasis will be placed upon technical subjects.

George T. Piere has resigned as advertising manager of the Bend (Ore.) Bulletin to become manager of the Martin Advertising Service, formerly of Walla Walla, Wash., recently moved to Salem, Ore. R. H. Martin is in charge of sales promotion.

Alan R. Martin and Leonard Gessner have organized the Martin-Gessner Advertising Agency at New Orleans. Mr. Martin was recently an account executive with Bauerlein, Inc., of New Orleans.

C. C. Stockford of the C. C. Stockford Company, Toledo advertising agency, has disposed of his interest in that company.

W. Warren Anderson, formerly an account executive for Vanderhoof & Company, Chicago, has started his own advertising agency in Minneapolis.

Maj. Patrick F. O'Keefe, president of the P. F. O'Keefe Advertising Agency and president of the Advertising Club of Boston, Mass., was tendered a banquet at the Southern Yacht Club on Lake Ponchartrain, New Orleans, La., Aug. 19, by the Society of American Florists in recognition of his service to the society and through his now famous slogan, "Say It With Flowers."

Earnest Elmo Calkins, president of Calkins & Holden, New York advertising agency, returned to this country this week from a trip to the continent.

The National Advertising Syndicate has been established at 17 Summer street, Haverhill, Mass., under the owner-management of William L. Dow.

AD TIPS

Barrows, Richardson & Alley, 19 West 44th street, New York. Placing hair clippers account of the Brown & Sharpe manufacturing Company, Providence, R. I.

Barton, Durstine & Osborn, Inc., 383 Madison avenue, New York. Placing account for the L. C. Smith & Corona Typewriters, Syracuse, N. Y.

George Batten Company, 332 South Michigan avenue, Chicago. Preparing list on French Carbon & Battery Company, Madison, Wis. Sending 60,000 line contract to newspapers in five gulf states on the Pan American Petroleum Corporation, New Orleans, La.

George Batten Company, 383 Madison avenue, New York. Making contracts with a few newspapers for a tryout campaign for the Balian Corporation, proprietary medicine, New York.

Campbell-Ewald Company, 360 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Now handling accounts of the DeVry Corporation, makers of motion picture cameras and projectors for amateurs and the Fred W. Amend Company, candy manufacturers.

Capehart-Carey Corporation, Times Building, New York City. Placing account of Eugene, Ltd., New York.

Carter Advertising Agency, 285 Madison avenue, New York. Now handling account of Henderson & Erwin, "Rockingchair" Underwear, Norwalk, Conn.

Nelson Chesman & Company, 1127 Pine street, St. Louis. Again renewing newspaper contracts for the Tonsiline Company, Canton, Ohio. Also placing account for Eugene Donzelot & Son, St. Louis.

Conover-Mooney Company, Harris Trust Building, Chicago. Placing orders with some Ohio newspapers for the Hoffman Heater Company, Louisville, Ky.

Erwin, Wasey & Co., 844 Rush street, Chicago. Considering list for next year's advertising on Wahl Company, Chicago.

Erwin, Wasey & Co., 250 Park avenue, New York. Reported to have secured account of the American Chicle Company, Long Island City, N. Y.

Federal Advertising Agency, 6 East 39th street, New York. Now handling account of the Bradley Knitting Company, "Bradley Knit Wear," Delavan, Wis.

Gardner Advertising Company, 360 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Will make up list for Reichmann Radio Company, Chicago.

Kenyon Company, Inc., 131 Clarendon street, Boston. Placing account for the Cox Confectionery Company, East Boston, Mass., "Romance" chocolates.

Lord and Thomas, 400 North Michigan avenue. May handle some advertising on Drive-It-Yourself cars.

Lyddon & Hanford Company, 110 East 42nd street, New York. Now handling account of F. Berg & Company, hats, Orange, N. J.

H. K. McCann Company, 285 Madison avenue, New York. Has secured account of Encyclopedia Britannica, Inc., New York.

Marx-Flarsheim Company, 15 East 8th street, Cincinnati, Ohio. Has secured the following accounts; Tyler Hotel, Louisville, Kentucky and North Shore Hotel, Tippecanoe Lake, Indianapolis.

Martin-Gessner, Inc., Pere Marquette Building, New Orleans, La. Has secured account of Pine Hills On-the-Bay real estate development on the Mississippi Gulf Coast.

John F. Murray Company Advertising Agency, 598 Madison avenue, New York. Again renewing some newspaper contracts for the R. L. Watkins Company, "Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo," New York.

Charles F. W. Nichols Company, 14 East Jackson boulevard, Chicago. Will place Gossard Corset Company, Chicago, copy in roto sections of a small list of newspapers.

Porter-Eastman-Byrne Company, 22 West Monroe street, Chicago. Has prepared list on American Radiator Company.

Potter Co., Clark Music Building, Syracuse, N. Y. Has secured the following accounts; Prosperity Company, Manufacturers of pressing equipment for laundry trade, Syracuse, N. Y., Smith Ironer, Syracuse, N. Y., and Shaughnessy Knitting Co., Watertown, N. Y.

Fred M. Randall Company, Book Building, Detroit. Placing orders with some Pennsylvania newspapers for the Holland Furnace Company, Holland, Mich.

Fred Robbins Company, Inc., 360 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Has list in course of preparation on Burgess Battery Company, Madison, Wis.

Sehl Advertising Agency, 360 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Prepared list on Calumet Baking Powder Company, Chicago.

J. Walter Thompson Company, 244 Madison avenue, New York. Again placing orders with Eastern newspapers for the U. S. Industrial Alcohol Company, New York. Also placing orders with some Pacific Coast newspapers for the Corning Glass Works "Pyrex," Corning, N. Y.

Frank B. White Company, 33 S. Clark street, Chicago. Has secured account of the Kalo Company, Quincy, Illinois, producers of supplemental stock feeds, minerals and tonics.

Wood, Putnam & Wood Company, Oliver Ditson Building, Boston. Now handling account of the Rival Foods, Inc., wholesale grocers, Cambridge, Mass.

STRIKE IS LAST RESORT

Woll, Photo-Engravers' Chief Pleads for Peaceful Negotiations

A plea to use the strike as a weapon in industrial disputes only when all other means of settlement have failed was voiced in Philadelphia Tuesday, by Matthew Woll, president of the International Photo-Engravers' Union of North America. Mr. Woll was the principal speaker at the organization's annual convention.

"Experience has demonstrated," he said, "that strikes are to be avoided wherever and whenever possible. It should not be understood that they never should be resorted to. On the contrary, there are times when it is preferable to strike and lose than not to have fought at all.

"Strikes, however, are a double-edged sword, to be used with extreme care and caution and only when no other course is open. The greater skill and ingenuity is to obtain desired and acceptable results without resort to strikes."

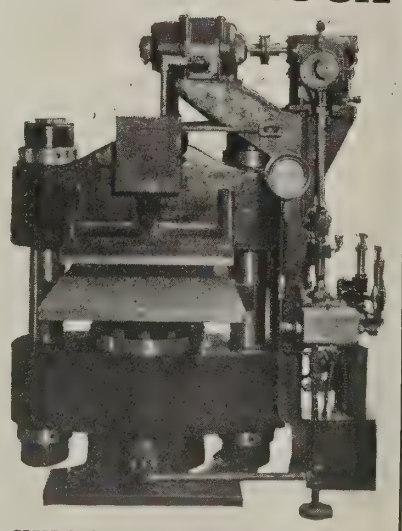
About 6,000 delegates, representing local unions throughout the United States and Canada, attended the convention.

DROPS AIR MAIL CONTRACT

New Grants Cancellation on Chicago-St. Paul Line—Will Ask New Bids

Postmaster General New this week accepted the 45-day notice of discontinuance tendered by Charles Dickinson, contractor on the air mail route number 9, Chicago, Ill., via Milwaukee and La Crosse, Wis., to St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn., and immediately re-advertised for bids returnable Sept. 4, 1926 for the operation of the line. Mr. Dickinson asked that he be relieved of further service under his contract.

Asked for comment on the request of Dickinson for a cancellation, Postmaster General New said: "the action of Mr. Dickinson illustrates exactly what I had in mind in saying on two or three public occasions recently that the danger lay not in the Department's not going fast enough with the development of the contract air mail service but in going too fast."



Largest Evening Circulation in Largest Market

for 26 consecutive years the Evening Journal has had the largest evening circulation in America—concentrated in New York and suburbs. More than DOUBLE the circulation of any other New York evening paper.

NEW YORK JOURNAL

America's Largest Evening Circulation and at 3c a copy

BIROTADRUCK

HYDRAULIC MATRICE PRESS

Direct Pressure Under Complete Control. Fast, Positive, Non-Vibrating Hydraulic Operation. The first successful hydraulic matrice moulding press to be introduced into this country.

Birotadruck Presses are now in operation on the plants of The New York Times (3 presses), New York Herald-Tribune (2 presses), Boston Globe, Cleveland Press and Dallas News.

AMERICAN BIROTADRUCK CO., Inc.
120 West 42d St., New York City

GROWING IN IMPORTANCE

The Inter-Mountain territory of Utah, Idaho, Western Wyoming and Eastern Nevada is rapidly developing and becoming more important to the advertiser whose merchandise has national distribution.

Don't overlook this rich section of the West.

The Salt Lake Tribune

THE S. C. BECKWITH SPECIAL AGENCY
—Sole Eastern Agents—
New York—Chicago—Detroit
St. Louis—Kansas City
Atlanta
M. C. MOGENSEN & CO., INC.
Pacific Coast Representatives
San Francisco—Los Angeles—Seattle

HALF A STATE COMPLETELY COVERED
at one Combination Rate
EVENING COURIER MORNING POST
Two Great Newspapers—Published at Camden, N. J.
National Representatives
STORY, BROOKS & FINLEY

Do you know what percentage of errors are made in your Composing Room?

We suggest you go there and take fifty original proofs. Count up the number of lines and the number of errors. Get the percentage of errors to lines.

It takes twice as long to correct an error as it does to make it, so multiply this percentage by three.

Take this resultant percentage and apply it to your total Composing Room payroll for the year. See how much money errors are costing you.

When you find out what they cost you write and tell us the amount. We will show you a source of profit you have never heard of.

Matrix Contrast Corp.
33 W. 42d St., New York City

The DES MOINES CAPITAL

Completely covers Des Moines' entire trade territory for you at a rate of 14c per line.

It is the best Advertising buy in the midwest

O'Mara & Ormsbee
Special Representatives

The DES MOINES CAPITAL
Lafayette Young
Publisher

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

UNITE FOR SELF-PROTECTION

DOTHAN, Ala.

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: I have been reading with a great deal of interest your symposium on contempt of court power, your editorial on the drift to censorship, of the Mellett case, of the Carl Magee case and of the Alfred Lindsley case. These are just a few of the outstanding injustices against newspaper men who have dared to stand for the right and to fight for principle. Others are legion.

In the United States we have 48 different kinds of libel laws—almost as many as Heinz has pickles—and, as you have brought out, every time a politician has a peeve he has a law passed against the peever.

We have newspaper co-operative associations for everything under the sun—for newsgathering, for circulation uniformity, for truth in advertising, for publishing standards and what not—but to save my life, I cannot recall one for self-protection against such things and outrages as suffered by Magee and Lindsley.

Why can't there be such an organization, national in scope? To be sure, there is the Civil Liberties Union, but it does not exactly cover the need for the organization I propose.

It seems to me that under the proper leadership, a national organization, with a good fat treasury, could be built up to investigate cases in which editors are being prosecuted for alleged crimes perpetrated with their newspapers, and determine if these prosecutions indeed are persecutions. In case of persecution, then let the whole force of this proposed national newspaper organization be turned loose for the benefit of the oppressed member of the craft.

It would be a comparatively simple matter to retain the best of legal talent for the defense of such cases. Pressure untold could be brought to bear to relieve the oppression. Trained investigators could be turned loose on the trail of the rottenness behind such persecutions as that of Lindsley and the entire situation exposed through the press of the nation.

Could not EDITOR & PUBLISHER foster and sponsor such an organization? A few stories along this line would help greatly toward the crystallization of sentiment among the newspapers of the country, and I confidently believe there are but few that would not be willing to contribute a few dollars a year toward its maintenance.

ANGUS A. ACREE,
Publisher, Dothan (Ala.) Sunday Sun.

CONTEMPT IN TWILIGHT ZONE

EDITOR & PUBLISHER: I have just returned from a month's holiday and found your telegram of July 28, concerning contempt of court cases.

The whole question of contempt of court rests largely in a twilight zone. I am not at all sure that removing contempt proceedings into another court or before another judge would eliminate abuse. Judges, like other professional men, are very much inclined to overstress the importance of etiquette when it involves a brother judge. There is also danger in restricting the power of the courts to punish for contempt. I think if the right of appeal to a higher jurisdiction were made mandatory in all cases except those involving the Supreme Court of a State or the United States, the possibility of upset on review would put a wholesome restraining influence on the judge of first instance. This in my opinion is about as far as it is safe to go.

DAVID E. SMILEY,
Editor-in-Chief,
Philadelphia Public Ledger.

FAULT ON BOTH SIDES

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: Your telegram of Aug. 3rd with reference to elimination of cash discount on agency payments was called to my attention on my return to the office. Feeling that you have probably already covered the matter, I do not know whether any comment of mine would be of interest.

A number of newspapers have abolished cash discount during the past year, and the matter was discussed briefly at the Philadelphia convention of the Association of Newspaper Advertising Executives. My own thought is that the isolated individual newspaper can "get away" with the elimination of cash discount, but that if it becomes popular, and all newspapers eliminate cash discount, it may retard the development of national newspaper advertising.

Frankly, I think the attitude of many agencies in deducting cash discount although their checks leave the office after the cash discount period is responsible for the feeling in many newspaper offices that cash discount is a source of irritation and might just as well be eliminated. This is a matter that the agencies could correct themselves, if they would adhere to cash discount terms as provided by the newspaper. Of course, the agency will come back and state that so many newspapers are lax in their collection methods that no agency knows in advance whether or not the paper will accept a check less cash discount even if it is sent in 10 to 15 days late.

The Indianapolis News has comparatively little difficulty in collecting cash discounts that are deducted in error. However, the present system sometimes creates irritation and it looks to me as if the agencies had better jack up their office routine in paying promptly on discount dates, (or pay on a net basis without discount if the period has elapsed), otherwise there will be a growing tendency to eliminate cash discounts entirely.

INDIANAPOLIS NEWS,
FRANK T. CARROLL,
Advertising Director, also President Association of Newspaper Advertising Executives.

"WHAT PRICE ETHICS, NOW?"

WASHINGTON, D. C.

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: Paste-pots and shears are not classified as "deadly weapons" in the editorial departments of the "palladium of our liberties"—the newspapers.

To the successful feature syndicate however, they fall into the same category as the bandit's gun.

It seems a harsh way of describing these accoutrements of the profession, but to the syndicate man, it is a blunt way of stating an emphatically omnipresent truth.

The syndicate, to the average newspaper man, has but two problems—the production and marketing of attractive features.

At times, these problems are dwarfed by the necessity of concentrating attention on the rival feature agency which uses the weapons previously mentioned to "assemble" its product—and, tremendously more important—on the editor who resorts to clipping and pasting to protect his check-book.

The former usually is sufficiently disreputable to defeat his own bad ends in a short time. The latter, bulwarked behind various "codes of ethics" and a moral beacon on the community is the real enemy who creates consternation in the ranks of the successful syndicates.

A case in point is that of a newspaper in a thriving community which was using syndicate material continuously without paying for the privilege. The situation was called to the attention of the editor who chanced to be one of the most fervid champions of "newspaper ethics," a fanatical "butter and egg man" of journalism.

It was explained to him that a long list of leading American publications were paying a not inconsequential sum for the material his paper was clipping so unblushingly.

His answer was:

"Why pay for stuff I can clip? Why spend my money for material I can get with a paste-pot and shears?"

What price ethics, now?

WILLIAM ULLMAN,
Ullman Feature Service.

A CORRECTION

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: My attention was called today to the obituary of Rome G. Brown printed in EDITOR & PUBLISHER issue of May 29, 1926.

In the second paragraph appears the following:

"Mr. Brown became head of the Tribune in December, 1919, succeeding C. George Krogness, who had directed the paper as general manager for a year following the death of W. J. Murphy," etc.

For the purpose of keeping the record straight for whomsoever may be interested, permit me to correct your record to conform to the facts.

I became president and general manager of the Minneapolis Tribune Nov. 1, 1917, and remained as such until Dec. 1, 1919, two years and one month.

C. GEO. KROGNESS.

IN MR. BARRON'S DEFENSE

To EDITOR AND PUBLISHER: If you have any recollection of the large number of proof sheets from press agents that I have mailed you from time to time you may have some idea of the fiendish delight I take in any expose of publicity graft.

But I do want in this connection to relate a little experience of my own in defense of C. W. Barron, publisher of the Wall Street Journal, with whom you have had some controversy concerning his requests for publicity in connection with his publication of the works of Swedenborg.

I have a yawning waste basket ready for all publicity that comes over my desk, but sometimes I ask for proofs, in reply to requests, when convenient postal cards are enclosed. I have no recollection of receiving Mr. Barron's proposition coupled with advertising, but there did come to my desk one day a full page mat offered as free publicity. For more reasons than one we did not use it, but I was interested enough to read it through and wrote a short editorial comment.

A few days after this was printed, and I had mailed a clipping to Mr. Barron, I noted in our advertising columns a display space concerning the Swedenborg books. The order came from a Boston agency. The first intimation that there might be some connection between the editorial I had written and the advertising came to me in your publication of Mr. Barron's proposition.

Mr. Barron wrote me a very nice letter in reply to the clipping and sent me copies of the magazine in which the original article appeared. My comment was published without any thought of advertising in connection with it. Whether the advertising came from the clipping of the editorial comment or from my request for proof sheet of the page offered I do not know. If the mat I threw away was sent with more than a hope that it would be published, Mr. Barron's publishers may feel they were bunkoed. But if Mr. Barron is satisfied I am.

C. F. WAITE,
Publisher San Pedro Daily Pilot.
San Pedro, Cal., Aug. 16, 1926.

TEXAS DAILY CHANGES NAME

The name of the Texarkana Evening Gazette has been changed to the Evening News.

A paper with the people

The public decides the progress of a newspaper.

The continuous rising circulation of the New York Evening Graphic vividly demonstrates popular acceptance of this newspaper as a medium of unusual reader interest.

Advertisers daily realize the benefit of this power through achieved results from the advertising columns of the New York Evening Graphic.

With a constantly increasing circulation, plus a constant growth in advertising lineage, the New York Evening Graphic offers the advertiser an extremely profitable opportunity.

Published by BERNARR MACFADDEN

NEW YORK EVENING GRAPHIC

H. A. AHERN, Advertising Mgr.
25 City Hall Place
New York City

in Detroit—

Free Press circulation reaches 31,000 more than the total number of families owning their own homes.

The "Free Press"
"Starts the day in Detroit"

With a stable, uninflated, liberal pursed circulation productive of greater advertising returns at lower cost.

MERCHANT & EVANS CO.
PHILADELPHIA

Producers of

SPARTAN TYPE METAL

Since 1866

LINO • MONO • STERO
INTERTYPE
COMBINATION

Stocks in Principal Cities

BUILDINGS
PLANT LAYOUTS
PRODUCTION
OPERATION

An organization specializing solely in newspaper building design, manufacturing and production problems.

S. P. WESTON

Newspaper Buildings
Plant Layouts
Production, Operation

120 West 42nd Street New York

THE TELEGRAM

now has the largest paid circulation in

CLARKSBURG, W. VA.

13,000 daily
14,000 Sunday

guaranteed.

Member Audit Bureau of Circulations

Represented Nationally by

The Devine-MacQuoid Co., Inc.

New York Philadelphia Pittsburg Chicago

first! in OHIO

11,492,383 Lines

Dispatch advertising record for the first six months of 1926, exceeding other Columbus newspapers combined by 1,665,911 lines.

NET PAID CIRCULATION

CITY	55,812
SUBURBAN	26,973
COUNTRY	23,666
Total Daily Circulation	106,451

Columbus Dispatch
OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

DO YOU NEED A TRAINED MAN?

The Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, an organization of college trained newspaper, magazine and advertising men, wants to help you find him. The Bureau puts you in touch with experienced, energetic men—it saves you time by recommending only those who meet your requirements.

If you expect a vacancy, please write Robert B. Tarr, Director, Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, P. O. Box 115, Pontiac, Michigan.

NO CHARGE TO EMPLOYERS

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

FRANK PLACHY, JR., was at one time a member of the staff of the New York Evening World. He later was connected with the New York Commercial. He then went over to the National City Bank as assistant to George E. Roberts, who does such wonderful work in interpreting business conditions.

For two years Mr. Plachy has been in Europe, corresponding for American newspapers and contributing to British periodicals. His work not only for the American papers but also for the industrial press, gave him an excellent background from which to present his observations on the economic distress of England. These observations may be found in his "Britain's Economic Plight" (Little, Brown & Co.)

The chapters dealing with the economic situation in Great Britain will doubtless appeal to editorial writers. The chapter to be featured in this department, however, is Chapter XI, "The British Newspaper Situation." Here may be found a personal impression of the press in Great Britain in general and in London in particular.

Mr. Plachy believes that, excepting the London Times and the Manchester Guardian, there is "scarcely an important week-day newspaper in England today which is operated for the sole purpose of presenting the news to its readers without prejudice, coloring or propaganda of any sort." In other words, with the exceptions noted, great newspapers of the American type are not found: the British papers "are tied to the tail of some one's political, social or financial ambition, or exist to further the ideas of a political group or serve as the mouthpiece of some favorite 'ism.'"

Mr. Plachy certainly passes along a beautiful bouquet to the London Times, "one of the greatest of British institutions." He even goes so far as to say that if all other reading matter in the world were to be denied the reader of the Times he could still be a well read and well informed man. The typographical appearance of the Times is praised, although mention is made of the make-up which puts important news on the two center pages and then works from there to the front and back pages which are given over to advertisements.

The typographical appearance of the Morning Post is also praised. Of that paper it is said:

> To read the Morning Post is a joy, if only because one finds so many things with which to disagree. It is the organ of the extreme right wing of the die-hards; it out-Tories the Tories and often misses accomplishing the demolition of a demagogue or scoundrel by the venom and viciousness with which it attacks. It is anti-American, anti-Irish, anti-Jew, anti-German, and practically anti-everything else, seldom finding anything to which it can give full-hearted approval in this sinful world. But it has the virtue, if it be a virtue, of being constant.

Mention is made of the fact that the Post is owned by the Duke of Northumberland, one of the richest men in England. This quotation then follows:

> It is generally believed in newspaper circles that the Morning Post is the most consistent loser of money in the British newspaper field. Gossip says that the Duke would like to let go, but finds himself in the position of the man who grabbed hold of the bear's tail. The paper's circulation is small, and it is not supported by the element in the country it defends so vigorously. Frequent changes characterize its staff, but to no avail. However, it would be a great loss to see it pass into oblivion because no other paper in England is so brilliantly edited, and no paper, not even the Times, maintains such a high standard of English in its columns. Its difficulties are due to the fact that in every Englishman, whether lord or coster, there is a strain of fair play which resents seeing the other fellow's case being put forward in a manifestly unfair manner. They won't support a paper that does it. If the Duke of Northumberland were to be well advised, he would hire a first-class editor, give him free rein to moderate the paper's vitriolic policies, and turn it into an afternoon paper. The afternoon papers of London are so poor that only one Londoner in five ever buys one, but the Morning Post, published in the afternoon, would sweep the field.

Another quotation thus sets forth a personal impression of the Daily Express:

> This is one of the few papers in England which follows the American style of printing the important news of the front page, carries its editorial page inside, and uses its back page for a daily selection of illustrations. It is owned by a smart Canadian and edited by a brilliant American. It stands for everything that will help make England and the empire a better place for those who live in it, and if its enthusiasm sometimes gets the better of it in its habit of giving its young men a free sway with their imaginations, at least the offense is an understandable and forgivable one.

Credit for carrying the most extensive cable news of any British newspaper is given to the Daily Telegraph, controlled by Lord Burnham, who comes from a newspaper family. London papers, so it is asserted, are not aware of the existence of the United States, so far as their news columns are concerned, but "the Daily Telegraph carries nearly every day a good part of a column from its New York and Washington correspondents"—correspondence that is marked "by accuracy, good temper, and courtesy, three qualities that distinguish the paper's editorial columns."

The somewhat surprising circulation of the Manchester Guardian in London is touched upon briefly. That paper is commended for standing for "the highest ideals in every line of human activity," although on numerous occasions it has run counter to popular views obtaining in England. In the book it is spoken of as "the Bible of the textile trade, the most important industry in Great Britain."

Mr. Plachy speaks of the organ of the Labor Party, the Daily Herald, as a "small sheet, poorly patronized by the element for which it professes to stand, and evidently having a hard time to make ends meet," but:

> It had the good luck during the summer of 1925 to have one of its delivery trucks loaded with papers stolen by a group of young ruffians styling themselves the National Fascisti. The almost unbelievable stupidity of the present Tory government in not meting out the usual swift and adequate British justice to these incipient thugs placed all public sympathy on the side of the Daily Herald, even the Morning Post finding the task of justifying the government's actions a most difficult one.

In commenting upon the Daily Mail, the chapter sketches the influence of Lord Northcliffe upon that newspaper. A little space is given to the two leading Sunday papers, the Sunday Times and the Observer. The former has no connection with the daily Times: the latter is owned by Lord Astor who is not to be confused with Colonel Astor who controls "The Thunderer."

Attention is directed to the fact that the most astonishing feature of the British press, at least to an American "is the popularity and tremendous circulation of those Sunday newspapers which exist only to circulate news of crime, scandal, and debauchery." These Mr. Plachy treats as follows:

> If an expert psychologist were to examine the matter, he would probably come to the conclusion that the British lead such law-abiding and clean lives themselves that the unusual and exceptional takes on a morbid fascination, more from the fact that it is so far from anything with which the average Britisher has any personal acquaintance than for any other reason. But whatever the reason, it cannot be denied that no publication in the English language has as large a circulation as The News of the World, which sells more than 3,000,000 copies every Sunday. It contains nothing whatever that the average decent American would want to have in his home or in any place where his children might see it.
>
> In fact, all the newspapers in Great Britain print a great deal in the way of court reports which would never see the light of day in America. Even the so-called "smut" section of Hearst's New York Sunday American reads like a Sunday-school tract compared with the ordinary reports of divorce, assault, incest and other cases in the British press. Papers like the Times say they would be only too glad to eliminate this trash from their columns, but are unable to do so as long as the cheaper and more popular papers print it.

Because London papers do not print American news, Americans in England depend almost entirely upon the Paris edition of the New York Herald and the Paris edition of the Chicago Tribune—o sale at all important downtown corne in London by the middle of the afternoo Of the newspapers published in th United States, Mr. Plachy believes tha the Christian Science Monitor of Bosto has ten times the circulation in Grea Britain of any other. His reason is tha British homes welcome the paper fro which crime and scandal news have bee deleted.

Obviously, I have overplayed the chap ter on the press. The text of the book however, aims to give the economic an swer to the rhetorical question, "What' the matter with England?"

* * *

DON C. SEITZ, formerly busines manager of the New York World, i a free lance, in every sense of that term in the world of letters. He keeps him self free to write about any topic tha may strike his fancy. In The Forum for September he print a personality sketch of Aaron Burr. In the Outlook

Regional Advertising
at Regional Rates
in
The Christian Science Monitor
An International Daily Newspaper
Publishing SELECTED ADVERTISING
ATLANTIC, CENTRAL and PACIFIC Editions
Rates and Circulation Data Supplied on Request
ADVERTISING OFFICES
Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, New York, London, Paris, Florence, Kansas City, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, Portland
"Buy What You Can Use"

FLORIDA
continues to be the fastest growing state in the Union.
TAMPA
is the recognized industrial center and the most substantial city in Florida.
THE TAMPA MORNING TRIBUNE
is the only morning and the only Sunday newspaper in Tampa, covering the entire rich, productive and populous territory of Southwest Florida, reaching a population of 713,943.
200,000 Daily Readers.
300,000 Sunday Readers.
Represented nationally by
The S. C. Beckwith Special Agency.

The World
These two newspapers offer the most powerful all-day service in New York available as a unit under a single contact. The 600,000 DAILY WORLD — EVENING WORLD readers constitute a highly concentrated force to be reckoned with in any campaign designed to effect distribution in Greater New York.
The Evening World
Pulitzer Building, New York
Tribune Tower, Chicago

The Los Angeles EVENING HERALD has the greatest daily circulation of any newspaper in the entire west
Representatives
New York: Herb. W. Moloney, 604 Times Bldg.
Chicago: John H. Lederer, 910 Hearst Bldg.
San Francisco: A. J. Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg.

If Quality
of circulation is your first consideration
The Evening Star
With Sunday Morning Editions
Washington, D. C.
will have your preference—same as it has the preference of practically everyone in the National Capital.
The Star's circulation is home circulation—both quality and quantity—the kind that counts most with advertisers.
N. Y. Office—110 E. 42nd St. Dan A. Carroll
Chicago Office—Tower Building J. E. Lutz

The difference between lost motion and promotion is the margin by which good classified mediums lead their fields.
THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, Inc.
International Classified Advertising Counsellors
Packard Building Philadelphia

GRAVURE SECTIONS PRINTED
SPECIAL AND REGULAR EDITIONS, MAGAZINE INSERTS AND COMMERCIAL WORK
Standard Gravure Corporation
LOUISVILLE KY

for August 18, he reports the findings of Dr. George W. Crile, that eminent scientist who has startled the world with his discovery that life is maintained by electricity within the body. For some reason it has been a long while since Seitz mounted Pegasus. Many friends of Mr. Seitz admire his poetry even more than his prose.

* * *

MORE a "news item" than a "literary note" is the announcement that The Nation agrees with EDITOR & PUBLISHER —even though it be on the one topic, the truth of the charges justifies the publicity in the press. The article, to which I refer, appears in The Nation for August 18, carries the head "Lese Majesty," and treats of the persecution of George R. Dale, editor of The Post-Democrat of Munsey, Ind.

While The Nation admits that the proposal of EDITOR & PUBLISHER for federal and state laws "to enable a person accused of contempt of court to obtain a hearing before a judge of the same rank as the accusing magistrate but in another jurisdiction" is an improvement. The Nation wants EDITOR & PUBLISHER to go still farther, and admit that "the entire contempt-of-court procedure is needless, probably unconstitutional, and chiefly usurped by the courts themselves without legitimate legislative warrant."

* * *

WILLIS J. ABBOT, editor of the Christian Science Monitor, has stirred up considerable discussion as to whether the modern newspaper is helping men to learn to write. What started the ball rolling was a contribution from Mr. Abbot on the subject to the July bulletin of the Society of Newspaper Editors. Those interested can doubtless get a copy of the bulletin from the president of the Society, Erie C. Hopwood, editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

* * *

THE interest of the lay public in the press has shown itself frequently of late in questions asked about journalism in connection with answers to correspondents given over the radio and in print.

Here is a typical one recently asked of Daniel A. Poling, who conducts a department in the Christian Endeavor World:

> Question: How can you tell what is true and what is not true in a newspaper?
> Answer: Were I to become facetious, I should say it cannot be done. Read with discrimination, my friend. If you do, it will not be long until you will discoverer for yourself those papers that make an honest attempt to give their readers the facts. Of course, even a newspaper may be deceived, though as a former newspaper reporter I realize that few newspaper men will admit it. I know, too, that it is much easier to criticize the newspaper for its delinquencies than it is actually to edit and conduct one. Some of the finest idealism and truest patriotism in this country is to be found in offices of some great American dailies.

NEW NEWSPAPER SERVICE

William W. Saxe has started business at 181 Tremont street, Boston, Mass., under the firm name and title of American Promotion Newspaper Service.

E. F. S.

Editors' Feature Service

Over 70 independent newspapers throughout the country subscribe to this fine daily service as a protection against rising feature costs.

Six Pages Daily
Illustrations in Mat Form

Write or wire for samples, price and territory.

Editors' Feature Service, Inc.
1819 Broadway, New York
Allied with Johnson Features, Inc.

STOKES TO JOIN STAFF OF NEW YORK TIMES

Former Secretary to Hoover to Become Editorial Writer for Daily Effective Oct. 1—Former Chairman of Overseas Writers

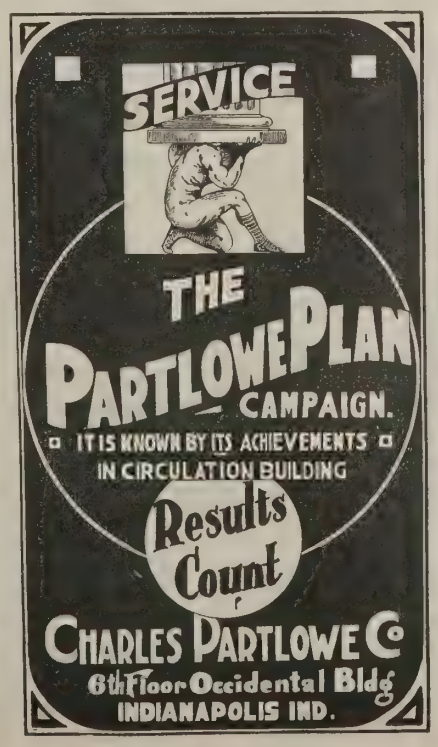
Harold Phelps Stokes, until recently secretary to Herbert Hoover, will join the editorial writing staff of the New York Times, effective Oct. 1, it was announced this week.

H. P. STOKES

Mr. Stokes has had considerable experience as a political writer in Albany and Washington. For many years he was connected with the New York Evening Post.

After graduation from Yale and a year of travel and study in the Far East Mr. Stokes became connected with the Evening Post in 1911. Under Villard he served as Albany correspondent from 1913 to 1917. When war was declared he resigned to serve as first lieutenant with the 306th Field Artillery, 77th Division, A. E. F., taking part in the Oise-Aisne and Meuse-Argonne campaigns.

The war over, Mr. Stokes obtained his discharge abroad and covered the Peace Conference for the Post. In 1919 he succeeded David Lawrence as Washington correspondent for that newspaper. When Cyrus H. K. Curtis purchased the Post, Mr. Stokes was just completing his 13th year on the staff. Soon after he resigned to join the writing staff of Current News Features, Inc.



During 1924, Mr. Stokes was chairman of the Overseas Writers, an association of newspaper men who have had journalistic experience in foreign countries.

BALDWIN NAMES COMMITTEES

National Publishers Association Will Meet at Buckwood Inn, Sept. 21

The seventh annual meeting of the National Publishers Association will be held this year at Buckwood Inn, Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 21 and 22. President Arthur J. Baldwin has appointed the following committees to take charge:

Committee on Arrangements: B. A. Mackinnon, M. C. Robbins.

Golf Tournament Committee: Eugene Kelley, Graham Patterson, Francis L. Wurzburg.

Entertainment Committee: Duncan A. Dobie, Jr., E. Kendall Gillett.

P. & A. MAKES RECORD WITH EDERLE PICS

Four Airplane Flown 1,000 Miles to Bring Photos to New York—McFarlane and Wurzel Figure in Speed Feat

Bringing pictures of the Gertrude Ederle channel swim to this country in time for publication in the New York Daily News, Aug. 15, Pacific & Atlantic Photos, Inc., New York, established a record for speed and daring hard to equal even in the fast picture syndicate game.

Other picture syndicates, by using fast motors across England, had got their photos on a boat due in New York Aug. 16. When they missed this boat, P. & A. officials called in an airplane fleet, and were first by 24 hours to cross the finish line.

The P. & A. pictures were aboard the Empress of Scotland, due in Quebec last Saturday. Four airplanes were flown 1,000 miles to meet the steamer in the St. Lawrence river and rush the photos to New York. Figuring in the flights were Joseph Wurzel, assistant manager for P. & A., and Capt. M. D. McFarlane, co-inventor of the Bartlane system for cable transmission of news pictures.

NAMES REFUSED NEWS MEN

Wisconsin State Official Withholds Nomination Papers from Reporters

On the theory that publicity given to the names recorded on nomination papers for candidates to political office is unfair, George Brown, an employee in the office of the secretary of state of Wisconsin, declined to permit the copying of such names from nomination papers in his office.

Should no attempt be made to challenge the action of Mr. Brown, newspapers will be unable to obtain the names of certain candidates.

TO EDIT NEW DAILY

MacGrath Will Take Editorial Charge of New York Enquirer

James Frederic MacGrath will be editor of the New York Evening Enquirer, scheduled to appear Sept. 19. He has been in newspaper work for more than 20 years. For some time he was associated with the old New York Sun.

The Enquirer, as announced some months ago by EDITOR & PUBLISHER, is to be published by William Griffin, formerly connected with the American Press Association, as vice-president.

Publication offices are to be at 444 Pearl street, New York.

Wheeler - Nicholson, Inc.

Complete Feature Service

Wire us for samples and prices of the Largest, Most Original Most Artistic and Finest

blanket feature service on the market, which includes IVANHOE, VIVIAN VANITY, and the FAMOUS SHORT STORY SERIES, in addition to SPORTS, WOMAN'S PAGE FEATURES, COMICS, FICTION, VERSE, CARTOONS and everything for the newspaper.

Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Malcolm Wheeler-Nicholson, President
373 4th Ave., New York City

Among The Newspapers Publishing

Constance Talmadge's Flapper Series

Chicago Journal
Detroit News
Toledo Blade
Omaha Bee
Peoria Star Journal
Philadelphia Sun
Buffalo Times
Louisville Courier J'l
Oakland Post Enquirer
Memphis News Scimitar
Newark Jersey Transcript

Why Not Join This List of Papers
Wire for Terms and Territory

COSMOS NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE INC
Covering the World
NINE EAST THIRTY-SEVENTH STREET NEW YORK CITY

Herbert S. Houston, President and Editor-in-Chief
Myles F. Lasker, Vice-President and General Manager

Detroit

Fourth Largest
City

Complete coverage with one paper.

The Detroit News

Offers advertisers unusual opportunities

RADIO

PROGRAMS
NEWS NOTES
FEATURES

Used and Praised by More than 200 Newspapers

Send for samples and prices

AUDIO SERVICE
326 West Madison St.
Chicago

THE WELFARE COMMITTEE
of the
INTERNATIONAL CIRCULATION MANAGERS ASSOCIATION

Can supply you with competent circulation men of capacity and ability capable to take entire charge of your department or to fill important posts in the department.

Address the Secretary-Treasurer please, Mr. Clarence Eyster, care Star Building, Peoria, Ill.

VENTURA (CAL.) POST AND STAR MERGED

Former Taken from Morning Field and Consolidated with Afternoon Paper —Star Gets Long Lease on Post Plant

(By telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

VENTURA, Cal., Aug. 16.—The Ventura Star, afternoon paper, today purchased the Ventura Morning Post from Alfred H. Davis. The Post was merged with the Star and the combined papers are being published from one plant as an afternoon daily under the name of the Star.

The Star was established 14 months ago. It is owned by the Ventura County Star, Inc., of which Roy Pinkerton, editor, is president; Talbot Kendall, business manager, and W. H. Porterfield, of San Diego, veteran publisher and investor in newspaper properties, the third stockholder. Pinkerton formerly was editor of the San Diego Sun; the Tacoma Times and the Seattle Star. Kendall was associated with the advertising departments of the San Diego Sun, Sacramento Star and Los Angeles Illustrated Daily News.

The sale of the Post was made necessary by the illness of Mr. Davis, for 12 years its owner. It represented an earlier consolidation of the Post and Democrat and was in its 46th volume. The Star recently became a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

The sale carries with it a long time lease on the Post building owned by Mr. Davis.

PANTS, COAT, VEST, ET AL!

U.P. Presents New Outfit to Williams, Who Wet Clothes in Channel

Sidney Williams, member of the United Press London office, was this week presented a new suit of clothes by the news gathering agency he serves. Covering Gertrude Ederle's channel swim, Williams plunged chest deep into the water, waded ashore, and was first to flash the news around the world.

As "Trudy" neared Kingsdown, Williams, who was in a motor-launch prepared to get to land to arrange for a quick protection flash on the actual landing. Chugging past the tugs, a half-dozen rival newspaper correspondents leaped aboard.

Overwhelmed by numbers, the U. P. reporter was unable to put them off. He reverted to stratagem instead. By hasty whispered arrangement with the pilot, the launch was steered toward Kingsdown. Williams jumped and waded. The pilot swerved quickly and put back into the channel.

Other correspondents aboard saved their suits.

Williams sports a new one.

KIMBERLY-CLARK CHANGE

Kelly Resigns as General Sales Manager of Paper and Cellucotton Firms

Raymond Kelly, general sales manager of Kimberly-Clark Company and vice-president of Cellucotton Products Company, Neenah, Wis., announces his resignation from both offices, effective at once.

Mr. Kelly has been associated with Kimberly-Clark Company for eleven years and for the past six and one half years has been general sales manager. He has been vice-president of Cellucotton Products Company since the formation of that company in 1920. He has not announced his future plans and for a short time will continue to reside in Neenah.

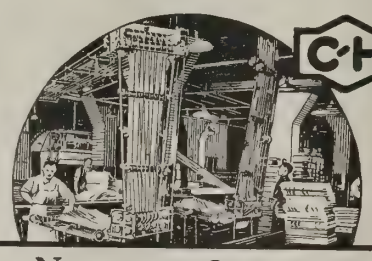
RAISING WIRE RATES

A. T. & T. Boosts Price on High-Speed Printers Effective Sept. 1

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company has announced a 25 per cent increase in the line charge for high-speed telegraph printer machines, effective Sept. 1. The machines are used by news gathering agencies and are installed in many newspaper offices.

At the same time it was stated the company expected to increase the word-age delivery on low-speed machines from 35 to 40 words a minute without additional charge.

GUARDS AGAINST ACCIDENTS



Stockton (Cal.) Record Installing New Press with Duplicate Controls

Because there is no other plant nearer than 50 miles capable of getting out an edition of the Stockton (Cal.) Record that evening newspaper is putting in press equipment designed to be practically emergency proof.

The Record will have in operation by July 1, 1927, a new Octuple Four Unit Press with a speed of 48 thousand 32 page papers per hour, and the electric drive and control will be in two complete duplicate units to provide against any breakdown or accident other than the destruction of the plant and building by fire.

The two 75 horse power motors to drive the press will be "hooked up" in parallel, but with separate driving chain and separate control for each so that either one can be operated singly to drive the press in emergency.

Supplies—Equipment

Newspaper Conveyors

take the papers in a steady stream, as fast as the presses can deliver them, up, overhead, around corners, through a ceiling or a wall to wherever they're wanted for mailing or delivery. Eliminating waste and delay by their speedy, dependable operation they are profitable equipment for papers large or small. Newspaper plants from London to Tokio have been using them for years.

Let us tell you how you can speed deliveries from your presses.

The CUTLER-HAMMER Mfg. Co.
Pioneer Mfrs. of Electric Control Apparatus
1203 St. Paul Avenue
MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN
CUTLER-HAMMER

Modern
Composing Room Furniture

as made by us will speed up production and reduce costs—a real saving in your Pay Roll. Are you interested? If so, consult your regular dealer in printers' supplies or write us direct.

Do it now!

HAMILTON MFG. CO.
TWO RIVERS, WIS.

20-PAGE DUPLEX PRESS FOR SALE

8 columns—22¾" cut-off

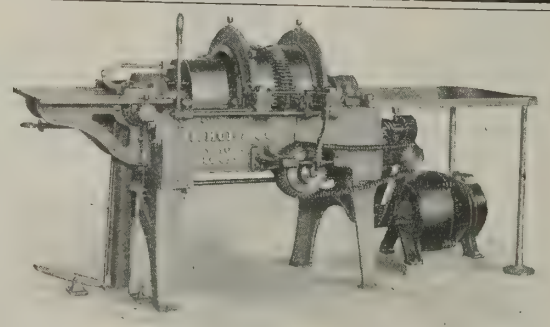
Immediately available

Purchased from the plant of the Daily Home News, New Brunswick, N. J. Can be seen in operation. We are the owners.

For further details:

THOMAS W. HALL CO.
INC.
575 Washington St. New York

Don't "Pig" Metal It Wastes Money



Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.

MONOMELT SLUG FEEDER

Eliminates the Metal Furnace

The Monomelt Co.
4509-19 Ravenswood Ave.
Chicago Illinois
World Bldg., New York City

Hoe Automatic Curved Plate Trimming and Shaving Machine

A Machine that will trim, tail-cut and shave five or six Stereo Plates a minute efficiently and economically. Arranged with Motor Drive connected by a Silent Chain.

R. HOE & CO., INC.
7 South Dearborn Street, CHICAGO, ILL.
504-520 Grand St., New York City
also at DUNELLEN, N. J.
7 Water Street, BOSTON, MASS.

Classified

EDITOR & PUBLISHER Classified Advertising Information

TRANSIENT RATES

SITUATIONS (Cash with Order)
1 Time — .40 per line
3 Times — .30 per line
ALL OTHER CLASSIFICATIONS (Cash with Order)
1 Time — .60 per line
4 Times — .55 per line

White space charge at same rate per line pe insertion as earned by frequency of insertion Special rates quoted for 13, 26 and 52 insertions The Editor & Publisher reserves the right t classify, edit or reject any advertisement.

COUNT SIX WORDS TO LINE

ADVERTISING

General Promotion

Advertising Promotion—If you want mor business, communicate with the International Publications Service, Incorporated, Suite 1004 1841 Broadway, New York City.

Newspaper Builder, responsibly connected i city of 350,000, offers a few publishers exper analysis and counsel by mail. This is a rea proposition. A-704, Editor & Publisher.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Brokers

The H. F. Henrichs Agency, Litchfield, Ill. 1012 Times Building, New York; 1216 Hol lingsworth Building, Los Angeles. Your desire to acquire a newspaper, or any dissatisfaction in the newspaper situation in your community should be reported to this Agency for satisfactory solution.

Little Big Bargain for Quick Buyer—Weekly paper and job plant in exclusive field; wel established; adequate plant, including new linotype. $6,000, one-third cash. Also splendid bargain weekly and job plant New York State. $15,000, one-third cash. J. B. Shale, Times Bldg., New York.

Interest for Sale

Half Interest for sale in money making evening daily in southwest. Fast growing city. Exclusive field. Buyer should have at least ten thousand. Property worth at least $75,000 Position of manager and good salary goes with sale. Owner interested in several other dailies. Address Von Goshorn, Tulsa Hotel, Tulsa Oklahoma.

Newspapers Wanted

Weekly or Daily Newspaper wanted, earning net upwards of $10,000 a year, preferably in an exclusive field. I have $15,000 in cash to invest in the enterprise. Please supply complete information in first letter. Address, A-744, Editor & Publisher.

(Continued on following page)

Rebuilt GOSS & HOE PRESS BARGAINS
ALL TYPES
SEND for LIST
THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO.
CHICAGO—NEW YORK—LONDON

Employment—Equipment—Services

CIRCULATION

Promotion

Circulation—When quick, additional circulation coverage becomes necessary, remember that our twenty years in this one line of endeavor is your proof against experimenting. Write or wire Pacific Coast Circulation Service, Bell Block, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Circulation Builders—Blair & Austin, 1504 Centre Ave., Reading, Penn. Originators of Salesmanship Club Campaigns.

Build Circulation—Try our "Opportunity Club" Plan. Sherman & Eckert, 353 Northampton Street, Easton, Penna.

Premiums

Sets of Dishes at $1.00 and Up. A wonderful premium. The Albright China Co. Palmyra, N. J.

EDITORIAL

Syndicate Features

Is There a Person or Syndicate having the desire and the following and ability to sell to newspapers distinctive first run fiction direct from an author who can give new and unusual co-operation. A-744, Editor & Publisher.

Panama Star and Herald and Red Wing Daily Eagle are the new customers this week. For samples of a live, alert, up-to-date service, write The Graphic Syndicate, 25 City Hall Place, New York.

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

Advertising Men for special edition work. Only men of highest integrity and proven ability need apply. References necessary. A-753, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Solicitor wanted for a daily newspaper near New York City. One able to write his own copy. State salary and experience. A-738, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager wanted. Must be experienced and efficient; one familiar with A. B. C. records to take charge of morning newspaper in Middle West. Very large field. Must have best of references. Address A-731, Editor & Publisher.

Copy Writer, experienced, wanted for advertising department of daily newspaper in Pennsylvania city of 45,000. We want a man who can write and layout copy for merchants now advertising in our paper; prepare layouts for our salesmen to sell to non-advertisers; who can give competent professional advice to advertisers, and plan and write advertising campaigns for them. Must be a quick worker. Write, giving details of your past experience, present position, references, and salary expected, etc. A-736, Editor & Publisher.

Foreman for small middle western daily and job shop. Newspaper growing rapidly and needs skilled foreman able to operate shop on efficient basis and help plan constant expansion. Foreman makes up and must be able to handle ads in metropolitan style. Excellent chance for advancement to man who is both worker and executive. Write fully as to experience, ideas, present position and reason for wishing to leave. Correspondence strictly confidential. A-734, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter—Vermont Daily seeks reporter with Vermont background, 25 to 35 years old. Should be capable of early growth to desk responsibilities, but genuinely devoted to reporting. Address A-705, Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

Advertising Salesman—Thirty-three years old. American. Good health. Fifteen years newspaper experience both on Hearst and Scripps papers, morning and evening. I know how to write and sell copy and am familiar with general merchandising problems. In position to help him. Now employed. Good reasons for wanting to change. Address E. W. Foster, care The Herald, El Paso, Texas.

Advertising Solicitor—Young man with 6 years' record on metropolitan dailies and also advertising agency experience, looks for real opportunity. Now employed. A-1 references. Available at once. A-698, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager—Over 20 years' experience, wants responsible, permanent position in growing city. Hustler and profit producer, fully experienced in copy writing, lay-out and selling of advertising, local, national and classified. Married, Mason, Presbyterian. Will go anywhere. Available Sept. 1. Best of references. Address Lewis A. Jones, P. O. Box 93, North Tonawanda, N. Y.

Advertising Manager, Classified Manager or Solicitor. Position desired by man with 9 years' experience, very capable; good record for results on large and small papers; age 27; married. References. Will go anywhere. R. S. Hay, 23 Tod Lane, Youngstown, Ohio.

EMPLOYMENT

Situations Wanted

Advertising Manager—Classified Manager—Solicitor, now employed. Handles all local and national accounts, in or out of town. Travel representative. Over 12 years experience metropolitan newspapers. Experienced on magazine accounts. Promotion, publicity, merchandising. One whom a busy executive may rely upon. Excellent credentials. A-707, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager—I know an advertising manager of one of the country's outstanding newspapers, who, for good personal reasons wants to make a change. He has had wide experience in Eastern and Western papers and has some remarkable records to his credit. This man is in his thirties, an athlete, has striking personal appearance, is a convincing talker and a builder of business. He is earning about $15,000 a year. Will consider a salary and bonus on increased business. If you are looking for a man who is well grounded in merchandising and knows how to build your local, national and classified advertising. Write me. A-755, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Man—12 years' experience, employed, wants to connect with a live-wire paper. Possesses unusual ability as a salesman, expert on copy writing and layouts; has proven himself a capable executive and a real producer. Prefers a city of 50,000 to 200,000. Could be available Sept. 1st. Reason for seeking change is that he wants to locate in smaller city; age 33, married. Address P. O. Box 3246, Station "C", Philadelphia, Pa.

Advertising Manager—Thoroughly experienced and successful newspaper executive, with enviable record for putting over hard propositions, will be available Sept. 1st. Fifteen years experience in cities up to a million population. Clean, capable organizer and producer. Has the ability, knowledge, energy and capacity for hard work that assures duplication of past records. Young, married. Want permanent connection. Write for details A-741, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising or Business Manager, with unquestionable record for maximum production, even under the most adverse conditions, contemplates making a change in the near future for purely personal reasons. Now employed in Southern city of 250,000. A thorough executive and big personal producer. No objection to second or third paper if real opportunity is offered. Age 33, married, excellent reputation. A-715, care Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager, producer, wishes new connection. Any location, knows advertising, best references. Wire A-752, Editor & Publisher.

Assistant Business Manager wishes to connect with newspaper. Eugene N. Holterbach, 179 Marcy Av., Brooklyn, N. Y. C.

Am Now Managing Editor—Best of four evening dailies in one county, city of 30,000. Seek still bigger job. Need not be in managerial capacity. Can combine your circulation, advertising, promotion and editorial departments to yield new profits. If you want new life blood in your organization get in touch with me. I like a fight. Am 30 years old. A-737, Editor & Publisher.

Cartoonist—Copy Writer—Newspaper and advertising experience—now with leading Philadelphia daily, desires position in Southern state. Also does lettering-retouching. A-717, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Writer, capable and experienced, now managing editor of paper in city of 15,000, seeks connection with reputable editorial organization. A-732, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager—Eleven years' experience on large nationally known newspaper. During this time a great number of different plans for building classified were put into operation. Only those which enabled us to increase our linage to record breaking volume were retained and these plans are now available to publisher who desires to place his classified advertising upon a real dividend paying basis. For interview address Box A-754, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation—South's most brilliant circulation manager is probably satisfied with his present connection, but the next best isn't. Age 35. Salary $6,500. Go anywhere. Confidential correspondence solicited. A-726, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager—Thoroughly competent in all branches of the work, with good record of increases at least possible cost. Due to consolidation open for immediate engagement. Now employed, E. E. Murray, care Lima Morning Star, Lima, Ohio.

Circulation Manager, thirteen years' experience on large central states papers; now Business Manager on weekly tabloid. Desire to re-enter daily field. My record shows my ability. A-751, Editor & Publisher.

Desk and Makeup Editor who can write good human interest features and report, wants change of position before September. Three years' experience, good references, college graduate. A-711, Editor & Publisher.

Desk, Makeup Man. 22. Experience: Associate editor newspaper having 155,000 circulation; news editor, tabloid; city editor, small city weekly. Good writer. A-748, Editor & Publisher.

EMPLOYMENT

Situations Wanted

Editorial Writer, capable and experienced, now managing editor of paper in city of 15,000, seeks connection with reputable editorial organization. A-732, Editor & Publisher.

Expert Rotary or Flat-Bed Pressman desires permanent position with well established newspaper near New York. Open shop. Best wages expected. Can supervise stereotyping department. Long experience and thoroughly reliable. Address A-724, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Cartoonist, well known to publishers as a creative producer, formerly staff cartoonist on two New York papers, seeks opening where his forceful individuality can win and hold circulation.

This man can be relied upon to do his own thinking; to interpret the panorama of events vividly, intelligently; to challenge national recognition of a paper's editorial policies.

At present earning $9,000 yearly but would make substantial sacrifice for a place with independent, alert organization. Address, Box A-746, Editor & Publisher.

General Manager, 20 years' experience in newspaper business in large and small cities, seeks new berth because of sale. Has had experience launching new paper, re-organizing old ones, buying entire equipment for large and small plants; has handled problems incident to fire, is hard worker, especially resourceful on advertising and has served for years as editor-in-chief. Record worth investigation. Address, A-743, Editor & Publisher.

Manager, age 36, married, with a successful record of several years' executive experience, seeks permanent position with an "honest to goodness" progressive organization in any live community. Applicant possesses a capacity to handle the combined routine of the Classified and Phone Departments; also Sales Staff in addition to writing good copy, and form letters that sell. Still employed but anxious to respond to best inducements offered. Address: A-749, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor—Holding important post on great city daily, wants position on paper in small city. Have built two. Prepare for the Fall battle by writing or wiring. A-725, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor or Editor, now employed on leading New York state daily. Seeks connection in city of 100,000 to 150,000 middlewest preferred. Fifteen years experience. Able to handle and develop men. Glad to arrange conference. A-739, Editor & Publisher.

Mr. Circulation Manager, are you in need of an assistant—one that will carry through your ideas, plans and orders to the last letter. I am an expert on Home Delivery; familiar with all circulation promotion. Six years experience, metropolitan, provincial. Evening paper with over 75,000 preferred. At liberty with due notice. Good reference. A-700, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaperman, thoroughly experienced in all branches, at present city editor of New England daily in city of 122,000, is looking for a change. Prefers Southern location. Can handle managing editor's job if called upon. Best of references. Age 31. Good education. A-742, Editor & Publisher.

Press Erector wants to get off road. Will consider permanent position as Pressroom Superintendent-Maintenance man. Available Sept. first. References. A-723, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter and Circulation Worker desires suburban territory. Guaranteed circulation increase. Thoroughly experienced. A-735, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter and Feature Writer—Holding important position on leading New York Daily writing sports and big assignments wants position in city of moderate size. A-750, Editor & Publisher.

Web Pressman wishes a position to take charge of pressroom. Twenty years' experience. Best of references as to ability, etc. A-747, Editor & Publisher.

Young Graduate of Missouri University School of Journalism, with some soliciting experience and training in copy writing, retail and direct advertising, campaigns, sketching and design, wants chance to learn the game from the ground up. A-733, Editor & Publisher.

MECHANICAL

Equipment for Sale

Complete Newspaper Plant for sale. Two tubular duplex presses with stereotype equipment; seven intertype machines; photographic and photo engraving departments located San Francisco; Wesel saw and planer and photo engraving plant, Miami, Florida. Whole or in part as is, where is. Address John W. Brodix, receiver. Vanderbilt Newspapers, Inc., 56 Twelfth street, San Francisco, Calif.

MECHANICAL

Equipment for Sale

Goss Straightline Press, 24-page, with complete stereotype equipment, all in fine condition. Current issues sent. Cheap for immediate sale. The Lima Morning Star, Lima, Ohio.

Hoe Mat Roller, 5 H. P. D. C. Motor, $100.00. Daily News, Washington, D. C.

Job Presses, Paper Cutters, Wire Stitchers, etc.—A complete line. Overhauled and guaranteed machines at bargain prices. Easy terms. Hoffmann Type & Engraving Co., 114 E. 13th St., N. Y. City.

One 12-page Goss Monitor No. 762 Perfecting Press for sale; also a complete stereotyping outfit with mat roller. A real bargain if taken at once. Globe-News Publishing Co., Amarillo, Texas.

Photo-Engraving plant for sale. Ideal for one or two men. Miles Machinery Co., 409 W. 26th St., New York.

Printers', Bookbinders' Outfitters—Modern cut-cost equipment, also rebuilt machinery. Conner Fendler Branch, A. T. F. Co., New York City.

Used Goss Matt Roller for wet mats only, for sale cheap. The Goss Printing Press Co., 1535 So. Paulina St., Chicago, Ill.

Equipment Wanted

All Kinds of Photo-Engraving, electrotyping and stereotyping equipment wanted. We pay cash. Miles Machinery Co., 409 W. 26th St., New York.

Newspaper Properties

Bought, Sold and Appraised.
All negotiations confidential.

PALMER, DEWITT & PALMER

350 Madison Ave., New York
Business Established in 1899.

CONSOLIDATION

The merging of newspaper interests is a subject that has received special study and investigation by this firm for nearly 17 years. It is a big subject and requires considerable technical knowledge, both as to valuation and operating methods. When properly organized, the results are never disappointing.

We have been factors in many important consolidations, sales and appraisals.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

WE WANT

Reporters
Copy readers
Advertising salesmen

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L B'LD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Visualize Your Opportunities
Advertise in
EDITOR & PUBLISHER

DOLLAR $$ $$ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

THIS fall put on a "Closed Car Week" in your city during which all automobile dealers exploit the closed cars they are selling, both new and old, by means of advertising in your paper.—Frank H. Williams.

How about the circulating library in your city? Usually it's owned by a book store or department store. Do they advertise it? Get them to use small space every day listing four or five books and giving a three or four line review of them in the advertisement. These can be very brief, and four or five books can be listed every day. You'll be surprised how well this advertiser will stay with you, because the results will pay him! On Friday double the space and lists of books to catch the over-Sunday readers!—Ralph Gibler, Huntington, Ind.

Six independent service stations in Monterey, Pacific Grove and Carmel, Cal., are advertising co-operatively in the Monterey Peninsula Daily Herald. Two-thirds of the space is devoted to selling the idea of buying gas and oil at the independent stations. Cards of the individual stations occupy the other third. —Fremont Kutnewsky, San Luis Obispo, Cal.

"Secure New Treasures from Your Old Jewel Box. These firms will modernize your old-fashioned jewelry." Under this heading there is opportunity for the live advertising solicitor to sell co-operative space to a number of the jewelers in your city, who are specializing in this type of new business.—C. M. L., Seattle, Wash.

A page of camp stories and hunting experiences, together with a list of places where hunting and fishing are the best and various data of interest to sportsmen, surrounded by advertisements of fishing and hunting camps, railroads, firearms and sporting goods stores, would make good reading for the sportsmen, as well as bring in a tidy bit of revenue to the paper publishing it. September is not too early to try such a page, and it could be run six or seven weeks, one day a week.—Clarence Moody, Quincy (Mass.) Patriot Ledger.

Approaching college days bring with them the opportunity for special advertising appeals that run the wide gamut of needs of the young collegiates. With the co-operation of the editorial department a story can be prepared telling who is going away to college and where, that will tie up well with the advertising appeals. This is also a good time to go after the school and college advertising. —F. D. H.

Many papers, especially the country town dailies, have one low contract rate, offtimes for a specified number of lines each day. There are certain types of business that get better results in a few large ads instead of a host of smaller ones. The Franklin (Ind.) Star has added much linage recently by the inauguration of a special sliding scale for the infrequent advertisers. For example, papers using the old form of contract, three inches a day for a period of three months and receiving a 20c rate; and charging 35 cents flat, can institute a scale as follows: less than 100 inches during a calendar month, 35c. One hundred to two hundred inches a month, 30c. Two hundred to three hundred, 27c. Three hundred or more, 23c. Space more than five hundred inches 20c. This system can be applied with cost variations to any paper. It enables every advertiser to name his own cost price; it encourages the use of more space which has a stimulative effect upon other firms; and it eliminates "kicks" about favoritism shown to other advertisers.—Davis O. Vandivier, Franklin, Ind.

If your paper is published in a farming or fruit growing district, a few stories from the farmers and fruit growers dealing with their methods of combating the produce thieves might serve triple interests. The stories would tickle the readers, for some humor would be bound to creep in and it would warn any of the readers who were inclined to be light-fingered. They would also benefit the farmers who would gain new ideas and suggestions on curbing the theft of produce. This idea has been used with great reader success in one or two Rhode Island small town papers.—James W. Rhodes, Providence, R. I.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

ONE of the Boston papers offers a daily and weekly prize to fishermen who send in pictures of themselves with a fish they consider the biggest caught. The catch must have been witnessed and said witness must sign the report of the catch. This idea brings in some very interesting pictures and stories that cost the paper but little and have a real interest.—C. E. Pellissier, Boston, Mass.

What constitutes a prolific source of feature news is the hunch being worked by the Rocky Mountain News, Denver. Pioneers who came to Colorado before 1880 are being asked to register their names and native state and country in a special book which will be turned over to the state historical society shortly as a matter of permanent record. Daily the newest names are published in the paper, thus giving many early day citizens an opportunity to exchange reminiscenses and renew old acquaintances. Another feature of this stunt, an important angle from the viewpoint of the editorial side, is the abundance of old time stories for star reporters. These may deal with tales of Indian uprisings, hardships encountered during overland ox-cart travels; yarns of the first gold discoveries, and so on.—M. S. M., Denver.

Instead of the prosaic "Continued on Page 2" of the majority of papers, or the curt order "Turn to Page 5" of others, the Superior Telegram injects courtesy into its columns with the phrase "Turn to Page 3, Please" at break-overs.—Wm. L. Doudna, Merrill, Wis.

For several years the Wabash (Ind.) Plain Dealer ran a "Treasure Island" box on Page 1, in which it said that the person named had money coming and that further information could be obtained by calling at the newspaper office. Thousands of dollars were distributed in this way without a cent of cost to the paper.

The money was held by the clerk of the circuit court for witnesses and persons involved in settlement of estates, but had never been called for. These names were obtained from the clerk and one or two published daily. The average amount was about $5, although several persons received more than $1,000 which they did not know was ready for them —E. W. H., Wabash, Ind.

The Seattle Post Intelligencer is sponsoring a series of interviews with leading men and women of Seattle to interest its readers. The text of the articles is: "Seattle's problems: What are they? How can they be solved? What is the city's greatest need? What is its destiny?" The series is called a "clearing house of ideas."—Mildred Frudenfeld.

The Dubuque (Iowa) Telegraph-Herald has a simple stunt to check up on storm damage to livestock. The rendering and soap plants of the city receive many calls to come for farm animals killed in storms. A fairly accurate check is secured of damage done through calls made at the plants.—L. J. Jellison, Dubuque, Ia.

How To Play GOLF
By JOHNNY FARRELL
Famous Teacher of That Game
24 LESSONS
Illustrated
For release daily
KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, Inc.
New York City

The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service
Supplying a complete and exclusive daily illustrated feature service to newspapers throughout the United States and in foreign countries.
4 page ready-print color comics.
Write for samples and rates
NEA SERVICE INC. 1200 W. 3RD. STREET, CLEVELAND, OHIO

CIRCULATION STIMULATION!
in MYRA
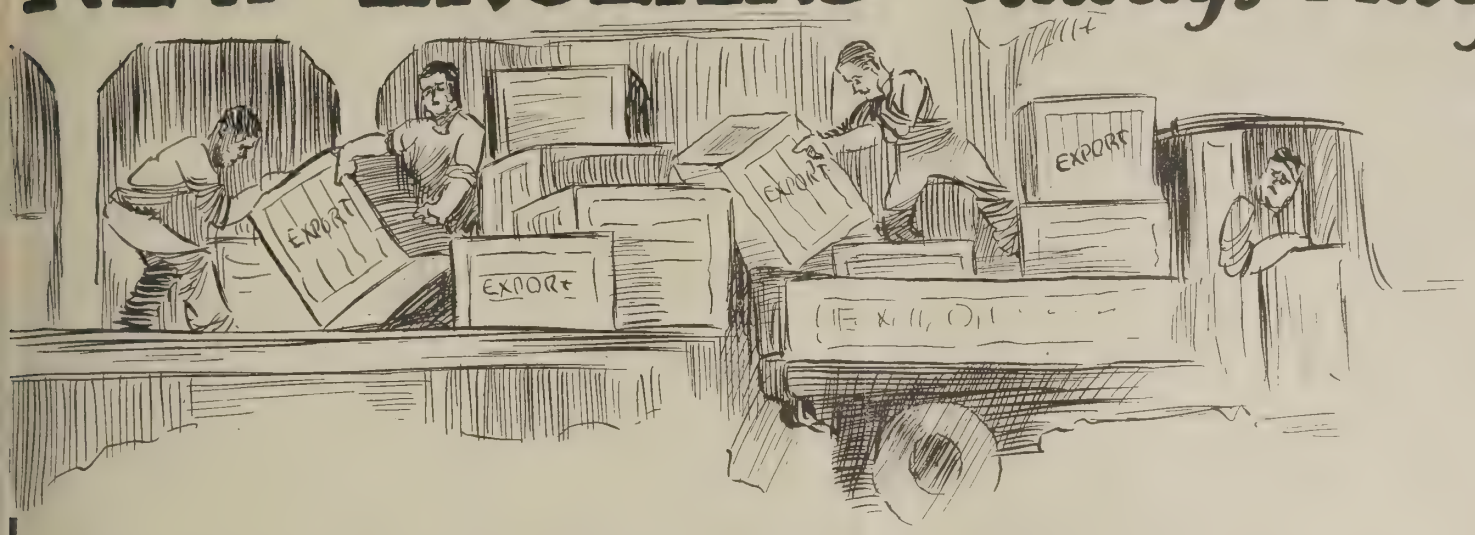
by
Mabel Greene
A fascinating serial written around a present-day girl
One-thousand-word daily instalments, daily synopsis, PHOTOGRAPHIC illustrations in mat or print form.
Released October 4
The McClure Newspaper Syndicate
373 Fourth Avenue, New York



Better Cross-Word Puzzles
Let us prove it by sending a week's service gratis.
Type and answers are matted
The International Syndicate
Baltimore, Md.

BY UNITED PRESS
AROUND THE WORLD AROUND THE CLOCK
UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS
World Building New York

The Big Fight!
Let BOB EDGREN
Cover It For You....
Starting September 2 he will write a daily wire service to last three weeks—right up to the date of the Dempsey-Tunney fight, Sept. 23—2 cartoons a week—with a special story and PICTURE OF THE FIGHT.
THE BELL SYNDICATE, INC.
JOHN N. WHEELER, PRES.
154 Nassau Street, N. Y. C.

Let Us Tell You
—about our plan of securing advertising from manufacturers, industrial plants, jobbers, wholesalers and other concerns in your city who are now spending their appropriations for other forms of advertising.
Let us explain how we can place this business in your paper regularly without selling expense to you. WRITE—
THOS. W. BRIGGS CO.
COLUMBIAN MUTUAL TOWER
MEMPHIS • • TENN.

NEW ENGLAND~always busy!

Exported $191,820,433 worth of Products in 1925 —a factor proving the value of this market!

In Exports alone, the hundreds of factories in New England supplied goods to the total value of $191,820,433.

This in addition to the millions of dollars' worth of products made for home consumption.

The whole United States, as well as every country in the world is a buyer of New England's goods. The demand will always exist, because this highly developed section produces a variety of quality products always needed by the buying public.

This fact alone clearly demonstrates the high potential value of New England as a market for the advertiser. In busy New England you are sure of steady work for the people which means steady buying power.

Reach this prosperous buying power thru the newspapers listed below.

MASSACHUSETTS—Population, 3,852,356

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Attleboro Sun .....(E)	5,845	.03	.03
Boston Globe .....(M&E)	287,590	.50	.50
Boston Globe .....(S)	332,282	.55	.55
*Boston Transcript ....(E)	38,807	.20	.20
Boston Post .....(M)	377,443	.60	.60
Boston Post .....(S)	349,596	.55	.55
Fall River Herald-News (E)	22,000	.06	.06
Fitchburg Sentinel ...(E)	11,828	.06	.045
*Haverhill Gazette ....(E)	15,729	.065	.05
††Lynn Item .....(E)	16,699	.065	.05
††Lowell Courier-Citizen and Evening Leader ..(M&E)	21,918	.07	.07
New Bedford Standard Mercury (M&E)	33,321	.10	.10
New Bedford Sunday Standard (S)	28,806	.10	.10
North Adams Transcript (E)	9,918	.0425	.035
††Pittsfield Eagle .....(E)	17,011	.05	.05
Salem News .....(E)	21,398	.09	.07
††Taunton Gazette ....(E)	9,279	.05	.04
Worcester Telegram-Gazette (M&E)	92,314	.28	.25
Worcester Sunday Telegram (S)	51,096	.21	.18

NEW HAMPSHIRE—Population, 443,683

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Concord Monitor-Patroit (E)	5,215	.0375	.025
††Keene Sentinel .....(E)	3,887	.036	.023
Manchester Union Leader (M&E)	29,368	.13	.10

RHODE ISLAND—Population, 604,397

††Newport Daily News..(E)	6,271	.0336	.0293
Pawtucket Times .....(E)	27,849	.07	.07
Providence Bulletin ..(E)	68,815	.18	(B).25
Providence Journal ..(M)	36,416	.11	(B).25
Providence Journal ..(S)	70,518	.18	.18
Providence News ....(E)	29,123	.08	.08
Providence Tribune....(E)	21,961	.10	.09
Westerly Sun .....(E&S)	4,950	.025	.025
Woonsocket Call ....(E)	14,508	.05	.05

VERMONT—Population, 352,428

Barre Times .....(E)	7,112	.03	.025
††Bennington Banner ....(E)	3,144	.0125	.0125
Brattleboro Reformer ..(E)	3,370	.03	.0175
Burlington Free Press (M)	13,071	.05	.05
Rutland Herald .....(M)	11,038	.04	.04
††St. Johnsbury Caledonian-Record (E)	4,055	.03	.0175

CONNECTICUT—Population, 1,380,631

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Bridgeport Post-Telegram (E&M)	42,743	.15	.15
Bridgeport Post .....(S)	21,162	.10	.10
Hartford Courant ....(M)	33,003	.08	.08
Hartford Courant .....(S)	56,274	.11	.11
Hartford Times .....(E)	53,121	.13	.13
Middletown Press ....(E)	8,359	.0325	.03
††New Haven Register (E&S)	46,218	.14	.13
New London Day.....(E)	12,054	.07	.045
††Norwich Bulletin ....(M)	12,724	.07	.05
Norwalk Hour .....(E)	6,107	.04	.04
††South Norwalk Sentinel (E)	5,043	.04	.025
Stamford Advocate ..(E)	10,329	.05	.04

A. B. C. Publisher's Statement, March 31, 1926.

††Government Statement, March 31, 1926.

(B) Combination rate Daily Journal and Eve. Bulletin.

National Advertisers

Use More Space in The Sun on Weekdays Than in Any Other New York Newspaper—Morning or Evening

National Advertising

New York Weekday Newspapers

	July, 1926. Agate Lines	First 7 Months of 1926. Agate Lines
THE SUN	264,800	2,354,758
Times	256,108	2,191,982
Herald-Tribune	256,002	2,008,932
Journal	195,834	1,783,778
Evening World	120,558	1,047,652
Morning World	166,638	1,008,616
Post	112,850	889,052
American	96,346	677,424
Telegram	63,876	544,766
SUN'S lead over 2nd newspaper	8,692	162,776

DURING July, 1926, during the first seven months of 1926 and during the year 1925 THE SUN led all New York weekday newspapers, morning as well as evening, in volume of National Advertising.

THE SUN is first in National Advertising because it is first in its ability to produce results for National Advertisers.

To National Advertisers who have new products to introduce and to those who seek greater sales for products already established in New York, THE SUN is the most powerful sales producer in the world's greatest market.

Increase Your Sales in New York Through the Advertising Columns of The Sun

The Sun

280 BROADWAY NEW YORK

BOSTON Old South Building · WASHINGTON, D. C. Munsey Building · CHICAGO 208 So. La Salle St. · LOS ANGELES Van Nuys Building · SAN FRANCISCO First National Bank Building

THIS ISSUE: PRESIDENT COOLIDGE TO OPEN NEW NEWSPAPER PLANT

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 — The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America — 1926

SUITE 1700 TIMES BUILDING, NEW YORK
42ND STREET AND BROADWAY.

MEMBER A.B.C. MEMBER A.B.P.

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; Newspaperdom, March, 1892; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Advertising, February 7, 1925; Revised entry, Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916, at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Vol. 59. No. 14 — NEW YORK, AUGUST 28, 1926 — By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A. $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign — 10c Per Copy

JOURNALISM LIBRARY
Not to be taken from this room

Chicago Tribune FEATURES

DAILY AND SUNDAY
Comic Strips

The Gumps by Sidney Smith
Gasoline Alley by Frank King
Harold Teen by Carl Ed
Winnie Winkle by Branner
Moon Mullins by Frank Willard
Smitty by Walter Berndt
Little Orphan Annie by Harold Gray
Texas Slim by Ferd Johnson
Jinglets by Al Rosen
The above strips in black and white or 8-page color comic section either tabloid or full size.

W. E. HILL
page of comics

DAILY AND SUNDAY
CARTOONS
John T. McCutcheon
—Carey Orr—Gaar Williams

BLUE RIBBON FICTION
Daily serial story—Weekly short story and serial.

TRUE LIFE STORIES WEEKLY
Woman's Special Page
Embroidery Page
Sport Page—Science Page

DAILY AND SUNDAY
Doris Blake Articles
Antoinette Donnelly Beauty Articles
Men's Fashions
Women's Fashions

SUNDAY
Paris Fashions

DAILY AND SUNDAY
Dr. W. A. Evans Health Articles

WEEKLY
Burns Mantle Theatrical Letter (New York)
Mencken Literary Review
Movie Letter
N. Y. Society Letter
"About Broadway" by Mark Hellinger

DAILY AND SUNDAY
Woods and Waters by Bob Becker
Walter Eckersall's Football Articles
In Motordom by J. L. Jenkins
Line o' Type by R. H. L.

DAILY
Wake of the News by Harvey T. Woodruff

SUNDAY
The Nickeldicks—Children's Story
The Sporting Goods by Westbrook Pegler

DAILY AND SUNDAY
What's Wrong Here?
Cookery Articles by Jane Eddington
Farm and Garden by Frank Ridgeway

SUNDAY
Practical and Fancy Needlework
Home Harmonious
Club Ethics by Maude Evans

DAILY
The Goops by Gelett Burgess
Sentence Sermons by Rev. Roy L. Smith

WEEKLY
Book Reviews by Fanny Butcher
Confessions of Authors
Justice Series

PACIFIC AND ATLANTIC PHOTOS
Organized by The Chicago Tribune and the New York Daily News 25 Park Place, New York

CHICAGO TRIBUNE PRESS SERVICE
Foreign—National—Local

These Comics mean millions of readers to The Chicago Tribune and The New York News!—Let them build circulation for you!

THE GUMPS by Sidney Smith
By far the most widely read comic strip in America.

GASOLINE ALLEY by Frank King
"The one comic strip followed by my wife and daughter."—A. E. Braun, Publisher, Pittsburgh Post.

MOON MULLINS by Frank Willard
The irrepressible roughneck. Rates high among guffaw-getters.

ORPHAN ANNIE by Harold Gray
The story of a wonderfully lovable little orphan girl.

SMITTY by Walter Berndt
The great American office boy in action!

WINNIE WINKLE by Branner
A beautiful stenographer whose fashionable clothes are as eagerly watched for as her adventures.

HAROLD TEEN by Carl Ed
Hilarious adventures of adolescent sheiks and shebas!

TEXAS SLIM by Ferd Johnson
Love and adventure in the great open spaces. (Sunday only.)

The CHICAGO TRIBUNE Newspapers SYNDICATE

TRIBUNE TOWER — CHICAGO

*BUY - - -

History Will Repeat Itself

TRENTON, N. J.

the historical center of the Revolutionary period will make advertising history for you. When your campaign includes this territory you are spending your money where it meets with less resistance for the 250,000 residents of this city and the shopping area are buyers of the advertised product.

A tremendous percentage of the $38,000,000 annual payroll of the 43,000 workers is spent in Trenton.

And the problem of coverage is completely solved—it's complete through

The Trenton Times
(Evening)

STATE GAZETTE (Morning)

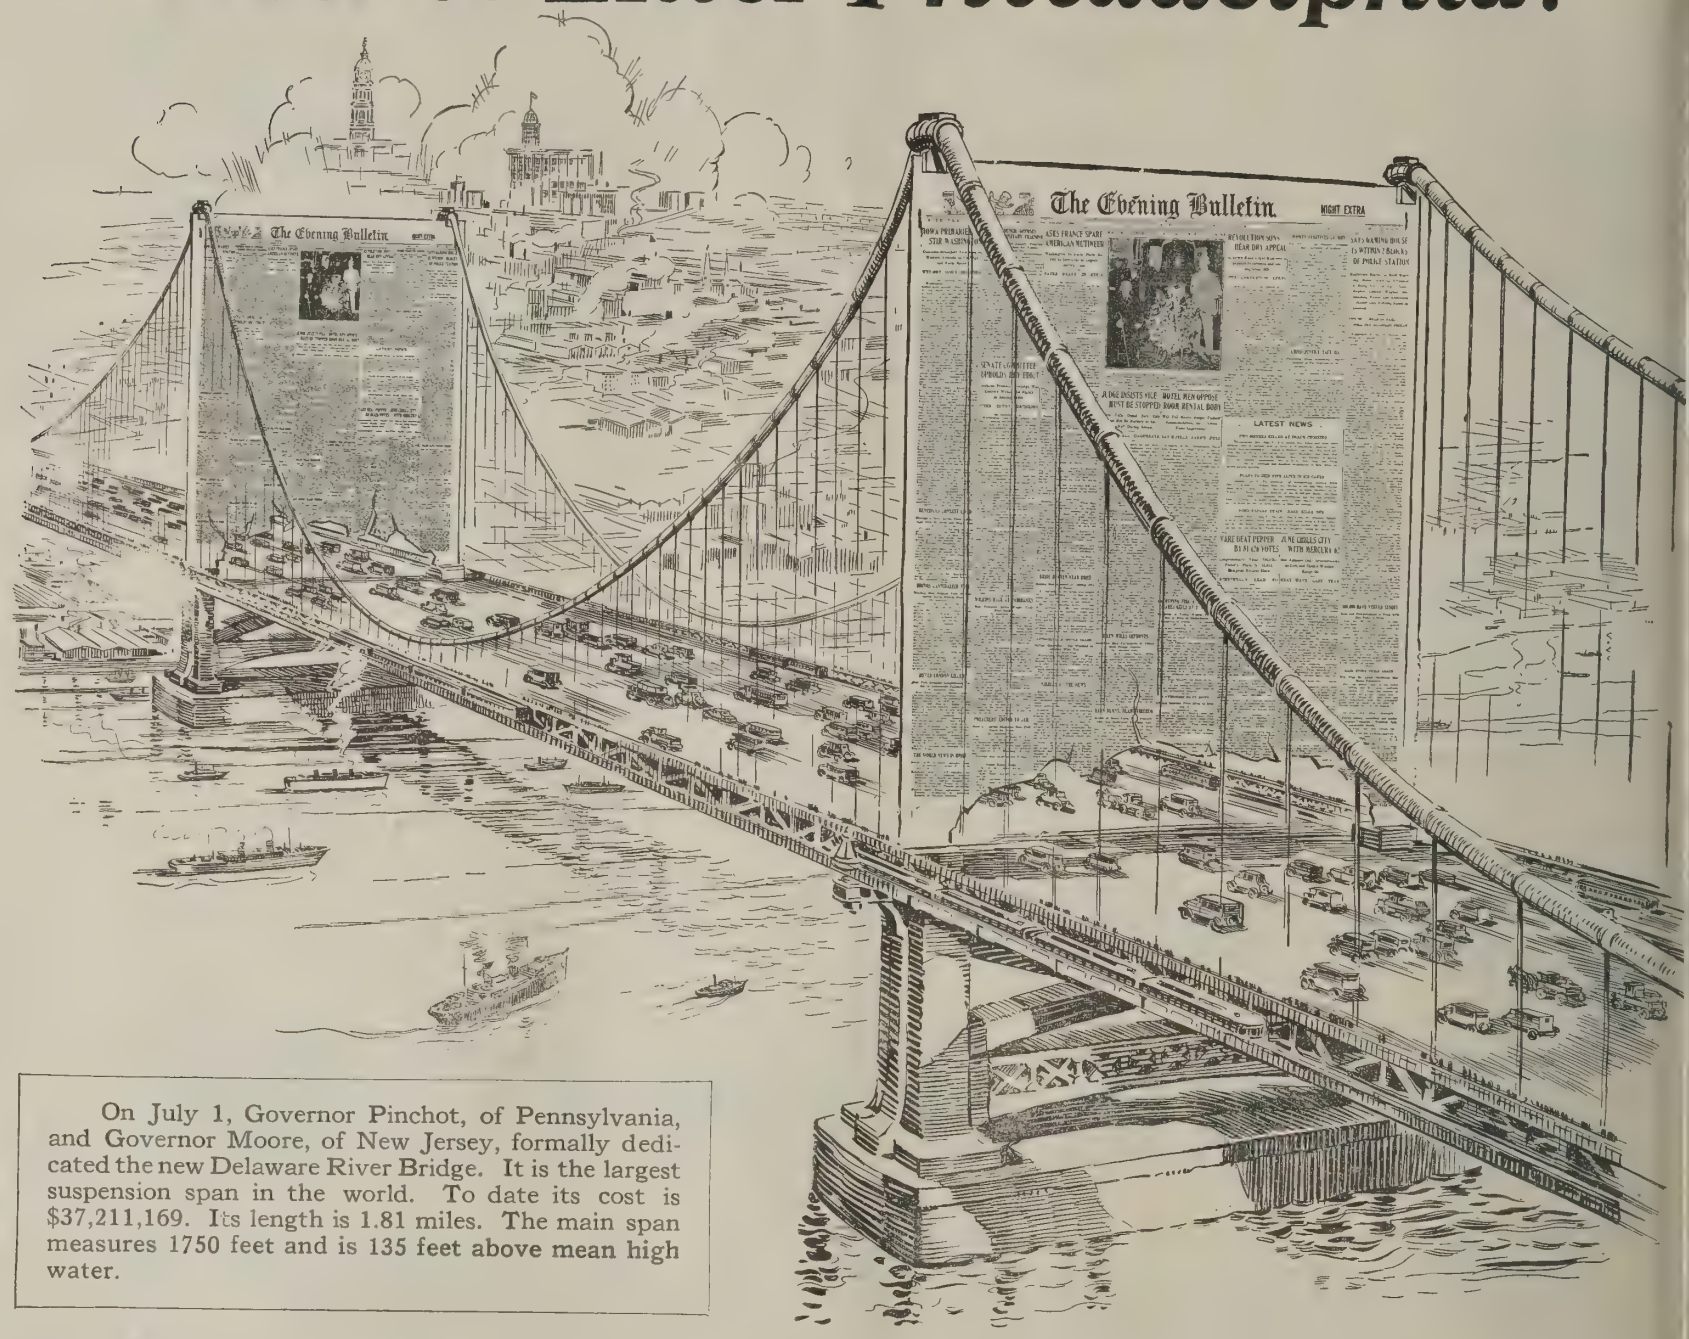
Combined Circulation
56,000

National Representatives

KELLY-SMITH COMPANY

Marbridge Building, New York City
Waterman Building, Boston, Mass.
Atlantic Building, Philadelphia, Pa.
Tribune Tower, Chicago, Ill.

Each month



MORE EDITORS

recognize DR. CADMAN'S Reader Appeal–

SINCE January, when the New York Herald Tribune Syndicate introduced Dr. Cadman's "Every Day Questions" to American editors, 66 newspapers have subscribed to this circulation building service. Many editors have pronounced Dr. Cadman's daily column the strongest feature ever printed in their newspapers. Others have attested its powerful subscription finding qualities. Dr. Cadman's answers compel the attention of the best people in every comunity.

NEW YORK
Herald Tribune Syndicate

How to Enter Philadelphia!

On July 1, Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, and Governor Moore, of New Jersey, formally dedicated the new Delaware River Bridge. It is the largest suspension span in the world. To date its cost is $37,211,169. Its length is 1.81 miles. The main span measures 1750 feet and is 135 feet above mean high water.

The Evening Bulletin is the Main Support o the "Bridge" between the Advertiser and the Philadelphia Consumer

The population of the Philadelphia retail area is about 3,300,000. U. S. Census figures give 4.5 persons to family in this—America's third largest market.

Divide the population by 4.5 and the result will show you how completely this one newspaper covers this field.

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

Dominate Philadelphia

Create maximum impression at one cost by concentrating in the newspaper "nearly everybody" reads—

The Evening Bulletin

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

533,169 copies a day

Average daily net paid circulation for the six months ending March 31, 1926. The circulation of The Bulletin is larger than that of any other Philadelphia newspaper and is the third largest in the United States.

(Copyright 1926—Bulletin Company)

New York—247 Park Avenue (Park-Lexington Bldg.)
Chicago—Verree & Conklin, Inc., 28 East Jackson Boulevard
Detroit—C. L. Weaver, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 321 Lafayette Boulevard
San Francisco—Thomas L. Emory, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 681 Market St.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication by The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor; Suite 1700 Times Building, 42nd St., at Broadway, New York. Telephone, Bryant 3052-3053-3054-3055-3056. Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations. Member Associated Business Papers, Inc.

. 59 NEW YORK, AUGUST 28, 1926 No. 14

Coolidge to Open New Newspaper Plant in "Wall Street's Back Yard"

New York Evening Post Will Make First Fighting Bid for Circulation with Price Reduced to Three Cents and New Mechanical Equipment on Monday, Aug. 30—Many Innovations

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

ESIDENT COOLIDGE will set in motion America's newest newspaper lishing plant, Aug. 30.

hen he presses an electric button at 'clock in the morning of that day a gal will be flashed from the summer te House at Paul Smiths, N. Y., the bright clean press room of the plant of the New York Evening , at West, Carlisle and Washington ets, "Wall street's backyard." ises will then start grinding and a minutes later first editions of New k's oldest daily newspaper will be the first time issued officially from ecently completed 17-story $3,000,000 e.

ayor Walker of New York will tele- ue a news story from City Hall for day's paper. Gov. Smith and other bles will contribute telegrams.

will be a new Evening Post that thus be ushered in on Monday. he price will be 3 cents daily; 5 cents airday.

new type dress will be in evidence. en columns will be increased to eight. sports editions will be furnished ers. A daily picture page will be d. There are even whispers of fudge es for racing returns.

resident Coolidge's Monday button- ning thus will ring the death knell of us H. K. Curtis' dream of a "five- daily, with quality circulation." Mr. tis has frequently expressed the be- e to EDITOR & PUBLISHER that there e at least 50,000 people in New York ing to invest a nickel for their daily s, gathered together and published them at unbelievably high cost.

ut Mr. Curtis and John C. Martin, -president and treasurer of the Cur- Martin Newspapers, Inc., now have hed the conclusion that the Evening t, in Mr. Martin's words, has been necessarily limited," by the two-cent a charge as well as by inadequate hanical facilities.

oth these hindrances have been wiped today and the paper that dates back 2 years of limited circulation is be- ning its first real fight to reach in the largely increased class of in- gent readers that has developed in w York's territory.

he change in type dress will be in way sensational. Other changes will lwise be restrained.

"We're going to continue publishing igh-class individual newspaper," Mr. Martin explained.

he new body type will be six and half point Ionic on a seven point , instead of the present minion on ine point base. To make the eight mns, the column width is to be cut n from 14 picas with an 11 point mn rule, to 12½ picas and a six t rule.

omplete new mechanical equipment n presses to linotypes aided by a evenated editorial policy will be the est factor in the bid for circulation.

The circulation department will put a dozen hired trucks into operation Monday. Twenty-five new routes will be opened in Manhattan; 15 additional routes in Brooklyn; and five in the Bronx.

Julian S. Mason, editor-in-chief, outlined the changed editorial policy for EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week as follows:

"Newspapers, as has often been said, possess individualities almost as vital as human beings. This is particularly true of a paper with the age and tradition of the New York Evening Post. In its 125 years of life the Post has come again and again to the close of an era or the end of an editorship. Then the vital strength of the paper has brought new hands to its helm, fresh blood to its veins, and it has gone on to further power and prosperity. It has been modernized to meet the habit of a new generation, but its soul, so to speak, has gone marching on without change. This is the ideal we have for the Post today. We do not intend to change it so that those who have known and loved it will not recognize it. We hope merely to add to its attractions and to edit it in consonance with the best journalistic technique of today.

"In the two years in which the paper has been published by Mr. Curtis, order has come into its affairs and the foundations have been solidly laid for a new advance. Its circulation has increased almost beyond the powers of its old plant at 20 Vesey street despite the limitation definitely laid upon it by the 5-cent price. Its business, mechanical, circulation, advertising, and editorial staffs have been energized and 'youthful-ized.' It is already under full headway for a new era of strength and success such as it has had often before in its history.

"In the matter of editorial policy, we shall keep the old open-minded tolerance of the Post. This was a precious quality which ran through the page even when former editors were writing on special issues with the most vitriolic pens. Accuracy, fairness, kindness, and moderation we hope to keep there. We are changing the make-up of the editorial page to recall its old form with some modern additions.

"In news treatment, we shall modernize by issuing sports extras and a daily picture page. Sports are a clean and high-class interest. They can and will be treated that way in the Post. Pictures are something that cannot be left to yellow journalism as an instrument of news expression. The picture page of the London Times, Sir Campbell Stuart told me this spring, has been firmly established amongst its readers. It serves a definite news purpose and we want our readers to have it.

"Another important physical advantage which we shall have in the new building will be the additional opportunity for accuracy and quick service for our financial tables. I am amazed at the almost negligible margin of error in the Post's stock and bond tables today. Rearrangement and expansion of our mechanical equipment will lessen it still further.

"News will be the backbone of the Post. Under David E. Smiley, as editor and Merritt Bond, as managing editor, during the last few years, the local news of the Post has been built up wonderfully. Ralph E. Renaud, the present managing editor, has carried this work further, increasing the staff and broadening and and quickening news treatment.

"We have added several features of general interest during the summer and shall announce others from time to time as we go along.

"In short, I should like EDITOR & PUBLISHER to make it clear to its readers that we are not going to lose the old Post; we are going to add newness to it. The paper's personality is a cherished possession of all departments, business, advertising, mechanical, and circulation, as well as editorial. All will serve it as devotedly as they have in the past."

An inspection of the new plant convinces one that the Curtis-Martin combination have successfully driven away the mechanical bugaboo that held their coat-tails at the old shop on Vesey street.

The new plant, fitted compactly into two working floors with a mezzanine and with the editorial and executive

(Continued on page 22)

New $3,000,000 plant of the New York Evening Post, overlooking the Hudson River from West Street, in "Wall Street's back-yard." The small structures in the foreground will be used for paper storage.

DICKEY CITES REED BID FOR K. C. STAR IN NEW MOVE TO SET ASIDE SALE

Demurrer Filed to Amended Petition by Star and Nelson Estate Trustees—Parsons Publisher's Offer Detailed

AN amended petition in his suit to have the sale of the Kansas City Star set aside was filed by Walter S. Dickey, publisher of the Kansas City Journal-Post, Aug. 21.

The amended petition asserts that both Mr. Dickey's bid and that of Clyde M. Reed, publisher of the Parsons (Kan.) Daily Sun and associates "were at a better price and on better terms than the bid or offer" of Irwin R. Kirkwood and associates.

Besides detailing the Reed bid, the new petition substitutes for the original plea that Mr. Dickey be declared the successful bidder, or that a new sale be ordered, the following prayer:

"Wherefore, by reason of the foregoing, the plaintiff prays that the award by said university trustees to defendants, Kirkwood and associates, be set aside and decreed to be null and void . . . . . and that this court consider all of the bids or offers to purchase said newspaper properties so submitted to said university trustees and determine whether or not any bid submitted should be accepted, and that if the court shall find that any bid or offer submitted should be accepted, that the court direct the trustees to accept the same, or, if the court should find that it is to the best interest of said trust estate that none of the bids or offers submitted should be accepted, that the court order and direct a new sale of said newspaper properties under such terms and conditions as to the court in equity and good conscience may seem meet and proper and as may be prescribed by court."

A demurrer to the amended petition was filed Tuesday of this week by Watson Gage and Cyrus Crane, attorneys for the Star and the university trustees. This is the same procedure followed by the Star's attorneys in the original suit and the same objections are raised.

The Star group alleges Mr. Dickey is not the proper person to instigate such an action, which they contend should have been started by the attorney general, and that his petition does not state sufficient cause of action.

Attorneys representing Mr. Dickey have until Aug. 30 to file briefs with Judge O. A. Lucas of the circuit court at Kansas City in answer to the motion to dismiss and the demurrer to the Dickey petition filed by attorneys for Mr. Kirkwood and associates and the trustees of the William R. Nelson trust. Briefs in support of the motion to dismiss the suit and demurrer to the petition were filed Aug. 20, by attorneys for the Star and the trustees. Judge Lucas gave 20 days for the filing of briefs when arguments of the demurrer were closed Aug. 11. It is not known when the court will render his decision.

The Clyde M. Reed bid is discussed in the amended petition as follows:

"Plaintiff further states that Clyde M. Reed and Harry E. Lunsford submitted an offer and bid for said newspaper properties to said trustees in which said Reed and Lunsford proposed to pay for said newspaper properties, including the real estate on which the Star building is located (but not the vacant real estate immediately south of the Star building) the sum of $13,000,000 to be paid, $8,000,000 in cash at the time of delivery of title to the purchasers, $1,000,000 in ten years from date at interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum secured by mortgage on the real estate and building; $2,000,000 at the rate of $200,000 a year for the first ten years after purchase, payable out of earnings, subject to sinking fund requirements but before payment of any dividends to the purchasers, and $2,000,000 at the rate of $100,000 a year beginning the eleventh year after acquisition by the purchasers, payable out of the earnings, subject only to fixed charges and dividends on 100,000 shares of common stock at $5 a share per annum.

"Said bid and offer was based on current assets as of Feb. 27, 1926, furnished by the trustees, and provided for adjustment for increase or decrease on current assets, prepaid expenses, investment, accrued expenses and route deposits as of date of acquisition, and also bound the purchasers to assume all editorial and commercial contracts and the liability for prepaid subscriptions.

Clyde M. Reed

"Plaintiff further states that the university trustees have announced publicly that the bid or offer made by Kirkwood and associates includes all accounts receivable of every kind and character and includes all chosen in action belonging to said trustees as a part of said newspaper property, and these were substantially the same properties included in the bid or offer made by Clyde M. Reed and Harry E. Lunsford."

The amended petition contains the following additional charges not in the original:

"Plaintiff further states that a number of other bids or offers to purchase said newspaper properties were submitted to said university trustees, the exact amount and terms of which are unknown to plaintiff, and the university trustees have refused to make known the price and terms stated in any of the bids or offers submitted to them for the purchase of said newspaper properties.

"But said university trustees in furtherance of a conspiracy entered into by them with said Kirkwood and associates to sell said newspaper properties only to said Kirkwood and associates and in collusion with said Kirkwood and associates, their employes and the agents and representatives of said trust estate in charge of said newspaper properties, arbitrarily, unreasonably, capriciously and in bad faith refused to consider the bids or offers of this plaintiff and the bid and offer of said Clyde M. Reed and Harry E. Lunsford, both of which were at a better price and on better terms than the bid or offer of said Kirkwood and associates, and refused to determine which bid or offer submitted to them was at the best price and on the best terms obtainable, and accepted the secret bid of said Kirkwood and associates as a personal favor to them

"By and on account of this arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable conduct of the university trustees the public as beneficiaries under said will of William R. Nelson, deceased, were deprived of the right given to them under and by virtue of said will to have said newspaper properties sold at the best price and on the best terms obtainable.

"Plaintiff further states that said Kirkwood and associates while acting in such fiduciary capacity and sustaining the confidential relationship to said properties and said trust estate as managers and assistants to the university trustees in the control of said trust estate, took advantage of their position as such managers and assistants and acquired confidential information with respect to said newspaper properties and concealed such confidential information from this plaintiff and other prospective bidders.

"By reason of the fact that said Kirkwood and associates were employed by the trustees and the trust estate owning said newspaper properties and sustained such fiduciary capacity and such confidential relationship to said properties and said trust estate and by reason of the fact that said Kirkwood and associates were in actual possession and charge of said newspaper properties at the time they were offered for sale by the university trustees, said Kirkwood and associates were precluded from purchasing said newspaper properties from the university trustees without the consent and approval of the beneficiaries or cestuis que trust (which under the will of said William R. Nelson was and is the general public), but no such consent or approval was or could have been obtained."

TYPOS GET NEW OFFER FROM N. Y. PUBLISHERS

Second Proposal Allows for $5 a Week Increase Spread Over Three Years —Bogus Not Mentioned—Union Favors Acceptance

A second proposal for a new contract with Typographical Union No. 6 has been made by the Publishers Association of New York City and will be voted on by the union members Aug. 29. The first proposal, defeated Aug. 15, asked for elimination of bogus setting.

No mention of bogus setting is made in the second proposal, which provides for an increase of $5 a week spread over the three years of the contract. It has been given a 100 per cent recommendation by the scale committee.

Increase in pay under the second proposition offered by the publishers calls for a $3 a week advance effective immediately, with $1 a week advance next year and the year after.

James J. Lynch, international president of the Typographical Union, came to New York from Indianapolis to negotiate with the publishers on the new scale. The old contract expired last July 1. Leon H. Rouse is president of the local union.

The old scale provided wages of $60 day, $63 night, for a 45-hour work week and $63 for a 42-hour lobster shift.

INJUNCTION GRANTED

Modified Writ Issued Against Striking Charleston, W. Va., Printers

A modified injunction against striking members of the Typographical Union has been granted by Judge Morgan Owen at Charleston, W. Va., to two Charleston newspapers, the Daily Mail and the Gazette.

Judge Owens granted that part of the injunction dealing with intimidation in picketing. He refused to enjoin interference with newsboys and advertisers, holding that no evidence had been presented to show any such acts.

The union men went on strike when they failed to reach a new agreement with the papers. The publishers then announced operations on an open shop basis.

NEW MAILER'S CONTRACT

The Publishers' Association of New York City has signed a new three-year contract with Mailers' Union Number Six, providing for $1 a week increase in pay each year. It became effective Aug. 23.

DAILIES SEEK MO POWER IN A. B. C.

Circular Letter Being Received Publishers from New York City Association—Proxies for Voters Asked

Newspaper members of the A Bureau of Circulations are recei letters from the Publishers Associa of New York City, notifying them a campaign with the following aim

1. Reduction of A. B. C. newsp dues.
2. Larger representation of newsp members on the directorate.
3. Contest right of A. B. C. direc to take action affecting newsp members without first submitting proposed action to newspaper mem for their approval.

With the letter, copies of wh reached EDITOR & PUBLISHER this w were enclosed proxy forms appoin John F. Bresnahan, New York Wo Edwin G. Martin, Brooklyn Eagle, Fred A. Walker, New York Sun Telegram, to vote on these questions the annual A. B. C. convention in C cago, Oct. 21 and 22.

Fullest possible representation of ne paper members at the convention is ur in the letter, signed by the three N York members named on the proxie

The letter tells of two resoluti recently adopted by the New York sociations as follows:

"RESOLVED: that the members of Audit Bureau of Circulations also m bers of this association decline indiv ually to take advantage of this ext ordinary opportunity offered to them the Audit Bureau of Circulations, (ferring to offer to publish advertis rates), and

"RESOLVED: that in view of the la surplus accumulated by the Audit Bur of Circulations, that proper steps be ta to secure a reduction of dues paid newspapers at the next general meet of the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

LABOR COMMITTEE NAMED

H. C. Adler of Chattanooga He Southern Publishers Group

H. C. Adler, publisher of the Ch tanooga (Tenn.) Times was named cha man of the Labor Committee of Southern Newspaper Publishers As ciation which was announced this w by John A. Park, publisher of Raleigh (N. C.) Times, president.

Those on the committee are:

Alabama—F. H. Miller, Montgom Journal.

Arkansas—K. A. Engel, Little Ro Democrat.

Florida—R. A. Reeder, Miami Ne

Georgia—J. A. Davis, Albany Her

Kentucky—Emanuel Levi, Louisv Courier-Journal and Times.

Louisiana—Hunter Jarreau, Alexa dria Town Talk.

Mississippi—Birney Imes, Columb Commercial Dispatch.

North Carolina—W. C. Dowd, J Charlotte News.

Oklahoma—C. W. Buggy, Oklaho City Oklahoman.

Tennessee—Chairman Adler.

Texas—G. J. Palmer, Houston Chro icle.

Virginia—Major Allen Potts, Ric mond News-Leader.

West Virginia—Robert L. Smit Charleston Gazette.

McSWEEN STRICKEN

Angus McSween, for many yea Washington correspondent for the Phil delphia North American before it w merged with the Philadelphia Publ Ledger, and noted as a confidante of t late President Theodore Roosevelt, w stricken with apoplexy at his residenc Silver Spring, a suburb of Washingto Thursday. The attending physicians ex pressed doubt, in view of McSween's a vanced years, of his recovery.

PROPERTY IN NEWS HEADS GENEVA PROGRAM

Press Association Chiefs Will Address League on Public Character of Official News—Urge Curb on Radio and Abolition of Peace-Time Censorship

(By Cable to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

GENEVA, Aug. 21.—The press association conference held here under the auspices of the League of Nations today concluded a successful session by electing a liaison committee to assure continued contact with the League.

ELMER ROBERTS

Roy W. Howard, representing the United Press at the conference, was elected chairman of the committee, and Dr. Rudolf Ludi, director of the Swiss Telegraph Agency, was elected vice-president and general secretary. Other members are Andre Glarner, Paris manager of the Exchange Telegraph Company, and M. A. Meynot, director of the Agence Havas. There are two representatives of independent agencies and two of official agencies on the committee.

The commission today voted to include in the minutes of the meeting a telegram from General Harbord, President of the Radio Corporation of America, renewing the offer to inaugurate a ten cent press rate to Japan, which had been read before the commission by Howard.

General Harbord's message declared that if the Japanese government cannot approve a ten cent rate the Radio Corporation would be glad to entertain a counter proposal.

A resolution adopted by the commission requested governments to abolish censorship in peace time, while another resolution urged an international agreement for unification of legislation in property rights in news, emphasizing, however, the non-exclusive character of official news.

A resolution requesting all governments to transmit dispatches of all agencies and newspapers without special priority for anyone was unanimously adopted.

The commission adopted a resolution dealing with wireless transmission of news, asking the League to support efforts to induce governments to pass legislation and regulations relative to receiving stations, especially urging the adoption of the following clause:

"Licenses only give the right to receive dispatches from public broadcasting stations for concerts, lectures, weather, news exchange, stock news, time of day and general news, as well as dispatches from a trial station, but it is forbidden to pick up wireless telegrams or messages of any kind of press or economic news which are received by subscribers; if such communications are received by mistake they must neither be reproduced in writing or communication to a third person, nor used for commercial purposes. Use for commercial purposes of news issued by a public broadcasting station is forbidden.

"In communications with a trial station it is forbidden to make use of cables which have not been officially assigned. This stipulation should be reinforced by a penalty modeled on that in force in central European states which provides that cases above stipulated should be punished by imprisonment from eight days to three months for picking up news, and fourteen days to six months for publication of news thus picked up or used to the detriment of the person for which it was intended."

The commission voted to cable Senator Elidora Yanez of Chile, voicing appreciation for his initiative in asking the assembly to convoke the press conference.

In presenting the resolution endorsing the property rights in news, Elmer Roberts, chief correspondent in Paris and personal representative of Kent Cooper, general manager of the Associated Press, spoke in feeling terms of the great services of Melville E. Stone, former general manager and now counseller of the Associated Press who led the legal fight in the United States some years ago to establish, through a series of legal actions in the Federal courts, the principle of the property right in news in America. Roy W. Howard, representing the United Press, followed Mr. Roberts with a strong endorsement of the work of Mr. Stone in securing legal recognition of the principle of a property right in news.

"In the United States," he said, "both the United Press and Associated Press recognize this principle and abide by it because in the United States all news is free and not subject to any governmental control or censorship. A news agency with a keen respect for its obligations to its clientele in delivering a truthful picture of the world's events must insist that any proposition relative to the general acceptance of the principle of a property right in news carries with it an agreement that all news, particularly governmental or official news, be free and released to all agencies and newspapers on terms of perfect equality."

H. Oikawa, delegate representing Nippon Dempo Tshushin Sha of Japan, stated that his agency supported the contention that all official news must be relieved of governmental control or direction and that it be released to all agencies on a parity. Following the discussion, a committee composed of Mr. Ludi of the Swiss Agency and Mr. Howard was appointed to prepare the text of the resolution covering the theory of the property right in news to meet the demand for the recognition of the unexclusive and public character of all official news.

Trans Pacific press tolls were prominently discussed at the third session of the conference following an address by H. Oikawa of Nippon Dempo Tshushin Sha, who requested the conference to take steps to bring the high Pacific press rates to the attention of the world.

On this occasion the following cablegram from Gen J. G. Harbord of the Radio Corporation was read to the conference and later ordered included in the minutes:

"It has been brought to my attention that a committee, under the auspices of the League of Nations, is at present at Geneva discussing, in the interest of better relations between the nations, the subject of lower press rates between the several countries.

"While I am not familiar with what is being done there, I wish to recall to your mind that for nearly a year we have been endeavoring to get the Japanese Government to meet our proposition on a better press rate across the Pacific. The press rate is, at present, 27 cents a word. Our proposition, as you will recall, was that, with a forty-eight hour delivery on press matter between Japan and the United States, we would be glad to accord you a 10 cents rate, on the understanding that no code or other devices for shortening plain language be used. Thus far, it has not been accepted by the Japanese Government, although it is still open as far as we are concerned.

"I would be glad to state to the Japanese representative there that this offer is still open, and if the Japanese have a counter offer looking to a better rate, they can depend upon us to give it careful consideration."

Associations represented at the conference and their delegates included: Agencia Americana, Brazil, Muscat d'Orsay, director; Associated Press, U.S.A., Elmer Roberts, Paris representative; Agence Avala, Jugoslavia, A. Housset, director; Central News, Great Britain, R. F. Church, chief news editor; Continental Telegraphen Compagnie (Wolff), Germany, Dr. H. Mantler, director; Nippon Dempo Tshushinsha, Japan, Shigenobu Oikawa, representative; Exchange Telegraph Company, Great Britain, Andre Glarner, Paris representative; Agence Havas, France, M. Meynot, manager; Agence Radio, France, M. Gabion, director general; Reuters, Great Britain, S. Carey Clements, manager; Nippon Shimbun Rengosha, Japan, Motosada Zumoto, representative; Agence Stefani, Italy, Dr. Gustavo Nesti, director general; Agence Telegraphique Suisse, Switzerland, Dr. Rudolf Ludi, director; Telegraphen Union, Germany, Heinrich Gesell, director; Tidningarnas Telegrambyra, Sweden, M. Hoegberg, foreign director; United Press Associations, U.S.A., Roy W. Howard, chairman of the board of directors.

The following editorial appeared in La Prensa, Buenos Aires, Aug. 20:

"Yesterday there was initiated at Geneva a conference of representatives of the world's informative agencies convoked by the League of Nations for the purpose of bettering the universal facilities for the interchange of news, which is one of the surest media for promoting accord between people and impeding the international diffusion of concepts prejudicial to harmony and peace among them. Sixteen great news enterprises are represented at Geneva, six official, four officially affiliated and six independent, and from them it is hoped will arise a harmonious program orienting beneficially such a fundamentally important activity as the interchange of news in the civilized world.

"The presence in the conference of nearly all the big official agencies has given a motive for enunciating in the preliminary conversations the tendency to accentuate more each day the officialization of news activities. It is certain that among the questions included in the program, that of the highest importance is that one referring to absolute equality among news enterprises, whether official or independent, without preferences or advantages from the Governments for the transmission of official news and without granting priority or other advantages. It is of the greatest importance that this matter has the opportunity of being debated, as it imposes the opportunity to form clear orientations of this important matter.

"Eagerness to stress the principle that journalism constitutes an efficient instrument for human cordiality, averting the diffusion of information prejudicial to peace between peoples, must not cause to be lost sight of the characteristic essential of news, which is liberty in its source. All considerations of any other character tending to restrict this quality will be inferior in importance compared with the necessity not to impede any form of journalistic activity. Official government control over news to be sent abroad is not justified by any public exigency whatever. Universal public opinion itself will exercise the function of control over any abuses or falsities. To subordinate liberty of news to official criteria would imply a rude blow to journalistic functions, one of whose most powerful and faithful instruments is an independent, serious news agency.

"Furthermore, the great enterprises which are deliberating at Geneva must not lose sight of the fact that their missions are not concluded when they commence upon the question of the responsibility of independent newspapers which sustain integral finality among the societies in which they live, and which cannot accept restriction of their field of action due to alien accords that subordinate or limit them to cold mechanic and official activity. In only the most imperfect and limited form may journalism contribute to the orientation of public opinion if it does not possess sufficient liberty to inform upon its own responsibility. Its judgment would lack a base and vital spontaneity, and there would disappear government's most efficient control, which is public opinion.

"Therefore, the Geneva conference has among its purposes once more to consecrate a high ideal, viz., liberty of the news."

EATON JOINS INQUIRER

Will Edit Philadelphia Paper's Daily and Sunday Pictures

Frank A. Eaton, who recently resigned as vice-president of Underwood & Underwood, news photographers, New York, has been appointed picture editor of the Philadelphia Inquirer. He will edit the Inquirer's Sunday rotogravure section, daily picture page, Sunday sports picture page.

FRANK A. EATON

Mr. Eaton, whose first work was assistant advertising manager of Lit Brothers, Philadelphia department store, in 1908 was subsequently employed as advertising copy writer on the Philadelphia North American, Bulletin and Record. Then a year with the Herbert M. Morris Advertising Agency of Philadelphia, after which he joined the Allen Advertising Agency of New York, being one of the members of that organization who established the present advertising agency of Hanff-Metzger, Inc. In 1916, he joined the New York Tribune as manager of the advertising service department, a few months later being appointed editor of the Sunday gravure section. In 1918, Mr. Eaton took a six months' leave of absence from the Tribune to take charge of the circulation department of the Nation's Business in Washington. When the Tribune moved uptown and inaugurated a daily picture page in the spring of 1923, Mr. Eaton took over the daily page editorship in addition to the Sunday roto pages.

In July, 1925, Mr. Eaton resigned from the Herald Tribune to become manager of the news picture division of Underwood & Underwood, later being elected a vice-president of that organization.

The late Seymour Eaton, Mr. Eaton's father, will be remembered as the founder of the Booklover's and Tabard Inn Libraries, as author of the popular Teddy Bear books and as a specialist in advertising copy.

REPRINT A. N. A. E. STANDARDS

A copy of the standards of merchandising practice for newspapers handsomely printed and suitable for framing has been sent to members by the headquarters office of the Association of Newspaper Advertising Executives. The standards were adopted at the association's convention in Philadelphia.

SPRINGFIELD UNION BUYS PRESS

Sherman H. Bowles, general manager of the Springfield (Mass.) Union, announced Thursday that the newspaper has purchased a Hoe octuple press which has been operated for three years in the plant of the New York Evening Post.

WISCONSIN "SLEEPER" LAW THREATENS EDITORS AND POLITICAL CANDIDATES

Corrupt Practices Act of 1911, Which Compels Filing of Candidate's Newspaper Stock Ownership, Ignored Until Milwaukee Journal Unearthed It

SENATOR ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE, JR., as editor of La Follette's Magazine; William T. Evjue, editor of the Madison (Wis.) Capital-Times, and possibly other newspaper publishers and editors of Wisconsin face fines and jail sentences for alleged violation of a clause of the corrupt practices act of Wisconsin which has lain dormant for fifteen years.

WILLIAM T. EVJUE

In addition, many of the principal candidates for state and national offices from Wisconsin are threatened by disqualification, if elected, for the same transgression.

A bombshell was thrown into the political campaign in Wisconsin last Saturday when the Milwaukee Journal unearthed the provision of the corrupt practices act of 1911 governing newspapers and their relationships to candidates and showed that several of the chief aspirants for office have failed to file with the county clerks a statement of their interest in the newspapers participating in the campaign, as required by the corrupt practices act.

The same section of the act holds the editor of a newspaper responsible in case the candidate owning stock in his newspaper fails to file the statement, provided the editor has permitted the publication of any news that might influence the result in the primary or election.

The penalty for editors who disregard this law is fine and imprisonment, ranging from $25 and 30 days in the county jail to $1,000 and three years in the state's prison.

The situation holds a particular threat to the Capital Times, since a good share of the principal candidates own stock in that paper. Among these are: Herman L. Ekern, state attorney general, candidate for governor; Gov. John J. Blaine, candidate for United States Senator; Solomon Levitan, state treasurer, and candidate for re-election; Fred R. Zimmerman, secretary of state, and also candidate for governor, and others.

All of these men are running for office from either one or the other of two rival Progressive Republican camps. None has filed the requisite statements of newspaper stock ownership with the Dane county clerk. Nevertheless the Capital Times, La Follette's Magazine, and other newspapers that may be involved, have been publishing columns upon columns of political news for the candidates.

Legal proceedings from members of the rival political camps to enforce this provision of the corrupt practices act are expected.

The clause affecting candidates and state officials who are stockholders in newspapers, and the editors, is as follows:

"Every person occupying any office or position under the constitution or laws of the state, or under any ordinance of any town or municipality thereof, or under the constitution or laws of the United States, the annual income of which shall exceed $300, and every candidate, every member of any personal campaign or party committee, who shall either in his own name or in the name of any other person, own any financial interest in any newspaper or periodical circulating in part or in whole in Wisconsin shall, before such newspaper or periodical shall print any matter otherwise than is provided in subsection 1 hereof (this subsection refers to paid advertising), which is intended, or tends to influence, directly or indirectly, any voting at any election or primary in the state, file in the office of the county clerk of the county in which he resides a verified declaration stating definitely the newspaper or periodical in which or over which he has such financial interest or control, and the exact nature and extent of such interest or control.

"The editor, manager, or other person controlling the publication of any such newspaper or article, who shall print or cause to be printed any such matter contrary to the provisions of this chapter, prior to the filing of such verified declaration from every person required by this subsection to file such declaration, shall be deemed guilty of a violation thereof."

The act holds still a deeper pitfall for Sen. La Follette. He has been a candidate for office and is also editor of La Follette's magazine. Mr. La Follette never did file a statement of ownership of the magazine with the county clerk. Therefore he is faced by the dual danger of disqualification from office and punishment as editor.

The extent to which political candidates and present state government office-holders hold stock in other newspapers of Wisconsin has not yet been investigated.

LAW DEGREES HELD UP

Wisconsin Bar Investigates Reporter's Charge of Exam Cribbing

A story published in the Madison (Wis.) Capital Times nearly a month ago, exposing a concerted scheme to cheat practiced by a portion of the 177 students who took the Wisconsin state bar examinations at the time, has been instrumental in the ordering of an official investigation into the alleged cribbing by the Supreme Court of Wisconsin.

The story was written by Ruben Levin, reporter for the Capital Times, after a first hand investigation. The examinations were held in the assembly chamber of the state capitol at Madison. Stationed in a strategic position in the gallery of the assembly, the reporter spent an afternoon observing what he described as "wholesale cheating" on the part of a large number of the students. His discoveries, together with information extracted from several young men who were taking the examinations, served as the basis for an expose of a system of signalling, prearranged, used by some of the students to relay answers.

The bar examiners of Wisconsin petitioned the supreme court to order an inquiry into the charges. The inquiry has now been in progress for two weeks, with nearly 60 participants in the examination together with Mr. Levin and the editor of the Capital Times, called to present their testimony and submit to questioning by two specially appointed investigators.

In the meanwhile, certificates to practice law in Wisconsin are being withheld from all of the 177 young men and women.

TELEGRAM BUILDING SOLD

The Elmira (N. Y.) Sunday Telegram building has been sold to the G. W. Perry Company, general agents for the Maryland Casualty Company. The building was built about 13 years ago by the late Harry S. Brooks, publisher of the Telegram. Since the Telegram was consolidated with the Elmira (N. Y.) Star-Gazette almost three years ago, its printing and other business has been carried on in the Star-Gazette plant.

CURTIS BUYS CLUB FOR TOWN

Cyrus H. K. Curtis, New York and Philadelphia newspaper and magazine publisher, has deeded the property of the Camden Yacht Club to the town. Mr. Curtis first purchased the property to make it available to all the people of the town, then made out a deed of the clubhouse and wharf to the citizens. The club, considered among the most attractive along the Atlantic Coast, cost approximately $100,000.

EDITOR STARTS SUIT AGAINST PUBLISHER

Lindsley, Held on Contempt Charge, Seeks to Fix Responsibility on Company That Employed Him

Alfred Lindsley, former editor of the Humboldt (Cal.) News, now in the Humboldt county jail convicted on a contempt of court charge, has filed suit in superior court to fix the responsibility for his acts upon the Humboldt Publishing Company, his employers, and to require them to pay his fine and secure his release from imprisonment.

Claiming that the articles written in the Humboldt News, upon which the contempt charges were based, were written under the direction and authority and "in pursuance of the policy established by the Humboldt Publishing Company," Lindsley demands judgment totaling $2,000 and general relief for damages alleged to have been sustained while he has been in jail.

Lindsley was held for contempt of court October 30, 1925, as the result of articles published in the Humboldt News, a local weekly, during the course of a trial on a libel charge preferred against Lindsley by Fred Wiley.

PARIS HERALD TO MOVE

Paper Founded by Bennett Has Handsome New Plant

Coincident with the beginning of its fortieth year as an American newspaper in Europe, the Paris Herald, European edition of the New York Herald Tribune, this October will move into new and larger publication offices in Paris. These will be in the same building but are adjoining the present location at 49 Avenue de l'Opera where the business offices have been located practically since the Paris edition was started by the late James Gordon Bennett. The new location will be only one door removed from the Place de l'Opera, the great tourist center of Paris.

The new offices of the Paris Herald and the New York Herald Tribune will be far more spacious and handsomer, particularly the ground floor, where will be the counter, information bureau and reading room. The advertising, cashier and bookkeeping departments will be on the second floor. The trimming of the ground floor will be in mahogany with marble tile floor.

The Paris Herald broke all its previous records this summer by appearing regularly on 12 pages with 14 on Sundays. So great was the advertising pressure, however, that at times the paper was obliged to come out on 16 pages. In addition to a regular edition of this size the Paris Herald has been turning out a Central European supplement for insert in all papers circulated East of the Rhine. It also added a two page Buyers' Supplement, during the three weeks of the great dressmaking openings in July and August.

ARNOLD SCHERER HONORED

Arnold F. Scherer, business manager of the Fort Wayne (Ind.) Journal-Gazette, was given a dinner last week by Lew G. Ellingham, publisher, celebrating his 20th anniversary of service with the newspaper. He was presented a watch by Mr. Ellingham. The presentation speech was made by Howard Williams, editorial writer.

LOS ANGELES NEWS IS RECOGNIZED

Stockholders' Group Takes Charge with E. M. Boddy as Editor and Publisher—Vanderbilt Has No Interest

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 25.—The Illustrated Daily News property has been turned over by Federal Receiver Meredith P. Snyder to 5,300 original stockholders forming the new publishing company. This followed hearings before the State Corporation Commissioner who insisted on certain modifications of the by-laws of the Nevada corporation organized to take over the Vanderbilt paper. All demands of the Commissioner were met. The tabloid daily is now in the hands of a Los Angeles and Southern group of local business men.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr. is no longer connected with the paper financially or otherwise according to a statement appearing in the News. The officers of the new company are: William Oliphant, president; Claude B. Andrews, vice-president; Willis D. Lewis, vice-president; R. I. Jones, secretary and treasurer. Other members of the directorate are: Elias Manchester Boddy, R. H. Whinery, A. McDonald Kerr of San Francisco; Joseph Mesmer, and J. G. Delozer.

Elias Manchester Boddy, managing director of the Commercial Board and formerly connected with the New York Times and other eastern publications has been appointed editor, general manager and publisher by the board of directors. Prior to coming to California from New York City he was sales manager for the Encyclopedia Britannica Corporation. Until the time he joined the News he was editor of the California Commercial Digest. He is 34 years old and the author of several books.

William Oliphant, president of publishing company is optimistic about the future of the News, which is now the only tabloid daily newspaper on the Pacific Coast.

"We have one of the most loyal staffs in the history of newspapers and with that have been able to serve our advertisers under the adverse conditions. Under the new management and with the elimination of former objectionable features we hope for great things in the tabloid line in Los Angeles" said Mr. Oliphant. "Our circulation has been remarkable during this period of receivership and almost daily has shown a constant increase despite the fact that there has been no money for promotion purposes. The stockholders of the Illustrated Daily News are United in an effort to make a success of the paper. The policy of the paper in the future as in the past will remain non-partisan and conservative and will be a paper for the people at all times.

"Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr. has absolutely no connection with the Illustrated Daily News from this day forward, but we desire to thank the Vanderbilt family for their efforts in surrendering the notes held by them and in aiding the stockholder's committee in other ways. We are off now for a fresh start in an effort to make the illustrated Daily News the leading daily newspaper on the Pacific Coast.

H. B. Granlee is business manager.

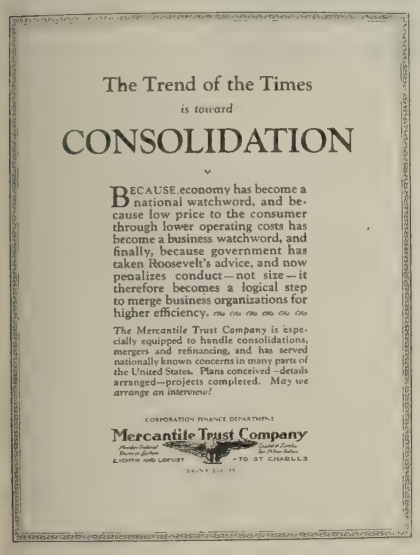
BULLETIN SERVICE SUSPENDS

The Federal Information Service, Washington, D. C., has suspended publication of its daily bulletin service, and its clients have been listed as subscribers of the United States Daily, of which David Lawrence is president and publisher.

S. F. DAILY NEWS TO BUILD

The San Francisco Daily News has purchased a lot at Russ and Howard streets and plans to erect a four-story building at a cost of $300,000. The structure will have a floor area of 13,000 square feet.

BANK PROMOTES MERGERS WITH ADVERTISING



St. Louis Trust Company Using Newspapers to Promote Its New Consolidation Service—Mercantile Services Promoted in Department Store Copy

By HAMMOND EDWARD FRANKLIN

TWO great hardware companies were in direct competition.

They had chopped their prices to the bone, reduced overhead so far as they could and introduced many short cuts yet were not getting the profit they felt they should.

The Mercantile Trust Company of St. Louis, Mo., suggested they get together, consolidate into one corporation, quit competing with each other and increase their joint efficiency of distribution, in line with the times. The bank helped put through the merger.

The Trend of the Times is toward
CONSOLIDATION

BECAUSE economy has become a national watchword, and because low price to the consumer through lower operating costs has become a business watchword, and finally, because government has taken Roosevelt's advice, and now penalizes conduct—not size—it therefore becomes a logical step to merge business organizations for higher efficiency.

The Mercantile Trust Company is especially equipped to handle consolidations, mergers and refinancing, and has served nationally known concerns in many parts of the United States. Plans conceived—details arranged—projects completed. May we arrange an interview?

CORPORATION FINANCE DEPARTMENT
Mercantile Trust Company
EIGHTH AND LOCUST —TO ST CHARLES
SAINT LOUIS

Newspaper copy is telling business men the economy of consolidation

A large steel company doing business with the Mercantile Trust Company had expanded to a point where its volume demanded more working capital. A bond issue was created to take care of this.

A railroad which had been so hard driven by its competitors that it lost money, was sold out to a larger railroad by the trust company.

The owner and manager of a far western department store died in 1923, and there was no one qualified to carry on. It was likely that deterioration of the property would set in soon. The Mercantile Trust Company sold it out to a system operating department stores in St. Louis and the Middle West. It financed the consolidation and purchase.

Consolidations have become almost a daily occurence. Great and small corporations are joining together, through merger, because of the increasing pressure to cut the cost of distribution and stay in business. The Mercantile Trust Company, through its newly organized Corporation Finance Department, is specializing in effecting mergers, consolidations and sales of business organizations.

Newspaper advertising ushered in this new department in July.

"The trend of the times is toward consolidation," one advertisement was headed. It went on:

"Because economy has become a national watchword and because low price to the consumer through lower operating costs has become a business watchword, and finally because government has taken Roosevelt's advice, and now penalizes conduct—not size—it therefore becomes a logical step to merge business organizations for higher efficiency.

"The Mercantile Trust Company is especially equipped to handle consolidations, mergers and refinancing, and has served nationally known concerns in many parts of the United States. Plans conceived—details arranged—projects completed. May we arrange an interview?"

The text of another was "Volume—a way to greater service and profit":

"Greater profit to business is often a question of lower price to the consumer . . . Reduce the output of a large automobile factory by one-half and what is the result? High overhead per sale and larger profit per car, but smaller profit per year, because of the greater cost to the man who buys the finished car.

"Build a shoe factory just to serve one family and the shoes will cost about $100,000 a pair.

"Double the output of the auto factory and the result is lower cost per car, a widening circle of buyers, with smaller profit per car, but greater profit per year.

"Let the shoe factory serve 100,000 families and the price of shoes comes down to a reasonable figure.

"The Mercantile Trust Company is especially equipped to handle mergers, consolidations, sales and refinancing of business organizations in the interest of greater volume of production with its consequent lower overhead, lower profit per unit, but higher profit per year. We have served many nationally known organizations. May we arrange an interview?"

This trust company is headed by Festus J. Wade, who as a banker has been noted for his broad outlook on advertising, not only for his customers, but for his own institution. His praise of advertising as an economic force has been heard throughout the country, in banking as well as advertising circles, through being reproduced as a piece of copy published by many newspapers through co-operation with the American Association of Advertising Agencies.

After trying his hand at many occupations from cash boy to horse-car driver, Mr. Wade entered the real estate business in St. Louis. His concern, the Anderson-Wade Real Estate Company, occupied a tiny office on the southeast corner of 8th and Locust streets (on the north east corner of which the present Mercantile Trust Company covers half a city block.)

In the late nineties, when the trust company form of organization was beginning to offer real estate companies serious competition through estates held in trust and real estate departments, Mr. Wade and some associates decided to organize a trust company. They had made a specialty of loaning money on religious and institutional property often in large amounts, putting the money out on first mortgages. More capital was needed to handle more business.

The company was organized on Nov. 16, 1899, with a capital of $750,000 and surplus of $900,000. Its surplus has always exceeded its capital. The surplus now is $7,000,000 against $3,000,000 capital. The trust company's first office was the former real estate office. Its first advertisement was a newspaper announcement of the name of the company, its location, its officers and the fact it was now open for business.

The Mercantile had a savings department, a banking department and a real estate department, the last-named earning most of the profits in the beginning. A safe deposit department was installed in 1902, a bond department and trust department in 1903, and in 1907 a real estate loan department was put in. This department carried on the theory of Mr. Wade that loaning money on religious and institutional property construction is safe because the supporters of churches would complete and pay for their structures at all costs. Millions have been loaned and the bank has yet to lose a dollar. This department, in addition, loaned money on business property.

But, nourished by a growing population, sound policy and steady advertising, the commercial banking end grew fast. Deposits in 1910 passed the $20,000,000 mark in 1918 the $40,000,000 mark and in 1920 the $50,000,000. The company serves more than 100,000 patrons.

The company introduced the "department store style," of copy in 1922 and continues to use it because of its many divisions. This form permits thumbnail sketches and human interest, informative chat about each department, in one piece of copy, all tied together.

As to what the bank thinks of the newspaper as a medium, let me quote the words of Festus J. Wade, Jr., vice-president, who says:

"The company has been a consistent user of newspaper space from the first and has always regarded this as the primary medium. Expenditures for newspaper space have equalled all other advertising expenditures combined."

The Road Over Yonder—Toward Happiness—
The Real Story of "Mercantile Service"
DEPARTMENTS: Banking - Bond - Corporation - Real Estate Loan - Real Estate - Public Relations - Safe Deposit - Savings - Trust

AFTER ALL, what good is money? Merely as paper and coin, no good at all. But when money is used to create happiness, it becomes of almost magic value. We could never justify that word "Service" if we dealt only in money—preached thrift for the sake of hoarding; investment for the piling up of wealth. We urge the conservation of wealth because it means provision for the future—income—peace—happiness—because it makes possible the better things in life—home—education—independence—the things we dream of, work for, desire. These are the things we offer to our patrons just as a store offers merchandise to its customers—these are the things that build a broader, smoother Road Over Yonder Toward the Sunrise, where lies the thing the world calls Happiness.

"The Road Over Yonder" is a booklet of sound and thoughtful worth to anyone who wants to know more about Mercantile Service. Write for your copy today.

Mercantile Trust Company
Member Federal Reserve System — Capital & Surplus Ten Million Dollars
EIGHTH AND LOCUST —TO ST. CHARLES
SAINT LOUIS

Typographically attractive and sprinkled with a liberal number of cuts, this large space newspaper copy tells of the services offered by the various departments of the Mercantile Trust Company.

DAILY SAVES READERS MILLIONS OF DOLLARS

Denver Post Has Been Selling Cut Price Coal to Subscribers 25 Years, Saved Money for Them, and Made Profit for Itself

"Give Us Your Order for Post Lignite Lump Storage Coal at $5.50 per ton," is the headline of an office advertisement now appearing in the Denver (Colo.) Post, and behind it is a story that dates back 25 years to unique reader service, which, according to F. G. Bonfils, publisher, has contributed largely to the success of his newspaper.

"The Denver Post started selling 'Post' coal 25 years ago, cutting the coal trust prices at that time from $1.50 a ton to $2," Mr. Bonfils said.

"During this quarter of a century the Post has saved to the coal consumers of Denver and Colorado a total of between twenty and twenty-five million dollars and has made for itself a worthwhile profit each year. During these 25 years the Post has been the largest retail coal dealer in Denver and Colorado.

"Our platform has always been an honest 2,000 pounds of coal to every ton with an extra lump thrown in for good measure and giving the best quality of coal.

"The trust has used every conceivable device to prevent the Post from getting coal and at one time we even had to buy our own mine in order to continue in the coal business.

"It is such service as this in innumerable other directions that has brought about the success of the Denver Post. What the Denver Post has done any other paper with a desire to really serve the people can also do."

The Post advertises its coal regularly, using compelling copy. At the present time the advertising is particularly heavy. People of Denver and Colorado are being urged to stock their cellars now, in advance of the winter rush.

Unusually low prices are being quoted in the current office advertisements.

NEW MICHIGAN DAILY

The South Haven (Mich.) Daily News has started publication using the news report of International News Service. Nelson Agard is publisher.

PRESS CONGRESS WILL SEE GERMANY ADMITTED TO LEAGUE OF NATIONS

League Officials Believe Visit of International Delegation Will Give Great Impetus to World Peace—Sharkey of A. P. to Talk on Ethics

By A. E. JOHNSON
(Geneva Correspondent, EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

GENEVA, Aug. 17.—Following on the heels of the meetings of the Preparatory Committee for an International Press Conference, the visit of some 400 editors and publishers from all parts of the world to Geneva and Lausanne, September 14-18 for the Third Press Congress of the World, is expected to add the greatest impetus to the movement for World Peace since the Armistice.

JOSEPH E. SHARKEY

Realizing the importance of bringing the press of the world into the campaign for the dissemination and maintenance of the so-called "ideals" of the League of Nations, supporters of the Geneva organization are going to throw open the doors to the League, Labor Office and allied organizations to the Press Congress visitors. The gesture will not be in the form of propaganda—it will be an unusual opportunity for the moulders of public opinion to see for themselves and form their own conclusions.

Fortunately, the visitors also will have an opportunity of witnessing the greatest single advance made by the League since its organization, the admission of Germany. In the words of Col. E. M. House: "The League is but half a League at the moment; with the admission of Germany it will become two-thirds of a League, to reach its full stature only with the eventual co-operation of the United States and Russia."

Few people realize the importance of Germany's adhesion to the institution founded by Woodrow Wilson. Until Berlin becomes affiliated the League cannot possibly escape from being a combination of the Victorious Powers, regardless how pure the motives of those Powers may be. The majority of questions that trouble post-war Europe are those arising directly out of the World War. Germany has pleaded her case in the past before the Allied Supreme Council and the Hague Court. Now she will take her place on the Council of the League, with a voice equal to that of Britain or France, and a veto as powerful. She will have regained her position as a world power, at least politically, if not militaristically and economically.

With the United States absent Germany is bound to become the leader of the smaller powers in their conflicts with the diplomacy of the larger states. In the Mandates Commission Germany can be counted upon to become an able ally of Sweden and Switzerland in defending the rights of the Syrians and others; in the Council and Assembly she will be seen battling for Abyssinia, Turkey, China or any other nation in political revolt against pre-war treaties.

It is planned to make room for the entire Press Congress of the World delegation at the session which admits Germany, if it happens to coincide with the date of the Press Congress. Otherwise the delegates will be given their choice of meetings.

The demand for Press Gallery seats this year eclipses that of any other previous year. More than fifty "active" American journalists have obtained cards, but magazine writers, special feature men, and others whose copy goes by the mails, will have to be content with spectators seats, or entrance into the Lobby where they can mix with the League Delegations.

As in the past the American newspaper contingent will exceed that of any nation with perhaps the exception of Germany. And this despite the fact that the United States is not in the League. According to records more words go out over the Geneva wires destined to the United States than to any other country. The reason of course is obvious, America having far more large newspapers and an infinitely greater reading public than any other country in the world.

Also, as has been the case in previous years, about one out of ten requests from the American public for seats will be granted. Last year more seats were apportioned to Americans than to any single member of the League, and even then only a small per cent of those who requested entrance were accommodated. This year will be no exception. If the Assembly remains in session a month those who come the last two weeks will stand a far greater chance to witness one or two sessions than those who appear the opening days when the crush is greatest.

While the delegates to the World Press Congress will be established in hotels at Lausanne, about 30 miles down the Lake, four of their sessions will be held in Geneva. Special lakeboats and train service will be instituted so very little inconvenience will result. At the same time they will avoid the crush of Geneva hotels which are filled to overflowing in September.

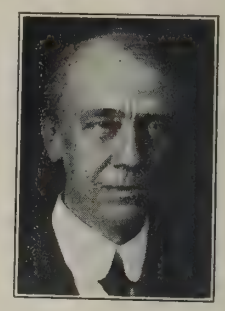
Temporary headquarters of the League of Nations, the old Hotel National, on Quai Woodrow Wilson. Facilities in the press room and other courtesies will be granted to delegates of the Press Congress of the Wold during their stay in Geneva.

The American newspaper contingent permanently stationed in Geneva will take part in the welcome of the delegates, the Cercle de la Presse of Geneva having designated Joseph E. Sharkey, of the Associated Press, Albin E. Johnson, staff correspondent of the New York World, Henry Wood, of the United Press, Robert Neville, staff correspondent of the New York Times, Hugh Spender, correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor, as members of the Reception Committee.

Mr. Sharkey, who is the dean of the Geneva American correspondents, will deliver an address to the Congress on "The Ethics of Journalism." He has been with the Associated Press for nearly 30 years, and has held the Geneva post since 1923. Previous to that he was in the Paris and Tokio bureaus of the Associated Press. He was educated at Harvard University has "covered" many international conferences and events.

One of the most important advances that is expected out of the deliberations of the Congress is the establishment of regional Press Congresses in Europe and Asia. European editors are enthusiastic over the possibilities of world co-operation amongst editors, publishers and journalists.

Tablet in front of the League on Quai Woodrow Wilson. It is the only commemorative tablet in Europe in honor of the founder of the league, although many countries have designated streets and prominent squares by his name.



REPORTERS ADMITTED

For the first time in history, newspaper reporters will be allowed to attend sessions of the Illinois board of paroles and pardons, Hinton C. Clabaugh, new chairman of the board announced this week. Clabaugh said the board had "nothing to conceal from the public" and press representatives would be allowed to attend hearings of convicts applying for paroles.

PRESS CONGRESS CHIEF ARRIVES IN NEW YORK

Dean Williams to Lead U. S. Delegation to Geneva—Lausanne Meet Sept. 14-18—Party to Sail Sept. 3

Dr. Walter Williams, president of the Press Congress of the World, and Dean of the School of Journalism, University of Missouri, arrived in New York Wednesday, preparatory to sailing with the Press Congress party for Geneva-Lausanne, Switzerland, Friday, September 3, at midnight.

DEAN WALTER WILLIAMS

President Williams was pleased with the indications for a large attendance of leading journalists of the world at the business sessions to be held in Geneva and Lausanne, September 14-18.

P. Selig, veteran publisher of Christchurch, New Zealand, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Oscar Josephson, also arrived in New York City this week to join the North American delegation, to Geneva-Lausanne. They are at the official Press Congress hotel, The Roosevelt, where delegates from all States will assemble next Tuesday for the several days of sight-seeing and entertainment in New York City, beginning Wednesday and continuing through Friday noon.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Cody, of the Hilo (Hawaii) Tribune-Herald, accompanied by Mrs. Emma Aungst, arrived at Vancouver last Saturday, and after a few days spent in Seattle, are due to arrive in New York City Monday.

New York City Publishers and the Allied Trades have cooperated in planning entertainment features for the delegates during their stay in New York, the program, in brief, being as follows:

Tuesday, Aug. 31.—Registration day at the official hotel, The Roosevelt.

Wednesday, Sept. 1.—Downtown motor trip to all points of interest; reception at the New York Stock Exchange, E. H. Simmons, president; laying of wreaths on the graves of William Bradford, first publisher, and John Holt, first editor. Official welcome at City Hall, by Mayor James J. Walker, followed by luncheon at Wanamaker's Store, as guests of Rodman Wanamaker, president, and Grover A. Whalen, general manager. Dinner at 6 p. m., Waldorf Apartments, Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, guests of Karl A. Bickel, president, United Press Associations. Theatre party as guests of Charles C. Capehart, of Capehart & Carey, advertising agency, and the Messrs. Lee and S. Shubert, to witness "The Great Temptations" at the Winter Garden. After-theatre buffet supper at the New York Herald Tribune offices, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ogden M. Reid.

On Thursday the delegates will be the guests of H. R. Swarts, president of R. Hoe & Co., at luncheon at the Advertising Club of New York City, following which there will be an Upper Manhattan sight-seeing tour. At 6 o'clock in the Japanese Garden of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, the delegates will be guests of A. R. Graustein, president, and J. L. Fearing, vice-president, of the International Paper Company, at dinner, following which they will be the guests of Ralph Pulitzer and the general management of the New York World, at a theatre party at the Apollo Theatre, to witness George White's 'Scandals." An after-theatre buffet supper will be given at the New York Times.

Friday, Sept. 3, at 12 o'clock, in the Assembly Foyer of the Roosevelt, the delegates will be the guests at luncheon of Mr. Koenigsberg, president of the International News Service.

The Geneva-Lausanne delegation will sail Friday at ten minutes past midnight on the Cunard liner Carmania.

LIBEL-PROOF COVERAGE OF A MURDER TRIAL

Must Make Report Reflect What Actually Occurred, Avoiding Opinions, Says Col. Henry W. Sackett—Reporters, Awed by Officials, Take Foolish Risks

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

Do reporters on your staff gamble $100,000 of your money by putting their own opinions into coverage of a court proceeding? Do they know the difference between safe and dangerous adjectives? Do they take the word of public officials too seriously?

Some advice on these questions is given this week by Col. Henry W. Sackett, noted New York libel expert, in this the 24th article of a series obtained by EDITOR & PUBLISHER, stripping the libel law of legal verbiage.

THE court room is stuffy. The murder trial is dragging. Witness after witness takes the stand for dull uninteresting testimony. People inside, yawn, nod sleepily, and shift in their chairs. Outside, however, lies a vast phantom public supposedly hungry for some new sensation from this case banner-headlined for weeks. City desks, at least, are urgent.

Reporters in the press section wait eagerly for a lead to their day's story. Their minds, buzzing with the case, leap at occasional flashes from the witness box. Opinions form and facts bend to fit them.

The prosecuting attorney told all of them yesterday in informal conference—not for publication—that the third witness of the morrow would make startling revelations. He would point the finger of accusation at a woman as yet unmentioned in connection with the murder. The woman's name is whispered. She did thus. She did so.

The third witness is called. He fails on examination and cross examination to meet the predictions of the prosecutor. Defense counsel object. Their objections are sustained. But some statements are made, which the reporters, primed by the confidential conference, consider highly significant.

Into their stories are woven opinions. The facts given by the witness are on the court record and are privileged. The opinions crackle with libel lightning.

The woman did not do thus and so as the reporter wrote "it is believed" "it is thought," or "officials said," she did. After the trial and vindication she sues. The reporters had gambled the publishers' money on a prosecutor's word and had lost.

Time and again reporters thus dare the bolt, and often it strikes. Most frequently they luckily escape. Their risky opinions are borne out by privileged facts or later developments.

But it is needless risk. Murder trial stories can be written well within the libel rules and still not be robbed of 'news value," or, indeed, literary merit.

Col. Henry W. Sackett, one of New York's most noted libel experts, the other day pointed in praise to a story written by Ishbel Ross of the New York Herald Tribune's staff, covering the Hall-Mills case in Somerville, N. J. He called it a story "almost perfect" as far as legal considerations are concerned. He declared it was executed well within "the rules of the game."

Col. Sackett this week for EDITOR & PUBLISHER went over Miss Ross' story in detail, telling how to present a libel-proof coverage of a murder trial.

Libel suits have resulted in poor reporting of murder trials, despite the fact the reports of court proceedings are privileged, Col. Sackett said. Often newspapers have escaped only by the "craziest gambler's luck."

Cardinal rules for libel-proof coverage of a trial, as obtained from Col. Sackett, follow:

1.—Make the report of a trial a reflection of what actually occurred and not an opinion of what was signified. Stick to what the statute of New York calls a "fair and true report" of a public and official proceeding. Keep personal opinions in abeyance.

2.—Use adjectives advisedly and discriminatingly. Use them only by way of description rather than by way of opinion.

3.—Don't go outside the record. Don't make by inference or imputation charges against those on trial without official sanction.

4.—Don't rely on the statements of police officers or prosecuting attorneys as if they were privileged.

The last rule, Col. Sackett pointed out, is the one most frequently violated. There have been many instances in New York, he said, of libel suits growing out of this cause.

"Newspaper writers," he declared, "are often carried away with the idea that 'official say-so' is privileged and can be repeated safely. That is very far from the truth."

One very interesting case of this sort involved all New York morning newspapers. It looked as if they would have to pay big sums. Then the plaintiff was drafted, went to the front in France and was killed.

Such cases without the Russian ending are common throughout the country. Reporters everywhere bank too much on public officials, even in some instances on public documents. In a recent case, for instance, against the Norfolk (Va.) Post the supreme court of appeals sustained a verdict against the defendant and held that an error on a police record, if reported by a newspaper to the detriment of a person's character, is not sufficient to excuse the newspaper from liability.

For complete libel-proof coverage of a trial the copy desk is as vulnerable as the reporter on the firing line.

The New York statute on the subject of privileged publications reads:

"An action, civil or criminal, cannot be maintained against a reporter, editor, publisher, or proprietor of a newspaper, for the publication therein of a fair and true report of any judicial, legislative, or other public and official proceedings, without proving actual malice in making the report."

This provision, however, is qualified by another section, which deserves especial mention. It reads:

"The last section does not apply to a libel, contained in the heading of the report; or in any other matter, added by any person concerned in the publication; or in the report of anything said or done, at the time and place of the public and official proceedings, which was not a part thereof."

Many libel suits have ben sustained which were based alone upon the libelous headings of articles, where the articles themselves were completely protected by the first statute quoted above.

No one will dispute it is difficult business to report a murder trial. Technical libels pepper most accounts of these affairs in the American press. The work of Miss Ross for the Herald Tribune is exceptional. It had "news value," the ring of sensation, and real literary merit, and contained but one possible legal error.

"Miss Ross, in a word," said Col. Sackett, "gave to the readers a clear and vivid word picture and impression of what took place in the Somerville court room. Her story reflected what readers would have seen if they had been there. This is high art and is rare in the newspaper world."

When a story gets such praise from a critical lawyer and newspaper student such as Col. Sackett, it deserves reprinting. Quotations, therefore, from the "almost perfect" report of the Hall-Mills hearing in Somerville, N. J., Aug. 13, as written by Miss Ross follows:

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Aug. 13.—A calloused finger, brown and accusing, was leveled direct at Henry de la Bruyere Carpender in the Somerset County Court House to-day as the man who stood beneath the crabapple tree and held a "glittering object" immediately before the shots were fired that killed the Rev. Dr. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills on the night of September 14, 1922.

The dramatic identification by Mrs. Jane Gibson came at a preliminary hearing which will be continued on Monday before Judge Frank L. Cleary in connection with the arrest on Thursday night of Mr. Carpender and "Willie" Stevens on the charge of murder. Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, charged with the same crime, is released on $15,000 bail.

By pointing straight in his smiling face and later by laying her hand on his sleeve, Mrs. Gibson for the first time publicly identified Mr. Carpender, who is the cousin of Mrs. Hall. He returned her stare with an inscrutable look and gave no sign of emotion.

In the same manner she identified "Willie" Stevens as the man who stood by the car near the crabapple tree and held a flashlight. She thought him colored at the time, she said. With a final gesture the "pig woman" named Mrs. Hall, "Willie's" sister, as the woman in gray who wept over the body of the dead rector and cried, "Oh, Henry!"

Throwing his case wide open State Senator Alexander Simpson, special prosecutor appointed by Governor Moore to re-open the Hall-Mills investigation, followed the usual course of presenting much of his evidence at the preliminary hearing and putting his star witnesses on the stand.

They came in rapid succession—the squat "pig woman" sticking to every detail of the story she told four years ago; pretty, fragile Charlotte Mills, who talked with a lump in her throat of her dead mother, and Louise Geist, the smart and smooth-tongued housemaid in the Hall home, who proved a hostile witness for the prosecution.

Marcus Beekman, a squirming witness trundled the famous "missing papers" into court in a brown paper parcel. He is the brother of Azariah Beekman, the prosecutor who had the case in hand four years ago and has since died. He was asked if he had not tried to sell them to a newspaper as recently as yesterday and evaded reply.

* * *

Flappers leaned over from the gallery and watched every move of the ungainly Stevens as he took a seat directly opposite the judge, with Mr. Carpender to his right. His bushy hair, graying at the temples, sprang from an inch above his eyebrows. His full, bewildered eyes surveyed the witnesses with an anxious and distraught intensity. His fingers plucked at a rapidly wilting collar and from time to time he mopped his brow.

Serene and intent, his cousin, Mr. Carpender, followed the testimony with unfathomable air, showing nervousness only in a slight trembling of the hands as he fanned himself with a sopping handkerchief. He entered the court with a nonchalent air, wearing a suit of steel gray, a soft blue shirt and a maroon and dark gray tie.

* * *

There was a stir in the sultry court as Mr. Simpson called for Charlotte Mills, the twenty-year old daughter of the dead choir singer. It was the first time the girl had had a chance to tell her story in public. Her father, Jimmie Mills, sat in the background bleakly meditating on the sudden turn of affairs.

Charlotte tripped to the stand, a slender wisp of a girl with an ashblonde bob of becoming lines. Her frock was a beige silk, simple and youthful, and she carried her hat in her hand. She turned a cold and meditating eye on Mr. Carpender at every opportunity, barely glancing at "Willie," whose head was thrust forward in an attitude of rapt attention.

Mr. Carpender, peering calmly from behind the shield of his eyeglasses, returned look for look with a kindly, half-amused smile. Phrases uttered by her mother before her death slipped from the girl's petulent lips. She recalled her mother's horror over a look that was given her by Mrs. Hall shortly before the murder, which the choir singer hoped she would never "see a human being given again, because it was killing."

She pictured a scene at the bedside of her sick mother, with Dr. Hall praying on one side of the bed and Mrs. Hall kneeling at the other. As they rose from their knees Dr. Hall turned to his wife, according to Charlotte's unemotional recital and said:

"Frances, if Eleanor dies I will kill myself."

FLORIDA DAILY IN NEW PLANT

THE Clearwater (Fla.) Sun celebrated the occupancy of its new plant by publishing a "New Home Edition," July 29.

The plant is constructed entirely of steel and concrete with the exception of the inside walls which have wooden lath. The weight of the roof is carried entirely by the wall girders so that there are no pillars anywhere in the building to obstruct moving of machines or rearrangement of space. The building has a ground floor space of 7,000 square feet.

The equipment includes a 24-page Hoe straight line press, a complete Stereotyping equipment, a Monotype with lead and slug caster, one Ludlow, three model "C" Intertypes and one model 14 Linotype with conduits laid in the concrete floor for four more machines, two of which will probably be added this fall.

David B. Lindsay is president of the Sun, Paul Poynter is vice-president, and J. R. Brumby, general manager.

SHERMAN JOINS HARTFORD COURANT AS ASSOCIATE EDITOR SEPT. 25

Ends 32-Year Career On Springfield Union, Which He Joined as Sports Reporter—Had Been Its Editor Since 1912

M. S. SHERMAN, who resigned as editor of the Springfield (Mass.) Union, effective Sept. 25, will become associate editor of the Hartford (Conn.) Courant on that date.

After graduation from Dartmouth College, Mr. Sherman went to Springfield in July, 1894, to enter the sporting department of the Union, then under the direction of Irving E. Sanborn, afterward sporting editor of the Chicago Tribune. Those were the days of the great bicycle races on the Hampden Park track and it fell to his lot to cover that particular branch of sport.

M. S. Sherman

"I had no hankering for it, my interest lying entirely outside the sporting department," he has recalled. "This fact was evidently recognized; at any event, I was transferred to the city staff and shortly afterward assigned to cover the municipal building and court house for the evening edition. In time I became city editor, then news editor, then managing editor."

As managing editor Mr. Sherman did a good deal of editorial writing, and when A. P. Langtry, then editor and publisher of the Union, was elected to the legislature, he took complete charge of the editorial page. The title of editor passed to him when Mr. Langtry was elected Secretary of State, and the late John D. Plummer was made publisher of the paper. This was in 1912. He discharged the duties of editor and managing editor until the pressure became too great, when he relinquished the latter office to Maurice W. Dickey, for a long time his able assistant in the news department.

His connection with the Springfield Union has been continuous, with the exception of two years, 1901-02, spent in Washington as secretary to Congressman Frederick H. Gillett and clerk of the Committee on Reform in the Civil Service.

"I have endeavored to hold the Union to a high ideal of public service and to make it an enterprising and dependable newspaper in all its various departments," he declared. "Its preeminence in circulation and advertising may in some measure attest to the success that has attended the loyal efforts of my co-workers.

"During my editorship the Union has been conducted as a virile Republican newspaper, having regard for the larger interests of the Republican party and not being interested in the aspirations of factions within the party. It has been independent of dictation from any source. It has dealt fairly but courageously with men and measures. It has given all its readers an opportunity to be heard. It has presented the news without bias or discrimination.

"To a large degree the Union has enjoyed reader confidence, which I attribute to a policy of never straddling any issue but being scrupulously fair to those of differing opinions, and to the policy of printing the news without fear or favor but presenting it with good taste and a proper sense of proportion. To build a newspaper on these lines is not a quick process but the results when achieved are lasting and satisfying.

"When it developed that the Union's competitor in the local field had acquired a controlling interest in its management it seemed clear to me that sooner or later I should find it desirable to make another connection, notwithstanding the fact that under the present control of the Springfield newspapers I have had an absolutely free hand to continue my own policies. There was lacking the old incentive of competition which every newspaper man values. So, when the opportunity came to me to become associate editor of the Hartford Courant and to relieve its editor, Charles Hopkins Clark, of duties that illness had made it difficult for him to discharge, I welcomed it as offering attractive advantages.

"The Courant is the oldest newspaper of continuous publication in the United States. Its history is as honorable as it is long. Its editors have been distinguished both for their literary attainments and the positiveness of their convictions."

Mr. Sherman was born in Hanover, N. H., April 19, 1873, the son of Frank Asbury, and Lucy Rosette Sherman. He received his early and preparatory education in the public schools of Hanover and was graduated from Dartmouth in the class of 1894 with the degree of Bachelor of Science. His father, a veteran of the Civil War, was for 40 years Professor of Mathematics at Dartmouth on the Chandler Foundation. Mr. Sherman was married in Rockville, Conn., April 12, 1905, to Florine A. Sunderland of that city.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER CALENDAR

Aug. 31—Delegates to Press Congress of the World meet in New York at Roosevelt Hotel.
Sept. 14-18—Third Press Congress of the World, meeting, Geneva-Lausanne.
Sept. 20-23—Financial Advertisers Assn., annual convention, Detroit, Mich.
Sept. 20-23—Advertising Specialty Assn., annual convention, Hotel Sherman, Chicago, Ill.
Sept. 20-22—Georgia Press Assn., annual convention, Louisville, Ga.
Sept. 21-22—National Publishers Assn., annual convention, Shawnee-on-the-Delaware, Pa.
Sept. 23-25—Missouri Press Assn., anual convention and boat trip, Cape Girardeau, Mo.
Sept. 23-25—Tri-State Editorial Assn., annual convention, Sioux City, Ia.

"THE RELATIVE IMPORTANCE OF NEWS"

J. N. Darling, the thoughtful cartoonist of the New York Herald Tribune Syndicate, reflected a newspaper truism in the drawing shown above which appeared August 25.

NEW ROCHESTER M. IS "POP" TO ALL

Versatile Norman Nairn of Times-U Has Embalmer's Diploma in Attic—Music His Avocation

Norman Nairn, new managing e of the Rochester Times-Union, is kn to his associates and to 319,234 Roche citizens as "P Even the phone operat the Times-U doesn't know "Norman" conseque when Mrs. N calls her hust on the phone must be very ticular to ask "Pop."

Norman Nairn

Nairn has city editor of Times-Uni since March 1918, when paper came into being with the solidation of the Evening Times the Union & Advertiser. He was the staff of the Evening Times prio the consolidation, his experience cove practically every beat on the paper.

His first newspaper job was on Rochester Herald, during his col course at the University of Roches where he was a member of the Class 1909. After leaving college he went the Times, and since that time, ex for two years when he succumbed to allurements of a moving picture or ist's career, he has been in newspa work.

Nairn claims to be the only newspa man in captivity who made newspa work his vocation and music his avo tion. For many years he has been pro nent in musical circles in Roches having been organist and choirmaste several of the largest churches of city, as well as directing choral cl While in college he wrote several mus comedies, some of the songs of that pe having become college classics. With added responsibilities of the M.E.'s however, he will give up his mus activities.

He was born Jan. 12, 1883 in Do Plains, N. Y. His parents later mo to Troy, where his father, the R John B. Nairn, was a Baptist cler man for 18 years. Troy High Sch gave the youth a diploma and he hea for Rochester, where he spent three ye at the University.

"The harder the job the better I l it," says Nairn. "I worked part of way through high school via Burde blast furnace in South Troy, and worked my way through college w music and by acting as physical instr tor in a playground. And if I tell y that as a kid I wanted to be an und taker, took a course in embalming a have in my attic a State embalm license, you'll agree that's enough o varied career."

Nairn is a member of Theta Chi F ternity, a past president of the Roches Press Club, a member of Yonnon Lodge, F. & A. M.; Hamilton Chapt R. A. M.; Monroe Commandery, K. Rochester Lodge of Elks, of the Alun Golf Club and the Brooklea Count Club.

Alphonse J. Sigl, who came to t Times-Union about a year ago fr the Rochester Journal, has been pr moted to city editor, succeeding Nai Sigl, also an alumnus of the Univers of Rochester, began his newspap career on the old Post-Express.

COAST PLANT READY SEPT. 1

The new home of the San Die (Cal.) Sun will be ready for occupan about Sept. 15. The new quarters, wh are double the size of the old, will gi the Sun 30,000 square feet of floor spa and will permit of the installation of n presses and an up-to-date art departm in the near future.

ALL AGENCIES SHAPING PUBLIC OPINION MUST CO-OPERATE TO WIN RESULTS

ress Is Most Powerful Agent in Molding Thought on Foreign Affairs, But Aid of Radio, Movies, Pulpit, and Schools Needed, Says Institute Speaker

By ANDREW TEN EYCK

What was determined during the four eek-end discussions on public opinion id world affairs conducted by the In- itute of Politics at Williamstown, Mass., nder the chairmanship of Arthur S. raper, assistant editor of the New York erald Tribune? The press conferences osed last Saturday, Aug. 21.

Mr. Ten Eyck, a New York lawyer, id head of the Institute press bureau, ntributes the following article to Ed- OR & Publisher, as an answer to the estion.

THAT the press is the most powerful agent in molding public opinion in orld affairs, not necessarily the best, or always the exclusive agent in a given nergency—such as in the recent British al strike, where the radio organized ie nation, and was the instrumentality r arousing a public consciousness gainst the strike, would appear to be a ir and generally accepted statement f the situation.

And just what is public opinion seems asier of recognition than definition. ohn Morley, it has been observed, once id that public opinion was something ke an elephant,—that everybody could ecognize one when he saw it, but prob- bly could not describe one, and certainly ot define one. Or perhaps public opin- n is similar to "the man in the street" -who has never yet been found, but is dmittedly there—a latent force that once roused is able to demonstrate strength, nd is aroused most frequently by pres- ure from without, for example, by the ress.

That, taken in all, the press does more o exert the force and express a public pinion can hardly be successfully chal- nged. But when it comes to the ques- on of examining the agencies which nfluence the mythicals "man in the treet," or public consciousness, no fair nalysis can ignore the platform, the ulpit, the schools and colleges, and all ne agencies that seek to confront people ith one another, and, perhaps greatest f all, is the radio with its power to ransmit a single voice to a whole nation.

Therefore, the true inquiry is wherein o these different agencies exert their nfluence? The press undoubtedly is the rinted word which gives every one who an read daily information on affairs f the world, and in most cases opinions, hrough the pages devoted to editorials, nd, in varying degrees, by interpretative ccounts of foreign affairs. The Ameri- an press is conspicuous for its publica- ion of foreign news, and excels, it is be- eved, in its great urban dailies the press f all countries in the content and extent f matter. It is in the broad acceptance f the term a free press—free from the harges made against newspapers of some ontinental countries of subsidation. America does not, however, have such oncededly national organs of expression s the London Times, the Paris Temps, a Prensa, of the Argentine, or El Mer- urio, of Chile; not to name several thers, because there has not been de- eloped in this country such homogeneity n what might be called a class conscious- ess.

Some of the notable inadequacies of he American press are, undoubtedly, he inaccuracies of headlines, and he lack of such journals as the Manchester Guardian, which contains thorough and intelligent presenta- ion of news in the full perspective of istory and all its implications. Whether uch a press could exert an influence here eems to be doubted, for certain Ameri- an newspapers which bought the proof heets of the Manchester Guardian for mmediate reprinting in America, found no demands for such matter, and have discontinued the service.

American journalism, to state the matter in another way, is an all-inclusive journalism—a journalism that concerns itself with crime news, with trivialities, with every phase of life, and particularly human life. Its justification for publishing crime news is, if this is a bad world, people must be told it is a bad world in order to make it a better world.

Journalism is a very human institution, and, like the church, the state, it partakes of the character of the times, and though newspaper editors would like to publish more of what they think people ought to read, the necessities of the situation, the necessities of maintaining their plant, compels them to publish what people want to read. In the last analysis that seems to be at the root of the difficulty in the matter of changing the general character of news, if, indeed, the reading public would change its character.

The last 18 months in America has witnessed an extraordinary development in the amount of foreign news published in the United States. The expense of the Associated Press for covering foreign news has doubled within this period. This fact indicates that the large problem in every newspaper is the selection of news to print, not the lack of it.

The suppression of news in the sense of what the word connotes is not a serious matter. Genuine news cannot be suppressed.

Most journals will not print the name of a poison which the suicide uses, nor the names of persons remotely concerned in a crime, nor the names of the relatives of a condemned person. Thus, taken all in all, this is the picture of the American press in its role as the agent in crystallizing public opinion. It is the foundation work for the superstructure of the radio and the movies, which agencies are most potent in (1) enlarging the audiences for the effective voice, and (2) giving in its present state of development a more or less true picture of contemporary life.

It is, perhaps, natural for journalists to feel that they have a major task in arousing public opinion and exerting its force in world affairs; natural, perhaps, because it is their daily task to publish all the news, and some opinions on subjects of local, national, and international affairs. But no discriminating observer will gainsay the greater occasional power of the church, the platform in all its phases, and the schools and colleges.

More and more it is felt that tolerance in the sense of appreciating each other's viewpoint will be required of American journalism and especially will its expression be found in the future public opinion on a variety of subjects. A reflection of this is already to be noted in the great variety of church news published by the daily press, and in the fair and impartial publication of views that are in criticism of the national policies, and perhaps the accepted view of the national interests, of America.

The press, it is believed, will be more and more called upon to handle strong antipathies and viewpoints, to report accurately the news which bears upon important international events. That it can be expected to do so fairly and impartially is believed to be possible. That it may be more accurate than statesmen in the past, in the days of closed diplomacy, seems most likely. The last ten years have witnessed more statesmen and politicians making use of the press for an expression of their opinions than any decade heretofore.

Public opinion of the kind that accomplishes really important things in national and international affairs develops slowly.

We are developing a public opinion in America in foreign affairs that knows few parallels for the time we have been occupied in thinking about such affairs. As a people we are just beginning to appreciate that whether we like it or not we cannot escape our world responsibilities. If we are to play our part, all the agencies that go to shape public opinion in this country will have to co-operate.

STAFF IN NEW QUARTERS

The editorial staff of the Roanoke (Va.) Times-World Corporation is now occupying new quarters in the Times-World building. The offices on the second floor, vacated recently by the Roanoke Securities Company and the Virginia Supply Company, have been converted into a city news room and houses both the day and night staffs.

BRITONS STUDY STORE COPY

Newspaper advertising methods of large retail stores in Chicago were investigated last week by 50 department heads of the London store of Harry Gordon Selfridge, who were the guests of Marshall Field & Company.

OHIO PUBLISHER IN ENGLAND

Former Governor James M. Cox of Ohio, publisher of the News League of Ohio papers and the Miami (Fla.) Daily News, photographed with Mrs. Cox on their arrival at Southampton on the Aquitania recently.

FRANK B. BERRY NAMED TYPE FOUNDERS CHIEF

Veteran Executive Named President Succeeding Late Robert W. Nelson —Learned Printing on N. H. Paper

Frank B. Berry, vice-president of the American Type Founders Company, was elected president Aug. 25, by the board of directors, to succeed the late Robert W. Nelson.

Frank B. Berry

Mr. Berry was born in Akron, O. While he was still an infant his parents moved to Waltham, Mass., where he later received his schooling. He learned to print in the office of the Pittsfield (Mass.) Suncook Valley Times in 1866. In 1878 Mr. Berry settled in Cleveland, working for the printing house of J. B. Savage. He has gained a reputation as a first-rate compositor, with an unusual knowledge of type design. In the following year he joined a small group of men in establishing the Cleveland Type Foundry, of which he was secretary and general manager from the beginning. In connection with the type foundry, the manufacture of a Gordon press was undertaken, out of which eventually grew the famous Chandler & Price Gordon Press. In 1892 the Cleveland Type Foundry was merged into the American Type Founders Company, Mr. Berry continuing to manage it. As a branch of the American Type Founders Company it continued until manufacturing was discontinued in Cleveland. Mr. Berry was promoted to the managership of the Cincinnati Type Foundry, continuing there until that foundry was removed to Jersey City. That was in 1903, in which year Mr. Berry was again promoted, becoming manager of the Typographic Department of the central type foundry of his company, a position he has filled until the present time. He was later made a director and vice-president of the company.

IMPARTIALITY PLUS

Grand Rapids Press Gives Rival Political Candidates Equal Space

Efforts of the modern newspaper to be non-partisan in its news columns is demonstrated by the Grand Rapids (Mich.) Press, a Booth newspaper, in its coverage of the gubernatorial campaign now in progress.

Under a two column box head "With the Candidates" the paper is giving equal space to the line to the Democratic and Republican contenders. Campaign reports are being written by staff correspondents.

Illustrative of the treatment, one-column headlines over two stories under the box read recently:

"Groesbeck Raps State Officials Who Back Green" and "Explain Cement Plant Offer is Green's Demand."

MAGAZINE SUED FOR LIBEL

Suit for libel has been filed against Charles Scribner's Son, publishers of the magazine Architecture, and Albert C. Martin, a writer, by the Allied Architects Association of Los Angeles, seeking $150,000 damages. Mr. Martin in an article is said to have charged that the association resulted in extra costs to patrons and pointed to alleged mistakes in construction of buildings in Santa Barbara damaged by earthquake. The article is quoted as saying that "had this work been in the hands of competent architects, several lives would have been saved." The association, an organization of 69 architects, declares the article is false in its suit.

USING LINAGE AS A BUSINESS SEXTANT

Technic of Putting Monthly Newspaper Totals Into Comparable Status Over Many Years, with Variable Factors Eliminated, Explained by Engineer, Who Employs Running Graph

By HARRY MARSH

EDITOR & PUBLISHER has, for several years, been publishing the total linage of the 23 chief cities of the United States.

These statistics are full of valuable information if presented in the proper graphical form, and I have shown such a graph on the opposite page.

Absolute figures by themselves are never informative and even when compared with others, have variables involved that render them less comparable. Before proceeding further let me explain:

Statements are frequently published that "last month was the biggest ever experienced," etc., etc. If a business is growing there should always be a biggest month. But this same "biggest" month may be in a period of inflation or great activity, hence is not a true measure.

Then again, every business has seasonal conditions. Sleds are not sold in June nor tennis racquets in November. A low volume in one month may be just as normal as a much higher volume in another.

One frequently speaks of elderly persons as "quite well and active," yet their health is maintained by strict regime of diet and their activity very moderate—an old man's activity. We know he is just holding his own and approaching the day of complete failure. But, of a young man we may say he also is well and active, but for him it means a growing strength and power—every week sees him expanding and reaching out into bigger things with heavier responsibilities.

"Well and active." They mean entirely different things for two persons or two businesses.

The real estate business in Philadelphia may be active and healthy, yet nothing compared to the activity of Miami, so if we are to know if it is growing—still on the increase, and at what rate, we want first to determine the normal rate of growth. This may be represented by a sloping line—the angle of slope showing the rate.

Many statisticians use the method of least squares to develop this line. This was used in the graph described.

The procedure in this case was to first list down by months, beginning with January, 1914, the total linage of the twenty-three cities. This was carried through December, 1923. Begin at the middle (December, 1915-January, 1916) and number in both directions 1, 2, 3, etc., up to sixty months in each direction so that January, 1914 and December, 1923, are each number 60.

Now set in the fourth column the linage by the figure set opposite. For example—(January, 1914) 54,819, 520 x 60. Add all the first group (1914-1918) which is approximately 106,436,070,000 (1). Add all the second group (1919-1923) which is approximately 173,040,-300,000 (2). Subtract the first from the second group which leaves 66,604,230,000 (3).

Now set in the fourth column the square of the number you set up. In both directions so that January, 1914 has in this column $60 \times 60 = 3600$.

Add all these squares down to and including 1 to 60, and the sum is 73,510. Multiply this by 2 and divide into (3) above and we get 453,028 which is the monthly normal gain.

Now add all these total linages for the years 1914-1923 which sum divided by 120 (months) equals 76,416,020 average monthly linage. Now add half of the monthly gain to this figure which gives the normal for January, 1916, which is 76,642,534. Subtract half of the monthly gain from this average which gives the normal for December, 1915 which is 76,189,506.

Now go backward from December, 1915, and subtract the whole months normal gain each month from the preceeding figure and we get January, 1914 as 49,460,584. Go forward from January, 1916, and add the months normal gain to each successive month and you will get for December, 1923—103,371,186 which is normal linage for that month. You will find if you add these 120 months that the sum will equal the actual for that period (1914-1923). These normals if plotted as to time, would lie on a straight sloping line.

Business in advertising has its seasonal movements quite as regular as other businesses. So we cannot expect our month-to-month business to follow this regular upsloping line, even in normal times, but if we find out and correct for seasonal influence, we may then find its true position with respect to normal. This we will now explain. You have so far several columns of figures.

(1) month, (2) monthly data, (3) serial month, (4) Xy or data x serial number, (5) square of serial number, (6) normal. Divide each month's column 6 into column 2. This gives a ratio between the normal and actual figure. On a separate sheet headed with twelve columns, list all the Januarys, Februarys, etc., for these ten years. It will be found that all the figures in each monthly column lie fairly in a group size and that October runs much higher than August in ratios. This is due to seasonal influence and shows that we may always expect more than normal business in October and less than normal in August. Now average each column ratios and adjust so that the sum of all these twelve ratios equals 1,200. In this graph it is found that the seasonal corrective figures are:

January	96.8	July	87.9
February	87.5	August	85.4
March	107.0	September	98.9
April	109.3	October	110.0
May	108.5	November	104.5
June	101.5	December	102.7
			1,200.0

To repeat, this means that for January we may expect only 96.8% of the normal straight line figure; in October it is normal x 110.0%.

This graph does not show the normal as sloping. The normal is a horizontal line but has a constantly increasing value, i.e., 453,028 lines per month. The lines of the graph are ratios of this after the actual figures are corrected for normal growth and seasonal correction. For example, January, 1919. The normal is 76,642,534; the actual is 67,882,992. The seasonal correction for January is Then—for that month.

$$\frac{67,882,992}{76,642,534 \times 96.8} = 91.3\% =$$

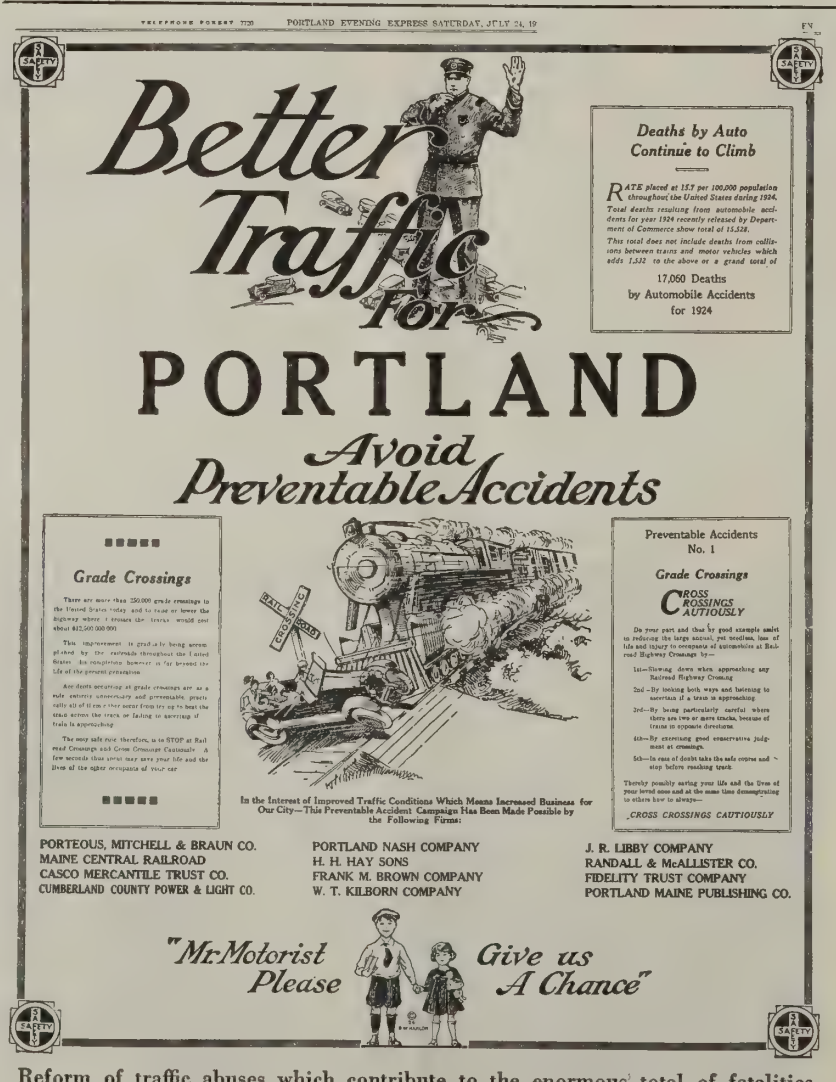
There is still one more thing to graphed. It is the moving an average. It is the average indexes, respect to normal, of the prece twelve months at the point sh Monthly figures may oscillate viole and yet the average for the year sh the trend. We are now ready to dis what the graph reveals.

Why all these tedious mathema calculations? To eliminate the kn conditions and get to the abnormal. know business is going forward at s rate in growth or decay; that it regular seasonal changes. Get these set them to one side, and then see w we have left. This remainder is to some irregular outside influence. may be economic, psychological, or evolution of method or habit. It however, a true reflection of the attit of the public mind toward this sub at this time. It is the duty of mana ment to measure this, to know its tr to see if it is a rising or falling tende whether it persists in either direction how far it swings due to some spe excitement. When management kn all these points, they are then ready make forecasts and shape their polici

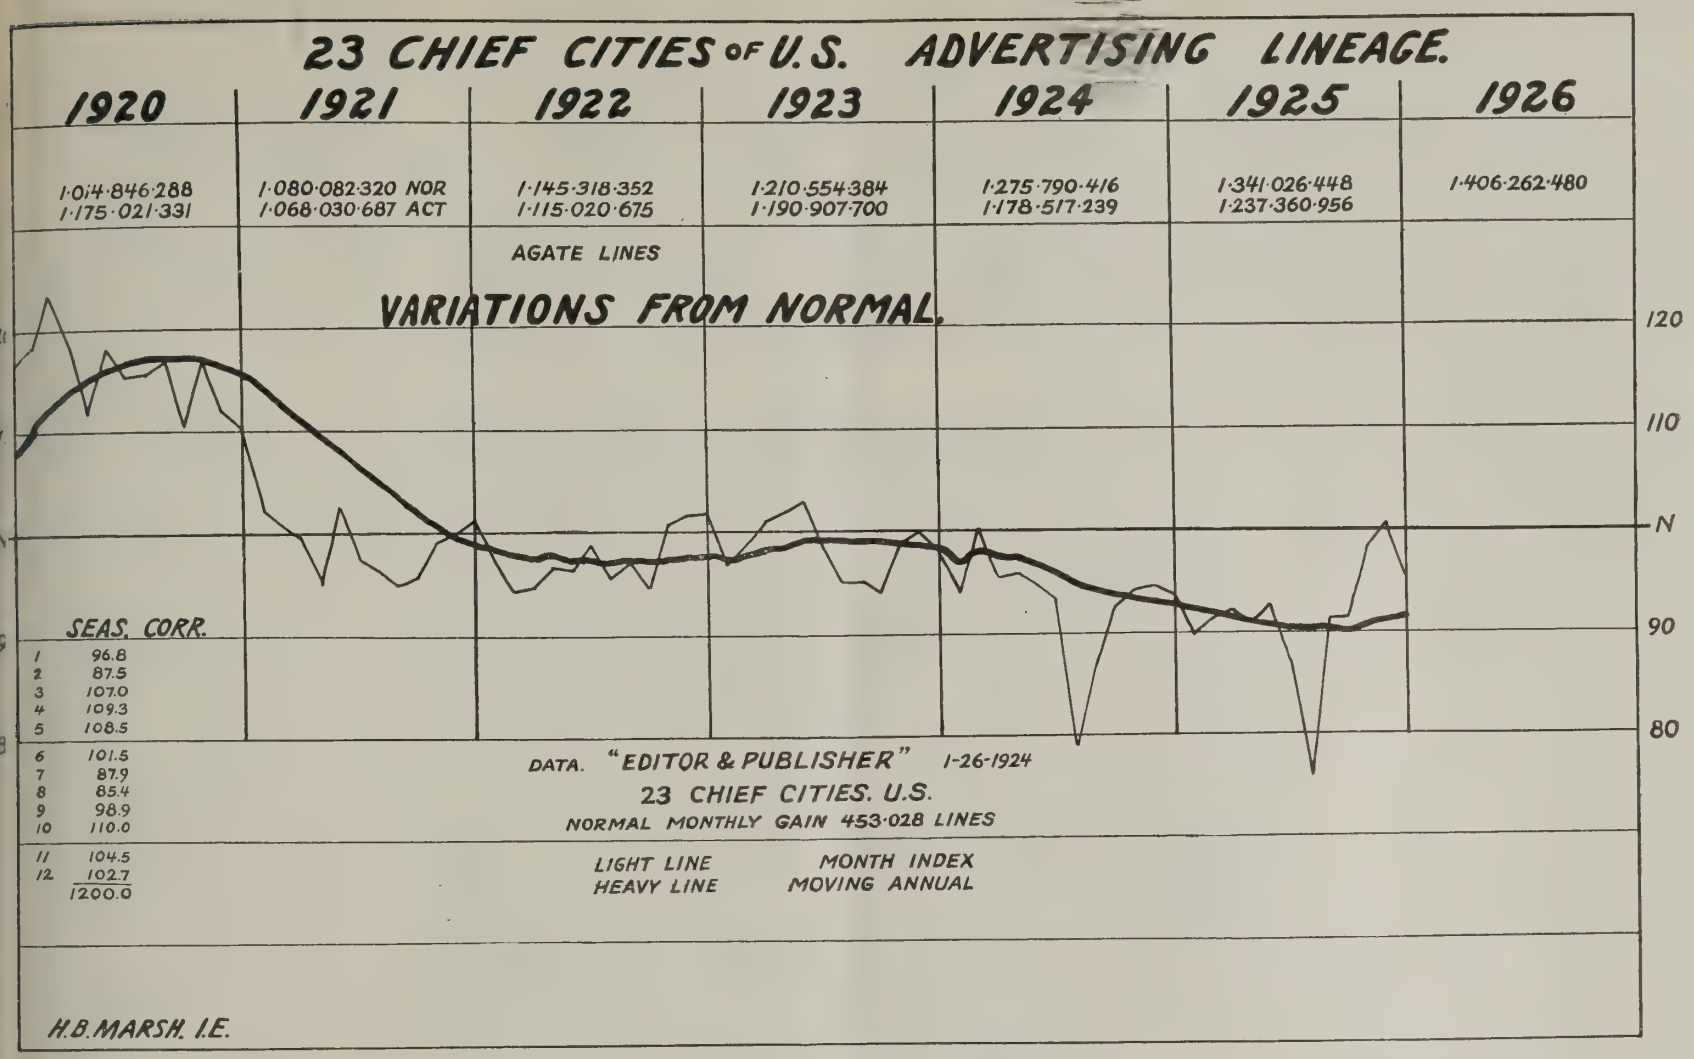
The world is at our front door t days. Any event of importance a where is known at once and the wo world reacts. Every event is measu for its effect on business. This is flected in this graph.

Business was booming in the Fall 1914. The World War broke out. stock exchange was closed and a fee of uncertainty prevailed. Europe cut off; nobody knew how much could export. Note these effects on graph.

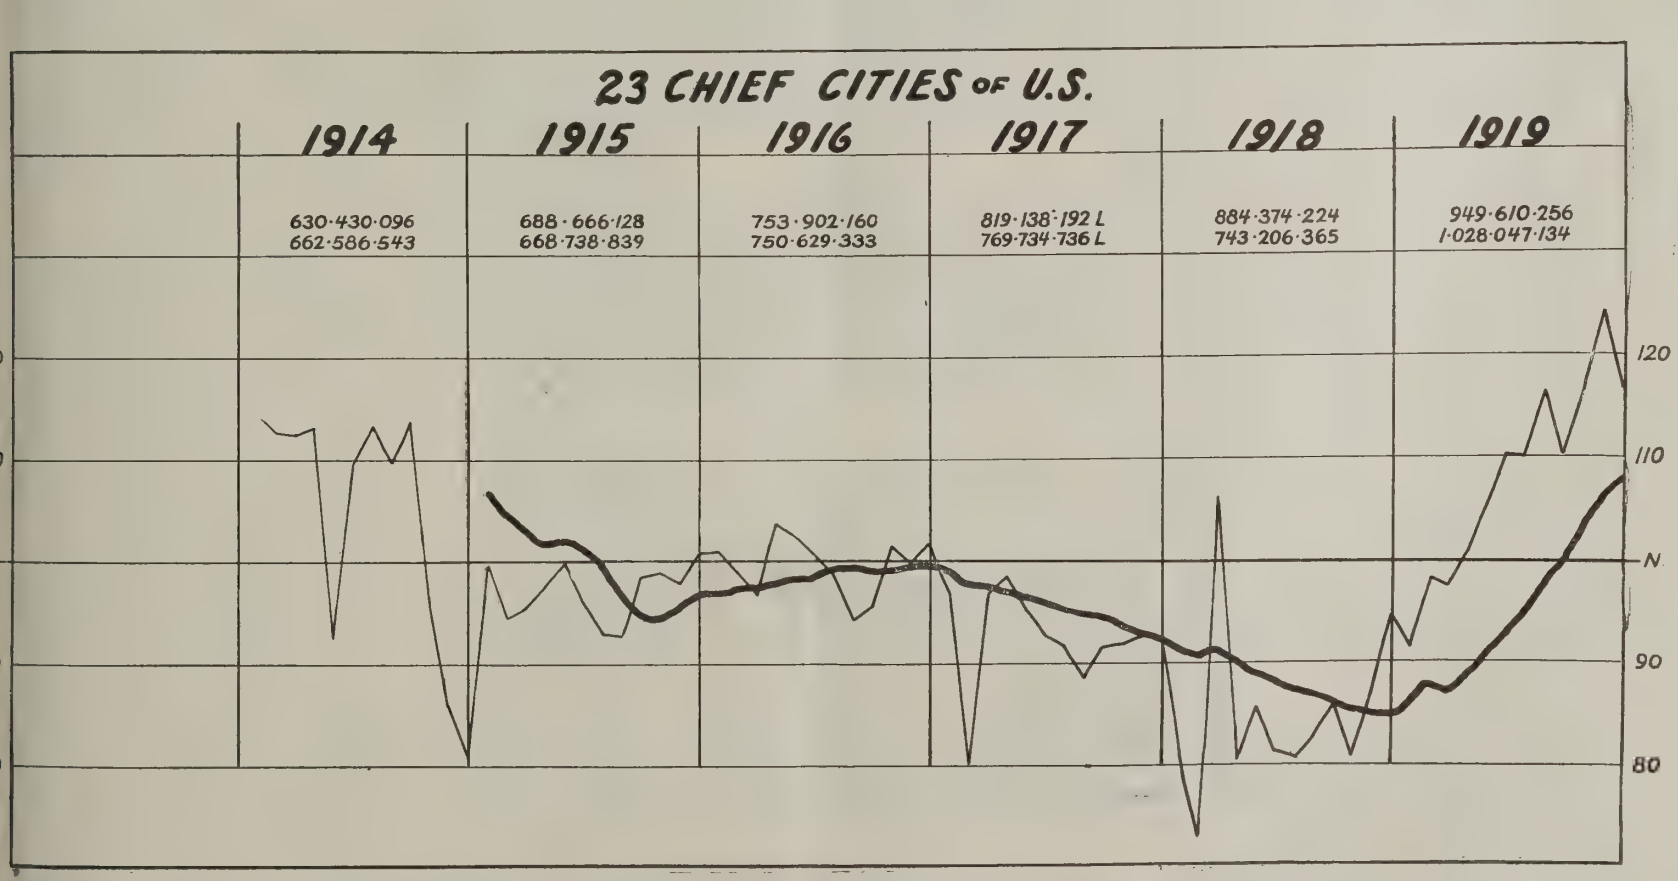


Then contracts began to pour Business was almost normal up to e 1917. Then the uncertainty. The R sian situation was depressing but attitude of the President caused a bound and we entered the war. T followed the conservation movement. dustry was booming—sales easy increasing values. Advertising for m ufacturers seemed unnecessary as sa man became pracifiers for delayed st ments rather than solicitors. The sh depression of February and the rebo of March was due to weather mos Then came the Armistice. See how started up. The manufacturers now came anxious about their neglected c tomers and went after them. Fede taxes led them to capitalize expenses building up good will through natio campaigns.

See how the graph climbs and clim Then in February, 1920, the Federal R serve Bank said "halt"! Pay off, cl up, look out for a storm!



How many heeded these signs? Br street's failure reports show that ma did not. Now see how the graph gins to droop. It goes below normal March and has never (average) b above it since. Merchants persisted buying hand-to-mouth; industry w marking time, and advertising drag along.



Somebody started an agitation for t ing an advertising vacation in July. T took root in 1924. In that year a f did so in August, but in 1925 they a little in June and came right ba in August for general business was fe ing better now. We see the last quar of 1925 almost normal. It has b 25 months since it was so favorat Note that the moving annual is turni up the first time in 35 months. believe it will continue to turn up.

PORTLAND PAPER ATTACKS TRAFFIC SINS

Reform of traffic abuses which contribute to the enormous total of fatalities in this class is the aim of a recent advertising and editorial compaign instituted by the Portland (Me.) Express and Sunday Telegram. The advertisements, paid for by 12 business firms of Portland, will appear over a period of six weeks and to date the editorial page has given vigorous treatment to the subject. Above is reproduced the first of the advertising series, which is copyrighted by R. W. Hanlon.

Above are two graphs prepared by Mr. Marsh from the linage data in EDITOR & PUBLISHER International Year Book, covering 107 newspapers in 23 important American cities. The significance of the several lines and their determination is explained on the opposite page.

Prior to the war, business took about seven years to go through a cycle, though there were smaller cycles in the big one. Building for example, moves in about a forty-two month cycle. Advertising seems to run closely to a seven year period, and if that persists, the next few months should show a constant trend upward.

This discussion so far refers to the twenty-three chief cities of the United States. What about your business? How did you move during these twelve years?

You can prepare your own graph, first for your city, then for your paper, by the process described above. Your growth and that of your city may be at a different rate than the group described here. This analysis will reveal that fact. Los Angeles for instance, has had the greatest growth and now shows the greatest linage per capita of any city. This is, no doubt, due to attracting the large floating population.

If you attempt to superimpose your graph on to this one, a different method must be used, but you can compare yours with this fairly close.

The flow of advertising in this graph is the composite of all. Your city may swing through cycles more violently and in shorter time. All this is easily determined through a further mathematical formula by which we produce a graph showing "standard deviations." In other words, all data is resolved to a common denominator and when so compared, is of great value to the management in forecasting their business.

The progressive manager no longer looks behind—but ahead; no longer moves by hunches—but by facts. Every classification of advertising may be further analyzed and by charts of this nature the future may be forecast with astonishing accuracy.

MERRY CIRCULATION WAR IN LOUISVILLE

A. B. C. Now Auditing Courier-Journal and Times and Herald-Post Following Claims Made by Latter Paper

Louisville's newspaper circulation war continues unabated.

The Audit Bureau of Circulations is now concluding an exhaustive analysis of the respective circulations of the Courier-Journal and Times and the Herald-Post following assertions of the latter publication that it has the largest bona fide "all-day" circulation of any Louisville newspaper. Among other representations made by the Herald-Post was one that its competitors contrived to have their agents and news-dealers "eat" thousands of papers that were included in circulation claims. This charge was denied by the Courier-Journal and Times and the Herald-Post was immediately challenged to publish the report made by A.B.C. on the completion of its audit.

The latest development in the situation is the refusal of the Courier-Journal and Times to submit to an independent audit sponsored by the Retail Merchants Association and proposed by the Herald-Post. A committee representing the merchants and consisting of Fred Levy, Walter I. Kohn and J. E. Pridday was named to supervise the audit. Emanuel Levi, vice-president and general manager of the Courier-Journal and Times, has just forarded a letter to the merchants association declining to meet the suggestion because, he declares, the A.B.C. audit should be conclusive and for the further reason that the local merchants have neither the facilities nor opportunity to conduct an audit of newspaper circulations. Mr. Levi's letter concludes:

"The Audit Bureau of Circulations is an organization directed and controlled by advertisers. Every member of the Retail Merchants Association should know how it functions. National advertising aggregating millions of dollars every year is placed with newspapers by advertising agencies solely on the strength of Audit Bureau of Circulations reports. It is the only agency of which we have any knowledge formed for the purpose of investigating and reporting on circulations. It is thoroughly and completely equipped to do this work. It is relied upon and trusted by advertising agencies and national advertisers, as well as local advertisers generally.

"Whenever a better agency for the determination of circulation facts is established we shall ask that agency to audit our circulations. If the Board or Director of the Retail Merchants Association is able to set up such an agency they will be welcome to audit our circulations. We shall do nothing, however, to interfere with the present audit being made by the Audit Bureau of Circulations. If the Board of Directors of the Retail Merchants Association desires to interrupt or interfere with that audit or investigation it must do so without the assistance of these papers."

CARTER SENDS MELONS

Ft. Worth Star-Telegram Publisher Shows How Big Texas Grows 'Em

Nestled in a galvanized iron washtub and swathed in yellow straw, a huge watermelon rolled into EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S office last week from Texas via the American Express. The melon, direct from Publisher, Amon G. Carter's farm was sent by the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

An accompanying letter from the "Hired Hand" of the Star-Telegram to James W. Brown declared "it isn't much of a melon, as melons go here in Texas, but being my friend, I didn't want you to strain yourself lifting a real melon out of a tub."

The letter, "dictated in the boiler room of the Fort Worth Star Telegram by the Hired Hand (Harold Hough, circulation manager), written, edited and spelled up-stairs," bore the motto: "Truth must be protected from abuse and overwork." It commented on the political situation in Texas:

"The results of this election is another evidence of Texas' generosity, wherein we traded two Governors for one. Still the big majority of folks down this way feel it was a real bargain. Jim has to stop picking plums and 'Ma' can resume canning peaches; we can ship melons, and Mr. Amon G. Carter can keep on hollering for Dan Moody and Texas."

Sending melons to publisher, advertiser and agency friends, is an annual custom of the Star-Telegram.

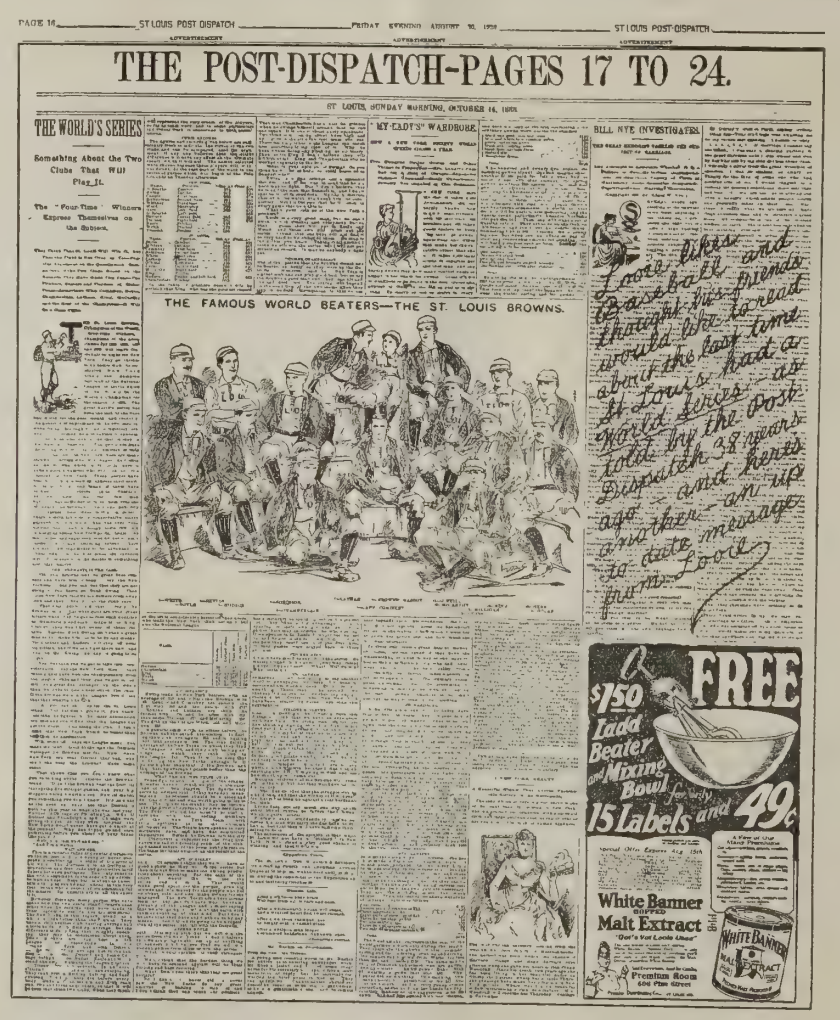
NEW WGN PLANT

Work on the Chicago Tribune's home for the transmitting set of its radio station, WGN, was begun recently, and the first programs will be sent out from the new plant in October. It is located on Illinois State Road No. 5 between Chicago and Elgin. In addition to the rooms for the transmitting set proper, power plant, and workshop, the building also contains a small studio, living quarters for engineers and operators and a garage. In the center of the building between the operating room and the studio, the Tribune is establishing a branch of public service office.

NEW PRESS GROUP

North Louisiana Association Names Faulk President

With election of Clarence E. Faulk, publisher of the Monroe (La.) News-Star, as president, the North Louisiana Press Association went into permanent organization at a meeting held in Minden recently. David W. Thomas of Ruston, was elected vice-president and Isaac Chapman of Minden was chosen as secretary-treasurer.



Monroe was selected as the place of the next meeting, which will be held in February. A constitution and by-laws were adopted.

The association went on record in opposition to government competition in printing and publication work, and resolutions to this effect were authorized to be sent to Louisiana representatives in Congress.

TO BUILD NEW PLANT

The Hartsdale (N. Y.) Herald, weekly tabloid, has purchased a 100-foot plot on Hartsdale Road at Columbia avenue, upon which a new newspaper plant will be erected. The present home of the paper was recently sold by G. Harris Danzberger, publisher.

EDITORIAL CALLS ADVERTISER'S COPY "MOST INTERESTING FEATURE"

PAGE 16 ST LOUIS POST-DISPATCH FRIDAY EVENING AUGUST 10, 1888 ST LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

THE POST-DISPATCH—PAGES 17 TO 24.

ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 14, 1888.

THE WORLD'S SERIES

Something About the Two Clubs That Will Play It.

The "Four-Time" Winners Express Themselves on the Subject.

MY LADY'S WARDROBE.

BILL NYE INVESTIGATES

THE FAMOUS WORLD BEATERS—THE ST. LOUIS BROWNS.

I love baseball and thought my friends would like to read about the last time St. Louis had a world series—as told by the Post-Dispatch 38 years ago—and here another—an up-to-date message from Ford.

FREE

$1.50 Ladd Beater and Mixing Bowl for only 15 Labels and 49c

White Banner Cured Malt Extract "Don't You Look Good"

Premium Room 606 Pine Street

"WITH all due respect to the news columns, the Letters from the People, Just a Minute and the other departments of this diversified daily, we submit that the most interesting thing in yesterday's Post-Dispatch was the work of an advertiser—the reproduction of a page of this newspaper for October 14, 1888."

This unusual recognition of an interesting advertisement is contained in an editorial in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch of Aug 21. The advertisement referred to includes the story of the fight of the St. Louis Browns, in 1888 four-time winners of the Association pennant for the world series against New York.

The advertisement with its reproduction of the Post-Dispatch story of 1888 was especially timely in view of the fact that the St. Louis Cardinals are now fighting for the National League pennant, with the prospect that St. Louis may win its first pennant since that year.

The advertiser was the Premier Malt Products Company, manufacturers of White Banner Malt Extract, whose advertising matter appeared only on the last two of the seven columns of the reproduced page.

The advertisement was also commented on by J. E. Wray, sporting editor of the Post-Dispatch. The copy also appeared in the St. Louis Times.

AD CLUBS BUILDIN BUSINESS CONFIDENCE

President Woodbridge of I. A. A. Te Effect That Group Is Having On Trade—Asks Support of Business Interests

The 250 Advertising Clubs which co stitute the International Advertisin Association are creating business co fidence in all the 14 countries in whic they are located, C. King Woodbridg president of the Association, declared th week.

Mr. Woodbridge recently returne from a trip which entailed months c continuous traveling, and carried him t London, Paris, Holland, Belgium an Switzerland, and, following the I. A. A convention in Philadelphia in June, ot to the Pacific Coast and to many of th large cities of the Middle West.

"The work of the International Ad vertising Association has resolved itsel into a clearing house for the Advertisin Clubs and the advertising business or ganizations of the entire world," he sai "The record of all that is best in adver tising and merchandising practice, n matter in what obscure or distant clu it may have its inception, finds lodge ment in the central agency, and fror here is passed along throughout the entir membership of over 30,000 business an advertising builders. Not alone does th Association help to organize Advertisin Clubs which not only increase advertis ing, but which invariably strive for bette advertising; it aids these clubs to solv their problems.

"Not only the writers of advertisin —the professional advertising men— derive direct benefits from the educa tional work in advertising which ha done so much for the expansion o business. The business man who use advertising has benefited greatly fron our work by learning from our club what other business men are doing an by keeping abreast of the best and mos efficient practices—gained from actua experience—in the use of newspaper, out door, direct mail magazine, and othe forms of advertising, whether nationa or local.

"I doubt if there has ever been de vised a more potent machine for th building of bigger and better advertisin that the Speakers' Bureau of our Asso ciation for the past year under th chairmanship of E. D. Gibbs of th National Cash Register Company, Day ton. Under the leadership of Mr. Gibbs more than one thousand of the leadin sales and advertising managers and bi business executives have been sendin to our national headquarters, the new of advertising which they garner on thei travels about the country. These me are glad to co-operate with the Asso ciation and to carry their educational messages in the form of speeches before the Advertising Clubs in the many towns in which their business carries them.

"That the newspapers of the nation have cause to be grateful to the constant campaign of the International Advertising Association should be evident from the constant work done through the clubs and through the Speakers' Bureau, to educate merchants as to the value of newspaper space and the best and most profitable way in which to use it.

"Thus it is that broadly speaking, the intensive work of the International Advertising Association is resulting in making two advertisers grow where only one grew before, and because we have faith in our fundamental belief that the prosperity of our merchants, the tremendous growth of our publications, the constantly increasing scale of wages, the ever-rising standards of living—all these are largely due to advertising—we see in the International Advertising Association, that great clearing house of all that is best and most eminently practical in advertising practice, an organization that deserves and should have the support of the business interests of the world."

Pictures Tell the Story Better in Detroit Sunday News Rotogravure

Every member of the family is susceptible to the irresistible appeal of pictures thus multiplying results for advertisers.

Twelve years ago The Detroit News introduced the first rotogravure section in Michigan. The News Sunday circulation at that time was 114,000. Within two years it reached 173,000. In 1918, the rotogravure section was doubled in size and circulation continued to increase. The latest A. B. C. statement shows more than 333,000. The Sunday News rotogravure is now never less than eight pages, frequently twelve and sixteen, so popular has it become with advertisers. They have been quick to see that rotogravure, having such a marked effect on circulation, must also be an excellent advertising medium.

ROTOGRAVURE ADVERTISING FIRST SIX MONTHS, 1926

DETROIT NEWS	220,570 Lines
Only Competitor	131,866 Lines
News Lead	88,704 Lines

The Detroit News

Detroit's HOME Newspaper

333,000 Sunday Circulation 320,000 Week Days

PATERSON (N. J.) CALL NOW BUILDING NEW, MODERN THREE-STORY PLANT

By JAMES GABELLE

Architect's drawing of Paterson Call building

THE Paterson (N. J.) Morning Call though 50 years old is as young as the morning that forms part of its name.

The Call is now erecting a new home on Church street, near Market street. It will be three stories and a basement, 50 by 100 feet, with a vault in the basement extending under the sidewalk, making the basement 135 feet in length.

The Church street front of the building will be of Colonial design of pure white Vermont marble and red brick.

The first floor will be at sidewalk grade and will be used for business and administrative purposes. There will be a large reception space with counter and general offices toward the rear.

The second floor will be devoted to editorial rooms and stereotyping department.

On the third floor will be the composing room. The press will be located in the basement which will also house the paper supply. Here also will be the boiler room, locker room, a room for baling waste paper, machine shop and other auxiliary quarters. The architect of the structure is C. H. Benjamin, the builders, John W. Ferguson Company of Paterson.

So many papers when they have reached that mature age are content to sit back and slumber in dignity and aloofness from the community from which they draw their life. Not so the Call. It is ever seeking some new way of serving its constituency.

Recently it inaugurated an art exhibit of the high schools in the city. This was opened in the public library, in the room devoted ordinarily to the board of trustees. It was an unqualified success. It was only planned to have it open a week. The time had to be extended to cover two weeks and the exhibit was open nights as well as days.

A large number of sales of sketches, craftwork, etc., were made at prices which pleased both seller and purchaser. This exhibit has been so successful that it is to be made a permanent feature. The co-operation of pupils and faculty to make this project a success was one of the most gratifying features of this event.

The art exhibit was the outgrowth of an art and literary contest staged by the paper. Each month prizes presented by the public spirited citizens of Paterson and men in public life were presented to the students sending in the best selections in art, essays, poems, or other forms of literary endeavor. The winning selections in literature were printed in either the column or the book page maintained by the writer. The best art selections were photographed and used as illustrations from time to time on the book page. This proved a splendid stimulus. It gained the good will of the student body of the high schools and the faculties were delighted.

Through the courtesy of Richard O'Dea, proprietor of the Temple of Music, and WODA broadcasting station, the prize winners in literary subjects were given an opportunity to broadcast their efforts. This was varied with musical selections. This proved popular and it gave the pupils their first opportunity to appear before the microphone.

It was not only popular with the student body, it was enormously popular with parents, relatives and friends of the students. Little radio parties were formed. Neighbors were invited in to hear son or daughter read, or play. Telephone calls and telegrams attested the appreciation that this feature received. This form of activity has ceased for the summer but will be started again this fall.

A feature believed unique in newspaperdom is the Call Dramatic club. Many metropolitan newspapers have dramatic clubs, formed for pleasure or profit of the members. The Call Dramatic club, on the contrary, was formed for the purpose of aiding small churches with no dramatic clubs of their own, philanthropic societies, and to bring brightness and cheer to convalescents in hospitals. It is a pure labor of love. No one gets any salary. There is no charge for these services and the welcome the novel idea has received shows that its altruistic aim is appreciated.

The club is divided into four sections. The boys' division or section named after Edwin Booth, the girls' section, named after Charlotte Cushman. —the two members of the dramatic profession in the Hall of Fame. The third section, named after MacDowell, the great composer, is composed of musicians, both vocal and instrumental, dancers and those gifted in various lines of endeavor. This feature has won wide favor. So far as known the Call is the only newspaper that gives this form of service.

RUSHING TRIBUNE ADDITION

New $1,000,000 North Wing of Chicago Daily to Be Ready in October

Construction work on the new north wing of the Chicago Tribune tower is going forward rapidly and it is estimated that the addition will be completed in October. The building will cost approximately $1,000,000 and will consist of three basements and a pressroom floor, the temporary roof to be level with the upper driveway of Michigan avenue. It will be 118 feet wide on Michigan avenue by 132 feet deep on the side street, Illinois street. Twenty new press units will be installed in the new building which will make 80 units in all and materially increase the output of the present equipment.

EASTMAN ESTATE APPRAISED

An inventory of the estate of John C. Eastman, late publisher and owner of the Chicago Daily Journal, was recently approved. It fixes the value of the estate at approximately $1,000,000. It consists of 2,500 shares capital stock of the Chicago Daily Journal, $250,000; bonds of the Chicago Daily Journal, $245,000; notes, $270,750; and a half ownership of the lease of the Chicago Daily Journal building.

SUPREME COURT HEARS DALE CASE SEPT. 27

Muncie Editor's Appeal from Contempt Sentence to Be Heard by Highest U. S. Tribunal on That Date

George R. Dale, editor of the Muncie (Ind.) Post-Democrat, on Sept. 27, will make his stand before the United States Supreme Court in an effort to escape a 90-day sentence and obtain a reversal of the Indiana Supreme Court's holding that his paper's attack on justice as dispensed in his county, "even though the truth," constituted contempt of court.

Arthur L. Gilliom, Indiana attorney general, was directed in a formal citation by Chief Justice David A. Myers of the state court, to appear before the court in Washington on that date to show cause why the decision against Dale should not be reversed.

A fund raised by the New York World and the Civil Liberties Union are aiding the Hoosier editor in his legal fight.

DAVID OPENS CHICAGO OFFICE

The George B. David Company, publishers' representatives, on Sept. 1, will open their own offices in Chicago at 1900 Wrigley Building. Gerald A. Carew has been appointed manager of the Chicago office. Carew has been associated with Story, Brooks & Finley in their Eastern offices for the past seven years. Prior to this he served in the World War with the U. S. Marines.

The Port of Jacksonville Leads the State in Imports . . .

United States records for April show that the metropolis of Florida leads the meritorious state with imported merchandise valued at $1,041,513. The steady conservative growth of Jacksonville's imports is due to its strategic location and its magnificent port.

With enviable pride, the Florida Times-Union leads all other state publications in circulation. No matter what space you use to tell your story, your advertising on the pages of this newspaper will prove a profitable investment.

The Florida Times-Union

JACKSONVILLE

Valuations of Imports for the state of Florida amounted to $2,447,800

The Baltimore Post and The Washington News are five-column newspapers. Call them "tabloid" if you wish but do not call them "picture-papers." They are Scripps-Howard NEWSpapers.

Represented by ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC., 250 Park Avenue, New York

KANSAS CITY STAR OFFICE ADVERTISING SCHEDULED AND PAID FOR

Extraordinary Results of Paper's Campaign for Benefit of Motor Car Dealers Led It to Use Own Space Regularly for Itself

By B. S. BROWN

(Written Exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

THE Kansas City Star has been scheduling its own advertising in its own pages, since February, 1926, as consistently and perseveringly as it counsels users of its space to schedule their advertising. The copy is as carefully prepared as that for any other medium, and they are numerous, in which the Star buys space—for it "buys" space in its own paper, the linage being charged against the advertising department.

This is said to be an innovation in newspaper procedure with reference to "office" advertising. Many newspapers buy syndicate display copy, to be used in their own columns to promote business for their advertisers or for their advertising columns, including classified promotion, promotion of real estate, motor car, furniture and other interests among readers. Previous to February, 1926, the Star had followed the usual practice, inserting such copy when space seemed available, which was ordinarily seldom in view of the crowded condition of the newspaper columns. The advertising department had to "fight for its space."

A substantial amount of Star advertising is now inserted every day, on regular routine, the advertising department preparing its copy and outlining its program as for an outside medium, and sending its copy and orders which have exactly the same compulsory character as orders on any other paid advertising. Indeed, paid advertising is sometimes omitted, while the Star's copy inevitably appears.

The initiative for this regular program came in connection with a study of automobile advertising. The motor car dealers in Kansas City answered representatives, as usual, with the alibi that if they could get rid of used cars, they could handle and offer, and advertise, more new cars. Many various efforts had been made in Kansas City to bring about some co-operative program among dealers, to clear the used cars out of the market. No suggestion met with any general favor. Most dealers regarded the used car category as a perpetual "problem," a sore spot that had to be nursed but never "cured"; for which no medicine of advertising, beyond the usual classified offers, could be effective.

The Star men, however, were not so sure that advertising could not help the situation. There was no chance to develop a co-operative advertising campaign by the dealers; yet a campaign was "indicated" by the diagnosis. The sort of campaign that the Star would have sold or at least offered to the dealers, would have been a steady, strong, vigorous pull over a long period. Such a pull would get the used cars moving, would release resources for purchase of new cars, would free the floors both for cars and for sales effort on new cars. The Star's representatives studied the situation with the secretary of the Kansas City Motor Car Dealers' Association; and were sure that a campaign would do the work, and that dealers would be in a position to use the larger space of the display columns for the purpose of exploiting new cars.

All this study took place at a time when the prospects for a wheat crop were exceptionally good. The culmination came at a time when both wheat and corn were demonstrating a record result.

The Star was looking far ahead; promising itself and the car dealers a big potential buying capacity for the summer and fall.

So, the Star, finding nobody else to pay for the advertising campaign to open the way for new car exploitation, ran the advertising itself. Since it was planning a real campaign, for a definite purpose, the copy was carefully prepared, adapted or rewritten from the syndicate copy, or devised entirely in the office. And a program for appearance of the advertising was laid out.

Every alternate Sunday there was to be a full page or four columns, promoting motor car interest, especially in used cars.

Every weekday there was to be an advertisement. On alternate days the motor car advertisement occupied "island" position on the second page, four inches single column. On the other weekdays, four inches double column were used on an inside page.

The advertising has been credited, by the motor car dealers, with at least part of the unexpectedly good volume of motor car sales, especially of used cars, this spring and summer. At first they had regarded the advertising skeptically; since "you can't sell cars when nobody wants to buy them." When the results began to show rather plainly that "something was happening," they became more interested. This interest advanced to the stage where the secretary of the association was able to bring them into co-operation for a "Used Car Week," beginning July 11.

The dealers spent additional money for advertising, several taking sufficient space for a "double truck," on the opening day of the special week. The dealers also took special care in conditioning cars, and in pricing them attractively. They also were asked to, and many did, dress their used car display rooms.

The Star paid for the special advertising. It ran special display every day, both previous to the week and during the sale, as much as half a page at a time, urging the public to take advantage of the used car week opportunity.

Used cars did sell; the result was a gain of more than 30 per cent in the volume; nothing remarkable, but eye-opening to the dealers—and gratifying to everybody in that much additional clearance of used cars, on top of the steady clearance of previous weeks.

The Star is not claiming any definite result for itself from this used car campaign. However, the newspaper's classified advertising gained 70,000 lines in May, when its campaign had been brought to full speed; and 40,000 lines were gained in June. The display space sold by the Star is said to have gained largely, especially in new car advertising, though figures are not available.

The Star is giving to real estate the same scheduled, consistent support that it has given to motor cars. The real estate exploitation is run alternately with the motor car displays on Sundays and on weekdays.

The program of scheduled "office" advertising includes other sorts of copy to promote attention to the classified columns; so that every day the island position on second page, sold to no other advertiser, carries real estate, motor car, or other exploitation, in both the morning and the evening editions.

The program has had also this effect: That the salesmen of space can speak more confidently to advertisers, of consistent, regular advertising, since the newspaper follows such schedules itself.

RECEIVER SUIT DISMISSED

The suit recently instituted by W. B. Kent asking for a receiver for the Hillsboro (O.) Gazette has been settled and dismissed.

PUBLISHERS ARRESTED IN LIBEL SUIT

Hagaman Lakewood (N. J.) Citizen and Pettit, Lakewood Free Press, Held in $500 Bail on Charges of Delaware Man Charged by William T. Mather of Drexel Hill, Del., with having published libellous articles about him, Harry T. Hagaman, publisher of the Lakewood (N. J.) Citizen, and Ray Pettit, publisher of the Lakewood Free Press were held in $500 bail each for the Ocean County Grand Jury by Justice of the Peace James H. Bennett at Point Pleasant, N. J., Aug. 21.

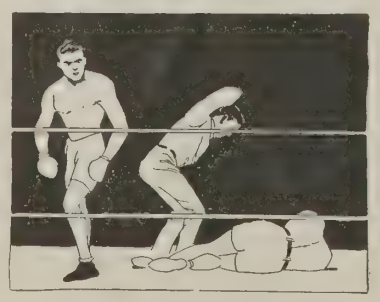
William H. Woolley, of Lakewood, a contractor, was held in similar bail on a charge that he had caused a letter to be published in the Free Press.

Complaints against the publishers did not state the nature of the alleged libellous articles. The letter said to have been written by Mr. Woolley was not described. Mather swore to the complaints on Aug. 13.



Counsel for the defendants refused to permit them to plead either way to the charges, declaring in his opinion the court had no right to hold the three because no evidence had been submitted and the complainant was not present.

Mather at one time was engaged in the clothing business in Lakewood.

CLAIMS LIBEL, ASKS $5,000

Libel suit for $5,000 damages has been instituted against the Emmetsburg (Ia.) Democrat by Dwight G. McCarthy, defeated in the Republican primaries by William E. Saunders, for state representative. The alleged libel is based upon articles which appeared in the Democrat, McCarthy says, after the election and before the outcome of the primary was decided.

"THE BIGGEST MOMENT OF MY BIGGEST FIGHT"

Told by 54 Great Ring Stars.

Each Article Actually Written and Signed by a Big Fighter.

Wire your order in early to

LEDGER SYNDICATE

INDEPENDENCE SQUARE PHILADELPHIA, PA.

CERTIFIED DRY MATS CERTIFIED

CONGRATULATIONS!

to the

Richmond News Leader

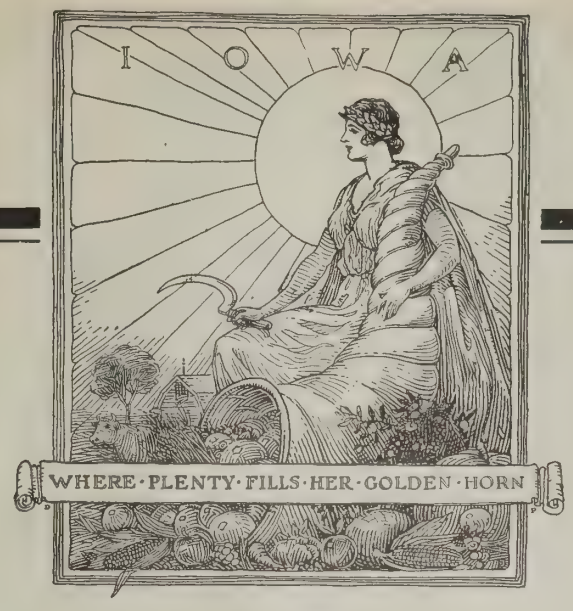
With 30 years of accomplishment in back of it the Richmond News Leader is an accepted force for good in its community.

More power to you, Mr. John Stewart Bryan and your associates, and our sincerest wishes for your continued success.

While the News Leader has been printed from Certified dry mat stereotypes for only a comparatively short time, we hope that it will be our privilege to serve you for many years to come.

Our congratulations upon this, your 30th Anniversary, and our wish that you may have many more of them.

Certified Dry Mat Corporation



340 Madison Avenue New York, N. Y.

for wet mat printing with DRY MAT facility—use Certifieds

Made in the U. S. A.

CERTIFIED DRY MATS CERTIFIED

Deal with these 28 Iowa Daily newspapers as with one publication. Thorough coverage of the state. Uniform marketing co-operation through the "Iowa plan."

Another Score for Iowa

In Iowa there are 217 telephones for every thousand people. This is the highest proportion of any state in the union—67% above the nation's average. Authority—U.S. Census of Electrical Industries—1922.

Iowa has more telephones than all the countries of South America combined.

Iowa's telephones exceed those of the combined nations of Austria, Belgium, Spain and Greece.

What does this signify? Just one more indication of the relatively high living standard of Iowa people.

By any measure you choose, these people are unusually good prospects for your goods.

Iowa's taxable wealth per capita is 51% above the nation's average.

In average education, these people also rank high. The percentage of Iowans 18 years old who have finished a four year high school course is twice that of the nation at large.

Iowa has lower percentage of illiteracy than any other state in the union.

These 28 leading Iowa daily newspapers present the direct, quick way to reach this wonderful market, for practically every family in the state reads one of these papers every day.

Rates and full details of our marketing help will be sent upon request.

THE IOWA DAILY PRESS ASSOCIATION

DAVENPORT, IOWA

Ames Tribune
Boone News-Republican
Burlington Gazette
Burlington Hawk-Eye
Cedar Falls Record
Cedar Rapids Gazette
Centerville Iowegian & Citizen
Council Bluffs Nonpareil
Davenport Democrat
Davenport Times
Des Moines Capital
Des Moines Register and Tribune
Dubuque Telegraph-Herald
Dubuque Times-Journal
Fort Dodge Messenger
Fort Madison Democrat
Iowa City Press-Citizen
Keokuk Gate-City
Marshalltown Times Republican
Mason City Globe-Gazette
Muscatine Journal
Oelwein Register
Ottumwa Courier
Sioux City Journal
Sioux City Tribune
Washington Journal
Waterloo Evening Courier
Waterloo Tribune

IOWA—WHERE EVERY FAMILY READS A DAILY NEWSPAPER

John C. Martin and Cyrus H. K. Curtis

COOLIDGE FLASH TO OPEN N. Y. EVENING POST PLANT

(Continued from page 3)

brains on the third floor front, has every essential for speed. And Mr. Curtis has built for the future.

The pressroom on the ground floor with a reel room in a sub-basement is laid out for 44 press units, although only 12 units are now installed. The 44 units will allow for 14 sextuples, 11 octuples, or eight decuples.

The present row of 12 new Scott units, built to run in any combination, is capable of producing 120,000 24-page papers an hour, or 90,000 32-page papers. They are operated under the General Electric control.

"Mr. Curtis and Mr. Martin have left nothing undone to get the best and latest in mechanical equipment," Joseph Clapham, mechanical superintendent tells the visitor.

The Post will use both dry and wet mats, although it may go to dry mats exclusively after experimentation. But meanwhile, using Scott and Hoe matrix rolling machines, dry mats are confined to stock table pages, and steam tables are being installed to make wet mats.

The reel room in the sub-basement is capable of holding a month's supply of newsprint in storage. Here again the future has been considered. When other presses are installed, paper will be stored in a building across the street, already purchased for the purpose.

Delivery room speed is obtained by propinquity to the presses. At present no automatic conveyors will be needed to carry papers to the bundling tables. Straight from the presses they can be tossed through four windows in a steel partition into the tyers' hands. Six trucks can back into a recessed loading platform off Carlisle street. The delivery room looks small, but it is estimated that with the present row of presses 300,000 copies a day could be handled there easily.

The intake end of this news machine is equally geared for speed. Ralph Nicholson, production manager, terms the news-routing system "straight-line progressive production." The editorial room lies across the entire West street front, on the second floor. It is a well-lighted factory like room, centering around the desk of Ralph Renaud, managing editor. Vincent Byers, city editor, has devised what might be called the "H" arrangement for speeding rewrite. Desks of the city editor and his assistnat placed back to back form the cross bar of the H, while at each end three desks side by side complete the letter.

Pneumatic tubes from the universal copy desk and from a financial copy desk run straight east through the building to the copy-cutter's desk in the center of the composing room. It is this room that is most impressive as far as fast production is concerned. Splendidly lighted by sky-lights and windows, a battery of 40 new linotype machines take up the entire left half of the room; the right is given over to stones, each illuminated by rows of six green-shaded electric bulbs.

A new signal system has been installed for notifying machinists when the linotypes are out of order. All machines are numbered. When trouble occurs, the operator throws a switch and the number is flashed on a board suspended near the ceiling and visible from all quarters of the room.

On a raised railed platform close to the copy cutters is the desk of William Kistler, composing room superintendent. Desks of the proof readers are also on the right side of the composing room, entering from the news room, the designers considering that their proximity would make for speed. The floor of the composing room is narrow-strip hard maple laid over a special composition.

The eastern end of the composing room it taken over without partition by the foundry. Here are installed six steam tables, two matrix rollers, and two double Junior Autoplate machines. Gas is used for heating. An apparently successful effort has been made to cut down temperature in the foundry. All outlets of the metal pots are heavily insulated and the pots are tightly covered.

Close to the foundry is the stock ticker room. The Evening Post makes much of its Wall street edition and seconds count in its preparation. The new arrangement is expected to slice at least two minutes, from the record of 10½ minutes of reaching the street after closing of the stock exchange. It is also thought a minute will be saved in reaching the corner of Wall street and Broadway, where this edition has its biggest sale.

Continuing the straight-line progressive system the finished plates move a few steps from the foundry to the eastern wall where they are carried by elevators down two flights to the pressroom.

One enters the new Evening Po building either at Washington or We street, a long corridor running throu the entire block. Eight elevators ope ing into this corridor serve the seve teen floors of offices. The main entran is on West street.

Turning to the left on entering a mounting a few steps one enters t newspaper's business office, a light a room, about 25 feet high. Nearest t door is the detail desk of the advertisi receiving department. The cashier's ca is opposite. The remainder of the roc is given over to the advertising depa ment, with the desk of the advertisi manager, Harry Brown, in the far co ner. On the same floor are the pr vate offices of C. C. Lane, business ma ager, and Mr. Nicholson, productio manager, and also the accounting depa ment.

Headquarters of the circulation depa ment are on the mezzanine, where a also the photographic and art depa ments and the offices of the graphic ed tor, the Saturday Literary Review, a the Evening Post Syndicate. In the re of the mezzanine are rooms for stora of back issues, locker rooms for m chanics, lavatories and shower baths.

In keeping with the so-called prese "picture age," the Post has paid pa ticular attention to designing its phot graphic laboratory. It consists of fo dark rooms, two retouching rooms, a light-proof storerooms. Partitions a so set they can be removed for possib later expansion.

Space on the third floor occupied the newspaper is confined to a large sui of rooms set aside for the Evening Po Statistical Department and to the pr vate offices of Mr. Curtis, Mr. Mart and Mr. Mason. These private offic are on the West street side, affording excellent view of the Hudson river a the harbor.

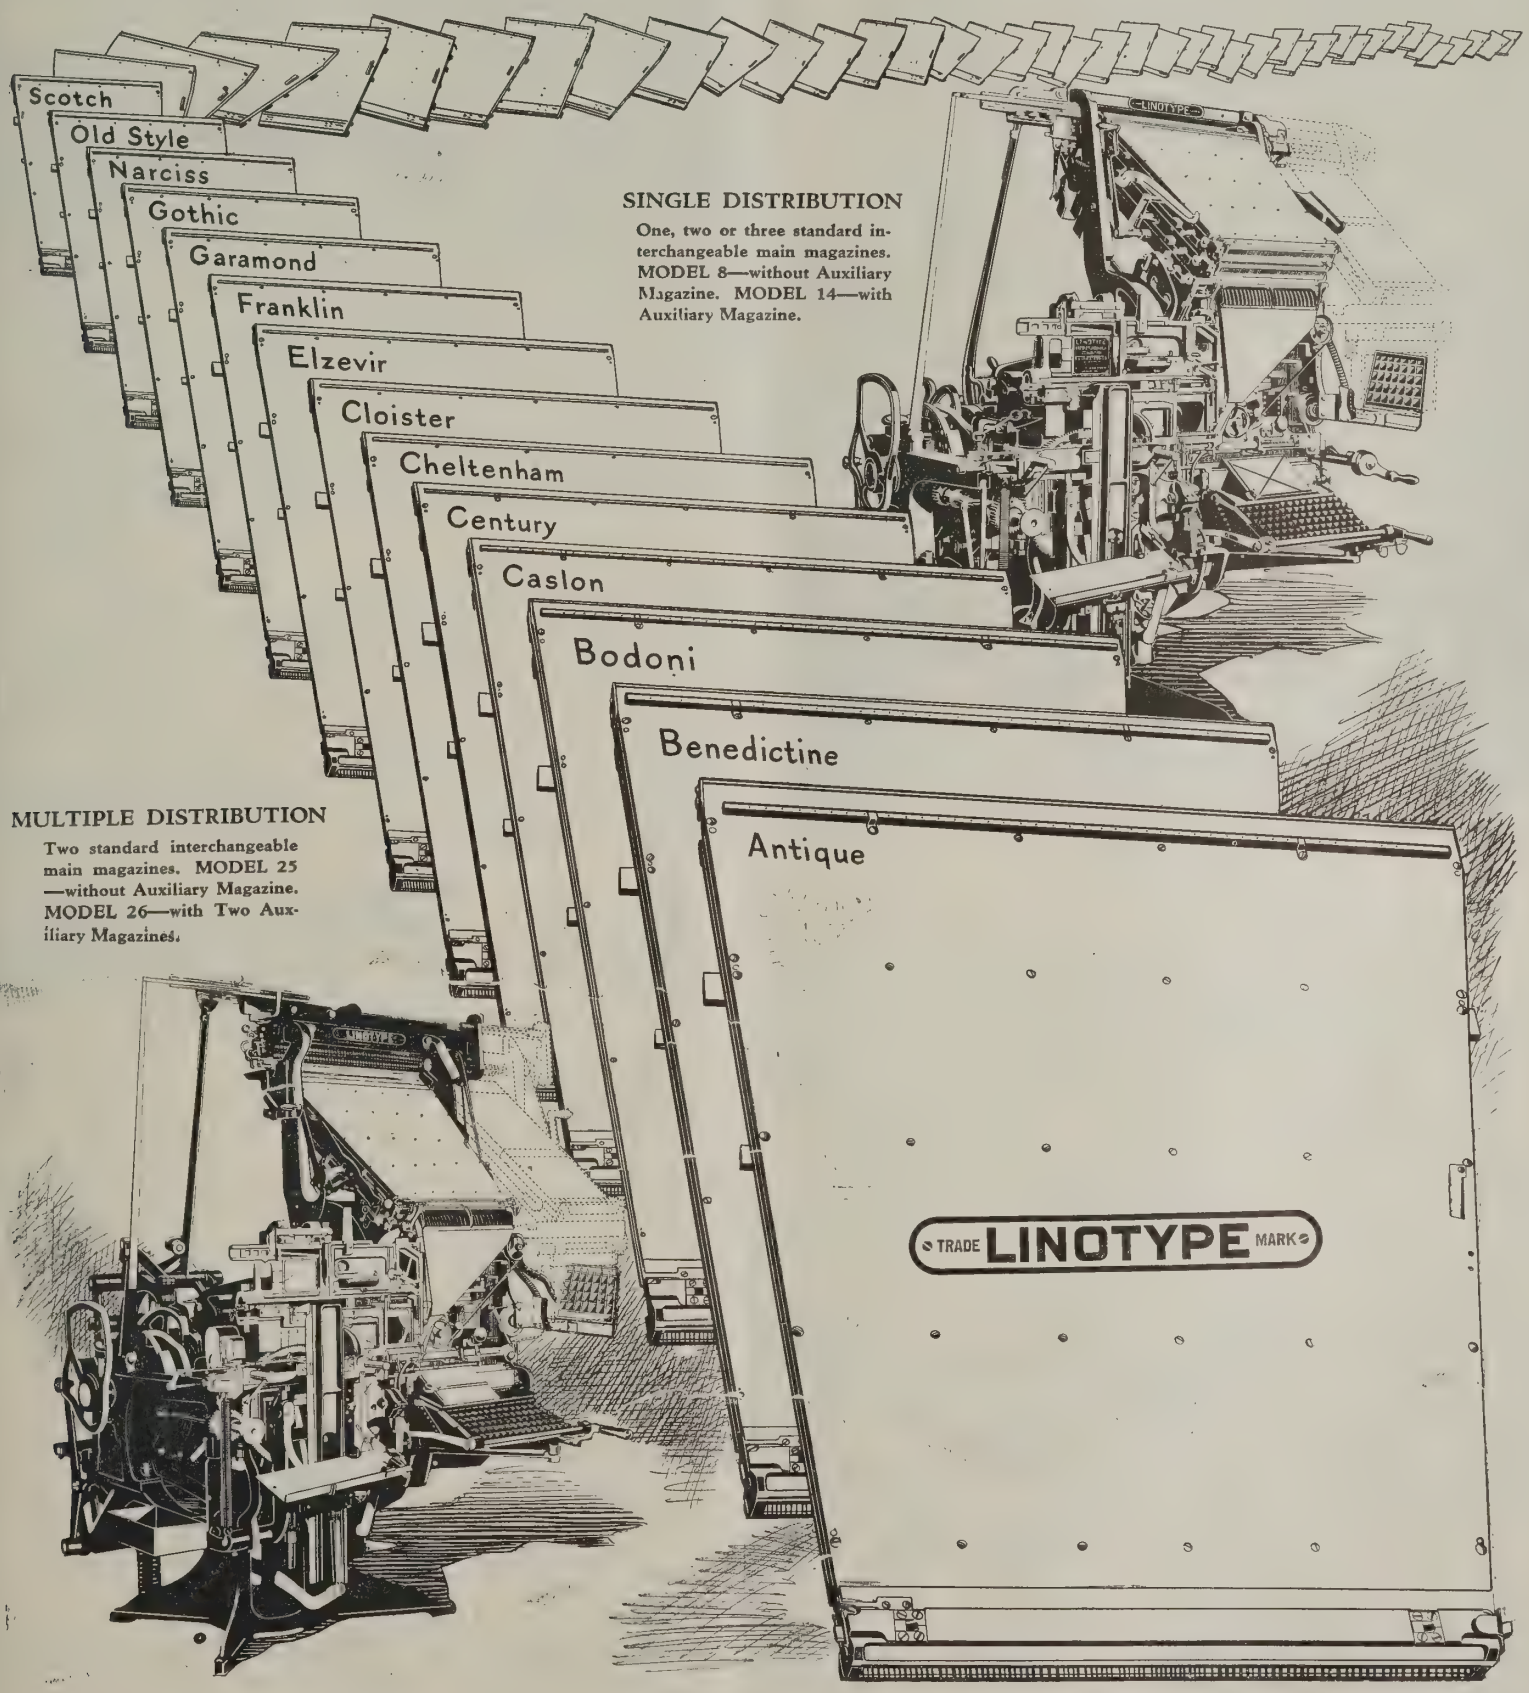
Mr. Martin, if he chooses, can ma his publishing plant his home. He h taken over the top story to be fitt up with two bedrooms, a kitchenette a living room.

Largest morning and Sunday circulation in the Greatest Market west of Chicago
170,000 Daily
190,000 Sunday
LOS ANGELES Examiner

The DAILY OKLAHOMAN
OKLAHOMA CITY TIMES
thoroughly and alone cover the Oklahoma City Market

The center of the nation's "Good Business" area and the territory covered thoroughly and alone by the Oklahoman and Times are one and the same, according to the latest conditions map issued by the "Nation's Business."

Throughout Oklahoma City's entire market, business is mounting to new heights as the proceeds from Oklahoma's greatest wheat crop are placed in circulation.



Incomes from corn, broomcorn, small grains and cotton are still to be received and will push the level of business in Oklahoma to still greater heights.

Advertisers may be certain that fall schedules appearing in the Oklahoman and Times will reach the attentive ears of 140,000 subscribers who have money to spend.

E. KATZ SPECIAL ADVERTISING AGENCY
New York Chicago Kansas City Detroit Atlanta San Francisco

ALL THE FACES YOU NEED

IN STANDARD INTERCHANGEABLE MAGAZINES

SINGLE DISTRIBUTION

One, two or three standard interchangeable main magazines. MODEL 8—without Auxiliary Magazine. MODEL 14—with Auxiliary Magazine.

MULTIPLE DISTRIBUTION

Two standard interchangeable main magazines. MODEL 25—without Auxiliary Magazine. MODEL 26—with Two Auxiliary Magazines.

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS

BROOKLYN, NEW YORK

CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED TORONTO

Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

S20.26.7-F

COMPOSED ON THE LINOTYPE IN CLOISTER BOLD, DISPLAY IN NARCISS

ARRANGING NEWSPAPER WINDOWS THAT SAY "STOP, LOOK AND LISTEN!"

Milwaukee Journal's Seven Windows Carry Live Promotional Displays Changed Once a Week—One Window Allotted to National Advertisers

MILWAUKEE has long since passed the day when a newspaper window meant only a refuge for cobwebs and a happy hunting ground for deceased flies, with but an occasional poster, perhaps, to break the drab monotony. The accompanying photographs show some of the possibilities of newspaper window display, as realized by the Milwaukee Journal.

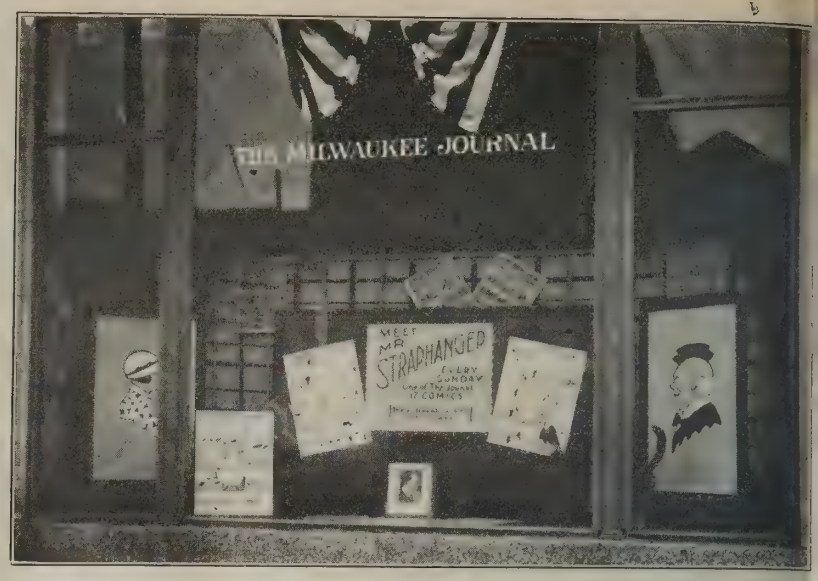
For the modern newspaper, as for any other commercial enterprise, the advantages of effective window displays are legion. A newspaper must be sold to the public, just as any other commodity and, in this connection, it has been found that bare, lifeless windows can be transformed, with almost Cinderella magic, into wide-awake, live-wire salesmen. The successful merchant spares no effort to make his window displays attractive. True, the "merchandise" of the newspaper is less tangible than that of the average merchant, but this very fact should call for greater ingenuity in newspaper display work.

The Journal has seven windows in its new building, occupied two years ago, in which the displays are, as a general rule, changed every week. The first, a window 17 feet wide, is devoted to the promotion of the Journal as an institution. Only in extremely worthy cases, such as the Christmas Seal campaign of the Anti-Tuberculosis Association, has the window been given to outside organizations.

One very effective project in connection with Journal promotional display, and one which created much interest and favorable comment, was an exhibit featuring old Journal files. Three of the old newspaper files were summoned—15, 25 and 35 years of age, respectively. Special easels were built to hold them and these were couched in the window amid appropriate decorations. The mellow pages were turned from day to day to correspond, in date, with the present. In this way, the interest was increased from day to day and the project was kept alive.

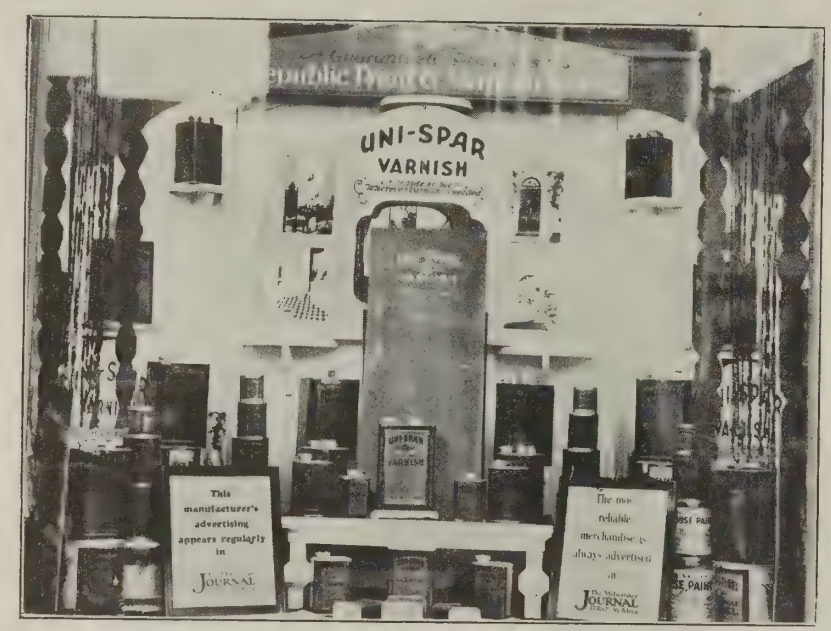
A second window holds a purely news appeal. Here are exhibited photographs of timely national and international happenings. This window always draws a cosmopolitan assemblage.

"Here and There with the Journal Photographer" is the caption over another window. As the name suggests, this window holds some 20 news photographs, taken at random throughout the city and state, and mounted attractively on a frame. A similar panel, holding photographs of some timely municipal or state event, is featured to one side of this. On the other side is a mounting of the first page of the latest edition of the Journal and this is changed as each succeeding edition is brought out.



An array of booklets, attractively bound, compiled in the interest of the public by the Public Service Bureau of the Journal, forms the material for a fourth window. The data thus compiled covers widely varying subjects. Some of the more recent of these books include: "A Little Book of Everyday Etiquette," "Behind the Boudoir Door," "Help For the Man Who Wants to Build, "The Call of the Open Road," "Picking a Job," "Motor Camping," "Wisconsin Resorts and Lakes," "Wisconsin Lakes Directory—Fishing Guide," "Photographs That Newspapers Buy," and "Better Golf by Billy Sixty." "Behind the Boudoir Door" is a presentation of beauty culture, written by the Journal's woman's editor, for women. Several of these booklets were displayed in the window, some of them open to a page which gave a table of correct weights and measurements for both men and women, with the advice of an expert on how to reduce. The number of requests from the male of the species for this book was a revelation.

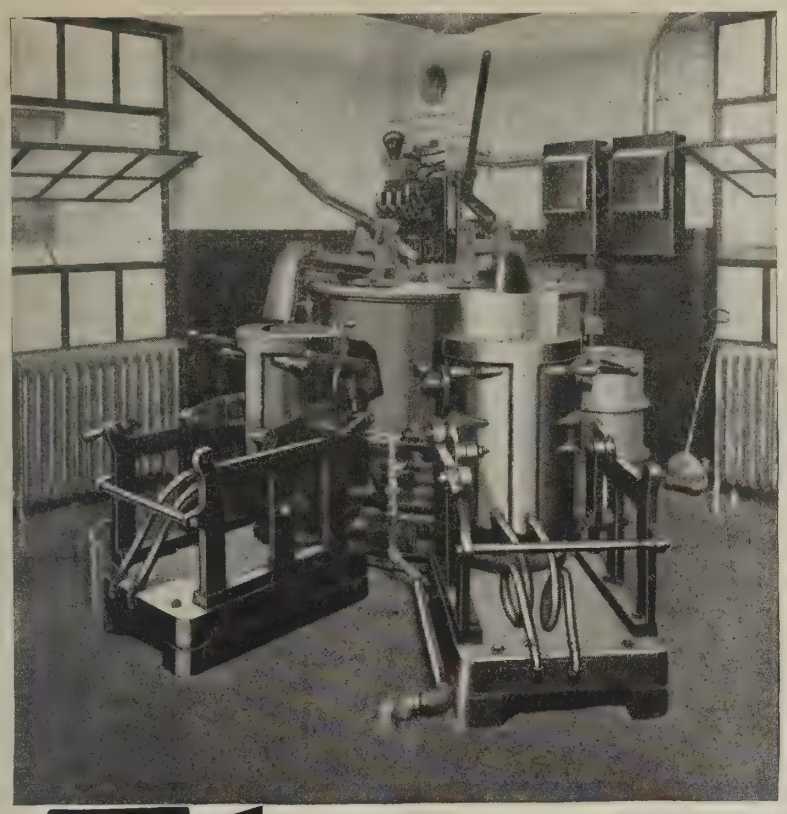
"The Call of the Open Road," the Journal's annual highway guide to Wisconsin, is now featured in the fifth window, devoted to the promotion of the Journal Tour Club activities. Here, interesting displays are made of Tour Club service kits, vacation maps, reports on the condition of the highways, and a dozen and one other topics of interest to the tourist and motorist.



With a foresight for emergencies, the Journal has reserved one window for short-order displays. This window harbors projects of a miscellaneous nature, frequently bringing to the attention of the public timely civic movements. Signs and posters, similar to those displayed on the paper's trucks and on street cars, featuring Journal advertisements, ar also displayed in this window, effectivel tying up this vehicle advertising directl with the building.

The last of the Journal windows devoted to the cause of the national ad vertiser, in an effort to help him realiz the greatest possible returns from his in vestment in the columns of the news paper. Once each year, any exclusiv Journal advertiser is entitled to a dis play of his product in this window for period of one week. Advertisers mus use the actual product in making dis plays. No exhibits of mere posters o lifeless placards are permitted. Needles to say, reservations for this window ar made months in advance. Even at thi time, the schedule runs well into Febru ary, 1927.

The whole program of window displa is operated on a budget, a definite sum being set aside each year for this work



Showing how the Journal uses its windows for promotion purposes.

National advertisers book this Milwaukee Journal window months in advance. The illustration shows a striking display of Uni-Spar Varnish—and the Journal, too, is advertised.

NEWSPAPER ENGINEERING AND CONSTRUCTION PROBLEMS
Solved by specialist eight years with Boston Post
EDWIN S. PARKER
Structural Engineer
15 Exchange Street
Boston
Am. Soc. C. E. Boston Soc. C. E.

LA PRENSA
OF BUENOS AIRES
FIRST in Public Service since 1869
La Prensa is famous for its free social services, including:
Medical and Surgical Clinic
Industrial Chemistry Bureau
Agricultural and Stock Bureau
Legal Department
Conference Chamber
Music School
Public Library of 10,000 Volumes
Advertisers who use La Prensa reach a responsive audience in the WEALTHIEST COUNTRY, per capita, IN THE WORLD.
JOSHUA B. POWERS
Sole U. S. Representative
250 PARK AVENUE
NEW YORK
"South America's Greatest Newspaper"

Electric Heat melts the stereotype metal at

The Fort Wayne News-Sentinel
The Waterbury Republican-American
The Springfield Republican
The Scranton Times
The Deseret (Salt Lake City) News
The Longview (Washington) Daily News

Although electric heat will not supplant all other forms of heat for industrial purposes, there are processes in every industry where it is the ideal heat—the most economical heat—the heat that ultimately will be used.

ULTIMATELY ELECTRIC HEAT
IN EVERY INDUSTRY

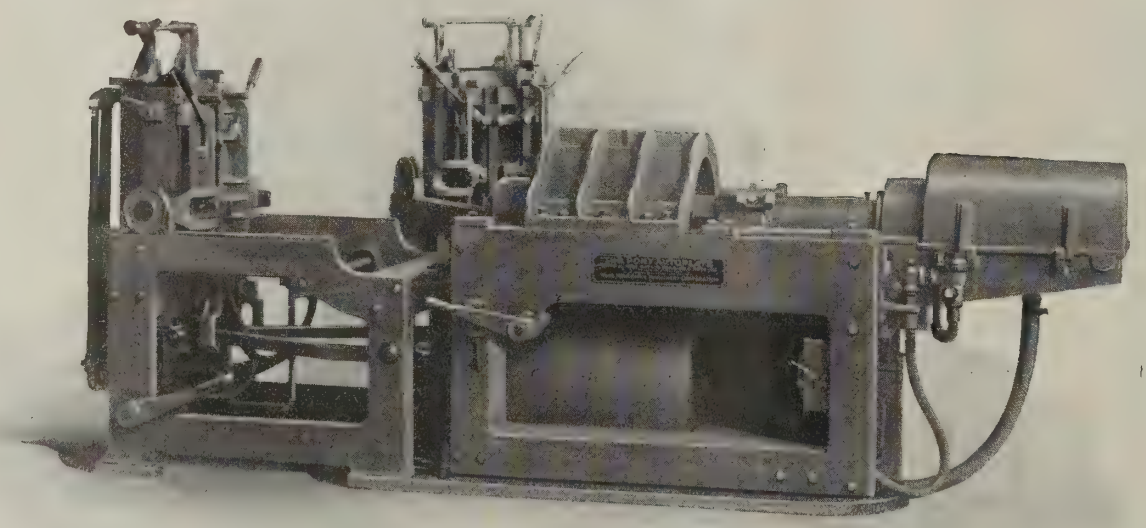
SINCE the first G-E electrically heated stereotype melting pot was installed in the Waterbury Republican-American a few months ago, five additional newspapers have adopted them. In each case the installation has been a complete success. Above are shown a 9000-pound and a 6000-pound pot installed at the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel.

Write to your nearest G-E office. A G-E industrial heating specialist will advise you as to the equipment best suited for your casting-room.

570-20

GENERAL ELECTRIC

GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY, SCHENECTADY, N. Y., SALES OFFICES IN PRINCIPAL CITIES



TWIN PONY AUT

Doubling Production Is True

CONSISTING of two casting mechanisms ser Twin Pony Autoplate Machine will do th doubling investment or floor space.

The finishing and cooling mechanism is swung in front of either casting mechanism. As the finis the casting operation, there is no sacrifice of speed c

Doubling pro cost or floor spac economy that eve realize and desire.

Pric
f. o. b.

Machines may

R. HOE & COMPANY, INC.

GOSS PRINTING PRESS COMPANY
THE GEORGE RUSSELL REED

WOOD NEWSPAPER MACHINERY CORPO

PLATE MACHINE

ithout Doubling Cost conomy

a single finishing and cooling mechanism, the k of TWO Pony Autoplate Machines without position automatically at the will of the operator nd cooling operation is more than twice as fast as ed with two separate Pony Autoplate Machines.

n without doubling rue economy—an blisher will at once

==

,750
d, N.J.

==

ered of us or of

TER SCOTT & COMPANY
NY of San Francisco, California

DUPLEX PRINTING PRESS COMPANY

TION, 501 Fifth Avenue, New York City

EDITORIAL

BANISH THE SPOKESMAN!

MR. Coolidge's "Spokesman" was annoyed this week when the newspaper printed certain dispatches from Europe to the effect that Old World nations were in a mood for economic bargaining with Uncle Sam on American reservations to the World Court protocol. The "Spokesman" thought that these suggestions, printed in American newspapers, might give offense to European powers and that such reports should be verified before publication.

The rebuke to the press comes ill from the President. He and his official circle have made frequent use of the newspapers through their "spokesmen," watching the public response to their veiled utterances and repudiating their words when circumstances seemed to warrant it. The press bore the responsibility for the original reports and the ignominy of official rebuke for a fault not its own.

Surely the "Spokesman's" privilege of anonymity is not to be denied to foreign officials. Without doubt, the "spokesmen" for some European leaders launched the trial balloon to which Mr. Coolidge objected, and without doubt, the same leaders will deny the authenticity of the report if Mr. Coolidge's objection is strenuous enough.

If the President sees the product of the system as evil and generative of international ill-will, he has it in his power to start the reform. Banish his White House mouthpiece! Domestic rule and diplomacy by flitting spectres may jibe with the kaleidoscopic governments of the Balkans, but they have no place in the United States if it is to remain of the people, for the people, and by the people.

Canton's ex-officials know all about the dynamics of the newspaper searchlight.

MEXICO

FACTS do not bear out the recent assertion attributed to an American clergyman traveling in Mexico that American newspapers are not presenting the facts of the present religious controversy because the correspondents now covering the story are of the Catholic faith and base their news stories on the statements of the Mexican bishops. Executives of the press associations and of metropolitan newspapers which have detailed special men to Mexico City during the past month informed EDITOR & PUBLISHER almost without exception that their representatives were not Catholics. In all but one of the excepted cases the religious beliefs of the correspondents were not known to their superiors. One is a Catholic.

Without exception, the editors expressed gratification with the manner in which the complex developments at Mexico City are being presented by American newspapers. The news of the day is being obtained as advantageously as possible in a country where communications are relatively bad and where the word-of-mouth transmission of rumors in the present intensity of emotions gives opportunity for thousands of sensational "it is reported" yarns—which are not sent.

The story is one that touches fundamentals of human existence. It is inextricably woven with the fabric of the present government, and its thread twines through the economic structure of more than 300 years. Today is using processes only partly understood to wipe out the wrongs of Yesterday.

With such a background, it is impossible that every shade of opinion will be satisfied with what the newspapers present as a recital of the day's events. Each will color these events according to his information or his predisposition and will accuse the newspaper of bias if its report does not conform to his picture. The partisans in a controversy so bitter forget that the newspaper's duty is to chronicle what is happening, telling the story as intelligently as possible with a background of established facts rather than controversial opinion. American newspapers are doing that, and EDITOR & PUBLISHER feels that they wrong themselves when they pass unchallenged statements that they are consciously and wilfully partisan in reporting the news of Mexico.

Did newspapers create the Valentino hippodrome or mirror it?

Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house.—St. Matthew; V, 15.

WHEN RATES RILE ADVERTISERS

WHEN your advertisers tell you that they won't pay a higher rate, that newspaper advertising costs too much now, that the reader is not paying enough for the excellent product he is receiving, Mr. Newspaper Publisher, answer their theories by a statement of facts. You know what you are spending to make your newspaper, you know why you are spending it, you know what will happen if you curtail expenditures. You have what Napoleon always sought in his battles—the interior lines. If you haven't, secure them, for signs are not wanting that advertisers will present rate-resisting arguments this winter.

Possibly in anticipation, the Charlotte (N. C.) Observer recently used a full page advertisement to tell what publishers a few years ago would have regarded as business secrets. Readers were informed that the paper's cost of production is $840,000 a year —$70,000 a month, or more than $2,300 daily, that each copy of the paper cost 6 cents to produce, yet sold on the street corner for a nickel, was delivered to the home for 20 cents a week and sent by mail for $9 a year. The reader learned that $18,000 a month was spent for paper, $30,000 for payroll, $6,000 for wire news and features, $4,000 for freight and cartage, $4,000 for postage, $2,000 for delivery, and the remainder for taxes, power, fuel, ink, stationery, supplies, and incidentals.

Just what these expenditures meant, translated into features and services to readers, was lucidly explained in the ensuing paragraphs—the establishment of the newspaper as more than a newspaper, as a member of the family in its community. Curtailment of these expenses by $10,000 or $15,000 a month might be effected, but at the cost of betraying this reader-confidence, and of limiting, rather than extending the number of readers to whom advertisers have the opportunity of presenting their goods and services.

Tell your advertisers, as the Observer did, that limiting the circulation by making a cheaper paper or charging a higher price for it will not lower the cost of advertising. Show them that by buying space in your good newspaper at the rates you find necessary for its maintenance they are assisting its improvement and adding constantly to the number of people to whom their sales message may appeal.

The Observer pertinently named and quoted a local merchant who, hearing of a recent increase in circulation, gave hearty approval.

"Go ahead," he said. "Make it 50,000 or 60.000. My space will cost more, but it will be worth more."

Show your patrons that if it were not for advertising the paper would have to sell for $50 per year, that the number of readers possible at that rate would not warrant newspaper advertising at any price. Prove that their newspaper advertising should pay for itself. They won't have any substitute. If they talk "Shopping News," tell them they will pay the entire cost of producing their circular, both as advertising rate and circulation expense.

Some publishers will advance only the latter argument and tell the advertiser it is none of his business how much revenue comes from circulation, but EDITOR & PUBLISHER is inclined to put faith in the policy of laying the cards on the table. The newspaper of 1926 cannot be conducted like a patent medicine factory.

Vacations are over—the heaviest autumn advertising since 1919 awaits newspapers which know how to earn it.

NEWSPAPER PRINTING

REPLACEMENT of worn-out and obsolete printing machinery by newspapers on a wholesale scale during the past few years is one of the principal reasons for the better printing which won the praise of important newspaper advertisers in EDITOR & PUBLISHER last week.

Machinery for the composing room, foundry, and press room is continually being changed in detail to meet the demands of advertisers and publishers for refinement of the newspaper printing art. Every new discovery of the photo-engraver is summoned to the typographer's aid, and, with regard to national advertising, it may be said that the publisher and his mechanical forces are now receiving every possible assistance from outside in their effort to do a good production job.

Local advertising, as a rule, presents a less pretty picture, for a number of understandable reasons. The small business man who uses local space has usually nebulous ideas regarding advertising and few, if any, on typography. Not many newspaper printers have been produced during the past 25 years with the sense of craftsmanship that distinguished their predecessors. Time is the all-important factor in newspaper production and too often it has been none too abundant in the composition of newspaper advertising. None of these conditions are incurable. Newspaper printers can be trained in typography at small expense of time and money. Advertisers can likewise be educated, not only to appreciate good typography but to encourage it by giving the newspaper time to produce it. Efforts that newspapers are now exerting to these ends will bring noticeable results before many years.

Given good machinery, competent mechanics, good composition and stereotyping, the newspaper needs good print paper and ink to complete its job, and detailed knowledge of what makes good paper and good ink is not extremely common. Newsprint paper is now a fairly standard commodity sold at a standard price, but ink is "something else again." Good news ink can be bought from any of the well-known manufacturers for only a fraction more than some publishers now pay for black grease, and most of the manufacturers would prefer to sell it, even at a smaller profit. Analysis of news ink and education of publishers as to ink values should be an early assignment for the experts of the new A.N.P.A. Bureau of Standards.

The things that newspapers learn about the better conduct of their business often come from the reading and the advertising public; if not, the latter soon learn of them, and the uncouth typing and smeary printing that marked the newspaper of the past will not be tolerated in these days of prosperity.

The dogs of war starve on a true news diet.

THE PRESS AND THE LEAGUE

NEW standards of international press wire communications will come before the League of Nations press conference scheduled for Geneva in 1927. This is assured by the atmosphere which surrounded the past week's meeting of press association representatives in Geneva, in which the policies advocated by the American group appear to have won dominance.

Abolition of censorship except in time of war is advocated. The conference applauded a resolution embodying the American doctrine of property right in news, established ten years ago by the efforts of Melville E. Stone, then general manager of the Associated Press. Favor was also shown to a resolution advocating an even break on news between "official" agencies, subsidized by various foreign powers, and the "independent" agencies, of which the American organizations are the outstanding examples. Secrecy of proceedings, advocated by members of the "official" group, was fought to a standstill and defeated. No "deals" were made behind closed doors.

A promising start has been made on the League press program. The remaining three conferences of publishing interests preliminary to the general meeting have before them an excellent standard for preparation of their individual agenda. There is no past to live down, and this first meeting of the world's journalistic leaders may well cause epochal changes.

PERSONAL

JOHN W. FISCHER, editor of the Parkersburg (W. Va.) Sentinel was severely injured on Aug. 19 when he was struck by an automobile while crossing the street near his home.

Dr. E. P. Clarke, editor of the Riverside (Cal.) Press, and his wife, Dr. Louise Harvey Clarke are on a vacation trip in the northwest.

Henry D. Bradley, general manager of the Norristown (Pa.) Times Herald has just returned from a two months' visit abroad where his time was chiefly spent in Paris and London. While in Paris he attended meetings of the Anglo-American Press Club as the guest of Frank Mason of the International News Service and Wilbur Forrest of the New York Herald Tribune.

E. K. Whiting, president and business manager of the Owatonna (Minn.) Journal-Chronicle, with Mrs. Whiting and their two sons, returned last Sunday from a two weeks' tour of the lake region.

Randolph and Elbert, 10-year-old twin sons of William Randolph Hearst, were in Spokane recently on their way to Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks where they will see a bit of the northwest as part of an educational itinerary planned by their father.

M. D. Witter, publisher of the Brawley (Cal.) News, and member of the executive committee of the Southern California Editorial Association, has announced himself as a candidate for the nomination for State Assemblyman from Imperial County on the Republican ticket.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

FRANK McCABE, classified advertising manager of the New York World is spending his vacation at Readfield, Me.

James Cleary, former manager of the business survey department of the Chicago Tribune, and Mrs. Cleary are parents of a daughter, Dorothy.

Edwin A. Sutphin, national advertising manager of the New York Sun, is spending his vacation at Ocean Grove, N. J.

Charles Philips Hasbrook, general manager of the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, recently was operated upon at Stuart Circle Hospital, Richmond, for appendicitis. He is convalescing.

Casey Y. Hirschfield, of the San Antonio Light advertising staff, has gone on a trip to France.

Raymond T. Jones is now advertising manager of the Hendersonville (N. C.) Times, succeeding P. H. Pyne. Jones was formerly in the advertising department of the Winston-Salem (N. C.) Sentinel.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

MARC A. ROSE, managing editor, Buffalo Evening News, is spending his vacation at Cape Cod.

Herman Devries, music critic of the Chicago Evening American, is traveling in Europe.

William G. Gavin, Washington correspondent for the Boston (Mass.) Traveler, and Mrs. Gavin are parents of a daughter, Gloria Ann.

Roscoe Ashworth, a staff member of the Paris edition of the New York Herald Tribune, who came to this country to take the place of Roland Kilbon of the staff while Mr. Kilbon was in Paris, is visiting his friends and family in the Middle West before returning to Paris.

Ernest K. Moy, the American correspondent for the Peking Daily News was scheduled to leave New York Aug. 28th for Miami, Florida, where he will write a series of articles for his paper.

Frank Vreeland, dramatic critic, New York Telegram, and Mrs. Vreeland, are traveling in England.

Henry J. Collins, 31, for 13 years a reporter on the staff of the Lynn (Mass.) Item, has passed his state bar examinations.

Glenn J. Degner, formerly farm page writer, Owatonna (Minn.) Journal-Chronicle, is returning from a "flivver" trip through the Southwest and Pacific coast states. He recently resigned to enter the University of Missouri School of Journalism.

Donald Anguish, for several years assistant editor of the New Lexington (O.) Tribune has resigned to enter the insurance business in Columbus, O.

Herbert Asbury, of the night rewrite staff, New York Herald Tribune, has returned to work after a short vacation.

P. J. Jones, sporting editor, Hamilton (Ont.) Herald, is at the University of Michigan Hospital, Ann Arbor, where he will undergo a major operation within the next few days.

George Anthony Cornish, assistant telegraph editor, New York Herald Tribune, will be married on Sept. 8 at Selma, Ala., to Miss Elizabeth McLeod of that city. After a honeymoon trip Mr. Cornish will return to the Herald Tribune.

W. S. Cooper, editor of the Colorado (Tex.) Record and secretary of the Colorado Chamber of Commerce, is leaving Colorado to become secretary of the Breckenridge (Tex.) Chamber of Commerce.

Bess Carroll, San Antonio Light, feature writer, has written a novel, "Mirage," which will be published serially in the Light.

Fred L. Bagby, city and county building reporter Salt Lake City Telegram, has announced his candidacy for the office of county commissioner, on the Democratic ticket.

J. Howard Galbraith, political editor of the Columbus (O.) Dispatch, who has been ill for two months, is improving.

Allen J. Daniels, formerly with the editorial staffs of the Worcester Evening Post and the Boston Post, has joined the Fall River Globe as news editor.

M. Jay Racusin, staff member of the New York Herald Tribune, has returned to work after a two weeks' rest following his extensive trip in the Middle West during which he made a liquor survey for the Herald Tribune.

A. Jack Coombe, picture editor of the New York Evening Graphic, left Aug. 21 for Philadelphia to confer with Mayor Kendrick on Sesqui pictures.

Raymond K. Winans editorial promotion manager of the Springfield (Mass.) Union, has joined the Toledo (O.) News-Bee. Mrs. Winans, social editor of the Union, will also join the News-Bee staff.

Archibald Dalrymple, formerly with the San Antonio Light, has joined the McAllen Morning Telegram as news editor, succeeding E. A. Moreno, transferred to the new Daily Globe launched by the Telegram owners at Harlingen, Tex.

W. E. Zuppann, formerly of the editorial department, Ogden (Utah) Standard-Examiner has returned from the Pacific Coast and will rejoin the Standard-Examiner.

Clarence Wright, who attended Columbia University, is new city hall reporter for the San Antonio Light.

S. James Naples, formerly of the Buffalo Courier staff, has been appointed secretary to John J. Love, commissioner of public works for Buffalo.

W. M. Moore, reporter, has been named city editor of the Statesville (N. C.) Daily.

Louis C. Larsen has resigned from the editorial staff, Sioux City (Ia.) Tribune to join the circulation department of the Chicago Evening American. Cecil Mahood has rejoined the Tribune staff after two years' leave of absence. He fills the night commercial job succeeding Harry Aspleaf, who has resigned to return to school.

Fairfax Downey, feature writer for the New York Herald Tribune Sunday magazine, has returned to his desk after several weeks in the White Mountains with his family.

(Continued on page 30)

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

ROSCOE B. ELLARD is head of the Lee Memorial School of Journalism, which was established this year, backed by the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association under the direction of Dr. John S. Cohen, editor of the Atlanta Journal.

ROSCOE B. ELLARD

Prof. Ellard came to Washington and Lee, of which the memorial school is a part, from Beloit College, Wisconsin, where he was head of the department of journalism for six years. He is an honor graduate of the School of Journalism and the College of Liberal Arts of the University of Missouri, receiving the degrees of B. J. and B. A.

Since graduation he has had considerable experience in reporting, copyreading and feature writing on Chicago, Milwaukee and Missouri newspapers. Before going to Beloit in 1920, he was on the city staff of the Chicago Daily News.

Ederle Wins! Valentino Dead!—

24 Hours a day

Your morgue is always on the job!
Keep it up-to-date with Central Press.

Over 1500 portrait mats available in one shipment and ready to work for you night and day.

Central Press now serving over four hundred newspapers and an unexcelled morgue service with Semi-monthly Releases has much to do with its widespread popularity.

KEEP PREPARED with CENTRAL PRESS

Write or wire for terms.

The Central Press Association

V. V. McNITT, President — Central Press Bldg., Cleveland — H. A. McNITT, Editor and Manager

A FRONT PAGE
COMIC

Taken for the show window of the comic section by paper after paper

THE
ELLA CINDERS
COLOR PAGE

Starting
SEPTEMBER 19

Order Now!

Black and white to four colors, inside or outside — but remember — it is signally

A FRONT PAGE
COMIC

Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Maximilian Elser, Jr., General Manager — Earl J. Hadley, Associate

150 Nassau St. New York City

(Continued from page 29)

Leon J. McCarthy, news editor of the Corning (N. Y.) Evening Leader, is back at his desk after a siege of illness.

Robert Coulson, formerly of the Buffalo Star staff, is now publicity manager for the Lafayette theater, Buffalo.

WITH THE SPECIALS

GEO. B. DAVID COMPANY, has been appointed national advertising representatives both in the Eastern and Western territories for the Fort Myers (Fla.) Tropical News.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

OTTAWA EVENING CITIZEN, 128-page Centenary number, Aug. 16.

Tampa (Fla.) Daily Times, 104-page review of industrial, financial and development activities in Tampa and South Florida, Aug. 14

Decatur (Ill.) Sunday Review, Aug. 15, 68-page special issue including four pages in roto, dedicated to the Wabash railroad, detailing the railroad's plan to spend $7,500,000 in expansion and improvement of its shops and divisional headquarters in Decatur.

Peoria (Ill.) Evening Star 40-page Dollar Day edition, Aug. 18.

Quincy (Ill.) Herald-Whig, 24-page Dollar Day edition, Aug. 18.

Rutherford (N. C.) County News, 100-page Progress and Publicity edition.

Chatham (Ont.) Daily News, Dollar Day edition, Aug. 23.

Miami Beach (Fla.) Beacon, second anniversary edition, Aug. 20.

El Dorado (Ark.) Daily News, 136-page Fifth Anniversary edition, July 23.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

R. G. SMITH, Salt Lake City correspondent of the Associated Press, has returned to his desk after a two weeks' vacation spent at Fish Lake in Southern Utah.

Howard J. Carswell has joined the Kent Press Service as city editor in the Chicago office.

L. L. Sisk has succeeded E. G. Studhalter as Fort Worth bureau manager for the International News Service.

John T. Nevill, Detroit bureau correspondent for the Kent Press Service, returned from the two weeks airplane tour made by the Ford Reliability Group.

MARRIED

HAROLD E. BURNS, of the mechanical force, Galesburg (Ill.) Evening Mail to Miss Leota Weeks, Aug. 18 in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Weeks, Galesburg.

Frances Ann Eddy, proofreader of the Quincy (Ill.) Herald-Whig, Aug. 21, to Floyd G. Summers, of the Herald-Whig editorial staff. Summers has resigned to take a copy desk position with the New Bedford (Mass.) Standard.

Victor Nelson, of the Providence (R. I.) Journal staff, to Miss Olive Sears of Somerville, last week in Somerville

Stanley Page Judkins, of the real estate advertising department, New York Herald Tribune to Elizabeth Wiswall Littlefield at Newburyport, Mass.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

NEIL DOUGLAS, from Lubbock (Tex.) Avalanche, to Cleburne (Tex.) Review.

Daniel C. O'Flaherty, from Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch staff, to Bronx Home News, New York City.

ON THE MECHANICAL SIDE

HUGH F. DOWNEY, a proofreader of the Lowell (Mass.) Courier-Citizen, has successfully passed his bar examinations.

SCHOOLS

JOURNALISM has been added to the correspondence course offered by Emory University, Atlanta, Ga., according to an announcement by the extension division. The correspondence work is under the supervision of regular faculty members.

M. E. Selecman, dirtctor of information, Northwest Missouri State Teachers College, has obtained a year's leave of absence to study at the Medill School of Journalism.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

ALLEN E. GLAZE, editor of the Allen (Neb.) News the last year has disposed of his interest in the paper and joined the staff of the Hartington (Neb.) Herald.

R. C. Hoiles, of Mansfield, O., publisher of the Mansfield News and Lorain Times-Herald, has purchased the interest of Harry G. Brunner in the Mansfield Journal.

The interests of Fred J. DeMille in the firm of Smith & DeMille, publishers of the Paso Robles (Cal.) Press, have been purchased by Fred J. Smith and son, Fred W. Smith. The business will be continued under the firm name of Fred J. Smith and Son.

E. B. Kingsbury, owner and editor of the Ponca Nebraska Journal-Leader, weekly, has sold the paper to C. C. Charles, who has taken charge.

ASSOCIATIONS

MEMBERS of the LIVINGSTON COUNTY (N. Y.) PRESS CLUB, held their annual midsummer meeting and reunion in the Tallyho Tavern at Geneseo, N. Y., with more than 50 publishers and guests in attendance. Oscar Woodruff, for nearly 50 years editor and publisher of the Dansville (N. Y.) Express, gave an interesting resume of his half century of experience. Walter B. Sanders of the Nunda News gave an account of his administration as president. R. M. Rolinson of Mount Morris was elected president and Raymond Haywood, also of Mount Morris, was chosen secretary and treasurer.

Three hundred delegates are expected to attend the annual convention of the UNITED TYPOTHETÆ, DISTRICT No. 4, which will be held in Lynchburg, Va., Sept. 17 and 18. The district includes Virginia, Delaware, Maryland, the District of Columbia and North Carolina.

Railroads will grant fare-and-a-half privileges for the round trip to the DIRECT MAIL ADVERTISING ASSOCIATION convention Oct. 20, 21 and 22, in Detroit.

Delegates from 43 chapters of PI DELTA EPSILON, national honorary journalism fraternity, will leave Sept. 3, from Chicago on a special train for Berkeley, Cal., where the seventeenth annual convention will be held Sept. 8-11. The University of California chapter, numbering more than 40 members, will act as host. The sessions will be presided over by Prof. Charles Harvey Raymond, Grand President of the fraternity, who was recently appointed head of the journalism department of the University of California.

MEDILL SCHOOL NAMES ITS 1926 COUNCIL

Advisory Group of Eleven Active Newspaper Men Selected for Coming Term—Evening School in New Quarters

The Medill School of Journalism of Northwestern university at Chicago, founded in 1921 and named for the founder of the Chicago Tribune, Joseph Medill, is laying plans to make 1926-27 its greatest year.

This fall will find the evening division will move from the old structure at Dearborn and Lake streets into the new Wieboldt hall of the School of Commerce on the Alexander McKinlock memorial campus on the lake front.

This new structure will be the last word in a newspaper laboratory.

To keep in touch with the most recent developments on newspapers the school has formed a newspaper council which is associated with its staff in guiding the course of the school.

Members of this council for 1926-27 are Brooks H. Beitler, news editor, Chicago Daily News; Edward Scott Beck, managing editor, Chicago Tribune; William S. Brons, superintendent, Chicago bureau of the International News Service; Frank Carson, managing editor, Chicago Herald and Examiner; William A. Curley, managing editor Chicago Evening American; Edgar T. Cutter, superintendent, central division, Associated Press; Glenn Griswold, editor, Chicago Journal of Commerce; O. L. Hall, co-editor, Chicago Journal; Edward C. Derr, manager, central division, United Press; Wright A. Patterson, editor-in-chief, Western Newspaper Union and Charles A. Segner, managing editor, Chicago Evening Post.

Prof. H. F. Harrington continues as director of the school.

FLASHES

"International Paper Head Makes a speech," a headline says. Why not give the name instead of dealing in veiled insults?—H. R. Farmer in Edmonton Bulletin.

Mrs. Elizabeth Dawson Gallatin, who low lives at Sothampton.—The Times

That noise you hear is probably Mr Ochs telling the proofroom what he thinks.—F. P. A. in Conning Tower New York World.

The wife of a bootlegger with a downtown clientele was recently granted a divorce and custody of the brief case.—Detroit News.

It is unfair to call Uncle Sam a pawnbroker. Pawnbrokers always insist on security.—J. J. Montagne in New York Herald Tribune.

The Rainy Day Club was organized by women thirty years ago to agitate for shorter skirts. Few movements have met with more marked success.—Aiken (S. C.) Journal and Review.

Photographs seldom do us justice, being fortunately tempered with mercy.—Florence (Ala.) Herald.

Reformer says there aren't enough manual laborers in Congress. Well some of them are pretty good at mending fences.—New York American.

All efforts of Europe to make us believe it was our war and they came in to help us out will prove unavailing.——Waterloo (Ia.) Tribune.

And our guess is that the next war Europe engages in will have to be a cheap one.—Dallas News.

FAMOUS FEATURES SYNDICATE, Inc.

Breaks Another Exclusive First Person Story!

"MY STORY"

By CHARLOTTE MILLS

Daughter of the slain woman in the

HALL-MILLS MURDER MYSTERY

For four years Miss Mills has been reticent—has refused many offers from newspapers.

Now she tells the whole story!

"My Story" runs 18 installments, 1,000 words each, illustrated by exclusive pictures.

WIRE for territory

We have already sold by telephone:

New York	Syracuse	Pittsburgh
Philadelphia	Milwaukee	Baltimore
Cleveland	Boston	Chicago
Albany	Buffalo	Newark
Providence	Rochester	Dubuque
Washington	New Britain	Windsor, Canada

Other circulation building features which we offer for September release include:

"JOY"

A clean, rapid-moving fiction serial by Barbara Webb. A new type of romantic story glorifying the ordinary girl. Illustrated by peppy action PHOTOGRAPHS. Sixty instalments, with a "kick" in every line. Promotion material all worked out in every detail.

WIRE for territory.

"IF YOUTH BUT KNEW"

A really big feature written by the foremost men in America, including John D. Rockefeller, Sr., Otto Kahn, Charles M. Schwab, Theodore Roosevelt, Chauncey Depew, Judge Gary, Hudson Maxim and a host of others. Their life lesson compressed into a few crisp words. A new one every day. WIRE for territory.

Famous Features Syndicate, Inc.

1819 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

BUILDING NEWSPAPER CIRCULATION

Circulators Reaching Above the Clouds for Distribution and Promotion —One Way to Furnish Baseball Scores Without Obstructing Traffic—Selling an Extra in New York

CIRCULATORS are reaching above the clouds for distribution and promotion.

Airplanes are being put to us in increasing numbers by newspapers whose publishers believe the romances of Jules Verne can be surpassed in routine work of the present day civilization.

Not long ago EDITOR & PUBLISHER told of the establishment by the Temple (Tex.) Telegram of a regular daily airplane delivery system, which E. K. Williams, general manager, claimed was not a "stunt," but which he conservatively considered was not practical for the average daily publisher. George Williams, his brother, is an aeronautical engineer of long experience.

This week from Tampa, Fla., comes the news that the Florida Airways, Inc., carried the first load of several hundred copies of the Tampa Times to Fort Myers on Aug. 18.

According to the schedule, which will be permanent, the Times has announced, a big Ford-Stout all-metal monoplane will leave at 3.20 o'clock each afternoon with the home edition of the Times, arriving at the Fort Myers flying field about 4.40. Fort Myers is 105 miles south of Tampa on the West coast of Florida.

Among those who witnessed the loading of the first consignment of newspapers were J. L. Brooks, circulation manager of the Times; Carl B. Eielson, pilot for Florida Airways Incorporated; D. E. Chenea, traffic manager for the air route; Lieut. Jack Harding, round-the-world flier and vice-president of Florida Airways; H. D. Dennis, educational director of the air route, and B. Z. Angle, development editor of the Times. No re-arrangement of the airways schedule was necessary to accommodate the newspaper.

Airplanes can and have accomplished effective promotion for a newspaper. J. W. Curran, editor of the Sault (Canada) Daily Star, will tell you that. His paper issued a 40-page edition on the occasion of the Michigan convention of the Kiwanis at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., and as a stunt had several thousand copies sent down from the air over the Michigan Soo on Aug. 19. The Daily Star's 'plane is shown in action in the photograph reproduced above.

World Series games are coming. The newspaper scoreboard will do its work and effectively, too. But sometimes a little ill-will is mixed with the good created, when crowds watching the play-by-play returns hold up traffic on busy streets in front of publication offices.

L. J. Hoffmann, circulation manager of the St. Louis Star, offers a solution. Let Hoffmann tell the story:

"The St. Louis Star for many years has used wagon posters on its fleet of motor trucks. Of course, the posters were always made as attractive as possible, calling the public's attention to coming and current events such as special articles about to start, new serial stories and calling especial attention to feature pages, etc.

"This year, owing to the tremendous interest in baseball in St. Louis caused by the Cardinals being in the thick of the pennant fight, has prompted the Star to try a new feature on the trucks.

"Scoreboards, formerly used by St. Louis newspapers, caused extreme congestion of traffic in the downtown area and were discontinued. The Star this year feeling the necessity of keeping the public informed of the inning by inning progress of its ball teams, adopted the following: The wagon poster was split in half, the upper half being used as an inning by inning scoreboard for the local teams and the lower half being reserved for announcements of features as in the past, making the same board do double duty.

"When you take into consideration that this fleet of trucks covers the city and surrounding territory like a network and that the baseball scores of the local teams are posted on them, right up to the moment the truck leaves with its load, you can readily see the advertising advantage this feature has.

"We have checked very carefully and find that thousands of people now look daily for the Star trucks to find out the latest scores. We have had greater responses from our wagon feature posters than we had formerly.

"The popular saying in St. Louis today is 'Here comes a Star truck, let's see what the teams are doing.'

"I personally feel that this is the outstanding circulation feature the Star has attempted this summer."

"Eee-oh! Valentino Dead! Eee-oh! Valentino Dead!"

This cry rang out this week shortly after Monday's noontime in Times Square, New York, Aug. 23.

Weird heralding of a life's passing from grimacing lips of newsboys, it was. Their hands beat time dealing out papers to the crowd and taking in coin. Circulations of evening newspapers first to reach New York's theatre district danced high to the grating cry and trombone headline.

Devoid of feeling, the scene merely represented a magnified picture of regular routine in New York's newspaper world when an extra comes out.

Around delivery platforms of Manhattan dailies a motley crowd of men and boys spend their time, waiting for something to happen big enough to call for an extra. By regular newsstand dealers they are called "bootjackers" because they sell three-cent papers at a nickel each, and in the rush of fast selling are able to get away with it.

One or two of these so-called "bootjackers" are on the payroll of a paper. Listed as "inspectors" they are paid about $18 a week and all else they can pick up by selling an extra to the hungry curious. Others depend only on sales in districts visited by crime, tragedy, or catastrophe. It may be a murder in the negro belt of Harlem, a hold-up on the east side, the end of a game or the end of a life or the complete story of a prize fight. The "bootjackers" grab the papers hot from the presses and rush with them to the section chiefly interested.

The following circulation department changes have been made by the New York World:

N. R. Hoover has been appointed director of circulation of the Morning, Sunday and Evening World. Joseph M. Scott has been appointed circulation manager of the Morning and Sunday World, and H. H. Irish has been appointed circulation manager of the Evening World.

Mr. Hoover has been in the newspaper business, always circulation, from boyhood, barring a few years in commercial life. He has been employed successively on the Philadelphia (Pa.) Times, Philadelphia (Pa.) North American, Everybody's Magazine, Boston (Mass.) Transcript and St. Louis (Mo.) Post-Dispatch. He came to the World four years ago.

Mr. Scott has been with the World since 1898, starting as a roadman. Previous to that he had been with the Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Mr. Irish comes to the Evening World from Rochester, N. Y., where he had had charge of the Journal-American circulation. His previous connections were with the Kalamazoo (Mich.) Gazette, South Bend (Ind.) News-Times and St. Louis (Mo.) Times.

J. Omansky, former circulation manager of the Cleveland (O.) Times, is now devoting his whole time to aiding newspapers on their circulation problems. He is located at 614 Park Building, Cleveland. Mr. Omansky has had 16 years' experience with Scripps-Howard and other newspapers.

(Continued on page 34)

Our Customers Write Our Ads

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE, of the EMPORIA, KANSAS, GAZETTE

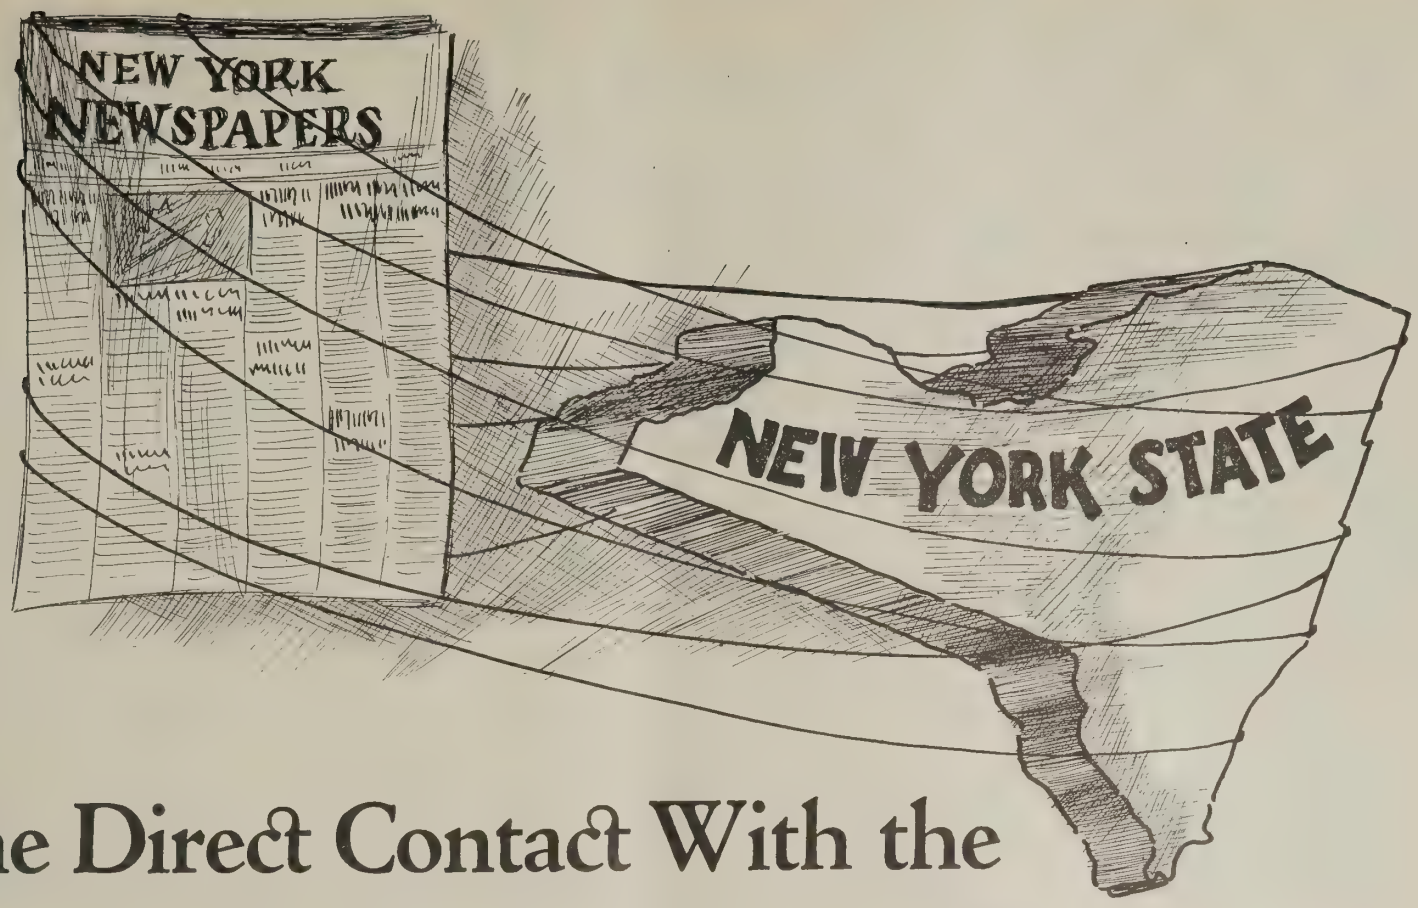
Says—

"We have used The DUPLEX PRESS, Flat Bed and Tubular, in my office now for more than twenty years, and a fine press they make."

DUPLEX PRESSES

FOR ALL NEWSPAPERS

Duplex Printing Press Co.
BATTLE CREEK, MICH.



On March 7, 1926, The Brooklyn Standard Union went back to the pre-war price of one cent, and the average circulation for April, May and June at the one cent price is:

Net paid daily
82,033

Net paid Sunday
84,014

R. J. R. Hunsiman
President

LARGEST DAILY CIRCULATION IN BROOKLYN OF ANY BROOKLYN NEWSPAPER

The Direct Contact With the Empire State's Consumer Market—

The Financial, Industrial, Commercial, and Agricultural position of New York State is so paramount, that it naturally is given first consideration by advertisers seeking distribution in the established markets.

No selling campaign of any character or magnitude can be complete without New York State heading the list.

The most direct contact with the great masses and classes of the Empire State's consumers is thru the daily newspapers. This New York State group is composed of dailies of national and international reputation, who not only cover their respective communities thoroughly, but whose importance is so great that many circulate all over the world, because they are the authorities on the political, industrial and economic life of the nation. It is therefore evident the people look to these papers for their wants and requirements.

The papers listed below offer each advertiser a carefully planned merchandising service. Let them prove to you how they can assist in the solution of your problem in distribution.

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
Albany Evening News (E)	34,444	.10	.10
Albany Knickerbocker Press (M)	34,018	.11	.11
Albany Knickerbocker Press (S)	56,924	.16	.16
Amsterdam Recorder-Democrat (E)	7,810	.04	.04
††Auburn Citizen (E)	6,389	.065	.055
Brooklyn Daily Eagle (E)	73,764	.22	.22
Brooklyn Daily Eagle (S)	84,997	.22	.22
Buffalo Courier-Express (M)	116,000	.22	.22
Buffalo Courier-Express (S)	155,000	.30	.30
Buffalo Evening News (E)	138,294	.25	.25
Buffalo Evening Times (E)	100,393	.21	.21
Buffalo Sunday Times (S)	104,076	.21	.21
††Corning Evening Leader (E)	9,389	.05	.05
Elmira Star-Gazette Advertiser (E&M)	33,487	.11	.11
Freeport Daily Review (E)	7,991	.05	.05
††Geneva Daily Times (E)	5,040	.04	.04
Gloversville Leader Republican (E)	7,238	.035	.035
††Ithaca Journal-News (E)	7,751	.05	.05
Jamestown Morning Post (M)	11,732	.04	.035
Middletown Times-Press (E)	7,127	.04	.04
Mount Vernon Daily Argus (E)	10,437	.05	.05
Newburgh Daily News (E)	12,132	.06	.06
††New Rochelle Standard-Star (E)	8,598	.04	.04
The Sun, New York (E)	257,067	.60	.56
New York Times (M)	356,471	.80	.784
New York Times (S)	610,041	.95	.931
††New York Herald-Tribune (S)	345,484	.693	.672
††New York World (M)	287,682	.595	.58
††New York World (S)	582,929	.595	.58
††New York Evening World (E)	294,442	.595	.58
Niagara Falls Gazette (E)	20,629	.07	.07
Port Chester Item (E)	4,732	.03	.03
Poughkeepsie Star and Enterprise (E)	12,824	.06	.06
††Rochester Times-Union (E)	70,406	.21	.20
††Syracuse Journal (E)	65,326	.16	.16
Troy Record (M&E)	22,679	.06	.06
Watertown Standard (E)	17,617	.07	.07
Watertown Times (E)	17,334	.08	.08

 A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1926.
†† Government Statement, March 31, 1926.
 Merged as Buffalo Courier-Express, June 14, 1926.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

How Canadian Dailies Handle Classified Accounts—Type Faces Claimed Most Satisfactory for Classifies—Want-Ad Bargain Sale in Wichita, Kan.

A PLAN for handling classified accounts is described in bulletins mailed to members by the Canadian Daily Newspapers Association.

Triplicate bills carry a rate of three cents a word, discounting 33⅓ per cent if paid within 10 days of the first insertion. If payment has not been made within 10 days, the duplicate is mailed at the end of the month. If not paid by the 10th of the following month, the triplicate is mailed.

The Canadian association argues that quicker results are obtainable by offering substantial discounts rather than billing the net rate at the beginning. Naturally, cash-with-order over-the-counter business is entitled to the discount. Advertisers telephoning in are notified of the terms. The business is billed on a separate classified billhead, and a coin card is used.

A type face claimed to be most satisfactory for classified pages is listed as linotype 5½ point, Number Four, with Bold Face Number Two Condensed. This face can be set on a five point body, fourteen lines to the inch. It is being used by the Chicago Tribune and the Chicago Daily News. Another face in use is the eight point Celtic on a ten point body, and various sizes of Devinne Outline, Condensed Outline, and Gothic Condensed Outline.

Before the Tribune and the News began using the 5½ Point No. 4 with Bold Face No. 2 Condensed in their classified and market sections, many letters incorrectly addressed were received at their offices. The figures were not always as legibile in print as they might have been, for reasons such as poor press work, paper, poor ink, and possibly poor stereotype plates. Formerly, many newspapers had "dead letter" offices; but confusion has been eliminated almost entirely by the use of 5½ Point No. 4 with Bold Face No. 2 Condensed. At present a letter addressed incorrectly to these papers because of illegibility of figures or letters is a rarity.

On both the Tribune and the News the size of the classified advertisement using Celtic or the larger Outline faces is increased, since the linage automatically increases when faces such as these are used instead of smaller sizes.

Is it silk stockings you're selling? No, only want ads. But you can stage a bargain sale of want ads. Yes, just as your local department store rids its shelves of old goods to stock up with new, you can hold classified sales to fill up your agate pages and introduce the public to the little ad with the pulling power of a giant.

The Wichita (Kan.) Beacon is advertising a "Want Ad One Cent Sale" to be held Saturday, Aug. 21, offering two three-time ads for the price of one plus one cent.

An office advertisement announcing the fact this week read:

"If you pay cash in advance for three consecutive insertions of a want ad in the Beacon, you will be entitled to another want ad of the same size for three consecutive insertions for 1 cent.

"All want ads must be paid for at the Beacon office, classified counter, before 6 P. M. Saturday, Aug. 21. These special ads will start in the Sunday, Aug. 22, issue.

"You were never offered a better bargain in your life. Be sure to take advantage of this opportunity to put two Resultful Beacon Classified Ads to work for you."

C. D. McLucas, director of classified advertising of the Buffalo Times, reports his paper has received the first help wanted advertisement to be radioed to Buffalo. The Intercity Radio Corporation sent the message, which was from a large Detroit automobile manufacturer, advertising for men.

The paper printed a promotion story telling of the event.

A useful way of filling bottom of column space has been discovered by the classified department of the Fond du lac Daily Reporter. A long arrow points the way to the back of the paper and beneath it is the legend in bold-faced italics: "Turn this way to the Classified Ads."

John C. Sturtevant, after a year in the classified department of the Los Angeles Examiner, has returned to Wausau, Wis., as manager of the classified department of his father's paper, the Record-Herald.

The Associated Dailies of Florida, in its bulletin dated from Jacksonville, Aug. 21, suggested to its members that carrier boys might be utilized for collection of small classified bills in residential sections.

"A small commission might induce good action and be very economical," the bulletin reads. "Such boys might be trained into embryo classified solicitors. Necessarily a card of authority to receive business and collect money should be issued in such cases."

CIRCULATION BUILDING SUPREMACY

We opened 1926 with the greatest newspaper campaign ever conducted, and secured over $300,000 in prepaid subscriptions for The Cleveland Plain Dealer. We can attain similar success for you!

THOUSANDS OF NEW, PREPAID, BONA-FIDE HOME-DELIVERED SUBSCRIBERS SECURED IN TEN WEEKS' TIME

HOLLISTER'S
Circulation Organization

Wire or Write us at 717-718 Commercial Exchange Bldg., LOS ANGELES

For Sale in FLORIDA

The Best UNBORN MAGAZINE Ever Offered

WITH its first issue about ready to publish; with advertising contracts for months ahead, and more than half of the text matter already illustrated and ready for composition, with friends already established:—

The originator and owner must sell due to pressure of other business.

One of the finest magazine opportunities ever offered in Florida. This publication will earn $30,000 to $50,000 in 12 months. Will sell for $10,000 or half interest for $5,000 to man or woman with real publishing experience either editorial or business, who is capable of handling entire proposition. An excellent opportunity for two men, editorial and business, who have had metropolitan training; who know art.

Address Box "A 765," care EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Responsible party with substantial banking references can handle this proposition on floatation expense. Owner will hold stock.

BUILDING NEWSPAPER CIRCULATION

(Continued from page 32)

Newspaper-promoted water sports and golf tournaments have been frequent in Chicago recently and more events are scheduled for the future.

The Chicago Daily News held its first annual open golf tournament Aug. 23 and 24. Cash prizes totaling $600 and other prizes, such as shoes and sweaters, were given. The tourney consisted of 36-holes medal play. When the Chicago Tribune gave its fifth annual water carnival in Lincoln Park, Aug. 22, police estimated the crowd at 100,000. The Chicago Evening American has donated $1,200 in prize money for the Chicago district open golf championships to be held Aug. 30, 31 and Sept. 1. A trophy was presented by the Chicago News to the winner of the annual race of the Lake Michigan Yachting Association, run this week.

The New York Evening Graphic announced this week that after Aug. 31, it will discontinue issuing travel accident insurance policies to readers.

One hundred boys of Chicago were happy on Thursday, Aug. 26, because they saw the Chicago Cubs play the Boston Braves as guests of Sally Joy Brown of the Chicago Tribune. The 100 winners were selected from letters written by hundreds of boys to Miss Brown telling her why they like the Cubs and why they wanted to see that particular game.

Similar parties are held throughout the year by the Tribune.

The Chicago Evening American is offering Lake Michigan excursion trips to its readers. Coupons are printed daily, which when presented in a series entitle readers to reduced fares on boats traveling to St. Joseph and Benton Harbor and return.

Carrier boys of the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch from over eastern North Carolina were tendered an all-day outing and picnic at Silver Lake between Rocky Mount and Wilson, N. C., recently.

Louisville newsboys may cry their wares on the city streets until 11 p. m. without molestation from policemen or others. This, in effect, was the ruling of Police Judge Eugene Dailey who dismissed Pedro Guitarez hailed before the city court on a disorderly conduct charge preferred by Patrolman John Gruber last week.

Gruber took the newsboy in tow at 9:30 p. m. when the lad declined to heed the patrolman's advice to quit calling his papers. The lad's refusal resulted in his being roughly handled by the policeman and in his arrest. He was promptly released when brought before Judge Dailey.

Charges were promptly preferred against the policeman by the newsboy. The Board of Public Safety held that Gruber had been unnecessarily rough and violent in his treatment of the boy. Gruber was suspended for two days.

New England's Second Largest Market

66,965

or 10.68% of the people in Rhode Island filed personal income tax returns in 1923.

In this respect Rhode Island ranks fifth in the United States.

Advertisers of meritorious products who already have secured distribution in New England's Second Largest Market will be found to be using almost exclusively

The Providence Journal
and
The Evening Bulletin

Circulation 105,000 Net Paid

Providence Journal Company
Providence, R. I.

Representatives
CHAS. H. EDDY CO., Boston New York Chicago
R. J. BIDWELL CO., San Francisco Los Angeles Seattle

N. Y. PUBLISHERS WIN NEWS VENDOR STRIKE

ewsdealers, After Refusing to Handle Manhattan Dailies One Week, Re-sume Sales in Time for Sunday Edition Aug. 22

A revolt of New Jersey newsdealers gainst handling New York dailies unless ieir union was recognized was successfully put down by the New York publishers following negotiations which ended i Jersey City last Saturday, Aug. 21.

The strike of vendors was directed iainly against the Bayonne News Company, which handles distribution for the ew York Times, Herald Tribune, orld, American, Mirror and Sun. Reaining Manhattan dailies were also fected.

The North Hudson Stationery, Cigar id Newsdealers' Association voted to scontinue sale of the New York papers i Aug. 16. The Jersey City Cigar, tationery and Newsdealers' Association llowed suit. Distribution of 60,000 orning, 45,000 evening, and 90,000 Sunay newspapers in Union City, West New ork, Woodcliff, Guttenberg, Bayonne, id parts of Jersey City and Hoboken, ere involved. Dealers continued to sell ew Jersey papers.

N. R. Hoover, circulation director of e New York World, and John C. ansfield, New York Journal, were amed to represent the morning and ening newspapers respectively.

They found that the dealers were makg the following demands of the ayonne News Company:

1. Delivery charges for daily and Sunay newspapers to be abolished.
2. No extra papers, other than the gular order, should be forced upon alers.
3. The company shall send an authored collector with power to adjust all aims.
4. The company shall reimburse alers for all just claims, such as carres and telephones, when they are bliged to use these means to adjust comany errors.
5. Papers reaching dealers after 6 m. shall have full return privileges.
6. All papers, daily and Sunday, must left protected from injury by rain or ow.

Hoover and Mansfield promised to adst the third and sixth demands. Negoations became deadlocked over the deand that the publishers recognize the wsdealers' union, with B. Schimel, of rsey City, secretary, and A. Kaplan, esident. The publishers refused this mand.

A force of 60 men was organized to ll newspapers in the towns affected, der direction of Hoover and Mansfield. oover claimed that almost immediately lf of the regular sale was obtained, and is mounted to two-thirds by Saturday, hen the newsdealers decided to give up. here were numerous arrests during the eek.

The newsdealers, according to Hoover, ere planning to demand later that all pers be delivered to them inserted, and ere also going to strike for better prices om cigar and stationery jobbers.

CHICAGO B. B. B. LAUNCHED

illiam R. Dawes, Association of Commerce Chief, Is President

Working toward the ideal of "honesty business and in merchandising for the nefit of the retailer and purchaser," the hicago Better Business Bureau was unched this week, inaugurating the osest co-operation between the Chicago ssociation of Commerce, many of Chigo's leading business men and the daily wspapers.

The temporary officers are William R. awes, president of the Association of ommerce, president; George Lytton, enry C. Lytton and Sons, vice-president; omer J. Buckley, Buckley, Dement and mpany, treasurer and Joseph R. Noel, anker, treasurer.

During the preparatory period of organization the committee conferred with the following executives representing the various daily newspapers: J. N. Shryock, Chicago Daily News; Eugene M. Parsons, Chicago Tribune; M. C. Meigs, Chicago Herald-Examiner; Hays McFarland, Chicago Herald-Examiner; George E. Row, Chicago Journal and W. M. McNamee, Chicago Evening American.

NEW ARKANSAS A. P. MEMBER

The Blytheville (Ark.) Daily Courier News is now receiving the leased wire day report of the Associated Press. Edgar G. Harris and Mrs. Harris are owners and publishers of the paper.

ADS AIDED FRIGIDAIRE

Newspaper Drive Sent Sales to 25,000 Plants a Year

Recent price reductions for Frigidaire electric home refrigerators is a testimonial of the effectiveness of newspaper advertising, R. E. Parsons, Kansas City distributor, stated last week.

"In the six years preceding last December," Mr. Parsons said, "only 90,000 Frigidaires had been sold. A newspaper advertising campaign was decided upon, with the result 200,000 plants have been sold and sales now are averaging 25,000 installation of refrigerating apparatus a month."

The Frigidaire plant in Dayton, O. now is being enlarged at a cost of $20,000,000.

'PLANES PROMOTE DOLLAR DAY

The Gloversville (N. Y.) Morning Herald brought Gates Aerial Circus to its city Aug. 19 to promote "Dollar Day." Merchants reported a 50 per cent increase in sales over last year. Airplanes scattered copies of the newspaper from the air.

Read EDITOR & PUBLISHER—$4 a year.

Get a

Close-up View of the Ludlow

SEEN moving rapidly at a distance, a high-powered automobile looks like a tiny floating speck. But when with warning honk it scurries you out of its way, its utter bigness is startling.

Seen at a distance, the Ludlow looks small. And it is—in size. But when you get a close-up view of it—in producing the most important lines in your paper (your ads and heads)—in saving time and labor—in casting clear-printing quality type in sluglines, 6 to 60-point, condensed, medium-width and extended faces—its bigness in use is obvious.

Ludlow Typograph Co.
2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago

San Francisco: 5 Third St. New York: 63 Park Row
Atlanta: 41 Marietta St. Boston: 261 Franklin St.

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

Another instance where looks are deceiving

Big production of quality material invariably follows the installation of the Elrod Lead, Slug and Plain Rule Caster

It casts any quantity. It cuts the material to any desired length. Its products stand up under the severest press and stereotyping conditions.

Get a closer view of the Ludlow and the Elrod and learn what they will accomplish in your plant. Write for complete details.

WOMEN IN ADVERTISING AND JOURNALISM

Mrs. Merritt Likes Journalism as a Companion Career to Housekeeping—Harriette Underhill Recovers from Operation—Woman Columnist to Resume Wok in St. Paul

EACH anniversary of the Farmingdale (L. I.) Post marks an anniversary in the newspaper career of Mrs. Mabel Witte Merritt. There have only been six of them so far, but each one has been a milestone of success for both Mrs. Merritt and the Post.

MRS. MABEL MERRITT

When Jesse Merritt started publishing the Farmingdale Post in 1920, Mrs. Merritt stepped in to help him, and she became so interested in the work she decided to adopt journalism as a companion career to housekeeping. And besides, as this editor-housekeeper says, "A country newspaper needs a woman to look after the little personal editorial details that men are liable to overlook."

With this ideal of editorial duty in mind and by her pleasant personality and willingness to help others, Mrs. Merritt has made many friends for the Post and has developed it into an institution of real service to Farmingdale. She attributes her editorial ideals partly to a letter she received from Col. Theodore Roosevelt on her editorship of the Post, which spoke highly of the country newspaper and its opportunities for serving its community. She also follows the office creed of the Marion Star, a copy of which Mrs. Warren G. Harding sent her, autographed by Mr. Harding.

Mrs. Merritt is a graduate of Vassar College with a degree of A. B., and she has a degree of LL.D. from New York University.

Before her marriage, Mrs. Merritt lectured on law at Columbia University, being the first woman to lecture there on that subject.

She is a devotee of outdoor life and a student of history.

Her time is divided between her office and her home, where two children turn her thoughts from editorial affairs to the cares of motherhood.

Mrs. Merritt is an excellent cook, and has published a cook-book to which Mrs. Calvin Coolidge contributed her favorite recipe for doughnuts.

Back in her editorial chair, Mrs. Merritt is a firm booster for Farmingdale. Four years ago she started an editorial campaign for a free public library for the town, and, after plugging steadily for three years, her goal was gained, and the residents of Farmingdale now have all the classics of literature at their disposal.

Her success with the Post has been due greatly to what Mrs. Merritt calls her "office creed": "The smaller affairs and concerns of everyday life have a place in the news columns as well as public questions. A neighborly interest in the happiness and an expression of sympathy in the sorrow of those about us make life doubly worth while."

Miss Harriette Underhill, motion picture critic for the New York Herald Tribune, has recovered from a serious attack of appendicitis, and has returned to the office.

Mrs. Harrison Hatton, who ten years ago was writing a "Love-lorn" column under the name of Elizabeth Page, will re-establish her column in the St. Paul Dispatch about Sept. 15.

Miss Hazel Mizelle has joined the Charlotte (N.C.) Observer staff, succeeding Philip Howeton, who has joined the Lenoir News-Topic.

Miss Henrietta L. McCarthy, society editor of the Marinette (Wis.) Eagle-Star, is a veteran in the newspaper business. More than 40 years ago, after finishing high school, she came to the Marinette Eagle as a typesetter when the paper was set by hand. She was proficient and was graduated from that job to one of reporting which she has carried on since, having been in continuous employment by the Eagle-Star as long as it has been a daily, her work being broken by an occasional vacation.

CANADA NEWSPRINT INCREASES

Dominion Shipped 968,881 Tons Up to the End of July

Newsprint exports from Canada have increased about 25 per cent for the first seven months of this year over a similar period in 1925.

Up to the end of July, 1926, Canada had shipped abroad 968,881 tons of newsprint, compared with 784,990 in 1925.

The value of Canada's newsprint exports for the first seven months of this year is $63,866,812, compared with last year's corresponding figures of $55,319,290.

Of the total newsprint exported by far the greatest proportion went to the United States, namely 917,785 tons, during the seven months. Last year it was 752,142 tons.

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

Philip O. Deitsch Joins Klau-Van Pietersom-Dunlap-Younggreen, Inc.—Sanborn Now with Barritt & Co., Chicago—St. Louis Agency Moves Offices

PHILIP O. DEITSCH, formerly with the National Better Business Bureau, New York, has joined the staff of Klau-Van Piettrsom-Dunlap-Younggreen, Inc., advertising agency, Milwaukee, Wis.

D. C. Sanborn, formerly associate editor of the American Restaurant Magazine and the Restaurant Digest, has joined Barritt & Co., Chicago advertising agency.

Willard A. Parker, advertising manager for the last twenty years of the Carleton & Hovey Company, Lowell, Mass., "Father John's" Medicine, has started an advertising and printing business at Lowell, under the name of The Parker Company.

The offices of the Frank D. Boyd Advertising Company, St. Louis have been moved from 4432 Washington Boulevard to 621 Security Building. The officers of the company are: President, Frank D. Boyd; vice-president, A. C. McKinley and secretary, Miss Ruth Reed.

Alan Lehmann of the Buffalo office of Barton, Durstine & Osborn has been given an indefinite leave of absence and is in Montana endeavoring to regain complete health.

Gordon Thornton, direct-mail advertising man has joined the McAllister Advertising Service, coincident with the forming of a new direct-mail department, of which he will have charge. He was for 15 years associated with the Kier Letter Company of Chicago.

James L. McCormick, for the past three years account executive with Mitchell-Faust Advertising Company, Chicago, has opened a general advertising agency under his own name at Amarillo, Tex. He will direct the advertising for a number of local advertisers.

Hugh M. Smith, recently general manager of the Atia Corporation, New York, hasJoined Frank Kiernan & Co., advertising agency of the same city.

Ernest John, for 16 years associated with the Victor Talking Machine Company, Camden, N. J., will start an advertising agency under his own name in Philadelphia, Sept. 1. Mr. John resigned from the Victor company last April. Before entering advertising work he had been engaged in newspaper work for seven years.

W. B. Turner has been appointed to take charge of the production department of the Aitkin-Kynett Company, Philadelphia advertising agency. He was formerly with George Batten Company, Inc., New York.

E. M. Perrin, formerly with the advertising division of the General Motors Export Company, has joined the Frank D. Webb Advertising Company, Baltimore, in charge of copy and production.

The Spafford Company, Inc., Boston advertising agency, announces the appointment to its staff of Normand Olmstead, formerly with the Morse International Agency.

G. A. Bryant, formerly advertising manager of the Welch (W. Va.) Daily News resigned recently to launch the Southern West Virginia Agency. At the present time he is handling card space in the commercial buses operating out of Welch.

24 Page Hoe Press for Sale

WITH COMPLETE STEREOTYPE EQUIPMENT

3 deck—3 roll—2 plates wide. Good condition, overhauled in 1921. 7 or 8 columns 21½" long. New A. C. motor and full automatic control has been printing Quincy Whig-Journal, and is offered because of consolidation.

Will Be Sold at a Bargain

Also Model 25 Linotype with Electric Pot and Model "K" Linotype.

For particulars address

ROY STEWART, MECH. SUPT.
DECATUR (ILL.) HERALD

243,311 was the average net paid daily circulation of The Baltimore Sun (morning and evening issues) for the month of

July, 1926

The average net paid circulation of THE SUNDAY SUN per Sunday for the month of July, 1926, was 187,733.

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

Morning Evening Sunday

Good Reporters make Good Newspapers

THE backbone of the newspaper is its news gathering staff. Lacking intelligently-collected and well-written news, no paper can be successful. Every successful newspaper has based its accomplishments primarily on the efforts of its reporters.

THE COPY DESK MAKES GOOD REPORTERS

THE COPY DESK, the keystone of the City Room, is the preceptor of the editorial staff. The Copy Desk cannot create good stories, but by its work of editing and by its surveillance of the work of the staff, can instil into the reporters its best conceptions of news gathering and writing. Thus the Copy Desk is likewise an all-important factor in the making of a paper.

NEW YORK COPY DESK TRAINING

NEWSPAPER MEN everywhere who wish to avail themselves of Copy Desk Training by the methods in use on the best New York newspapers will be interested in the new Home Study Course of the Newspaper Institute. This training in practical newspaper writing and editing in the New York manner was written by a newspaper man of 20 years' experience in the metropolitan field. A dozen New York staff writers contribute lectures on various phases of newspaper work.

It is the most complete and most practical training in newspaper work available by any method of instruction outside a New York editorial office, and contains many inside stories of how big news stories of recent years were handled. The Course is sold on reasonable terms. For catalog and special arrangements for members of the press, use the coupon.

Newspaper Institute of America
25 West 45th Street
New York

Newspaper Institute of America, Dept. 91
25 West 45th Street, New York

Send me, without obligation, complete information on your course in Newspaper Writing, also information on Special Press Enrollments.

Mr. / Mrs. / Miss. .....

Address .....

Occupation .....

POOR MANAGEMENT HIT BY COMMUNITY GROUP

Association Charges Enormous Sums Thrown Away by Cities Through Faulty Advertising—Launch Educational Drive

Enormous sums have been thrown away during the last two years because community advertising has been entrusted to "poor management and advertising novices," the American Community Advertising Association charges in a resolution recently passed by its executive committee.

Charles F. Hatfield, association president, announced a national campaign is being launched to bring before the American communities the need of adopting carefully planned promotion drives.

The resolution, favoring employment of a technical advertising service by communities, follows:

"WHEREAS, community advertising has grown at a very rapid rate during the past eight years, many taking a hand in its initiation and direction who have had little practical or technical experience, and

"WHEREAS, it seems quite evident that during the past two or three years that enormous sums have been, literally speaking, thrown away because this work was entrusted to poor management and advertising novices, and

"WHEREAS, the American Community Advertising Association recognizes the value in assisting in the creation of this new advertising business on a basis that will make for sound advertising development, now, therefore, be it

"RESOLVED, by the Executive Committee, of the American Community Advertising Association, a departmental of the International Advertising Association, that it go on record as favoring the employment of technical advertising service by communities that are initiating or contemplating the initiation of advertising campaigns, toward the end that such campaigns may be conducted on a sound business plan with resultant maximum efficiency, and further, be it

"RESOLVED, by the Executive Committee, that it offer to supply communities with reliable consultants, those experienced in planning who can give information and studied thought to this question of community advertising at the outset of such contemplated campaigns or while they are in progress; and that President Charles F. Hatfield, of St. Louis, Missouri, be directed to answer such inquiries as may be received from those interested."

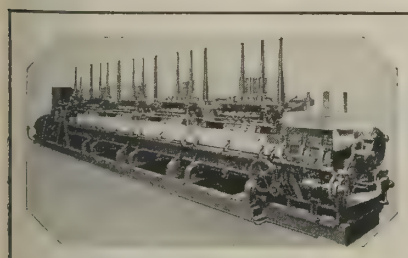
JOINS JOURNALISM STAFF

Byron Hunter Christian, assistant city editor, Seattle Post-Intelligencer, was appointed instructor in journalism at the University of Washington, Aug. 17 by Henry Suzzallo, president of the University. Mr. Christian is a graduate of the University, class of 1921.

N. E. A. COMMITTEE MEETS

Executive Group Plans to Engage Part-Time Regional Field Men

The engagement of several part-time regional assistant secretaries for the National Editorial Association is being planned by the N. E. A. executive committee, which recently appropriated $1,500 for this purpose. The plan is to place a field man in the East, one in the West and probably a third in the southern part of the country.



The executive committee also re-engaged H. C. Hotaling as executive secretary at its meeting at a salary of $4,500 a year. W. W. Aikens was re-elected treasurer and given an increase in salary of $50. The president and secretary were instructed to formulate plans for several contests to be inaugurated during the year. More rigid rules were also adopted relative to attendance at the annual convention and participation in the educational outings. In the future all fees will have to be paid in advance and registrations made at least ten days prior to the convention.

INSURANCE AGENT ADVERTISES

Effective sales copy for insurance is being placed in Shreveport, La., newspapers by the local agent of the Aetna Life Insurance Company. The copy asks the question "How Old Are You?" and lists below the cost of carrying a policy according to ages from 25 to 50 years. A coupon is attached to be forwarded by those interested in obtaining complete details of Aetna's modified life insurance policy.

ILLINOIS BILLBOARD RULING

Persons owning land adjacent to state highways may rent or lease sites for billboards, Attorney General Oscar C. Carlstrom has ruled in answer to an inquiry regarding an interpretation of the state statute forbidding signs or billboards on the state highways. Highway commissioners control the right-of-way but no statute attempts jurisdiction over the land adjoining it.

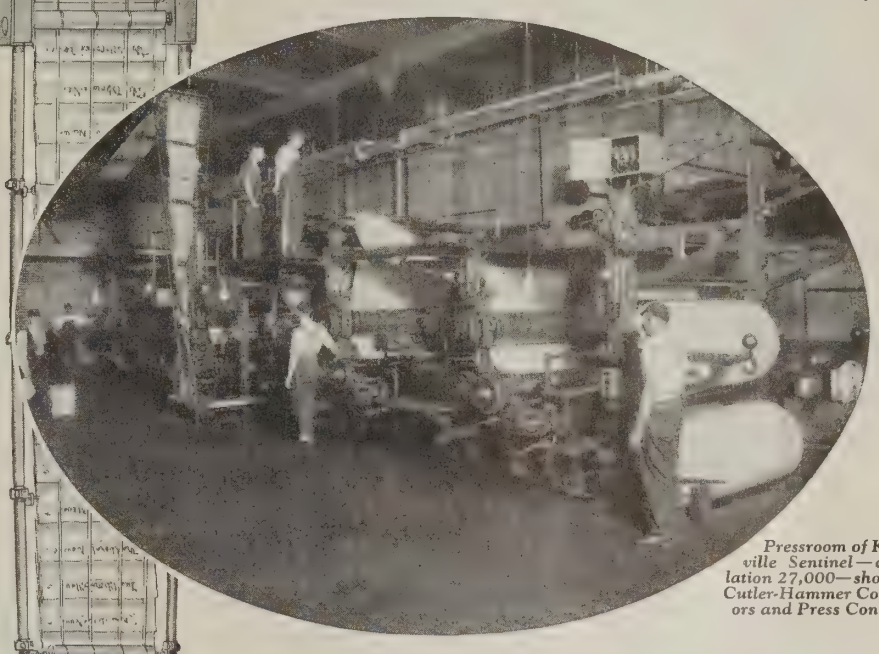
Halvorsen Newspaper Stuffing Machines are now being used by many of the leading newspapers from coast to coast and border border. In one plant the machine has saved one-fifth of its cost in six months. Papers can be delivered in better condition to distributors and to the readers.

After a thorough investigation you will want to invest
Write for full particulars

NONPAREIL MACHINE COMPANY
36 S. Throop Street, Chicago

Hit the street earlier — it pays



More than 18 million papers a day reach the street quicker via C-H Conveyors

Akron, O., Times-Press	43,275
Baltimore Sun	126,685
Birmingham Progressive Farmer	452,488
Boston Globe	127,558
Boston Transcript	31,978
Chicago Daily News	387,284
Chicago Tribune	700,000
Cleveland Plain Dealer	199,628
Columbus Dispatch	103,526
Danville, Ill., News	21,432
Charleston, W. Va. Mail	13,133
Kansas City Journal	145,778
Kenosha News	9,450
London, Eng., Daily Mail
Milwaukee Journal	132,813
Montreal Gazette	31,798
New York World	309,386
Palm Beach, Florida, Post	8,519
Philadelphia Bulletin	520,072
Philadelphia Inquirer	287,157
Philadelphia Public Ledger	128,594
Pittsburgh Post	141,962
St. Louis Globe-Democrat	226,579
San Francisco Examiner	172,293
Sioux City Journal	8,054
Sydney, Australia, Bulletin
Toronto Mail and Empire	114,767
Tokio, Japan, Asahi

And hundreds of otners.

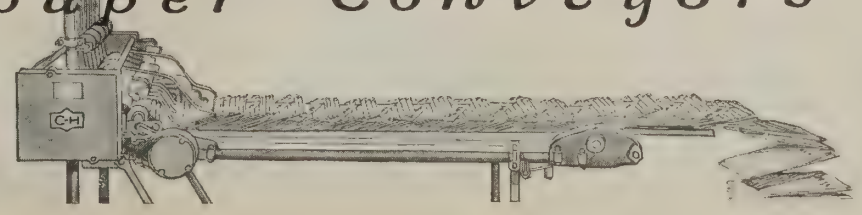
Circulation based on January, 1926, Standard Rate and Data.

A total of more than 18,000,000 papers are handled every day by C-H Conveyors

Pressroom of Knoxville Sentinel—circulation 27,000—showing Cutler-Hammer Conveyors and Press Control.

You can do it with C-H Conveyors

Not hours, or minutes, but seconds frequently make the difference between stale news and a "scoop"—especially where the story is "big" and the competition keen.



You can push the "dead line" ahead—yet your papers will reach the street earlier via C-H Conveyors. Carrying them in a steady stream, just as fast as the presses can deliver, C-H Conveyors take the papers up, overhead, around corners, through a ceiling or a wall and lay them down in counted piles, just where you want them—on the delivery or mailing tables.

C-H Conveyors eliminate the press-to-street "bottle neck" in newspaper production. They prevent waste, eliminate labor and SAVE TIME. Papers, large and small, from London to Tokio, are using them. Write for particulars today.

The CUTLER-HAMMER Mfg. Co.
Pioneer Manufacturers of Electric Control Apparatus
1203 St. Paul Avenue
MILWAUKEE, WIS.

CUTLER HAMMER

Newspaper Conveyors

Cutler-Hammer Automatic Control for newspaper presses, job presses of every description and for all motor-driven equipment of the printing plant, speeds production, saves time and labor and soon more than pays for itself in increased production. Write for descriptive literature today.

DR. SHERMAN, LITERARY EDITOR, IS DEAD

End Comes Following Canoe Upset in Lake Michigan—Had Been Associated with New York Herald Tribune Since 1924

Dr. Stuart Pratt Sherman, since 1924 literary editor of the New York Herald Tribune, died of heart disease on Aug. 21, while attempting to swim to safety following a canoe upset in Lake Michigan. Mr. Sherman with his wife, was spending his vacation at Galewood, Mich. The body was taken to Dorset, Vt., for burial.

Dr. Sherman was born Oct. 1, 1881, at Anita, Iowa, the son of John and Ada Pratt Sherman. He spent much of his boyhood at the family home at Dorset, Vt., and traveled considerably about the country with his parents. His knowledge of America is reflected often in his literary work.

Dr. Sherman was graduated from Williams College in 1903 and received his degree of Master of Arts from Harvard in 1904 and his Ph.D. at Harvard in 1906. He was married in 1906 to Miss Ruth Bartlett Mears of Williamstown, Mass., and was instructor of English at Northwestern University in 1906 and 1907. He went to the University of Illinois as associate in the English department in 1907, and was successively assistant and associate professor and finally professor of English in 1911. He held this position until 1924 when he came to New York to take charge of the literary department of the Herald Tribune.

He edited various works, and in the field of original writing contributed "Matthew Arnold," "On Contemporary Literature," "Americans," "Critical Woodcuts," "The American Genius" and "Points of View." He was a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters and of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, both of which were represented at his funeral.

FRANK B. STOUFFER

Louisville Courier-Journal and Times Treasurer Dies at 59

Critically ill since July 16 when he was forced to leave his desk, Frank B. Stouffer, treasurer and cashier of the Louisville Courier-Journal and Times, died Aug. 18, at St. Joseph's Infirmary. He succumbed to a complication of diseases. He was 59 years old.

Mr. Stouffer joined the staff of the Louisville Times 36 years ago. Previously he had been connected with the business office of the Louisville Post when that newspaper was edited by Col. Charles E. Sears.

Early this year Mr. Stouffer's health became so impaired that he decided to enter the Johns Hopkins Hospital at Baltimore. For a time he apeared to improve. With the coming of summer, however, he became worse but pluckily continued at his desk until the middle of July when his physician ordered a complete rest and treatment at the infirmary.

A brother, Walter W. Stouffer, is treasurer of The Herald-Post Company.

FRED C. WARMBOLD

Fred C. Warmbold, 51 years old, superintendent of the photo-engraving and rotogravure departments of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, died at his home in St. Louis on Aug. 19 of heart disease after a few hours' illness. Funeral was in St. Louis on August 22. Mr. Warmbold began as an electrotyper's apprentice in the printing office of Woodward & Tiernan, St. Louis, turning to photo-engraving when it was developed. He installed the photo-engraving plant of the old St. Louis Republic. After several years with that paper, he went to the Post-Dispatch 29 years ago.

NEWS MAN DIES IN FRANCE

Arthur H. Boyd, American newspaper man, died Aug. 22 in Le Tequoet, France, where he was spending his vacation. He was the son of the late Hugh Boyd, editor of the Bronx Home News and had acted as foreign correspondent to London newspapers as well as correspondent for several New York newspapers.

DOLIN DIES AT CONVENTION

Thomas F. Dolin, foreman of the pressroom of the Utica Daily Press for 44 years, died suddenly at Pressmen's Home, Tenn., Aug. 21, while attending the biennial convention of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America.

INDIANAPOLIS EDITOR DEAD

Lott Lee, 65, for 35 years telegraph editor of the Indianapolis (Ind.) News, died at his home in Indianapolis on Aug. 20. He began his newspaper career as a telegraph operator for the Associated Press, later becoming A. P. correspondent at Indianapolis.

Obituary

HUBERT L. ROBERTS, young newspaper man employed by the Sweetwater (Tex.) Daily Reporter, was instantly killed Aug. 14 when a Texas & Pacific passenger train struck an automobile in which Roberts was riding at a grade crossing five miles west of Abilene, Tex.

WILLIAM NICHOLS, 81, for the last 17 years city editor of the Plymouth (Ind.) Democrat, died Aug. 18. Mr. Nichols was a hand compositor and later a reporter on the Indianapolis News in the early eighties. For more than 50 years he was connected with the Indianapolis Sentinel, the Indianapolis Journal and News as a correspondent.

REV. HARRY L. BRICKETT of Southbridge, at one time editor of the Hillsboro (N. H.) Messenger, died in Manchester, N. H., Aug. 13.

MRS. MARIA LUISA MACCLURE DE EDWARDS, mother of Agustin Edwards, publisher of El Mercurio of Santiago and Valparaiso, Chile, died Aug. 23 at Santiago.

MRS. JENNIE N. KUSSMAUL, wife of W. B. Kussmaul, founder of the Granville (O.) Times died in a hospital at Newark, O., Aug. 20.

MRS. CLARA S. PULSIFER, 82, widow of Royal Macintosh Pulsifer, former publisher of the Boston Herald and first mayor of Newton, died in Cambridge, Aug. 18.

HERMAN C. COOPER, 32, reporter for R. G. Dun & Co., at Cincinnati and well known among financial and newspaper men there, died Aug. 20, at the Deaconess Hospital. Mr. Cooper left a widow. His body was removed to Nashville where he was formerly a newspaper reporter and financial editor.

MRS. ADA FLORENCE (BIGELOW) STRATTON, widow of Asa Evans Stratton, city editor of the Fitchburg (Mass.) Sentinel for many years and later editorial writer for that paper, died at her home in Fitchburg, Aug. 18. Mr. Stratton died Aug. 14, last year.

CHARLES A. ELLIOTT, 77, one of the oldest newspapermen, in point of service in Cincinnati, died at his home there Aug. 18. He spent approximately 50 years in active newspaper work, both in editorial and reportorial capacities. He was city editor of the Times-Star at one time. About 15 years ago he became blind, but in spite of this handicap he continued his work as a correspondent for a number of newspapers. Two years ago a stroke of paralysis incapacitated him. His widow, one son and a daughter survive.

CHARLES H. THOMAS, 77, for 43 years superintendent of the plant of the Buffalo (N. Y.) Express, died suddenly at his home in that city Aug. 19. He retired from active work about 5 years ago.

RICHARD E. SALISBURY, former secretary for many years of the Rhode Island District Newsdealers Association, died at his home, 16 Prarie avenue, Providence, R. I., Aug. 17.

STAFF HONORS MUNSEY

Services Commemorating Late Publisher's 72nd Birthday Held

Brief services commemorating the seventy-second birthday anniversary of the late Frank A. Munsey, former editor and owner of the New York Sun, were held Saturday, Aug. 21, in the Sun building.

Edwin S. Friendly, business manager, Fred A. Walker of the New York Telegram, and E. O. Petersen of The Sun Club, spoke briefly, each stressing the courage, loyalty and achievement of the man, who, coming to New York with a few dollars only, lived to build enterprises of far reaching scope.

"We who lived daily with Mr. Munsey need read no books on success to know how his success was achieved," Mr. Friendly said. "Mr. Munsey was at the height of his career, at its zenith, when he died. His life was an example in its strength, courage and ambition to succeed in the very highest American ideals."

UTILITY ADS IN BOOK FORM

The 1926 edition of "Representative Public Utility Advertisements" has just been issued by the Public Utilities Advertising Association. The volume contains 136 pages showing examples of copy used in the past year by utility companies. W. H. Hodge, Chicago, is president of the Association.

The New York Times

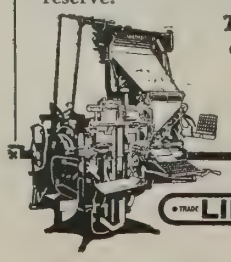
1851—1926

AMERICA'S FOREMOST NEWSPAPER

Seventy-fifth Anniversary Year

The New York Times, founded in 1851 by Henry J. Raymond, has for three-quarters of a century presented daily the news of the world. Upon its 75th anniversary The Times is at the pinnacle of American journalism—acknowledged as the first newspaper for its enterprise in gathering the news, for the accuracy, thoroughness and quality of its news judged by the standards of intelligent, thinking readers.

Having the greatest number of readers of intelligence and discrimination, The Times has for years surpassed all New York newspapers in volume of advertising. In seven months of this year The Times published 17,091,382 agate lines of advertising—6,306,982 lines more than the second newspaper, and a gain of 1,747,154 lines over the corresponding period of last year.



From the Linotype Mailbag

"Prompt service"

"We wish to acknowledge receipt of one assembling belt for our Model No. 14 Linotype, the order for which we wired you Friday. The belt was received by us before eight o'clock Saturday morning, and we are surely gratified with your prompt service and also with the good time made in the mails.

"Will you please send us another belt so that we may have one in reserve."

The Caxton Press
Canton, Ohio.

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

Your Market is an Uncharted Maze to the National Advertiser

Our pithy copy and pictorial layouts will chart the advertiser through the labyrinth of your market.

Tie Up With Your Market

PUBLISHERS SPACE SELLING SERVICE

49 West 45th St. New York City.

Copy ~ Layout ~ Art ~ Typography ~

A.B.C.
Charter Member

These two Badges of Honor

A.B.P.

Editor & Publisher Is Proud to Wear

The Audit Bureau of Circulations and the Associated Business Papers in each of which it holds membership are today the mightiest organized factors in the upbuilding and maintenance of CLEAN JOURNALISM of the most wholesome type.

To their platforms, which embody the highest ideals yet attained in the publishing business, EDITOR & PUBLISHER unhesitatingly subscribes, in toto, without the slightest reservation, in letter or in spirit.

In fact, before either organization came into being, EDITOR & PUBLISHER gave aggressive articulation to the principles of both, in preaching and in practice, and rejoices in knowing that it has played a large part in the success of each by its wholehearted support of the splendid things for which it stands.

This Means—

TO THE SUBSCRIBER

that he is the one master whom EDITOR & PUBLISHER serves. That nothing goes into its columns, editorially or advertisingly, that is not put there to serve his highest interests. That his subscription is asked for solely on the merits of the publication. That nothing is labelled "News" unless it is REAL news. That, so far as is humanly possible to safeguard, every advertisement carried is that of a responsible concern, every claim made in an advertisement is backed by the facts, every product or service advertised is something that can be used to advantage in either the advertising or the publishing business. That unfailing courtesy and integrity shall characterize EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S dealings with him, in every detail. That EDITOR & PUBLISHER is conscious of its obligations to him to make good its claims to leadership, and to sustain its record of more than forty years in proving itself a real leader, advocate and champion of all that he holds dear.

TO THE ADVERTISER

it means that EDITOR & PUBLISHER ungrudgingly recognizes his right to know where every copy of every issue goes, and affords him every facility to know everything about a subscription that is to be known. That no copy of EDITOR & PUBLISHER goes where it is not wanted or is not asked for. That EDITOR & PUBLISHER throws its books wide open and certifies to its records with the same readiness and pride that a national bank certifies to the correctness of its figures, or a coal merchant attests the fact that each ton of coal contains 2,000 pounds. That subscriptions are solicited only from those who can actually benefit from its service, and who are therefore, as classified in its A.B.C. statement, genuine prospects for his products or service. That the esteem, affection and confidence which its readers have in EDITOR & PUBLISHER are prima facie assurance that his advertisement is going to be read as part of its service—and responded to in proportion to the felt needs or desires which it arouses or creates in the subscriber's mind.

To both subscriber and advertiser this means clean circulation methods—that no individual is ever coaxed into subscribing by the use of premiums, or alluring promises that cannot be fulfilled.

Thus differentiated from the crowd by being both an A.B.C. and an A.B.P. NEWS paper, is it any wonder that EDITOR & PUBLISHER is going ahead by leaps and by bounds in every phase of the sound journalism for which it stands?

A.B.C.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1925
SUITE 1700 TIMES BUILDING, NEW YORK
42ND STREET AND BROADWAY

A.B.P.

IOWA GIRL EDITOR TEACHES COUNTRY SCRIBES BY UNIQUE HOUSE ORGAN

Toledo Chronicle Issues the Chronicle Cub as "a Regular Mail-Order Course in Up-to-Date Journalism"—Edited by Miss Irene Davis, Journalism School Graduate

By ERROL HUNT DERBY

A YOUNG woman, but a few years graduated from the University of Wisconsin journalism school, is paving the way for more experienced editors in the training of country correspondents and in keeping their work up to a standard.

IRENE DAVIS

In Tama county, Iowa, is Toledo, the county seat. There is published the Toledo Chronicle, a seven-column newspaper averaging twelve pages a week. Miss Irene Davis, assistant editor, is filling on an average of 15 to 17 columns of that paper with rural correspondence—all newsy items, well-handled and delivered at her office each week almost ready to go into type. Because of space limitations, much of this correspondence is set in 6 pt. solid. Needless to say, also, very little, if any, "boiler plate" finds its way into the columns of the Chronicle. Many of the stories of these some 35 correspondents are making page one regularly.

In addition, through a house organ known as the Chronicle Club, Miss Davis is giving her staff, and has for more than a year, a regular mail-order course in up-to-date journalism.

Every editor, unless he has battled the problem of suburban correspondence and correspondents for years and has successfully placed those reporters on a complete coverage basis of this districts, might well look into the work of this young woman.

What correspondents' letters and active participation in covering territory assigned to them has meant to the Toledo Chronicle is difficult to calculate. It is not surprising, however, to note that Toledo has a population of but 1,700, whereas the Chronicle has a circulation of over 2,000. The paper has stiff competition in the Traer Star-Clipper, as well, of course, as the competition of city dailies. Tama county has a population of 22,000, so the field for circulation, naturally, is limited.

Having acquired a hint of the work being done in this pioneer field from a comment by James Melvin Lee, in "Our Own World of Letters," in EDITOR & PUBLISHER, I wrote Miss Davis to learn more extensively of her plans and to try to find out just what she has accomplished and how.

I was curious to learn the reaction of the correspondents to the instruction hurled at them, so I asked this fair assistant editor about it.

"We have 35 correspondents," she replied. "When we started the Cub we warned them that we would soon be making corrections in their copy to comply with the instructions in the Cub, and, although a few of them were 'scared out,' we managed to coax them back with personal letters. They have reacted splendidly to the instructions. All to whom I have talked think it worth-while, and take a greater interest in their writing. They do try to follow rules, and we know they read the Cubs, for as soon as the Cub is out and their next letters come we notice they have made corrections.

"The use of the Cub requires strict editing on my part, for we must not let the cubs get anything on us. I am in full charge of all the correspondence, including that on two special pages for nearby towns, Montour and Garwin. Personal letters commending the cubs for their work secure excellent co-operation for us, and, in addition, we tell the rest of the correspondents through the issues of the Cub.

"We have made an effort to increase the length of the correspondent's letter, and have urged the cubs to send us two or three letters, then call us on the telephone if anything breaks.

"Although we have no way of tracing an increase in business directly to the work of the Cub," Miss Davis said in response to a query on that point, "I am certain that we have gained. The cubs are given a bonus for new subscriptions, advertising and live news, in addition to 3 and 5 cents an inch for their published items. Five cents is paid to our correspondents in larger towns who are doing extra good work.

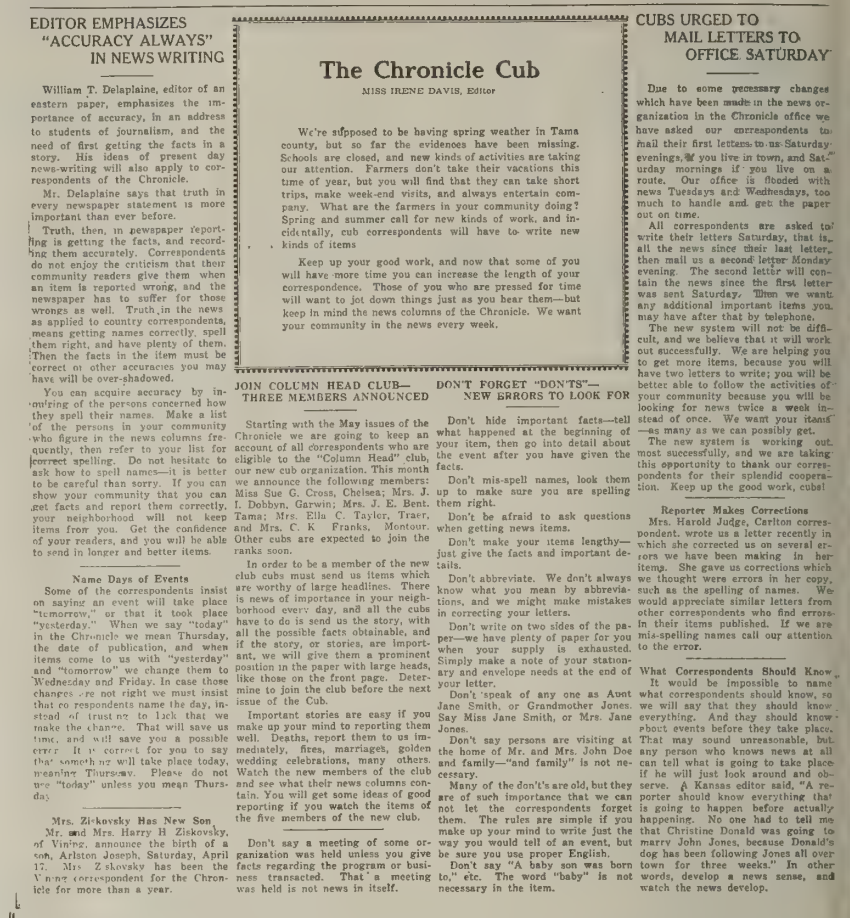
"Our circulation is growing and since we are the only paper in the city, having absorbed the other paper about three years ago, we have a good field."

The Chronicle Cub contains a variety of ideas and articles on the gathering, writing and editing of news as well as citing personally, as Miss Davis intimates, those correspondents who have done a particularly good work.

"The Chronicle Cub," said Miss Davis in a recent address before the Iowa Press Association, "was the first organized step toward training our country correspondents. We decided that we must have first, a regular house organ; second, this organ must have an interest to our correspondents; third, it must be personal."

And that is just what the Cub incorporates. In examining several issues, it was noted that the most common errors made by the suburban reporters were stressed; that timely tips on where to secure additional news, thus adding to the monthly wage, were given freely, and that here and there some of the higher qualities, for which we are all working in journalism, were clearly emphasized.

The Cub is not a bit pretentious. It could be run off in any job department in a short time, while the composition is not heavy. The paper measures 13½ by 10½ inches, is made up with four 13 em columns and uses three types of small heads.



One issue which is at hand shows that the lead stories of that month were: "NEWS STORIES IN YOUR COMMUNITY ARE LISTED HERE" and "CORRESPONDENT WROTE STORY ABOUT TAMA SUICIDE—READ IT," while other important items included "HOW TO REPORT DEATHS" and "FREQUENT ERRORS MAKE DON'TS NECESSARY." There were several shorter notes about members of the staff; one, encouraging correspondents to secure typewriters and the sugar-coating of some friendly advice. A two-column box editorial aided in the make-up of the page. The paper is printed on one side only.

Most editors will agree that the information to the correspondents in twelve such issues a year should naturally improve the type of material being sent to the news room—and, if not, then is the time to pick some new reporters.

In other issues special instructions to the correspondents were given about mailing letters two or three times a week—this being a weekly paper, it was advisable to have the copy spread over the week for editing and composition—the listing of news hints which frequently are neglected by a correspondent; an article concerning an eastern editor's views on accuracy in reporting and, of course, always the bits of gossip about the correspondents themselves. Even to an "old-timer," the Cub is read with interest.

"Training country correspondents," said Miss Davis in that address from which I quoted previously, "in the manner we are doing is not what we consider a cheap way of getting news. We do not know just what it costs us to issue the Cub each month, but that cost runs high. We are getting returns on money invested both in service from our reporters and in knowing that our reporters are giving their communities good service."

The correspondents are urged to make frequent visits to the office of the Chronicle, talk over their personal problems and iron out differences which must inevitably arise in as much as no two communities are exactly alike. Miss Davis explains that in several cases of exceedingly small communities some of the rules have been lifted in order to hearken back to the days of reporting "wood-sawing, plowing and evening visiting" items.

THE CHRONICLE CUB

The Toledo Chronicle

VOLUME TWO — TOLEDO, IOWA, JUNE 9, 1926 — NUMBER ONE.

EDITOR EMPHASIZES "ACCURACY ALWAYS" IN NEWS WRITING

William T. Delaplaine, editor of an eastern paper, emphasizes the importance of accuracy, in an address to students of journalism, and the need of first getting the facts in a story. His ideas of present day news-writing will also apply to correspondents of the Chronicle.

Mr. Delaplaine says that truth in every newspaper statement is more important than ever before.

Truth, then, in newspaper reporting is getting the facts, and recording them accurately. Correspondents do not enjoy the criticism that their community readers give them when an item is reported wrong, and the newspapper has to suffer for those wrongs as well. Truth, in the news as applied to country correspondents, means getting names correctly, spell them right, and have plenty of them. Then the facts in the item must be correct or other accuracies you may have will be over-shadowed.

You can acquire accuracy by inquiring of the persons concerned how they spell their names. Make a list of the persons in your community who figure in the news columns frequently, then refer to your list for correct spelling. Do not hesitate to ask how to spell names—it is better to be careful than sorry. If you can show your community that you can get facts and report them correctly, your neighborhood will not keep items from you. Get the confidence of your readers, and you will be able to send in longer and better items.

Name Days of Events

Some of the correspondents insist on saying an event will take place "tomorrow," or that it took place "yesterday." When we say "today" in the Chronicle we mean Thursday, the date of publication, and when items come to us with "yesterday" and "tomorrow" we change them to Wednesday and Friday. In case those changes are not right we must insist that correspondents name the day, instead of trusting to luck that we make the change. That will save us time, and will save you a possible error. It is correct for you to say that something will take place today, meaning Thursday. Please do not use "today" unless you mean Thursday.

Mrs. Ziskovsky Has New Son

Mr. and Mrs. Harry H Ziskovsky, of Vining, announce the birth of a son, Arlston Joseph, Saturday, April 17. Mrs Z skovsky has been the Vining correspondent for the Chronicle for more than a year.

The Chronicle Cub

MISS IRENE DAVIS, Editor

We're supposed to be having spring weather in Tama county, but so far the evidences have been missing. Schools are closed, and new kinds of activities are taking our attention. Farmers don't take their vacations this time of year, but you will find that they can take short trips, make week-end visits, and always entertain company. What are the farmers in your community doing? Spring and summer call for new kinds of work, and incidentally, cub correspondents will have to write new kinds of items

Keep up your good work, and now that some of you will have more time you can increase the length of your correspondence. Those of you who are pressed for time will want to jot down things just as you hear them—but keep in mind the news columns of the Chronicle. We want your community in the news every week.

JOIN COLUMN HEAD CLUB—THREE MEMBERS ANNOUNCED

Starting with the May issues of the Chronicle we are going to keep an account of all correspondents who are eligible to the "Column Head" club, our new cub organization. This month we announce the following members: Miss Sue G. Cross, Chelsea; Mrs. J. I. Dobbyn, Garwin; Mrs. J. E. Bent, Tama; Mrs. Ella C. Taylor, Traer, and Mrs. C. K Franks, Montour. Other cubs are expected to join the ranks soon.

In order to be a member of the new club cubs must send us items which are worthy of large headlines. There is news of importance in your neighborhood every day, and all the cubs have to do is send us the story, with all the possible facts obtainable, and if the story, or stories, are important, we will give them a prominent position in the paper with large heads, like those on the front page. Determine to join the club before the next issue of the Cub.

Important stories are easy if you make up your mind to reporting them well. Deaths, report them to us immediately, fires, marriages, golden wedding celebrations, many others. Watch the new members of the club and see what their news columns contain. You will get some ideas of good reporting if you watch the items of the five members of the new club.

Don't say a meeting of some organization was held unless you give facts regarding the program or business transacted. That a meeting was held is not news in itself.

DON'T FORGET "DONTS"—NEW ERRORS TO LOOK FOR

Don't hide important facts—tell what happened at the beginning of your item, then go into detail about the event after you have given the facts.

Don't mis-spell names, look them up to make sure you are spelling them right.

Don't be afraid to ask questions when getting news items.

Don't make your items lengthy—just give the facts and important details.

Don't abbreviate. We don't always know what you mean by abbreviations, and we might make mistakes in correcting your letters.

Don't write on two sides of the paper—we have plenty of paper for you when your supply is exhausted. Simply make a note of your stationary and envelope needs at the end of your letter.

Don't speak of any one as Aunt Jane Smith, or Grandmother Jones. Say Miss Jane Smith, or Mrs. Jane Jones.

Don't say persons are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Doe and family—"and family" is not necessary.

Many of the don't's are old, but they are of such importance that we can not let the correspondents forget them. The rules are simple if you make up your mind to write just the way you would tell of an event, but be sure you use proper English.

Don't say "A baby son was born to," etc. The word "baby" is not necessary in the item.

CUBS URGED TO MAIL LETTERS TO OFFICE SATURDAY

Due to some necessary changes which have been made in the news organization in the Chronicle office we have asked our correspondents to mail their first letters to us Saturday evenings, if you live in town, and Saturday mornings if you live on a route. Our office is flooded with news Tuesdays and Wednesdays, too much to handle and get the paper out on time.

All correspondents are asked to write their letters Saturday, that is, all the news since their last letter, then mail us a second letter Monday evening. The second letter will contain the news since the first letter was sent Saturday. Then we want any additional important items you may have after that by telephone.

The new system will not be difficult, and we believe that it will work out successfully. We are helping you to get more items, because you will have two letters to write; you will be better able to follow the activities of your community because you will be looking for news twice a week instead of once. We want your items—as many as we can possibly get.

The new system is working out most successfully, and we are taking this opportunity to thank our correspondents for their splendid cooperation. Keep up the good work, cubs!

Reporter Makes Corrections

Mrs. Harold Judge, Carlton correspondent, wrote us a letter recently in which she corrected us on several errors we have been making in her items. She gave us corrections which we thought were errors in her copy, such as the spelling of names. We would appreciate similar letters from other correspondents who find errors in their items published. If we are mis-spelling names call our attention to the error.

What Correspondents Should Know

It would be impossible to name what correspondents should know, so we will say that they should know everything. And they should know about events before they take place. That may sound unreasonable, but any person who knows news at all can tell what is going to take place if he will just look around and observe. A Kansas editor said, "A reporter should know everything that is going to happen before actually happening. No one had to tell me that Christine Donald was going to marry John Jones, because Donald's dog has been following Jones all over town for three weeks." In other words, develop a news sense, and watch the news develop.

Specimen front page of the tabloid course in journalism conducted by Miss Davis for her rural correspondents.

PROMOTING MARATHON SWIM

The first annual Chicago Herald and Examiner lake marathon swim for women will be held Sunday, Sept. 12. Norman Ross, 1920 Olympic swimming champion and former holder of many world titles will manage the swim. He has recently joined the Herald and Examiner staff, coming from the sport staff of the Chicago Daily Journal.

S. F. VETERAN RETIRES

George Dillon, San Francisco Bulletin composing room veteran, on Aug. 14 took off his apron and dropped his make-up rule on the table, retiring after 46 years' continuous service on the paper. Dillon began his job at the "case."

NEW I. N. S. CLIENT

The Chester (Pa.) Times has added the leased wire report of the International News Service.

ENLARGES SUNDAY TABLOID

The tabloid magazine section of the Utica (N. Y.) Sunday Observer-Dispatch was enlarged from 12 to 16 pages with the issue of Aug. 22.

20 INTERTYPES

are being used by

Weisbord Out As Mediator If Hilfers Goes
THE JERSEY JOURNAL
NOON EDITION
GAS OVERCOMES SIX IN FAMILY
STRIKERS' LEADER WANTS M'BRIDE OFF MOORE'S BOARD, TOO ABANDON HOPE FOR SAFETY OF 28 ON VESSEL
Four Women Hurt As "Ad" Draws 500 In Bargain Rush
JURY CONTINUES TO HOLD FATE OF DR. WHITTEMORE
FIRST AID BY 3 POLICEMEN SAVES LIVES OF VICTIMS NEGRO FOLKS AT
WASSER MAKES NOW PLEA FOR

No Standardized Intertype has ever become obsolete

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

Football Features Now on Syndicate Programs — Authors Business Bureau Handling Serial Fiction—Famous Features Gets "My Story" by Charlotte Mills

FOOTBALL features are now appearing on syndicate programs. Bell Syndicate, Inc., New York, announces "Bill" Roper, Princeton coach, as authority to cover news of the coming season; a serial called "Football for the Layman," by Ed. Thorpe; and some reminiscence and semi-technical copy by William S. Langford, known as "the dean of football referees." The New York World Syndicate offers pictorial coverage using cartoons and diagrams drawn by Will B. Johnstone.

The Authors Business Bureau, New York, has started dealing in serial fiction. Newspaper rights have been obtained for E. J. Rath's "Elope If You Must" and "The Murder of Roger Ackroyd" by Agatha Christie. Arthur S. Ford is manager of the syndicate department.

"My story," by Charlotte Mills, daughter of the slain woman in the Halls-Mills murder mystery, is being offered by Famous Features Syndicate, Inc., New York.

"The Diary of a New Father," daily feature by Robert E. Dickson, assistant Sunday editor of the St. Paul Pioneer Press, has been added to the list of the Register and Tribune Syndicate, Des Moines, Ia.

The Theatrical Event of the Week Service has been resumed in New York. Lee Norris, young actress, has replaced Anita Grannis as managing editor. The Service is planning a tie-up with radio.

Bell Syndicate, Inc., New York, has obtained second serial rights to "The Gleave Mystery" by Louis Tracy.

The Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, meeting in New Orleans, Aug. 20, named a new rose "Dorothy Dix," in honor of the Ledger Syndicate writer, who in private life is Mrs. E. H. Gilmer.

Avril Lamarque, formerly with the New York Telegram, is now drawing a daily comic strip called "Monguito," for United Features Syndicate, New York. Balloons are written in Spanish.

George Lardner, assistant editor of the Bell Syndicate, is on vacation in Niles, Mich. He is Ring Lardner's nephew.

Register and Tribune Syndicate, Des Moines, will soon start syndicating "Jots from Geography," new travel feature by Ernest Henderson, of the Birmingham News staff.

Karl K. Kitchen, author of "Up and Down Broadway" for the New York World Syndicate, returned to New York last week from a European trip.

Philip Strong, editor of the North American Newspaper Alliance, and Mrs. Strong, are spending their vacation at Keosauqua, Ia. Mrs. Strong writes fiction and features for NEA Service, Inc.

Frank Simonds' interpretive articles on foreign affairs will start appearing in newspapers Sept. 15, with a Geneva dateline. McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York, is distributor.

Frank King, cartoonist for the Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate, is motoring in western states this vacation.

Philip G. Bredesen has resigned from the advertising staff of the Chicago Tribune, effective Sept. 1, to become assistant manager of the Register and Tribune Syndicate, Des Moines. Miss Agnes Kelleher has been appointed managing editor of the same syndicate.

Arthur A. Sorenson, news editor of Pacific & Atlantic Photos, Inc., who covered the picture story of Gertrude Ederle's channel swim, returned to New York this week. P. & A. had material coming to this country on six different ships, and obtained a 24-hour beat when two airplanes were flown from Quebec to New York. EDITOR & PUBLISHER was in error last week in stating that P. & A. missed the boat from England on which other picture syndicates had photographs of Ederle's triumph.

WITH THE GENERAL ADVERTISERS

Arthur W. Sullivan Made General Manager of Tide Water Sales Company—Western Apple Campaign Successful—Vermont Fair Using 60 Newspapers

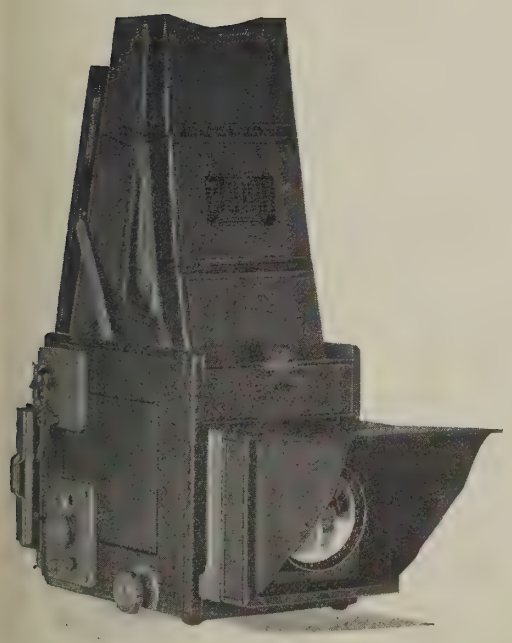
ARTHUR W. SULLIVAN has been appointed general manager of the Tide Water Oil Sales Corporation, New York.

Mr. Sullivan was previously sales development and advertising manager of both the Sales Corporation and the Tide Water Oil Company. He has behind him a long experience in the oil business in which he has specialized in sales and advertising work.

Mr. Sullivan joined the Tide Water Oil Company on January 1, 1926, after serving as the executive on Tide Water advertising with the advertising agency of Joseph Richards Company, Inc., with which he had been associated for seven years as vice-president. Previous to that, he was advertising manager of the Vacuum Oil Company for six years, during which time he was largely instrumental in developing the sales promotion and advertising programs of that concern from a modest beginning to a dominant position in the oil industry.

Succeeding Mr. Sullivan as sales development and advertising manager of the Tide Water organization is William C. Gittinger, formerly his assistant.

Sixty newspapers in New England and New York will be used in an advertising campaign to be conducted by the Rutland Fair Association, Rutland, Vt. Will L. Davis is president.



The Wenatchee District Cooperative Association, Wenatchee, Wash. is planning an enlarged advertising campaign as a result of an increase in the sale of Jim Hill apples last year. The Portland, Ore., office Honig Cooper Company, Inc., directs the account.

H. M. McCargar has resigned as advertising manager of B. Kuppenheimer & Co., Chicago clothing manufacturers, after 8 years service with that concern.

A. C. Waggoner, advertising manager of the Continental Optical Corporation, New York, has been promoted to vice-president in charge of sales.

Walter J. Avery has been made advertising manager of the Commonwealth Shoe Company, Whitman, Mass., manufacturer of Bostonian shoes.

Pacific Coast newspapers will be used in an advertising campaign to be conducted by the British Columbia Sugar Refining Company, Vancouver, B. C., promoting its Rogers Golden Syrup.

3¼ x 4¼ Revolving Back
Graflex, Series C, with 6½-inch Cooke Anastigmat
f.2.5
Shutter speeds: 1/5 to 1/1000
Price $260

The campaign is coming —the camera is here

Enliven your paper with Graflex views of political events, glimpses of candidates in action.

There's a new Graflex with which your camera staff can assure the supply of pictures. Compared to previous models, its lens is three times as fast: f.2.5.

Such speed means that light conditions which once beat the photographer are now easily conquered. Instantaneous exposures made with this camera indoors or in rain or late in the day can yield detailed, striking pictures—the kind that readers praise.

Let the new Graflex add vigor to your paper's part in the campaign.

Consult a dealer or write to Rochester. Graflex cameras are now made by The Folmer Graflex Corporation, Rochester, N. Y.

For sale by
Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y.

PRINCESS RIGO LOSES N. Y. LIBEL SUIT

Wife of Gypsy Violinist Objected to Her Picture Published in Mirror and Asked $250,000 Damages—Held Caption Ridiculed Her Suit for $250,000 damages filed by Princess Rigo against the New York Daily Mirror was dismissed in New York Supreme Court last Friday, Aug. 20.

The Princess had objected to a picture of her published by the Mirror on April 8, which showed her in a "housewife's dress" scrubbing a floor. A monkey was perched on her shoulder, and a cat lay at her feet. The picture was captioned:

"A far cry from affluence—Princess Rigo, wife of the famous gypsy violinist, has turned to her fingers for a livelihood, but such a different use than that employed by her husband years ago when he was feted by Europe. Her pets solve the pain."

Counsel for the plaintiff held the caption held his client up to public ridicule and scorn, thereby injuring her business and reputation, in that it imputed that Princess Rigo was a scrubwoman and was scrubbing floors for a livelihood. It was further alleged that the picture was obtained by fraud and deceit.

Princess Rigo had opened a tea room. A representative of the Mirror came to see her. He found her in the housewife's dress and asked her to pose with the pail and scrubbing brush. Princess Rigo alleged he promised to mention the opening of her tea room. This was denied by attorneys for the newspaper.

The defense contended the article complained of was not libellous per se, in that it was no crime or disgrace to be a scrubwoman, and further that it was the duty of the court to dismiss the case since no special damages were pleaded. How the photograph was obtained was held to be immaterial in an action for libel.

LAWYER SUES IOWA DAILY

Suit for $50,000 libel damages has been filed in the Rock Island, Ill., circuit court by Representative Harry McCaskrin, against whom disbarment proceedings instituted by the bar association are under way, against the Times Company, publisher of the Davenport (Ia.) Times, and E. P. Adler, publisher. Three counts are contained in the libel suit, including publication of the original charge of the bar association, and publication of the testimony of two of the principal witnesses who appeared against the attorney-legislator.

LORD BEAVERBROOK RETURNS

Lord Beaverbrook, proprietor of the London Daily Mail, and his sons, the Hon. Max and Peter Aitken, returned to England Aug. 24, following a brief visit to this country.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

GOOD JOURNALISM

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 19, 1926

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: Allow me to congratulate you most heartily on the splendid fight you are making on behalf of our trade against judicial usurpation. It is not only good journalism, but it is good patriotism, and of a very high order.

Yours most faithfully,

WILLIAM HARD.

GOLCONDA FOR PRESS AGENTS

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: I have watched with interest for some time your campaign to protect newspapers and magazines from "space grabbers."

Probably you know that religious papers are more susceptible to printing what should be paid advertising as free publicity or news than any other type of paper. This is because they do not have the funds with which to purchase what they often need and frequently have to rely on what is furnished gratis—that is, it would be gratis were it not taking up space which should be used for paid advertising. Particularly do they "fall" for propaganda which has with it attractive cuts. No doubt you have seen a recent result in the wide use of a cut sent out with a publicity story from Henry Disston and Son, Incorporated, and showing Philadelphia's Grindstone Church. None of the several church papers that I have seen which used this cut edited out in any way the advertising value of the story for this commercial house.

The Advance was tempted like others to write for the cut because of its attractiveness, but instead wrote asking that the Disston people advertise—and no answer was received.

Another firm which recently wrote sending considerable free publicity material concerning "Burning Roofs Cost South $6,297,930 a Year" was the Asbestos Shingle, Slate & Sheating Company of Ambler, Pa. This story apparently also found wide use in not only the religious press, but also in the daily press, although it was really propaganda on behalf of the Asbestos Shingle, Slate & Sheating people.

When the Advance wrote them suggesting that the paper could not use their "handout" but that it would make good advertising material for a paid advertisement, they sent the letter, a copy of which we enclose herewith. You will note with interest, as did we, the paragraph as follows:

"At the present time, however, we are not inclined to increase our space, as the cost of educating the reading public is a tremendous one, (italics mine) and the only thing that seems to touch a man's better judgment is 'a loss' etc."

It is rather strange that it did not occur to the writer—the advertising manager, by the way—that "the cost of educating the reading public" which is a tremendous one for the Shingle, Slate & Sheating people has to be borne by the religious and other press when advertising for the education is not paid for by one concern which it strictly benefits.

There is no doubt that a campaign of the kind that you are furthering should be fostered, particularly so far as it has reference to commercial concerns where profits result to one individual firm from the free publicity given. There is a question however, when it becomes a matter of publicity from philanthropic organizations where no one individually benefits.

More power to you in your efforts.

Very truly yours,

THE PRESBYTERIAN ADVANCE

By JAMES V. CLARKE.

PRAISES MARKET GUIDE

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: We are anxiously awaiting your Market Guide number, as we consider this a tremendously valuable aid to the daily newspapers in the smaller cities.

EDGAR G. HARRIS,

Publisher, Blytheville (Ark.) Daily Courier News.

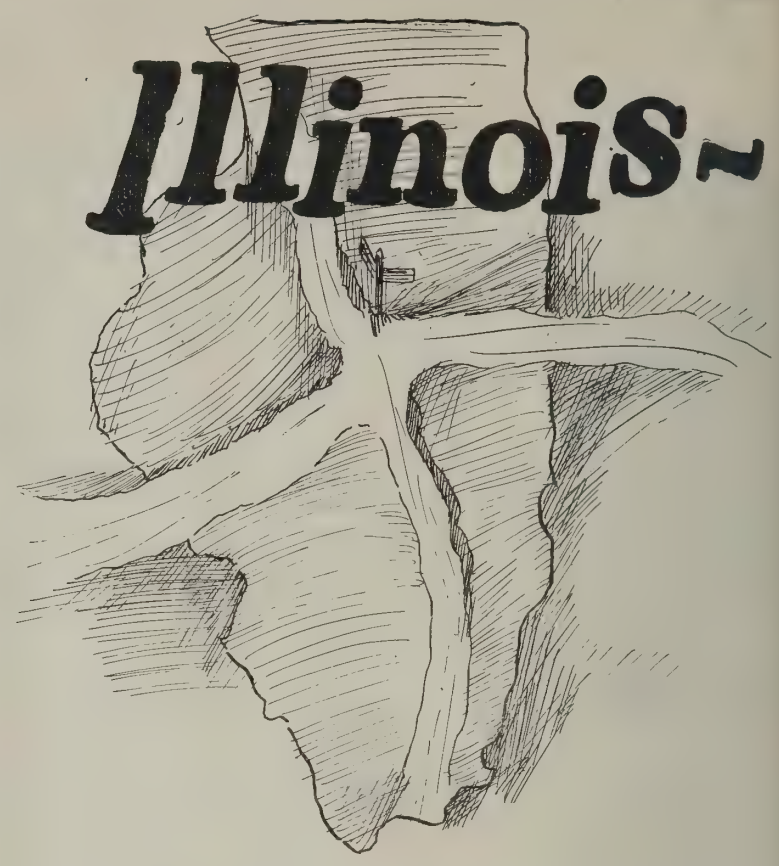
FOR PROMPT SERVICE

TYPE

BORDERS ~ ORNAMENTS ~ BRASS RULE



Printers' Supplies

KELLY PRESSES ~ KLYMAX FEEDERS ~ PAPER CUTTERS
HAMILTON WOOD AND STEEL EQUIPMENT, INCLUDING OUR AMERICAN CUT-COST EQUIPMENT

Carried in stock for prompt shipment at the following Selling Houses of the

American Type Founders Company

BOSTON	RICHMOND	DETROIT	MINNEAPOLIS	SAN FRANCISCO
NEW YORK	ATLANTA	CHICAGO	KANSAS CITY	PORTLAND
PHILADELPHIA	BUFFALO	CINCINNATI	DES MOINES	SPOKANE
BALTIMORE	PITTSBURGH	ST. LOUIS	DENVER	WINNIPEG
	CLEVELAND	MILWAUKEE	LOS ANGELES

The Natural Crossroads of the Middle-West—

Situated in the very heart of the country's most fertile and prosperous valley, at the very crossroads between the Industrial East, and the Agricultural West, the Ore Producing North, and the Cotton Growing South, possessing the cheapest water transportation on earth, and the finest railway facilities in the world, it is only natural that this great state should offer a market of great wealth and buying power, that no advertiser great or small, can afford to stay away from.

The daily papers are your messenger to the homes and to the great buying public of Illinois. If your product has merit, your possibilities for greater distribution are unlimited.

Consult these papers listed below. They are ready to assist you in developing this great market.

	Circulation	Rates for 2,500 Lines	Rates for 10,000 Lines
Aurora Beacon-News .....(E)	18,694	.06	.06
†Chicago Herald & Examiner....(M)	385,276	.55	.55
†Chicago Herald & Examiner.....(S)	1,153,360	1.10	1.10
†Chicago Daily Journal .....(E)	123,771	.26	.24
Evanston News Index .....(E)	6,729	.04	.04
Freeport Journal-Standard .....(E)	9,613	.045	.045
Joliet Herald News .....(E)	19,591	.06	.06
††Mattoon Journal Gazette .....(E)	5,712	.03	.03
Moline Dispatch .....(E)	11,556	.045	.045
Monmouth Daily Review Atlas..(E)	5,416	.035	.035
Peoria Star .....(S) 22,497..(E)	29,874	.085	.07
Rock Island Argus .....(E)	11,248	.045	.045
Waukegan Daily Sun .....(E)	5,213	.03	.03

A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1926
†Government Statement, March 31, 1926
††Government Statement, September 30, 1925

PRODUCTION PRIME ELEMENT IN FIXING WAGES

(Continued from page 10)

not be some union's 'private allowance.'

"In other words, the dollar which the employer pays must be a one hundred cent dollar and the service which the employe renders should be a one hundred per cent service.

"Another feature of the proposed contract of the New York Local might perhaps be more properly treated under the topic of Apprentices, but it is pertinent here because it is an example of the improper demands which are frequently made by union officials. The first demand is that the selection of apprentices shall be in the hands of a board composed of the foreman, chapel chairman and the instructor of the school. It is pertinent to ask, since all three of these men would be members of the union, when and how the publisher is properly represented. You may say that the foreman represents the publisher, and in many things he does; but in this instance, with a majority already representing the union, the foreman is outvoted before the ballot is taken. I do not know the reason why the New York Local chose to change the method of procedure which has been in vogue for the last two years, by which apprentices appeared personally before a committee made up equally of representatives of the union and of the publishers, and their qualifications were jointly determined. I was a member of that committee, and I felt that by the procedure followed equal justice was done to the union, to the publishers and to the applicants.

"I cannot of course do otherwise than indorse and applaud the attitude of your president on the question of arbitration. He and I travel exactly the same road in that matter. When an office shall have been established as a union office, and the employes of that pressroom are all union employes, then I am willing, and he has expressed himself as willing, that any questions which we cannot settle by negotiation and conciliation shall be referred to some disinterested and unbiased tribunal for final determination.

"I remember hearing a New York publisher say after he had read President Berry's elaborate plan for a joint conference committee and a printing commission in New York, to whom all unsettled disagreements should be referred, that he considered it the greatest document affecting the relations of employers and labor unions that had been written in recent years; and I was amazed to find that the New York Local in its proposed contract found it advisable to propose a new form of joint conference committee and the elimination of the printing commission.

"Arbitration is the soundest principle ever designed to apply to human relations, unless we except the commandment to 'Love thy neighbor as thyself.' If we could all bring ourselves to obey that commandment, then contracts and arbitrations would be useless gestures; but unfortunately the rule which the Messiah laid down is not very generally applied. The attitude of your union on arbitration is all that any publisher can ask, because there are no restrictions imposed and no limitations provided. With this principle in force there should never be another strike involving the pressmen of North America.

"I know that one of the things dearest to President Berry's heart is the question of Schools for Apprentices, and I join him in his desire to give better technical education to those young men who are preparing themselves to earn their living by working in pressrooms. I am, I think, the only publisher in the United States who ever gave a written examination to a pressman, covering information regarding his trade. I did this because his discharge was contested by the then president of the local union, and the amazing ignorance of that workman as to simple matters, although he had been years in the business indicated how necessary some form of instruction was if competent workmen were to be furnished.

"The school which has been established in New York as a part of the regular school system of the city had an admirable beginning and has made promising progress during the first year of its operation. I wish that in addition to the instruction of the apprentices there might be some method devised by the union of obtaining an accurate estimate of the knowledge and qualifications of the journeymen, and where a man was found to be lacking in the knowledge of those things which he should properly know about that there should be some method of instruction provided and he should be forced to avail himself of it.

"I have already expressed myself as to the method of the selection of apprentices and in the plan which I indorsed there would be ample provision for the choice of young men physically and mentally fit for the work and giving promise of being worthwhile pressmen. I do want to call your attention, however to what I believe results in occasional injustice to the boys who begin at the bottom of the ladder with the hope of reaching the top. The union rule and the local contract provide for an inflexible four-year apprenticeship, i. e., no boy can become a pressman in less than four years, although the apprenticeship committee may keep him in the ranks of the apprentices for a longer time if conditions seem to require it.

"Do you realize that a young man, by maintaining the standards of scholarship required can be graduated from any university in this country in four years? Do you realize that a technical engineer can get a degree in four years? That a physician or a lawyer can begin practice four years after he began the study of his profession?

"And do you think that it ought to take as long to make a pressman as it does to make a doctor, provided the doctor is a good doctor and the pressman a good pressman? I have no objection to the fixing of a four-year period for the training of an apprentice, but I do claim that that period should not be inflexible; that a young man who, at the end of three years is able to demonstrate his ability as a journeyman pressman should be graduated the same as he would from Harvard or Yale or the University of Tennessee if at the end of three years he could pass all the examinations required for a degree. We have no right to take from any young man a year of the best part of his life so far as productivity goes; we have no right to lessen his earning power or restrain his ambitions, and we do all of these things when we do not recognize his progress and give him the benefits and rewards of his attainments."

Debate on the nomination system was brief and vigorous.

The union's constitution now provides that each candidate for president and for secretary-treasurer have the endorsement of at least 10 per cent of the chartered subordinate unions in good standing from at least 15 different states or provinces. Each candidate for any other office must have the endorsement of at least 5 per cent of the chartered subordinate unions in good standing from at least 15 different states or provinces.

The convention declined to concur in recommendation of the committee in a proposal to amend the constitution so that the regularly elected officers of the International Union shall be entitled to every right and privilege of elected delegates in the convention, whether delegates or not. This resolution was proposed by W. Thomas Polston, of Chicago No. 3.

A resolution carried providing that all unions that have a membership of 1,000 or over may take a chapel vote at all elections.

A survey of the women feeders, as to number and differentiation, was authorized for a report to the next convention on a proposal to permit women feeders who are members of the International Union at the age of 60 years and who have been in continuous good standing for 15 years, instead of 20 years as now, receive the $7 per week pension benefit.

Use the
COMBINATION RATE
OF
The Gazette Times
(Morning and Sunday)
AND
Chronicle Telegraph
(Evening)
in order to cover Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania thoroughly at the lowest cost.
Member A. B. C.
URBAN E. DICE, Nat. Adv. Mgr.
GAZETTE SQ., PITTSBURGH, PA.
National Representatives:
E. M. BURKE, Inc.
42nd and Broadway, N. Y.
122 S. Michigan Blvd., Chicago.
Constitution Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.
R. J. BIDWELL CO.
742 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.
Times Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

Still Gaining!
The net paid average daily circulation for THE BALTIMORE NEWS for April was 124,636—the highest under its present management.
The net paid average for the American was 57,503.
You need these papers to cover Baltimore, they reach more than half the City.
Sold separately or in combination.
THE BALTIMORE NEWS
and
Baltimore American
ANNOUNCEMENT
To National Advertisers and Advertising Agencies
The National Advertising Departments of
New York Evening Journal
Baltimore Evening News
Baltimore American
Washington Evening Times
Washington Herald
Atlanta Evening Georgian
Atlanta Sunday American
are combined with offices in New York—Chicago—Detroit
New York Office:
W. G. HOBSON, Eastern Manager
2 Columbus Circle
Telephone: Circle 5400
Chicago Office: F. E. CRAWFORD, Western Manager, 913 Hearst Bldg.
Detroit Office: FRANKLIN PAYNE, Representative, 1351 Book Bldg.
All under direction of:
JAMES C. DAYTON, Publisher
NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

National Advertisers
use more space in
The Sun
on weekdays than in any other
New York Newspaper morning or evening
280 Broadway New York

DOMINANT!
in
Pinellas County, Florida
Daily News
ST. PETERSBURG'S PICTURE PAPER
Owned by Frank Fortune Pulver
Edited by Major Alfred Birdsall
America's Biggest Tabloid
Florida's Fastest Growing Newspaper
To be assured of Complete Coverage—
USE THE NEWS
Represented by
GEORGE B. DAVID COMPANY
NEW YORK: 110 East 42nd Street
CHICAGO: 1010 Hartford Building

CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO. CHICAGO — CLINE SYSTEM
Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control is used by
BUFFALO NEWS
Buffalo, N. Y.
Ask them about it.
CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO.
Chicago: 111 West Washington Street
New York: 47 West 34th Street
San Francisco: First National Bank Building

MERCHANT & EVANS CO.
PHILADELPHIA
Producers of
SPARTAN TYPE METAL
Since 1866
LINO • MONO • STERO
INTERTYPE
COMBINATION
Stocks in Principal Cities

The Normal Season in Miami
23%
MORE CIRCULATION
Herald July circulation figures this year as compared with the same period for 1925 show a net increase of 23%—substantiating the continued phenomenal growth of Miami and its market under normal conditions—at a time when nearly every reader is a bona fide resident.
No other market in America is in as healthy a state as the Miami market. No other market offers greater possibilities to the national advertiser.
The Miami Herald
"Florida's Most Important Newspaper"
Frank B. Shutts, Publisher.

COMMERCIAL AVIATION IN EUROPE FAR AHEAD OF U. S., MURDOCK REPORTS

Wichita Eagle Publisher Describes His Eight Weeks' Airplane Tour on Continent—Covered 3,000 Miles by Plane—Companies Subsidized

EUROPE is far ahead of the United States in the field of commercial aviation, Marcellus Murdock, publisher of the Wichita Eagle, declared upon his return to Wichita recently following an eight week airplane tour of Europe. Accompanying him on his trip was his son Marsh Murdock. The Murdocks covered more than 3,000 miles by air, taking planes wherever available. The tour included France, Spain, Italy, Switzerland, Austria, Germany, Denmark, Holland and England.

"The airplane passenger service in Europe is amazing," said Mr. Murdock. "I don't mean I was surprised at the far flung net work of airplane routes from the Baltic to the Mediterranean and from the Irish Sea to the Volga. We have all been made aware of this through news dispatches. But the fact that startles you is the European's settled attitude of mind and his acceptance of air travel as a regular means of transportation.

"Airplane travel, whether in France, Germany, England, Holland, Denmark or any of the other countries, is looked upon without a thought of its being an unusual hazard. It is only occasionally that it appears to the European as even novel. In every plane we rode in, there were one or two business men, who spent their time reading newspapers and hardly looked up on taking off or landing.

"It is this attitude, rather than the scores of established air lines with their fleets of passenger and freight planes, which puts Europe so far ahead of America in this development.

"The main factor in commercial aviation is that of economy—economy of time. In our case the distance covered by plane was some 5,000 kilometers or 3,000 miles. A total of 30 hours was used in doing this. It would have taken 100 hours to cover the same distance by train. The saving in time was 70 hours, almost three days of 24 hours each.

"The cost in dollars and cents is practically the same as railroad fare. This is made possible of course by the subsidies granted the operating companies by the different governments. England, France, Germany, Holland, Sweden, all underwrite their companies to the extent of a half million to three-quarters of a million dollars a year, Belgium and Switzerland for lesser amounts.

"There is much to show for the expenditures. The passenger air lines in Europe are but six years old. Last year about 6,000,000 miles were flown and 100,000 passengers carried on regular air routes.

"The one dominant factor in promoting aviation, as it is the mainspring in all European affairs, is the preparation for the next war. Supremacy in the air means supremacy on land is the slogan of the aviation crowd.

"France, Great Britain and Germany are all on their toes.

"France's civil aviation is just a hand maiden for her military air establishment. There are 30 companies building planes in France. There are four or five companies operating passenger routes. The life of a plane is estimated to be about 2,000 hours of flying. These French companies are required to operate their planes about 300 hours, then store that plane and take out a new one for operation. This is building up a great French reserve of planes.

"The war purpose moreover even appears in the type of plane. Marsh and I rode from Paris to London in a Farman Goliath, which is a standard type of bomber in the French military service. It is an enormous biplane with an engine on each side of the fuselage attached to the lower wing, equipped with a dozen wicker chairs.

"Great Britain's protective purpose is not so obvious but it is there nevertheless. The Imperial Airways Limited is a consolidation of all English companies and while Sir Eric Geddes and his associates have been trying to get the four English air trunk lines on a better paying basis, Great Britain continues putting up a half million and more a year and will continue to put up.

"Germany's position is unique in regard to aviation. It has two big companies. One is the Deutsche Aero Lloyd and the other is the Junkers Luftverkehr. The first is primarily promoting commercial aviation. The latter is promoting commercial aviation as a means of establishing control of commercial aviation in as many countries outside of Great Britain and France as it can—all no doubt for the Fatherland.

"Under the Versailles treaty nine restrictions were imposed on Germany in relation to airplane construction. All that country's airplane material was taken away from her. These two things that at first appeared to be a curse and were so meant turned out to be a blessing. By the latter move, Germany was rid of a lot of obsolescent material. By the imposition of the nine rules or restrictions German ingenuity, and German patriotism were challenged. German engineers and constructors substituted better ideas for those prohibited or go around. the restrictions if there was no other way. German patriotism joined hands with German manufacture and capital, formed the Deutscher Luftfahrt Verband, a nation wide society for the spreading of civil aviation propaganda, an ex-war pilots' association, German Aero clubs, scores of Amateur Flying clubs. Military flying schools in Germany are prohibited by the Versailles treaty provisions. However, Germany has thirty civilian flying schools, while England has only four and France only a dozen.

"There are 19 manufacturing concerns in Germany. States and towns of the Republic are in on the game with cash investments. Bavaria is security for a loan of 1,500,000 gold marks to the Junker Company, in addition to being a donor of over a million gold marks for promotion of air lines in Bavaria. The State of Baden gave 200,000 gold marks for a similar purpose. The city gave 50,000. Wurtemberg and Stuttgart each invested 200,000 gold marks in Aero Lloyd. And so on down the whole list of German cities. Splendid aerodromes and landing fields are owned and maintained by the municipalities. The government subsidy is around 5,000,000 gold marks a year. Each of these big companies has a fleet of 60 or 70 machines in service. In 1919, they started with about 2,000 passengers and 100,000 kilograms of freight. Today they are carrying, it is estimated, at the rate of 60,000 passengers and a half million kilograms of freight a year.

"The Germans are not saying much about their development work. But a casual traveler can see enough to make him guess plenty.

"It was the most exhilarating travel I ever had and when I go back again, I hope Spain and Italy will also have regular air routes."

EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S MARKET GUIDE PICTURES 1300 SALES AREAS. INVALUABLE TO AGENCIES AND ADVERTISERS.

Present subscribers often write and ask us why we haven't sold our checking proof service to every other newspaper publisher. They don't stop to realize that they too were skeptical in the beginning. Their advantage over a non-subscriber however is the fact that they did try our service.

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.

538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO

79 Madison Ave. NEW YORK

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

6½ pt. Ionic No. 5

COMBINES

The word count of 6 point and the legibility of 8 point

The British delegation of trade-union representatives, who came here on Tuesday at the invitation of "The London Daily Mail" to study reasons for the disparity between the high wages and prosperous living conditions of the American worker and their own lower wage standards, gained considerable light in a tour of several industrial establishments in Brooklyn yesterday.

They had been curious to know how it was that the average wage of the American toiler virtually doubled that of his British brother, and how it was possible for industries here to offer such fat envelopes to their employees and at the same time compete successfully in world markets.

American More Productive

After a study of the Brooklyn Edison plant and the factory methods of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company in Brooklyn, the delegates remarked that one of the vital reasons for the disparity was that the American worker was capable of producing and actually did produce more than the British toiler in a given time.

This he was enabled to do, they learned, because of the high standards of efficiency obtaining here, mass-production methods, the utter perfection of organization for which the American industrialist seems always to be striving, and labor-saving devices evident on every hand.

The comments of the delegates were voiced by Sir Percival Phillips, special correspondent of "The Daily Mail"; Fenton MacPherson, of the same newspaper, and William Mosses, J. P., who had a prominent part in the British Labor Ministry during the war.

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY

Brooklyn, New York

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS

CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

VASHINGTON EDITORS ELECT STODDARD

Vaterville Publisher Named President :o Succeed Wolf—M. H. Spencer Asks More Individuality in Papers

oseph H. Stoddard, publisher of the Waterville (Wash.) Empire Press, was elected president of the Washington State Press Association to succeed Fred Wolf, publisher of the Newport Miner at the 40th annual convention held in Spokane, Aug. 20-21.

Roy G. Rosenthal, secretary, and Sol B. Lewis, treasurer, of Linden, were re-elected.

A plea for greater individuality in newspapers was made by M. L. Spencer, former Dean of the School of Journalism, University of Washington. Publishers pay too little attention to this, he declared, and said the American newspapers with distinct individualities could be numbered on the fingers of his two hands.

"The power of these papers rests on their originality and they maintain their originality, even at the cost of advertising and circulation," he stated.

"The press needs a campaign of education to tell the public what it is trying to do, the former journalism professor said.

"One thing that weakens the press is the tendency to rule by fear," he declared. "The average individual is afraid to make enemies among the editors. As a result the feeling of love on the part of the public toward the papers has not been developed."

In a paper read for F. G. Mitchell, Jr., of the Walla Walla Daily Bulletin, emphasis was laid on the necessity of not allowing ad copy to remain unchanged week after week.

"The day of the standing advertisements has passed and the publisher who allows one of his advertisers to run the same copy week after week is not giving proper quality, fair measure and proper service. Such an advertiser has little chance of getting results," he stated.

"One of the important discussions was on circulation problems of the country publisher, Fred M. Kennedy, field secretary of the Association; Buell Felts of the Valley Herald, of opportunity, and Thomas Dobbs of the Snohomi Times, spoke on this subject.

"Are you going to sit back and let the dailies take your field away from you or still try to sell your newspaper at $3 a year just because your grandfather got $1.50 a year for it or are you going to adopt the methods of your competitors or go out and buy circulation?" Mr. Kennedy asked.

"Circulation is the life of your business and nine times out of ten I am asked: 'How can I increase my circulation?'

"First, be sure you have a newspaper that will appeal and be of interest to your subscribers. Then go out and cover your field with it. You can't expect much co-operation from your advertisers with a 50 per cent circulation coverage, as is the case with too many of our members."

Mr. Dobbs and Mr. Felts told of their success in building up circulation in spite of daily competition by giving free distribution as sample copies for a certain period.

Resolutions were passed by the Association endorsing the proposal for a state legislative appropriation for publicity, similar to the plan whereby New Hampshire spends $50,000 annually, regretting the resignation of D. N. Spencer from University of Washington faculty, but commended the appointment of L. A. Borah to succeed him; urging closer attention of members to the typographical appearance of their papers; endorsing the plan of Sol A. Lewis of Linden for a field advertising man to assist the members in increasing their advertising and urging the carrying on with unrelenting vigor of the campaign for elimination of government competition in printing through the sale of envelopes.

At the same time the Association was convening, the Associated Press was holding a state meeting in an adjoining room of the Davenport Hotel. Frank I. Sefrit of the Bellingham Herald and Reveille, presided.

Plans for speeding the gathering of election news were discussed but no definite action was taken. It was urged that all members individually protest against the higher press rates recently inaugurated by the Western Union. The group, which also included members from the Panhandle of Idaho, voted to hold another meeting in November. Paul Cowles, western superintendent of the A. P., was present.

A joint banquet closed the two meetings.

LAURENTIDE NET INCOME

The Laurentide Company, Ltd., of Toronto, reports a net income for the year ended June 30 of $1,908,833 after interest, depreciation, taxes, etc., as compared with $1,909,975 in the preceding year.

SAN ANTONIO EXPRESS WINS

The San Antonio Express-News team, recently defeated the Light in the annual baseball game. Dick Harn, Express assistant sports editor, held the Light team to three hits.

GOING TO ROME

Hollowell, Former A. P. Man, to Represent N. Y. Herald Tribune

Frank T. Hollowell has been named New York Herald Tribune correspondent at Rome, and will sail early in September to take charge of the bureau there. He has been in the New York office of the Herald Tribune for the past month or so.

FRANK T. HOLLOWELL

Mr. Hollowell has spent a number of years abroad for the Associated Press. He is a native of Goldsboro, N. C., and a graduate of Earlham College. He spent two years in the U. S. army during the World war and then came to work in New York for the New York Evening Post.

In May, 1920 he joined the Associated Press in New York and served there as cable editor for a year and a half. In September, 1922, he was sent to London where he covered the political campaign which preceded Lloyd George's downfall. Among his other European assignments were the French occupation of the Ruhr and the visit to Paris of the Dawes Commission. After a number of months with the Associated Press Paris bureau, he was transferred to Rome, where he was in charge of their bureau until January, 1926.

NEW JOB FOR HAWKS

Wells Hawks, noted New York press agent, will direct Florida's autumn newspaper publicity. The state is sending five trains of ten cars each to vicit 700 cities. Hawks has been in Florida a year and declares he feels like a native.

GREEK PAPER SUED

Former Greek Consul Asks $500,000 Libel of N. Y. National Herald

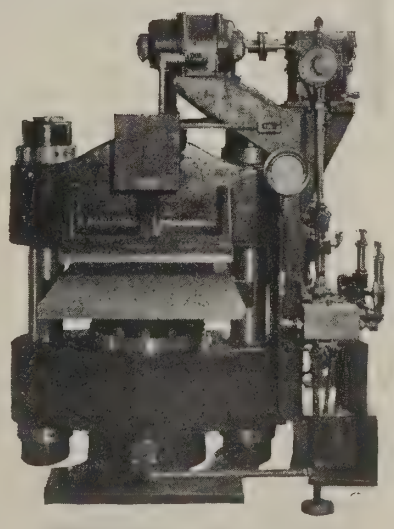
Cleanthes Vassardakis, once Greek Consul General at San Francisco, has filed a libel suit for $500,000 against Petros P. Tatanis, general manager, and Demetrius Callimanos, editor-in-chief of the Sunday National Herald, Greek newspaper published in New York.

Allegations of Vassardakis as to unpleasant things said about him in the newspaper between last December and March filled 30 typewritten pages, and included allegations that he "has united with the Communists" and that he is a "lamentable drone."

A suit against Vassardakis by the newspaper officials has been pending for several months. It is based on alleged statements by Vassardakis that the expenditure of funds for Smyrna sufferers, collected by the newspaper in 1922, ought to be investigated.

Do you know what percentage of errors are made in your Composing Room?

We suggest you go there and take fifty original proofs. Count up the number of lines and the number of errors. Get the percentage of errors to lines.



It takes twice as long to correct an error as it does to make it, so multiply this percentage by three.

Take this resultant percentage and apply it to your total Composing Room payroll for the year. See how much money errors are costing you.

When you find out what they cost you write and tell us the amount. We will show you a source of profit you have never heard of.

Matrix Contrast Corp.
33 W. 42d St., New York City

BIROTADRUCK

HYDRAULIC MATRICE PRESS

Direct Pressure Under Complete Control. Fast, Positive, Non-Vibrating Hydraulic Operation. The first successful hydraulic matrice moulding press to be introduced into this country.

Birotadruck Presses are now in operation on the plants of The New York Times (3 presses), New York Herald-Tribune (2 presses), Boston Globe, Cleveland Press and Dallas News.

AMERICAN BIROTADRUCK CO., Inc.
120 West 42d St., New York City

in Detroit—

Free Press circulation reaches 31,000 more than the total number of families owning their own homes.

The "Free Press"
"Starts the day in Detroit"

With a stable, uninflated, liberal pursed circulation productive of greater advertising returns at lower cost.

The Great Empire of The Southwest

is literally spending millions of dollars.
The thoughts, actions and habits of Southwesterners are influenced by their

Weekly Newspapers

Our organization represents 325 weekly newspapers in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico, and we can furnish complete market information on this territory.
A letter to our Dallas office will bring you some very interesting figures.

The H. L. Grable Co.
"National Advertising Representatives of Weekly Newspapers"
TEXAS—OKLAHOMA—NEW MEXICO

NEW YORK
25 East 26th St.
Phone Ashland 9127

PHILADELPHIA
Widener Bldg.
Phone Rittenhouse 9698

CHICAGO
123 West Madison
Phone Central 3021

DALLAS, TEXAS
606 Mercantile Bank Building

FLORIDA

continues to be the fastest growing state in the Union.

TAMPA

is the recognized industrial center and the most substantial city in Florida.

THE TAMPA MORNING TRIBUNE

is the only morning and the only Sunday newspaper in Tampa, covering the entire rich, productive and populous territory of Southwest Florida, reaching a population of 713,943.

200,000 Daily Readers.
300,000 Sunday Readers.

Represented nationally by
The S. C. Beckwith Special Agency.

Largest Evening Circulation in Largest Market

For 26 consecutive years the Evening Journal has had the largest evening circulation in America—concentrated in New York and suburbs. More than DOUBLE the circulation of any other New York evening paper.

NEW YORK JOURNAL

America's Largest Evening Circulation and at 3c a copy

The DES MOINES CAPITAL

Completely covers Des Moines' entire trade territory for you at a rate of 14c per line.

It is the best Advertising buy in the midwest

O'Mara & Ormsbee
Special Representatives

The DES MOINES CAPITAL
Lafayette Young
Publisher

JOURNALISM STUDENTS RETURN FROM EUROPE

Class of 18 Spent More Than a Month Studying Continental Newspaper Methods Under Direction of Prof. Johnson

A traveling school of journalism disbanded in Quebec last Saturday when 18 University of Wisconsin journalism students and E. M. Johnson, associate professor, arrived there after more than a month spent in Europe studying Continental newspaper methods.

The trip, which is the first of its kind ever made, was organized by Prof. Johnson to give the students a broad view of world journalism and international affairs. The party left Quebec July 1, and toured Scotland, England, Belgium, Holland, France and Switzerland. Visits were made to newspaper plants in London and Paris.

On shipboard on the way over, lectures were held daily which outlined for the students the political, social and economic situations in the principal countries and sketched their histories. A library of 100 volumes was taken by the party, from which supplemental reading was done.

Prof. Johnson praised the co-operation given him on the trip by the foreign bureaus of the Associated Press and United Press. Visits were made to the bureaus and correspondents in charge answered questions asked by the students.

"The idea of the trip was not to inspire students to became foreign correspondents, but to give them a knowledge of Europe which would serve them well on papers in this country," Prof. Johnson said.

"We found that newspapers of the United States carry more foreign news than do the papers of any other country. The French papers carry very little foreign news, while in England the biggest daily story from the United States appeared to be the number of murders in Chicago.

"The English papers carry more news and less feature material than U. S. newspapers."

Prof. Johnson this fall will become head of the University of Minnesota School of Journalism, succeeding Prof. R. R. Barlow. The school will be expanded and a degree, Bachelor of Arts in Journalism, will be conferred on graduates. The expansion program has been made possible through the $350,000 fund left the school by W. J. Murphy, former publisher of the Minneapolis Tribune, which with accrued interest now amounts to nearly $400,000.

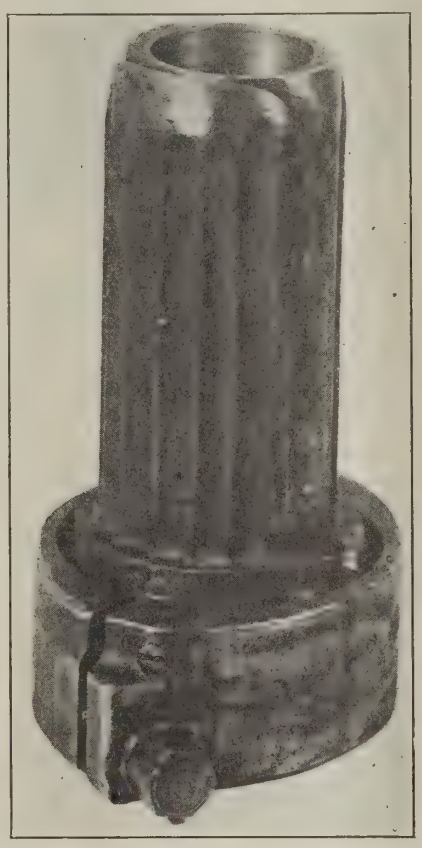
Prof. Johnson, in addition to teaching students the rudiments of reporting and copy reading, expects to develop the editorial research idea at Minnesota. Students will be urged to consider the problems of newspaper publishing, especially from the editorial angle instead of merely the technique of production.

"I believe there is a large field for editorial research," he stated, "wherein editorial methods will be analyzed in the same manner merchandising problems are analyzed by the merchandising departments in the interests of more and better advertising. With the large fund available at Minnesota it is my hope that important work can be done by students in this direction."

BUILDINGS
PLANT LAYOUTS
PRODUCTION
OPERATION

An organization specializing solely in newspaper building design, manufacturing and production problems.

S. P. WESTON



Newspaper Buildings
Plant Layouts
Production, Operation

120 West 42nd Street New York

NEW PAPER ROLL CHUCK

Time and Newsprint Economy Claimed for Seattle Man's Invention

R. W. Bandy, mechanical superintendent of the Seattle Post-Intellgencer, has been granted a patent for an automatic paper roll expansion chuck (or plug, as it is known in the East) which, it is claimed permits notable economy of time and newsprint.

Mr. Bandy claims for his device, among other features, that it is an entirely new design, made of properly annealed steel, and sturdily built so that it will last indefinitely; that it requires no attention when inserted in the roll and the set screw is tightened; it can be removed from the core almost without effort; it has no end thrust to pinch or damage paper next to the core, thereby saving about 50 per cent of core waste; it will not damage cores, or slip and waste running time; it will lock in either direction automatically and in case of a quick stop of the press when full rolls are in, it will hold the rolls and prevent the slack in the webs from unlocking the chucks; it has only three parts, instead of about seven in the chucks generally used.

STAFF HOLDS OUTING

Two hundred employees of the Bloomington (Ill.) Pantagraph and their families attended the first annual outing of the staff at Mackinaw Dells, Saturday, Aug. 14. A farcical "bathing beauty" contest was won by W. H. Kircher,

A paper with the people

The public decides the progress of a newspaper.

The continuous rising circulation of the New York Evening Graphic vividly demonstrates popular acceptance of this newspaper as a medium of unusual reader interest.

Advertisers daily realize the benefit of this power through achieved results from the advertising columns of the New York Evening Graphic.

With a constantly increasing circulation, plus a constant growth in advertising lineage, the New York Evening Graphic offers the advertiser an extremely profitable opportunity.

Published by BERNARR MACFADDEN

NEW YORK
EVENING GRAPHIC

H. A. AHERN, Advertising Mgr.
25 City Hall Place
New York City

AD TIPS

Campbell-Ewald Company, 292 Madison avenue, New York. Has secured the accounts of the Monroe Auto Equipment Manufacturing Company, Monroe, Michigan, and the National University Society, Inc., New York.

Campbell-Ewald Company, Atlas Bank Building, Cincinnati. Has secured account of the Amrad Corporation, radio company, Medford Hillside, Massachusetts, which was recently acquired by Powel Crosley, Jr., Cincinnati.

Hazard Advertising Corporation, 7 East 42nd street, New York. Now handling account of the American Solvents and Chemical Corporation, New York.

Fred M. Randall Company, Book Tower, Detroit. Has secured the accounts of Fairbanks Tailoring Company; Wright and Company, both of Chicago.

Robbins & Pearson Co., 390 East Broad street, Columbus. Now handling account of the Foos Gas Engine Company, Springfield, Ohio.

Green, Fulton and Cunningham, 360 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Handling account of the American No-Kol Company, Chicago.

Guenther-Bradford Company, 15 East Huron street, Chicago. Sending copy to small list of papers with rural circulation on Fred Dyer Company, Jackson, Mich. (rheumatism remedy.)

Merrill, Price and Taylor, 410 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Contracts being issued to newspapers in scattered territory on Miller Brewing Company, Milwaukee.

Morris-Harris Company, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. To launch New England states campaign for National Trading company, Chicago.

Pickus-Weiss Company, 307 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. To place newspaper campaign in the near future on Baker Food Products company, Chicago, in about 25 papers on the coast and in middle and southwest. Will open fall campaign on Stuart Products Company, Chicago, manufacturers of Stuart Batteries in newspapers in the middlewest in 15,000 to 20,000 line contracts.

Sehl Advertising Company, 360 North Michigan boulevard, Chicago. Preparing fall schedules on Calumet Baking Powder Company, Chicago.

Fred M. Randall Company, Tower Building, Chicago. Have secured accounts of The Insulite Company, Minneapolis, and the M & M Laboratories, Chicago, Bendfelt Ice Cream Company, Milwaukee, and Baird & Warner, Chicago.

MICHIGAN

is growing faster than any State in the Union.

Its increase in manufacturing products surpasses anything in the world.

BOOTH NEWSPAPERS

cover Michigan outside of Detroit—Eight principal cities with the only or leading Newspaper in its respective community.

The Grand Rapids Press
The Flint Daily Journal
The Saginaw News Courier
The Kalamazoo Gazette
The Jackson Citizen Patriot
The Bay City Times Tribune
The Muskegon Chronicle
The Ann Arbor Times News

National Advertising Representatives

I. A. KLEIN — 50 East 42nd St. New York City
J. E. LUTZ — Tower Building Chicago, Ill.

Parkersburg, W. Va.

is growing rapidly

A new $5,000,000 rayon plant and other new industries are now being constructed there.

The city and suburban territory is covered by

The News

Morning and Sunday

with a circulation of 7,500 daily and 9,000 Sunday at only 3 cents a line.

Member A. B. C.

Represented nationally by the
DEVINE-MacQUOID CO., Inc.
New York Pittsburgh Chicago

Carl Switzer Company, Illinois Build Indianapolis, Ind. Expect to handle adverti of the Indiana factory of the Sealey Matt Company, Sugarland, Texas, in three or cities in territory adjacent to their factory

TRIBUTE TO HOME PROGRAM

Arthur J. W. Hilly, assistant corpo tion counsel of New York, represent Mayor Walker at the opening of New York Herald Tribune's ninth mo home of the 1926 season on Aug. 22 Rockville Center, L. I., praised the ne paper's program as "the most wonde educational work ever undertaken by newspaper."

SPONSORING EXPLORATION

The Seattle Star is sponsoring an pedition of Boy Scouts into the ur plored part of the Olympic penins They hope to find traces of a tribe Indians that formerly inhabited that gion.

have you been following the remarkable growth of the Detroit Times

Buffalo, The Wonder City of Americ

Buffalo—a Profitabl Market for Advertiser

Sales in Buffalo are splendid for advertised goods. Employment conditions excellent, retail and other business thriving. One newspaper will put your story over to 83% of the people—that paper is the

BUFFALO EVENING NEW

Read in 4 out of 5 Buffalo Home

Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publish
Kelly-Smith Company, Representativ
Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y.
Tribune Tow Chicago, Il
Atlantic Bldg. Philadelphia
Waterman Bld Bosto

first! in OHIO

13,126,090 Lines

Dispatch advertising record for the first seven months of 1926, exceeding other Columbus newspapers combined by 1,736,902 lines. For the first 6 months, Dispatch exceeded second largest Ohio newspaper by 2,047,726.

NET PAID CIRCULATION

CITY	55,812
SUBURBAN	26,973
COUNTRY	23,666
Total Daily Circulation	106,451

Columbus Dispatch
OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

FNDS QUEER NEWSPAPER NAMES IN SCANNING U. S. LISTING

Glimmerglass, Dinner Horn and Boomerang Cited by Writer—News Most Popular Name with Times and Journal Following

By FRANK A. EATON

"WHAT are names but air?" queried our old friend Coleridge. "What's in a name?" asked the Bard of Avon. But if the task of naming a newly established daily newspaper was wished on you, wouldn't you be inclined to take the advice of the biblical proverb, "a good name is rather to be chosen than great riches," and go about your titling accordingly.

Would your choice be News, or Times or Journal—the three most popular names among the more than 2,500 morning, evening and Sunday English-language daily newspapers in the United States? Or would you name your newborn sheet for the city or state in which it was to be published? Perhaps you'd select some classical cognomen such as Pallas, Ilion or Argus; perhaps some altogether unique label such as Dinner Horn or Boomerang—American newspaperdom has seven dailies with the latter name, one with the former. Would you check up on the more than two hundred different names now in use and pick an old standby, such as Press or Gazette, or would you seek a title that was distinctive? Which should prove the most profitable?

A tabulation of the latest EDITOR & PUBLISHER statistics discloses some rather interesting things concerning the names of our dailies. Are there more Times or more News—more Heralds or more Tribunes—more Stars or more Suns? How do the names stack up in popularity? Here is the way the polls closed on the first dozen:

News	214	Record	42
Times	127	Gazette	40
Journal	93	Star	39
Herald	91	Sun	38
Tribune	71	Democrat	37
Press	53	Republican	36

For the first place is the name News with a clear lead of 87 over the name Times. And the name Times holds down second place, just 34 ahead of the name Journal, which registers in third place by the slim margin of two more than the name Herald. There is one more Star than Sun, one more Democrat than Republican. These figures do not include the hyphenated or compounded titles of which one or more of the names of these were leaders are an integral part.

Perhaps an explanation of the source of some of these popular newspaper names would be of interest. It is said that the letters N, E, S, W, used to be prefixed to newspapers to show that they obtained information from the four quarters of the world—North, East, West and South—and the supposition that our word news is thence derived is at least intriguing; but the old-fashioned way of pluralizing the word, newes, is fatal to the theory and completely negatives the suggestion that the word was derived from the initials of the weathervane. It is probably derived from the German neuigkeue, or the French nouvelles.

Another interesting legend is that the name Gazette came about in this manner: the first newspapers were issued in Venice by the Government, and came out in manuscript form once a month, during the war of 1563 between the Venetians and the Turks. The intelligence was read publicly in certain places, and fee for hearing it read was one gazetta, a Venetian coin, somewhat less than half a cent in value. The name Journal comes from the French jour, a day; the name Herald from the Anglo-Saxon words here, an army, and ealdor, an official—in ancient times an officer who made public proclamations; the name Tribune, from the Latin, meaning a rostrum. The derivations of the others are obvious.

But to return to our name census. The second dozen names on the popularity list in the order of their frequency are as follows:

Leader	33	Chronicle	23
Post	33	Call	16
Telegram	31	Citizen	16
Sentinel	27	Dispatch	16
Courier	26	Independent	16
Register	24	Reporter	16

The third dozen lines up like this: Bulletin and Review, 15; Enterprise, 14; Messenger and Union, 13; Eagle and Telegraph, 12; Advertiser, Free Press and Globe, 11; Ledger and Standard, 10.

And so on down through 349 other dailies with 173 different names.

The shortest newspaper names are the six three-lettered ones: Sun, Bee, Hub, Ore, Era and Day—forty-six in this group. In the next group, the newspapers with names of four letters we have: News, Star, Post, Call, Mail, Item, Echo, Home and Hour—324 dailies in all. The longest name is that of the Journal-Gazette & Commercial-Star—the combination of four popular single newspaper names.

We have patriotic names such as Patriot, Constitution, American and Eagle; political ones such as Democrat, Republican, Independent, Reformer and Freeman; business names such as Enterprise, Advertiser, Bonanza, Budget, Commercial and Progress; military ones such as Reveille, Sentinel, Guard, Banner and Observer. Among the noisy names are Dinner Horn, Report, Echo and Call; among the quiet ones Valley Spirit and Star of Hope.

Names indicating speed and transmission are popular, such names as Telegram, Telegraph and Telephone, Mail, Express, Messenger, Courier, Traveler and Dispatch. Then there are names of mechanical devices such as Pantagraph and Camera; names with an optical slant such as Mirror, Searchlight, Headlight, Beacon, Reflector, Light and Optic; names of classical origin such as Palladium, Corinthian, Olympian and Phoenix; names that smack of the spirit of '76 such as Washingtonian and Jeffersonian. Newspapers named after their city such as Scrantonian, Saratogian and Gate City; or after states, such as Arkansawyer, Californian, Dakotan, Georgian, Jerseyman, Kansan, Oregonian and Arbor State.

But the oddest names in the long list are probably these: Glimmerglass, Boomerang, Picayune, Avalanche, Picketwire and Blizzard.

Then of course we have the hyphenated and compounded names—some three hundred of our dailies disporting a hyphen or an & sign. Seven is the most we have of any hyphenated combination—seven News-Tribunes, seven News-Heralds, and seven Times-Heralds. We have two Times-Gazettes and two Gazette-Times, two News-Democrats and two Democrat-News, one Herald Tribune and one Tribune-Herald, one Courier-Journal and one Journal-Courier and so on through seventeen other reversible combinations. In hyphenated names the News again leads with 97, followed by the Times with 63, the Herald with 53, the Journal with 48, the Star with 28, the Tribune with 21, the Press with 18, the Democrat with 17, the Gazette with 16, the Republican with 10 and the Sun with 8.

INTERNATIONAL BUYS TIMBER

The International Paper Company has purchased approximately 420 square miles of timber limits from the Chaleurs Bay Company on the Ste. Anne de Restigouche River, across from Campbellton, N. B. The purchase price was said to be $1,000,000. The tract will be used as a reserve for a newsprint mill soon to be erected nearby.

100,000 GROUP APPOINTS

President Strong Names E. C. Tibbetts Field Director

W. A. Strong, president of The 100,000 Group of American Cities and publisher of the Chicago Daily News, this week announced the appointment of E. C. Tibbitts as field director of the 100,000 Group.

Tibbitts will travel extensively in order to familiarize manufacturers and advertisers with the research value of "A Study of 81 Principal American Markets," a book on merchandising and advertising published several months ago by Group.

For more than 20 years Mr. Tibbitts was advertising director of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company and during the past several years has managed the Akron office of the William H. Rankin Company.

GROWING IN IMPORTANCE

The Inter-Mountain territory of Utah, Idaho, Western Wyoming and Eastern Nevada is rapidly developing and becoming more important to the advertiser whose merchandise has national distribution.

Don't overlook this rich section of the West.

The Salt Lake Tribune

THE S. C. BECKWITH SPECIAL AGENCY
—Sole Eastern Agents—
New York—Chicago—Detroit
St. Louis—Kansas City
Atlanta
M. C. MOGENSEN & CO., INC.
Pacific Coast Representatives
San Francisco—Los Angeles—Seattle

creating Impression!

nearly half the 2013 national advertisers using the Cleveland Plain Dealer in 1925 used it exclusively.

The Plain Dealer
ONE Medium — ONE Cost ALONE Will sell it

J. B. Woodward, 110 E. 42d St., New York
Woodward & Kelly, 360 N. Mich. Ave., Chicago

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's
Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and New Rochelle and The Vicinity Towns
Are Covered Completely by
THE DAILY ARGUS
of
Mount Vernon
THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle
Both Members of A. B. C.
Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

The Los Angeles EVENING HERALD consistently carries more paid advertising than any daily newspaper in the west

Representatives

New York	Chicago	San Francisco
W. Moloney	John H. Lederer	A. J. Norris Hill
Times Bldg.	910 Hearst Bldg.	710 Hearst Bldg.

RADIO PROGRAMS
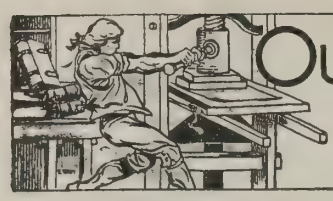
NEWS NOTES
FEATURES

Used and Praised by More than 200 Newspapers

Send for samples and prices

AUDIO SERVICE
326 West Madison St.
Chicago



HALF A STATE COMPLETELY COVERED
at one Combination Rate
EVENING COURIER MORNING POST
Two Great Newspapers—Published at Camden, N. J.
National Representatives
STORY, BROOKS & FINLEY

GRAVURE SECTIONS PRINTED

SPECIAL AND REGULAR EDITIONS, MAGAZINE INSERTS AND COMMERCIAL WORK

Standard Gravure Corporation
LOUISVILLE KY

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

NELSON ANTRIM CRAWFORD, until recently president of the American Association of Teachers of Journalism but now Director of Information in the United States Department of Agriculture shows in The Nation for Aug. 25 how the New England farm is coming back. He discusses the real farmer and not the fireside farmer who has a summer home in the country. Newspapers in New England will find good tips for editorials in this article by Crawford.

* * *

OF all American publicists possibly the late Charles William Eliot of Harvard saw most clearly the beneficial effects of publicity in a democracy. His recent death recalls this fact. Consequently it may be appropriate to quote at this time the words of Dr. Eliot on how publicity safeguards the American Republic:

Another new and effective bulwark of state is to be found in the extreme publicity with which all American activities are carried on. Many people are in the habit of complaining bitterly of the intrusion of the newspaper reporter into every nook and corner of the State and even into the privacy of the home; but in this extreme publicity is really to be found a new means of social, industrial, and governmental reform and progress. There are many exaggerations, perversions, and inaccuracies in this publicity; but on the whole it is a beneficent and a new agency for the promotion of the public welfare. . . So new is this force in the world that many people do not yet trust it, or perceive its immense utility. In case of real industrial grievances and oppressions, publicity would be by far the quickest and surest means of cure—vastly more effective for all just ends than secret combinations of either capitalists or laborers. The newspapers which are the ordinary instruments of this publicity, are as yet very imperfect instruments, much of their work being done so hastily and so cheaply as to preclude accuracy; but as a means of publicity they visibly improve from decade to decade and taken together with the magazines and the controversial pamphlet, they shed more light on the social, industrial, and political life of the people of the United States than was ever shed before on the doings and ways of any people. This force is distinctly new within the century, and it affords a new and strong guarantee for the American Republic.

* * *

WILLIAM SALISBURY whose first book was "The Career of a Journalist" is the author of the pamphlet, "The Baltimore Phenomenon." This pamphlet is an estimate of H. L. Mencken as a critic. Mr. Salisbury's first book was praised by Mr. Mencken, but his second book, "The American Emperor," "an interpretation of the career of the late J. P. Morgan," was not noticed because of what it said about that great financier.

Mention of such things as "the poor drudges who write editorials for newspapers," "the 'kept ladies' of journalism," etc., show what Mr. Salisbury thinks of the present day press. Copies of the pamphlet may be obtained from the Independent Publishing Company, 75 Ellentown avenue, New Rochelle, N. Y.

IN the August number of The Trib—devoted to shop talk about the making of the Chicago Tribune—John Kelly prints a bully good story, "When George Ade Did Police in Chicago." In it Mr. Kelly relates how the now famous Hoosier humorist was initiated into the circle of police reporters, how he was scooped, and how he retaliated by turning a hoax to his advantage and thus obtained an exclusive story.

Of Ade, Kelly says:

I have often been asked if Ade showed any sign when he was a cub reporter of the peculiar talents which he possesses. Although recognized as an able reporter, Ade received no more attention from the police gang than any other fellow who wrote good stuff. Nobody, so far as I know, predicted a brilliant future for him, but when he struck his gait in "Stories of the Street and Town" his associates began to sit up and take notice. No other Chicago reporter had ever written anything like Ade's sketches of city life, and from that time on great things were expected of him, which he has more than fulfilled.

By way of good measure Mr. Kelly thus tells about another joke famous in the annals of Chicago journalism:

Another joke was the Enoch Arden hoax, which was perpetrated only on German reporters who were not familiar with Tennyson's poem. I remember a count (or was he a baron?) who fell for the story and wrote a column of hot stuff which was translated for the gang by a German bartender. This is how the joke was played:

One of the conspirators would call up on the telephone and tell the person who answered the ring that there were some new developments in the "Enoch Arden story." Enoch, the informant would say, had just come into the Lake View station for a night's lodging. The police were taking up a collection for the old man and they would like to have the newspapers give the matter publicity.

Of course the victim had not heard about the story and some kind-hearted reporter would enlighten him from "notes" which he had thrown away and gathered up from under the long writing table. "Dot's a good story" the victim would say as he rushed away to his office. The gang would hang around the Staats-Zeitung Saloon until the paper that printed the story came out. Then the bartender, as he twirled his mustachios, would read it aloud amid roars of laughter.

* * *

A LONDON editor whose paper was forced to suspend publication by the general strike of the trade unions throughout England kept a diary of his personal experiences and impressions. This diary, printed in The Bookman for September, is possibly all the more interesting because it was not intended for publication. In fact, the trivial matters recorded give the interest.

One way of supplying the news was the printing of fly-by-night sheets such as are thus described:

Irregular newspapers are appearing everywhere. A woman shopkeeper in the Strand asked me if I had any news, since she was printing a paper at three. She was prepared to take down and print any rubbish I cared to invent on the spur of the moment.

It is not very complimentary to editors, but the absence of newspapers seemed to embarrass housekeepers the most because there was nothing in the house with which to start the fires in the grates. "Thus the strike gets home."

Here is a newspaper entry about the non-union sheets:

Local weekly newspapers—with non-union labor—are successfully appearing daily. The Times was out again today. The British Gazette plentiful. Irregular sheets numerous. The librarian at the Club has been moved to end his transcript of the wireless bulletin with a gallant "God Save the King!"

On another day the writer of the diary sets down the following:

One buys at ludicrous prices any sort of news sheet that may be produced. Most of these are not worth the paper on which they are printed. Yet one goes on buying, hopefully.

Three days after the entry given above this one was penned:

The official paper, the British Gazette, seems a poor product of modern journalism. It gives mainly opinions and a minimum of news, and the opinions are blatantly propagandist. Its botching of the Parliamentary reports is deplorable. The Times, thank God, very finely maintains the traditions of our trade.

Possibly the most amusing fact is that while most newspaper workers ceased to turn in copy the poets kept right on with their contributions. Occasionally even trivial mention indicates the seriousness of the strike such as the one where it is said that "the Daily Mail reports today that thousands of chair legs have arrived in London from High Wycombe; they are to be used as batons by the special constables."

* * *

BRIEF mention has already been made of the new edition of "Forty Years an Advertising Agent" (Franklin Publishing Company) by George P. Rowell, who in addition to being the founder of the advertising agency of George P. Rowell & Co., was also the founder, in 1888, of Printers' Ink. The introduction to the new edition, therefore, very appropriately comes from John Irving Romer of Printers' Ink.

Mr. Romer gives a brief but serviceable review of the volume when he says:

Famous publishers, lowly office boys, celebrated advertisers, obscure canvassers, cl agency chiefs, engaging schemers, and square business men—all have their turn, all are treated alike, with astonishing ca and yet with a never-failing charity.

Mr. Rowell's stories and anecdotes a would make his book priceless, but these v joined to the sturdy common sense, s knowledge, and sententious wit exhibited b clear and workmanlike writing, form a vo which has a lasting vitality.

Obviously American advertising is pivotal point around which the text volves. Yet Mr. Rowell could not w about advertising without saying so thing about advertising media in gen and newspapers in particular. The ne papers mentioned are so widely scatt over the country that the volume o to have a somewhat universal ap While some of the things said are sonal opinion, Mr. Rowell does give facts that are not recorded in any o volume.

In speaking of Boston newspapers Rowell says that the best or most p lar daily paper in Boston in 1858 was Journal, owned by Charles O. Ro After Colonel Rogers' death in 1869

Regional Advertisin
at Regional Rates
in
The Christian Science Monitor
An International Daily Newspaper
Publishing SELECTED ADVERTISING
ATLANTIC, CENTRAL an PACIFIC Editions
Rates and Circulation Data Supplied on Request
ADVERTISING OFFICES
Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, New York, London, Paris, Florence, Kansas City, San Francis, Los Angeles, Seattle, Portland
"Buy What You Can Use"

IN some cities, the "leading" newspaper may have merely a few hundred more circulation than its competitor. The Press has 40,000 more net paid circulation in Pittsburgh than the other two evening newspapers combined—and 35,000 more net paid circulation in Pittsburgh than the other two Sunday newspapers combined.
THE PITTSBURGH PRESS
A Scripps-Howard Newspaper
Member of the A. B. C.

If Quality
of circulation is your first consi eration
The Evening Sta
With Sunday Morning Editio
Washington, D. C.
will have your preference—san as it has the preference of pra tically everyone in the Nation Capital.
The Star's circulation is hon circulation—both quality and qua tity—the kind that counts mo with advertisers.
N. Y. Office—110 E. 42nd S Dan A. Carroll
Chicago Office—Tower Buildi J. E. Lutz

The World
These two newspapers offer the most powerful all-day service in New York available as a unit under a single contact. The 600,000 DAILY WORLD — EVENING WORLD readers constitute a highly concentrated force to be reckoned with in any campaign designed to effect distribution in Greater New York.
The Evening World
Pulitzer Building, New York
Tribune Tower, Chicago

This ad wouldn't be here for you to read—if we weren't making money for newspapers. We can help you, too!
THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, Inc.
International Classified Advertising Counsellors
Packard Building Philadelphia

DO YOU NEED A TRAINED MAN
The Personnel Bureau Sigma Delta Chi, an organiz tion of college trained newspape magazine and advertising me wants to help you find hi The Bureau puts you in touc with experienced, energetic m —it saves you time by recor mending only those who me your requirements.
If you expect a vacancy, plea write Robert B. Tarr, Directo Personnel Bureau of Sigma Del Chi, P. O. Box 115, Pontia Michigan.
NO CHARGE TO EMPLOYERS

Herald advanced to first place. In a paragraph about the latter paper appears the following:

> At the time of my first recollection of it the most conspicuous feature of the Boston Herald was an entire first page filled full with the sort of advertisements that appeal to weak men or to such as have acquired diseases through giving away to weaknesses more human than moral.

In the respect just mentioned the Boston Herald was no worse than many of its contemporaries in other cities. Newspaper morals have improved whether men's morals have or not.

Passing mention is made of the Boston Bee, the Boston Post, Boston Advertiser, and the Boston Courier, the latter famous for its poetry. The Boston Transcript is spoken of as the "tea table" paper of Boston.

Rather amusing is the paragraph about The Gospel Banner of Augusta, Me. This religious paper argued that all mankind would eventually be saved, and therefore was looked upon with disfavor by self-respecting Christians who "hoped for better things."

A few words are said about the early comic papers of New York, Nic Nax, The Picayune, Vanity Fair, and Brother Jonathan, copies of which occasionally show up today in auction sales. The honor of being the first illustrated weekly in America is given by Mr. Rowell to Gleason's Pictorial. Harper's Magazine is said to have been established solely as an advertising medium for promoting the sale of books published by Harper & Brothers. Considerable space is given to Robert Bonner's Ledger.

Mr. Rowell pays a very fine tribute to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. He passes along the somewhat surprising story that Abraham Lincoln was sitting in the editorial rooms of the Springfield (Ill.) Journal when the dispatch came announcing his nomination for the Presidency. What would normally be chapter XIV tells how Mr. Rowell compiled his first advertising directory. He had had some preparation for this task because while in Boston he started a little periodical called The Advertiser's Gazette. Mr. Rowell was a pioneer in another way: he started a little paper, The Newspaper Reporter, doubtless the first of its kind in this country.

On Thursday, Sept. 9, 1926, The Christian Advocate of New York will celebrate its one hundredth anniversary with a luncheon at the Roosevelt Hotel. This anniversary adds interest to what Mr. Rowell has to say about the religious papers, then (sixty years ago) "of vastly greater account than they are today." One of the New York religious papers mentioned by Mr. Rowell, The Christian Advocate, is about the only one to survive publication in the metropolis. The Independent, which then carried more advertising than all other combined, has since gone to Boston, though long before it had "lost its religion."

Credit for starting "patent insides" is given to Andrew Jackson Aikens of the Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin. In striking contrast to present day conditions Mr. Rowell says that in the early days of advertising agencies newspapers depended mainly upon subscriptions for a livelihood; "if anything came for an advertisement it was so much clear gain, whether the price was high or low." Warner, the manufacturer of fireproof safes at Rochester, New York, bought a second hand kidney remedy which he advertised as "Warner's Safe Cure." Warner, according to "Forty Years an Advertising Agent," was responsible for the beginning of the condition of mixing advertising with reading matter—"until it is difficult to tell which is which." Conditions have changed since the first edition of Mr. Rowell's book.

In speaking of the purchase of the Philadelphia Times by Adolph S. Ochs of the New York Times, Mr. Rowell prints this rumor:

> Then one began to hear that other Philadelphia dailies had paid $50,000 apiece to Mr. Ochs, in consideration of his action, and that the explanation was, that by chipping in $350,000, more or less, they had extinguished one Associated Press franchise, and thereby reduced by one the number of papers with which they would in future be called upon to compete. It is possible that if the Times franchise had been kept alive the enterprising Mr. Hearst might buy it some day, and his entrance upon a journalistic field has not always been particularly enjoyed by the publishers of papers that are more staid in their manner and make-up and may be less enjoyed than Mr. Hearst's journals are by the lower million of the populace.

Immediately following this rumor Mr. Rowell discusses the bitter scrap between the old United Press and what is today the Associated Press. Unfortunately, Mr. Rowell does not go into detail and that interesting story yet remains to be told. It is one certainly worth the telling.

The book is not divided into chapters, but into papers. The explanation may be found in the fact that each paper originally appeared as a special article in Printers' Ink. The forty-third paper tells how Mr. Rowell brought out the first number of Printers' Ink on July 15, 1888—though it had been a long time incubating. The early troubles of Printers' Ink with the post office department are described in detail. Some humor and not a little wisdom may be found in this quatrain which closed the forty-third paper:

> Tickle the public and make it grin,
> The more you tickle the more you'll win;
> But teach the public you'll never grow rich,
> You'll live like a beggar and die in the ditch.

Hazeltine, the chief book reviewer for the old New York Sun, frequently reviewed a book at such length that the purchase of the volume was not necessary. Anything that was worth while was in the review. I have no desire to get into Hazeltine's class. Possibly the only thing that needs to be said is that the Franklin Publishing Company has performed a real service in bringing out a new edition of this pioneer volume on advertising so long out of print.

* * *

RICHARD CONNELL contributes to the Saturday Evening Post for Aug. 21, a satirical skit in which he pokes fun at those who conduct sporting departments of American newspapers. The way in which sporting editors put in poems, comments about every topic under the sun, etc., amuses Mr. Connell who in turn amuses his readers through his satire.

* * *

A CORRESPONDENT wants to know what newspaper originated the scheme of printing church notices. His question cannot be answered satisfactorily. A starting point, however, may possibly be found in the address which Henry Ward Beecher delivered before the Editors' and Publishers' Association of the State of New York at its annual meeting in Poughkeepsie, June 18, 1873.

In addressing the meeting Mr. Beecher said:

> Do you recollect that some thirty-five years ago it was almost disreputable to publish religious matter in the New York dailies? It cannot be long since the man died who invented that habit. He went to The New York Sun, and hired of Mr. Beach a column, paying for it as an advertisement once a week, with the liberty of putting into it anything he had a mind to. He made a collection of religious histories, items and news, and filled one column a week with that and paid for it as an advertisement. It went on for a period of six or eight months—I have forgotten the contract time—when coming to renew the engagement Mr. Beach said, "I find that my subscribers like it, and I won't charge you anything. If you will furnish the matter I will print it." And it went from one journal to another, until now there is no longer any hesitancy whatever in publishing such matter.

Here is a starting point and if any of the readers of the EDITOR & PUBLISHER can supply other material I should be extremely glad to have their comments.

* * *

ELSINORE PAPERS MERGED

The Elsinore (Cal.) Leader, and the Lake Elsinore (Cal.) Valley Press, have been merged with Alva D. McGuire, publisher of the Leader, as manager. The consolidation is the result of the efforts of James B. Lehigh and S. H. Burton, who acquired a majority of the stock in the Press from Roy F. Chamberlain.

PUBLISHER TO VISIT U. S.

Hon. Claude Mackay, publisher of the Sydney (Australia) Guardian and Smith's Weekly, will arrive in New York on a visit the latter part of this month. He will be accompanied by the winner of a beauty contest conducted by his newspaper.

All Ready for World's Series?

Wire for

MAGNETIC PLAYER BOARD

GEO. H. REYNOLDS, New Bedford, Mass.

No options extended after Labor Day

AUTOMOBILE PRIZE CAMPAIGNS

Get the Circulation
Get the Money For It
Get It Quickly
Get It Right

Conducted by THE KENDALL PLAN

Contracts for

FALL and WINTER CIRCULATION DRIVES

are being made

—NOW—

WIRE OR WRITE FOR DETAILS, REFERENCES OR SPECIMEN CONTRACT.

W. S. Kendall Company
104 NORTH BAILEY AVE.
LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY

E. F. S.
Editors' Feature Service

Over 70 independent newspapers throughout the country subscribe to this fine daily service as a protection against rising feature costs.

Six Pages Daily
Illustrations in Mat Form

Write or wire for samples, price and territory.

Editors' Feature Service, Inc.
1819 Broadway, New York
Allied with Johnson Features, Inc.

42 Football Training Talks

a daily series by Bud Hoban, running seven weeks, beginning September 6th.

Baltimore Evening Sun
heads our order list.

The International Syndicate
Baltimore, Md.

A MASTER SERIAL!!

"SONIA"
By Vida Hurst

Ted Thackrey, Editor of "The Cleveland Press," says:

"'Sonia' . . . is one of the best pieces of fiction "The Press" ever has used. We are holding circulation and even making gains during the most unfavorable period of the year. A large measure of the credit I believe should go to 'Sonia.' Properly promoted it should prove a life saver to any newspaper at any period of the year."

The Bell Syndicate, Inc.
JOHN N. WHEELER, Pres.
154 Nassau St. New York City

Wheeler - Nicholson, Inc.

Complete Feature Service

Wire us for samples and prices of the Largest, Most Original

Most Artistic and Finest

blanket feature service on the market, which includes IVANHOE, VIVIAN VANITY, and the FAMOUS SHORT STORY SERIES, in addition to SPORTS, WOMAN'S PAGE FEATURES, COMICS, FICTION, VERSE, CARTOONS and everything for the newspaper.

Wheeler-Nicholson, Inc.
Malcolm Wheeler-Nicholson, President
373 4th Ave., New York City

THE WELFARE COMMITTEE
of the
INTERNATIONAL CIRCULATION MANAGERS ASSOCIATION

Can supply you with competent circulation men of capacity and ability capable to take entire charge of your department or to fill important posts in the department.

Address the Secretary-Treasurer please, Mr. Clarence Eyster, care Star Building, Peoria, Ill.

ORR IN ORLANDO

Byron W. Orr has been elected secretary treasurer of the Orlando (Fla.) and Orange County Advertising Club. Mr. Orr is now associated with the Hanson Advertising Agency at Orlando.

GALLAGHER KILLED

P. J. Gallagher, 31, for several years a police reporter for the Chicago Herald and Examiner, died this week in St. Anthony's hospital, Michigan City, after an automobile accident.

KELLY HEADS RED CROSS

Eugene Kelly, business manager of the Sioux City (Ia.) Tribune has been elected chairman of the Sioux City and Woodbury County American Red Cross chapter.

Supplies and Equipment

USED NEWSPAPER PRESSES

Scott 16, 24 and 32-Page Presses

GOSS 24 and 28-page presses good for black or color work, also Goss Sextuple.

HOE Pony Quadruple, Quadruple, Sextuple, Sextuple color Press, Octuple and Double Sextuple Presses.

DUPLEX Metropolitan Quadruple stereotype presses—print up to 32 pages.

Available For Early Delivery

WALTER SCOTT & COMPANY

Main Office & Factory.....Plainfield, N. J.
New York Office..Brokaw Bldg., 1457 Broadway
Chicago Office.....Monadnock Block

THE MARGACH FEEDER

for

Linotype, Intertype, Monotype, Ludlow, and Elrod machines

$75.00 each

Further inquiries may be directed to the

N. Y. Times — Phila. Bulletin
Chicago Tribune — Boston Herald

or several hundred other publishers upon request.

Margach Mfg. Co., Inc.
211-215 Centre St., New York

Don't "Pig" Metal
It Wastes Money

Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.

MONOMELT SLUG FEEDER

Eliminates the Metal Furnace

The Monomelt Co.
4509-19 Ravenswood Ave.
Chicago Illinois
World Bldg., New York City

FOR BETTER PRINTING use
Herrick Inks
Cost more. Worth it.

No substitutes. Made from the best materials.

Specializing to requirements of each pressroom.

Ask the Publishers who use them.

WM. C. HERRICK INK CO., INC.
401 West 33rd Street
New York City
Factory: Rutherford, N. J.

GOSS STEREOTYPING MACHINERY

Carried in Stock

Fastest, most easily operated, most accurate and durable flat casting box you can buy. Perfectly balanced. New design lock-up bar allows for quick change when regulating thickness of casts. Positive quick lock-up at four points on box with one lever movement. Write for complete catalog of Goss Stereotyping Machinery.

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

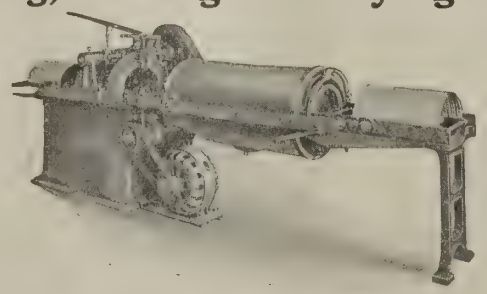
Rebuilt GOSS & HOE PRESS BARGAINS

ALL TYPES
SEND for LIST

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO.
CHICAGO — NEW YORK — LONDON

Modern Composing Room Furniture

as made by us will speed up production and reduce costs—a real saving in your Pay Roll. Are you interested? If so, consult your regular dealer in printers' supplies or write us direct.



Do it now!

HAMILTON MFG. CO.
TWO RIVERS, WIS.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

is the medium best fitted to carry your message to Publishers.

Hoe Automatic Curved Plate Finishing, Cooling and Drying Machine

Trims, tail-cuts, shaves, cools and dries six plates a minute.

R. HOE & CO., INC. 504-520 Grand St., New York City

7 South Dearborn Street CHICAGO, ILL. — also at DUNELLEN, N. J. — 7 Water Street BOSTON, MASS.

Classified

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Classified Advertising Information

TRANSIENT RATES

SITUATIONS (Cash with Order)
1 Time — .40 per line
3 Times — .30 per line
ALL OTHER CLASSIFICATIONS
(Cash with Order)
1 Time — .60 per line
4 Times — .55 per line

White space charge at same rate per line per insertion as earned by frequency of insertion. Special rates quoted for 13, 26 and 52 insertions. The Editor & Publisher reserves the right to classify, edit or reject any advertisement.

COUNT SIX WORDS TO LINE

ADVERTISING

General Promotion

Advertising Promotion—If you want more business, communicate with the International Publications Service, Incorporated, Suite 1004, 1841 Broadway, New York City.

Have an Open Date for one of my crews for newspaper canvassing from September 11th, 1926, until Christmas. Results guaranteed. J. J. Murphy, 42 Millwood St., Dorchester, Mass. Telephone Talbot 4625.

Special Page and Edition Advertising Man—Can handle one or two good propositions in New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania or New York. Copyrighted ideas that build linage and establish permanent business. Let us talk it over. Interview anytime. Box A-775, Editor & Publisher.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Appraisals

Appraisals—After more than a quarter century successful experience as owner, publisher, editor, and general manager of newspapers and magazines, and a careful study of newspaper and magazine making, I am familiar with physical and good will values. Should you desire an Appraisal, I shall be pleased to hear from you. J. B. Shale, Times Bldg., New York.

Brokers

Omar D. Gray, Field Secretary of the Press Congress of the World, and well-known Newspaper Broker of Sturgeon, Missouri, who has listings in 44 of the 48 states amounting to over three million dollars—the only man on earth who specializes in consolidating newspapers in the same city, writes:

"I am leaving Missouri on August 28, for New York and will sail on September 3 for Europe, to be with editors from every country in the world during the third meeting of the World's Press Congress in Switzerland and on the side trips in Europe.

"Now there is no use in waiting until I get home to write me because I have competent help in my office and your wants will be promptly attended to. I get mail daily from men and women all over the country who ask me to help locate them.

"Last week I sold a half interest in the newspaper property of E. S. Pike of Warren, Ohio, to W. W. Major and L. C. Martin of Chicago. I never saw these men and the deal amounted to $20,000 and was paid in cash.

"A man came from New Haven, Conn., to see me last week at my office in Sturgeon, Mo., and I am sure I will locate him profitably in a very short time. There is no use, Brother, in your wasting your time running over the country trying to find newspaper properties and spending your money for advertising space. Just write and tell me what you want and where you want to locate. Tell me how much money you have to pay down on a good proposition, and if you have any religious or political faith tell me about same. I can look the whole country over through my files and place you. I know how to do it. If I do not have just what you want I will spend my money and find something that will suit you.

"If you want to sell your property, price it right and make the terms reasonable, and if you have any field or anything worth selling I can turn your property. It may take a little time but you can rely on my working hard for you.

"A Missouri weekly office, invoicing $8,000, a good paper and making money for sale at $7,500, with $2,000 cash down. Owner has fine position offered him in Washington and he wants to accept it.

"I can sell the only paper in a certain Mississippi county, making plenty of money, for $25,000, half cash.

"I offer for sale a Missouri county seat weekly clearing $1,000 per month which is priced, with building, at $45,000—half cash.

"A Missouri publisher has gained so much patronage in his job department that he wants to sell his daily and weekly.

"Have a client with $15,000 who wants to buy a weekly or daily in exclusive field in

(Continued on following page)

Employment—Equipment—Services

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Brokers

county seat in northern state—as far east as Ohio an west to the coast, including Missouri and Iowa.

"I offer for sale two Republican afternoon papers in growing Missouri city of 20,000, which with one building can be bought for around $80,000. This would be a fine consolidation to make and such a deal is favored by ninety per cent of the people of that city. I am wondering if the Scripps-Howard people would not be interested in this proposition.

"One of my clients who owns a newspaper plant in Illinois and who publishes a number of newspapers wants to sell a $10,000 interest to a man who is capable of taking charge and running this establishment.

"I have listed for sale the only printing establishment in a prosperous Indiana county. Price $13,500—half cash.

"Alabama daily; $100,000 daily, including building, in Arkansas; two splendid dailies in North Dakota; one in Oregon; weeklies in 44 states.

"One of my clients wants to sell very reasonably, one No. 5 and one No. 4 Linotype."

The H. F. Henrichs Agency, Litchfield, Ill.; 1012 Times Building, New York; 1216 Hollingsworth Building, Los Angeles. Your desire to acquire a newspaper, or any dissatisfaction in the newspaper situation in your community, should be reported to this Agency for satisfactory solution.

CIRCULATION

Promotion

Circulation—When quick, additional circulation coverage becomes necessary, remember that our twenty years in this one line of endeavor is your proof against experimenting. Write or wire Pacific Coast Circulation Service, Bell Block, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Circulation Builders—Blair & Austin, 1504 Centre Ave., Reading, Penn. Originators of Salesmanship Club Campaigns.

Build Circulation—Try our "Opportunity Club" Plan. Sherman & Eckert, 353 Northampton Street, Easton, Penna.

Premiums

Sets of Dishes at $1.00 and Up. A wonderful premium. The Albright China Co. Palmyra, N. J.

EDITORIAL

Syndicate Features

Is There a Person or Syndicate having the desire and the following and ability to sell to newspapers distinctive first run fiction direct from an author who can give new and unusual co-operation. A-744, Editor & Publisher.

Tiffin, Ohio, Daily Tribune and Wilkesbarre Critic are the new customers this week. For samples of a live, alert, up-to-date service, write The Graphic Syndicate, 25 City Hall Place, New York.

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

Advertising Man Wanted—A permanent position is open to a young advertising man, married preferred, who is experienced in newspaper work and capable of handling a good run. Must be progressive and a producer. Give experience, age and salary. Daily of 12,000 circulation in best city in Northern Oklahoma. Tribune Publishing Co., Blackwell, Okla.

Artist Wanted—St. Petersburg Times requires the services of a first class newspaper artist who has had experience in preparing rotogravure copy. Communicate with J. W. Falconnier, managing editor, giving experience, references and salary requirements.

Canvasser—Two well established suburban New Jersey weekly newspapers in rapidly growing region have a good opening for a canvasser who can get results. The right man is assured of at least four months' profitable work under unusually favorable conditions. A-773, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager wanted. Must be experienced and efficient; one familiar with A. B. C. records to take charge of morning newspaper in Middle West. Very large field. Must have best of references. Address A-731, Editor & Publisher.

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

Circulation—Young man wanted to take charge circulation department; one who can get best results from boys and develop field. Do not want "chair warmer," but an energetic man. Results will mean a permanent situation and increased pay. Atlantic seaboard city; morning and afternoon edition. Give full information and salary expected. A-760, Editor & Publisher.

Copy Writer, experienced, wanted for advertising department of daily newspaper in Pennsylvania city of 45,000. We want a man who can write and layout copy for merchants now advertising in our paper; prepare layouts for our salesmen to sell to non-advertisers; who can give competent professional advice to advertisers, and plan and write advertising campaigns for them. Must be a quick worker. Write, giving details of your past experience, present position, references, and salary expected, etc. A-736, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter who can write, age about thirty, for position requiring residence in Chicago suburb, with about one-fourth time traveling. Must be college man, not journalism school. Knowledge of metals not essential, but aid. Position will pay over five thousand, with exceptional future. Interview in New York, Chicago or between. Write at length. Can go to work within next six weeks. A-759, Editor & Publisher.

Special Edition and Special Page men wanted—2 experienced men on a special edition (4 mos. work) and 2 special page men for continuous work. Central New York territory. Address Box A-767, Editor & Publisher, giving full details of record.

Syndicate Salesman—Young man to sell news features on road. One with newspaper experience preferred. Good opening for ambitious hustler. State salary, experience, references. A-772, Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

Advertising Manager of twelve years' training on metropolitan and small city dailies; knows how to get business, national and local. Can furnish best of references as to character and ability to produce. Age 32, married. Any publisher who wants a dependable executive in the business office and can offer something of a future will find this man a worker with a knowledge of advertising and newspaper publishing that will increase revenues. A-766, Editor & Publisher.

Business Manager, Assistant Publisher, Advertising Manager. 25 years' newspaper experience in all departments. Record for unusual circulation and advertising growth and economical management. Detailed information exchanged. A-774, Editor & Publisher.

Business Manager of wide experience and unbeatable record as organizer and business and circulation getter, seeks wider field with greater opportunity than he has at present. A-770, Editor & Publisher.

Business Manager or assistant to publisher. Successful record of seven years in newspaper work. Know sales, promotion, credits, accounting, and costs in all departments. Losses from bad debts less than one half of one per cent. What is your loss? A natural leader and can get things done profitably. My all 'round knowledge and experience will be invaluable to some busy executive. Now employed but have satisfactory reason for change. Let me give you additional information. Address A-762, Editor & Publisher.

Cartoonist—Copy Writer—Newspaper and advertising experience—now with leading Philadelphia daily, desires position in Southern state. Also does lettering-retouching. A-717, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager, with record of accomplishment. Know promotion, office routine, A. B. C. and mailing. A 1 reference. A-757, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation—South's most brilliant circulation manager is probably satisfied with his present connection, but the next best isn't. Age 35. Salary $6,500. Go anywhere. Confidential correspondence solicited. A-726, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager—Eight years' experience in north central big city. Know every branch of the work. Hard worker and capable. Will go anywhere. Married; Christian. A-761, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager, age 36, married, with a successful record of several years' executive experience, seeks permanent position with a progressive newspaper or publishing organization in any live community. Applicant possesses a capacity to handle the combined routine of the Classified and Phone Departments; also Sales Staff in addition to writing good copy, and form letters that sell. Still employed but anxious to respond to best inducements offered. Address: A-749, Editor & Publisher.

Desk, Makeup Man. 22. Experience: Associate editor newspaper having 155,000 circulation; news editor, tabloid; city editor, small city weekly. Good writer. A-748, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Writer, capable and experienced, now managing editor of paper in city of 15,000, seeks connection with reputable editorial organization. A-732, Editor & Publisher.

EMPLOYMENT

Situations Wanted

Editorial Cartoonist, well known to publishers as a creative producer, formerly staff cartoonist on two New York papers, seeks opening where his forceful individuality can win and hold circulation.

This man can be relied upon to do his own thinking; to interpret the panorama of events vividly, intelligently; to challenge national recognition of a paper's editorial policies.

At present earning $9,000 yearly but would make substantial sacrifice for a place with independent, alert organization. Address, Box A-746, Editor & Publisher.

Editor and Feature Writer, 34, married, 15 years' experience on New York dailies and trade papers; law graduate; seeks position with opportunities. A-776, Editor & Publisher.

Expert Rotary or Flat-Bed Pressman desires permanent position with well established newspaper near New York. Open shop. Best wages expected. Can supervise stereotyping department. Long experience and thoroughly reliable. Address A-724, Editor & Publisher.

Feature Writer, theater book, art editor, reporter for daily or publishers. Two years newspaper experience. University Graduate. Wide reader. Magazine experience. Now on city daily. Woman with originality, ambition. Address Box A-769, Editor & Publisher.

Membership Problems—Executive, experienced in handling problems of increased membership for trade and commercial organizations, financial campaigns for athletic clubs, country clubs, hospitals, philanthropic, educational and religious enterprises, available Sept. 7th. Several years' experience in New York City, San Francisco, Cincinnati, St. Paul, Chicago and numerous small cities. Address A-756, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor—Holding important post on great city daily, wants position on paper in small city. Have built two. Prepare for the Fall battle by writing or wiring. A-725, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor or Editor, now employed on leading New York state daily. Seeks connection in city of 100,000 to 150,000 middlewest preferred. Fifteen years experience. Able to handle and develop men. Glad to arrange conference. A-739, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor, experienced, thoroughly capable, immediately available. As news room executive I can relieve some busy managing editor of the burden of details. Splendid editorial writer. A-771, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor—Varied experience on small and large dailies; now employed; seeks change. No territorial limitations. Will be at liberty on short notice. A-763, Editor & Publisher.

Political Correspondent and editorial writer, Republican, wishes position on Eastern or Middle Western newspaper. A-768, Editor & Publisher.

Press Erector wants to get off road. Will consider permanent position as Pressroom Superintendent-Maintenance man. Available Sept. first. References. A-723, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter—Young man, 21, with two years' varied newspaper experience, proofreading, etc., seeks reportorial position on New England or New York State daily. Available September 27. A-758, Editor & Publisher.

Two Young Executives, one the advertising manager of a newspaper in a city of 250,000 which gained a half million lines last year; the other, manager of the service department of one of the largest printing plants in the middle West, want to connect with the publisher of a newspaper in a town of 5,000 to 20,000, who would like to be relieved of the responsibility, and yet retain control.
These men are looking for an opportunity to acquire an interest in such a paper and offer their services at a fraction of their present salary to obtain this opportunity.
These men are both married, settled, and have the highest references. Both have had wide and varied experience in every department of a newspaper and the printing industry.
Would consider connecting with a trade journal or printing plant and if necessary could make a small investment. A-764, Editor & Publisher.

Web Pressman wishes a position to take charge of pressroom. Twenty years' experience. Best of references as to ability, etc. A-747, Editor & Publisher.

MECHANICAL

Equipment for Sale

Complete Newspaper Plant for sale. Two tubular duplex presses with stereotype equipment; seven intertype machines; photographic and photo engraving departments located San Francisco; Wesel saw and planer and photo engraving plant, Miami, Florida. Whole or in part as is, where is. Address John W. Brodix, receiver. Vanderbilt Newspapers, Inc., 56 Twelfth street, San Francisco, Calif.

MECHANICAL

Equipment for Sale

For Sale—Direct Current, 220 volt, 50 hp. Press Drive and control at a great bargain for delivery about Oct. 1. All in perfect condition and with an extra new armature which alone cost $550. For price and terms write The Zanesville Publishing Company, Zanesville, O.

Job Presses, Paper Cutters, Wire Stitchers, etc.—A complete line. Overhauled and guaranteed machines at bargain prices. Easy terms. Hoffmann Type & Engraving Co., 114 E. 13th St., N. Y. City.

One 12-page Goss Monitor No. 762 Perfecting Press for sale; also a complete stereotyping outfit with mat roller. A real bargain if taken at once. Globe-News Publishing Co., Amarillo, Texas.

Photo-Engraving plant for sale. Ideal for one or two men. Miles Machinery Co., 409 W. 26th St., New York.

Printers', Bookbinders' Outfitters—Modern cut-cost equipment, also rebuilt machinery. Conner, Fendler Branch, A. T. F. Co., New York City.

Used Goss Matt Roller for wet mats only, for sale cheap. The Goss Printing Press Co., 1535 So. Paulina St., Chicago, Ill.

Equipment Wanted

All Kinds of Photo-Engraving, electrotyping and stereotyping equipment wanted. We pay cash. Miles Machinery Co., 409 W. 26th St., New York.

For Exchange

Presses Exchanged for House, possibly lots, within commuting distance of New York City. Sextuple or Octuple Hoe, stereotype outfit optional, hand or Junior Autoplate. Other newspaper equipment. Might accept stock paying newspaper. Exchange, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Properties
Bought, Sold and Appraised.
All negotiations confidential.
PALMER, DEWITT & PALMER
350 Madison Ave., New York
Business Established in 1899.

CONSOLIDATION

The merging of newspaper interests is a subject that has received special study and investigation by this firm for nearly 17 years. It is a big subject and requires considerable technical knowledge, both as to valuation and operating methods. When properly organized, the results are never disappointing.

We have been factors in many important consolidations, sales and appraisals.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

WE ARE MOVING

On September first into Springfield's newest and finest office building. Please note our new address:

509-511 Security Bldg.
44 Vernon St.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
SECURITY BLDG. SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

DOLLAR $ $ $ $ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

THE Watsonville (Cal.) Evening Pajaronian, runs on Monday a very nice double column of small advertisements under the heading "Pajaronian Repair Directory," allowing small repair shops to get advantage of special display. A similar double column is run with the heading "Good Eats in Watsonville." In this all the cards are treated uniformly, with name in caps.—Fremont Kutnewsky.

With some typographical tricks that will picture the wintry blasts to come, it is high time that heating supply men were urging last minute installations before cold weather. Included in this list of "hurry up before winter sets in" advertisers should be coal dealers, lumber dealers and all other merchants catering to the winter needs of buyers.—F. D. H.

Each Saturday, the Green Bay (Wis.) Press-Gazette publishes two pages of advertising, interspersed with a bit of business news, entitled "Weekly Review of Brown County's Business and Manufacturing Industries." Advertising from practically all of the small towns in the county is included—Ruben Levin, Madison, Wis.

One newspaper sponsored an "Electrical Inspection Week" most successfully. Inspection of wiring systems in homes, offices, industrial plants, etc. was emphasized with a view to replacement of defective materials, etc. City officials co-operated while advertising of electrical firms was tripled during the week.—B. A. T., Springfield, O.

Every meat dealer is anxious to sell his slow moving cuts of meat. The Washington (Ia.) Democrat has sold to the meat dealers of its city an advertising campaign that covers a year period advertising "Use Less Demanded Cuts of Meats." All of the meat dealers willingly signed for this and it netted the paper a contract of 2,420 inches of advertising from otherwise just occasional advertisers. Try it in your city. —A. J. K., Washington, Ia.

When you have a non-advertiser in the men's clothing business in your city, look over his stock and see which department is his best. If it is ties, get him to use small space once or twice a week, advertising ties exclusively. Or if it is shirts, advertise shirts. Whatever it is, use small space regularly and it will give him a reputation for that one article. His other business will gradually build up around this, and soon you'll have another big-space advertiser. Try this for good results! And be sure you use layouts when you try to sell them.—Ralph Gibler, Huntington, Ind.

Radio reception is bad in hot weather and the efficiency of the smaller radio sets is seriously reduced. Now is the time for a good page or half-page of group ads by your radio stores boosting the sale of extra amplifiers, more powerful loud-speakers and other accessories to better reception.—M. McEniry, Denver, Col.

A new service for its readers has been inaugurated by the Boston American whereby aid will be given anyone whose automobile is stolen. The newspaper publishes in its columns daily a list of automobiles stolen in Greater Boston during the preceding 24 hours. Owners of stolen cars are offered this service free. All that is required is that the owner show the registration of the car to a representative of the paper at its office and furnish the necessary data regarding the stolen machine.—Clarence L. Moody, Quincy, Mass., Patriot Ledger.

AD CAMPAIGN ENDORSED

North Carolina Press Backs Drive for $100,000 to Advertise State

The movement to advertise North Carolina, which is being undertaken by North Carolinians, Incorporated, has received the official endorsement of editors representing 71 daily and weekly newspapers and journals in the state. These have been enrolled as members of the state committee together with more than 150 leading North Carolina business and industrial men. The enrollment of this committee has not yet been completed, according to Fred N. Tate, chairman of the organization body.

Members of the organization committee report that they are confident that $100,000 will be raised during the next few months. This will be used for nation-wide advertising purposes during the coming year. Many cities and towns have already raised their quotas, while others are making preparations to do the same.

NEW IRISH JOURNAL

"Press and Printing" is the name of a new quarterly Irish publication, official organ of the Associated Irish Newspapers and Irish Master Printers' Association.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "H U N C H" PUBLISHED

UNDER the caption "Where the Jest Begins—Detours Conducted by Steve and Ben"—The Salt Lake City Telegram is publishing a daily feature on its editorial page prepared by two members of the staff. The stories are brief and treat topics of local interest in a humorous vein.—N. C. Christensen.

A series of book reviews has been a summer feature of the Attleboro (Mass.) Sun. One set was prepared by some of the English classes at the high school whose teacher assigned the work and edited it. Another set was prepared by pupils in the eighth grade under the direction of their teacher. The series reviewed new books as well as old; in fact the best review to date has been a high school student's interpretation of the Aeneid.—Eldon G. Berthold, Attleboro, Mass.

A front page feature for Labor Day can be worked up around the people who work in your city. How many are employed in the different factories? How much do they earn? How many are in the retail business? What's their average income? How much does it cost a family to live in your city? By dramatizing the average family and picturing them at work and at play, an interesting and unusual feature story will be the result. And it will prove worth writing! —Ralph Gibler, Huntington, Ind.

You frequently will hear householders arguing about the best way to fire a furnace; the proper way to hold the fire; how to keep the flues clean, etc. Which, in itself, is a tip for you to run a little feature on the proper methods as explained by some expert fireman. And then you might as well make it the basis for a double truck of advertisements of coal dealers. That it will be read is assured.—B. A. T.

The beginning of September heralds the close of the harvest season. A review of threshing conditions in your community would be of interest to your farmer readers. How did the weather affect the grain? In Kansas this year as well as in some parts of Minnesota, the drought and hot weather spoiled crops and in northern Illinois too much rain ruined many acres. Interview some of the old threshers and have them compare seasons and perhaps they might be able to tell some mighty interesting yarns.—Wilbur Polson, Geneseo, Ill.

The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service

Supplying a complete and exclusive daily illustrated feature service to newspapers throughout the United States and in foreign countries.

4 page ready-print color comics.
Write for samples and rates

NEA SERVICE INC. 1200 W. 3RD STREET, CLEVELAND, OHIO

How To Play GOLF
By JOHNNY FARRELL
Famous Teacher of That Game
24 LESSONS
Illustrated
For release daily
KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, Inc.
New York City

for six weeks!
The sure appeal of YOUTH, ROMANCE, ADVENTURE ACTION
in
M Y R A
by
Mabel Greene
A serial written especially for newspapers. Supplied in 1000-word instalments, with daily synopsis and PHOTOGRAPHIC illustrations.
Released October 4
The McClure Newspaper Syndicate
373 Fourth Avenue, New York

COMPLETE WIRE REPORTS FOR EVENING AND SUNDAY PAPERS
International News Service
"Get It FIRST but First Get It RIGHT"
63 Park Row
NEW YORK CITY

Creating New Advertising
Without Cost to You!
Thos. W. Briggs Co. has specialized in building into substantial accounts non-advertising firms in your field.
The Briggs plan, guaranteed by 21 years of success, adds nothing to your selling cost. It will break your local display lineage records in the face of business depression and severest competition.
At your request we will send outline and full particulars.
THOS. W. BRIGGS CO.
Columbian Mutual Tower Bldg.
MEMPHIS TENN.

BY UNITED PRESS
AROUND THE WORLD AROUND THE CLOCK
UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS
World Building New York

Among The Newspapers Publishing
Constance Talmadge's Flapper Series
Chicago Journal, Detroit News, Toledo Blade, Omaha Bee, Peoria Star Journal, Philadelphia Sun, Buffalo Times, Louisville Courier J'l, Oakland Post Enquirer, Memphis News Scimitar, Newark Jersey Transcript
Why Not Join This List of Papers
Wire for Terms and Territory
COSMOS NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE INC
Covering the World
NINE EAST THIRTY-SEVENTH STREET NEW YORK CITY
Herbert S. Houston, President and Editor-in-Chief — Myles F. Lasker, Vice-President and General Manager

Evidence— of the South's Prosperity!

Yes, these are actually homes located on Southern farms and plantations. Homes like these are far more numerous in the south today than the northern advertiser realizes, and the number of these up to date homes, containing every modern convenience is growing every day.

This is proof of how tremendous has been the growth of the south. Prosperity is in greater evidence there, than in any other part of the United States.

National advertisers are now realizing the opportunities which the South presents for them, and are taking advantage of it by advertising in the group of papers listed below. These are the papers read by the entire family, and for the National Advertiser the best mediums to present his product to a responsive audience.

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
ALABAMA
*Birmingham Age-Herald (M)	34,994	.09	.09
*Birmingham Age-Herald (S)	50,699	.11	.11
*Mobile News-Item (E)	11,993	.05	.05
*Mobile Register (M)	20,427	.08	.08
*Mobile Register (S)	32,096	.10	.10
FLORIDA
*Daytona Beach News (ES)	6,302	.04	.04
*Florida Times-Union (M) 49,903 (S)	59,239	.12(S.15)	.12(S.15)
*Lakeland Ledger (E)	5,173	.03	.03
*Miami Herald (M)	48,108	.11	.11
*Miami Herald (S)	60,006	.12	.12
*Orlando Reporter-Star (E)	8,502	.06	.06
*Orlando Sentinel (M&S)	10,655	.06	.06
*Pensacola News and Journal (E&M)	9,805	.06	.06
†St. Augustine Record (E&S)	3,382	.04	.04
†St. Petersburg Independent (E)	11,917	.055	.055
*Tampa Times (E)	23,325	.08	.08
†Tampa Tribune (M) 34,841 (S)	53,762	.09(.11S)	.09(.11S)
*West Palm Beach Post (M)	12,243	.06	.06
GEORGIA
*Augusta Herald (E)	14,246	.05	.05
*Augusta Herald (S)	14,547	.05	.05
*Macon Telegraph (M)	24,035	.08	.08
*Macon Telegraph (S)	24,439	.08	.08
Savannah Morning News (M), 21,015. (S)	22,204	.06(.07S)	.06(.07S)
KENTUCKY
*The Lexington Leader (E)	19,640	.06	.06
*The Lexington Leader (S)	19,531	.06	.06
*Paducah Sun (E)	9,266	.04	.04

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
NORTH CAROLINA
†Greensboro Daily News (M)	27,485	.08	.07
†Greensboro Daily News (S)	31,505	.09	.08
*Salisbury Post (E)	7,188	.04	.04
†Winston-Salem Journal (M)	13,703	.05	.05
†Winston-Salem Journal (S)	13,720	.05	.05
*Winston-Salem Sentinel (E)	18,259	.07	.07
SOUTH CAROLINA
*Columbia State (M)	23,186	.07	.07
*Columbia State (S)	24,870	.07	.07
*Greenville News (M)	21,648	.075	.07
*Spartanburg Journal (E) 4,613 / *Spartanburg Herald (M) 6,860 (S)	9,856	.05	.05
TENNESSEE
*Chattanooga Times (M)	29,184	.10	.10
*Chattanooga Times (S)	28,942	.10	.10
*Memphis Commercial Appeal (M)	100,934	.18	.18
*Memphis Commercial Appeal (S)	129,219	.21	.21
*Nashville Banner (E)	54,519	.11	.11
*Nashville Banner (S)	56,007	.12	.12
VIRGINIA
*Danville Register and Bee (M&E)	14,313	.06	.06
*Danville Bee and Register (E&S)	9,065	.09	.07
*Newport News Times-Herald (E) 7,968 / *Newport News Daily Press (S&M) 5,413	13,381	.05	.05
*Roanoke Times & World News (M&E)	25,772	.08	.08
*Roanoke Times (S)	16,076	.07	.07
*Staunton News-Leader (M), Leader (E)	6,855	.035	.035

* A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1926.
† Government Statement, March 31, 1926.

"Too Much Alike"

WOULD you build a home exactly like your neighbor's?

You might install the same heating system, buy the same make of refrigerator, hardware and garden hose, but you'd want something distinctive about the house beside the number on the door.

And so with your newspaper.

There is a point where standardization, like patience, ceases to be a virtue.

The Consolidated Press will give your paper the individuality that will save it from the blight of over-standardization because—

John B. Foster stands so high in the ranks of baseball writers that his name is signed to the Official Guide of the game.

Lawrence Perry, with his nationwide contacts in the world of sport, wears, undisputed, the mantle of Walter Camp.

The daily dispatch on National Affairs by David Lawrence has never been duplicated.

There is only one Bob Small in America.

Stuart P. West writes for the one paper in a city that the readers of financial news swear by.

J. C. Royle's daily summary of the business situation has been imitated but never equalled.

George T. Hughes has the unique distinction of never having gone wrong on an analysis of the investment situation.

The service of The Consolidated Press is sold to one newspaper in a city and cannot become "neighborhood property." It is the hall-mark of the distinctive newspaper.

The Consolidated Press Association

Executive Offices, Evening Star Building, Washington, D. C.

New York	Chicago	San Francisco	Paris
Eighth Floor	Third Floor	Third Floor	Fourth Floor
World Building	Daily News Building	Bulletin Building	19 Rue d'Antin

THIS ISSUE: CHAOS IN RADIO MENACES IT AS ADVERTISING MEDIUM

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1926

SUITE 1700 TIMES BUILDING, NEW YORK
42ND STREET AND BROADWAY.

MEMBER A.B.C. MEMBER A.B.P.

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; Newspaperdom, March, 1892; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Advertising, February 7, 1925; Revised entry, Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916, at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Vol. 59. No. 15 NEW YORK, SEPTEMBER 4, 1926 By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A. $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign 10c Per Copy

Thanks for This Increased Business!

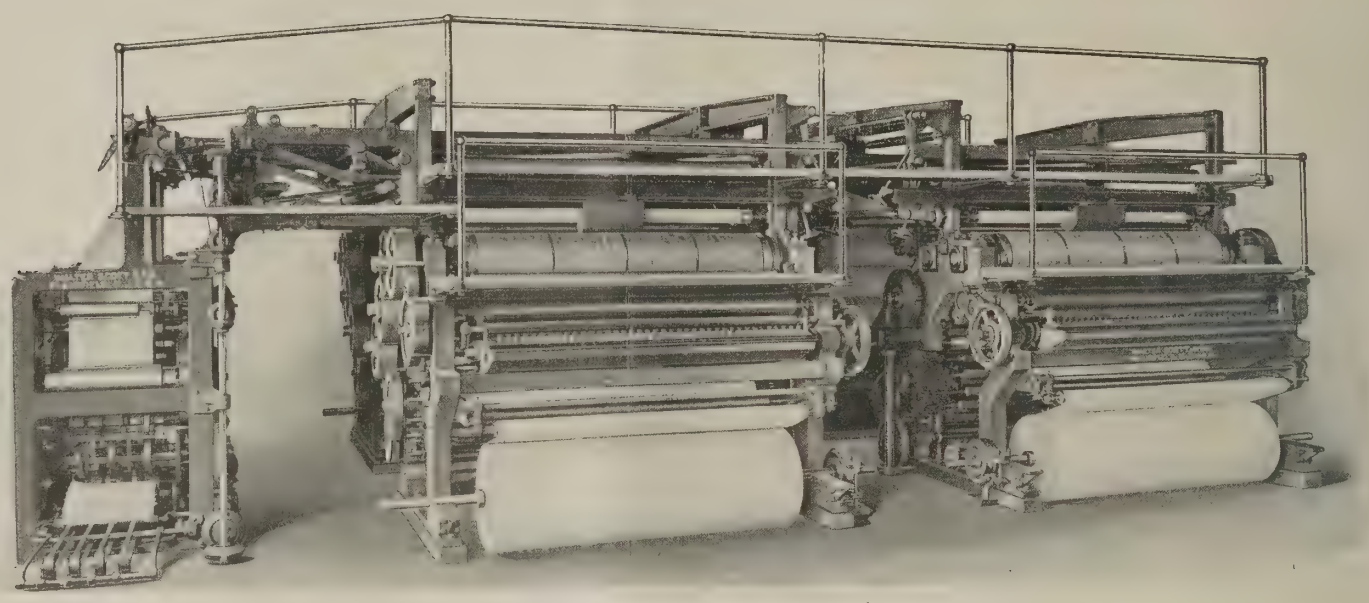
Impressive Advertising Gains Made by The Chicago Daily News in the First 7 Months of 1926

The advertisers of America in the first seven months of 1926 expressed most emphatically their confidence in the broad advertising and selling influence of The Chicago Daily News.

Compared with the immense volume of advertising in the same period of 1925—greater than that of any other Chicago daily paper, as is also the case in the present year—The Daily News recorded gains that demonstrate with a new emphasis the productiveness of advertising in Chicago's family newspaper. These increases are shown in the following divisions of display advertising:

Display Advertising Gains of The Chicago Daily News in the First Seven Months of 1926

	Gain, Agate Lines.
Department Store Advertising	361,294	—or 9.7%
All Local Display Advertising	917,800	—or 12.6%
National Display Advertising	138,115	—or 8.1%
Total Display Advertising -	1,055,915	—or 11.8%



The Daily News is deeply appreciative of the preference shown by advertisers in the use of its columns. There is every promise of extraordinarily good business in Chicago throughout the coming fall and winter. To all who do business in the Chicago market this means increasingly great opportunities through continued advertising in

THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

First in Chicago

Advertising Representatives:

NEW YORK	DETROIT	CHICAGO	SAN FRANCISCO
J. B. Woodward	Woodward & Kelly	Woodward & Kelly	C. Geo. Krogness
110 E. 42d St.	Fine Arts Building	360 N. Michigan Ave.	253 First Nat. Bank Bldg.

Scott "Multi-Unit" Octuple Floor-Fed Press

Is Your Pressroom Up-to-the-minute?

The Up-to-the-minute newspaper plant is equipped with Scott Presses.

Whether "Multi-Unit" or "Straight-Unit" types are used, the features and advantages which characterize Scott design and construction are always present and our standard of —"one quality—the best"—is constantly maintained.

All units are on floor level within easy reach of operators. The wide passages between the sections give complete access to the parts of all units. Pressmen can make all adjustments on fountains and other parts without leaving the pressroom floor.

To Be Up-to-the-minute in Your Pressroom, Install—

Scott

"Multi-Unit" or "Straight-Unit" Presses

Cylinder Speed—400 r. p. m.

WALTER SCOTT & COMPANY

Main Office and Factory - - - Plainfield, New Jersey, U. S. A.
New York Office - - - - 1457 Broadway
Chicago Office - - - 1330 Monadnock Block

Cable Address: WALTSCOTT NEW YORK

One week in Baltimore and you'd know

¶ We're leaning heavily to the side of modesty when we say "one week."

¶ One day in a Baltimore home would be long enough to demonstrate how essential the Sunpapers are in the daily life of the native Baltimorean.

¶ Before the alarm clock rang in the morning—the Morning Sunpaper would be on the doorstep. Delivered by a Sun Carrier, it would be read with the morning coffee. During the day it would be read by every member of the household.

¶ Then as the day faded—the Sun Carrier would make his rounds again. The Evening Sunpaper would enter the family circle—a visitor assured of a welcome.

¶ One week—or a day—in Baltimore would give you a better idea of the influence of the Sunpapers than we could tell you in a year's advertising. If you can't spend that day—ask any Baltimorean.

Average Net Paid Circulation for Month of August, 1926

Daily (M. & E.) . . 245,990
Sunday 189,419

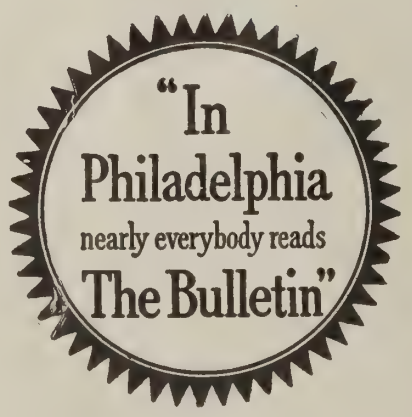
A Gain of 12,270 Daily and 5,818 Sunday Over August, 1925

JOHN B. WOODWARD
Bowery Bank Bldg.,
110 E. 42d St., New York

GUY S. OSBORN
360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago

C. GEORGE KROGNESS
First National Bank Bldg.
San Francisco

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around



THE SUN

MORNING EVENING SUNDAY

Baltimoreans Don't Say "Newspaper"—They Say "SUNpaper"

Match 533,169 copies against *550,000 homes and you get an idea of the truth of our slogan

*"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads
The Bulletin"*

Net paid daily average for six months ending March 31, 1926:

533,169 copies a day

The circulation of The Bulletin is larger than that of any other Philadelphia newspaper, and the third largest in the United States.

The Evening Bulletin.

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

New York . . . . . 247 Park Avenue (Park-Lexington Building)
Chicago . . . . . Verree & Conklin, Inc., 28 East Jackson Boulevard
Detroit . . . C. L. Weaver, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 321 Lafayette Boulevard
San Francisco . . Thomas L. Emory, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 681 Market Street

*There are 550,000 homes in the Philadelphia-Camden retail trading area—third largest market in the United States.

(Copyright 1926, Bulletin Company)

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication by The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor; Suite 1700 Times Building, 42nd St., at Broadway, New York. Telephone, Bryant 3052-3053-3054-3055-3056. Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations. Member Associated Business Papers, Inc.

Vol. 59 | NEW YORK, SEPTEMBER 4, 1926 | No. 15

Value of Radio Advertising Weakens As Stations "Jump" Wave-Lengths

Air Chaos Now Reigns Preventing Clear Reception Following Failure of Congress to Enact Regulatory Laws—Gold Dust Corporation Quits Air

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

RADIO broadcasting, so-called good-will and publicity builder for advertisers, is menaced from two quarters as the fall season approaches.

A serious threat from within comes in the form of the increased number of stations and general interference since announcement of the Attorney General's opinion holding that the Department of Commerce is without regulatory jurisdiction, which may so jam the air the advertisers' messages will be lost to large numbers because of heterodyning and limited selectivity.

On the outside the newspapers are slowly tiring of playing nurse to the infant industry and are showing signs of withdrawing some of the free support that gave radio its start. Broadcasting is gradually being put in the class of other entertainment advertisers in the newspapers, such as the moving picture houses, which must buy newspaper space regularly at high rates to insure publication of free readers on theatrical pages. The old story of the railroad and free publication of railroad timetables is about to be retold.

Newspapers on Aug. 28, announced that six new radio stations were licensed the week ending Aug. 25, bringing the total operating that date to 563. More than 65 stations have been licensed since Congress failed to enact legislation for control of radio broadcasting, correcting original laws inaugurated back in 1912 that have since become wofully inadequate.

"Chaos!" Secretary Hoover declared.

Radio interests replied: "No chaos."

In the current edition of Radio Retailing it is editorially stated that "one of these boys is right and it begins to look as though it isn't the latter."

Inquiry at broadcasting stations brings out the admission now that the breakdown of legislation occurred at a most unfortunate time. The summer season is not radio's best. They do not pretend to predict definitely what will happen this fall and winter when radio broadcasting really gets into full swing.

A net-work station such as that operated by the Broadcasting Company of America, Inc., with WEAF, New York, the keystone station, is confident of its powerful position. This is the big national advertising radio outlet, which recently was purchased by the Radio Corporation of America, with the actual transfer expected the first of next year.

Do advertisers question this claim of powerful position? Are they fearful the "air copy" will not come through clean this winter until some legislative regulation is passed?

"Goldy" and "Dusty," the trade-mark twins of the Gold Dust Corporation, after two years of big time advertisement broadcasting are now off the air. They presented their "farewell performance" Aug. 24.

WHEN WINTER COMES—

WHAT will be conditions in the air? Will broadcasting advertisers be guaranteed "clean" copy, or will the ether be jammed with beat tones and squeals?

Regulatory legislation failed at the last Congress and already experts see the chaos forecast by Secretary of Commerce Hoover.

Can advertising agencies unreservedly advise clients to try the air medium this coming season?

Big hook-up stations claim they will be unaffected. Smaller installations operated by advertisers are already complaining. An important air advertiser, the Gold Dust Corporation, has discontinued its entertainment that cost $80,000 last year.

Meanwhile newspapers are cutting out free publicity and tightening their radio space, feeling the "infant industry" has outgrown its swaddling clothes.

Reasons for the withdrawal are considered "confidential" by officials of the Gold Dust Corporation, who formerly had been most enthusiastic about the possibilities of radio broadcasting as a goodwill builder or advertising medium.

It has been estimated that this concern spent $80,000 for air advertising last year, using the network of the present Broadcasting Company of America, Inc.

The broadcasting officials do not discuss any discontinuance of advertising by a client. Instead they maintain that the network which operates nightly linking some 17 stations has been practically sold out for the coming year. They maintain they will be unaffected by chaotic conditions.

"One New England station has taken our wave length, but it has caused us no trouble as yet," a spokesman for the corporation told EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week.

In New York, WJZ and WOR, likewise do not fear the future, confident the "gentleman's agreement" now in force will hold stations in line until legislation is passed by the next Congress convening in December.

Advertisers over small stations at the present time appear to be less fortunate.

This is the opinion of Stuart Hawkins, radio expert, who writes under the name of "Pioneer" for the New York Herald Tribune. He says the smaller stations already are feeling the effect of the chaos prophesied by Secretary Hoover. In the Manhattan territory stations WBNY, WMSG and WRNY have all changed their wave lengths recently, causing some local interference, according to Hawkins.

That this condition extends throughout the country is indicated by the fact that the National Better Business Bureau's New York headquarters has commenced an investigation of the radio broadcasting field in response to "communications from a substantial number of radio listeners."

"According to some of these writers, radio broadcasting seems to be drifting toward a situation comparable to an ancient village where rival town criers might have shouted their news in unison so that none could be heard," a joint statement signed by Lou E. Holland, bureau president, and Edward L. Greene, managing director, issued Aug. 28, declared.

Under date of Aug. 25, the National Better Business Bureau sent out the following letter:

"To the Radio Broadcasting Stations of the United States:

"We believe you are already acquainted with the work of the National Better Business Bureau. Affiliated with local Better Business Bureaus in more than forty cities, it serves the public interest and protects public confidence in legitimate business by promoting fair play.

"Letters are coming in from radio broadcast listeners in substantial quantities complaining about existing wave length usage, a number of which suggest that the National Better Business Bureau investigate the situation. Following its usual practice, the Bureau's first effort is to Get the Facts. We ask you to assist by answering the following questions:

"1. Have you experienced interference with your broadcasting since the announcement of the Attorney General's opinion holding that the Department of Commerce is without regulatory jurisdiction?

"2. Have you received letters, telegrams or telephone calls from your listeners, describing difficulties in reception originating since this date? If so, how many?

"3. If you have received such communications, were they voluntary and spontaneous, or were they received in response to a request for information made through your announcers?

"4. What effects upon broadcasting and its reception seem to you likely to follow the present departures from a definite allocation of wave-bands?

"May we hear from you soon?

"NATIONAL BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU,
"Edward L. Greene, Managing Director."

Replies began coming in this week. While withholding names of stations, the Bureau executives allowed EDITOR & PUBLISHER to quote from some of the letters received.

One station operated by an advertiser in the middle-west declared he had received 200 letters and telegrams within a short period, all of them voluntary, complaining of blanketing or heterodyning by another station.

A station operated by a college reported:

"We believe in general that the departure from definite allocation of wave-bands will seriously injure the popularity of radio. To a large extent the stations which have changed wave lengths are those stations operated by commercial concerns, interested mainly in advertising their own particular product and not in presenting constructive programs of real educational merit.

"Interference on the more select bands has increased markedly and doubtless will be more serious as the season progresses. The situation threatens to injure seriously the popularity of radio for the home."

Another station director, representing an advertiser who has taken up broadcasting, wrote in a letter dated Aug. 27:

"If interference from wave-jumpers increases as it has recently reception from long distance stations will be almost impossible within a few months."

Capt. Robert Scofield Wood, who directs the radio service of the New York Evening World, was outspoken in his appraisal of the present situation in the air and of the future possibilities.

"Obviously radio is worthless as an advertising medium without audiences," he declared. "Many smaller stations selling space and others operated by adver-

(Continued on page 38)

PRESS CONGRESS HOSTS TALK SHOP TO GUESTS

Brisbane and Dean Williams Debate Journalism's Functions at Wanamaker Luncheon — Crowde Program of Dinners, Tours and Theatres Precedes Friday Night Sailing

SPIRITED discussion of the press and its functions by Mayor James J. Walker of New York, Arthur Brisbane, and Dean Walter Williams and others marked public functions at which members of the Press Congress of the World were entertained this week while awaiting the departure of their steamer, the Carmania, for Europe Friday night. The delegation, numbering about 100 members when the "all-aboard" whistle sounded, found few idle moments on their hands after Wednesday morning.

After a tour of lower Manhattan, they were taken in automobiles with an honorary police motor escort to City Hall, where John H. Finley, associate editor of the New York Times and chairman of the reception committee, presented them to the Mayor.

"New York could not have been developed into what we consider the greatest city in the world without the press," said Mayor Walker. "History is written here daily by persons who come from all parts of the world and who were induced to come here by reading of the city in newspapers. My own immigrant father came here because he heard of the freedom possible here. He did not learn this from books, but from newspaper accounts. My regard and respect for the press is very great.

"There have been times in the past," he continued, "when an intellectual delegation arriving at the City Hall could make a Mayor of New York exceedingly uncomfortable. I wish there were some way we could catch and lock up those pests, relatively few of whom are really New Yorkers, who go through your part of the country declaring of everything, 'We do that better in New York.' Of course, you of the West get heartily tired of it.

"And so we are doubly glad you are here to see that we are not the sort of people you were led to suppose from that kind of press agenting."

Dr. Finley in presenting the delegation referred to them as "knights errant and the cream and flower of the nation's editors." New York, he said, means a great deal to the newspaper men of the country, in that features, comic strips and other essentials of the modern newspaper are created here. Dr. Walter Williams, president of the Press Congress and dean of the School of Journalism at the University of Missouri, responded to the greetings.

Wreath placed on the grave of William Bradford, first U. S. publisher, in Trinity Churchyard, this week, by Press Congress of the World delegation.

The party was then escorted to the John Wanamaker store by Grover A. Whalen, chairman of the city's welcoming committee to distinguished guests. Rodman Wanamaker greeted his guests and there were talks by Arthur Brisbane, Julian S. Mason, editor of the Evening Post; Dr. Williams and Joseph Appel, advertising manager of Wanamakers.

Mr. Brisbane urged the editors to take graciously whatever unpleasantness m occur in Europe during their visit. H combined this with comment in favor American freedom from foreign entangl ments.

"The newspaper today is a means holding security for the public," he sai "It is like the public square of older n tions where the public could see wh their leaders were doing. It is like t second hand of a watch, ticking off t little incidents as they happen, which the end of a century are really the histo of the century. The minute hand is t book and the hour hand the great wri ings that live on and outlast the ag Doing our little bit, we are like t upbuilders of the islands of the sea, ta ing centuries in their building and us by others who come long after we a gone."

He reminded the editors that Euro has suffered and that they should remer ber that condition in judging happening "We can also remember that the Unit States is the best place for Uncle Sa to remain," he added.

Mr. Wanamaker advised the delegate many of whom will visit Europe for t first time, not to make up their min too quickly about things over there.

"To the old countries we owe a ve great deal," he declared, "and the fa that their ways are different from ou is only an added reason for visiting the If you will overlook what few little i conveniences and unpleasantnesses y may experience because of these di ferences you will learn a good deal y can bring back with you of value American journalism. Above all, y will come back with the greatest asset the world, a quality which goes ever where and costs nothing—confidence."

Dean Williams at the conclusion of M Brisbane's speech said:

"Even though we cannot write f thousands of journals, we can learn th a newspaper is not a mere chronicl of events, a mere public forum. We c learn that we must set down the even

(Continued on page 36)

Press Congress delegates photographed on City Hall steps following their reception by Mayor James J. Walker (center). At Mayor Walker's right is Dean Williams and at his right is Julian Mason, editor of the New York Evening Post.

PRESS CONGRESS TO CONSIDER DALE CASE

Judicial Censorship of Press in U. S. Through Contempt of Court Procedure Placed on Program of Geneva Meeting by President Williams

JUDICIAL press censorship, as it is practiced in the United States through contempt of court procedure, will be taken up at sessions of the Press Congress of the World at Geneva and Lausanne, Sept. 14-18, Dean Walter Williams, congress president, informed EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week in an exclusive interview prior to the departure of American delegates on the S. S. Carmania, Sept. 3.

This last-minute addition to the congress agenda, not included on the official program, was occasioned by the fact that the case of George R. Dale, editor of the Muncie (Ind.) Post-Democrat, cited on a contempt charge, will come before the United States Supreme Court Sept. 27, shortly after Press Congress sessions are concluded.

Dean Williams declared a resolution opposing the power accorded judges under the American law in regard to the press would be offered to the Congress delegates, who will represent 26 different nationalities, and number some 300 newspaper editors and publishers, of which about 100 are from the United States.

The Congress president himself is firmly opposed to contempt of court procedure, wherein a judge acts as complainant, prosecutor, jury and judge.

"I am in agreement with EDITOR & PUBLISHER in regard to this serious menace to a free press," Dean Williams said.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER has editorially branded the system as "the single peacetime survival in this country of the ancient despotic rule of lese majesty," and has suggested passage of legislation transferring contempt cases to courts of parallel, but removed jurisdiction, as a curb to the arbitrary power of judges.

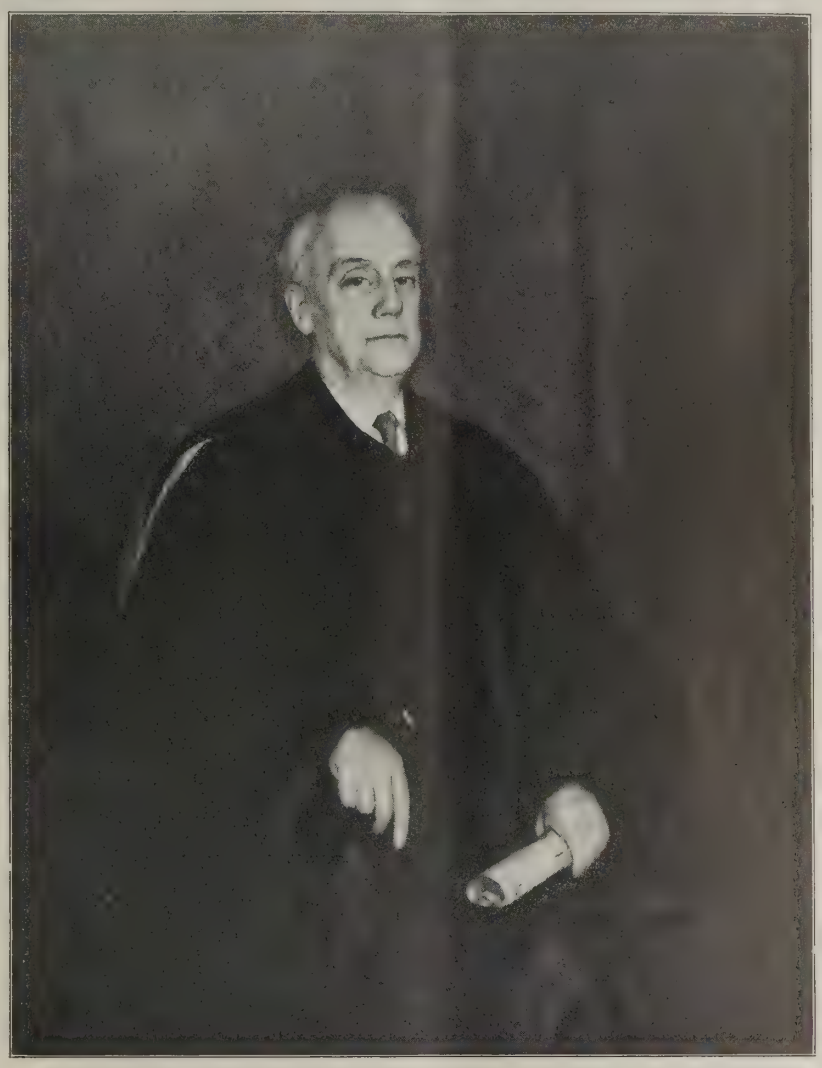
The suggestion of this paper will be incorporated in the resolution to be offered at the Press Congress, and will be thoroughly discussed by delegates, Dean Williams said.

The Dale case, representing as it does one phase of the American judicial procedure as it affects the press, will probably enter discussions of the Press Congress at the second session, Tuesday, Sept. 14, under the general topic of "The Freedom of the Press."

Chairman of the discussion on this subject is Thales Coutoupis, of the Athens (Greece) Nea Ellas, who, Dean Williams said, is a keen student of the question of a free press, and delivered an illuminating paper on the subject at the last meeting of the Congress in Honolulu in 1921.

Dean Williams cited the imprisonment of Mexican editors as an example of the problems of a free press. The Congress, he said, had accomplished the release of Silvestre Terrazas and was working for the release of Vicente Villasana, both of whom had been imprisoned, the latter for publishing a letter of protest written by a Mexican residing in New York. Suppression of newspapers in Ecuador, Chile, Guatemala and Italy also will be considered.

The American editor, Dale, of Muncie, was sentenced by a local state judge to 90 days' imprisonment and $500 fine for publishing an editorial in which he charged a previous conviction for carrying a concealed weapon was obtained from a Ku Klux Klan jury, and that the judge, grand jury, and jury commissioners, prosecutor, sheriff and the city police were Klan members.



The Indiana Supreme Court has held that Dale's plea of justification on the ground of truth was no excuse.

Dean Williams, in the interview, placed freedom of the press foremost in listing four fundamental problems to be considered at Geneva and Lausanne.

The remaining three, in the order named, are:

Freedom of news dissemination.

Preparation for the career of journalism.

DEAN WALTER WILLIAMS

President Press Congress of the World and head of the University of Missouri School of Journalism

Responsibility to civilization of the journalists themselves.

"To have a great journalism, one must have a free journalism," Dean Williams said. "It must be self-regulated, and not tampered with from without.

"True, newspaper publishers should be held responsible for what they say through their papers, but they must not be told in advance what they should say.

"In order to accomplish anything journalists must be free from outside control, whether it be government, church, or a despotic bench.

"But it is not enough to be free. That avails nothing, when the freedom of news sources is clogged.

"Thus, we reach the second basic problem that confronts the Congress. Representatives of the world's press are seeking free trade in news. Transmission rates are high at present. This is particularly true in respect to the Oriental countries and South America. We are beginning a new epoch in news transmission. Wireless is becoming increasingly important. If the press permits transmission facilities to fall into the hands of monopolistic or controlled agencies, the flow of news might be colored or interrupted."

Dean Williams explained that an ad interim committee under the chairmanship of Lt.-Col. Edward F. Lawson, managing director of the London Daily Telegraph, had prepared a report on world communications that would be presented to the Congress. This report, Col. Lawson has indicated, will show that transmission rates in some quarters are excessive. Dean Williams declined to name any corporations or governments involved in this charge of news interference through high rates.

The third question, that of journalistic preparation, will be taken up at Lausanne, Sept. 17, according to present plans. Discussions will be led by Robert Bell, proprietor of the Christ Church (N. Z.) Times, and Dr. J. W. Cunliffe, head of the Pulitzer School of Journalism at Columbia University. Mr. Bell is founder of the first school of journalism in New Zealand.

"Discussion will not be limited to journalism schools as a means of newspaper education," Dean Williams continued. "There is a much broader field open than that. The important question is if journalism is to regulate itself, what preparation should the journalist be given?

"And once in the newspaper world, what about the responsibility of the journalists themselves? That is the fourth basic question common to newspapers everywhere.

"Should the press be simply a booster, a rotary club in print? Should it be an interpreter of day by day history? A crusader? A chronicler of news?

"These are among questions to be answered when thought is crystallized at sessions of the Press Congress of the World.

"There are other common matters to be considered also, in addition to the four basic problems. We want to uncover the possibilities of an interchange of journalists between nationalities as a means of promoting peace. We will consider the welfare of journalists all over the world, the betterment of working hours, tenure of position and living conditions.

"We hope to arrive at a code of ethics practical for all newspapers of the world. It will be even more comprehensive, we hope, than the journalists' creed, formulated at the Pan-American Press Congress in Washington this year. Preparation of such a code is in the hands of Stephane Lauzanne, editor of Le Matin of Paris."

The Congress, according to its president, will also seek to answer the question as to whether or not the organization in its present form is too big and unwieldy.

"Perhaps regional press congresses culminating in an international gathering would be a better arrangement," Dean Williams suggested. "There might be a procedure devised which would provide for separate conferences, such as Pan-American, Oriental, and Continental."

Dean Williams declined to discuss for publication whether or not he would consider accepting another term as president of the Press Congress of the World, should he be nominated in Geneva. He was first elected president at an organization meeting held in 1915 and was re-elected at the sessions in Honolulu in 1921. The third session was to have been held in Spain last year, but was postponed until this year because of the Spanish revolution.

NEW S.N.P.A. COMMITTEES

President Parks Names Groups on Editorial Affairs and Lee School

President John A. Park, of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association this week named two more committees to serve during the coming year. They are:

EDITORIAL AFFAIRS: Chairman—James B. Nevin, Atlanta (Ga.) Georgian.

Alabama—J. E. Pierce, Huntsville Times.

Arkansas—Edgar G. Harris, Blytheville Courier News.

Florida—L. D. Reagin, Sarasota Times.

Louisiana—Chas. P. Manship, Baton Rouge State Times.

Kentucky—H. Giovannoli, Lexington Leader.

Mississippi—James H. Skewes, Meridian Star.

North Carolina—D. S. Elias, Asheville Times.

Oklahoma—Walter Harrison, Oklahoma City Oklahoman.

South Carolina—W. E. Gonzales, Columbia State.

Tennessee—J. G. Stahlman, Nashville Banner.

Texas—E. S. Fentress, Waco News-Tribune.

Virginia—C. J. Harkrader, Bristol Herald-Courier.

West Virginia—W. E. Chilton, Charleston Gazette.

LEE MEMORIAL SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM: Chairman—Major John S. Cohen, Atlanta (Ga.) Journal.

Colonel H. L. Opie, Staunton (Va.) News-Leader.

Major Powell Glass, Lynchburg (Va.) News.

J. P. Fishburn, Roanoke (Va.) World News and Times.

Josephus Daniels, Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer.

NEW W. VA. DAILY

The Bluefield (W. Va.) Times-Leader will start publication as an evening daily, according to present plans about Sept. 15. It will be published by the Bluefield Telegraph, the morning paper, of which H. I. Schott is editor and publisher. Provisional membership in the Associated Press has been obtained.

N. Y. POST MOVED INTO NEW PLANT MONDAY

Martin Pressed Button on Coolidge Signal—Advertising Campaign Started—Some Fixtures Listed

Without mishap the New York Evening Post stepped out in its new dress on Monday, this week, at the sound of a bell rung in its new plant by President Coolidge from Paul Smith's, N. Y.

John C. Martin, vice-president and general manager of the Curtis-Martin newspapers, officiated at the start of the presses in the absence of Cyrus H. K. Curtis, owner, now in Maine.

Opening of the Evening Post building was the signal for an advertising campaign for circulation under the reduced price of 3 cents daily and 5 cents Saturday. The account is handled by Pedlar & Ryan, Inc., New York advertising agency.

It was not a difficult matter to move the Post, since the new building is virtually newly equipped throughout. The plant is notable chiefly in the completeness of the mechanical fixtures. Some of the individual items follow:

Four advertisement machines in the ad room and thirty-two fonts of display type, for which two machines are assigned, with ad benches, cabinets and saws.

A Rouse Rotary miterer and saw, having a guard to keep metal from flying about the room.

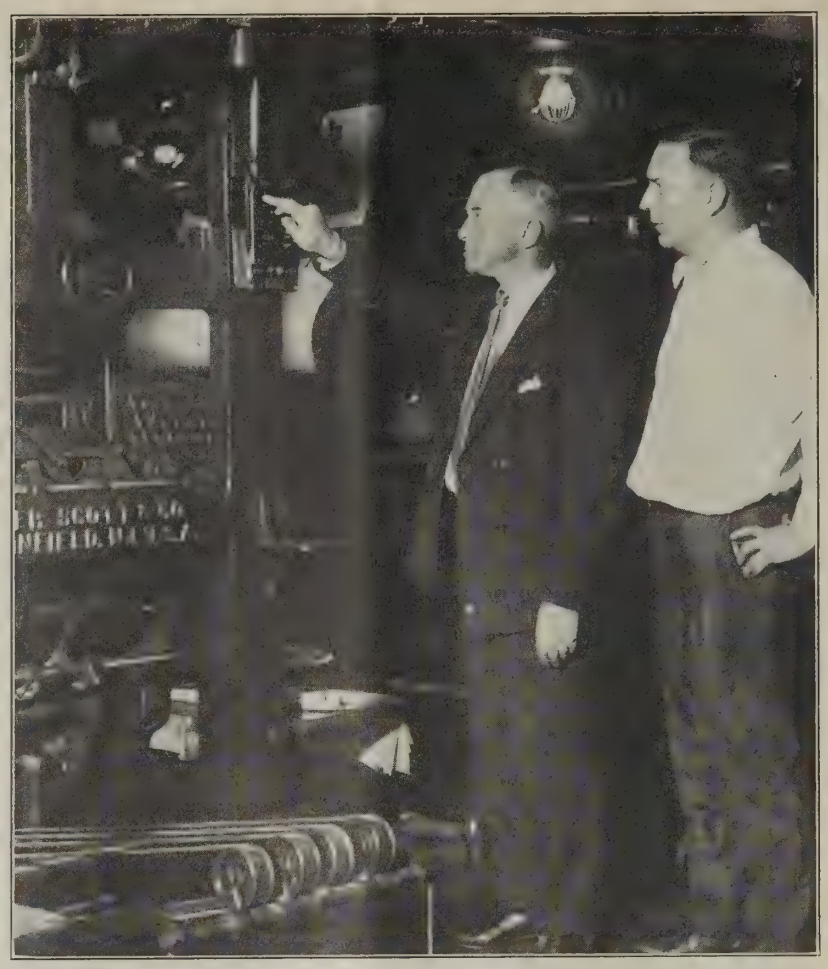
A system of cabinets for wait order ads. These are all neatly lettered and numbered in the order of a card index.

Eleven twelve-foot make-up tables. In the old plant there were only two of these, and they were not the latest.

Mail list cabinets, devised so that galleys slide smoothly in and out.

Five new Vandercook roller series proof presses.

Two Wesel heavy duty presses, that can turn out fifty proofs a minute.



Fudge boxes, with special cylinders, for putting into the paper at press time the scores and facts of sport returns and the like, for which space is reserved on the first page.

Two Mergenthaler linotype machines for heads, Model 26, quite lacking in the old composing room.

Two Miller feeders and Chandler and Price presses (saw trimmer and automatic feeder), and a paper cutter, and cut cabinets.

Four new monotypes, and in the same room, adjoining the composing room, four material-making machines. Here are handled the figures that must be handset, such as stock quotations.

A new work bench for various kinds of type, pans for the type, in oil, and even pins for holding the nozzles for machines.

John C. Martin, vice-president and general manager of the Curtis-Martin Newspapers, Inc., starts the Evening Post's presses on President Coolidge's signal. Joseph Oswald, pressroom foreman, stands by.

Matrices for borders, a new Supreme ingot caster, capacity two tons. Here the old slugs are thrown.

ENTERPRISE IN AUSTRALIA

Davis, Editor of Sydney Referee, Reports Considerable Development

Considerable development in Australian journalism in the last few years was reported this week by J. C. Davis, editor of the Sydney Referee, weekly sports paper, visiting here.

"While we are not so free from libel restraint as your papers seem to be, enterprising methods are becoming popular in Australia," he said.

Mr. Davis had attended in London the England-Australia cricket match, won by the former. He has visited Italy, Spain and France, writing his impressions for the Referee. In this country he will visit Chicago, Detroit and then sail from Vancouver.

Busy city news room in the new West Street plant of the New York Evening Post.

PUBLISHER-TYPO TERMS UNDECIDED IN N. Y.

Union Members Reject Second Proposal by Publishers—Matter Now in Hands of President Lynch, Busy with Convention

By a majority of 171 votes, members of Typographical Union Number Six on Aug. 29, turned down a second proposal made them by the Publishers' Association of New York City, looking toward a new wage scale contract.

The union had asked for $6 a week increase and the publishers had responded with an offer of a $5 advance spread over three years, with $3 the first year, $1 the second and $1 the third. A demand by the union for shorter working hours had not been met by the publishers.

Re-opening of wage negotiations lies in the hands of James J. Lynch, international president. It is believed there will be some postponement since Mr. Lynch is busy with plans for the union's convention, which opens at Colorado Springs, Sept. 13. Mr. Lynch, who was defeated at the last election, will be succeded by Charles W. Howard.

RECEIVED BY MAYOR

Mackay, Australian Publisher, with Girl Contest Winner Greeted by Walker

Mayor Walker of New York extended greetings Sept. 1 to Claude Mackay, publisher of the Sydney (Australia) Guardian and Smith Weekly, who is visiting this country with Beryl Mills, chosen through his newspaper as the most representative Australian girl.

Following the reception at City Hall, Mr. Mackay and several of other Australian visitors were guests of Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the New York Times, at a luncheon in the Times Annex.

RADIO AD CHANGE

The Charles Freshman Company, radio apparatus, has placed its account with Albert Frank & Co., 14 Stone street.

HENRI BERTRAND HEL AS EDITOR'S SLAYER

Coroner's Jury Holds Secretary of Revue Moderne for Murder After Blind Man Recognizes His Voice

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

MONTREAL, Sept. 2.—Identification his voice by a blind man who had s him a revolver led the coroner's jury hold Henri Bertrand, secretary of La R vue Moderne and former secretary-tre urer of other enterprises conducted the late J. A. Beaudry, criminally resp sible for the death of his patron, who w assassinated as he sat in his editorial ch at the office of Le Prix Courant on S urday afternoon, Aug. 14.

Beaudry had been missing two d when found dead on Monday afterno by Mrs. Hughenden, editor of La Re Moderne, who unlocked the door of private office.

There was a bullet wound in his h and another in his back, as he sat at desk with his pen in his hand.

J. H. Mulhollin, blind piano dea gave evidence that in June last he a vertised a revolver for sale in the M treal Star, and Bertrand called and p chased it for $10. He knew Bertrand was able to recognize him by his vo That might be a faculty peculiar to blind people, but he was positive he h made no mistake. It was the same He Bertrand whom he had identified by voice at the detective office yesterday whom he was told was in court.

Detective George Lajoie gave evide that before his arrest Bertrand had t him he never in his life owned a revol

Coroner McMahon said: "I recall t under examination at the previous he ing here Bertrand swore he had no volver." Dr. W. A. Derome, medi legal expert of the coroner's court, te fied that he had compared the bu shown him as having been fired fr Bertrand's revolver with one of the b lets which killed Beaudry, "and I th I am now in a position to show that two bullets were fired from the sa gun," he said.

Noel E. Lacroix, a former emplo testified that Bertrand had told him Be dry's income ranged between $10,000 $20,000 a year. Bertrand had tried to him to invest money in the business, he thought Beaudry's salary too high so declined. After evidence as to discovery of the body the jury conside their verdict for five minutes, and turning announced that they found J. Beaudry had been killed by revolver b lets fired by Henri Bertrand, whom t held criminally responsible for his dea Bertrand was then arrested.

NEW EVENING PAPER

Winston-Salem (N. C.) Journal, Mo ing, Enters Afternoon Field

The Winston-Salem (N. C.) Jour Company, publisher of the Winst Salem Journal, a morning daily, Wednesday of this week entered afternoon field, the first edition of Evening Journal making its appeara on that day. International News Serv has been installed, the news staff increa and new equipment has been added.

Owen Moon is publisher of the t papers.

DAILY HAS POLE FLAG

A small silk United States flag wh Lieutenant-Commander Richard Evel Byrd carried over and around the No Pole and which he presented to the Ri mond (Va.) News-Leader, is on disp for the general public in the lobby of News-Leader building.

OCHS VISITS COOLIDGE

Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the N York Times, was the luncheon guest President Coolidge at the summer Wh House, at Paul Smiths, N. Y., Sept.

BARING AMERICA'S CLASSIC CRIME MYSTERY

Inside Story of New York Mirror's Sensational Revival of Hall-Mills Murder—"It's Our Answer to Present-Day Hand-Out System," Says Payne, Managing Editor

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

AMERICA'S best newspaper detective story of the last decade was this week disclosed in detail by Philip A. Payne, managing editor of the New York Daily Mirror.

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER, Mr. Payne told for the first time the inside facts of his paper's eight month investigation which led to the breaking of the tabloid's beat, baring the Hall-Mills murder mystery, which stands today with prima facie evidence of murder against Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, "Willie" Stevens, and Henry De B. Carpender, all members of a wealthy and powerful New Jersey family.

Senator Alexander Simpson, special prosecutor in the case, has been proceeding with information and evidence furnished him in all important instances by the Mirror.

One of the tabloid's aces was played last Friday, Aug. 27.

"HALL DEATH MARK," was the bold black front page headline of the Mirror on that date.

The page below pictured the enlarged finger prints found on the card of the Rev. Edward W. Hall, New Brunswick clergyman, murdered four years ago with his choir singer sweetheart, Mrs. James Mills. The first investigation ended without indictments. The finger prints published exclusively by the Mirror last Friday, accusing "Willie" Stevens of the crime, were turned over to investigating authorities by Mr. Payne. The Mirror last July 16 had publicly re-opened the investigation reviving the mystery, which had lain sleeping for nearly four years.

Not since the Thaw case has any crime story held front page position for the length of time claimed so far by this murder mystery. Revival of the case was the work of Payne, assisted primarily by Herbert M. Mayer, product of New Orleans, formerly of the New York Daily News, and now of the Mirror's staff. Others who have played a part in the beat include Arthur O'Sullivan, Gladys Calvert, Hettie Cattell, and Arthur Irwin.

Not since the celebrated case of Cassie L. Chadwick, notorious Ohio swindler uncovered by the Cleveland Press 20 years ago, has a daily newspaper furnished the prosecution with evidence such as the Mirror has in this present case.

"It is our answer to the present day hand-out system," Mr. Payne said.

"Twenty years ago before hand-outs and flimsy were as common as they are today, any newspaper would have done what we have done in this case. But four years ago 200 newspaper men sent to cover the first Hall-Mills investigation were satisfied with hand-outs from prosecutors and defense counsel."

Mr. Payne was not satisfied that the Hall-Mills case should remain one of America's unsolved crime riddles.

This editor who bared the Walter Ward story is sincere in his conviction that wealth should pay the penalty of crime as fully as poverty.

Last December he decided to look things over in New Brunswick. Frank Farley, Mirror staff man, was sent over to scout around. The report Farley made convinced Payne that a newspaper investigation was in order.

"A newspaper can win the public if it can prove public officials are derelict in their duty because of moneyed interests, and then can push such a case to conclusion to see that justice is done," he reasoned.

Were influences at work in New Brunswick, covering up the real facts of the Hall-Mills killing?

Herbert M. Mayer of the Mirror's staff was secretly assigned to find an answer to this question. No one on the staff except Mr. Payne knew where he had gone. "He's sick" was the answer to inquiries from the staff. Mayer directed

HALL DEATH MARK

Story on Page 3

WEATHER Probably fair and warmer.

DAILY MIRROR EXTRA

NEW YORK'S BEST PICTURE NEWSPAPER

Vol. III. No. 56. New York, Friday, August 27, 1926 2 Cents

FINGER PRINTS ENLARGED 3½ TIMES ACTUAL SIZE

PHOTOGRAPHIC COPY OF FINGER PRINT OF LEFT INDEX FINGER OF Wm STEVENS TAKEN AT NEW JERSEY STATE TROOPER'S ROOM AT SOMERVILLE, N.J. ON AUGUST 12, 1926

ARCH

PHOTOGRAPHIC COPY OF CASUAL FINGER PRINT DEVELOPED ON VISITING CARD OF EDWARD W. HALL FOUND AT SCENE OF HALL-MILLS MURDER ON SEPT 16, 1922.

ARCH

Ridge Characteristics

1. BIFURCATION, FORK OPENING UPWARD.
2. ABRUPT ENDING RIDGE LINE TREND RUNNING LEFT AND DOWNWARD.
3. ABRUPT ENDING RIDGE LINE RUNNING LEFT AND DOWNWARD
4. LEFT ANGLE OF ISLAND
5. ABRUPT ENDING RIDGE LINE RUNNING LEFT AND SLIGHTLY DOWNWARD.
6. RIGHT ANGLE OF ISLAND

Rev. Edward W. Hall

Church of St. John the Evangelist New Brunswick, N. J.

All Photographs on This Page Copyright, 1926, by the Daily Mirror. Reproduction Prohibited

FINGER PRINT FOUND ON DR. HALL'S CARD ACCUSES WILLIE STEVENS

The calling card, shown above, was found on the bed of the Rev. Edward W. Hall when his body was discovered four years ago. Former Deputy Police Commissioner Joseph A. Faurot, of New York; Lieutenant Frederick W. Drewen, of the Jersey City police, and other finger print experts have certified that a fingerprint on this card, as shown in the diagram, is that of Willie Stevens. This evidence was turned over to the investigating officials by the DAILY MIRROR. Lines and numbers on the upper photograph indicate six points of resemblance. Only five are required for conviction. Stevens' fingerprint is of the "arch" type. Only five percent of fingerprints are this type. Note initials of Faurot and Drewen on upper left hand corner certifying their work. The portion inside the white line (pointed in right hand print) shows area used for purpose of comparison.

As a corking display of exclusive evidence pictures, it would be hard to beat the offering of the New York Daily Mirror shown above. Play of these exclusive pictures was to have been "Scoop 13" of a series of Mirror beats. Developments in the case caused its use sooner than expected.

the investigation from an uptown New York hotel. He started on his quest with an ordinary legal envelope in his pocket in which to put evidence collected. It was not long, however, till he was carrying two big brief cases of evidence having a total weight of 52 pounds. Now in Mr. Payne's private office is a steel cabinet of four deep drawers crammed with documents all relating to this case. Duplicates are under lock and key in a vault in a downtown bank. All are listed under the heading "Investigation A."

Should legal complications ever involve the Mirror from this investigation, proof of the truth of everything published by the tabloid is claimed by its managing editor. Six volumes of confidential written matter were collected before one single line on the case appeared in print. Four lawyers have gone over every word of copy before it was published.

Time after time Payne has challenged Mrs. Hall's attorneys to sue him personally for criminal libel. No such suit has been filed.

Payne had thought the investigations might lead to "just another newspaper story." When he found out differently he carried the facts obtained by Mayer and others to Gov. Harry A. Moore of New Jersey and placed them before him in person. An investigation by public authorities was promised, with the understanding that the Mirror would get the first break on everything. That has held through the whole case so far.

How had the Mirror obtained the facts thus presented Gov. Moore?

Many months before, George Totten, county detective, had been engaged by the Mirror to assist Mayer. He was able to place copies of unpublished records in the hands of the Mirror reporter. With these records available the tabloid was able to make comparisons between stenographic testimony given authorities and the statements they had handed to reporters at the time of the first investigation. In virtually every case, Payne said, these statements were found to be false and misleading.

For a while the Mirror investigators had strongly suspected James Mills in connection with the crime. He was checked in the most thorough manner and finally dropped.

Could a mere janitor, were he guilty, exert the influence so apparent in hushing up the Hall-Mills case in New Brunswick?

Mayer, with assistants, were, last winter in the early days of the investigation, running up against a wall of silence.

"Hall-Mills case! I wouldn't dare talk to you about that." "We are absolutely forbidden to discuss that case." Such answers as these were given to their first questions.

But then the Mirror obtained copies of the grand jury minutes. It is a crime in New Jersey to publish grand jury proceedings.

These copies, however, could be and were used by the newspaper reporters without publication. Testimony of original witnesses was now available. These witnesses could be questioned again to see if their stories would vary from their first sworn statements.

The Mirror reporters learned that Mrs. Hall had once said that she had hurried home early after search for her husband on the night of the murder because she had left her six-year-old niece alone in the house.

A watchman had testified he had seen "a woman in gray" enter the Hall home at 2:30 in the morning.

The Mirror reporter found that a certain Mary Gildea was a cook in the Hall household. Strangely her name had never entered the case during the first public investigation. Yet Mary was a trusted servant. From her the newspaper men learned that she had been in the house asleep on the night of the murder.

Peter Tumulty, the Hall chauffeur, had said he had only been employed by that family for about three weeks, that he had never washed the Hall car.

The postman told the Mirror men he had been delivering mail to Tumulty at the Hall home for a year and a half, and for 25 years at the home of a cousin of Mrs. Hall who lived next door. Why hadn't reporters questioned the letter carrier four years ago?

Of course, the Mirror reporters did not rely solely on this government employe's affidavit. They became directory salesmen for a day, calling at houses and asking apparently innocent questions, with a by-the-way reference to Peter Tumulty. Where did he live? Oh yes. How long had he lived there.

Little bits, little threads, but all of them woven into the fabric of the story. Many clues failed.

Mrs. Nellie Lo Russell, a colored woman living about a mile and a half from the Phillips farm attacked the testimony of Mrs. Jane Gibson, then as now the star witness of the state.

Mrs. Russell said Mrs. Gibson could not have identified Mrs. Hall, Carpender and Stevens in De Russey's lane because she had been at Mrs. Russell's house.

Then came forward Theodore Knoethe of the SPCA in N. B., and George Sipel, a farmer of Middlebush. They said Mrs. Russell was not telling the truth because they had called at her house at the time she said Mrs. Gibson was there and she was not home and the house was closed.

Sipel then added—later on—that Mrs. Gibson had offered him $100 to say he, too, had seen the persons in the lane.

Two staff reporters of the Mirror then posed as members of Mrs. Hall's private legal department. They were, they pretended, auditing the Hall bills. In that capacity they questioned Sipel.

"Was the voucher made out for $4,000 or $4,500?" the supposed lawyers asked. They were not, they said, quite certain. And the audit had to be correct.

"I'll tell you how it was," confided Sipel in some such words.

He had, it seems, written to Mrs. Hall asking to be reimbursed for the time he had given as a defense witness. The chief of the private detectives engaged by the slain rector's wife, he said, had called on him. They wouldn't pay him now, Sipel asserted the detective said, but after the grand jury hearings they would "fix him up." The Mirror has the sworn affidavits of two reporters covering these Sipel disclosures.

The three men who turned New Jersey upside-down (left to right): Philip A. Payne, managing editor of the New York Daily Mirror; Herbert M. Mayer, his lieutenant, and Detective George Totten.

Thus another move was made in the newspaper's chess game. Other moves were to be played.

Mrs. Hall had emphatically insisted she had never suspected that anything more than friendly relations existed between her husband and the choir singer. The Mirror claims now to have proof she had engaged private detectives to shadow the couple long before their dramatic deaths.

It was the Mirror reporters who found out Mrs. Hall had sent her coat to a Philadelphia concern to be dyed on the very night the bodies were found.

Finally Mayer and his co-workers discovered that finger prints existed in the case. These prints were in the possession of a finger print expert whose name cannot now be disclosed. He had been told to destroy them. He had not done this, but had kept them under glass for four years.

These finger prints came into the Mirror's possession. Mr. Payne had intended to withold them until the actual murder trial. He revealed them sooner on the advice of Senator Simpson in order to prevent release of Willie Stevens and Henry Carpender on bail following their arrest.

As early as April 22 of this year, Mayer had the Mirror's investigation well in hand. Before July it was virtually ready. It was decided, however not to publish the story until the first of July.

Mayer's activities and those of his coworkers had been skillfully covered up during the months they had been delving into the four-year old murder mystery. Payne wanted to sew things up even tighter. It was reasoned that breaking the story just before Independence Day would make it harder for competitors to check up. Authorities would be away from their offices and homes for the holiday week-end.

Then came the subway strike story, usurping all of New York's big headline space.

But the Mirror had arranged the news basis on which to make public the results of the many months of secret reporting. How to keep it over to a more favorable time was the question which confronted Payne.

For a news peg on which to hang the opening story Mayer and his helpers had obtained these facts:

Arthur Reihl, a gasoline station man, had married Louise Geist, who had been a parlor maid in the Hall home at the time of the crime. Louise had made startling revelations to her husband regarding the case, so he claimed. Now Reihl was seeking an annulment of his marriage. In the plea for annulment he intended to bring up the Hall-Mills case.

At about 12:01 midnight, July 1, the annulment suit was filed in a Trenton court after all reporters had left for the night. When the subway strike began and the tabloid's managing editor made up his mind to hold on to his story a little longer, Reihl's court document mysteriously disappeared.

It was not found again until four hours after the story had been spilled in sensational manner by the Mirror on July 16. Then reporters for other papers came across it beneath a newspaper on the top of an unused desk in the office of the court clerk. They had searched the files in vain. Thus, added to the eight months of investigation, the Hearst tabloid was given a little more of a headstart in the Hall-Mills revival.

Payne played up the first story with a full-page wash drawing on page one of the Mirror, showing the bodies of Dr. Hall and Mrs. Mills as they were found beneath the crabapple tree in September, 1922. The headline in outlined white against the gray wash was: "HALL-MILLS MURDER MYSTERY BARED." The story suggested Mrs. Hall and her eccentric brother "Willie" would become the center of a new investigation.

In stories written by Mayer, the Mirror began immediately to bring out some of the facts obtained from the months of investigation. Questions were put to the wealthy woman and her counsel based on the evidence the newspaper had obtained. Each day in big two column boxes prominently published, the Mirror asked the rector's widow a series of pertinent "Whys."

Before the story had been broken at all, Mayer had called on Mrs. Hall, had attempted to tell her of the evidence that had been unearthed since the first probe, and had met with no satisfaction. But, according to common newspaper practice, Mrs. Hall was entitled to an opportunity for reply.

On July 19, Payne sent her a telegram. He repeated the published questions and declared:

"The Daily Mirror, desiring to be absolutely fair to you, hereby respectfully calls your attention to these questions asked you in its columns, and agrees to print verbatim any answer that you and your attorney Mr. Timothy N. Pfeiffer desire to make to them."

To Mr. Pfeiffer, the lawyer who had represented Mrs. Hall successfully four years ago, the managing editor telegraphed July 16:

"This is a challenge to you as Mrs. Hall's legal representative to bring a criminal libel action against me personally if the statements published in today's Daily Mirror, accusing Mrs. Hall, are not correct. I stand fully responsible for the charges against Mrs. Hall."

No replies were received.

During these early days of the Mirror's exposé competing newspapers refused to take the story seriously. They were publishing "Nothing In It" headlines based on denials obtained from defense counsel and "Jersey authorities."

The Mirror itself, purposely, Payne said, let the story die down a little on July 27 and 28. In the masthead of the paper this question was published:

"Can Members of a Wealthy Family in New Jersey Commit a Crime and Get Away with it?"

Mayer told EDITOR & PUBLISHER it was figured that opposition newspapers would spot this and would surmise the Mirror was getting ready to abandon the sensational story. Reporters in New Jersey for the Mirror informed those in charge in New York that other papers began to withdraw their men when they noticed the Mirror was asking this question. The question seemed to demand an affirmative answer.

As a matter of fact, state detectives had been in the Mirror's office during these two days examining the evidence the tabloid men had compiled. "Well, there's nothing left to do but arrest Mrs. Hall," they announced after they had completed their inspection. "We'll arrest her tomorrow night."

Payne himself went to New Jersey on July 28, the day Mrs. Hall was arrested. The Mirror was fully prepared for the story. No other paper must be given a look-in. In type in the Mirror's office was a story of the arrest, awaiting only a signal from the tabloid chief.

The arrest came after Payne, managing editor of the Mirror, turned over to Prosecutor Francis Bergen of Somerset County, ten affidavits obtained by Mayer, a reporter for the Mirror, who has been detailed to the case continuously since the beginning of the year. With the affidavits in his possession, the prosecutor issued a warrant, which was signed by a justice of Somerset County, in which the murder was committed. The warrant was then given for service to the State Constabulary, but because Mrs. Hall resided across the line in Middlesex County, the countersignature of a justice in that jurisdiction was necessary.

The Mirror, having all angles of the story safely in its own hands, induced the State police to seek the countersignature in Dunellen, 15 miles from New Brunswick, in order to guard against a possible leak, and with the document, the police party, including Mr. Payne, drove 15 miles across country through the rain in somewhat less than that many minutes.

The home of Mrs. Hall was surrounded at 11:40 p. m. by the State troopers whose commander, Capt. Lamb, accompanied by the Mirror editor, rang the doorbell and directed the servant who answered to tell Mrs. Hall that the police were present.

"Good evening, gentlemen," was Mrs. Hall's greeting. "Your visit is a rather late one. I suppose you want to question me again."

"I have a warrant for your arrest." Capt. Lamb explained. "I have been instructed to take you to Somerville."

Mrs. Hall read the warrant, handed it back and telephoned her attorney, who advised her that her only course was to accompany the police.

While the Mirror piled copies of its edition onto the streets and into trains, men in the news rooms of other newspaper offices were frantically trying to obtain confirmation.

The Mirror's arrest story stated that Mrs. Hall had been whisked away immediately to the Somerville jail. But there had been some delay in her arrival. Reporters who telephoned from New York to the jail inquiring about Mrs. Hall, were told that no Mrs. Hall had been brought there. Those who telephoned to state troopers' headquarters, were told by the people there who were working with the Mirror the usual:

"Aw, that's nothing but a newspaper story."

At five o'clock in the morning of July 29, a man in the Mirror office telephoned the city desk of another daily, pretending to be a tipster.

"Have you heard about Mrs. Hall's arrest?" he asked breathlessly.

"Yes," came the reply, "We just got it a few minutes ago. What have you got on it?"

Payne was laughing in his office.

During the arrest an episode occurred that strengthened the Mirror managing editor's conviction that the Hall-Mills revival represented journalistic idealism as well at materialism.

"A representative of Mrs. Hall's legal staff drove up in a yellow taxi shortly after the warrant had been served," he recalled. "I was standing on the curb. The troopers were in civilian clothes and I was taken for one of them by the taxi driver, who sat grinning from ear to ear.

"Dese rich guys can get a long way with their money," he remarked to Payne, "but some paper's bound to get them in the end."

When the case actually got into open court and testimony became part of official rewards other newspapers began to print in lengthy detail the story that the Mirror had published weeks before. Each day in addition to the news break the Mirror ran special stories by Mayer linking up the old case with the new in the light of new evidence turned up by the long newspaper investigation.

As far as spot news was concerned Mirror men were instructed not to "play with the gang." They were on the inside track, and all they had to do was to make their identity known to get material often withheld from other newspapers.

Then the Mirror reporters had their own sources and witnesses to guard. One was Arthur Reihl.

Reihl was living for a while with Mayer at his hotel, while he was being hunted by reporters of other papers. It became necessary that Reihl appear at the state troopers' office. But how to escape the reporters, who were anxious to question him? Mayer decided it would be best for the Mirror witness to go to the quarters as a reporter. He was simply given some copy paper and told to mix boldly with the reporters asking them questions until he could get through their lines to his destination.

Reihl did this and got away with it despite the fact his picture had been published many times.

BLOCK GIVES INSURANCE POLICIES TO STAFF

New Toledo Blade Publisher Also Grants Mechanical Employes One Week Annual Vacation with Pay

Each employe of the Toledo Blade was presented with a life insurance policy by Paul Block, new publisher of the Blade, at a complimentary dinner Monday night, Aug. 30, in the auditorium of the Toledo Chamber of Commerce.

PAUL BLOCK

Amounts of the policies range upward to a maximum of $3,000, according to the length of service.

Announcement was also made that employes of the mechanical departments who have not been receiving vacations would receive annual vacations of one week with pay.

More than 350 members of the Blade organization were present.

F. E. Cottrell, vice-president and treasurer of the Toledo Blade Co., was toastmaster.

Tribute was paid by veteran Blade employes by the speakers. Four employes have been with the Blade more than 5 years. They are Joe Marker, Frank Kinninger, James Marker and Albert Fisher. Sixty-five employes have been helping to make the Blade from 10 to 50 years.

Grove Patterson, editor of the Blade, M. F. Hanson of the Duluth Herald, Herman G. Halsted of Paul Block, Inc., Herman J. Auth of the Newark Star Eagle, Charles J. Boyle of the Lancaster New Era, Mr. Block and John M. Hertel, business manager of the Blade were the speakers.

The day following the banquet a full page pledge of loyalty to Mr. Block and signed with the name of every Blade employe appeared in the Blade.

Since Mr. Block has become publisher of the Blade the display of street edition stories has been altered radically. Instead of an eight-column 120 point streamer with two or three subordinate banners the street editions carry a single line of 96 point type. Crime no longer is given prominence.

WILL SEEK LAWS TO GUARD NEWS PROPERTY

Geneva Conference of Wire Service Representatives Reconciled Many Conflicts—Official News Called Property of All—Title to All Other Classes Should Have World-Wide Protection

By HENRY WOOD
Geneva Correspondent of the United Press

(Written Exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

GENEVA, August 22.—With the recent meeting at Geneva, under the auspices of the League of Nations, of a commission of experts representing sixteen of the leading press associations and agencies of the entire world, a new milestone was laid in the development of the press association as one of the greatest factors of modern international life.

The meeting, which lasted only from Aug. 19 to Aug. 21, although preceded by several days of private consultations between the delegates and officials of the League of Nations, was historic from several points of view.

In the first place it constituted the first time in history that a commission of press experts has ever been convoked by official authority—and this time, by the highest official authority in the world—for the improvement of press relations and facilities.

In the second place it constituted also the first time in history that the independent press associations, the development of which not only in the United States but in various foreign countries has been one of the most conspicuous factors of recent years, ever met at the same table with the group of foreign agencies that have been characterized in the past by their official or semi-official connection with the governments of the country in which they are established.

Finally, the actual accomplishments of the commission itself also marked an advanced step in the development of the press association and newspaper game calculated to have the most far-reaching effects.

The three most important decisions of the commission were as follows:

FIRST, the final consecration, both nationally and internationally, of the principle of the property right in news.

SECOND, the recognition that official news, emanating from governments that are created by the people, are the public property of everyone, and cannot be made the exclusive property of any one agency, either official or otherwise.

THIRD, the establishment of principles and legislation, for the protection of news by wireless, calculated to render possible the future development to the fullest extent of wireless as a means of transmission for national and international press associations.

Of the sixteen agencies represented nine were what is known as the "Allied Agencies," namely agencies with interlocking contracts for the exchange of news and of which the basis has always been the official and semi-official agencies of Europe. This group consisted of Reuter's, Havas, Stefani, Wolff, the Associated Press, the Japanese Rengo agency, and the Swiss, Swedish and Serbian agencies.

The independent group, which is not comprised in the "Allied Agencies," numbered only six and consisted of the United Press, the Exchange Telegraph of London, the Radio of France, the Central News of London, the Nippon Dempo of Japan, the Telegraph Union of Germany.

The Agencia Americana of Brazil, while not definitely allied with either group, threw its vote usually with the Allied agencies.

The bringing together of these two conflicting groups of agencies constituted one of the most difficult tasks the League of Nations has ever undertaken, and the final and complete success of the commission was an unusual tribute not only to the conciliatory skill of the League officials themselves, but also to the conciliatory spirit of all the delegates.

Under protest of Dr. Mantler of the Wolff agency, that members of their group not be designated as "official" agencies, Roy W. Howard, who was the principal spokesman for the independent agencies, consented to adopt the name of "Allied Agencies" for the majority group and the designation of "Non-Allied Agencies," for the minority. This went a long ways to receiving friction and clashes during the public discussions.

Perhaps the most serious question on which divergencies of views existed between the two groups was that of public sessions with the right of full publicity of the proceedings. Fortunately, thanks to the conciliatory efforts of officials of the League, this question was settled by outside consultations before the commission actually convened and thus the possibility of a rupture was avoided.

Under the generally accepted practices of the League of Nations every commission is absolutely autonomous and has the right to decide itself whether its sessions and proceedings shall be public. In the present instance, the group of Allied agencies, constituting the majority, came to Geneva fully determined that the sessions must be closed.

Against this attitude, Mr. Howard, on behalf of the United Press, declared that his organization would never participate in any meeting the full proceedings of which could not be made public. He took also the broad viewpoint that after the long fight which the press all over the world, and at Geneva in particular, has made for open diplomacy, and for public sessions of all bodies having to do with public welfare, nothing would be more ridiculous and more calculated to offset all that has been gained to date for open diplomacy than to have the first commission of press representatives ever officially convoked in an effort to improve international relations declare itself in favor of closed sessions.

Mr. Howard was sustained by all of the independent agencies, some of whom, like the Exchange Telegraph of London, announced they would not participate in the sessions if they were secret, while others like the Telegraph Union of Berlin, declared that if the sessions were closed they would reserve full liberty of action in making public the proceedings as they might deem fit.

Final agreement on the subject was only reached after private consultations lasting until one o'clock in the morning preceding the actual meeting of the commission. The Allied Group, which had one or two dissenting members on this question, finally agreed to have all meetings public.

After this one sharp conflict, the commission opened in an atmosphere of more friendly understanding and conciliation that continued till the end, permitting the attainment of virtually all the ends that had been hoped for.

This result was particularly pleasing to the League of Nations which had realized fully the serious possibilities that might ensue from the convoking on a commission two more or less conflicting groups of agencies. As expressed by Pierre Comert director of the Information Section of the League of Nations, and the moving spirit in all efforts at conciliation and mutual understanding, the worst that could have happened from the standpoint of the League would have been to have both groups go away dissatisfied, and without attaining the ends for which they had been convoked.

The next worse thing that could have happened would have been to have one group go away victorious and satisfied and the other defeated and dissatisfied.

Of the most striking accomplishments of the commission, the final consecration of the principle of the property right in news, will probably always remain the most outstanding. This was the culmination of the long fight which the two American agencies, the Associated Press and the United Press, backed by some of the continental agencies, have long maintained.

The basic principle adopted was that all news attained by either a news agency or a newspaper, whatever its form or content and whatever the method by which it is transmitted, shall be regarded as the property of such newspaper or agency as long as it retains its commercial value.

As a means of translating this principle into effective use, the commission decided upon two steps: first to have the League of Nations ask all governments to enact domestic legislation embodying this principle; and secondly, for international application, to ask the International Union for the Protection of Industrial property to include in its international convention of 1883 and 1911 a clause qualifying the lifting of news as unfair competition.

Equally important, however, as this final recognition of property right in news, was the recognition by the entire commission, composed as it was of full-fledged official agencies, semi-official agencies, "authorized" agencies, and independents, that on the question of official news of governments no right of exclusiveness can exist.

The fight on this point was initiated by Mr. Howard on behalf of the United Press, and supported by the other independent agencies, was carried through to a successful conclusion.

The position taken by Mr. Howard was that the official news of any government is public property and especially public property of the entire nation or people that has created that government. In just the same way that the news of law courts, parliaments, and other departments of governments are now generally recognized to be public property, Mr. Howard maintained that news emanating from the governments themselves, from their cabinets or other executive departments is likewise public property and cannot become the exclusive property of any one agency.

No secret was made of the fact by Mr. Howard that the recognition of this principle was directed flatly against the practice of many European and other governments, which in the past have made it a fixed and established custom to communicate their official news only through the means of their official agencies.

Had the commission accepted the principle of the property right in news without accepting this principle of the unexclusive character of official news, the result would have been the creation of a legally protected monopoly for "official" agencies on all official news communicated to them by their respective governments.

The fact that recognition of this principle was obtained in a commission of sixteen agencies, representing all shades of official connection and on down to complete independence was an unusual tribute to the spirit of conciliation on the part of everyone present. Several of the members of the Allied group, which rank more or less as official agencies, frankly admitted they could no longer pretend to

(Continued on page 40)

FIRST U. S. PICTURE OF PRESS SERVICE CONFERENCE AT LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Those in the picture are (front row, l. to r.) Shigenobu Oikawa, representative, Nippon Dempo Tsushinsha (Japan); Edward J. Bing, general European business manager, United Press; M. Meynot, general manager, Havas Agency (France); Gustave Nesti, general manager, Stefani Agency (Italy); Roy W. Howard, Chairman Board of Directors, United Press; R. F. Church, chief news editor, Central News (Great Britain); Andre Glarner, Paris correspondent, Exchange Telegraph Company, (Great Britain); Henry Wood, Geneva manager, United Press.

Back row, (l. to r.) Elmer Roberts, Paris manager, Associated Press; Motosada Zumoto, representative, Nippon Shimbun Rengosha (Japan); Rudolf Ludi, director Swiss Telegraph Agency; A. Housset, director Avala Agency (Jugo-Slavia); Dr. H. Mantler, director, Continental (Wolff) Telegraph Company, (Germany); S. Carey Clements, manager, Reuters (Great Britain); Heinrich Gesell, director, Telegraph Union (Germany); Muscat d'Orsay, director, Agencia Americana (Brazil); W. H. G. Werndell, Geneva correspondent, Reuters; M. Hoegberg, director of foreign service, Tidningarnas Telegrambyra (Sweden); Ed. L. Keen, vice-president and general European manager, United Press; Victor Terragni, Geneva correspondent, Stefani Agency (Italy); S. Sato, secretary Japanese Embassy, Paris; Dr. J. Pentman, Geneva correspondent, Stefani Agency (Italy). M. Gabion, director of the Radio Agency of Paris, was not present when the above photograph was made.

FINANCIAL PAGE SHOULD DRAW ADVERTISING

Dailies Should Cultivate a Local Market for Securities Through Its Financial News, Writer Declares—Urges Greater Attention to Investment Offerings

By FRANK THAYER

THE financial page, one of the most costly special pages to produce, often yields the smallest proportional return in advertising volume.

Reasons for failure to carry dividend producing financial advertising may safely be attributed to two outstanding facts: Antiquated presentation of financial information and failure to develop a local financial market in which it pays investment houses to seek business through the medium of advertising space.

Study of the situation over the country reveals that more and more attention to finance and business is being demanded from newspapers by the investing public; that many newspapers in the smaller cities run only condensed news on the principal financial and commodity markets and give but slight attention to investment offerings; and that newspapers in the larger cities are beginning to appreciate the importance of both adequate market news and investment information.

Most large newspapers run Wall Street and commodity market news but seem to present disproportionately news about investment offerings, problems of investment, and articles on popular finance. While the professional traders and bankers are interested in the "Big Board" and other market quotations, there is a very large class of investors who want news of investments rather than news on market fluctuations.

An investigation of 12 leading dailies shows the response to the demand for investment news, although some of these newspapers, according to the figures, do not seem to appreciate fully the value of investment news as against stock market quotations and market tables.

What is regarded as the first financial page in American journalism appeared when James Gordon Bennett astonished Wall Street on May 11, 1935, with his "Money Articles." A few days later he instituted lists of stock exchange sales for the previous day. Such was the beginning of the modern financial page.

The educational campaign conducted in the interest of the sale of Liberty Bonds, naturally had its effect in broadening the public interest in finance. Clerks, merchants and housewives found a new objective: Ownership of a Liberty Bond. Thousands of these new investors had never owned a bond before.

Another reason for a greater interest in finance is the expansion of big business, the sharing of corporate ownership with the public and employe through sale of stock in leading corporations. In one group there are the American Telephone and Telegraph, the U. S. Steel, and certain popular rails. In another group are the National Cash Register, Dodge Brothers, and other corporations.

Yet the close of the World War found newly created thousands of investors who previously knew barely the difference between common stock and collateral bonds, to say nothing of interim receipts or land trust certificates.

To this new army of investors the newspaper found both a responsibility and an opportunity. The responsibility was to inform the public on the security market and on true values in investing and quotations on Liberty Bonds, equipment trust certificates, bank stock, commodity prices and other routine information. The opportunity was to develop this interest so that in the newspaper service to the public, the newspaper would anticipate through advertising revenue in the distribution of new securities, created to meet the demand of business and public improvements.

From the standpoint of the public, there are two bases of evaluating the financial page. The first is, of course, the viewpoint of the professional financial men, such as brokers and bankers, who have large sums constantly invested and who must watch closely the financial markets in order to protect adequately the interests of their clients, investors and depositors.

The second major interest in the financial page is that of the investing public. According to the Investment Bankers Association of America between $500,000,000 and $1,000,000,000 is lost annually through fake and shaky investments, exclusive of amount lost on regular stock deals on legitimate stock and commodity exchanges.

The public, as such, knows little about specialized investments. It is equally ignorant of the technique of surgery, the factors of safety in bridge or skyscraper construction, or hydro-electric plant efficiency. That statement is no criticism of the public, because knowledge today is highly specialized.

There are individuals not a few who are quick to seek the best surgeon in case of emergency, but who bite on an investment tip without anything tangible or definite except some glowing literature pointing out hazy promises of high profits.

As the newspaper is interested in honest news and honest advertising, it is interested in protecting the public from fake investments.

The greater the number of fake or unstable securities distributed to the public, the greater is the damage to legitimate securities. Every dollar thus withdrawn from circulation lessens the purchasing power of a particular community, lowering consequently potential funds for newspaper advertising.

It is from the viewpoint of the publisher that his responsibility comes out in clearest light, for every publisher realizes that his financial page costs him money, and that if he is to offset these costs he must make profits.

To make profits, the publisher must reach the public with interesting financial news and information, thus building up an interest that makes a fertile field for profitable financial advertising.

If the publisher fails to give service by citing sound financial information, he will lose the confidence of his readers. If he permits unstable financial advertising, he will drive out sound financial advertising, for the corollary of Gresham's law of money holds. Bad advertising drives out good advertising, as much as bad money drives out good money.

Advertising attracts advertising. If a newspaper produces a strong financial page and creates a financial market for securities it will naturally secure financial advertising. All investment houses prefer to use financial advertising space in newspapers that already have demonstrated that their advertising brings results.

The financial advertising carried by a newspaper is also a powerful indication that the paper's readers have buying power and thus a sizeable volume of financial advertising will attract both local and national advertising of merchandised products.

The possibilities for business to the newspapers may further be emphasized by changes that are taking place in the banking world. Commercial banks confined by the necessity of short time loans are endeavoring to enlarge their operations through the organization of separate corporations controlled by the individual banks to merchandise securities and to underwrite sound industrial, real estate and commercial enterprises. For example, the National City Bank of New York has the National City Company; the Chase National Bank, the Chase Securities Corporation; the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago, the recently formed Continental and Commercial Company; the National Bank of the Republic of Chicago, the National Republic Company; and the City National Bank of Evanston, the City National Corporation.

Commercial bankers are consulted m frequently regarding investments naturally they are quick to obtain so of the investment business, by particip ing in the profits made from the mark ing of securities.

As this field develops there will be e greater opportunity for larger adver ing appropriations from such sources.

Surely, the newspaper publisher co furnish some service to the financial vertisers. While it is true that the b newspapers do not run free copy beca of an advertising contract, some pap still do business on that basis. Such policy opens the doors to various fin cial propositions that do not merit rec nition and that savor of the dang ous type of security.

Real financial news should be giv Financial news, as all other news sho be given on the basis, not of advertis contracts, but on news value. Contra to what might be supposed, real financ news does not mean only quotations fr Wall Street. These are important a necessary, as are adequate market repo from the principal grain and commod markets of the country or surroundi territory. Newspapers in smaller cit can give condensed market reports, off ings of general or particular local val and some of the popular finance featur to reach their readers of the investm class.

In light of the investing public, w are largely investors, not speculators, a who are equally interested in the pr cipal bond offerings of the day, ne should be given on its merit as news

The news on offerings should, course, be broad in scope and sho treat of legitimate offerings in the dustrial, railroad, public utility and r estate fields. The growing importa of first mortgage real estate bonds m be noted by the fact that in the fi seven months of 1926, a total of 585 fi mortgage real estate bond issues we made, totaling $503,834,500. These f ures are based on the financial record leading investment houses, as compil by the widely-recognized authority this field, Prof. W. C. Clark. In 1923 is estimated that first mortgage r estate issues aggregated $500,000,000 a in 1925 approximately $1,000,000,000.

In some newspapers, issues under $50 000 to $1,000,000 are not considered ne unless there is purely a local intere However, the newspaper that seeks n

(Continued on page 43.)

ANALYSIS OF FINANCIAL PAGES OF SELECTED LEADING NEWSPAPERS

Name of Paper	N. Y. Stock, Tab.	Curb, Tab.	N. Y. Bond, Tab.	Curb Bond, Tab.	Other Stock, Tab.	Special Tab. Such as:	Stories, Ind. Corp.	Stories, Rail	Stories, Pub. Util.	Invest. Offerings —Bonds	Misc. Fin. Stories	Commodity Markets	Stories, Stock Market	Other Markets	Totals
New York Sun, July 14, 1926..... 5 pages	1,125	420	960	162	...	73	319	...	255	217	531	310	233	41	4,646
New York Times, July 14, 1926..... 10 pages.	1,300	885	1,240	...	...	4,442	413	157	255	210	2,476	977	360	5	12,720
New York Herald Tribune, July 14, 1926..... 7 pages.	1,400	280	1,240	135	95	3,166	351	425	35	415	1,048	523	288	...	9,401
Boston Globe, July 14, 1926..... 2 pages.	785	140	335	...	360	190	305	120	...	195	854	338	170	...	3,792
Philadelphia Public Ledger, July 14, 1926..... 7 pages.	1,500	990	1,440	...	770	704	85	83	342	190	2,021	1,124	241	10	9,500
Minneapolis Journal, July 14, 1926..... 3 pages.	750	269	730	...	...	190	110	...	...	95	675	1,614	...	...	4,433
Chicago Daily News, July 14, 1926..... 3 pages.	864	400	640	...	15	210	240	...	45	135	1,430	1,002	...	...	4,981
Chicago Herald-Examiner, July 14, 1926..... 3 pages.	900	345	675	...	...	290	60	140	...	70	850	1,205	...	...	4,535
Chicago Tribune, July 14, 1926..... 5 pages.	1,005	420	780	...	315	215	...	180	...	...	410	1,015	155	...	4,495
Kansas City Star, July 14, 1926..... 3 pages.	255	40	...	15	...	255	...	...	...	40	375	880	55	...	1,915
New Orleans Times Picayune, July 14, 1926.. 3 pages.	590	375	700	...	290	115	190	...	...	75	670	1,610	225	...	4,840
San Francisco Chronicle, July 14, 1926..... 5 pages.	1,200	400	300	...	980	10	195	150	...	520	805	1,062	360	...	5,982

Note—Figures are in agate lines. The number of pages designated under the names of the respective newspapers indicates the number of pages or fractional pages devoted to finance. These pages include advertising display, which, however, is not included in the agate line computations.

WHY NOT FIGHT SHY OF LIBEL ACCIDENTS?

"Safety First" Catchword Should Apply to Editorial Rooms—and Editors Should Investigate Before They Invest in Correspondence

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

Editorial accidents cause the greatest number of libel suits, and lawyers believe "Safety First" and "Investigate Before You Invest" campaigns are needed in most newspaper offices.

Just why this is so is told in this the 25th article obtained by EDITOR & PUBLISHER, stripping the libel law of legal verbiage.

"SAFETY FIRST" is a catchword popularized throughout the land by the newspapers. The same reporters, however, who write stories "deploring" grade crossing accidents, will break blindly through protecting gates and slide under the wheels of the libel engine. The men who report automobile crashes on Main street, will not slam on the brakes in time to avoid a libel collision.

When making a deliberate editorial crusade, a newspaper generally obeys all signals, and steps on the gas only when on Truth's straight highway. It is haphazard driving through the routine traffic of a newspaper's jammed and busy street that brings about the high libel toll.

"In the innumerable campaigns that the World has engaged in, the last thing in the world that we feared was the law of libel," Don C. Seitz, once associated with the New York World, has declared.

"We have never hesitated to attack anything that we felt to be against the public interest on that account. I don't think we have had altogether five verdicts against us in 40 years in cases where we deliberately set out to make an attack.

"The accidental case is different. The accident is the thing you always have to watch on a newspaper. The accident is the thing to fear.

"At one time we had 126 cases on the calendar against us, everyone of which was an accident, usually something very trivial.

"For example, the worst verdict we have sustained was in favor of a gentleman from Binghamton who we said had run away with a lady. He had. But he had married her. We had omitted that. The verdict was for $35,000. The plaintiff, however, was in a great hurry to go to Europe, and took $2,500."

Certainly what is needed is editorial "safety first" to avoid libel accidents.

This is an old problem met in various ways in newspaper offices. Many "safety first" plans have been devised. A New York lawyer, who has also had newspaper experience, suggests one based upon the following premises:

1.—Good pay for reporters and deskmen, in order to attract real brains, efficiency and professional caution to newspaper offices.

2.—Good working conditions to keep them there.

3.—Legal supervision of dangerous crusading matter, and also on dubious questions of "privilege."

4.—An adequate knowledge on the part of writing and editing employes of the law of libel.

5.—Make every mistake a crime of varying degree, subject to trial before the managing editor, the city editor, the head of the copy desk and two men picked from the staff for the purpose.

6.—Assure justice to offenders, but make penalties severe and public enough to keep staff members continually alive to the necessity of carefulness.

7.—Don't, on the other hand, hamstring your staff with unnecessary rules.

8.—Let all editors carefully investigate the records of the men they engage before giving them places on their staffs.

Punishable offenses, the lawyer said, might be listed as follows:

1.—Mistakes in proper names.

2.—Wrong addresses.

3.—Reliance on the telephone to obtain an important statement.

4.—Failure to check up identities in arrest stories.

5.—Re-writing a dangerous story from another newspaper without confirmation.

6.—Failure to get both sides of a story.

7.—Writing a libelous heading.

8.—Allowing personal opinion, or the supposed editorial opinion of the newspaper, to enter a news story.

9.—Faking.

Perhaps Rule No. 8 seems superfluous or obvious. Editors and news executives, however, are often content to waive thorough investigation before employing a man, who by some careless blunder, may cost them dearly. New York supposedly is strict in this regard. City editors of important papers in that city, however, have said they never inquire deeply into the past records of a man they engage to fill a vacancy. They ask his experience, and generally rely entirely on the applicant's word.

"We are able to tell after a week or so whether or not they are satisfactory," one managing editor explained.

The same is true of out-of-town correspondents. While it is probably only on rare occasions that a newspaper is hooked by failure to investigate, the occasions are not wanting.

One occasion is supplied by Dean Palmer of the firm of Palmer, DeWitt & Palmer, New York newspaper brokers. It occurred in Missouri some years ago.

An unknown correspondent located in a small Missouri city made connections by mail to act as correspondent in his city for the Kansas City Star, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat and the St. Joseph News-Press. For some months he sent in only innocuous items. Then suddenly he supplied a sensational story regarding the local postmaster.

All three papers played the story. The postmaster sued and established a clear case of libel, since the story had absolutely no foundation.

The correspondent, the three newspapers learned, was non-existent. All three felt strongly that the postmaster himself engineered the whole fraud, but were unable to prove it.

Judgments were found against the defendants. The St. Louis Globe-Democrat paid about $6,200, the Kansas City Star, $4,800, and the St. Joseph News-Press $2,100. The judgments were based on the number of papers circulated by each publication.

New York and Chicago newspapers, as well as others in smaller cities, got into trouble with a Montreal correspondent they engaged some years ago without sufficient investigation.

A Montreal doctor was taken sick in New York. His wife left on a train to come to his bedside. With her, she brought another Montreal physician, a friend of the family. The Montreal correspondent in his dispatch wrote that the sick doctor's wife was running away to the United States with the familiar "other man."

Suits were filed against all the newspapers using the story. In some cases settlements were made out of court. Other newspapers lost in trials. Lester L. Jones, now secretary of the Publishers' Association of New York City, was then associated with the Chicago Journal and investigated the suit for his newspaper. It was eventually learned that the story had been "planted" by the correspondent as a means to collect damage money.

Such pitfalls for the newspaper man are, of course, not as common as everyday news room sloppiness. Solution of this problem is a matter for individual consideration.

The district man who telephones in his story; the re-write man who sets it down for publication; the street reporter; the desk man, and the "sob sister," must all be taught professional caution to avoid the libel accident. Fault can be found with all of them and the man who directs them.

NEWS YOU LIKE TO READ

By JOHN AUSTIN

A POLLYANNA type of newspaper would not, could not be true, in the first place, and it would have so limited circulation that its influence would be nil.

This is not a Pollyanna world.

And we must agree, all of us, that if a newspaper does not reflect the world as it is, it is not a newspaper—but a piece of fiction.

A newspaper need not be a pessimistic newspaper, nor an over-optimistic newspaper, but merely a truthful newspaper.

Yet an American citizen in a foreign country is so happy to read pleasant news, good news about his home people in the paper he receives from home that it is too bad that he has to search for this character of information.

Let us take Mexico and the present writer, for instance. No one, perhaps, more heartily despises the big "I" in writing fact or fiction that I, but if I tell my own reactions I am reasonably sure that I am telling the truth—and that is what we are after: the truth.

Mexico was in its usual, almost habitual turmoil, which isn't written in a carping spirit, for I believe that the United States of Mexico will yet become one of the world's leading nations. A Mexican president has a tough proposition on his hands, dealing with the ultra-extremes which go to make up the population of the Republic: Nineteen different Indian races; half breeds, and one of the most highly civilized, most cultured, most truly courteous races in the world, the Castilian. But Mexico was boiling and seething as it tried to progress upward, and newspapers from the United States of America were welcome indeed. How one did long to read pleasing news! Stories of lovers marrying and succeeding; stories of success in business—success gained without the crushing of others; stories of politicians walking the straight path at personal sacrifice; stories of happy mothers and fathers.

It was delightful to see news pictures of summer resort doings: babies in the sand, girls in knickers, young men having fun.

There was in a daily that reached me a story about a New York employer who, having reached the age of sixty years, had turned his business over to forty of his old employees, to let them try to run it. The former owner would wisely keep an eye on the new management—but he would abstain from taking any of the profits, if profits there were. Now that made one American glow; it made him proud that he was affiliated with Uncle Sam.

There was a story of a great prosperous concern which was putting its enormous business in shape so that it could be converted into a profit-sharing corporation. "Who says American business men are money mad?" the writer said to himself.

Uncle Sam's government was taking steps to put the brakes on a tremendous merger of certain corporations because the merger would make the consolidated outfit so strong that it would be dangerous.

"That's fine," said a fellow United Stater to whom the article was shown. "Uncle Sam knows that a money duke is just as dangerous as a so-called blooded duke, eh?"

"There has been a railroad wreck and the villagers near where the wreck occurred had been kind indeed to the injured passengers. A badly injured locomotive engineer had been carried by a farmer and his two sons to their home across a field, and cared for.

A Mrs. Kacsolowski lost her husband in an explosion. The neighbors—Joneses, Smiths, O'Briens, St. Thomases, Pudlicksiskys, Bernowitzes and Murphys—took up a subscription for her. This was covered in two paragraphs of 78 words. We Americans in Mexico would gladly have read a half column about the kind neighbors.

I watched my fellow countrymen as they read of holdups, murders, crooked politicians, men and women gone socially wrong, and they scowled at this news, which, I suppose, must be printed too.

"D—— good thing there's something besides crime in American newspapers," growled one, "or these people here would become suspicious of us and chase us out of their country, and I wouldn't blame them much."

RUSSELL NEW EDITOR OF SPRINGFIELD UNION

To Succeed M. S. Sherman Who Joins Hartford Courant Sept. 25—Started Work on Springfield Republican

Direction of the editorial policies of the Springfield (Mass.) Union upon the resignation of M. S. Sherman to become editor of the Hartford Courant, September 25, passes to Henry B. Russell, of Springfield, associate editor of the Union since 1917. M. W. Dickey, at present managing editor of the Union, continues in his post with additional responsibilities and full charge of the news end of the newspaper.

Mr. Russell has a long newspaper experience. He was graduated from Amherst College in 1881 and the following year became a reporter for the Springfield (Mass.) Republican. He was editor of the Meriden (Conn.) Press-Recorder in 1882 and for four years was a special writer on the staff of the New York Sun. In 1888 he joined the staff of the Providence Journal as an editorial writer and after a period as an editor in Hartford became associate editor of the Union.

He is the author of several books: "A Life of William McKinley," "International Monetary Conferences," and "Our War With Spain," among others. He has recently written a history of Suffield, Conn.

Mr. Dickey has served the Union for some 15 years, returning to the paper from the staff of the Boston Globe to become news editor. About two years ago he was named managing editor of the paper.

BASEBALL SCORES ON TRAIN

Through an arrangement perfected between the Charlotte Observer, the Southern Railway Company and the Associated Press, the major league baseball results, runs, hits, errors and batteries are now placed aboard the Crescent Limited upon its arrival in Charlotte each evening at 8:20 o'clock. The information is typewritten on large placards, one card for the club car and the other the observation car, and thus made available to all passengers.

THIS COUNTRY PUBLISHER "PLAYS BALL" WITH MERCHANTS—AND BOTH WIN!

Advertisers Give Strong Support to Newspaper That Makes Common Cause with Them—Personal Contact is Keystone of the Arch—Nowell Made Tulare, Cal., a One Paper Town

WHEN a promising young man gives up a paying profession to sink his fortunes and his hopes in a poor, little struggling daily newspaper, with the odds stacked against it, there can be only one reason: he was intended to be a newspaper man.

P. D. Nowell

Patterson D. Nowell, owner of the Advance-Register, only newspaper in Tulare, Cal., thought he was intended for the law; he studied for it, practised it successfully, and left it. Therefore he was not intended for the law.

The Advance-Register is today one of the best equipped of the smaller plants in California, and one of the best patronized by advertisers, in towns of less than 5,000 population. It has three linotypes, a Ludlow, a Model B high speed Duplex web flatbed press, Arcola hot water heating, an up-to-date ventilating system for front and back shops, and 15 people on the pay roll. But this is after four grueling years.

Nowell was a home town youngster whom every one knew by his nickname, "Pat." He had got his legal training just in time to join the overseas excursion of the A. E. F., and when he returned, an artillery lieutenant, he plunged into his profession with a will to make up for lost time. Everything was going fine when he decided to veer off into the hazardous waters of newspaper enterprise.

As a publisher, Nowell began with all the disadvantages, from ignorance of newspapers to disapproving friends and fellow townsmen. The Morning Advance, which he bought, had had many owners, and in a field already served by a well established evening newspaper it seemed to be superfluous, an economic loss. The fact that in four years this newspaper became the survivor in a one-paper town, with more consistent backing in every way than any newspaper had before enjoyed in the community, proves that young lawyer "Pat" knew a thing or two about finding out what he didn't know.

In the meantime, the business ways of Tulare have changed. The slogan, "Trade in Tulare," has come into existence and the town is conscious of having a fine trading territory. Firms that had always considered advertising as a matter of supporting the home town newspaper and keeping their names before the public are now using space to cultivate new business and sell more goods. Old differences between various store proprietors have been buried in co-operative associations. The town is growing.

In all these changes "Pat" Nowell has been a leading spirit, a hard hitting editorial champion of the forward movement. He has faithfully adhered to two rules: know the business men of your community, and know the progress of other publishers in similar fields. In addition to an exceedingly tough job of financing, Nowell has managed to keep always in close personal contact with his advertisers and potential advertisers and to visit every newspaper plant in the state that held the promise of worth-while ideas to be gained. But it was home town work that rang the bell.

To help himself through college Nowell learned to sell, and the experience he gained solving the distribution problems of household aluminum ware have never ceased to be useful to him in newspaper work. The following incident will serve to illustrate how a legal training in logic, a salesman's insight and a policy of making common cause with the mechants may all combine to result in a very popular home town publisher. In the spring of 1926 Tulare was invaded by one of those never-ending-chain-coupon selling schemes. Scores of women of the community fell under the spell and were feverishly purchasing underwear and disposing of coupons to each other to get their money back. The thing was going over big,—then Publisher Nowell got wind of what was astir. The season was late, and the merchants were nonplussed when informed of the wholesale rate at which their erstwhile customers were being supplied with future underwear needs as well as those pertaining to the present. They looked to the Advance-Register for a way out.

With three editorials Nowell laid bare the logic of the whole scheme. What would happen to the holders of coupons when every woman within a hundred miles had obtained all the underwear she could use? On the appearance of the third editorial the market for coupons vanished, and some irate holders even upbraided their local merchants for permitting such a scheme to operate in the neighborhood.

Nowell suggested that the stores that carried underwear lines display them in their windows.

"But it's too late to sell such goods this season," they protested.

"But such goods have been selling in large quantities right here and now," he came back at them. And so the goods were displayed and advertised in the Advancement Register, and a record business was enjoyed by all.

"Merely a matter of satisfying a demand created by the chain selling method," says Salesman-Publisher Nowell modestly.

For four years, or a little less, the Advance had lived on under the tonic influence of the young ex-lawyer, with no visible indication at any time that it could pull through another 30 days. What happened when it came to a showdown last fall, and there was just one gleam of hope, namely, the possibility of absorbing the evening opposition newspaper, proclaimed the fact that "Pat" had made good with his business public.

A number of leading Tulare merchants and business men were consulted. The cards were laid on the table. The entire operating scheme of newspapers was explained, showing the necessary investment in equipment. It was pointed out how large a share of every dollar spent for newspaper advertising comes back into local circulation through salaries and wages. It cost so much to run one newspaper, and so much to run two newspapers, and some $10,000 less to run one in place of two. Fourteen of the men called in agreed to put up cash and collateral sufficient to enable Nowell to buy out his opposition, and in January, 1926, Tulare became a one-newspaper town.

Very shortly after the consolidation it was found necessary to revise advertising rates upward. Nowell's method was characteristic. First he made a number of trips about the state visiting plants of about the same size as his own and studying their space rate systems. In view of what he learned he decided on the base rate plus composition charge. The base rate varies according to the amount of space used during each particular month, and the composition charge of ten cents an inch is added for every piece of copy that is set. This leads to profitable runs, but not too many to dull the advertising columns of the paper. What is most important, the plan is working out to the advertisers' satisfaction.

Once each month the Advance-Register gets out a trade extension issue and delivers a copy to every home in Tulare's trade territory. This was done after an agreement with the advertisers that local paid space should amount to a certain minimum figure during the whole month. The merchants appreciate this co-operation so heartily that they actually exert their influence on those who are not doing their share of advertising to make up the required per diem total. The monthly issue runs to 12 or 16 pages, instead of the daily eight, and carries special advertising.

Nowell is an exponent of personal journalism. He spends every available moment calling on business men and potential advertisers and discussing their problems with them. He adjusts complaints. He picks up ideas for editorials.

"The business men are close to the public," he says, "and by keeping in touch with them I learn what people are thinking. This personal contact is the best guide I know of for editorial writing. Furthermore, it helps our advertising man to get more business."

Besides looking after their two children, and superintending the home, Mrs. Nowell has had charge of the business office of the Advance since the time her husband took control.

COAST DAILY SUSPENDS

The Hawthorne (Cal.) Daily Leader has suspended publication.

CALL BUYS REAL ESTATE

The Newark (N. J.) Call Printing and Publishing Company, publishing the Newark Sunday Call, has extended its real estate holdings by purchasing land adjacent to its own plant. The land is 155 feet deep with a street frontage of 43 feet. The company now owns property fronting on three streets. The purchase was made to take care of future expansion of its new plant, erected two years ago.

COOPER AT SYRACUSE DINNER

Kent Cooper, general manager of the Associated Press, was among speakers addressing the farm dinner given by Jerome Barnum, publisher of the Syracuse Post-Standard in Syracuse, Sept. 1. Gov. Alfred Smith of New York, a scheduled speaker, was taken ill at the last moment. Another speaker was ex-Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois.

TALBOTT SUCCEEDS SAMMIS

Greenville Talbott, associate editor of the Fourth Estate, has been named editor succeeding Walter Sammis, resigned. Thomas Barrett, associate editor, has been named managing editor.

TO TEACH JOURNALISM

George E. Simmons, who has been city editor of the Nashville Tennesseean, will go to New Orleans Sept. 17, to assume charge of the department of journalism at Tulane University.

Are You On The NEWS OF FLORIDA List?

Each week there is published in Jacksonville, and circulated to a selected list of interested readers outside of Florida, one of the biggest little newspapers to be found anywhere, small in size (6″ x 9″ and only four pages) but big in contents, for in its columns is briefly recorded the outstanding items in the news of Florida's progress day by day—new buildings, new cities springing up, new records in sales volume in nearly every line of business, new agricultural and industrial development—all contributing to Florida's amazing growth.

Jacksonville, the metropolis, growing at a rapid pace, offers frequent contribution to the contents of this unique newspaper, just as the Times-Union, Florida's largest newspaper, establishes new records in Florida newspaperdom.

Ask to be put on the "News of Florida" list.

The Florida Times-Union

JACKSONVILLE

Population 135,866, Florida 1925 census

THE PITTSBURGH PRESS

Leads All Pittsburgh Newspapers In National Advertising

THE PITTSBURGH PRESS has for years led all newspapers in Pittsburgh in volume of national advertising, weekday and Sunday. In six months of this year The Press as usual led all Pittsburgh newspapers in total volume of national advertising weekday alone, Sunday alone, and all Pittsburgh newspapers weekday and Sunday.

NATIONAL ADVERTISING SIX MONTHS, 1926

	Daily Agate Lines	Sunday Agate Lines	Daily and Sunday Agate Lines
The Pittsburgh Press	1,478,988	835,422	2,314,410
Second Evening and Second Sunday Newspaper	1,118,862	594,674	1,713,536
EXCESS	360,126	240,748	600,874

In the first six months of 1926, THE PITTSBURGH PRESS, Daily and Sunday, seven issues, had a net gain of 1,036,596 agate lines over the same period a year ago, compared with a gain of 765,758 for the Gazette Times, Morning and Sunday, and the Chronicle Telegraph, Evening, thirteen issues.

In the same period, THE PITTSBURGH PRESS, Daily and Sunday, seven issues, had a net gain of 174,832 agate lines in National Advertising as compared with 121,744 for the other papers, thirteen issues.

THE PRESS is overwhelmingly the choice of national advertisers using only one newspaper in Pittsburgh.

THE PITTSBURGH PRESS, Daily, has 33,254 more net paid circulation in the city of Pittsburgh than both other evening newspapers combined, and the Sunday Press has 22,673 more net paid circulation in Pittsburgh than both other Sunday newspapers combined!

The Pittsburgh Press

A Scripps-Howard Newspaper

Represented by ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC., 250 Park Avenue, New York

WALTER STRONG RAPS CRITICS OF A. B. C.

President of Chicago Daily News and Bureau Director Says Auditing Body Must Be Resold to Newspapers

Walter Strong, president of the Chicago Daily News, and a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations' directorate, took occasion to rap present critics of the A. B. C., when interviewed on the eve of his departure for Europe from New York this week.

Walter A. Strong

Newspaper publishers seeking more power on the Bureau's board are simply seeking to tear down the A. B. C., he charged.

"The theory of the Bureau's foundation is at stake," Mr. Strong declared. "The original conception of the circulation auditing organization provided that majority control be in the hands of the advertisers. Let the publishers gain 51 per cent control, if they wish to tear down the A. B. C."

Mr. Strong was referring to a circular letter sent out to A. B. C. newspaper members by the Publishers' Association of New York City, calling for united action in efforts to obtain more power for newspapers on the A. B. C. board, to reduce newspaper dues, and registering disapproval of the Bureau's offer to publish advertising rates.

Since the Bureau's suggestion that advertising rates be furnished together with circulation figures was entirely optional, Mr. Strong said. In his opinion it offered no grounds for criticism.

"The A. B. C. has entered a new decade, during which it must be resold to the newspaper publishing field," Mr. Strong continued. "A new generation of newspaper executives has grown up who do not understand the fundamental purposes of the Bureau. Frank discussion is needed to resell them, and opportunity for such discussion will be afforded at the annual A. B. C. convention in Chicago, Oct. 21 and 22. I have no doubt in the world that those objecting to the A. B. C. theory will be convinced they are wrong at this convention."

Mr. Strong pointed out that at present the publishers, including newspaper, magazine and trade paper, with two representatives each on the board, had 45 per cent control of the body. He declared he considered this entirely fair.

Mr. Strong expects to be away from this country about six weeks and he is uncertain whether he will be back in Chicago to attend the convention himself. While in Europe Mr. Strong will visit the principal bureaus of the Chicago Daily News' foreign service. He also is planning to attend sessions of the Press Congress of the World.

The Daily News is planning to erect a new building in Chicago, but Mr. Strong declared it would be premature to give out detailed plans at this time.

BUSINESS MANAGER INJURED

John W. Barnhart, New York Daily News, Hurt in Auto Crash

John W. Barnhart, business manager of the New York Daily News, suffered lacerations of the right leg, when a speeding car carrying four negroes crashed into his sedan in New York, Sept. 1. Mrs. Barnhart was treated at a nearby hospital for a fracture of the collarbone.

Mr Barnhart was at the wheel. Both machines were wrecked in the collision. In the confusion that followed occupants of the offending machine escaped. Later, two suspects, both injured were taken to a hospital.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER CALENDAR

Sept. 8-11—Pi Delta Epsilon, journalistic fraternity, 17th annual convention, University of California, Berkeley, Cal.

Sept. 14-18—Press Congress of the World, sessions in Geneva and Lausanne.

Sept. 17-18—United Typothetæ District Number Four, convention, Lynchburg, Va.

Sept. 20-23—Financial Advertisers' Assn., annual convention, Detroit, Mich.

Sept. 20-23—Advertising Specialty Assn., annual convention, Hotel Sherman, Chicago.

Sept. 20-22—Georgia Press Assn., annual convention, Louisville, Ga.

Sept. 21-22—National Publishers Assn., annual convention, Shawnee-on-the-Delaware, Pa.

Sept. 23-25—Missouri Press Assn., annual convention and boat trip, Cape Girardeau, Mo.

Sept. 23-25—Tri-State Editorial Assn., annual convention, Sioux City, Ia.

GOVERNOR ASSAILS DAILIES

Claims News Judgment Bad When They Cut His Speech

The right of a news editor to select what is or is not news, in political copy, was challenged in Washington by Gov. Roland H. Hartley, in a radio speech delivered from station KJR, on Aug. 19. The governor, incensed because a prior speech delivered at Aberdeen, Wash., had not been printed in full by two Seattle newspapers, the Times and Post-Intelligencer, charged them with "purposely ignoring facts."

The speech, an answer to charges made by other state officials relative to the state timber business, was issued the day of its release, and ran to 125 galley inches of 8 point type. The editors of both the Times and Post-Intelligencer, believing some portions of the speech superfluous, cut it, and the governor's attack was the result.

PENNY JOINS TELEGRAPH

New York World Man Named Assistant Business Manager

Carl P. Penny, for the past six years on the business staff of the New York World has resigned and will join the New York Morning Telegraph Sept. 6, as assistant business manager.

Previous to joining the World he was for two years advertising manager of Current History, published by the New York Times, and before that was for three years real estate manager for the Brooklyn Eagle.

Samuel Jones is business manager of the Morning Telegraph.

EDITOR'S BOOK PUBLISHED

"The Rambler" is the name of a new volume of poetry, philosophical and humorous work which has just been published, the author of which is Norman W. Ralston, editor of the Urbana (O.) Democrat-Citizen. Mr. Ralston has been writing a column by the same name in several Ohio newspapers daily for the past five years. He is 27, but has been writing for newspapers since he was 13. The book is dedicated to another newspaper man, C. Frank Ridenour, publisher of two Ohio newspapers at Piqua and Urbana, O.

CORRECTION

The P. A. Geier Company, handling the Super-Royal Electric Cleaner, has placed its advertising account with the Proctor and Collier Company, Cincinnati advertising agency, and not with the John S. King Company, Cleveland, as stated in a recent issue of Editor & Publisher.

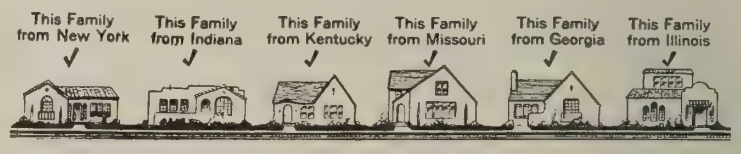
BAR FOUR "FAT CURES" BY FRAUD ORDER

Chewing Gum, Tablets, Bath Salts and Soap, Sold by W. E. Learned, Did Not Bear Out Claims in Advertising

Issuance of Post Office fraud orders against the Scientific Research Laboratories, New York, and associated enterprises in the manufacture and sale of several "obesity cures" is reported in the Aug. 28 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Products whose advertising in media using the mails is barred by the Post Office action include "San-gri-Na," a tablet preparation; Silph Reducing Chewing Gum," "Sangra Bath Salts" and "Dr. Folt's Soap." It is stated by the Journal that of the annual gross receipts of about $500,000, the companies headed by W. E. Learned spent $300,000 for advertising in newspapers and magazines.

Several analyses of tablets and the chewing gum were produced by Judge Horace J. Donnelly, Solicitor for the Post Office Department, to prove that the products contained thyroid material, and that, upon warning by the manufacturing chemists that administration of thyroid principles in such fashion might have harmful results, a different formula was temporarily substituted. Statements in the advertising that no diet regime was required with the use of the advertised articles were countered by the Solicitor with quotations from the directions for use of the tablets advising certain hygienic precautions.



Defense statements that the advertising had been modified were met by the introduction in evidence of magazines issued after the hearings had started containing the same kind of copy which had caused the proceedings.

Firms and individuals against which the fraud orders were issued are the Scientific Research Laboratories, Sangrina Company, W. E. Learned, "Madame Elaine," Silph Medical Company, Silph Company, "Madame Claire," and their officers and agents.

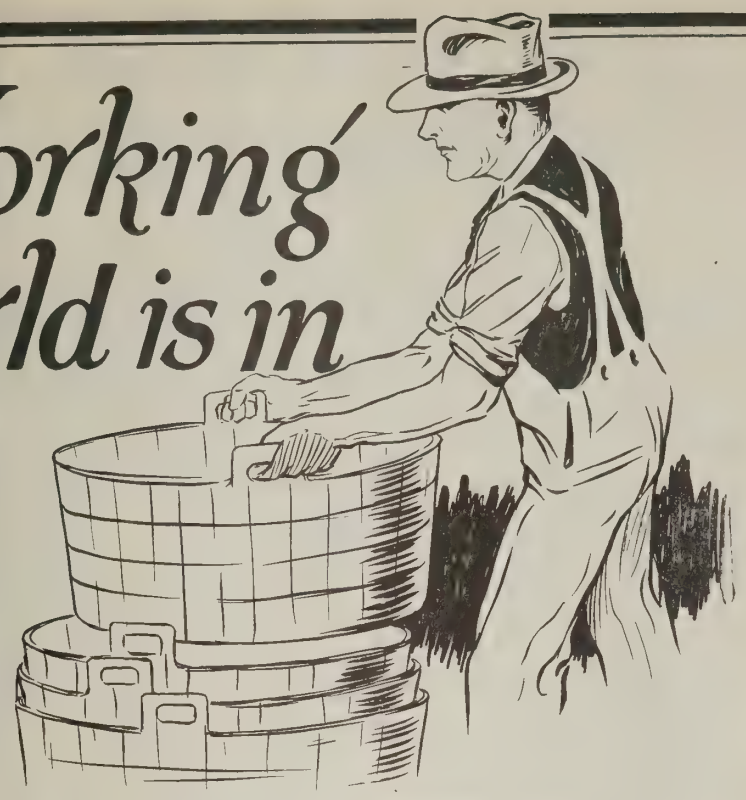
"It will be interesting to see," the Journal comments, "whether any of these frauds will continue to be sold through the drug stores of the country. Legally, there is nothing to prevent this means of evading the government's action. Obesity cure swindlers cannot be attacked under the Food and Drugs Act, because obesity is not looked upon as a disease, and, therefore, products sold for the treatment of obesity do not come within the scope of the law's definition of a drug. But if obesity cures fell within the scope of the national food and drugs act, the exploiters of these fakes would still be perfectly safe from prosecution if they did as most 'patent medicine' fakers do—confined their laying claims to newspaper advertisements and circulars and said as little as possible about the product itself or in the trade packages."

SCORE DOCTOR FOR AD-WRITING

Sir Arbuthnot Lane, noted British physician, was censured by his medical society this week for writing advertisements on health for restaurant menus.

THE SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA MARKET

Different in Cosmopolitanism



That Southern California has drawn its inhabitants from every state and country on earth is common knowledge. Since these people have pulled up stakes and won success in a new land, it follows that they possess high average intelligence and broad interests. While still retaining an interest in the old home town, they have meanwhile seen new sights, accustomed themselves to a new life and acquired new tastes. People of this kind demand all the news of the world, full reports from market centers, broad interpretative editorials, varied and well-presented features. Only one kind of newspaper can do the job right—a morning newspaper. The first outstanding fact about Southern California is that it is a morning newspaper field, and the second outstanding fact is that in this field the Los Angeles Times is the overshadowing sales-medium.

Los Angeles has three morning newspapers and three evening newspapers. During the first 6 months of 1926 the morning newspapers printed 64% more advertising than the evening newspapers. The Los Angeles Times during this period printed 539,014 more lines than both other morning papers combined, and 110,138 more lines than both largest evening newspapers combined.

Los Angeles Times

Eastern Representative: Williams, Lawrence & Cresmer Co., 360 N. Michigan Blvd., Chicago—285 Madison Ave., New York.

Largest Wood Working Plant in the World is in Richmond, Va.

EMPLOYING thousands of people, The Richmond Cedar Works manufactures cedar tubs, pails, ice cream freezers, packing tubs and other woodenware—which are shipped to every part of the world.

The bulk of the wood used in the manufacture of its woodenware products comes from timber lands within the State of Virginia—principally from the Dismal Swamp which abounds in fine Virginia White Cedar.

The fact that the raw material used by this huge manufacturing industry is literally right at its do r; the fact that its products have a world-wide market; the fact that it has years of uninterrupted success behind it—mean that the thousands of Richmonders employed in this great plant are steadily employed—always earning good wages, with which to buy the necessities and luxuries of life.

National Representatives

KELLY-SMITH COMPANY

Marbridge Bldg., New York City. Waterman Bldg., Boston, Mass. Atlantic Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa. Tribune Tower, Chicago, Ill.

J. B. KEOUGH, Atlanta, Ga.

In Richmond

is situated the world's largest wood-working plant—Richmond Cedar Works.

Its products are shipped to every part of the world.

It pays good, continuous wages to thousands of Richmonders.

It is one of the reasons why

Richmond Is A Steady Permanent Non-Fluctuating MARKET

If you have anything to sell—Tell Richmond about it in

The Richmond NEWS LEADER

"ON NEWS LEADER SQUARE"

Covers Richmond Like a Roof

DAILY'S SURVEY REVEALED MARKET CONDITIONS FOR RETAILERS

Janesville (Wis.) Gazette Showed Weak Spots in Stores' Relations With Customers—Fifteen Merchants Co-operated Paying Half of Expenses

By ROBERT B. BOLLES

Merchandising Department, Janesville Gazette

THE one thing every retailer in the United States would rather know about his business than any other is: "What do my customers really think of my store?"

In Janesville, Wis., the Janesville Gazette and a group of 15 of the cities' retailers financed a survey to get at the exact answer to this question with a view to correcting certain evils in the relationship which were believed to exist. The Gazette's Merchandising Service Department took over the responsibility of arranging and handling the survey from start to finish and paid half of the expenses. The 15 retail merchants underwrote the other half.

In November, 1925, 6,000 questionnaires were mailed to the families of the Gazette trading area. These questionnaires were mailed in three sets, 2,700 going to Janesville city residents, 1,800 going to residents of tributary towns, and the remaining 1,500 going to the farm homes on the rural routes in the Janesville market. These questionnaires were not keyed in any way,—they were addressed to names picked at random from the circulation lists of the Gazette. The Janesville questionnaires were yellow, the outside town residents blue, and the rural questionnaires were white. All of the answers were arranged for each of the three classifications as well as for the entire field combined.

In this way, the retailer not only found out what the people of the entire territory thought of his store but discovered an interesting variance of opinion between the three classes of his customers enabling him to build up the weak spots.

No prizes were offered to induce people to fill out the questionnaires. Names of those answering the questions were not divulged.

High spots among the questions asked were: "Do you like to trade in Janesville and why or why not?" "What do you think of the retail stores in general?," "Do you prefer to buy on credit or for cash?," "What stores have the best window displays?," "If you buy from the mail order house, do you compare the mail order house merchandise with that of the local stores before you buy?," "What service does the local retailer give you that the mail order house cannot give?," "Have you much confidence in 'Sales' and do you like to buy goods at them?," "Do you give the most consideration to price or quality when buying merchandise?," "Do you read the manufacturers' advertising in the newspapers?," "Do you ask for Gazette advertised brands of merchandise?," "Do you read the advertising of Janesville merchants in the Gazette and to what degree?," "Do you read carefully advertising sent to you through the mails?," "What do you think of the amusement facilities offered in Janesville?," "Is there any outstanding unfavorable feature that you do not like about Janesville, not covered here?," "Can you suggest an improvement for the Gazette or its many services?"

So that the bulk of any prejudice that might exist in the minds of those filling out the questionnaires would not weigh against either the Gazette or the retail merchants, the correspondence paper, envelopes and questionnaires were printed with the name of "The Janesville Bureau for Better Business," and all correspondence was handled under this coined name. A special post office box was given as the address.

As rapidly as the questionnaires were returned properly filled out they were turned over to R. E. Ellingwood who is Assistant Professor of Business Administration at the University of Wisconsin Extension Division. A total of 600 serious, thoroughly filled out questionnaires were returned, and from these Mr. Ellingwood compiled his tables and finished report.

The Gazette had mimeograph stencils cut for each page of the report and had it bound in book form for the use of the retailers. The finished volume contained 296 pages of matter printed on one side only, and was bound in limp cover paper. The page is 8½ by 11 in size.

The Retail Division of the Chamber of Commerce held a dinner at which Mr. Ellingwood went over the questions and their answers before all of the retailers of the city.

One of the high spots brought out by the survey was that people would rather buy for cash than credit. Seventy-two per cent of the returns said that they watched window displays with great regularity and that their purchases were affected by what they saw.

The replies to the question of mail order purchases showed that a surprising number of people made no comparison with local store merchandise before purchasing from the mail order house. This shows that these people have placed implicit faith in the mail order catalogue and that cognizance of this fact should be taken by the retailer, and something done to offset it. The figures showed that $59 was the average annual expenditure for Janesville territory families. At the rate of 18,000 families this represents a total annual expenditure of more than $1,062,000 for mail order merchandise!

The survey also demonstrated what great strides have been made in the increasing of trading areas through the automobile. Definite proof was offered that stores in cities 70 and 90 miles away were just as much the local retailers' competitors as if they were next door.

Very few people have confidence in "Sales" these days. The majority of those answering this question expressed a preference to purchase merchandise regularly at a fair mark-up. As between price and quality the survey showed an overwhelming preference for quality as the foremost consideration when purchasing goods.

The influence of newspaper advertising was demonstrated when 86.7 per cent of all the people answering the questionnaire said that they read the advertisements of merchants regularly. The majority of these people stated they were influenced by this advertising and that they requested Gazette advertised brands and merchandise when calling on the retail stores.

Only 28 per cent of the residents of Janesville admitted that they read carefully the advertising sent to them through the mails. Of the total answers received to this question 33 per cent said that they read this type of advertising. The remaining 67 per cent indicated that this advertising did not receive their attention and that they were not affected by it. The answers also indicated that the great majority were more influenced by advertising in their newspapers than by the mailed pieces.

This survey demonstrated the ease with which the very roots of any city's retail situation can be reached. Only by getting down to the consumer angle can any group of retailers hope to solve their difficulties, either of a collective or separate nature. The facts presented in such a survey suggest what must be done to better existing conditions.

Four Suburban Rotogravure Sections

A fourth tabloid suburban rotogravure section, published with the Sunday edition of The New York Times, will be inaugurated September 12. It will contain 16 pages of pictures of interest to the section north of 110th Street, New York—the Bronx, Harlem and Washington Heights, and will be distributed only in that territory.

Sixteen-page tabloid suburban rotogravure sections in addition to the regular rotogravure section, are now distributed with the Sunday issue of The Times—each in its own particular territory, as follows:

	Net Paid Circulation
1. Westchester and Connecticut	50,000
2. New Jersey	75,000
3. Brooklyn and Long Island	90,000
4. Bronx, Harlem and Washington Heights	65,000

Advertising rates:

	Per agate line
Any one section	$.40
Any two sections	.75
Any three sections	1.10
All four sections	1.50

Advertising forms close 12 days in advance of publication.

BACK TO "VAGABONDAGE"

H. H. Fyffe, London Herald Editor, Resigns to Resume His Travels

H. Hamilton Fyffe, for the last four years editor of the London Daily Herald, Labor paper, resigned his editorship July 31, "to go back to vagabondage," according to special dispatches to New York newspapers. His travels would probably take him to Australia and the United States, he stated.

"I want to resume again my traveling," the editor said. "I was dragged back to Fleet Street from the freedom of my garden in Sussex to put the paper on its feet. I think now my task has been accomplished."

Discussing the future of English politics, Mr. Fyffe declared he believed that eventually, probably within twenty years, there would be only two parties, one consisting of Laborites and Liberals and the other of Communists.

William Mellor, assistant editor of the Herald, will succeed Fyffe as editor.

SALE AND SUSPENSIO IN OGDENSBURG

Local Group Takes Control of D Advance—Morning News Owne by Julius Frank Retires From Field

The majority stock of the Ogdensb (N. Y.) Advance has been acquired a local group headed by Joseph R. Bran Mr. Brandy's father, J. R. Brandy, James E. Kelly, former mayor and n president of the St. Lawrence Cou Savings bank, are associated with h The holdings consist of the estate the late George F. Darrow.

The new stockholders voted to incre the capital from $11,000 to $40,0 Articles of incorporation and by-laws now being arranged and when the p liminaries are completed the new co pany will be organized and officers a directors named.

For many years the Advance Co pany published a weekly paper and c ried on an extensive job printing bu ness. Last January it started publi tion of an afternoon daily. It was cently stated the new owners intend to convert the evening into a morni paper.

The present officers of the compa are: C. A. Bennett, president and editc W. B. Stuart, vice-president and tre urer.

The Ogdensburg Daily News, a mo ing newspaper, suspended publicati Aug. 12. The paper had been in financ straits for several months. It was ported about five months ago that group of Syracuse men had purchased t paper.

After a short time they abandon the project. Then Julius Frank, wealt Ogdensburg department store owner to the publication over.

For many years the Daily News h been owned by Captain Henry Holla prominent local politician, and manag by William Pearson.

A New and Economical Way of Reaching the Buffalo Market

The Buffalo Courier-Express, alone in the morning field in its territory, offers to all advertisers a complete and concentrated coverage at the lowest rate.

Guessing about reader-duplication, using two newspapers to cover the same ground, are now things of the past as far as Buffalo is concerned. Your advertising in The Buffalo Courier-Express will reach practically all the buyers in Buffalo and adjacent territory.

Also there is a metropolitan Sunday paper, The Buffalo Sunday Courier-Express, which will tell your story to the largest audience reached by any newspaper in New York State outside of New York City.

Courier BUFFALO EXPRESS

Lorenzen & Thompson, Incorporated
Publishers' Direct Representatives

Chicago New York San Francisco Seattle

A Page from The Christian Science Monitor

GERMANS MEET LEAGUE TERMS

Lord Cecil Finds No Reason to Doubt That Conditions Have Been Fulfilled

By Cable from Monitor Bureau

LONDON, July 28—Lord Cecil has now cleared up the doubt raised by Sir Austen Chamberlain's recent statement which suggested doubt as to whether Germany had fulfilled the disarmament conditions for its entry into the League of Nations.

Lord Cecil, replying on behalf of the Government to a question by Lord Parmoor in the House of Lords, said that before any state enters the League it has to show a sincere intention to observe its international obligations and to accept such regulations as might be prescribed by the League as regards military, naval and air force estimates. So far as Germany is concerned nothing arose with regard to the second point, because its obligations had been laid down under the Treaty of Versailles.

In order to inquire into the first point, according to ordinary practice, a small subcommission was appointed. He understood this subcommission had before it a report from the Conference of Ambassadors which stated that they knew no reason to suppose that there was anything which we doubt that Ger intention to obse obligations.

Nothing so fa knew had occu throw any doub
the Ambassador therefore, the c commission, wh
many had fulfill necessary, stood, impugned by a occurred or wh
since that time.

As to the sta
eign Secretary, h
to the explanatio were some matte outstanding, the ture which cause
British Governm

"MODER IS A

(Continued

province spent produce a Gove something over this money could legitimate busine which is far wor standpoint, of th
—even considerb
tured liquor—pre of the province
part of it out of

No other reve ernment collects continuess. And not take into co
of futile but exp
the part of muni
the liquor laws.

$2 Per He

These facts ar
ing when viewe population of t people who spen through the liq
about 600,000—ab month for every child in the pro not all. These $ the liquor expend
the army of bo here. How much illegally in this v
of course, to esti

It is a commo bootleggers do a ness as the gover
this is true or n their income add drain on legitim

Wets argue th
sponsible for mo
penditures recor stores but a glance at the official figures disproves this. It is true that during the summer months, when the tourist trade is in progress, liquor expenditures are somewhat higher than in the winter. For instance, in the six months ending Sept. 30 last, government liquor sales totaled $6,-217,304 as against $5,765,581 in the previous six months. But even attributing the entire $1,000,000 difference in these figures to the liquor purchases of foreign visitors, the fact still remains that British Columbia people must have spent approximately an even $1,000,000 on liquor every month of the year through the government shops apart from purchases through bootleggers.

faced trying financial times since the beginning of the war, and have grasped eagerly at anything which promised to keep down taxation. The wets' argumen. that the municipalities are big gainers through "moderation" thus has carried great weight here with municipal taxpayers. This is another false claim, as the figures show, but the facts are not generally understood.

While the total profits of the Government liquor business are divided up for several purposes, in a broad way the municipalities get half of them, and the provincial authorities take the other half after various deductions have been made. A study of the figures for the six months ending Sept. 30, last, shows just how much the municipalities get out of these liquor sales. In that time liquor profits totaled $1,531,265. The municipalities received $424,484. That was a substantial revenue on the face of it, considering the small population of the Province.

To secure this revenue, $6,817,304 was spent legally on liquor, and it was spent almost entirely by the residents of municipalities as liquor stores are confined almost altogether to municipal areas. Thus the people of the municipalities reduced their tax-paying power by $6,817,304 to bring back a revenue of $424,484 for municipal purposes. Not considering the large illegal sales at all, this is an expenditure of $16 to get back $1. If the people who spent this money had kept it, they could have provided their cities with as much revenue and still saved themselves $6,392,820.

It is apparent from these facts that drink consumption is a poor way of financing Government. It reduces the people's taxpaying power

Municipal Finances

The financial results of "moderation" in relation to municipal government are particularly interesting as most of the population is contained within municipal areas. In common with cities all over Canada, municipalities in this Province have ity" in regard to the matter. This resulted from a disagreement with her two male colleagues on the commission over the staff personnel for the survey

Mrs. Johnson wishes Mrs. J. Henry Highsmith, of Raleigh, to have sole direction of the work. Dr. C. M. Cooper and A. T. Allen, superintendent of schools, insisted on E. F. Carter, executive secretary of the commission, remaining in charge as the official legally authorized to inspect papers, Inc., were listed at $25,000, while the liabilities were alleged to be in excess of $1,000,000.

WHAT kind of advertisers are using The Christian Science Monitor?

A few of them are shown on this page. See who they are.

If you like, ask any of them why they place their advertising messages before the readers of this International Daily Newspaper.

Getting Acquainted With the Old Oaken Bucket

Keystone View Co.

tle Fellows and Two Little Pups. They Were City Boys and City Dogs and They s in Maine. Of Course They Saw Many Things on the Farm That They'd Never vings Was a Well, With a Bucket, a Rope 'n Everything. Came a Day When the rsty.' They Didn't Want Milk. They Didn't Want Ice Cream, But They Did Want That Well. So, the Two Little Fellows and the Two Little Pups Went Over to the It Was Water. Boys and Pups Enjoyed the Drink, Smacked Their Lips, and When y Liked It They Just Said: "Well, Well."

SOFIA REPLIES TO SOVIET NOTE

Bulgaria Suggests League Investigate the Russian Refugee Incident

By Special Cable

SOFIA, July 28—For the first time since the overthrow of the Stamboulisky Government three years ago, the Bulgarian Minister of Foreign Affairs, Mr. Bourof, entered into direct communication with Moscow, in reply to a long telegram sent out by Georgi Tchitcherin, Soviet Foreign Minister, in which the latter accused the Bulgarian Government of cruelly sending Russian refugees back to Russia in open boats, one of which recently sank in the Black Sea.

The Soviet Minister ended his communication with the following protest: "Uncertain as to the efficacy of this protest to the Bulgarian Government, which is in the hands of the elements of the extreme Right, the Soviet Government calls the attention of civilized nations to the acts of the Bulgarian Government which violate international law and the most elemental human feelings."

The Bulgarian Foreign Minister informs Mr. Tchitcherin in his reply that all the Russian refugees who have returned from Bulgaria to Russia have done so of their own accord against the advice of the Bulgarian Government, and suggests that the League of Nations, which has the Russian refugees in Bulgaria under its protection, make an impartial investigation of the incident.

The Bulgarian minister ends his note as follows: "If the Bulgarian Government made a mistake in not preventing Russian refugees, innocent of all political crimes, from returning to their homes and fatherland, what shall we say of those outfits organized in Soviet ports and equipped with official papers, the only purpose of which was to land arms and explosives on Bulgarian shores to be used in a civil war in Bulgaria? I merely mention this fact which you overlook in your telegram and leave the civilized world, to which you appeal, to pass judgment on your sin and our sins."

MOTH PROTECTION

Solve this difficult problem by equipping your closets with Sentry Anti Moth Cartridges. The modern and scientific method of moth control. Laboratory and time tested. No dumping, no dusting; no rubbing odor. $2 postpaid. Purchase price refunded if not satisfactory. SENTRY SALES CO., 44 Bromfield St., Boston. Mgrs. 15 E. 40th St., New York City

TANGIER CUSTOMS CORDON REMOVED

By Special Cable

TANGIER, July 28—It is officially announced that the customs cordon between Tangier and the Spanish zones was removed yesterday. Spain, it is understood, agreeing to accept 2,000,000 pesetas roughly for its share in the customs since the statute came into force. Hereafter the entire duty of 25 per cent will be collected at the port of Tangier on all goods entering therein, and Spain will receive half of this on those goods which are destined for its zone.

This unfortunate dispute, which has already done much damage to Tangier's trade and which has caused considerable friction owing to the ambiguous wording of clause 20 in the statute, is now happily ended.

CUSTOMS OFFICERS TO INSPECT PLANTS

Co-operation With Horticultural Board Proves Success

Special from Monitor Bureau

WASHINGTON, July 26—By an agreement between the Department of Treasury and the Department of Agriculture, New York Custom House officials are on the lookout for plants and plant products. Anyone seeking to smuggle in a bit of Scotch heather or some Swiss alpine plants or Dutch bulbs may have them seized by the customs officer who searches for jewels and furs dutiable apparel.

Customs authorities in New York have been submitting plants found in passenger baggage to representatives of the Federal Horticultural Board who mark them if they are suitable for admission, or hold them if objectionable. This practice will be extended to all ports.

The letter from the Treasury Department informing the customs authorities that the plan was satisfactory follows in part:

"The department is in receipt of a letter dated the 9th instant from the Federal Horticultural board of the United States Department of Agriculture, expressing its appreciation and approval of the practice prevailing at your port, and requesting that the practice at your port be followed at all ports of entry throughout the country and as the department recognizes that there should be co-operation in this matter between customs officers and the Department of Agriculture, this letter will be circulated for the information and guidance of customs officers throughout the United States."

FEDERAL EXPLOSIVES TO CLEAR FARM LAND

SALEM, Ore. (Special Correspondence)—Nearly 2,000,000 pounds of pyrotol, government explosive, will be distributed among the farmers of Oregon next year, it is announced by Paul V. Maris, director of the extension service of the Oregon Agricultural College.

Oregon has become one of the greatest users of explosives on the farm for land-clearing purposes in the country. The work has been conducted for the last three years through county agents and banks.

Retention of Party Control Holds Republican Attention

Immediate Question in Contemplation Is How Many Seats Can Be Held in Coming Elections

Special from Monitor Bureau

WASHINGTON, July 28—Retention of their control in the Seventieth Congress is engaging the attention of the Republicans, the immediate question in contemplation by leaders being, how many seats can they hold in the coming fall congressional elections.

At present the party has a majority of 14 in the Senate and 59 in the House. While the proportionate Republican strength is greater in the upper body than in the lower, the possibility of losing the former is greater than that of losing the latter. Republicans would have to elect 27 senators and Democrats only seven to maintain the present relative position in the Senate. Moreover, the Democrats come mostly from the South, where they are practically sure of re-election.

Democrats See Chance

If eight of the seats now held by Republicans are lost, the Democrats will control the Senate by one vote. In such case, it is pointed out, the vote of the Farmer Labor Senator would have great importance. Only two of the independent Republicans are up for re-election, Peter Norbeck of South Dakota and Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota. Smith W. Brookhart, if elected from Iowa, would increase the independent Republican strength by one vote.

A gain of nine Senate seats would give Democrats an absolute majority.

Republican primaries for the choice of senatorial candidates have so far been held in eight states, four candidates being renominated and four defeated. Three more primaries will be held on Sept. 7 and four on Sept. 14. Nominations are to be made by conventions in Idaho, Connecticut and Utah. All of the prominent positions in the make-up of the Senate are held by Republicans.

William M. Butler (R.), Senator from Massachusetts, standing for re-election, is chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Where Republicans Shine

The following states are so strongly Republican as to make it practically certain that they will elect Republican senators: Vermont, Illinois, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Kansas and New Hampshire. In the following states they will admittedly have the advantage; Oregon, North Dakota, Wisconsin, Idaho, Massachusetts, Iowa, California and South Dakota. All of these states with the exception of Idaho and Massachusetts are represented in the Senate by one or two Republican senators more or less independent.

If the Republican Party carries all of these 14 states, including Massachusetts, it must win in addition at least seven of the seats to be contested in the 12 following states: New York, Ohio, Indiana, Washington, Utah, Colorado, Missouri, Maryland, Oklahoma, Nevada, Kentucky and Arizona. Not more than seven or eight Republicans are in serious difficulty, Simeon D. Fess (R.), Senator from Ohio, chairman of Republican Senatorial Committee, has stated.

New Dress Adopted for Southern's Engines

RALEIGH, N. C. (Special Correspondence)—Engines pulling the great north-to-south trains along the trunk lines of the Southern Railway system will no longer be all black and gloomy in appearance. Neither will they be "gay and giddy" but a happy medium has been decided upon. In the future such prize trains as the "Crescent Limited," will be pulled by engines painted a rich dark green, with gold leaf striping. The boiler jackets, driving rods and other running parts will be highly polished. Several engines of this new type already have been placed in operation and are attracting favorable comment.

OREGON 'GAS' REVENUE GROWS

SALEM, Ore. (Special)—Based on receipts up to May 31, the gasoline tax will net the State approximately $3,675,000, an increase of nearly $500,000 over 1925. Current receipts are based on the sale of 35,240,000 gallons, an increase of 13 per cent over the same period last year.

CLOCKS
Clocks of Any Description Repaired
No job too small or none too large.
B. & S. Jewelry Repair Co.
Main Office 15 & 17 E. 40 St. New York City
Branch at 95th Jamaica Ave. Woodhaven New York

The 20th Century Limited
Leave Boston 12:30 p. m.
Arrive Chicago 9:45 a. m.
Saves a Business Day
BOSTON & ALBANY RAILROAD
NEW YORK CENTRAL LINES

Removes Chewing Gum and clean Carpets, Rugs, Upholstery, Clothing, Shoes, Floors, etc. Read directions on label and in booklet under label.
For Safety's Sake—demand
CARBONA
Cleaning Fluid
REMOVES GREASE SPOTS
Without Injury to Fabric or Color
Guaranteed not to contain Benzine Shellac or Gasoline, and to be Non-Combustible and Non-Inflammable
35c 60c & $1. Size Bottles at all Good Stores

Hang Your Pictures and Other Articles With MOORE PUSH-PINS
Glass Heads—Steel Points
MOORE PUSH-LESS HANGERS
Securely Hold Heavy Things
10c pkts. Everywhere
MOORE PUSH-PIN CO
Philadelphia, Pa.

Portland Tacoma Seattle
See the entrancing Pacific Northwest this summer. Mt. Rainier — Mt. Hood — Puget Sound, via the Overland Route over the historic Oregon Trail — 200 miles through the beautiful Columbia River Gorge.
Low Summer Fares
2 Splendid Trains
Portland Limited leaves Chicago at 10:15 p. m. (C. & N. W.)
Continental Limited leaves Chicago at 10:30 a. m. (C. & N. W.)
Featuring open-top observation cars and oil burning locomotives on both trains through the Columbia River Gorge.
For free literature and information, ask
Chicago & North Western Office 210 Old South Bldg. Boston Phone Liberty 7055 or
Union Pacific Office 207-8 Old South Bldg. Boston Phone Liberty 0252
CHICAGO NORTH WESTERN LINE
UNION PACIFIC
903

DOBBS CAPS
Men's Shop With Tailored Things for Women
DOBBS HATS
DOBBS & CO
180 and 366 Fifth Avenue
1 West Fifteen Street
NEW YORK

Garments for Matron and Miss of Generous Figure
Gross Stylish Stouts REDUCTIONS
Dresses—Millinery
—Coats
Stylish Stouts
Petite Stouts
Thirteenth and Sansom
Philadelphia

Dine in Bronxville
CUSTER ARMS
871 Palmer Avenue
Near Parkway
Established 1924
Telephone 2446
CLARIBEL HILL
HER RESTAURANT
110 Pondfield Road
At Cedar Street
Telephone 01-2
PRIVATE DINING ROOM FOR PARTIES
Luncheon, 12-2—65c
Dinner, 5-7.30—$1.00
Sunday, 1-3—6-7—$1.00
Supper, 6-7—$1.00
Orders taken for Cakes, Pies, Salads, Sandwiches. Also catering to private parties

NEW 90 DEGREE 8 CYLINDER CADILLAC
CADILLAC has periodically for a quarter century, inaugurated developments epochal in the progress of the entire motor industry. This year, universal interest attaches to Cadillac's plans because of the unprecedented success of the new, 90 degree, eight-cylinder Cadillac. ~ Cadillac, next week, will present a message of extraordinary import to all buyers of fine cars.
L. P. Fisher
President
CADILLAC
DIVISION OF GENERAL MOTORS CORPORATION
CADILLAC MOTOR CAR COMPANY
DETROIT, MICH.

Trocks Hats Suits Wraps
Peggy Hoyt INC
16 East 55th St
New York

WARNS AGAINST EDITOR-FAVORITISM TOWARD AMATEUR ATHLETICS

Dollar Sign Clings to Most So-Called "Amateur" Contests, Writer Declares—Newspapers Would Be Unwise to Take Sides

By WILLIAM J. McNULTY

ADVOCACY of discrimination to the "nth" degree against professional athletics and in favor of amateur athletics has been made at several conventions of editors and publishers recently. In fact, a group of Canadian newspapers are announced as committed to this policy of discrimination in the news columns, on the ground that the professional sports are operated for personal gain.

I may be entirely wrong, but it is my belief that this attitude is unfair to professional sports, to the public and to the newspapers.

I have been identified with amateur and professional sports as a writer, as an athlete, as an executive, for more than 19 years, in many states and provinces of North America. And, after mature consideration, I have reached the conclusion that discrimination between amateur and professional sports by newspapers would not only be unfair, but unwise.

It is quite true that professional athletics are operated for personal gain. Yet it can also be realized that professional athletics are free of hypocrisy. A professional athlete, promoter or executive is seeking money for his skill on the baseball field, gridiron, track, course, ring, mat or court. He does so openly. There is no camouflaging, no hiding behind "expenses." People contribute at the box offices to see the athletes perform. The professional athlete considers he has a right to participate in the distribution of the receipts. The bargaining is aboveboard. Surely this honesty cannot be ignored.

Why should a professional athlete be singled out for condemnation just because he chooses to capitalize his skill in one or more branches of sports? The active years of an athlete are comparatively few. In this economic age money is a necessity. The cost of living has soared to the altitude record. It is frigid comfort to know that you have a raft of medals and cups, unless you're the type of amateur who specializes in converting said medals and cups into cash. Even then, you'd have a problem defying the widely known wolf on what you could snare in return for $5 or $10 trophies.

In my opinion, the individual who deliberately tosses aside an opportunity to velvetize his path through life, is in plain twentieth century words "a sap." That is if the individual is in poor or moderate circumstances. About the only person who can enter "sports for sports' sake," the true definition of an amateur, is one who is wallowing in wealth.

Today there are very few bona fide amateurs. If the money is available most of them will demand it. Amateur box office magnates always insist on their shares of the spoils.

Practically every foreign amateur athlete who invades America becomes involved in trouble with the governing associations. Paavo Nurmi spent about seven months in America—competing in races as frequently as thrice weekly—traveling from the east coast to the west coast and from the Rio Grande to the Great Lakes. Reports from Finland indicate he now has joined the idle rich class. While in America he acquired a manager, an accessory presumed to be within the province only of a pro. Nurmi became entangled in difficulty with the Amateur Athletic Union.

Albin Stenroos, a countryman of Nurmi remained for about eight months in America. Stenroos, a marathoner, competed in numerous long races in America.

Charlie Hoff, Scandinavian pole vaulter, hopped about from city to city, competing in track meets. He also fell into the bad graces of the A. A. U. The chairman of the foreign relations committee of that body declared Hoff could have been professionalized had the union wished. Leniency was extended because of his being a stranger. Hoff was carrying a retinue including his wife, brother-in-law and sister. The brother-in-law was the athlete's manager.

Clas Thunberg, a Finnish ice skater, was announced as running afoul of the amateur skating promoters on the question of money. He also toted a manager on a tour of American rinks last winter.

Arthur Duffey of Boston, original amateur 9/3/5 seconds, record holder for the century dash, was receiving money in America, England and Australia for competing in sprints. Duffey would still be recognized as an amateur but for his own honesty. Conscience stricken, he voluntarily admitted accepting money.

Jim Thorpe, one of the stellar all around athletes in the history of athletics, had been playing baseball for several years and receiving money. He could have lied out of his predicament like scores of others before and after him. But he was man enough to admit transgressing the simon pure law. And not only honest enough for this admission, but he returned all the trophies he had won as an amateur, and became an open professional in baseball and football.

Prior to the advent of open professional hockey in the United States, practically all the players in the larger "amateur" leagues were paid regular salaries. This applies today in diminished volume.

I know of one "amateur" athlete who was in the ranks of the unemployed for seven years and deposited money in the bank regularly. I know of collections being taken up for an ice skater and the money handed to him despite the fact that all his expenses were paid by the promoters of the "amateur" speed skating meets. This same skater demanded $500 for "expenses" for a journey of about 900 miles, and giving an exhibition. I know of this skater holding up the promoters of a skating meet between the races and demanding and getting money before he would continue in the events.

I know of "amateur" ball players being allotted a percentage of the gross receipts of games. At an "amateur" boxing tourney staged in Brockton, Mass., two of the pugs boxed three rounds to a draw. The judges ordered an extra round. One of the fist flingers demurred. "I only get paid for three rounds" was his alibi.

College scouts patrol the high schools and prep schools gathering into the various folds, promising athletes. The highest bidder gets the prize in the bulk of instances. There is no doubt in my mind but what at least sixty per cent of the leading college athletes receive financial rewards. Some are given in the guise of motor cars, jewelry, etc. Jobs are also invented and the athlete placed on a "payroll." Money is plentiful with athletes who couldn't buy a rowboat if model yachts were selling for a dollar, prior to being picked up by college scouts.

The dollar sign is in "amateur" athletics to the neck.

There is ample room for both amateur and professional athletics. It is my contention that a newspaper mirrors life as it exists not as some idealists wish it to exist. Therefore, it is highly essential that the public demand for professional and amateur athletics be catered to without discrimination. It is quite true there are flaws in the makeups of both divisions of the pastimes of the era. But so there are defects in everything.

Then from the angle of the newspapers. To ignore the interest developed in professional baseball, football, golf, boxing, wrestling, hockey, etc., would be suicidal for any publisher or editor. The most reliable criterion of interest is the high price paid at the league and arena box offices, by vast numbers of human beings. When 50,000 people pay from 50 cents to $5 to see a ball game, or from $2 to $25 to witness an exposition of glove manipulating, no newspaper can afford to overlook the object of this intense interest. And for every person who paid the box office price, there are thousands who are equally interested, but unable for diversified reasons to attend the event.

For the newspapers of the metropolitan centres, the major league baseball games have been important circulation builders. It is quite true that the newspapers have "made" the big leagues. Yet it has been a profitable investment for the newspapers along both circuits. Practically all the afternoon newspapers issue baseball editions. The baseball edition is one of the biggest sellers of the day.

From this vantage point, the promoters of every athletic event, amateur or professional, should be solicited for advertising on the sports pages. Every event is conducted for a profit. Hence a professional promoter shouldn't be forced to advertise, while the amateur promoter gets columns of free publicity and no responsive tingle from the cash register in the advertising department. To make fish of one and flesh of another is unfair. And it is also unwise as a policy, from a selfish standpoint. The public pays all the bills. Why not let the public have what it wants?

Finger Tips in the news every day

How do you read them ?

A 3-stick daily feature

CURRENT NEWS FEATURES, INC.
EVENING STAR BUILDING
WASHINGTON, D. C.

PRESS IMPROVEMENTS CAUSE PREMIUM CUT

Insurance Rates for Workmen's Compensation Reduced 10 Per Cent from Last Year—Bigger Reductions in Some States

Improved conditions in newspaper offices has resulted in a 10 per cent reduction in insurance rates to publishers for workmen's compensation, EDITOR & PUBLISHER was informed this week by the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, New York.

National pure premiums have been reduced from 61 cents last year to the present rate of 55 cents.

The pure premium is determined by dividing the losses sustained in an industry over a given period by the total pay roll. The resultant figure is supposed to take care of all average losses, since it represents the average loss experience in all states.

There has been a general downward trend in the rates to newspaper publishers during the past six years, the bureau said.

Since compensation acts are controlled by states individually the rates vary in different states. Publishers in some states have received greater premium reductions than others. The biggest slash probably occurred in Indiana, where a cut from 61 cents to 43 cents is shown.

Rates are trued up every year. Three years are used in reaching the basis for a new pure premium.

THINK! THINK! THINK! THINK! THINK! THINK

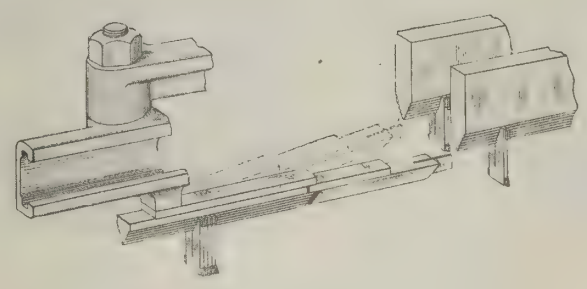
The Sunday Transcript has been READ and been BELIEVED in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, for exactly seventy-seven years this very day.

The Sunday Transcript has lived and prospered in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, exactly seventy-seven years WITHOUT your advertising patronage.

Not exactly telling you where to place your advertising, but you can, possibly, think just what we are thinking on this, the anniversary of our seventy-seventh birthday.

The Sunday Transcript has never solicited an advertisement.

Clement H. Congdon,
Publisher,



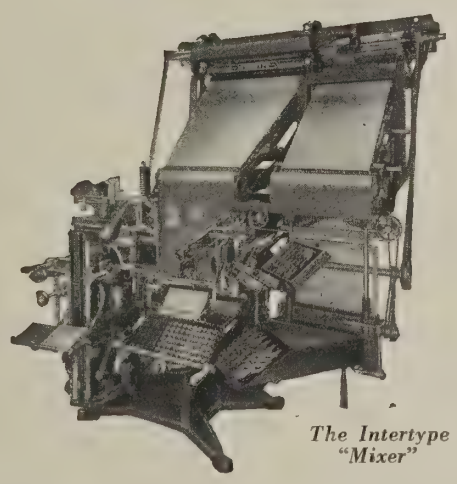
The Sunday Transcript,
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania,
September 5, 1926.

THINK! THINK! THINK! THINK! THINK! THINK

NO STANDARDIZED INTERTYPE HAS EVER BECOME OBSOLETE

Intertype Users Discover PROFITS in Mechanical Details

On the Intertype "Mixer" one simple distributor box serves four magazines, moving back and forth from one distributor bar to the other, as shown above. Fewer parts, no complications, time saved! An exclusive Intertype feature.



WHEN Intertype users speak of the Intertype — especially "Mixer" users — they usually mention the Distributor. "Not one Distributor stop during 155 working days." "Distributor stopped only 6 times" (in 6 months). "Thirty days without a Distributor stop." "Do not average a Distributor stop per week and never have." And so on.

Why so much enthusiasm about a mechanical detail?

Because the Intertype Distributor — especially on the "Mixer" — is a profit-making feature. It saves time, prevents annoying interruptions, increases output. Users appreciate the savings because they are readily measureable in minutes, hours, and Dollars.

The Intertype Distributor is one of THIRTY "Profit-Making Intertype Features."

Buy Intertypes! Get the most for your money — and a little edge on competitors who use less modern machines.

The Intertype "Mixer"

Write for "Profit-Making Intertype Features" and other Intertype literature. If you wish to see our local representative, please so state.

Standardized INTERTYPE TRADE MARK

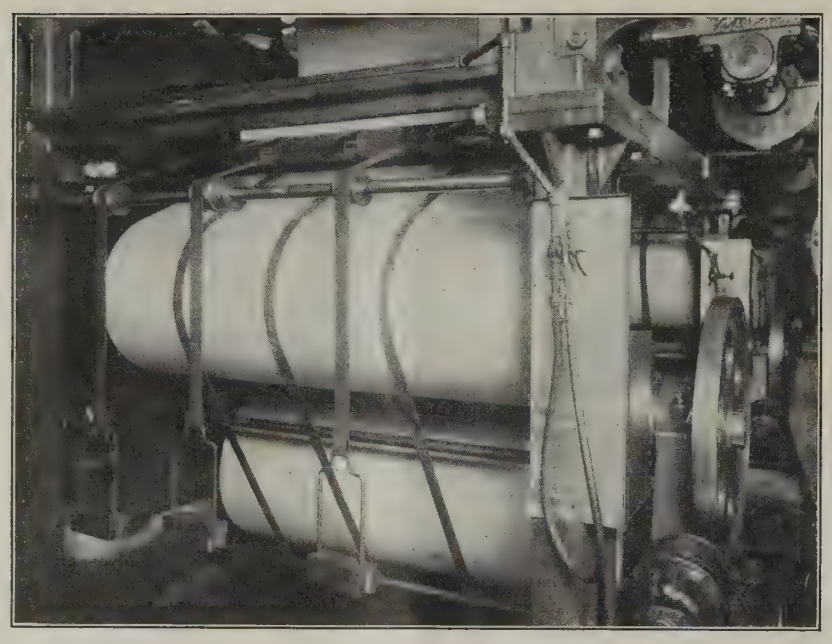
INTERTYPE CORPORATION, 1440-A BROADWAY, at 40th Street, NEW YORK

CHICAGO MEMPHIS SAN FRANCISCO BOSTON LOS ANGELES TORONTO LONDON

NEW TENSION CONTROL PATENTED BY OGDEN

Claim Web Is Held at Automatic Tension at All Times and Press Can Be Stopped Without "Run-Aheads"

A new tension control device invented by Walter Ogden, pressroom superintendent of the Cleveland Press, was recently patented. According to its designer, it "is an improvement upon the two-roll paper rack invented by Harry V. Ball of R. Hoe & Co., Inc., New York, is applicable to any style reel and disposes of ponderous belts and driving mechanism necessary to their operation."



WALTER OGDEN

"Its outstanding advantages," Mr. Ogden told EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week, "besides compactness, simplicity and positive operation, are that an absolutely automatic tension is maintained upon the web at all times, emergency stops of the press can be made from an operation speed of 300 r. p. m. or 600 papers per minute, without any 'run-ahead' of full rolls of paper that are in the press. Loading of spare rolls, splicing of rolls, etc., is done as fast as or faster than on other type reels."

As shown in the accompanying illustration, the tension proper consists of three two-inch straps attached to a spring-seated bar at the bottom, then passed around the roll at the white margin spaces (thereby preventing the "filling-up" of the plates), with a hug of 90 degrees. They are then carried over roller-bearing pulleys to a weight that is sufficient to take up all slack in the tension straps as the roll decreases in size, maintaining the 90-degree hug upon the surface of the roll at all times, producing the needed reduction in braking surface as the roll becomes small and loses weight momentum.

Mr. Ogden has been associated with Scripps-Howard papers since 1898, except for a period of 4½ years during which he was pressroom superintendent of the Cincinnati Enquirer. Rights to his invention have been sold to R. Hoe & Co., Inc.

Ogden's tension control belts operated with a Ball paper-rack in the Cleveland Press plant. Note position of belts on white margin space between pages, also weight to maintain tension as rolls decrease in size.

GRINNELL HEADS CHICAGO B.B.B.

Flint Grinnell, manager of the Better Business Bureau of Providence, R. I., has resigned to accept the management of the newly organized Better Business Bureau in Chicago, effective Sept. 15. Floriman H. Hathaway, assistant manager under Mr. Grinnell, will fill the vacancy.

NEW OFFICERS NAMED

Logansport (Ind.) Pharos-Tribune Elects G. A. Raub President

New officers of the Logansport (Ind.) Pharos-Tribune were named Aug. 30.

G. A. Raub is now president; James Digan, vice-president; Frank B. Wilkinson, vice-president; W. H. Porter, secretary, and S. O. Berman, treasurer.

Interests in the newspaper held by Mrs. B. F. Louthain and W. R. Emslie were recently purchased by Mr. Porter, Frank B. Wilkinson, Mr. Berman, Mr. Raub, James Digan, John Milcahy, Frank McHale and the following employes: John R. Dwyer, in charge of the mechanical department; H. Arthur Foltz, associate manager; Marion Swadener, editor; Marie Bahr, head bookkeeper, and Herbert C. Mull, advertising manager.

DAILY IN NEW PLANT

The Little Falls (Minn.) Daily Transcript recently occupied its new one-story $15,000 plant. The paper began as a weekly in 1875, published by H. C. Stivers. Later it was purchased by W. M. Fuller, who converted it into a daily in 1892. Upon Mr. Fuller's death in 1908 Mrs. Fuller was elected president.

SPANISH RIVER REPORT

The Spanish River Pulp and Paper Mills, Ltd., of Toronto, reports a net profit of $2,195,902 for the twelve months ended June 30. This equals $12.15 per share, earned on $18,066,500 combined shares of 7 per cent preferred and common stocks. In the previous year the net reached $2,284,571, or $12.64 per share.

U. S. PAPER OUTPUT LOWER

The July production of paper in the United States as reported by identical mills to the American Paper and Pulp Association and co-operating organizations, showed a decrease of 5 per cent as compared with June's production (following a 3 per cent increase in June over May), according to the association's monthly statistical summary of pulp and paper industry. All grades showed a decrease in production as compared with June, with one exception. During the same period, domestic wood pulp production decreased 12 per cent, this decrease being distributed over all grades, with one exception.

WYOMING PRESS ELECTS

Ross L. Alcorn of Rawlins Republican Named President

Ross L. Alcorn of the Rawlins (Wyo.) Republican was elected president of the Wyoming Press Association at the midsummer meeting held in Thermopolis recently.

L. L. Newton of the Lander State Journal was chosen secretary-treasurer. The new members of the executive committee are Theodore Wanerus of Gillette, Earl E. Hanway of Casper and P. O. Anderson of Basin.

The convention went on record as favoring the enactment of a legislative measure which will provide sufficient funds to conduct an advertising campaign on behalf of the state of Wyoming. The editors also favored an enactment of a law making it mandatory upon school boards to publish minutes of their proceedings, statements of their financial disbursements and an itemized budget showing in advance each year the proposed distribution of funds. They also recommended that legislation be enacted which will cause all charges for legal publication to be made a part of court costs and to be paid by the court.

NEW ALABAMA TABLOID

Dothan Sunday Sun Claimed to Be First Tab in State

Alabama's first tabloid newspaper, the Dothan (Ala.) Sunday Sun made its appearance Sunday, Aug. 22. Angus A. Acree is publisher and his brother, Jim Acree, Jr., formerly of the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, is editor. They were joined September 1, by W. O. Key, Jr.

The United Press Saturday night leased wire furnishes telegraphic news. A feature of the paper is the absence of an editorial page.

The paper included a 16-page news section, 8-page magazine section, 4-page rotogravure and a 4-page comic.

SINCERITY FIRST IN ADVERTISING

Like Topsy, an advertising agency often "just grows." A one-sided background or ingrown perspective, a mere brokerage attitude, combine to place the making of the dollar as the prime objective.

With a quarter century backgound of successful publishing experience, now supplemented by a six year agency record, the founder of this agency and those now associated with him have consistently followed the fundamental policy of "sincerity first in advertising."

Serving sixty clients, growing with some from small proportions and expanding others into wider spheres of activity, this agency is in a position to place its experience and knowledge at the command of others.

What our clients say about us and what we have done for them is a matter of record.

Our sphere is local, national and international. The viewpoint of the publisher is not lost sight of, and a "both sides of the fence" analysis is, in our judgment, important on any advertising problem.

WORLD WIDE
ADVERTISING CORPORATION
Established in 1919 by EMIL MAURICE SCHOLZ
303 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK
Telephone: Caledonia 5300

Don't Wait Until You Are Ready to Buy Your Equipment. Call on Cline Engineers for Consultation When Your First Rough Plans Are Being Made

In preparing drawings for a recent installation of Cline equipment for a new printing plant, our engineers discovered a basic fault in the original plans for the plant layout.

The fault might easily have been overlooked. Cline equipment, already sold to the owners of the plant, could have been installed without in any way impairing its usefulness. Yet our engineers spent many weeks on the problem and finally, under their direction, wholly new plans were drawn which will save the owners of that plant many thousands of dollars and uncountable hours of time in the future.

This is a typical example of the way Cline engineers work out a pressroom problem. They think of the installation of Cline equipment not by itself alone, but more in its relation to the whole plant layout.

It will pay you to consult with Cline engineers from the day you make your first rough plans for new plant or new equipment. You can't fail to profit from their 25 years of specialized experience.

CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO.

Eastern Office Marbridge Bldg. 47 W. 34th St. New York

Conway Bldg. 111 W. Washington St. CHICAGO

Western Office First Nat'l Bank Bldg. San Francisco Calif.

CLINE SYSTEM

The Akron Times-Press, a Scripps-Howard newspaper, offers the advertiser all of the values of the old Akron Times and Akron Press—plus a substantial circulation increase since the consolidation. The Times-Press, alone, offers adequate coverage of this rich market.

Represented by ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC., 250 Park Avenue, New York

SNAPPY NEWS "LEADS" REPLACING "LOGGY" WINDUPS OF OLD

Fundamental Change in "Who, What, When" Rule Noted by Writer—Essence of Story Now Told in Few Graphic Words

By ERROL HUNT DERBY

"THERE are six conditions which must be met in the lead of every newspaper story," Dad impressed upon me some years ago when I first entered his profession. "They are," he continued, "who, what, when, where, how and why."

And for the beginning reporter it probably is just as wise that he commit to memory those few lines from Kipling,

I keep six honest serving men
(They taught me all I knew);
Their names are What, and Why and When,
And How, and Where and Who.

But as in everything else, news writing, like news presentation, has undergone some rapid changes—some for the better and some probably otherwise.

The writing of news leads is gradually changing and it is this phase of reporting alone which I am to discuss. I am convinced the improvement in news leads has been for the better. It is hardly possible that news leads will again attain their one-time sluggishness through reporters attempting to incorporate in the opening paragraph the "serving men" of Kipling. The trend to the present "essence" style of writing these news leads has been the product of a slow, evolutionary process, so slight at times to be nearly imperceptible.

While the current form is not universally used, yet the pathway hewn by the majority of experienced news writers, feature reporters and correspondents of news associations is beginning to creep into the editorial rooms of newspapers in smaller cities and towns.

When Frederick Ramm, correspondent of the Amundsen-Ellsworth-Nobile polar flight, sent a hundred-word dispatch to his employing newspapers at a cost of about $2,000 a word, as was reported in EDITOR & PUBLISHER, it was typical of this modern trend in journalistic writing, examples of which can be culled from any city room or press association report daily.

The Ramm despatch was copyrighted by the New York Times and the St. Louis Globe Democrat. The first paragraph, telling a story for which the entire world was anxiously waiting was:

NORTH POLE, Wednesday, May 12, 1 A. M. (On Board the Dirigible Airship Norge)—We reached the North Pole at 1 A. M. today and lowered flags for Amundsen, Ellsworth and Nobile.

At 3:30 o'clock the same morning about seventy-five words were sent—and they told the complete story. The later despatch, however, is irrelevant to the thesis I have set out to define. The story certainly carried the glamour, the romance, the daring, mystery and all combined elements which are sought constantly in every news item.

Not long before the feat of the Norge a pair of Americans, Commander Byrd and his mate Floyd Bennett encircled the Polar area by aeroplane. Columns were used in its description but here is a typical lead, a United Press despatch:

OSLO, Norway, May—For the first time in history an airplane has flown over the North Pole.

Graphic? Yes.

Short? Yes, 14 words.

The same news might have been written according to my earliest instruction after such a fashion:

OSLO, Norway, May—Commander Richard E. Byrd and his flying mate, Floyd Bennett, of the United States Navy, hopped off from Spitzbergen early this morning for their first attempted flight in an airplane for the North Pole and returned 16½ hours later, tired from their stiff vigil, but radiant in the knowledge that for the first time in history an airplane had flown over the North Pole.

Perhaps it might be construed the second illustration has been overdone for the sake of emphasis. Not a bit of it. Many examples of similar complicated news leads can be found in the most casual perusal of any newspaper.

I cite the story of the North Pole conquest because it is probably the most august news story of the year. When I contend, then, that news leads are shorter, giving but a single angle, a panoramic view which exemplifies all, I do not want to base it merely on routine copy—although such would serve just as well for illustrative purposes.

The man who wrote Genesis, and in fact many of the reporters of Bible days, were stars when it came to the writing of summary leads, vividly portraying the atmosphere of the complete narrative. Genesis I, 1:

"In the beginning God created heaven and earth."

"The ending of the world, the biggest news story which will ever break, can be told in a single sentence of a few words," a veteran Pennsylvania editor barked at me when in some news story I had written my initial paragraph was a labyrinth of phraseology, complete grammatically, but out-of-tune generally with what I should have written. Incidentally his lead on that story would probably be:

"The world came to an end last night."

Press associations have been among the first to use the summary lead, a striking sentence, or an opening phrase which suggests the context of the story to follow. One news service, catering to morning newspapers, and which devotes its main report to the features in the news, is particularly appealing because of this quality.

"The business of writing the whole story in the opening sentence makes for a long, wordy introduction, introduces a lot of explanatory matter that could well follow later, and sometimes produces such an involved structure that a second or third reading is required to untangle what the writer is attempting to say," a comment in the Service Bulletin of the Associated Press said recently.

No news of an international nature was more adequately handled in recent months than the strike of British miners and trades unions. The tie-up in Great Britain was an economic disturbance, the importance of which could be understood in each nation, and especially in the United States, where suffering and depression from a recent anthracite coal strike was vivid in memory. The corps of correspondents sent to the heart of the trouble districts handled their leads similarly to these:

LONDON—Organized labor of Great Britain is in revolt.

LONDON—Fifty million people were plunged into economic chaos today as Britain's great general strike became effective.

LONDON—The largest city in the world awoke this morning to find itself as helpless as any roadside hamlet.

Thousands of words were written daily on the progress of the strike and the negotiations which finally led to settlement—but for the "man in the street," the strap-hanger on his way to work, or the house-wife busy at home with her chores—such simple sentences told much. And likewise for those whose evening rounds of pleasure places, or whose haunts, habits or desires prohibit all but a scant survey of the news of the day, similar sentences sufficed.

"After all, the most effective lead is the one which gets right down to the business of telling the news—a plain, matter-of-fact sentence of what happened. Abominable is the only term which can apply to any other method. Subordinate clauses and phrases, except where needed to clarify, are as so much dead wood," says another commentary.

In an authors' magazine recently I was much interested to read a short discussion about giving descriptions a lead. "Frequently in describing," said this writer, "the author naturally or artfully begins with the 'inclusive' or the 'characterizing' outline—our old friend the standard news lead in disguise. . . .

"In the description, as in the news story, the lead has outlined the chief particulars or aspects; and in the description, as in the news lead, the amplification will be built upon the lead. In the lead the reader has a clarifying and ordering advance-notice of what remains to be detailed."

Primarily, newspapers are published to sell. Owners are not in business for their health, no more than any other class of business individual. Dull, desultory accounts are "passe." In such a swiftly moving life as the present era of the twentieth century, modes and manners transpose rapidly. So with news writing, news presentation and news ideas.

The war period, upon which many present-day tendencies are blamed—probably for the want of a better excuse—may be considered as a contributing factor to the shorter, pictorial style of news lead. Correspondents could not mince words in sending despatches. Censorship had its effect. Cable transmission was expensive. It was quite natural that vivid and concise style should evolve.

The response of the reading public was keen. We have become a nation of headline and bulletin readers.

Having learned the rudiments of journalism in comparatively recent years, I was startled in glancing over some old newspapers when I came across an edition of the New York Herald, telling of the assassination of Abraham Lincoln.

"IMPORTANT"—that was the head, one column wide, in type of about 36 pt. which the story carried.

A girl in a bathtub gets eight columns today!

The influence of tabloid newspapers and their style, popular magazine writing and general conditions also have undoubtedly invoked a stimulating effect on current news writing.

TO LAUNCH DAILY NOV. 1

Paper for Oranges and Maplewood, N. J., Capitalized at $250,000

The Daily Courier of the Oranges and Maplewood, N. J., will begin publishing about Nov. 1, it was announced this week by Arthur T. Muir, president of the publishing company. The paper will represent an expansion of the 30-year-old Weekly Courier, owned by G. Clifford Jones. Mr. Jones has transferred his interest in the weekly to the corporation and will remain as a vice-president and publisher.

Capital stock of the daily is $250,000, of which $200,000 will be issued.

The new paper will be represented nationally by New Jersey Newspapers, Inc., New York City.

AD TIPS

Agricultural Advertisers' Service, 33 S. Clark street, Chicago. Has secured account of the Fairfield Hatchery, Lancaster, Ohio.

Aitkin-Kynett Company, 1516 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Placing account for the Orient Company, North Wales, Pennsylvania, manufacturers "Sel Amaigrissant Clarks" (Clark's Thinning Salt) and "La Rose du Bain."

George Batten Company, Inc., 383 Madison avenue, New York. Have been appointed to direct the advertising of the Adventure Magazine.

Cramer-Krasselt Company, 254 Milwaukee street, Milwaukee. Placing account for the Kitchen Craft Company, West Bend, Wisconsin, manufacturers Aluminum waterless cooking equipment.

Charles W. Hoyt Company, 116 West 32nd street, New York. Now placing account of the Rutland Fire Clay Company, Rutland, Vermont, manufacturers "Rutland" patching plaster and "Rutland No-Tar-In" roof coating.

George L. Dyer Company, 285 Madison avenue, New York. Placing account for the American Face Brick Association, Chicago.

H. K. McCann Company, 285 Madison avenue, New York. Placing account for the Chesebrough Manufacturing Company Consolidated, New York, manufacturers vaseline products.

MacMartin Advertising Agency, Inc., 500 Security Building, Minneapolis. Placing account for the Andersen Lumber Company, Bayport, Minnesota, manufacturers of window frames.

William H. Rankin Company, 342 Madison avenue, N. Y., now handling account of Orthos Tooth Paste Co., planning new campaign using newspapers.

Nelson Chesman & Co., 1127 Pine street, St. Louis. Handling account for the Goodform Manufacturing Company, St. Louis, manufacturers "Goodform" reducer-supporter.

Pratt-Moore Advertising Company, 1926 Ford Building, Detroit. Now handling account of the Zenith-Detroit Corporation, Detroit, manufacturers "Zenith" carburetors.

Fred M. Randall Company, Book Tower, Detroit. Now handling account for the Beacon Devices, Incorporated, North Tonawanda, N. Y., and the Lennon Manufacturing Company, Highland Park, Michigan.

Ruthrauff & Ryan, Inc., 136 West 31st street, New York. Placing account for the Indian Motocycle Company, Springfield, Massachusetts, manufacturers "Indian" motorcycles and bicycles.

William H. Rankin Company, Inc., Tribune Tower, Chicago. Placing account for the Nestor Johnson Manufacturing Company, Chicago, manufacturers skates.

NO department of a newspaper needs a survey more than the circulation * * * Some papers leave much of their field unworked; others get circulation that can't be made to pay * * * Much money is wasted in some departments; many more are starved * * * Scores of papers get circulation easily but don't seem able to hold; others can't get it at all * * * If your paper has any of these or other circulation ills I can find effective remedies and show YOUR OWN ORGANIZATION how to apply them * * * I'll make a survey on a contingent basis; pay me only if my findings and recommendations are satisfactory; you to be the sole judge * * * Write or wire for details and open dates * * * J. Omansky, Circulation Counsel, 614 Park Bldg., Cleveland, O.

Let us tell you about our "Iowa plan"—covering Jobber, Dealer and Consumer. Uniform cooperation by these 28 leading Iowa daily Newspapers.

Now responsive Iowa market easier than ever to reach

You know, of course, how desirable this market is—consistently prosperous and responsive year after year.

You surely know that the average wealth of Iowans is greater than that of any other state as thickly populated.

And that the living standard is unusually high. (Lowest in illiteracy. Among the very highest in educational advantages.)

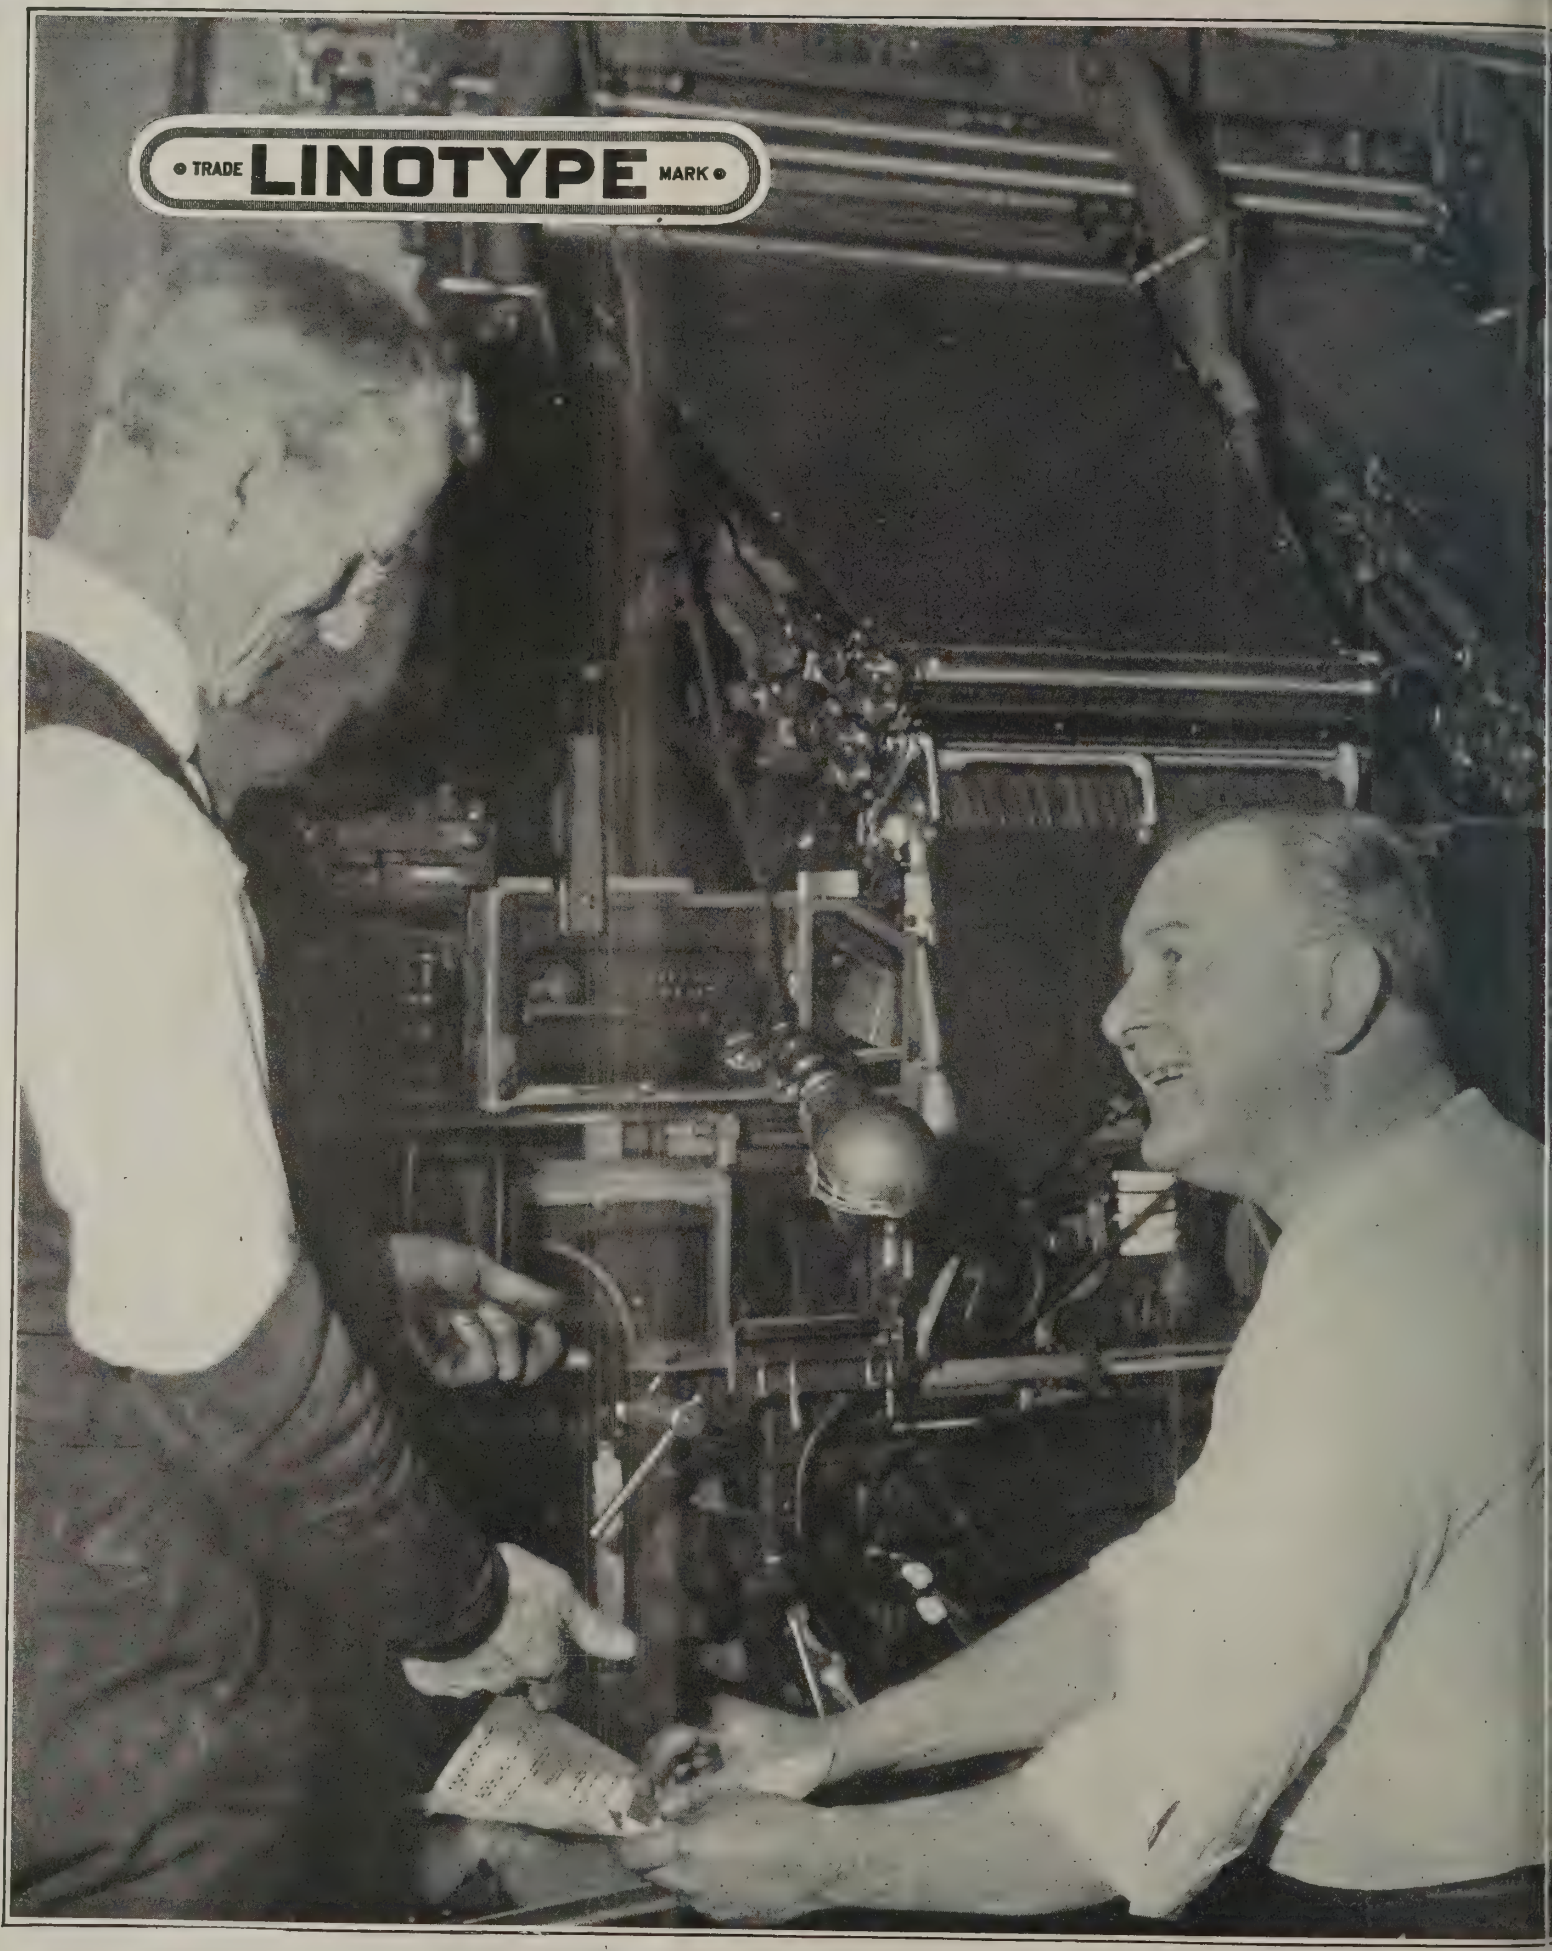
But do you know the facts about this Iowa plan, which now makes it so much easier for you to tell and sell to Iowa?

This association is composed of 28 leading Iowa daily newspapers, covering every part of the state. Total circulation is 571,151. Families in Iowa—550,000.

Cover the entire state with one transaction if you wish. One order, one plate, one billing.

Uniform marketing cooperation in all the principal centers is part of this plan.

Let us explain how this merchandising service will be fitted to meet your specific need.



THE IOWA DAILY PRESS ASSOCIATION

DAVENPORT, IOWA

Ames Tribune
Boone News-Republican
Burlington Gazette
Burlington Hawk-Eye
Cedar Falls Record
Cedar Rapids Gazette
Centerville Iowegian & Citizen
Council Bluffs Nonpareil
Davenport Democrat
Davenport Times
Des Moines Capital
Des Moines Register and Tribune
Dubuque Telegraph-Herald
Dubuque Times-Journal
Fort Dodge Messenger
Fort Madison Democrat
Iowa City Press-Citizen
Keokuk Gate-City
Marshalltown Times Republican
Mason City Globe-Gazette
Muscatine Journal
Oelwein Register
Ottumwa Courier
Sioux City Journal
Sioux City Tribune
Washington Journal
Waterloo Evening Courier
Waterloo Tribune

IOWA—WHERE EVERY FAMILY READS A DAILY NEWSPAPER

GIVE THEM THE BEST THERE IS

GIVE THEM THE BEST THERE IS

GIVE THEM THE BEST THERE IS

Composed entirely on the LINOTYPE

GIVE THEM THE BEST THERE IS

GIVE THEM THE BEST THERE IS!

¶ They're a loyal bunch; these men who make newspapers. They love the game and they love their paper with a profane devotion that you won't find equalled in any other business. And when things are going badly in the front office and the ghost ceases to make his weekly round, they'll stick to the ship as long as there is a roll of paper to feed to the presses—and weep when they write "30" on the end.

¶ Of course they'll get the paper out—somehow—with any old junk equipment that happens to be around the shop; but it won't be as good a paper as either they or you would like it to be and they won't have quite the joy in their work that is due them.

¶ For they are good workmen and a good workman deserves good tools. Only the best is good enough.

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS Brooklyn, New York CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED TORONTO

Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

GIVE THEM THE BEST THERE IS

GIVE THEM THE BEST THERE IS

..., except for the hand-set title line

32.26.6-F2

EDITORIAL

Let not him that is deceived trust in vanity: for vanity shall be his recompense.—Job; XV; 31.

"TORCHES"

NATION-WIDE controversy was occasioned by the excited public interest in the illness and death of the actor Valentino and routine, almost negligible attention to the passing of President Eliot, the accident of simultaneous occurrence causing newspaper accounts to represent, in many minds, a distortion of news values. Persons who habitually write letters to editors fairly clogged the mails with protests against glorification of a tawdry screen hero, while a great intellectual leader was slighted. The vulgarity of the age was deplored. Mob psychology was discussed. The question was raised whether clamor of the press had inflated the actor's importance in the public view, or whether public clamor was being commercialized by exaggerated and dramatized newspaper appeals to the movie masses. It was an obvious topic and we think nothing was lost by the general discussion, although many editors seem to have fallen for the false notion that the incident was a baleful sign of decadence.

We were attracted by one out-standing editorial on the subject of the death of these two American figures, appearing under the title "Torches" in the St. Paul (Minn.) Pioneer Press. So satisfactory is its conclusion and brilliant its technique that we are impelled to give it to our readers in full text:

Torches

Between sunrises the other day two men died. One of them was young, just turned thirty; the other nearly thrice that age. In their respective callings both were pre-eminent. The young man's death assumed the proportions of a national tragedy while, save for some serious-minded commentators, the old man's death was scarcely noticed.

Like the older man, the younger might also be called an educator. His classes were as wide as the world; his rostrum was the movie screen; and his subject was—sex. He took life's oldest, strongest and most turbulent emotion, presented it passionately and vividly, and his pictures had a tremendous popular appeal. Thus he coined a name for himself which denoted that he was a past master in the exposition of his subject. It was not merely the dominant theme of his art but of his life. He had figured in two divorces before he was thirty, and was, according to report, about to be married for the third time.

When he died a nation literally stood beside his bier. Even in St. Paul the newspaper telephones were burdened with inquiries about him. In his New York hospital a special corps of operators was assigned to the duty of answering those who called. After his death people were injured in the mobs which surrounded the building in which his body lay.

The old man's province was the province of the mind. To the end of a life of extraordinary length he ruled it absolutely. Few cared how much money he made; fewer cared what he looked like. In his material aspects he was unimportant. But everybody who correctly appraised him cared very deeply what he thought and what he said. For more than fifty years he taught young people—not to cultivate their emotions but to cultivate their minds. His concern was not with their bodies but with their intellects. While the young man, consciously or not, reminded us of our kinship with the animals, the older as constantly reminded us of our kinship with God. Yet, in the sense that the younger man had it, the older entirely lacked public appreciation. The serenity of his last hours was not disturbed by the bawling of the morbid. No hysterical mobs fought for the strange privilege of seeing him in death.

Which seems to suggest the upsetting conclusion that there is something very wrong indeed with our appraisal of human values; that in this instance the popular estimation of two prominent men was hopelessly awry.

But it is worth asking whether this is really so, or whether it merely seems so. Those who deal with humanity in the mass know that there is a facile road to a certain sort of success through appeals to the primitive emotions. The news writer is not surprised at such popular reactions as have attended the funeral obsequies of this young man. He would have been surprised only if the conditions had been reversed, and if the windows of the funeral chapel had been broken by mobs crowding about the death scene of the aged educator. That would not be human nature, drunk with its emotions.

But between human nature, drunk with the emotion of the moment, and human nature in sober perspective there is the same difference as between the two Phillips. Nothing is so surely mortal as a fame resting upon the celebration of the animal in man; nothing is so surely immortal as a fame based upon the triumphs of the mind. The beauty that launched a thousand ships is forgotten while the intellects of a Plato and a Socrates live on. Shakespeare endures while Nell Gwynn is a fragile remembrance. There will be a five-foot shelf of immortal books long after mankind has forgotten the very word which described the actor's fame. Human beings, when all is said and done, set their real store by those pursuits, interests and achievements which give life its calmest happiness and its deepest satisfactions; and which by their power to endure, endow us with a measure of immortality.

Platitudes these, perhaps; platitudes sometimes fiercely denied by that flaming youth of which so much is heard nowadays. But it is worth while, nevertheless, to remind ourselves that youth does not flame forever; and that the most enduring torches—those upon which mankind must rely to light its future path—are the torches kindled at the altars of the mind.

The fall crop of excellent copy paper, smudged on one side but clean and useful on the other, is now being gratuitously distributed by mooching corporations employing press agents.

SWARTZ'S SIX DON'TS"

AN attractive figure in the journalism of the day, somewhat because of his success in two great equipment organizations, and partly because of his bouyant personality and keen interest in the welfare of the press, is Harry R. Swartz, who began life as a printer's devil and is chairman of the Intertype Corporation, president of R. Hoe & Co., a director in other corporations and yet is invariably willing to give time to do a good turn for organized advertising or newspapering.

We are indebted to Forbes Magazine for an excellent success story based on the life adventure of Harry Swartz. Nowhere else in the world may a poor boy climb the ladder as does the young American of pluck and intelligence. Of course, success climbing is based on philosophy. Men do not achieve the top rungs without pursuing a policy. We learn that Mr. Swartz's philosophy was formed from a list of six "don'ts." Lest our readers miss the Forbes story we take the liberty of reproducing the half dozen rules to which Mr. Swartz has been committed during his business career:

(1) Don't fail to concentrate on the one great object in life—success.

(2) Don't lose your patience, waste your time, or scatter your energies.

(3) Don't make excuses; they are the tools of cowards.

(4) Don't forget that the man who watches the clock will never be more than one of the hands.

(5) Don't take everything on high or you will strip your gears, yet to run continually on low is extravagant; study your speed.

(6) Don't bow to defeat unless you are sure of its identity.

Every local advertising solicitor should be able to tell what a page of advertising in his paper costs per home in the trading area; every national solicitor should know that an inch of advertising in every daily in the land can be bought for approximately $1,600.

WHITE ELEPHANTS

MANY newspaper men will remember how the New York Telegram, in the days of Bennett, was brought from non-success to sound prosperity largely through the skill of a little group of advertising men who promoted the paper as a classified medium. The big discovery that the Telegram staff made was that the people of the city of New York were possessed of a bewildering assortment of articles of merchandise, ranging from trifles to important chattels, which they would gladly exchange for other articles of equal value. So the "Exchange Column" was born. There were times when the Telegram would publish page after page of classified advertisements in this class, with such weird offers as: "Lady would exchange pair of ivory opera glasses for four dozen Mason jars" or "Gentleman will trade evening suit, excellent condition, for used correspondence course in plumbing" and so forth, until the reader felt himself in a junk shop beyond the powers of a Dickens to describe.

But the "Exchange Column" was a good classified hunch, and remains so to this day. Most families are possessed of "white elephants" of furniture, dress musical instruments, and what not, which others may covet as much as the possessers desire to lose. One has but to consider his own undesired possessions to estimate the litter in the homes of a city. All of which gives rise to a suggestion which may interest classified advertising departments. Open a White Elephant column! Promote it and count increased linage this Winter.

"It's almost as costly to be on a town's 'booster list' as to be on the 'sucker list,'" sagely says William Feather.

FALLING OVER BACKWARD

DISCUSSING the "inadequacies" of the American press, in his address at the Institute of Politics at Williamstown, Andrew Ten Eyck New York lawyer, drew an invidious comparison between our papers and the intelligent presentation of the news in such journals as the Manchester Guardian, and while in this attitude of patronage the good gentleman tipped backward into one of the jolliest errors of the season. He said Manchester Guardian proofs had been sold for republication in the United States, for a short time, but as there was no demand for such high-class matter the service had been discontinued. The fact is that the Guardian news service has been appearing in the Baltimore Sun for nearly two years under exclusive rights. Not only does the Sun reprint many of its articles from proof sheets sent through the mail but its more important news despatches are cabled daily from the Sun's London bureau. The Sun regards the service highly and advertises its advantage to the reading public. All of which spoils Mr. Ten Eyke's speech and should amply restore the faith of the American public in its own relative intelligence.

Is it "direct mail" when it passes directly into a waste basket?

FALSE PROMISES

WHAT is a good store advertisement? It is copy that sells the article advertised. Do you know anything better than a piece of copy that accurately and succinctly describes an article, its quality and price and as faithfully as possible pictures it? There is nothing better. Then you believe that the mail-order catalog style is ideal? We do so believe. What do you think of synthetic copy, alluring pictures and high-flowing language, which only lure people into stores in quest of merchandise that is not on sale? We think that such advertising is an axe poised over the neck of the fabled gold-bearing goose. This is heresy, isn't it? Well, regard it as you may, but we are reasonably confident that people cannot go on forever confiding in the honor of newspapers and merchants if they are forever to continue to make false promises in newspaper advertising copy. The local merchant who is smart is accurately describing his merchandise in newspaper advertising, offering only that which he has on sale.

PERSONAL

COL. MILTON A. McRAE, associated with the late James G. Scripps in the publication of the Scripps-McRae newspapers, is in London.

W. H. Porterfield, contributing editor and part owner of the San Diego Sun, with Mrs. Porterfield, sailed Aug. 31 from San Francisco for a 16 weeks' tour of Japan, Corea and Eastern China.

George Fort Milton, editor of the Chattanooga (Tenn.) News, was a visitor in New York this week.

Elmer E. Clarke, publisher of the Little Rock (Ark.) Democrat, with his wife and daughter, sailed for abroad Saturday, Aug. 28. While in Europe they will attend the Press Congress of the World convention in Geneva-Lausanne, Switzerland, Sept. 14-19.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Glass of St. Louis will sail from New York, Sept. 4 with the delegation from the United States to the World Press Congress at Geneva, Switzerland, Sept. 14. Mr. Glass will attend as vice-president of the American Press Association.

Jonathan F. Comstock, publisher of the Cranston (R. I.) News, has returned from a three months' trip through the western states, following the convention at Los Angeles of the National Editorial Association.

William D. W. Bishop, editor and publisher of the Washington (N. C.) Daily News, with Mrs. Bishop and daughter, is spending a two weeks' vacation at Wrightsville Beach, N. C.

Charles Philip Hasbrook, publisher of the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, has been removed to his home, where he is reported to be rapidly recovering.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

J. F. BRESNAHAN, business manager of the New York World, is spending his vacation in Maine.

Charles de Forest, of the advertising staff, Springfield (Mass.) Union, has resigned to become advertising manager for the Kay Jewelry store and the Hadley Furniture store in Springfield.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

CHARLES R. CORBIN, assistant managing editor, Toledo Blade, and Mrs. Corbin are the parents of a daughter, Suzanne Joan, born recently.

Arthur S. Draper, assistant editor, New York Herald Tribune, is spending his vacation in Canada.

Albert E. Parish, former managing editor of the Seattle Post Intelligencer, is seriously ill at the Columbus Hospital, Seattle.

L. L. Stevenson, New York correspondent of the Detroit News, has returned from a several weeks' vacation in the Adirondacks.

Robert J. Casey, feature writer for the Chicago Daily News, was sent to New York to cover the Valentino funeral for the News.

Garner P. Roney, assistant city editor, New York Herald Tribune, has returned from a three week's vacation at Woodstock, N. Y.

Jerome H. Walker has resigned as vice-president and editor of the Albany (N. Y.) Sunday Telegram to become a member of the city staff of the Albany Times-Union. Edward W. Bates, one-time city editor of the Albany Evening Journal and recently of the Times-Union, succeeds Walker as editor of the Sunday Telegram.

Charles R. McLendon, formerly assistant night city editor, New York Herald Tribune, has been transferred to the day desk. Floyd Taylor, of night rewrite, has been appointed night city editor in his place.

James White has rejoined the Toledo Blade after an absence of three years.

H. I. Leyshon, news editor of the Miami Daily News, visited Knoxville, his home town, during his vacation.

Roy C. Beckman, assistant city editor, Tacoma (Wash.) News Tribune, has returned from Seattle where he spent four weeks covering the Wallace C. Gaines murder trial.

William Weaver has joined the staff of the Springfield (O.) Daily News as artist.

Lew Williams of the Spokane Chronicle, and a former Tacoma, Wash., newspaperman, is visiting in Tacoma.

Capt. Albert H. Stackpole, of the editorial staff, Harrisburg (Pa.) Telegraph, who returned from Europe recently, addressed the Rotary Club of Harrisburg Aug. 30.

Hy. Plenn, formerly of Houston, is now a reporter on the San Antonio Evening News.

Robert M. Neal, son of Robert Wilson Neal, author of "News and News Writing," is working on the staff of the Springfield (Mass.) Union for a two weeks period preparatory to opening the first journalism course at Norwich University, Norwich, Vt.

Quentin Schmitt has joined the reporting staff of the Tenino (Wash.) Independent.

Charles P. Coppin, sporting editor, Providence (R. I.) Journal is to broadcast the college football games played in Providence with Brown University through Radio Station WEAN.

Frank Baldwin, managing editor, Waco News-Tribune, has been appointed to the staff of the department of journalism, Baylor University, Waco. He will continue his duties with the News-Tribune.

Frank Mallen is acting picture editor of the New York Evening Graphic during the absence of A. Jack Coombe.

Robert K. Tindall, managing editor of Shenandoah (Ia.) Evening Sentinel, has returned from a month's trip to London and Paris.

David B. Rupley, city editor of the Reading (Pa.) Tribune until it was merged with the Reading Times, has been named city editor of the Bradford (Pa.) Era.

Sam Armstrong, staff artist, Tacoma (Wash.) News Tribune, designed and built a Mount Tacoma float on which "Miss Tacoma" will ride at the Atlantic City beauty pageant in September.

Francis Bergan, political reporter and editorial writer, has resigned from the staff of the Albany Sunday Telegram to practice law.

William F. B. McNeary has been appointed city editor of the Newark Sunday Call, succeeding the late Herbert E. Ehlers.

Bill Easterling has been named editor of the Alpine (Tex.) Industrial News, following resignation of J. M. Pouncey, editor and part owner, who sold his interest to Joe Dodson.

W. E. Reid, for five years superintendent of the Colorado (Tex.) Record plant, has been named editor of the Record, succeeding W. S. Cooper, who resigned to become manager of the Breckenridge Chamber of Commerce.

Aime Todd, formerly of the staff of The Billboard, Cincinnati, has been appointed editor of the New Lexington (O.) Tribune. He succeeds Donald Anguish, who has gone into the insurance business.

Hayti Thompson, a student at Oglethorpe University, Atlanta, has been named sporting editor of the Columbus (Ga.) Enquirer-Sun.

Nelson Randall has resigned from the Toledo Blade news staff.

William O'Boyle, for years United Press operator at Scranton, Pa., has joined the telegraph desk of the Scranton Times.

Storey Buck, northwest editor of the Spokane (Wash.) Chronicle, is a candidate for election to the state house of representatives.

(Continued on page 28)

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

DAVID DARRAH, formerly managing editor of the European edition of the Chicago Tribune, was recently transferred to the London office of the Tribune's foreign news service.

DAVID DARRAH

Starting with the Paris edition in 1918 Mr. Darrah edited that paper all during the peace conference days, the post-war economic and political conferences, the occupation of the Ruhr and other turbulent adjustments, wars, revolutions and treaty-making that have marked Europe in the last eight years.

Mr. Darrah succeeded in maintaining the American viewpoint in the columns of the European edition of the Tribune without at the same time being objectionably nationalistic to the French whose hospitality the paper enjoyed.

Keeping away from political intrigues, he succeeded in some measure in letting the French people see through the columns of the Tribune the American point of view.

The Buffalo Times

again renews its contract for the World's Best Picture page. The Times has used the Central Press page daily without a break since it was launched on August 14, 1922.

The Buffalo Courier

recently merged with the Express to make one big morning paper for Buffalo, renews its contract for the Central Press Association's Daily News Mat Service.

Buffalo, with three newspapers now instead of six, cuts out half its features but sticks with Central Press!

If your paper is not one of the more than four hundred Central Press clients, write or wire today for samples and terms.

The Central Press Association

V. V. McNITT, President — Central Press Bldg., Cleveland — H. A. McNITT, Editor and Manager

In Making Your Plans for the Fall

Do Not Fail to Consider These

METROPOLITAN

Weekly Winners

STEPHEN LEACOCK
A. A. MILNE
PINNACLE FICTION
ZENITH FICTION
EXPLOIT and ADVENTURE
PRE-EMINENT ARTICLES

•

JUVENILE

SECKATARY HAWKINS STORY
HAWKINS CLUB PAGE

•

WEEKLY COMICS

ELLA CINDERS COLOR PAGE
By Bill Conselman and Charlie Plumb

DOWN THE ROAD
By Frank Beck

DICKEY'S DOGS
By Robert L. Dickey

•

Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Maximilian Elser, Jr. General Manager — Earl J. Hadley Associate

150 Nassau St. New York City

(Continued from page 27)

Allan J. Daniels, formerly of the editorial staffs of the Boston Post and Worcester Evening Post has joined the Fall River Globe as news editor.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

RAYMOND & CORNELIUS have sold the National City (Cal.) News, a weekly, to Mr. and Mrs. George Allen, who formerly were employed by a San Diego newspaper.

Donald M. Major and Edward L. Keithahn have purchased the Tenino (Wash.) Independent from G. E. Parks. Both Major and Keithahn were journalism students at the University of Washington last year.

Hatley & Brooks have acquired from F. M. Christy the Bullard (Tex.) Herald. Roy O. Hatley, one of the new owners, formerly published the Herald.

Frank Niles has leased the Langley (Wash.) Whidby Record to C. M. Hanson.

Mrs. Mabel Krietz has purchased the Almira (Wash.) Big Bend Outlook from A. F. Wilson and William Evans.

Bambridge (O.) Observer has been purchased by the Greenfield Republican. The Republican will run a page of Bainbridge news once a week, as will the Chillicothe Scioto Gazette, which has opened an office in Bainbridge.

MARRIED

PAUL A. JOHNSON, who is associated with his father J. W. Johnson, in the publication of newspapers at Circleville, Kingston and Adelphi, O., to Miss Irene Orr of Kingston.

John N. Bailey, telegraph editor, Muscatin (Ia.) Journal, to Miss Louise Mary Jentzen, Omaha, winner of the annual bathing beauty contest last year, Aug. 21.

L. Brooks Burnside, feature writer on the Colmbus (Ohio) State Journal, to Miss Mary Gilbert, Aug. 27.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

H. P. SHANER, from San Antonio Evening News reportorial staff, to Corpus Christi Times.

Paul Dahlman, from Houston Post-Dispatch to San Antonio Express staff.

Ernest M. Simmerman, from Galesburg (Ill.) Republican-Register, to Denver Post pressroom.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENT

DENVER (Col.) POST is installing a new Goss Octuple Press.

Sheffield (Ill.) Walnut Leader has started excavation for a new building, which will be one-story high of tile construction. William Wilson founded the paper 34 years ago and it has been continued in his family since.

Goss press installations are being made in the following plants: Buffalo Times; Portland (Ind.) Sun; Dayton (O.) Journal-Herald; Racine Times-Call; Los Angeles (Cal.) Record. Final shipment has been made to the Cincinnati Enquirer of their battery of 16 Goss units.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

EUGENE (Ore.) MORNING REGISTER, 40-page Souvenir edition, Aug. 19.

Lowell (Mass.) Courier-Citizen, 64-page Centennial edition, Aug. 28.

Richmond (Va.) News-Leader, 86-page Thirtieth Anniversary edition, Aug. 28.

Port Gibson (Miss.) Reveille, semi-centennial edition, Aug. 19.

Greensburg (Pa.) Morning Review and Daily Tribune, special editions on the opening of the new Manos theatre in that city August 31.

Dayton (O.) Sunday Journal, 32-page automobile edition, Sunday, Aug. 22.

Aurora (Ill.) Beacon-News, an 80-page edition on eve of the Central States Fair and Exposition, Aug. 24.

ASSOCIATIONS

POOR RICHARD CLUB of Philadelphia will hold its annual outing Sept. 14.

Members of the GEORGIA PRESS ASSOCIATION will visit Asheville in a body Sept. 27 and 28, at which time they will be the guests of Roscoe Marvel, at Kenilworth Inn.

Members of the CHICAGO NEWSPAPER CAMERAMEN'S association visited White City amusement park in Chicago last week as the guests of the management. A banquet was part of the program.

WITH THE SPECIALS

KELLY-SMITH COMPANY, newspaper representatives, New York, have been appointed to represent the Passaic Daily News in the national field.

Imparcial, an independent afternoon newspaper of Montevideo, Uruguay, has appointed Joshua B. Powers, New York City, exclusive representative for the United States.

SCHOOLS

SIX University of Iowa journalism students covered the Iowa State Fair for the Des Moines Capital, under the direction of Charles Darlington, of the Capital staff.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

M. F. BOURJAILY, formerly assistant to E. E. Cook, editor-in-chief of the Ohio group of Scripps-Howard Newspapers, later publisher of the New Haven Union and the Yonkers Statesman, has joined the business staff of the United Press.

Julian Capers, Jr., has been transferred from the Atlanta to the Cleveland Bureau of the International News Service, replacing J. A. Cejnar who goes to Indianapolis, succeeding E. J. Seefred, resigned. John Nimmick, formerly telegraph editor of the Atlanta Constitution is taking charge for I. N. S. at Atlanta.

John Moutoux, formerly a member of the Washington staff, has been sent to Boston by United News, replacing John Mills, resigned.

S. A. Barker, manager of the Dallas bureau of United Press has entered the business office of that organization.

Howard Whitney, member of the Boston staff of the International News Service, has been placed in charge of the I. N. S. Syracuse bureau in place of John Wanhope, resigned.

L. L. Sisk, formerly on the staff of the Oklahoma City Daily Oklahoman, has been appointed manager of the International News Service bureau at Fort Worth. E. G. Studhalter, former manager has resigned.

America's Complete Newspaper

New York Herald Tribune

FLAPPER SERIALS IN 1840

Charlotte Journal of That Year Carried Melodramatic Thriller

A copy of the Charlotte (N. C.) Journal, dated March 19, 1840, was brought into the office of the Birmingham Age-Herald by A. A. Coffey, on Aug. 23. The flutter of tarleton and the crinkle of crinoline were for a moment almost audible as the leaves of the yellowed paper were unfolded.

One of the leading editorials was headed "A Union of Whigs for the Sake of Union," and seems to have a strange prophetic quality in view of the events that took place some 20 years later.

Members of the Age-Herald staff were interested on spreading out the paper to find an 1840 version of the now so popular "flapper serials." This story was entitled "The Merchant's Daughter." It ran through two breathless columns and left the reader suspended in mid-air for a week of anxious waiting for the next installment. The author's name is W. Henry Carpenter. The story was most dramatic, running something like this:

"Villain! What? Marry my daughter! Black hearted scoundrel! Now, indeed, do I know you for the same John Adderly of old. Leave the house, sir, lest the roof fall and crush the innocent with the guilty. Leave the house, I say! Your presence is pollution."

PICNIC FOR STAFF

The annual picnic of the Danville (Ill.) Commercial-News employes and their families was held Aug. 28, at Twin Lakes, Paris, Ill. A procession of automobiles, filled with members of the various departments, paraded through the town and in each village between Danville and Paris, daylight bombs were exploded, each containing a parachute with receipt for a year's subscription.

ORGANIZING TEXAS PAPER

Paul Spikes, formerly of Dalworth Park, Tex., has been named general manager of the new Mission (Tex.) Enterprise, recently organized with announcement that a $10,000 plant would be installed and publication started in September.

N. Y. SUN PROMOTION

The New York Sun will shortly issue a handsomely illustrated booklet entitled "Six Guide Posts That Point the Way to Greater Sales." It will be distributed to agencies and advertisers.

FLASHES

Gunmen may not be expert golfers, they can usually make a hole in or— Florence (Ala.) Herald.

A bean concern in California has tributed dividends in the past year ing 41 per cent, this being a new ciation of jack and the beanstalk.— troit News.

The boy who everybody said was ing to the dogs a few years ago no a man who thinks other boys are to the dogs.—Pittsburgh Chronicle graph.

The clothes of the London girl weight less than thirty ounces, it has estimated. However, the cost will timated in pounds.—Louisville Cou Journal.

Emerson's remark about the making a beaten path to a house in woods where better stuff is made certainly prophetic. — Florence (Herald.

Bandits are now using machine gu Chicago, the streets of large cities too congested for the employment of artillery.—Brooklyn Eagle.

We wonder if those biologists assert there isn't a perfect man on globe ever heard a campaign speec Memphis Commercial Appeal.

France is to blame for her pr troubles. She went to the first batt taxicabs. Any country that starts taxicabs at the beginning of a war sh expect to be staggered by the b New York Sun.

Two radio broadcasting stations going to be merged. That's nothing. have a receiving set that merges a them.—New York American.

President Coolidge says business the up-grade. That accounts for steep prices.—El Paso Times.

Mlle. Lenglen thinks less of glory of net profits.—J. J. Montague in York Herald Tribune.

Read EDITOR & PUBLISHER for all news of the publishing and advert fields.

In the Best Papers You Find the Ludlow

It is significant that the newspapers whose reputation for carrying clear, bright advertisements is the greatest, are almost invariably Ludlow-equipped.

The reason is plain when you know that the Ludlow supplies distinctive, modern faces in any size from six to sixty point, bold and extended included, cast on slugs. This accounts for the pages filled with bright, new display typefaces—every advertisement clear and distinctive.

That the Ludlow also saves the newspaper time and money are two other important considerations.

Ludlow Typograph Company
2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago

San Francisco: 5 Third Street
Atlanta: 41 Marietta Street
New York: 63 Park Row
Boston: 261 Franklin Street

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

up or down

Which way are your fuel costs going?

THE tendency of crude fuels, in all classes, is to increase in cost.

Quite the opposite with gas. Its tendency is distinctly the other way.

Gas for industry is on the up-grade in use, and on the down-grade in price.

Learn more about gas! Write today for our interesting book, "Gas—the Ideal Factory Fuel".

Four Advantages of Gas

Dependable— any time, any place, any quantity.

Controllable— exact temperatures, automatically controlled.

Economical— lowest final cost per unit of production.

Clean— comfortable factory working conditions.

American Gas Association
345 Madison Avenue, New York City

YOU CAN DO IT BETTER WITH ••GAS••

BUILDING NEWSPAPER CIRCULATION

Men Replace Carrier Boys on Tampa (Fla.) Tribune—Special Wrapper for New Subscribers Developed—Keeping the Newsie's Happy in San Diego, Cal.

MEN have replaced carrier boys delivering the Tampa (Fla.) Tribune, and, according to Don R. Davis, circulation director, the change is resulting in 99 per cent perfect delivery service.

"We use men exclusively on an independent basis with routes averaging about 500 subscribers," he said. "The retail rate of the Tribune is 20 cents a week. The wholesale rate to the carrier is 10 cents, allowing him a gross profit of $50 a week on a route of 500 subscribers.

"The city is divided into two sections, east and west, with a thoroughly experienced, capable man in charge of each district. Near the center of each we maintain a large branch office, which is headquarters for both circulation and classified advertising.

"Carriers report for their papers not later than 4 o'clock and again at 7:30 when time is given to a regular morning meeting and all stops, starts and complaints are called and charged to the proper route and plans are made for the day's work.

"So far we have found the system quite successful. We have 38 men carriers and a few boys."

The Tampa Tribune recently adopted a rule that all new subscribers should receive their papers on the first day after subscribing in a specially designed wrapper, developed by Mr. Davis.

The wrapper is printed in red on newsprint stock. As folded one side contains space for the name and address of the new subscriber, and the following statement:

"We thank you for your subscription and want to assure you of a prompt and regular delivery."

The reverse side informs the receiver that the Tampa Tribune "Is Florida's Greatest Newspaper—Its Service Is Unexcelled," and lists the telephone number. The classified department is also given space on this side of the wrapper in a box which reads: "Tribune Want-Ads Are Sure Wonder Workers. Ask Your Neighbor."

"The wrapper not only serves to show the subscriber that we appreciate his subscription, but also acts as a reminder to the carrier," Mr. Davis said. "The papers are wrapped by the district manager and given to the carrier as he reports for his papers."

"Keep the newsboys happy, and circulation managers will lose most of their nightmare troubles."

That is the conclusion of William O'Farrell, circulation manager for the San Diego Union and Tribune, whose newsies recently returned from two weeks in the mountains. The newsies work for their trip by selling subscriptions and went in relays to the camp.

More than 75 Union and Tribune boys were guests of the two newspapers this summer, and the three weeks' camp was conducted without accident or injury to anyone.

A two-fold benefit comes from the camp, said O'Farrell this week. The boys have a healthful vacation, and they work harder and with greater loyalty for their paper throughout the ensuing year. And as each summer comes around, all the carriers strive for a trip, which is the prize. O'Farrell neglects none of his carriers, however. These who fail to win a trip get a cash award for work done in soliciting. In this way all hands are rewarded and no hearts broken.

Toledo newspapers are competing in plans to reward Toledo's useful and heroic citizens.

The Toledo Blade started the movement by offering a loving cup to be presented to the Toledoan who performs the most useful piece of community work in 1926. The presentation of the Blade Loving Cup for Service will be made at the Chamber of Commerce at a public dinner which will be in the nature of a great testimonial.

During the remainder of this year the Blade will open its columns to letters from anybody in Toledo to propose a candidate for the honor. The recipient of the honor will be chosen by a committee composed of representatives of all the luncheon clubs in Toledo.

The Toledo News-Bee is offering $50 to the individual who has to his credit in any week the most outstanding personal achievement.

Anyone living in Toledo and Lucas county is eligible for the award which may be given for personal heroism, literary, artistic or professional accomplishment or civic betterment.

The first News-Bee Personal Achievement Award will be made for the week of Aug. 29-Sept. 4, and the decision of the board of award—which will consist of distinguished citizens—will be made in the News-Bee Sept. 7.

Metal boxes placed along rural mail routes on Iowa primary highways are not included in the commission ban on advertising signs on state roads, but names of the papers placing them are not permitted on the receptacles, the commission ruled this week. The Des Moines Register and Tribune which had hundreds of such boxes on its rural routes within a 50-mile radius of the city, has announced that it will obliterate the name "Register and Tribune" to avoid any charge of favoritism, although the boxes are not actual advertising signs which might obstruct the vision of motorists. The commission has ordered removal of all advertising signs along the highway under threat of destruction of such boards.

"Miss Your Paper?" asks the Utica (N. Y.) Observer-Dispatch in a one column box it publishes. The box reads:

"Arrangements have been made with the Postal Telegraph Company to deliver copies of the Observer-Dispatch to city subscribers who have not received their regular copies by 7 p. m. If the carrier boy has not delivered your Observer-Dispatch before 7 o'clock telephone that fact to the Postal, giving your name and address, and a special messenger will be sent to your residence with a copy. No charge is made for this service."

The Cleveland (O.) News is likewise solicitous.

"Maybe We're at Fault," it admits in the headline of an office advertisement, which continues:

"If the R. F. D. mailman fails to deliver your copy of the News regularly each day, write the circulation department, the News, Cleveland, O. The blame probably lies with us instead of with him. Mistakes will happen in the best regulated newspaper offices you know."

In a city where the treasure hunt is still somewhat of a novelty only to be indulged in by a favored few, the Seattle Star organized a paper chase and treasure hunt for all boys in Seattle under 15. The hunt started Thursday morning, Aug. 19, at the Washington park ball grounds on Lake Washington at 1:30 in the afternoon. The paper-strewn route followed by the boys covered three miles and there were five prizes at the end for the first five to reach there. Also somewhere along the route the treasure was hidden and lay waiting for the first boy to find it.

The Vancouver Province recently h a Sunday story in its magazine secti entitled "Zero Hour for the Newsi showing how the paper is distribut after it leaves the press room. H your editorial department worked t one lately?

An Ohio newspaper has made tour camps on the main highways circulati sub-stations with favorable results.

Avard L. Richan, physical director the Lewiston, Me., Y. M. C. A., h resigned his position, effective Aug. to become circulation manager of t Lewiston Daily Sun and Lewiston Ev ning Journal. The corps of newsbc on the Sun and Journal in Lewiston a surrounding communities includes abc 500 boys. Plans are under way to e large greatly the welfare work now t ing done among the boys.

The moral and physical welfare the Sun-Journal boys will be promot through the weekly newsboys' bulle and the monthly Sun-Journal boys' se ice magazine as well as by personal cc tact.

Three hundred dollars in prizes are t ing offered by the Chicago Eveni American in a subscription conte Eastman kodaks are being given aw for one new six months' subscripti The cash prizes are being given the best pictures taken with the 5,(cameras which are given away for n subscriptions. The first prize is $100 a there are 100 prizes in all.

CABLE LANDED IN U. S.

The American end of the newest A lantic cable was dragged ashore at Ro away Beach, near New York City, t week by workmen of the Western Uni Telegraph Company. Its Eastern ter nus is at Penzance, England, and it cov a stretch of 3,400 nautical miles. It the 19th cable spanning the Atlantic, a will have a sending capacity of 2,500 l ters a minute.

FOR PROMPT SERVICE

TYPE

BORDERS ~ ORNAMENTS ~ BRASS RULE

Printers' Supplies

KELLY PRESSES ~ KLYMAX FEEDERS ~ PAPER CUTTERS
HAMILTON WOOD AND STEEL EQUIPMENT, INCLUDING OUR AMERICAN CUT-COST EQUIPMENT

Carried in stock for prompt shipment at the following Selling Houses of the

American Type Founders Company

BOSTON	RICHMOND	DETROIT	MINNEAPOLIS	SAN FRANCISCO
NEW YORK	ATLANTA	CHICAGO	KANSAS CITY	PORTLAND
PHILADELPHIA	BUFFALO	CINCINNATI	DES MOINES	SPOKANE
BALTIMORE	PITTSBURGH	ST. LOUIS	DENVER	WINNIPEG
	CLEVELAND	MILWAUKEE	LOS ANGELES

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

Seven Rules to "Make the Good Want-Ad Good" — National Better Business Bureau to Use Index Cards in Classified Service

SEVEN rules to "make the good want-ad good" are thus listed by the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, of which Charles W. Nax, president of the Association of Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers, is classified director:

1—Think carefully about your proposition.
2—Direct your selling efforts at the individual.
3—Be specific. Use colorful words. Avoid generalities.
4—Tell the whole story.
5—Emphasize the best feature of your offer.
6—Mention price.
7—Make answering as easy as possible.

The classified advertising service of the National Better Business Bureau, New York, will switch from mimeograph letter reports to printed index cards of standard three by five size, meeting the demands of classified managers. Approximately 1,000 newspapers are now using the National Better Business Bureau's service, it was announced.

The New York Times handled the current "used car problem" with the following promotion advertising copy this week, headed "A Mile and a Half of Available Automobiles:"

If all the used cars advertised on a recent Sunday in the New York Times Automobile Exchange were placed end to end in a continuous line, they would extend approximately a mile and a half. This estimate is based on the actual cars listed in the advertisements. In addition many dealers offer for sale "other cars of standard makes."

Among used automobiles advertised daily and Sunday in the Automobile Exchange of the Times are many fine cars that have had practically no use. Others have been reconditioned, reupholstered and freshly painted and in appearance and mechanical equipment are ready for long service.

The care exercised by the New York Times in acceptance of advertising has created a confidence among readers that has brought good results to advertisers. The Times urges readers to report promptly any advertisements that may have escaped its censorship and which appear to be misleading or otherwise untrustworthy.

An interesting story is told by Prof. H. F. Tompson, first head of the Massachusetts Agricultural College field station, of how he built up a profitable market gardening business through classified advertising in the Pawtucket (R. I.) Times.

Prof. Tompson's farm is in Seekonk, Mass., four miles from Pawtucket. He says that 500 retail customers come to his door every week, all in response to the newspaper advertising.

Prof. Tompson has constantly urged Boston gardeners to advertise in newspapers the superiority of their fresh, nearby produce and now he is practising the idea himself with excellent results.

This opens up a new field for advertising, as well as a new method of making farming more profitable.

Perhaps your telephone ad receiving department isn't being used as much as you would like. The Canton (O.) Daily News prints a mail order blank on its classified page to prompt prospective advertisers to send in their copy. The blank, ruled off with dotted line to be cut out and mailed to "Want-ad Headquarters" furnishes space for the name of the advertiser, address, number of days to be run, and the text.

WITH THE GENERAL ADVERTISERS

New Method of Localizing National Copy for Newspaper Use—Music Merchants Talk of $1,200,000 Piano Campaign—Seattle Salmon Packers Boosted Sales

A NEW way of localizing national copy is being tried out by the Lepel Ignition Corporation, New York, in a test campaign being placed in newspapers in five cities by the William H. Rankin Company, New York and Chicago advertising agency.

Copy is sent to newspapers direct by the agency and is not placed by the dealers. A blank space, however, is left as shown for a local illustration suggested by the caption, which in the particular advertisement pictured will show Utica, N. Y., dealers watching the Lepel converter in operation.

About $1,200,000 is expected to be invested by piano dealers and manufacturers during the next three years under the auspices of the National Association of Music Merchants, New York, in a co-operative campaign to create piano interest. Leading manufacturers have pledged $200,000 a year, it is claimed, and retailers will match this with an equal sum.

The Associated Salmon Packers of Seattle, Wash., reported this week that more than 1,100,000 cases of salmon were sold during a national newspaper advertising campaign this year as compared to 205,000 cases during a corresponding period in 1925, when no advertising was used. The campaign was placed in 50 newspapers.

The advertising campaign also resulted in an increase of 445 per cent in pink and chum salmon sales for the first six months of 1926 over the same period in 1925, officials of the organization report. It has reduced the carry-over on these grades of fish from 1,134,000 to 378,000 cases, the lowest since the war.

Total sales for pink and chum salmon for the year ended July 1 were 4,500,000 cases, exceeding that of the previous year by 750,000 cases.

The account is handled by Strang & Prosser of Portland. Newspapers were the principal medium employed.

Edward S. Morse has been appointed to the advertising and sales promotion staff of the Pacific Mills, Boston, and will make his headquarters in the New York office. He was formerly advertising director of Saks Fifth avenue, and before that advertising director of Lord & Thomas, both New York department stores.

C. A. Tucker has been appointed assistant advertising manager of the Hickey-Freeman Company, men's clothing, Rochester, N. Y. His position in the company is a new one, necessitated by the rapid expansion of the advertising department.

H. M. McCarger, advertising manager of B. Kuppenheimer & Co., Chicago clothing manufacturer, has resigned. He has not yet announced his future plans.

Lipton's Tea started a new campaign Aug. 16, using newspapers from Boston to San Francisco. Copy is based on short pithy messages over the Thomas J. Lipton signature. William H. Rankin Company, New York, places the account.

Florida Building Permits Lead the Country

Florida's building program during 1925, considered in relation to the population of the state, is without parallel in the history of the world.

It is conservatively estimated that this state during 1925 spent more than $400,000,000 in the construction of new buildings.

According to one of the most reliable statistical organizations, the contemplated new work reported during the past year amounted to $610,498,400.

Still more building would have been done had it not been discouraged by railroad embargoes which made it impossible to secure necessary materials.

And Florida is just beginning to build.

This fact merely indicates the great buying power of Florida and the important market that awaits the manufacturer here.

Reach this market by use of the most complete and economical media—the Associated Dailies of Florida.

ASSOCIATED DAILIES of Florida

510 Clark Building Jacksonville, Florida

Bradenton News
Clearwater Sun
Daytona Beach Journal
Daytona Beach News
Deland Daily News
Eustis Lake Region
Ft. Myers Press
Ft. Myers Tropical News
Ft. Pierce News-Tribune
Ft. Pierce Record
Gainesville News
Gainesville Sun
Jacksonville Florida Times-Union
Jacksonville Journal
Key West Citizen
Kissimmee Gazette
Lakeland Ledger
Lakeland Star-Telegram
Lake Worth Leader
Melbourne Journal
Miami Daily News
Miami Herald
Miami Tribune
New Smyrna News
Ocala Central Florida Times
Orlando Morning Sentinel
Orlando Reporter-Star
Palatka News
Palm Beach Daily News
Palm Beach Post
Palm Beach Times
Pensacola Journal
Pensacola News
Plant City Courier
St. Augustine Record
St. Petersburg Independent
St. Petersburg News
St. Petersburg Times
Sanford Herald
Sarasota Herald
Sarasota Times
Stuart Daily News
Tampa Times
Tampa Tribune
Winter Haven Chief

WOMEN IN ADVERTISING AND JOURNALISM

Miss Kate Webber Claims to Be Only Woman Exchange Editor in the World—Priscilla Ring Sent to Turkey by A. P.—Olga Samaroff Honored

MISS KATE WEBBER, exchange editor and club editor of the Chicago Tribune, claims the distinction of being the only woman exchange editor of a daily newspaper in the world. And that is not at all what she started out to be.

KATE WEBBER

Miss Webber had her first newspaper experience on the Ft. Smith (Ark.) Southwest American. She went to Chicago at the outbreak of the war to do clinical work in a children's hospital. She was about to return home at the conclusion of this work, when she obtained a job as assistant society editor on the Tribune. After she had been there a month, the society editor became ill and Miss Webber, though green and inexperienced, was forced to take over all the duties.

Later she was made club editor of the paper. In 1922 she gave up working on society news to become exchange editor, and reads 170 different papers a day.

Miss Webber culls the best of the editorials, dramatic and music revues, and features of the agricultural, financial and sporting departments. These sections she sends to the corresponding departments of the Tribune so that the department editors are kept constantly in touch with the material bearing on their work which appears in other newspapers.

Miss Priscilla Ring sailed recently from New York to become active correspondent for the Associated Press in Constantinople. She had formerly been a teacher in a girls' college in the Turkish capital and at that time had supplied mail stories to the A. P. Her success then resulted in the appointment to regular staff member.

Olga Samaroff, music critic of the New York Evening Post, was this week selected by the women's board of the Sesquicentennial in Philadelphia as the Pennsylvania woman who has made the most outstanding contribution to music.

Mazie Clemens, reporter of the New York World, was questioned by Inspector Underwood in the Hall-Mills murder case this week and made an affidavit in which she told of seeing Henry Carpender take some papers and a desk drawer from the Hall home on the Sunday after the bodies were found. Miss Clemens was assigned to the story four years ago by the World.

Mrs. F. G. Bonfils, "Annie Laurie" of the San Francisco Examiner and syndicate writer left for a holiday in Europe on Aug. 25. She will return next March.

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

New Advertising Business Formed in Boston—William Zwietusch Joins Geyer Company, Dayton—A.A.A.A. Announces New Convention Dates

A NEW advertising business has been established in Boston under the name of Wolcott & Holcomb, Inc. Roger Wolcott, Charles A. Holcomb and L. E. Gardner are founders.

Mr. Wolcott, formerly of Brenninger & Wolcott, Inc., Boston, is president; Mr. Holcomb, formerly with the Smith-Endicott Company, Boston, is vice-president, and Mr. Gardner is treasurer.

William Zwietusch, representative of the Crowell Publishing Company, formerly with Henri, Hurst & McDonald, has joined the staff of the Geyer Company, Dayton agency as an account executive.

The Geyer Company also announces two additions to its publicity department. They are H. A. Ruby, formerly city editor of the Louisville Times and H. A. Layport, formerly managing editor of the Lima Gazette.

Raymond Peck's musical show "Castle In The Air" which has had a run in Chicago since early last fall, opens in New York on Labor Day, Sept. 6, at the Selwyn Theatre.

Peck was associated with the World Wide Advertising Corporation until the play was ready to be produced and to which he is now devoting all of his time.

On Tuesday, Sept. 7, a dinner will be given to Mr. Peck by his former associates of the World Wide Agency and later in the evening the entire agency staff will also be guests of Emil Maurice Scholz, president of the Corporation, at a theatre party to see Mr. Peck's show.

W. Frank McClure, vice-president of Albert Frank & Co. and well-known advertising man of Chicago, has been elected to the board of trustees of Chautauqua Institution, Chautauqua, N. Y.

Robert E. Kane has resigned as account executive of the Chappelow Advertising Company, St. Louis, to become advertising manager of the Union Electric Light & Power Company, St. Louis, effective Sept. 20.

James O'Shaughnessy, executive secretary of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, this week announced new dates for the association's annual convention as Oct. 27 and 28 at the Mayflower Hotel, Washington, D. C. The A. A. A. A.'s national executive board will meet at the same place Oct. 26.

Frank Rimm has joined the staff of Edward M. Kelly, Inc., Buffalo advertising agency.

Frank M. Orchard has become associated with the Gardner Advertising Company, St. Louis. He was formerly western manager of Adventure and Everybody's Magazine.

Willard Andrews, for the last eight years with the George Batten Company, Inc., New York agency, has joined the staff of the McGraw-Hill Catalogue.

The engagement of Melvyn R. Gronberg of the J. Walter Thompson Advertising Company, Chicago, to Miss Gertrude Elizabeth Rayner of Elgin, Ill., was announced last week. The wedding will take place Oct. 2, in the Church of the Redeemer, Elgin.

J. R. McKinney, recently with Van Name & Hills, Inc., New York City, has joined McLain-Simpers Organization, Philadelphia, as Art Director. He was formerly with the Livermore & Knight Co., Providence, R. I.

S. E. Kiser is now with Edwards, Ewing & Jones, Inc., New York advertising agency. Until recently he was account executive with Frank Seaman, Inc., New York.

When a publisher decides to accept our complete checking proof service he usually has two objects in mind. First, he wants to solve that irritating problem of "requests," complaints, held-up accounts, etc. Second, he wants to give his agencies and advertisers full co-operation and stop a lot of unnecessary contraversy over this checking detail.

He succeeds in accomplishing both objects just as soon as he employs us to assume the entire responsibility.

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.

538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO — 79 Madison Ave. NEW YORK

Says Dr. Salov, addressing the editor of the Newark Evening News: "It would be u... ing. A happy medium has been effected. It is easier to read than seven point ... every one interested in the conservation of vision; for it is the accumulated unnecessary strain on the eyes, due to the extremely small and poor type used in many newspapers, that ... the day when artificial ... though not ... of the typ... last few ... ter t... and ... ab... t... ders gives good legibility even wh... solid. Cast on seven point bod... Point Ionic gives the effect ... leaded—and with a de... word-count over the ... The first paper ... as the Evening ... , N. J. ... a trial of s... ... ne man- ... t of th... ...re enthusi- ... , and readers ... ls of commen- ... e of the most appre- ... oseph H. Salov, a lead- ...st, and past president of ... Optometric Association. ... addressing the editor of ...ning News: "It would be ... or any one else who ...unt of good that will ... recent change in the ... use in the makeup of ...s was not recognized, ... so acknowledged by ...ted in the conservation ...is the accumulated un- ... on the eyes, due to the ...l and poor type used in ...pers, that hastens the day ...al aid must be sought. Al- ...versed in the nomenclature ... you have been using for the ...ays, it is of a style and charac- ...t immediately makes itself felt, ...is far more readable and comfort- ...le than the former style. I am sure that there are many thousands of readers who, possibly unknowingly, feel the added comfort." After several years of investigation and experimentation, particularly ac... of newspaper s... advantage of t... ation of visio... ut is restf... onotor...

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

Study the design of this NEW face

Linotype 6½ Point Ionic No. 5

See how perfectly it meets the difficult requirements of modern newspaper printing conditions. Notice the full, round contours of the letters; no "pin holes" or sharp corners to fill up with ink; no fine lines to break down in stereotyping.

Ask the nearest Linotype Agency for copies of newspaper set in this face and compare it with the body type you are now using both for legibility and word count. You will find it easier to read than 7 point faces and that it gives the same word count as a 6 point.

The 6½ Point Ionic is made with italic and small caps and also in combination with Bold Face No. 2.

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY

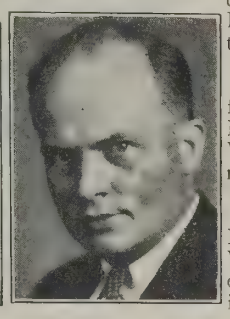
BROOKLYN, NEW YORK

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS

CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD



Ferguson Makes Important NEA Service Appointments—National Better Business Bureau Has a Syndicate Offer—Bruce Barton to Write Editorials

ANNOUNCEMENT of the appointment of James W. Dean as business manager and Herbert W. Walker as editor of NEA Service was made by Fred S. Ferguson, president of NEA this week.

Leon M. Siler, of the New York staff, has been made managing editor in Cleveland, succeeding Walker. Ernest Lynn has been appointed fiction editor, and will have charge of NEA's fiction production.

HERBERT W. WALKER

J. W. DEAN

In the appointment of Dean, who succeeds Winslow Abbey, vice-president and business manager, resigned, recognition was given a young man who has come up through the ranks of NEA. Dean is 33. His first newspaper experience was with the Cincinnati Post. From this desk he came to NEA, serving first as general utility man in Cleveland, assistant in New York, then as New York manager, and finally as head of the editorial department.

Walker, Siler and Lynn are also NEA men of several years experience.

Bruce Barton, advertising agent-author, has signed to write a weekly editorial for the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York. Raeburn Van Buren will illustrate the feature.

The National Better Business Bureaus, 383 Madison avenue, New York, has prepared a series of 23 stories entitled "Tales of Frauds and Fakers." Profits accruing from the series will be used in preparation of another series of financial fake stories, Holland Hudson, in charge, announced.

Zoe Beckley, feature writer, will sail for abroad Sept. 11, to return to this country with Queen Marie of Rumania, who writes the daily "Queen's Counsel" for Famous Features Syndicate, Inc., New York. Miss Beckley was the newspaper woman who first interested Her Majesty in writing for American newspapers. She will cover the royal tour for Famous Feature clients.

"Gamin" by Robert Terry Shannon and "And So They Were Married," by Ann Lisle, are two new serial announcements from King Feature Syndicate, Inc., New York.

James Kerney's "Political Career of Woodrow Wilson" has been made into a series of seven weekly articles for syndication by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, Inc., New York.

"Ben Webster's Career," daily adventure strip by Edwin Alger, will succeed "Bound to Win," scheduled to stop Oct. 4. Bell Syndicate, Inc., New York handles it.

Harry Staton, manager, and Clare Briggs cartoonist, of the New York Herald Tribune Syndicate, will leave for a tour of France Sept. 25, on the S.S. France.

Bruce Bairnsfather, "Old Bill" creator, has a new comic character he calls "Algy." McClure Newspaper Syndicate is introducing both to newspaper readers.

"Tommy" Gibbons will cover the Dempsey-Tunney bout for Bell Syndicate, Inc.

The O'Dell Newspaper Service will shortly offer a daily ten weeks' service called "Uncrowned Kings," by H. Irving King. They are sketches of dictators throughout the world.

Hendrik Van Loon has created a new feature for the Christy Walsh Syndicate, New York, called "Famous Monuments." Van Loon sailed this week for Europe to return late this fall.

Oscar Hitt, formerly with Wheeler-Nicholson Syndicate and the New York World Syndicate, is now handling his own comic feature. Associated with him is Maurice Workstel, art critic.

Christy Walsh, manager for Babe Ruth as a syndicate writer, is also managing the Bambino in a $100,000 vaudeville contract just signed.

DAILY MERGES TRI-WEEKLY

Fredericksburg (Va.) Star and Free Lance Combined

Effective Sept. 1, the Fredericksburg (Va.) Free Lance, tri-weekly, and the Daily Star, afternoon, both published by the same company, were combined into an afternoon paper known as the Free Lance-Star.

Although issued from the same plant, the circulations of the two papers were separate. Advertising rates have been adjusted to conform with the enlarged circulation.

The Free Lance was started in 1885 and the Daily Star first appeared in 1893.

Josiah P. Rowe, Jr., is manager of the Free Lance-Star.

OHIO PAPER SUSPENDS

P. M. Cullinan, who has published the New Lexington (O.) Herald for more than 40 years has suspended that paper in the interests of his health and retired. The equipment of the Herald has been taken to New Concord, O., and the subscription list has been taken over by the New Lexington Tribune.

IOWA PAPER INCORPORATED

Articles of incorporation were granted last week to the Sac City (Ia.) Sun, which recently absorbed its only other rival in the local weekly field, and is now organized with $40,000 capital. S. M. Stouffer is president; Irene Stouffer, vice-president, and S. A. Stouffer, secretary-treasurer.

Our Customers Write Our Ads

Kane, Pa., Republican Says—

"Our DUPLEX MODEL A press shows absolutely no wear despite its continuous use for seven years."

DUPLEX PRESSES

FOR ALL NEWSPAPERS

Duplex Printing Press Co.
BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

Imperial METAL

Smooth Running
—that's the Plus Plan Shop

YOU can almost tell at a glance whether a shop uses the Imperial Plus Metal Plan. Everything in that shop is running along smoothly. Business manager, shop superintendent, head stereotyper, machinist, machine operators—all are happier when the Plus Plan is on the job.

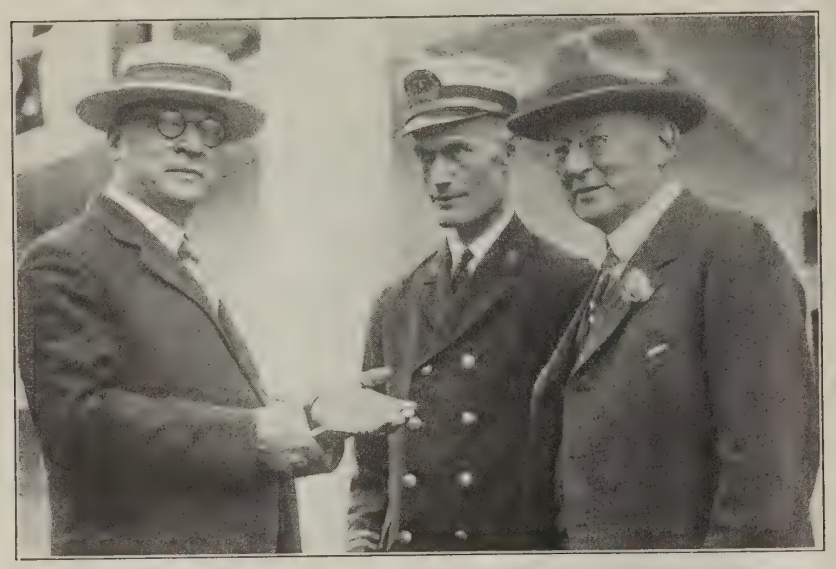
And why shouldn't they be? Schedules are adhered to to the fraction of a second. Machine and metal troubles are eliminated. A better looking sheet is brought out. It's a better satisfied shop all the way 'round.

The Imperial Plus Metal Plan is used in thousands of newspaper shops. First, because it keeps type metal in A-1 condition at all times, thereby minimizing troubles—second, because it gives type metal many years of additional life, thereby cutting metal costs.

If your shop isn't running just as smoothly as it should or if your metal costs are too high, send for a copy of the Plus Plan.

IMPERIAL TYPE METAL CO.

Manufacturing the following metals:



LINOTYPE MONOTYPE INTERTYPE STEREOTYPE
ELROD LUDLOW LINOGRAPH THOMPSON

Philadelphia Cleveland New York Chicago

BEST BY ACID TEST
TRADE MARK REG.

A. P. HONORS RADIO OPERATOR WHO FLASHED PACIFIC SHIPWRECK STORY

(Left to right) Joseph R. Knowland, Stedman F. Todd and Paul Cowles

STEDMAN FISKE TODD, radio operator on the Dollar liner President Wilson was honored by the Associated Press at a luncheon aboard the ship Aug. 25, for sending on Feb. 19, last, a description of the rescue in mid-ocean of 14 survivors of the Japanese freighter Daishin Maru, who had drifted 20 days after abandoning their stricken ship.

The story was first flashed by the tanker Java Arrow which picked up the survivors. But the graphic, though brief, story of the wreck and the rescue was relayed by Todd to the A. P. in San Francisco through the Federal Telegraph station.

Paul Cowles, superintendent of the Western division of the Associated Press, presided at the luncheon, and a handsome watch appropriately inscribed was presented the radio operator by Joseph R. Knowland, publisher of the Oakland Tribune and an A. P. director.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

PRESS AND SCHOOLS

To Editor & Publisher: The editorial "Call to Public Duty" in the Editor & Publisher for August 14 is one of the best I have ever seen on education. Expressions like this help to unite the two greatest educational forces of modern times—the press and the schools.

Joy Elmer Morgan,
Editor, Journal of the National Editorial Association of the U. S.

NEWSPAPER PROMOTION

To Editor & Publisher: I was much interested in the August 28 article in your excellent publication entitled—"Kansas City Star Office Advertising Scheduled and Paid For."

In this same connection I believe you will be interested to know that a similar ruling prevails on the Cleveland Plain Dealer where the classified budget, aside from the display, represents $104,000, $80,000 of which is spent in the Plain Dealer's own columns.

Naturally these figures are not included in the total volume of advertising carried by the Plain Dealer but the linage is for office purposes charged the same as any other advertising and is considered an excellent investment by the Plain Dealer.

In the same connection, I believe you will be interested to know that when the late Victor Lawson started a promotion campaign in 1913 the office advertisements were given preference over paid advertising and in the Friday issue of each week it was necessary to leave out paid advertisements in order that the office schedule could be maintained intact.

In my opinion the wisdom for such a program was admirably summed up in a note of instructions which William Randolph Hearst sometime ago sent to his editorial staff:

"If advertising is a good thing for any business, it ought to be a good thing for the newspaper business; and there is no reason why we should deny our business the advantages which we allow other businesses to have.

"The only people who seem to undervalue advertising are the people who deal in it; and this in the face of the fact that the newspapers which do advertise themselves, are the most successful publications in the country. The cause of that success can be directly traced to campaigns of advertising and promoting their own product.

"Now, I do not maintain that promotion advertising is as necessary to a newspaper as it is to other businesses. My contention is that it is a great deal more necessary to a newspaper than it is to other businesses, and that our difficulty is not that we cannot afford to put it in our paper but very obviously that we cannot afford to leave it out of our paper.

"I insist upon our advertisements going in the paper, if I must put it that way, even if other people's advertisements have to be left out. And I insist upon a proper amount of promotion going into outside papers."

It is a gratifying sign to see progressive publishers carrying out in actual performance what their advertising representatives have so long preached to local and national advertisers.

In connection with your comments on the Star's campaign, we find pardonable pride in the fact that the Byran Organization is assisting in furnishing the promotion schedule for both the Kansas City Star and the Cleveland Plain Dealer, our second arrangement for the Chicago Daily News having expired in July.

Very sincerely yours,
W. G. Bryan.

AFTER SEPT. 15th

"AMBITIOUS AMBROSE"
By HITT
"DUCKVILLE DOINGS"
By OSCAR
"HI-WAY HENRY"
By HITT

NOW RUNNING IN 50 PAPERS, WILL BE RELEASED AS INDEPENDENT FEATURES. FOR TERRITORY, WRITE OR WIRE,

WORKSTEL-HITT FEATURES
117 West 46th St., New York
Tels. Bryant 8889 or 8890.

Still Gaining!

The net paid average daily circulation for THE BALTIMORE NEWS for April was 124,636—the highest under its present management.
The net paid average for the American was 57,503.
You need these papers to cover Baltimore, they reach more than half the City.
Sold separately or in combination.

THE BALTIMORE NEWS
and
Baltimore American

ANNOUNCEMENT
To National Advertisers and Advertising Agencies
The National Advertising Departments of
New York Evening Journal
Baltimore Evening News
Baltimore American
Washington Evening Times
Washington Herald
Atlanta Evening Georgian
Atlanta Sunday American
are combined with offices in New York—Chicago—Detroit

New York Office:
W. G. HOBSON, Eastern Manager
2 Columbus Circle
Telephone: Circle 5400

Chicago Office:
F. E. Crawford
Western Manager
913 Hearst Bldg.

Detroit Office:
Franklin Payne
Representative
1351 Book Bldg.

All under direction of:
JAMES C. DAYTON, Publisher
NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

America's most select Circulation
The Palm Beach Times
FRANK P. FILDES PUBLISHER

2 Good Papers made into a Better 1

The Free Lance, tri-weekly,
and
The Daily Star, afternoon, issued by the same company in Fredericksburg, Va., were combined Sept. 1st into

The Free Lance-Star

an afternoon paper with the advantages of both the former publications.
Advertisers can now reach both city and rural readers through the one medium at a lower proportionate than before.

The Free Lance-Star
Fredericksburg, Va.

Courtesy of Johnson Features

Mary Gardner
as
"The Petter"

The famous Beatrice Burton serials have won many friends for Johnson Features, Inc.

On a par with the high character of the stories are the photographic illustrations used in conjunction with them.

With his vast syndicate experience to stand him in good stead, Mr. Johnson naturally knew that it was one thing to secure the kind of illustrations he wanted, but that it was just as important that his clients be able to reproduce them in their papers to best advantage.

So Mr. Johnson quite naturally turned to Certified Dry Mats.

The reasons? Very simple.

They have found Certifieds to be the most economical to use; that with our mats they can give their clients the best kind of service; and that as for quality of reproduction Certifieds are in a class by themselves.

Certifieds will appeal to you in the same way, and for the same reasons.

Why not let us tell you how Certifieds can serve you. There's no obligation for getting the facts.

CERTIFIED DRY MAT CORPORATION
340 Madison Avenue
New York, N.Y.

For wet mat printing with DRY MAT facility — use Certifieds
Made in the U. S. A.

]ESSMEN OFFER TO TEACH EMPLOYERS

nin's Trade Schools Thrown Open o "Increase Managerial Efficiency" .-Maj. Berry Re-elected President for Nineteenth Term

Ay publisher or employing printer or nf either who desires to take a course e technical trade schools operated by e nternational Printing Pressmen and stants' Union of North America may , as a result of a decision at the re- n thirty-first biennial convention held ressmen's Home, Tenn.

Je committee on officers' reports said: ire is much inefficiency in the man- eal conduct of newspaper and printing ns in America, and much of this is eto the complete lack of knowledge c the part of the owners of the busi- s as to the physical and mechanical qrements of the business. It would ood for us and good for the business very owner of every printing and paper office in America better appre- a d the responsibilities and the possi- les of the printing department. The c justify President Berry's recom- elation that our Technical Trade ools be opened to the owners and to esons and heirs of industry upon the r basis as our schools are open to e bers of our organization."

ther action by the convention in- ued:

nphatic denunciation of Communists nother un-American influences.

oard of directors to continue in full rority in the newspaper industry in e York City with unlimited power to ay out all the details embodied in the ract with the New York publishers.

outlaw newspaper strike in New c in 1923 was injected into the con- ion through the report of the pres- let, dealing with the continuation of rol of New York Newspaper Press- e's Union No. 2.

he committee on officers' report said "we will not now nor are we con- ing the question of a further regula- o in the work week. The industry is led to, and this international union, e judgment of your committee, should to it that it is given a rest and free- o from agitations that are totally out f une with logic."

he engineering department, it was an- ced, grants to more than 600 daily espapers in America free technical ice and advice in meeting the defects f peration. T. E. Dunwody, head of Technical Trade School development, it is the desire "to eliminate every te in industry."

was stated that no protest is made inst the introduction of labor saving ces because when their practicability stablished it is to the common inter- f all concerned to approach them and st in their establishment."

he patent department was considered. roposed subsidiary corporation will e authority to accept inventions from mbers, cause them to be patented, and e the article to be manufactured and o. the profits over and above the cost peration to go to the inventor.

resident George L. Berry in his report n emphasized the necessity of the or- ization maintaining vigilance against al strikes.

resident Berry was re-elected for nineteenth term, and endorsed for the nocratic nomination for President of United States.

Widows' and Orphans' home is to be blished, and nearby will be the billet he American Legion.

TO NEGOTIATE NEW SCALE

Members of the local union of news- ers, Scranton, Pa., recently met to ine their wage demands for the com- year. The scale of the Scranton swriters expires Oct. 1 and under the eement with the publishers the em- ers must get 30 days' notice on new ands. The new agreement will be otiated by the union's executive com- ee.

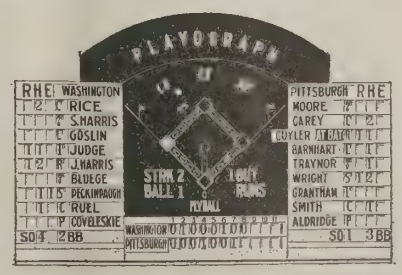
$5,000 REWARD!

NOTICE TO NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS

No "permanent injunction" against the sale or use of The Playograph as manufactured and used since 1923 is in effect anywhere.

Please let that be distinctly understood.

The "permanent injunction" secured by the Star Ball Player Company against the Playograph Company and the Baseball Display Company applies only against the base-runner part of thirty Playographs manufactured only in 1922. These few Playographs affected by that injunction were recalled and changed, and not one of that type of Playograph is in existence today.



Therefore, the "perpetual injunction" has absolutely no bearing on the Playographs as marketed and used since 1923 to date.

That our patents fully protect all Playograph users is amply evidenced by the recent decision of the United States Federal Court, District of New Jersey (Honorable Judge Bodine) dismissing the suit of the Star Ball Player Company against the Playograph Company on the ground of non-infringement. This decision was rendered July 26, 1926, and will be supplied to anyone desiring it.

Our attorneys, Milans & Milans, Wash., D. C.; Moses & Nolte, N. Y. City; Heine Bradner & Laird, Newark, N. J., have been instructed to pay Five Thousand Dollars in cash to any one who can prove the statements herein made are misleading or untrue.

THE PLAYOGRAPH COMPANY

345-349 Henry Street
Orange, N. J.

LEO C. BAUM
President

"Watch the Ball"
The Slogan Made Famous by the Playograph

PRESS CONGRESS HOSTS TALK SHOP

(Continued from page 4)

but we must do it in such a way as to make life on the morrow more abundant, more beautiful. We can learn that judgment may be tempered with sympathy and understanding.

"Though our ideas do not reach 20,000,000 readers, we may learn the hopes, the fears, the troubles of these other nations and perchance our ideas, or judgments, no matter how few they reach, may be the right ideas and the right judgments and we may make life more abundant by their possession."

Dr. Williams declared that newspapers are more than a public square, more than a "second hand of history" telling of each incident of current history as it passes, more than a mere chronicler of truth.

"Sometimes," he declared, "newspapers become more than mere passive chroniclers—they become crusaders for truth.

"A newspaper is a business; but it is more than a business. It is one of those businesses that are touched with a public interest. And every good newspaper publisher realizes this truth—that the end of life is not business; rather the end of business is life."

Brief ceremonies were held in the morning at Trinity and St. Paul's churchyards, where wreaths were placed on the tombs of William Bradford, first publisher, and John Holt, first editor.

After visiting City Hall and the Stock Exchange, the delegates attended the luncheon; were taken on a sightseeing tour over uptown Manhattan; were guests at dinner in the Waldorf-Astoria of Karl A. Bickel, President of the United Press Associations; attended a performance at the Winter Garden as guests of Charles C. Capehart, President of Capehart & Carey, advertising agents, and after that attended supper as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Reid, followed by an inspection of the New York Herald Tribune plant.

At the luncheon given by R. Hoe & Co. addresses were made by H. R. Swartz, president; Francis H. Sisson, vice-president of the Guaranty Trust Co.; Dean Williams and James W. Brown.

"It is indeed interesting to survey the history of a movement which, only a quarter of a century ago, existed only in the imagination, or shall we say vision, of a human mind," said Mr. Swartz. "In the year 1904, in connection with the World's Exposition at St. Louis, there was gathered a group of journalists, many of whom, responding heartily to the spirit of the idea, came from distant lands; and these men, guided by the ideal of human brotherhood, spent days in earnest and sincere discussion of common problems. Intermittently during the following years other similar gatherings convened at different points. The great dominating idea of human brotherhood and international understanding was ever at the front. In 1915 at the San Francisco Exposition, the movement took permanent form in the organization and adoption of the name of the Press Congress of the World. The second session, held in Honolulu in 1921, was an occasion of outstanding inspiration. Reports of the proceedings were given prominence in the newspapers of the civilized world.

"Those who laid the foundations of this great movement were far sighted. It now appears that its services are vital to mankind. The world is confronted with problems which are acute and pressing. If we look squarely and fearlessly at conditions as they really are, we shall see jealousies, selfishness, hatred, fear and suspicions. Scarcely started on the road to recovery from the last great war, the world already echoes with rumors of the next one.

"But the picture is not entirely one of shadows. There is ample ground for optimistic outlook. Many of the outstanding leaders in thought and action in the civilized countries see the world exactly as it is; and are giving generously of their time in organized effort to save civilization from its most menacing curse.

"Their voices have been heard. Everything has been said, every angle covered, in the argument for a world at peace. In every civilized land aspirations for better international understanding and universal peace are taking more definite form every day.

"Fear, suspicion and hate are still rife in high places, and the high places are occupied by politicians, many of whom, alas, do not always use good judgment. But when they hear the voice of the people commanding them to settle international differences by some other means than arms and bloodshed, other means will then be found.

"Could the opportunity for service to mankind, thus presented to the Press Congress of the World be more clearly defined? And may I not add that the opportunity creates also a responsibility. In this great field of education there is no single force or influence in existence that can be expected to exert so great a power as the press. Indeed we cannot overrate the importance of journalism in the present-day world.

"My optimism with respect to the future well-being of the world is based, I believe, on solid ground. I am mindful of the many forces of intelligent, effective, organized effort that are unceasingly striving toward the ideal of a world at peace. The voice of the people of all civilized nations, crying out for peace on earth and good will among men, is becoming more audible every day. We know the people are ignorant of the vital facts, but we know also that they are ready and waiting to respond to a message that will point the way to deliverance from the bondage of fear and dread and apprehension that is bowing them down.

"It calls for a stupendous program and for men of high purpose and firm resolve, to carry it through, and my optimism is strengthened in the belief that the ideals which have been dominant in the growth of the Press Congress of the World have led its leaders to a dedication of their lives to the cause of this supreme service to mankind."

Thursday evening, J. L. Fearing, vice-president of the International Paper Company, entertained the party at dinner at the Ritz-Carlton and the visitors then attended the performance of George White's "Scandals" at the Apollo Theatre. Later the New York Times plant was visited and the editors were the guests at supper of the Times management.

Friday, M. Koenigsberg, president of the King Features Syndicate, tendered a luncheon at the Roosevelt Hotel.

RECEIVER NAMED

Fred M. Bushnell, a manufacturer and former postmaster at Mansfield, O., has been appointed receiver for the Mansfield Journal upon the application of the minority stockholders. The majority of stock in the Journal is owned by R. C. Hoiles, owner of the Mansfield News, who opposed the case in court. The Journal will continue to publish.

"HOW TO HOLD A JOB" TOLD TO NEOPHYTES

COURSE 2E-4, curriculum in Journalism; "How to Hold a Job"; sequel course to "How to Get a Job"; Prof. Notta Chance; class meets Thursday and Saturday. Specifications—Students must send proxies when not able to attend class.

Following is a sample of instructions:

After arriving at city room in mornings, tell city editor you slept late and are going out to breakfast.

If you come to work late, tell city editor you were out the night previous sleuthing. If he asks you for the story, tell him "it blew up."

If the city editor suggests you change the lead on your story, take issue with him. He will appreciate your interest.

Spell names the way they sound, especially in stories the managing editor is interested in. He will know who the names refer to.

In event of errors in stories you have written, always put the blame on the street man or the persons who telephoned story.

Always pad expense accounts. Employers expect that.

Read all personal letters and telegrams on city editor's desk. Also sit or recline on his desk. He likes company.

Don't cover unimportant assignments if a poker game or a ball game interfere.

Throw away stories if persons involved pays you to do so.

USING COMMUNITY REPORTERS

An innovation by the San Antonio Light is the employment of a number of community reporters, residing in the various neighborhoods of the city and suburbs of which they write. The Light recently inaugurated a "personal" column, intending to get in print the name of every San Antonian possible.

TEXAS GROUP TO ADVERT

With E. B. Miller, Plainview, as ident and H. B. Adams, Lockney, tary, an organization has been per to advertise nationally the Central portion of the Texas Panhandle, i ing Floyd, Hale, Lamb, Bailey, P Castro, Swisher, Briscoe and par Deaf Smith and Crosby Counties. name of the new organization is yet selected.

PAPER BARRED FROM MEX

The El Paso El Continental, S newspaper, has been barred from M on order of Alverto Tejeda, secret interior, because, according to Mexican Consul Rafael Aveleyra Paso, two "enemies of the govern of Mexico were working on the Salvador Urias and Prieto Laurens named as the alleged "enemies."

EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S MARKET will give exact statistical data on communities.

Only One Paper Really Covers Akron District!

National advertisers should bear mind that the economical way of rea ing the great Akron district, rut center of the world, is through the DOMINANT newspaper in this distr the

Akron Beacon Journ

Leading Other Northern Ohio Ne papers by Many Thousands in Circ tion in this District—Second in of Six Day Evening Newspapers 1925 Linage.

DAILY AVERAGE CIRCU TION FOR SIX MONTHS 51,973—GAIN of 4,647 OVE PREVIOUS SIX MONTHS

The Normal Season in Mia

23%
MORE CIRCULATIO

Herald July circulation figures year as compared with the s period for 1925 show a net incre of 23%—substantiating the con ued phenomenal growth of Mi and its market under normal c ditions—at a time when ne every reader is a bona fide resid

No other market in America is as healthy a state as the Mi market. No other market of greater possibilities to the natio advertiser.

The Miami Herald
"Florida's Most Important Newspa"
Frank B. Shutts, Publisher.

have you been following the remarkable growth of the Detroit Times

GROWING IN IMPORTANCE

The Inter-Mountain territory of Utah, Idaho, Western Wyoming and Eastern Nevada is rapidly developing and becoming more important to the advertiser whose merchandise has national distribution.

Don't overlook this rich section of the West.

The Salt Lake Tribune
THE S. C. BECKWITH SPECIAL AGENCY
—Sole Eastern Agents—
New York—Chicago—Detroit
St. Louis—Kansas City
Atlanta
M. C. MOGENSEN & CO., INC.
Pacific Coast Representatives
San Francisco—Los Angeles—Seattle

If Quality
of circulation is your first consideration

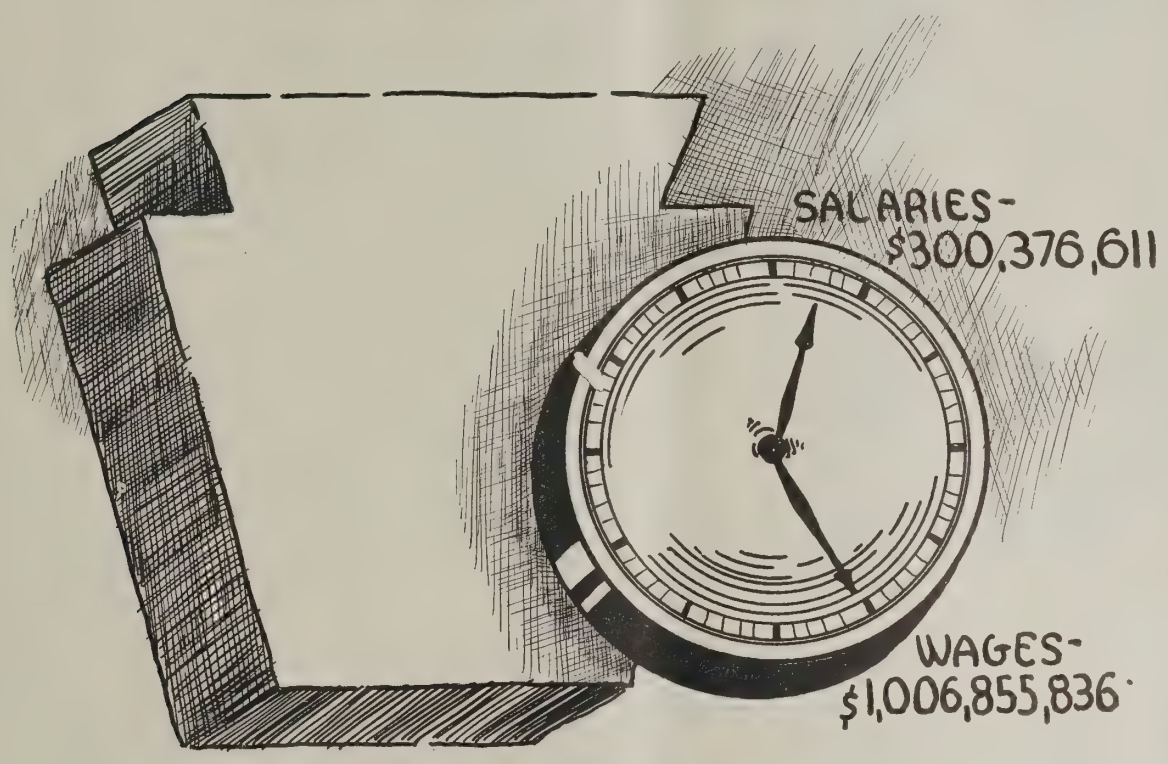
The Evening Star
With Sunday Morning Editions
Washington, D. C.
will have your preference—same as it has the preference of practically everyone in the National Capital.

The Star's circulation is home circulation—both quality and quantity—the kind that counts most with advertisers.

N. Y. Office—110 E. 42nd St.
Dan A. Carroll
Chicago Office—Tower Building
J. E. Lutz

Free A booklet of facts, "Argentina as a m for American products." Mailed free on req

SELL YOU PRODUCT IN ARGENTIN



Through

LA PRENSA
OF
BUENOS AIRES

If you are interested in sales below Equator, where the business peak reached at the time of the summer sh in the U. S., write to

JOSHUA B. POWER
Exclusive Advertising Representativ
250 Park Avenue New Yo
"South America's Greatest Newspap"

The Barometer of Pennsylvania's Buying Power

The above figures taken from the latest U. S. Census Reports is a good indication of Pennsylvania's enormous Consumer buying power.

Furthermore these figures show that the salaried worker, including the large middle class, who are buyers of the better products, and the luxuries, is comparatively big in Pennsylvania.

These are a few of the many reasons why National Advertisers always place Pennsylvania on top of the list, and in order to reach this great class of buyers economically, choose the daily papers to cover the homes.

Advertise thru this group of daily newspapers listed below, and you will reach the majority of prosperous homes in the Keystone State.

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Allentown Call .....(M)	31,400	.10	.10
Allentown Call .....(S)	22,349	.10	.10
††Beaver Falls Tribune.....(E)	6,553	.03	.03
††Bethlehem Globe Times.....(E)	13,272	.06	.06
††Bloomsburg Press .....(M)	7,673	.04	.04
Chester Times .....(E)	18,295	.06	.06
††Coatesville Record .....(E)	6,783	.035	.03
Connellsville Courier .....(E)	5,928	.02	.02
Easton Express .....(E)	25,473	.08	.08
Erie Times .....(E)	28,596	.08	.08
††Greensburg Tribune Review...(EM)	14,883	.05	.05
††Hazleton Plain Speaker.....(E) ††Hazleton Standard-Sentinel..(M)	19,852	.07	.06
Mount Carmel Item .....(E)	4,307	.0285	.0285
Oil City Derrick .....(M)	8,588	.04	.04
Pottsville Republican and Morning Paper .....(EM)	15,346	.08	.07
Scranton Times .....(E)	43,230	.13	.12
Sharon Herald .....(E)	7,236	.0357	.0357
Sunbury Daily Item .....(E)	5,224	.03	.03
Washington Observer and Reporter .....(M&E)	17,589	.06	.06
††West Chester Local News .....(E)	11,860	.04	.04
Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader ....(E)	26,204	.06	.06
††Williamsport Sun and Gazette & Bulletin.....(ME)	28,000	.09	.09
††York Dispatch .....(E)	19,632	.05	.05

A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, March 31, 1926.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1926.

SCHLACHT PLANS NEW N. Y. SUNDAY STAR

Evening Paper to Be Edited and Operated Exclusively by Women to Begin Publication Oct. 3, Says Owner of Community Chain

Harry H. Schlacht, publisher of a chain of community newspapers in New York, will start publication of the Sunday Evening Star on Oct. 3. Shirley E. Rosenbluth, who has been associated with the Schlacht publications for a number of years will be editor.

An interesting feature of the new paper is the fact that it will be edited and operated exclusively by women. Even sports will be covered by women writers. Miss Rosenbluth is in her early twenties and has been with Mr. Schlacht since his entrance in the publishing business.

The Sunday Evening Star will be of tabloid size, 12 pages, and will feature late Sunday news. Its home will be temporarily in the building of the East Side Home News, 150 Delancey street, Mr. Schlacht's chief paper. New presses will soon be installed. No provisions have as yet been made for advertising rates.

Other Schlacht publications are: Brooklyn Star, Bronx Times, Junior Citizen New York Club News, Coney Island Sun, and Political Digest.

RADIO CO-OPERATION

Dealers in Jamestown, N. Y., Got Together to Buy Space in Dailies

Advertising co-operation among radio dealers as practiced in Jamestown, N. Y., through a local radio trades association, is being widely copied in other cities.

Working through an advertising committee this association purchased eight full pages and an equal number of two-column, ten-inch insertions to tell the story of radio's place in the home and the need of doing business with reputable dealers. The advertisements in alternate sizes appeared weekly.

Last winter season six of the full page announcements were bordered with the individual, two-column advertisements of each member of the association. The weekly assessment for each member was only $9.75.

AIR CHAOS MENACING RADIO ADVERTISING

(Continued from page 3)

tisers are losing their audiences because reception on their wave bands is becoming difficult. Advertisers are canny and they will withdraw from such stations.

"Beat notes and squeals, formerly confined to within 50 meters has been extended to 250 meters. At present there are only two stations in New York not bothered by 'cross-talk.' Rotten air conditions extend from 220 to 440 meters."

The withdrawal of newspaper free support is rather felt in broadcasting stations than admitted in most newspaper offices, although any observer of daily newspapers will note a tightening up in space given to radio, and the tightening is more pronounced than the usual summer dullness warrants.

Advertising is still appearing in the majority of radio programs. Such standbys as "Eveready Hour," Atwater Kent, and the Ipana Troubadours are generally mentioned by name in announcements of their entertainment. On the other hand, these names are being omitted from programs published by some papers which are following the advice sent out by the American Newspaper Publishers' Association that such mention is free publicity damaging to legitimate advertising returns. Thus an inspection of a diverse list of published programs will show that advertising matter has been eliminated by some papers and such phrases as "courtesy concert" or "good will program" have been substituted for the constant repetition of a trade name.

New York newspapers have been unable to co-operate in a stand against the program publicity practice. The Publishers' Association of New York City appointed Edwin S. Friendly, business manager of the New York Sun, as chairman of a committee to consider this problem.

"The committee met, discussed the matter and disbanded," Mr. Friendly said this week. "You will notice," he added, "we are still giving the advertisers credit in the Sun's columns. Other New York newspapers are also."

One way to cut waste space from the radio page, has been devised by F. L. Bragdon, radio editor of the New York Sun.

In a two-column box tabulation headed "Schedule of Out-of-Town Stations," some 50 or 60 stations are listed with their wave lengths in vertical columns. The horizontal space is divided into seven squares opposite each call letter to represent the hours from 6 o'clock in the evening until after 12. Stars used to indicate active periods of stations are then placed correctly after the station names. Changes are made daily as the active periods vary.

"I am able to save about a column and a half of space by this method," Mr. Bragdon explained.

"Certainly the tendency to cut down programs exists. Soon, I believe, programs will become a mere handful of type with emphasis placed on the features of each day.

"Radio programs have become less distinctive than they used to be. The increase in stations has scattered 'free talent' over a great number of microphones. Out of 30 features listed from one station for a day actually not four of them justify special display. Most items on radio programs today are not important enough to be listed. At some future date stations will have to find their own way to get their detailed programs before the public."

Others who look to "some future date" let their gaze fall on the not so distant time of around Jan. 1, 1927.

It is on that date that the Radio Corporation of America will formally take over the Broadcasting Company of America, Inc., recently purchased from the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

What will happen then?

Present officials of the B. C. of A. have been notified to continue active sales efforts to get air time paid for by general advertisers at a rate of $4,000 an hour when all 17 stations are in the hook-up.

But the Radio Corporation of America also has other ideas. The R. C. A. deals in radio sets and radio parts on a large scale. Naturally the brains of this organization are very much concerned with the business of keeping the owner of a receiving set happy with what he dials from the ether. Who will buy a radio set when he hears only of tooth paste, applause cards, radio batteries, fly-chasing powders, chain grocery stores, and auto tires—sung and jazzed to him from his friend's loud speaker?

The R. C. A. has an editorial mind. There are current indications that it is going heavily into "sustaining programs," which are entertainments paid for by the station itself to keep everybody happy, the hook-up station owner, the advertiser and the listener. The sustaining programs are those made without any good will or name publicity announcements.

At the present moment the word is going the rounds of New York's rialto that R. C. A. is going to invest heavily in vaudeville talent to put amusement untainted by advertising into American homes.

Meanwhile following the automobile publicity trail radio editors are slashing free write-ups from the newspapers.

A typical example of increasing intelligence on radio pages is the question of Capt. Wood:

"Why should we give free support to this industry any longer when it means merely that we are cutting our own throats?"

Then he added by way of explan

"The advertiser who used to $500,000 annually in newspaper ad ing turns to the radio. Does he special fund to his appropriation purpose? He does not. He shaves his newspaper space and his new list. And he does this shaving because he believes he can get son for nothing in newspaper radio pr and adjacent columns."

(In a subsequent article Edi Publisher will present an anal radio circulation.)

SEEKING TRAFFIC REFOR

Duluth News Tribune Trying to L Accidents

With an increase in automobile of more than 100 per cent durin in Duluth, over 1925, the Duluth Tribune, through its managing Walter Hard, has launched an ex campaign to reduce the number o accidents. The campaign has tak form of a daily column with the ing head:

"Why the haste?
Drive Carefully,
Make Duluth safe."

The News Tribune is also pr an educational campaign for both ists and pedestrians which has approval of W. S. McCormick missioner of public safety.

Under the stock single colum the News Tribune lists daily, the killed this year; injured this yea dents this year. In closing, ar the number of accidents, deaths juries on the day of issue.

HEARST COMICS IN FILM

William Randolph Hearst, Cosmopolitan, will wholesale fo ing pictures his many comic stri tributed by King Features Sy Inc., New York. The popularity with Marion Davies in "Tillie the

DAILY PAPERS FROM OTHER CITIES
HOTALING'S NEWS STAND
BROADWAY AND 43RD ST.
NORTH END THE TIMES BUILDING

"Perhaps the most cosmopolitan spot in New York City is Forty-third Street and Broadway . . . Here is a mammoth news stand which sells newspapers from every city in the world. . . Every town has similar stands, but none as huge as this, and none as varied and as picturesque in its patronage."
—Boston Transcript, Oct. 29, 1921

HOTALING'S NEWS AGENCY, 308 WEST 40th STREET, NEW YORK

Linage is a False Prophet

ALONE it will not impress the national advertiser. He seeks market outlets. He puts his advertising effort in the paper that best reaches and most intensively covers the widest market.

Let us help you show him why your paper is his best means of tying up with your market.

Our pithy copy woven into an illustrated and charted campaign will convince the advertiser that your paper is the inevitable index to your market.

"Tie Up With Your Market"

PUBLISHERS SPACE SELLING SERVICE
49 West 45th St. New York City
Copy • Layout • Art • Typography

S. A. PRESS STRESSING NEWS ENTERPRISE

Lima La Prensa Printed Daily Tabloid Aboard Ship During Tacna-Arica Negotiations, Returned U. P. Man Reports

News enterprise is one of the outstanding characteristics of South American journalism at the present time, Harry W. Frantz, staff correspondent of the United Press, told EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week. Mr. Frantz recently returned to this country after spending eleven months in South America covering the Tacna-Arica plebiscitary negotiations.

HARRY W. FRANZ

Frantz accompanied the American delegation to Arica last year and after service there visited Santiago, LaPaz and Lima.

"The most impressive tendency of the South American press is the encouragement of that quality known to North American editors as 'enterprise,'" Frantz said. "Individual excellence is highly rewarded and expense is not spared in any effort which will promote a journal's prestige. A remarkable journalistic enterprise connected with the plebiscite was the publication by La Prensa of Lima of a tabloid newspaper known as La Voz del Sur aboard the steamer Ucayali and later aboard the steamer Rimac, which vessels in turn served as headquarters of the Peruvian delegation in the Plebiscitary Commission. News was received by radio. The steamer was equipped with typesetting machinery and press. Editorship was entrusted to Luis Delgado of La Prensa's staff. More than 200 issues were published at sea.

"The important routine developments and all 'spot' breaks during eleven months of negotiations were covered by the four American representatives of press associations and syndicates," he said. "But the story was of such great political importance in South America that newspapers of Santiago, Valparaiso, Lima and LaPaz maintained their own special correspondents to supplement the agency reports and, when possible, to get first breaks on spot news. During critical periods La Prensa, the great daily of Buenos Aires, and other Argentina papers sent special writers, and Madrid, Rio de Janeiro, Panama, and European capitals were from time to time represented by itinerant correspondents.

"The attitude of a South American newspaperman toward a political news story is essentially different from that of a North American. The North American instinctively is seeking the hot bulletin lead. He maintains a close and continual contact when possible with his sources of information, and he would rather have a few paragraphs of direct 'quotes' from a prominent official than half a column of political analysis.

"The South American journalist as a rule has a bent for analysis. He enjoys politics for its own sake—as a theme not only for writing but for conversation. His stories are likely to be more comprehensive, and of a higher literary quality. Recently, increasing competition and the example set by United States agencies has caused an added premium on speed, and the South American news writer is adapting his methods to meet new conditions. It is fair to state that the South American journalist, because of his long background of political experience and his keener personal interest in his themes is better qualified than is a North American to write on political questions. Many of these journalists subsequently find their way to diplomatic careers or even to cabinet posts. In the face of such competition at Africa the United States correspondents who wrote for South American newspapers found that training in rapid handling of news and ability promptly establish and maintain official contacts were their chief assets.

"It would be difficult to overestimate the general high standards of journalism which prevail in the leading countries of South America," said Mr. Frantz.

"My conversations with many editors showed that the South American press is inclined more and more to free itself from political control. 'Independence' is the watchword everywhere, and the editors are accomplishing a genuine impartiality in their news columns, in most instances. Newspapers known to be subsidized by political interests appear to encounter increasing public disfavor."

Besides Frantz and Leon Kay of the United Press, other North American correspondents in Arica were Roger Cortesi of the Associated Press; Gerald Martin of the Chicago Tribune, and Claude S. Pike of the Chicago Daily News.

BUYS TIMBER TRACT

Canadian International Paper Company Gets 490 Square Miles

Canadian International Paper Company has purchased timber limits aggregating about 490 square miles from the Chaleur Bay Mills Company. These woodlands are on the Restigouche River, above Campbellton, and will form a reserve for the newsprint paper mill which International Paper Company intends to build in the vicinity.

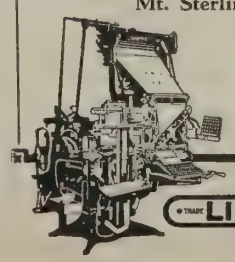
The paper mill will be built and operated by New Brunswick International Paper Company and will use power from Grand Falls. Through its subsidiary, the Saint John River Power Company, the International Paper Company commenced work on August 10, on the construction of a hydro-electric plant at Grand Falls.

BUTTERICK BOND ISSUE

Public financing by the Butterick Publishing Company through the sale of $2,000,000 6½ per cent gold debentures is under negotiations. Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., will handle the financing. The Butterick Publishing Company is the largest producer of paper patterns and is one of the foremost magazine publishing houses in the world. It has operated at a profit every year since the organization of the present company in 1881.

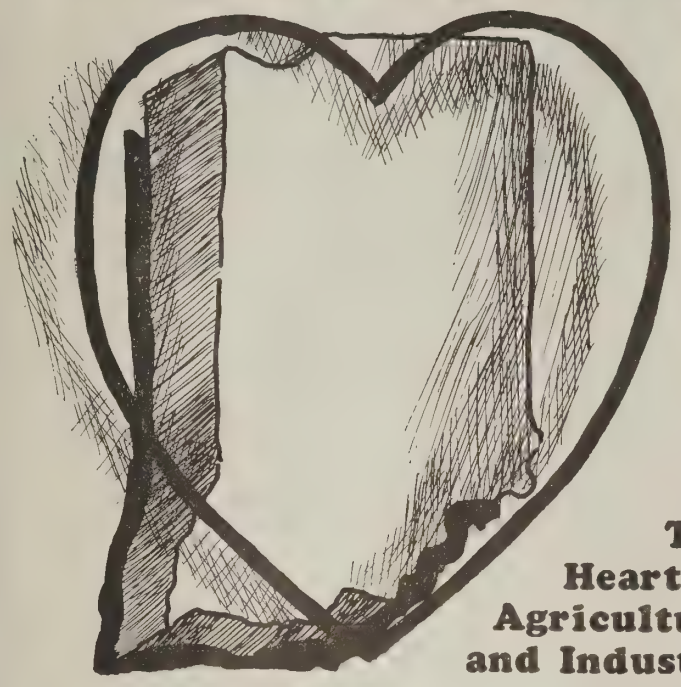
VETERAN PRINTER RETIRES

Archie W. Tuthill, connected with the Stafford (Conn.) Press for 54 years, has retired. Mr. Tuthill served his apprenticeship in the office of the Tolland County Press, and began work for the Press in Oct., 1872, serving continuously since, most of the time as mechanical foreman.



From the Linotype Mailbag

"Such service makes enthusiastic boosters"



"First elevator jaw duplex rail received Sunday morning. We want to thank you for this prompt and efficient service. Such service makes enthusiastic boosters for the Linotype."

The Sentinel Democrat

Mt. Sterling, Kentucky.

INDIANA-

The Heart of Agriculture and Industry

The position of Indiana as a buying power is very strategic. Located in the very heart of the country's great farming area and possessing some of the nation's mightiest industries, besides possessing an abundance of Nature's valuable minerals, the people of Indiana have become rich and independent.

Hard times have been an unknown factor in Indiana for many years. Its people are great home owners. The automobile is no longer considered a luxury, as evidenced by the high registration in the State.

Indiana's people spend their money freely, and the daily newspapers are their source of information for their buying requirements. You will find it profitable to investigate this market.

The papers listed below have the facts. They will gladly send them to you.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Columbus Republican	(E)	4,912	.03
††Connersville News-Examiner	(E)	4,681	.025
††Decatur Democrat	(E)	3,215	.025
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(M)	35,247	.08
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(S)	28,468	.08
Fort Wayne News-Sentinel	(E)	43,365	.10
Gary Evening Post-Tribune	(E)	15,514	.06
Huntington Press	(M&S)	4,079	.025
††Indianapolis News	(E)	128,341	.25
Lafayette Journal & Courier	(M) 7,878 (E) 13,583	21,461	.06
††La Porte Herald-Argus	(E)	6,726	.04
Marion Chronicle	(E)	9,364	.04
†Shelbyville Democrat	(E)	4,012	.025
South Bend News-Times	(M) 9,751 (E) 16,603	26,354	.07
South Bend News-Times	(S)	24,500	.07
South Bend Tribune	(S) 21,431 (E)	22,254	.06
††Terre Haute Tribune	(E&S)	23,442	.06

A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, March 31, 1926.
†Government Statement, October 1, 1925.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1926.

EASTON (PA.) EXPRESS ABSORBS FREE PRESS

Judge Maxey Sells Latter to Contemporary at Reputed Price of $300,000—Express Now Alone in City

The Easton (Pa.) Free Press owned by Judge George W. Maxey of Scranton, was sold Friday, Aug. 28, to its evening contemporary, the Easton Express and merged with the latter publication the next day. The consideration involved was said to be $300,000. The name "Free Press" was not retained after the merger. The sale leaves the Express the only daily in Easton.

The older employes of the Free Press were retained by the Express. The surviving paper is published by the Easton Publishing Company, with John H. McGrath as editor.

Judge Maxey purchased the Free Press in company with Frank P. Wilson of New York City and J. L. Druck of Carbondale, Pa., about a year ago. Later Mr. Wilson and Mr. Druck retired from the management and Judge Maxey became sole owner.

The Free Press was established in 1865 and was the oldest paper in the Northampton county seat.

J. B. Shale of New York acted as broker in the sale.

"THUMBED OVER NEWS VALUES"

Heywood Broun, New York World, Objects to Papers "Hounding" I. Berlin

Heywood Broun, columnist for the New York World, registered objection in his column on Aug. 31, to "thumbed over news values." He wrote:

"I wish some professor of journalism or city editor would tell me just why it is essential that a full consignment of newsgathers should be sent to dog the footsteps of Irving Berlin and his wife every time they move from one spot to another. After the last encounter one of the papers said, 'Mr. Berlin refused to talk.' What, I wonder, is he expected to say?

"That his marriage was a legitimate matter of newspaper concern and curiosity I admit readily enough. But I fail to see just where news interest jogs him now. At least a half dozen times since the wedding the unfortunate composer has been badgered by the press until some such statement as 'We are very happy' has been wrung from him. It is hard to picture any one of the reporters galloping back to his office after such a triumph and shouting out, 'Drop everything and stop the presses! I've got the biggest story of the year. Irving Berlin says he is very happy!'

"When a man newly wed says he is happy I contend that isn't news. Even though it happens to be true it seems to me a fact too fragile for the headlines. In a civilization organized like ours no public man can hope to have his privacy wholly respected. But he has a right to demand that his own affairs shall not be constantly thumbed over after the first full flush of news value has departed from them."

WILL SEEK LAWS TO GUARD NEWS PROPERTY

(Continued from page 9)

have exclusive access to the official news of their government.

The third principal achievement of the commission was that of recommending both national legislation and international treaties protecting news transmitted by wireless so that agencies wishing to operate by this means of transmission may have their interests fully safeguarded. The measures taken are expected to encourage to the fullest possible extent the development of wireless news agencies.

A number of other recommendations were also made relative to lower press rates, especially a lower urgent press rate, and the improvement of cable, telegraph and telephone communications.

Still one other notable victory was that of the acceptance of a resolution asking all governments to transmit all press messages in the order in which they are received and absolutely without priority. This, moved by Mr. Howard also, was directed against certain practices that have prevailed in Europe whereby the official agency of a government was often given priority in the transmission of its messages.

Finally, the commission unanimously accepted the resolution submitted by the Associated Press recommending all governments to abolish the censorship in peace times as being something that is not only harmful to the press but to the governments themselves.

With the final success and adjournment of the commission, recognition was universal that the ends attained would never have been possible without the perfect organization and collaboration afforded by the League of Nations itself.

The commission met under the immediate direction of the Information Section of the League of Nations, of which Pierre Comert (French) and Arthur Bullard (American) are at the head. About them was grouped one of the most remarkable international staffs ever assembled, including J. Nogueira (Uruguayan); A. Pelt (Dutch); H. R. Cummings (English); E. Ganzoni (Swiss); F. Blondeel (Belgium) and Fetsura Furugaki (Japanese), all speaking both English and French.

This staff was constantly at the disposition of the commission, together with translators, stenographers and typists so that the machinery of the commission moved with all the perfection characteristic of all international commissions and conferences held under the auspices of the League.

An especial tribute is due to Mr. Comert, the head of the section, for the masterly and unfailing manner in which he sought and usually succeeded in finding a common basis for all differences of opinion and interest.

In addition, the Legal and the Transit and Communication sections of the League of Nations, under instructions from Sir Eric Drummond, placed at the disposition of the commission two lengthy documents which they had prepared in advance.

The first of these, drawn up by Manley Hudson, international law professor at Harvard and member of the League's legal staff, covered the whole present world-wide field of legislation on the question of the property right in news.

The second one, drawn up by Mr. Haas of the Transit section, covered the whole field of the St. Petersburg convention regarding telegraphic, telephonic and wireless messages. Both were of inestimable assistance to the commission.

During the course of the week all of the delegates were guests at luncheon of Sir Eric Drummond, general secretary of the League of Nations.

The commission is the first of three others that will be convoked later in preparation for the international press conference that is to be summoned next year under the auspices of the League as a result of the resolution of Senator Yanez, of Chile, proprietor of La Nacion of Santiago, and which was adopted by the 1925 League assembly.

The next commission will be composed of representatives of the official government press bureaus. Later there will be a commission composed purely of working professional journalists; and finally a fourth commission consisting of delegates of each of the above three commissions and also of the publishers.

Each commission will prepare the questions which it desires to be placed on the agenda of the world press conference next year.

The final act of the commission was the appointment of a liaison committee that will keep up contact with the League of Nations until the press conference is finally held. This commission is composed of Mr. Howard, chairman; Dr. Rod. Ludi of the Swiss Telegraph Agency, vice-chairman; André Glarner, Paris manager of the Exchange Telegraph, and M. Meynot, general director of the Havas agency, who served as president of the commission in a manner to draw out at the close a resolution of sincerest thanks and appreciation.

H. R. AITKEN

H. R. Aitken, who died Wednesday, Sept. 1, was buried Sept. 3. Mr. Aitken, who was sixty years old was advertising manager for the last five years of the Nautical Gazette. He died of heart disease.

BRANHAM LEASES NEW QUARTERS

The John M. Branham Company, publishers' representative, 344 Madison avenue, has leased space in the new Graybar building on Lexington avenue, New York.

Parkersburg, W. Va.
is growing rapidly

A new $5,000,000 rayon plant and other new industries are now being constructed there.

The city and suburban territory is covered by

The News
Morning and Sunday

with a circulation of 7,500 daily and 9,000 Sunday at only 3 cents a line.

Member A. B. C.

Represented nationally by the
DEVINE-MacQUOID CO., Inc.
New York Pittsburgh Chicago

MICHIGAN
is growing faster than any State in the Union.

Its increase in manufacturing products surpasses anything in the world.

BOOTH NEWSPAPERS
cover Michigan outside of Detroit—Eight principal cities with the only or leading Newspaper in its respective community.

The Grand Rapids Press
The Flint Daily Journal
The Saginaw News Courier
The Kalamazoo Gazette
The Jackson Citizen Patriot
The Bay City Times Tribune
The Muskegon Chronicle
The Ann Arbor Times News

National Advertising Representatives
I. A. KLEIN, 50 East 42nd St., New York City
J. E. LUTZ, Tower Building, Chicago, Ill.

A paper with the people

The public decides the progress of a newspaper.

The continuous rising circulation of the New York Evening Graphic vividly demonstrates popular acceptance of this newspaper as a medium of unusual reader interest.

Advertisers daily realize the benefit of this power through achieved results from the advertising columns of the New York Evening Graphic.

With a constantly increasing circulation, plus a constant growth in advertising lineage, the New York Evening Graphic offers the advertiser an extremely profitable opportunity.

Published by BERNARR MACFADDEN
NEW YORK
EVENING GRAPHIC
H. A. AHERN, Advertising Mgr.
25 City Hall Place
New York City

BUILDINGS
PLANT LAYOUTS
PRODUCTION
OPERATION

An organization specializing solely in newspaper building design, manufacturing and production problems.

S. P. WESTON
Newspaper Buildings
Plant Layouts
Production, Operation
120 West 42nd Street New York

Use the COMBINATION RATE
OF
The Gazette Times
(Morning and Sunday)
AND
Chronicle Telegraph
(Evening)
in order to cover Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania thoroughly at the lowest cost.

Member A. B. C.

URBAN E. DICE, Nat. Adv. Mgr.
GAZETTE SQ., PITTSBURGH, PA.
National Representatives:
E. M. BURKE, Inc.
42nd and Broadway, N. Y.
122 S. Michigan Blvd., Chicago.
Constitution Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.
R. J. BIDWELL CO.
742 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.
Times Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

THE WELFARE COMMITTEE
of the
INTERNATIONAL CIRCULATION MANAGERS ASSOCIATION

Can supply you with competent circulation men of capacity and ability capable to take entire charge of your department or to fill important posts in the department.

Address the Secretary-Treasurer please, Mr. Clarence Eyster, care Star Building, Peoria, Ill.

Largest morning and Sunday circulation in the Greatest Market west of Chicago
170,000 Daily
390,000 Sunday
LOS ANGELES
Examiner

—Then, there's the classic example of the vacuum cleaner manufacturer who advertised widely, but not wisely

You know the story: the enormous appropriation; the wonderful copy; the great list of small towns; exactly the media to reach them; as perfect a six months' campaign as was ever conceived.

Yet it failed—and so, incidentally, did the manufacturer. The millions who could use the cleaners, and ought to, did not respond with orders. Money, effort and copy had all been in vain.

Why? Because this was an electric vacuum cleaner—and three-fourths of the towns in which the advertising appeared DID NOT USE ELECTRIC CURRENT. It was simply a case of not picking the territory—not carrying the research far enough.

Here's Where Editor & Publisher's would have come in handy and spared the manufacturer all his expense, humiliation and bankruptcy. It would have told him which towns had electric current, and which had not.

MARKET GUIDE

And here's where Editor & Publisher's Market Guide makes itself absolutely invaluable and indispensable to the agency and the manufacturer in selecting territories where products will fit.

It accurately pictures the living and the trading conditions in each of the 1300 cities where daily newspapers are published. Throws the searchlight on all the facts and figures which every national advertiser must know in planning his publicity.

And Agencies realize this

For firm members, space buyers, account executives and research men of practically all the leading agencies which place 95% of all the current national newspaper advertising use Editor & Publisher's Market Guide religiously.

And National Advertisers realize it, too

For advertising or sales managers of close to a thousand of them just as religiously make use of its fresh, authentic, exclusive data in cooperating with their agencies or taking the initiative in going after new markets.

These Agencies and These National Advertisers are as vitally concerned with MEDIA as they are with MARKETS. Hence Editor & Publisher's Market Guide rounds out and completes its service to them by supplementing its surveys of the key cities which annually spend billions on nationally advertised products with the stories of the daily newspapers which are read in their trading areas—in the same book—often on the same page—always in close juxtaposition to the surveys themselves.

Every publisher of a daily paper should tie up his paper with his market with a display ad in the one book which is consulted and used oftener than any other by the men who control the placing of newspaper space. Let us tell you the how of it—no obligations.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER SUITE 1700 Times Building, New York

A. B. C.
Charter Member

A. B. P.
Member

ANGUS McSWEEN

Veteran Washington Correspondent Dies After Heart Stroke

Angus McSween, 62, for 22 years Washington correspondent for the Philadelphia North American before it was merged with the Philadelphia Public Ledger, died Monday, Aug. 30, at his residence, Silver Spring, a Washington suburb. Death ensued as a result of a stroke of apoplexy.

McSween was born in Canada. He was formerly editor of the old New York Morning Telegraph, having begun his newspaper career in that city. Following his entry into the Washington newspaper field, he dabbled in national politics and subsequently became identified with the late President Roosevelt and the Bull Moose movement. In 1920 he was campaign manager for Hiram Johnson, when the Californian was a Presidential candidate. He was married twice. Besides his second wife, a daughter, Miss Doris McSween; a sister, Mrs. William Walker, of New York City, and a brother. Archibald McSween, of San Antonio, Tex., survive him. Funeral services were held Wednesday. Burial was at Glenwood Cemetery, Washington.

JOHN T. McCARTHY

Retired Managing Editor of Cincinnati Enquirer Dies in Washington

John T. McCarthy, 67, retired managing editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer, died Sunday, Aug. 29, at his Washington residence, 1842 Park road. Funeral services were held Tuesday.

McCarthy began his newspaper career as a cub reporter on the Enquirer. Born at Ironton, O., he received his education at private Catholic schools in Pennsylvania and forfeited an opportunity to attend college in order to take up newspaper work. He never worked on any other newspaper. As its city editor he gave former Gov. Cox, of Ohio, his first newspaper job. Cox and he became close friends.

From city editor McCarthy rose to managing editor and was sent in 1896 to assume charge of the Enquirer's New York Bureau. He held this position until 1914, when a nervous breakdown forced his retirement. He spent the remainder of his life at Washington.

WALTER S. MARSON

Advertising Manager of Montreal Star Dies at 67

Walter S. Marson, 67, advertising manager of the Montreal Star died Aug. 27 at his residence. The funeral was held at 2 p. m., Monday.

Walter Marson was born at Halifax, N. S., April 27, 1859, the youngest son of the late Capt. Walter Samuel Marson of H.M. 63rd Staffordshire Regiment.

Young Marson received his education in Dublin, and at the age of 17 he came to Canada. He started in business as a bookkeeper and accountant. He entered the services of the Montreal Star in 1880 and in 1896 was named advertising manager, a position he held until his death.

Mr. Marson's health began to fail a year ago. He relinquished his duties on the Star five months ago and went to Bermuda in an attempt to regain his health.

He was a member of the Engineers' Club of Montreal, the Beaconsfield Golf Club and the Canadian Club of Montreal.

Obituary

JOSEPH S. KERNS, 63, publisher of the Hillsboro (O.) People's Press, died at his home in that city a few days ago. He has been active in politics in Ohio for a number of years.

INGOLF W. NESS, 24, of the stereotyping department, Aurora (Ill.) Beacon-News and eight years employed on the paper, died Aug. 25 after 10 days' illness of pneumonia.

FRANK TIERMAN, 73, former editor of the Fresno (Cal.) Expositor and former publisher of the Reedley (Cal.) Exponent, father of Lloyd Tierman, publisher of the Barstow (Cal.) Printer, died at Barstow, Cal., Aug. 19.

THOMAS D. M. SLAVE, former editor of the Oroville (Cal.) Mercury and the Hollister (Cal.) Bee, and for eleven years head of the northern California department of the Sacramento (Cal.) Union, died in Sacramento, Aug. 16.

THOMAS J. COFFEY, 67, retired printer, native of Ohio, died recently in San Antonio, where he had resided for 30 years.

CHARLES H. EUSTIS, 82, for many years employed by Northampton, Mass., newspapers as a compositor, died recently in Los Angeles, Cal., where he had been living since his retirement 12 years ago.

JAMES F. CUSTER, 69, for 35 years editor of the Cooper (Tex.) Delta Courier, died recently in a hospital at Fort Worth. He had resided in that city for several years.

H. R. DEFUNIAK, special correspondent for the Associated Press and well known in newspaper circles of North Carolina, was found dead in his apartment at Southern Pines, N. C. Defuniak suffered from wounds received in the World War.

A. A. SILVERMAN, 45, night editor of the Associated Press, Cleveland, died of heart disease at his home in that city recently. He was born in Miles City, Mont., and had worked in Louisville and other cities. He is survived by his wife and two children.

MRS. MAIZIE ELIZABETH OLIVE, 42, wife of John A. Olive of the San Antonio Evening News copy desk, died in a San Antonio hospital Aug. 28.

C. CURTIS HOOVER

C. Curtis Hoover, 59, secretary-treasurer of the Shamokin (Pa.) Daily News died at his home there Aug. 30 from heart disease. He was a native of Ashland, Pa., and entered the newspaper business in Shamokin in 1902.

LEBANON PUBLISHER DIES

A. B. Schropp, aged 71 years, president and treasurer of the Lebanon (Pa.) News, died at his home there on Aug. 31 after an illness of a year. His widow, one son and two daughters survive.

U. S. NOT A SHYLOCK

So Norristown Publisher Declares in Pamphlet on Allied Debt

Ralph Beaver Strassburger, publisher of the Norristown (Pa.) Times-Herald, has issued a pamphlet entitled "Is America a Shylock?" in which he defends the attitude of the American government toward the European debt.

"It is an average American," he says, "looking at the facts dispassionately and without malice or prejudice that I have set forth here the plain story of the debts as they appear to the great mass of those Americans who go to make up American public opinion."

Mr. Strassburger, after pointing out that England herself was swayed by commercial motives in her unfriendly attitude toward the North in the American Civil War, proceeds to an analysis of the American loans to England, France and Italy during the World War and of the benefits which have accrued to those countries as a result of the loans. Those benefits consist, he says, of hundreds of thousands of miles of territory, commercial and trade advantages, a disarmed Germany and several billions of dollars in reparations. America, on the other hand, received neither territory nor other advantages, nor does she participate in any of the proceeds of the Dawes plan.

DEVELOPS CALENDAR PAGE

Special Stunt Pulls Business for Po... land (Me.) Express

D. R. Davis, advertising manager ... the Portland (Me.) Morning Press-H... ald and the Portland Evening Expr... has developed an advertising stunt cal... the "calendar page." It is run in b... papers the last day of each month.

Three-quarters of a page is squa... to represent a calendar, the spaces ... tween the numbers being given over ... advertisers.

COAST WEEKLIES MERGED

Consolidation of the two Dayt... Wash., papers, the Columbia Chroni... and the Columbia County Dispatch, w... effected Aug. 16, when B. M. Shick, ... Moscow, Idaho, purchased both plan... The Chronicle was owned by R. E. P... body and managed by Hugh O'Neil; t... Dispatch was edited and published ... R. P. Richardson.

DOMINANT!
in
Pinellas County, Florida
Daily News
ST. PETERSBURG'S PICTURE PAPER
Owned by Frank Fortune Pulver
Edited by Major Alfred Birdsall
America's Biggest Tabloid
Florida's Fastest
Growing Newspaper
To be assured of Complete Coverage—
USE THE NEWS
Represented by
GEORGE B. DAVID COMPANY
NEW YORK: 110 East 42nd Street
CHICAGO: 1010 Hartford Building

Buffalo, The Wonder City of America
Buffalo—a Profitable Market for Advertisers
Sales in Buffalo are splendid for advertised goods. Employment conditions excellent, retail and other business thriving. One newspaper will put your story over to 83% of the people—that paper is the
BUFFALO EVENING NEWS
Read in 4 out of 5 Buffalo Homes
Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y.
Tribune Tower Chicago, Ill.
Atlantic Bldg. Philadelphia
Waterman Bldg. Boston

Do you know what percentage of errors are made in your Composing Room?
We suggest you go there and take fifty original proofs. Count up the number of lines and the number of errors. Get the percentage of errors to lines.
It takes twice as long to correct an error as it does to make it, so multiply this percentage by three.
Take this resultant percentage and apply it to your total Composing Room payroll for the year. See how much money errors are costing you.
When you find out what they cost you write and tell us the amount. We will show you a source of profit you have never heard of.
Matrix Contrast Corp.
33 W. 42d St., New York City

Largest Evening Circulation in Largest Market
For 26 consecutive years the Evening Journal has had the largest evening circulation in America—concentrated in New York and suburbs. More than DOUBLE the circulation of any other New York evening paper.
NEW YORK JOURNAL
America's Largest Evening Circulation and at 3c a copy

DO YOU NEED A TRAINED MAN?
The Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, an organization of college trained newspaper, magazine and advertising men, wants to help you find him. The Bureau puts you in touch with experienced, energetic men—it saves you time by recommending only those who meet your requirements.
If you expect a vacancy, please write Robert B. Tarr, Director, Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, P. O. Box 115, Pontiac, Michigan.
NO CHARGE TO EMPLOYERS

The DES MOINES CAPITAL
Completely covers Des Moines' entire trade territory for you at a rate of 14c per line.
It is the best Advertising buy in the midwest
O'Mara & Ormsbee
Special Representatives
The DES MOINES CAPITAL
Lafayette Young Publisher

FINANCIAL PAGE SHOULD DRAW ADVERTISING

(Continued from page 10.)

tional advertising from financial houses should do all in its power to create an adequate financial market.

An adequate financial market can be developed through popular financial topics, suitable charts, as well as the more technical tabulations necessary for the professional and occasional trader.

In the field of popular financial articles, many newspapers fall short altogether, but confining their efforts to a daily wire summary from New York. Such procedure is inadequate for the greater development of the local field for securities.

While newspaper publishers have been alert to capitalize the use of features to make their newspapers more attractive, they have been backward in making the financial page more readable. For a long time many financial pages have had tabulations set in agate and the financial news so edited down that the readability has been lessened.

It is possible to make the financial page more attractive mechanically. This problem is in the hands of the newspapers themselves. Of course, tabulations may have to be continued in agate because of space limitations and the number of tabulated figures carried; however, the whole financial appearance may be improved in keeping with tendency to improve the mechanical appearance of newspapers generally.

How well a selected list of newspapers is meeting requirements may be appreciated by an analysis of their respective financial pages. All the financial pages chosen for this comparison were issued on the same day, thereby having approximately the same problem of news selection and presentation. In studying this analysis it must be remembered that local news or news of peculiar local interest is a variant in all cases. Another variant is the policy of presenting certain special news on a particular day of the week. For example, it may happen that the New York Herald Tribune selects Friday for its bank stock quotations, while the New York Times may present this information on Saturday. In the comparisons made here, these variations have not been considered. The value of this study is to test how each newspaper is meeting its responsibility to the investing public and capitalizing its own opportunity to create a greater investment market by developing interest in securities of high grade in the recognized classifications.

This comparison was made for July 14, 1926. These papers in this comparison were selected principally for the strength and leadership of their financial pages.

The citations were made purely as an actual demonstration of facts as they are, without any implication or suggestion either of praise or criticism.

The papers represent both afternoon and morning fields, as well as a wide range of both location and appeal. Because of space limitations, many excellent financial pages had to be omitted from this study. It may be pointed out also that the Wall Street Journal and the Chicago Journal of Commerce, leaders in their respective fields, were not included because the purpose was to study how the newspaper of general circulation is meeting the problem of handling its financial news.

It is recognized that some error may have been made in the computations but the figures are believed to be approximately correct. The object of the study as may be implied was to show increased possibilities in service to the growing numbers of the investing public and possibilities of increased advertising revenue to the newspaper.

The interpretation of this chart is not necessary, as results shown indicate largely the ideas and policies of the various newspapers in regard to their respective problems of handling financial news.

The analysis of these various pages indicated a full appreciation of newspaper responsibility in regard to stock and market quotations, as was expected from wide casual observation prior to the making of the analysis. There was probably adequate space to rails, industrial corporations and public utilities; however, as is indicated by the figures there was a disproportionate amount of space given to new offerings. This latter fact may be seen clearly in the following tabulation showing percentages of space given to new offerings out of the total space given to financial news and information.

PERCENT OF INVESTMENT OFFERINGS NEWS AS TO TOTAL OF FINANCIAL NEWS

Name of Paper	Percent
New York Sun	.046
New York Times	.016
New York Herald	.046
Bo ton Globe	.051
Philadelphia Public Ledger	.020
Minneapolis Journal	.021
Chicago Daily News	.027
Chicago Herald-Examiner	.015
Chicago Tribune	.000
Kansas City Star	.020
New Orleans Times-Picayune	.015
San Francisco Chronicle	.092

It is believed that the foregoing table reflects the general policy of the newspapers under consideration, although it is realized that investment offerings vary from day to day in both number of specific offerings and in news value as interpreted in the interest of a particular city.

While it may be pointed out that only one day was taken for the comparison, it must be realized that one day's potential financial news was the same for all papers, barring purely news of local importance. If the percentages showing the relation of news on investment offerings to total financial news are incorrect, the general point is clearly made, however, that the percentages are generally low; in other words, that the newspapers are favoring stock and bond news for the professional trader and big investor rather than news on finance that will open and broaden the list of investors. It must be remembered that there are possibly one hundred to one the number of possible investors compared to the number of present large investors. The newspapers are catering to the large investor and professional trader, to the man versed in finance, rather than to the large numbers of small investors, who are now largely left to the wiles of the bucket shop and fake stock salesman. In thus cutting down educational articles on investment, the newspaper innocently enough, to be sure, not only is failing to give the public the maximum of service, but also is neglecting an opportunity to increase its advertising revenue by building up an investment market sufficiently inviting to make its pages attractive and profitable for well established investment houses to enter with the larger appeal to thousands of small but thrifty investors.

JUDGING ATTENTION VALUE OF COPY

Pasting Proof in Periodical Shows How It Stands Up in Competition, Says Woman Space Buyer—Tends To Sharpen Judgment

BY MARION STEVENS MCCREA

For the purpose of trying to gauge the attention-arresting values of individual pieces of display-advertising copy, I have worked out a plan which other buyers of advertising space may consider worth using.

I lightly paste each printed proof to an advertising page in the periodical in which my advertisement is to be published. Then I close and lay aside the periodical. As long afterward as is practicable, I take out my periodical and try to browse through it in as nearly the frame of mind of the average reader-prospect for my goods as I can summon.

This experiment often has entirely changed my opinion as to the attention-arresting qualities of pieces of copy. A proof which has looked most striking and capable of tempting the reader's eye to take in the whole of the text, when it came to my desk, has appeared commonplace and negligible after I have removed it from its folder or mounting, fitted it into its proposed space, forgotten about it, and then again come upon it casually in the midst of the other advertisements in my proposed medium.

The advertising proof which you hold in your hand has the "center of the stage" of your attention. Pasted in the magazine, the advertisement may be seen facing the same sort of competition against which it will have to hold its own in the finished form.

In testing out new copy, it is a safe rule to depend as little as possible upon the "mind's eye" in gauging its strength with relation to your competitors' copy.

I keep on file as many clipped pieces of my competitors' copy as I can gather, and often paste them, together with layouts of my own projected copy, in mediums of the class in which both commonly appear.

Tests of this sort will, I believe, prove a splendid sharpener of any advertiser's correctness of judgment in quickly visualizing the effect of a piece of copy in its final, published form and printed environment.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER classified advertisements sell odds and ends.

Detroit

Fourth Largest City

Complete coverage with one paper.

The Detroit News

Offers advertisers unusual opportunities

in Detroit—

Free Press circulation reaches 31,000 more than the total number of families owning their own homes.

The "Free Press"

"Starts the day in Detroit"

With a stable, uninflated, liberal pursed circulation productive of greater advertising returns at lower cost.

NEW YORK STATE

Westchester County's

Fastest Growing Cities

Mount Vernon and New Rochelle and The Vicinity Towns

Are Covered Completely by

THE DAILY ARGUS

of

Mount Vernon

THE STANDARD STAR

of

New Rochelle

Both Members of A. B. C.

Westchester Newspapers, Inc.

Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

The Los Angeles Evening Herald consistently carries more paid advertising than any daily newspaper in the west

Representatives

New York	Chicago	San Francisco
Herb. W. Moloney	John H. Lederer	A. J. Norris Hill
604 Times Bldg.	910 Hearst Bldg.	710 Hearst Bldg.

FLORIDA

continues to be the fastest growing state in the Union.

TAMPA

is the recognized industrial center and the most substantial city in Florida.

THE TAMPA MORNING TRIBUNE

is the only morning and the only Sunday newspaper in Tampa, covering the entire rich, productive and populous territory of Southwest Florida, reaching a population of 713,943.

200,000 Daily Readers.
300,000 Sunday Readers.

Represented nationally by
The S. C. Beckwith Special Agency.

MERCHANT & EVANS CO.

PHILADELPHIA

Producers of

SPARTAN TYPE METAL

Since 1866

LINO • MONO • STERO
INTERTYPE
COMBINATION

Stocks in Principal Cities

first! in OHIO

13,126,090 Lines

Dispatch advertising record for the first seven months of 1926, exceeding other Columbus newspapers combined by 1,736,902 lines. For the first 6 months, Dispatch exceeded second largest Ohio newspaper by 2,047,726.

NET PAID CIRCULATION

CITY	55,812
SUBURBAN	26,973
COUNTRY	23,666
Total Daily Circulation	106,451

Columbus Dispatch

OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

FOR his September issue Hewitt H. Howland, editor of the Century Magazine, has drawn rather heavily on those who are, or have been, connected with the press. Florence Finch Kelly, who after newspaper experience in seven cities is now on the staff of the New York Times, in discussing "The Future of the Family" wants to know whether it is about to be sent to the rubbish heap. Gerald W. Johnson, who after giving up his chair of journalism on Chapel Hill has found his place in the Baltimore Sun heads his story "Sophocles in Georgia." He tells about the drama portrayed on the great gray face of Stone Mountain—a drama in which Gutzon Borglum is the chief actor. T. K. Hedrick, who got his newspaper experience on the Chicago Daily News, contributes the bit of verse entitled "Indentity." Parke Brown, whose first connection with the Chicago Tribune was in 1904, tells how George E. Brennan of Illinois does not like to see a good hand misplayed in the political game. Walter A. Dyer, for eight years managing editor of Country Life, has turned from old furniture and abandoned farms to "Ancient Books That Are Read for Their Aroma."

* * *

AMONG the books scheduled for publication during September by the University of North Carolina Press of Chapel Hill, N. C., is "The Country Newspaper" by Malcolm M. Willey. Professor Willey is connected with the Department of Sociology at Dartmouth College.

* * *

FIRST page, top of the column position, in Scribner's Magazine for September is given to "A Personal Portrait of Governor Al Smith" by James Kerney, editor of the Trenton (N. J.) Times. Kerney's book, "The Political Education of Woodrow Wilson" (The Century Company), was recently reviewed at some length in EDITOR & PUBLISHER and the lead in this Al Smith story is an incident in Wilson's life.

The event occurred in the Metropolitan Opera House on March 4, 1919, just before Wilson sailed back to France. On this occasion the speakers were presented by Governor Smith. After describing the speech which Smith made, Kerney prints this comment:

> As the applause died out, a well-meaning lady in an adjoining box exclaimed: "What a giant Al Smith would be if he only had a college education!" Whereupon I recalled that line of Arthur Brisbane's: "Think of what four years at Harvard might have done to Abraham Lincoln."

The take that has the most interest for members of the working press may be found in the paragraphs which describe Smith at the Gridiron dinner immediately after the Coolidge landslide. Both the President and the Governor were seated on the dais and both made speeches—but let Mr. Kerney do the reporting:

> The Washington newspaper correspondents are the pick of the land, and their dinners are not the softest spots in the lives of the speakers. It is no place to pull a bloomer. Senator Butler, of Massachusetts, manager of the Coolidge campaign, had attempted a shrewd New England shaft of humor. He said that one of the biggest contributions to the Republican victory was the Madison Square Garden convention of the Democrats. Then came a clever skit by members depiciting Al's rise, followed by the singing of "The Sidewalks of New York," and Smith was presented to the diners.
>
> "It is interesting to hear from the Republican national chairman that the Democrats had such a leading part in the recent election of the President, and it seems only fair that they should share in the rewards," was the opening remark of the governor of New York. "I shall be glad to send Mr. Butler a list of names of deserving Democrats who are sadly in need of offices just now." The shot told, and Al was given a mighty salvo of applause.

The rest of the story is continued in Scribner's for September. Kerney has covered it so well that it is no wonder that Robert Bridges, editor of Scribner's let it run for several pages.

* * *

EDGAR MELS who investigated the Daugherty case for the North American News Alliance contributes to The Nation for August 25 "Fate and the Ohio Ohio Gang."

* * *

CHARLES E. CARPENTER, who is president of the E. F. Houghton & Co., of Philadelphia, amuses himself with a house organ, The Houghton Line—a publication devoted to topics likely to interest those not afraid of an idea, so he says. He calls himself the "Near Editor." He publishes his magazine as often as he "has a spasm of thought of sufficient intensity." He frankly says that "the editorials are worth what one man thought (at the time he wrote them) and no more."

One of the most interesting departments of The Houghton Line, is that headed "Off the President's Bat." This, in the current issue, is devoted to the subject of advertising. President Carpenter is very positive in his assertion that advertising has made many men famous. By "advertising" he means "bought and paid for publicity."

But Near Editor Carpenter admits that there are those "who have the ability to obtain free and profitable publicity which in dollars and cents brings enormous returns to their pocketbooks." By way of illustration he prints the following:

> The late William Jennings Bryan was among that number. In spite of the fact that the press was aligned against him, he had the ability to obtain press notice that always made the Great Commoner a drawing card from the box office point of view. There is Henry Ford, the one man on Earth who can probably afford to pay for his publicity better than any other. He receives more free publicity than all the others of the present generation combined. And what is more the newspapers and periodicals that depend upon paid advertisements for their support, know that Ford pulls their leg for free notice and they cannot afford not to give it to him.

Especially pertinent to the subject is his comment about political publicity and commercial advertising:

> Publicity in a political campaign means getting the votes of the people for the candidate once. Business publicity aims at obtaining the lasting patronage of the people. For that reason there are many commercial advertising campaigns that fail, solely because they aim at no lasting effect.
>
> In other words, in business you must have publicity that produces an effect that stays, which reminds me of once when I visited a neighbor's house where there was a new baby boy. I was met in the hall by the baby's brother. "I hear you have a new baby brother who has just arrived. Does he intend to stay?" was what I said to the kid, for the want of something more sensible.
>
> "Yep! I guess he does! He has all his clothes off," is what the five-year-old retorted.
>
> And that's the way with commercial publicity. You must take all its clothes off; it must not be dressed up with superficiality, pretense, or deceit. It must have its clothes off if it intends to stay.

* * *

THE earliest known piece of printed literature to deal with printing and to appear in America came from the press of William Parks of Williamsburg, Va. In 1730 Parks printed a pamphlet of 15 pages entitled "Typographia, An Ode on Printing"—inscribed to the "Honorable William Gooch, Esq., His Majesty's Lieutenant-Governor, and Commander Chief of the Colony of Virginia."

The only known copy of this work one of the treasures of the John Cart Brown Library at Providence, R. I., b the Stone Printing and Manufacturi Company of Roanoke, Va., have issu an excellent facsimile. The "ode" is n a literary masterpiece, but it has consi erable historical value. One stanza w sufficiently indicate both contents a mode of treatment:

> Happy the Art, by which we learn
> The Gloss of Errors to detect,
> The Vice of Habits to correct,
> And sacred Truths, from Falsehood to D
> cern!
> By which we take a far-stretch'd View,
> And learn our Father's Virtues to pursue,
> Their Follies to eschew.
> And may that Art to latest Times proclaim
> Its PATRON'S Honorable Name.

William Parks was the founder journalism in two of the American co onies. In Maryland on Sept. 19, 172 Parks began publishing the Maryla Gazette—not to be confused with t

The World

These two newspapers offer the most powerful all-day service in New York available as a unit under a single contact. The 600,000 DAILY WORLD — EVENING WORLD readers constitute a highly concentrated force to be reckoned with in any campaign designed to effect distribution in Greater New York.

The Evening World
Pulitzer Building, New York
Tribune Tower, Chicago

creating Impression!

nearly half the 2013 national advertisers using the Cleveland Plain Dealer in 1925 used it exclusively.

The Plain Dealer
ONE Medium — ONE Cost ALONE Will sell it

J. B. Woodward, 110 E. 42d St., New York
Woodward & Kelly, 360 N. Mich. Ave., Chicago

LARGEST WEEKDAY CIRCULATION in the City
The Item Tribune
NEW ORLEANS

The Great Empire of The Southwest
is literally spending millions of dollars.
The thoughts, actions and habits of Southwesterners are influenced by their Weekly Newspapers
Our organization represents 325 weekly newspapers in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico, and we can furnish complete market information on this territory.
A letter to our Dallas office will bring you some very interesting figures.
The H. L. Grable Co.
"National Advertising Representatives of Weekly Newspapers"
TEXAS—OKLAHOMA—NEW MEXICO
NEW YORK, 25 East 26th St., Phone Ashland 9127
PHILADELPHIA, Widener Bldg., Phone Rittenhouse 9698
CHICAGO, 123 West Madison, Phone Central 3021
DALLAS, TEXAS, 606 Mercantile Bank Building

BIROTADRUCK

HYDRAULIC MATRICE PRESS
Direct Pressure Under Complete Control. Fast, Positive, Non-Vibrating Hydraulic Operation. The first successful hydraulic matrice moulding press to be introduced into this country.
Birotadruck Presses are now in operation on the plants of The New York Times (3 presses), New York Herald-Tribune (2 presses), Boston Globe, Cleveland Press and Dallas News.
AMERICAN BIROTADRUCK CO., Inc.
120 West 42d St., New York City

HALF A STATE COMPLETELY COVERED
at one Combination Rate
EVENING COURIER MORNING POST
Two Great Newspapers—Published at Camden, N. J.
National Representatives
STORY, BROOKS & FINLEY

1st in ALBANY NY for Over 73 Years
Complete coverage of the Albany, N.Y. Area at one cost
The Times-Union
Albany's Leading Newspaper
Verree & Conkling, Inc.
New York, Chicago, Detroit, San Francisco

Maryland Gazette started at the same place on Jan. 17, 1745 by Jonas Green, one of the greatest editors of his time. Parks, meeting with indifferent success in Maryland, went to Virginia where he started on August 6, 1736, the Virginia Gazette at Williamsburg—not to be confused with the Virginia Gazette started at the same place on January 3, 1751, by William Hunter.

At a time when the Dale case is attracting so much attention it is well to recall that Virginia, in its Declaration of Rights, (June 12, 1776) boldly asserted "that freedom of the press is one of the great bulwarks of liberty, and can never be restrained but by despotic governments."

* * *

ONE of the illustrations in the National Geographic Magazine for September is a reproduction of the beautiful colonial house at Athens, Ga., which was formerly the residence of Henry W. Grady. Grady is spoken of as "Georgia's best beloved journalist, who devoted his life to the advancement of the New South."

* * *

THE Pan American Union of Washington has issued in book form the proceedings of the First Pan American Congress of Journalists held April 7-13, 1926. The foreword is contributed by Dr. L. S. Rowe, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Congress.

This book needs no extensive notice in "Our Own World of Letters" because the addresses delivered at the Congress were reported in such detail in EDITOR & PUBLISHER. It does bring them together, however, in permanent form, and gives the translations of the addresses made by visiting journalists who spoke in Spanish or in Portuguese. In addition, it contains a few addresses which were not delivered in person. Numerous illustrations add an interest to the volume.

For those in North America, possibly the most valuable sections in the book are those describing the journalism conditions in the sister continent to the South. The addresses of Jorge Mitre of La Nacion and Maximo Soto Hall of La Prensa are especially illuminating, not only because of the high position held by these newspaper editors from Buenos Aires but for the influence of these journals in other countries. Frank B. Noyes, president of the Associated Press, made the remark that La Nacion "pays much the largest single assessment in our organization." Any mention of the addresses by newspaper editors from Buenos Aires would not be complete unless it recorded the high ideals set forth by Dr. Alejandro Bunge of El Diario, who spoke on the subject of "Newspaper Ethics." Indeed, one could not attend this Congress without being impressed by the high ethical note struck by many of the speakers.

Had not EDITOR & PUBLISHER covered this Congress so thoroughly, space would be found for comments about the addresses of Manual Garcia Pelaez, who spoke on behalf of El Mercurio of Valparaiso, the oldest Spanish language daily in the world; Dr. Carlos Cuadra Pasos, who expressed the sentiments of the delegates from the Central American Republics; Jose Juan Tablada of El Universal, Mexico, one of the speakers on "Newspaper Ethics"; Dr. Luis Miro Quesada of El Comercio of Lima, Peru, who spoke on behalf of the forums where readers set forth and discussed matters of general interest; Ernesto Montenegro of El Mercurio of Santiago, Chile, who thought that more attention to literary style should be paid in handling of news; Virgilio Rodriguez Beteta of El Diario de Guatemala, who paid a nice tribute to EDITOR & PUBLISHER; Raul Simon of La Nacion of Santiago, who discussed pensions for newspaper workers, etc.

While I am mentioning a publication of the Pan American Union I am justified in calling attention to the very useful and helpful books put out by the Union about the various countries in Central and South America. These booklets cost only five cents each.

* * *

THE late Stuart Sherman, literary editor of the New York Herald Tribune, first attracted public attention through a letter which he contributed to The Nation. This letter criticized somewhat severely the way English literature was being taught at Harvard University. Consequently, the editorial tribute to Mr. Sherman in the Nation for September, has an added interest. This tribute frankly admits that the newer Nation was inevitably out of sympathy with much of Sherman's critical campaign.

* * *

A FINE tribute to Henry James, not as a novelist but as a copy writer, will be found in the August issue of Direct Reflections, the house organ of the James F. Newcomb & Co., Inc. This tribute is in the article headed "The Witchery of Words."

The reason given why James would have made a good copywriter is that copy must always be, in the main, instinctive and imaginative, and its writer has great need to know about the habits, passions, and perversities of mankind. These qualities are all possessed, so the article asserts, by Henry James, who had a wonderful witchery of words. From a brief list of word combinations by James the following are taken:

New York, the youngest, the easiest, and the most good-humored of capitals.

A countenance almost chemically clean and dry.

She felt in italics and thought in capitals.

These three are sufficient to show that James could write good copy had he chosen the field of advertising instead of literature.

* * *

TO "Our Own World of Letters" have come several books which, while not dealing directly with journalism or with advertising, are of interest to those connected with the business office. A. Charles Babenroth, assistant professor of English at Columbia University, is the author of "Modern Business English" (Prentice-Hall Inc.). This volume covers the problems of sales letters, collection letters, adjustments, complaints, and other topics. Especially valuable is the discussion of news items in sales letters.

Somewhat similar both in subject matter and in mode of treatment is "Business Correspondence Handbook" (A. W. Shaw Company) edited by James H. Picken, lecturer in advertising at the School of Commerce of Northwestern University. This volume not only takes up monthly news letters to customers, but also emphasizes news of the day as talking points in business correspondence. It also mentions the research work done by newspapers and magazines.

* * *

AMONG recent books to reach my desk is "The Romance of the Amalgamated Press." This book will be reviewed in an early issue.

* * *

AT the luncheon which Rodman Wanamaker gave to the delegates to the Press Congress of the World in New York City on Wednesday, Sept. 1, there was distributed a very attractive booklet giving valuable matter about William Bradford, who started New York's first newspaper, the Gazette, on Nov. 8, 1725. It also contains facts about John Holt, another colonial printer of New York. Fascimiles of their newspapers are reproduced.

Especially striking is the reproduction of the first advertisement of A. T. Stewart. "This tiny piece of copy, over 100 years old, is the forerunner of the great pages of store news published today." The store which Stewart founded was taken over by John Wanamaker in 1896. Mention is made of the editorials which John Wanamaker daily inserted in his newspaper advertising. Copies of this booklet may be obtained upon application to Rodman Wanamaker, New York City.

* * *

G. PRATHER KNAPP, who on June 1, 1926, became editorial and business director of the Rand McNally Banking Publications, is the author of "How Banks Increase Their Business" (Rand McNally & Co.). One way that is outlined is of course newspaper advertising. The two of the chapters are entitled "Mapping Out the Bank's Advertising Program" and "Efficiency and Economy in the Bank's Newspaper Advertising."

The five essentials of good newspaper advertising are listed as follows:

The theme of the advertisement must be distinctive, interesting and meritorious.

The paper chosen must fully cover a desirable field.

The space used must be large enough and the insertions frequent enough to compare well with other advertising.

The language must be arresting or it will not be glanced at, interesting or it will not be read, clear or it will not be understood, real selling talk or it will not produce action.

The physical appearance of each advertisement must be at least as good as that of any other advertisement in the paper.

NEWS MAN ON RADIO TOUR

William H. Crawford, veteran newspaper man, left this week on a tour of the country on which he will talk from more than 103 radio stations.

42 Football Training Talks

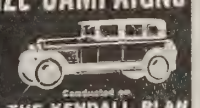
a daily series by Bud Hoban, running seven weeks, beginning September 6th.

Baltimore Evening Sun
heads our order list.

The International Syndicate
Baltimore, Md.

E. F. S.
Editors' Feature Service

Over 70 independent newspapers throughout the country subscribe to this fine daily service as a protection against rising feature costs.



Six Pages Daily
Illustrations in Mat Form

Write or wire for samples, price and territory.

Editors' Feature Service, Inc.
1819 Broadway, New York
Allied with Johnson Features, Inc.

You can't buy classified success, but you can win it—as scores of our clients are winning it today

THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, Inc.
International Classified Advertising Counsellors
Packard Building Philadelphia

AUTOMOBILE PRIZE CAMPAIGNS
Get the Circulation
Get the Money For It
Get It Quickly
Get It Right

Conducted on THE KENDALL PLAN

Contracts for
FALL and WINTER
CIRCULATION DRIVES
are being made
—NOW—
WIRE OR WRITE FOR DETAILS, REFERENCES OR SPECIMEN CONTRACT.

W. S. Kendall Company
104 NORTH BAILEY AVE.
LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY

CIRCULATION BUILDING SUPREMACY

We opened 1926 with the greatest newspaper campaign ever conducted, and secured over $300,000 in prepaid subscriptions for The Cleveland Plain Dealer. We can attain similar success for you!

THOUSANDS OF NEW, PREPAID, BONA-FIDE HOME-DELIVERED SUBSCRIBERS SECURED IN TEN WEEKS' TIME

HOLLISTER'S
Circulation Organization
Wire or Write us at Exchange Bldg 717-718 Commercial LOS ANGELES

GRAVURE SECTIONS PRINTED

SPECIAL AND REGULAR EDITIONS, MAGAZINE INSERTS AND COMMERCIAL WORK

Standard Gravure Corporation
LOUISVILLE KY

DENISON PAPER REBUILDING

Herald Erecting 2-Story Plant to Supplant Fire Razed Structure

The Denison (Tex.) Herald, whose plant was wrecked by fire Aug. 5, has in course of erection a two story office building which is expected to be completed in 60 days. The new plant will be modern and up-to-date in all its appointments. The building is of steel and reinforced concrete with face brick and stone trimmings and will cost approximately $45,000. New machinery, including a Duplex tubular press and five Intertype machines, will be included in the equipment, the total investment in building and equipment will probably approximate $85,000.

The fire caused damage estimated at $50,000 partly covered by insurance. It is thought to have started from defective wiring in the press room and stereotyping department.

Notwithstanding that the press and every typesetting machine was placed out of commission the Herald did not miss an issue, going to its subscribers with the usual news and advertising service. The feat was made possible through courtesies extended by local printing offices in tendering use of their machines, and the Sherman Democrat from whose press the Herald has been issued daily since the conflagration. The greatest inconvenience suffered was the delay in delivering the paper to subscribers.

The Herald is one of the oldest daily papers in north Texas, only recently celebrating its 37th anniversary. It carries the full leased wire service of the Associated Press.

MOVING DAILY'S PRESSES

The work of moving the presses of the Salt Lake City Deseret News to the paper's new building on Richards street, is under way. The paper is being printed on the presses of the Salt Lake Tribune.

HERE'S REAL "FAMILY PAPER"

The Bellevue (Wash.) Lake Washington Reflector can be classed as a regular family publication. It is published by W. E. LeHuque and his wife and printed by their nine children, the oldest of whom is Sylvia, 14. Mr. LeHuque writes editorials and manages the business department, Mrs. LeHuque writes all the news. Sylvia is the boss in the shop and also assistant manager. Under her are seven children, all of whom set type and print the paper which comes out three times a month. Thirteen year old Gloria is the champion type setter. The printer's devil is only 5 years old and can pi type like a veteran.

Supplies and Equipment

PRESS CONTROL

C-H "Safest System in the World"

For large and small plants

Cutler-Hammer Controllers for presses of every size and for every type of motor-driven machine.

Address all communications:

The CUTLER-HAMMER Mfg. Co.

Pioneer Manufacturers of Electric Control Apparatus

1203 St. Paul Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis.

CUTLER-HAMMER

Modern

Composing Room Furniture

as made by us will speed up production and reduce costs—a real saving in your Pay Roll. Are you interested? If so, consult your regular dealer in printers' supplies or write us direct.

Do it now!

HAMILTON MFG. CO.

TWO RIVERS, WIS.

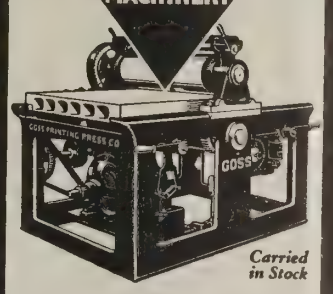
Don't "Pig" Metal

It Wastes Money

Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.

MONOMELT SLUG FEEDER

Eliminates the Metal Furnace



The Monomelt Co.

4509-19 Ravenswood Ave.

Chicago Illinois

World Bldg., New York City

GOSS STEREOTYPING MACHINERY

Carried in Stock

Some outstanding and exclusive features of The Goss Combination Wet and Dry Matrix Roller: Patented stretching roller produces dry mats without a wrinkle. Both ends of cylinder are set at same time. Heavy cast-iron cylinders with forged steel shafts. Extra heavy bed—no racks—large enough to run chase with columns crosswise. Rolls wet mats in 11¼ seconds; dry mats in 22½ seconds. Write for complete catalog of Goss Stereotyping Machinery.

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

Rebuilt GOSS & HOE PRESS BARGAINS

ALL TYPES

SEND for LIST

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO.

CHICAGO – NEW YORK – LONDON

Hoe Quick-Lock-Up Flat Casting Mould

The throwing of a single Lever locks this Hoe Flat Casting Mould which is carefully designed and constructed for perfect Balance as well as Quality and Durability.

Made in three sizes—five, seven and eight columns.

If It's a Hoe, It's the Best.

R. HOE & CO., Inc.

7 South Dearborn Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

504-520 Grand St., N. Y. City

Also at DUNELLEN, N. J.

7 Water Street, BOSTON, MASS.

Sure of an Audience

The manufacturer of equipment or supplies reaches his clientele direct when he advertises in EDITOR & PUBLISHER. He knows that this salesman is a weekly caller upon the buyers of newspaper supplies.

Classified

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Classified Advertising Information

TRANSIENT RATES

SITUATIONS (Cash with Order)

1 Time — .40 per line

3 Times — .30 per line

ALL OTHER CLASSIFICATIONS (Cash with Order)

1 Time — .60 per line

4 Times — .55 per line

White space charge at same rate per line per insertion as earned by frequency of insertion. Special rates quoted for 13, 26 and 52 insertions. The Editor & Publisher reserves the right to classify, edit or reject any advertisement.

COUNT SIX WORDS TO LINE

ADVERTISING

General Promotion

Advertising Promotion—If you want more business, communicate with the International Publications Service, Incorporated, Suite 1004, 1841 Broadway, New York City.

Special Page and Edition Advertising Man—Can handle one or two good propositions in New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania or New York. Copyrighted ideas that build linage and establish permanent business. Let us talk it over. Interview anytime. Box A-775, Editor & Publisher.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Appraisals

Appraisals—After more than a quarter century successful experience as owner, publisher, editor, and general manager of newspapers and magazines, and a careful study of newspaper and magazine making, I am familiar with physical and good will values. Should you desire an Appraisal, I shall be pleased to hear from you. J. B. Shale, Times Bldg., New York.

Brokers

Gratifying—Last week I sold for Judge Maxey of Scranton, Pa., The Free Press of Easton, Pa., to The Express, the logical buyer. Monday I received the following letter:

"Dear Mr. Shale:

"I enclose my check for your commission.

"One of the most gratifying things of this deal to me is the fact that you had a hand in it.

"With best wishes, I am,

"Sincerely yours,

"George W. Maxey."

Thanks Judge, I hope you will some day be governor of Pennsylvania. J. B. Shale, Times Bldg., New York.

The H. F. Henrichs Agency, Litchfield, Ill.; 1012 Times Building, New York; 1216 Hollingsworth Building, Los Angeles. Your desire to acquire a newspaper, or any dissatisfaction in the newspaper situation in your community, should be reported to this Agency for satisfactory solution.

Newspapers for Sale

Newspaper for sale — Prosperous Oklahoma weekly and daily in growing county seat of 5,500. Gross business over $36,000 yearly. Net return to owner over $1,075 monthly. Splendidly equipped shop. $15,000 required for first payment. Balance of $13,000 on liberal terms. References required. Best of reasons for selling. A.-781, Editor & Publisher.

Newspapers Wanted

Daily Wanted in Small City, with future. P. O. Box 382, Green P... Wis.

Employment—Equipment—Services

CIRCULATION

Promotion

irculation—When quick, additional circulation verage becomes necessary, remember that our enty years in this one line of endeavor is ur proof against experimenting. Write or re Pacific Coast Circulation Service, Bell ock, Cincinnati, Ohio.

irculation Builders—Blair & Austin, 1504 Cen- Ave., Reading, Penn. Originators of Sales-anship Club Campaigns.

uild Circulation—Try our "Opportunity Club" an. Sherman & Eckert, 353 Northampton reet, Easton, Penna.

Premiums

ets of Dishes at $1.00 and Up. A wonderful remium. The Albright China Co. - Palmyra, . J.

EDITORIAL

Syndicate Features

Is There a Person or Syndicate having the esire and the following and ability to sell to ewspapers distinctive first run fiction direct om an author who can give new and unusual o-operation. A-744, Editor & Publisher.

I want to get in touch with some big news-aper, syndicate or person to furnish a daily olumn of original humor. Address A-788, ditor & Publisher.

Lima, Peru, La Prensa and Glendale, Cal., Evening News are the new customers this week. or samples of a live, alert, up-to-date service rite The Graphic Syndicate, 25 City Hall lace, New York.

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

Advertising Manager in Canada—Only daily in mall city in Ontario, Canada, wants man of haracter to take charge of local advertising. Must be effective copywriter and salesman. ield demands hard worker. Results will be ewarded. Write freely as replies will be held n strict confidence. A-777, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Campaign Field Men wanted. Our rganization, handling the largest and most uccessful circulation campaigns in the United States, now enlarging present personnel, has penings for high-class men with circulation r contest experience. Must have excellent eferences. No floaters or boozers considered. Write or wire care Hollister Circulation Organ-zation, Ohio State Journal, Columbus, Ohio.

Competent Display Advertising Man, who can make layouts and write good copy, wanted at once. Must be a good salesman and of clean habits. All replies held in confidence. Give age, present position, experience, and, if possible, photograph in replying to Box A-784, Editor & Publisher.

Country Circulator wanted. Immediate problem, promotion Sunday edition. Metropolitan newspaper in city of 200,000, overnight from New York. Salary seventy-five dollars weekly. Opportunity for man wishing permanent position with splendid chance for promotion. Apply in writing giving experience, age, etc., The John Budd Company, 9 East 37th Street, New York City.

Experienced Reporter, who is a producer, wanted. Chance for advancement. Write, giving references, age, experience, salary expected, lodge, church, and other information. Blackwell Morning Tribune & Evening News. Blackwell, Okla.

Get a Job in Pennsylvania—Editors, reporters, advertising men, circulation men, printers, operators, foremen, pressmen and stereotypers wanted to register in our employment department. Send full information. Confidential. No charge for service. Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers' Association, 317 Pine treet, Williamsport, Pa.

Large Metropolitan Newspaper has an opening for a high grade advertising salesman. Excellent opportunity for permanent connection to the man who can produce big linage. Will consider only men who have proven themselves capable of earning $5,000 a year. A-894, Editor & Publisher.

Night Editor to take charge of news room on morning paper. Will pay $40.00 to start. Want man who will develop into managing editor. State age, experience, church and lodge affiliations in first letter. A-789, Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

Advertising Manager of twelve years' training on metropolitan and small city dailies; knows how to get business, national and local. Can furnish best of references as to character and ability to produce. Age 32, married. Any publisher who wants a dependable executive in the business office and can offer something of a future will find this man a worker with a knowledge of advertising and newspaper publishing that will increase revenues. A-766, Editor & Publisher.

EMPLOYMENT

Situations Wanted

Advertising Manager—My record will interest any publisher of second or third paper convinced that his advertising linage can be materially increased. 15 years' experience on small and metropolitan papers. Capable executive who can organize and build all classes of advertising. Have the ability, knowledge and initiative to tackle the hard job and put it over. Available Sept. 15. Address Box A-891, Editor& Publisher.

Advertising Salesman—Ten years' on present paper and only reason for considering change is that it is impossible to advance further because of certain local conditions; twenty-three years' experience in newspaper work, 13 of which has been selling advertising of every character on metropolitan newspapers; present position is good as long as I desire to remain but must look out for future; Southern newspapers preferred; age 36, married, two children; Presbyterian; best of references as to integrity and ability; capable of managing local advertising manager's position. A-892, Editor & Publisher.

Active Editorial Head of leading daily in one of largest cities of New England would like similar position in Middle West. Address Accomplishment, A-893, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager—33 years old, 11 years' experience, now employed on large metropolitan paper, desires to make connection with live paper in city of 30,000 population up. Can arrange interview either in New York or Philadelphia. Excellent references. A-785, Editor & Publisher.

Business Manager of wide experience and unbeatable record as organizer and business and circulation getter, seeks wider field with greater opportunity than he has at present. A-770, Editor & Publisher.

Business Manager or assistant to publisher. Successful record of seven years in newspaper work. Know sales, promotion, credits, accounting, and costs in all departments. Losses from bad debts less than one half of one per cent. What is your loss? A natural leader and can get things done profitably. My all 'round knowledge and experience will be invaluable to some busy executive. Now employed but have satisfactory reason for change. Let me give you additional information. Address A-762, Editor & Publisher.

Business Manager or Publisher's Assistant, now employed in permanent position, wants to make change for purely personal reasons. A university graduate, 38, married, and a graduate of the mechanical side. Thorough knowledge of production, circulation, advertising. Prefer city of 25,000 to 75,000. Will locate anywhere but in no rush. Want to be sure I will fit in the organization that employs me. A-779, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager, with record of accomplishment. Know promotion, office routine, A. B. C. and mailing. A 1 reference. A-757, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager—Eight years' experience in north central big city. Know every branch of the work. Hard worker and capable. Will go anywhere. Married; Christian. A-761, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager, age 36, married, with a successful record of several years' executive experience, seeks permanent position with a progressive newspaper or publishing organization in any live community. Applicant possesses a capacity to handle the combined routine of the Classified and Phone Departments; also Sales Staff in addition to writing good copy, and form letters that sell. Still employed but anxious to respond to best inducements offered. Address: A-749, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Advertising Manager, with seven years' experience building classified advertising linage and revenue, now employed on leading New England daily, desires a new connection. Loyal, industrious service assured with plenty of proven promotion ideas. Unquestioned references furnished as to character and ability. Married and steady. Available September first to fifteenth. A-786, Editor & Publisher.

Desk, Makeup Man, 22. Experience: Associate editor newspaper having 155,000 circulation; news editor, tabloid; city editor, small city weekly. Good writer. A-748, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Writer, Foreign Editor or Managing Editor, 30, University Graduate, Wilsonian Democrat. Best references. A-787, Editor & Publisher.

Editor or Managing Editor—Experienced and successful editor seeks position on smaller paper from three to eleven thousand circulation. West preferred. Married. Eight years editorial experience since completing college. References. A-780, Editor & Publisher.

Experienced Interviewer and Feature Writer; ambition, youth, college education. Position as reporter in any part of the country. A-890, Editor & Publisher.

Expert Rotary or Flat-Bed Pressman desires permanent position with well established newspaper near New York. Open shop. Best wages expected. Can supervise stereotyping department. Long experience and thoroughly reliable. Address A-724, Editor & Publisher.

EMPLOYMENT

Situations Wanted

Feature Writer, theater book, art editor, reporter for daily or publishers. Two years newspaper experience. University Graduate. Wide reader. Magazine experience. Now on city daily. Woman with originality, ambition. Address Box A-769, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor—Varied experience on small and large dailies; now employed; seeks change. No territorial limitations. Will be at liberty on short notice. A-763, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor or Editor, now employed on leading New York state daily. Seeks connection in city of 100,000 to 150,000 middlewest preferred. Fifteen years experience. Able to handle and develop men. Glad to arrange conference. A-739, Editor & Publisher.

Mature Newspaper man, experienced in every phase of newspaper production with record as newspaper builder and as an effective editorial writer is open for engagement as business or general manager, or editorial writer on a substantial newspaper. Address Charles I. Stewart, President, W. S. Welsh Printing Company, Lexington, Ky.

Political Correspondent and editorial writer, Republican, wishes position on Eastern or Middle Western newspaper. A-768, Editor & Publisher.

Press Erector wants to get off road. Will consider permanent position as Pressroom Superintendent-Maintenance man. Available Sept. first. References. A-723, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter—Young man, 21, with two years' varied newspaper experience, proofreading, etc., seeks reportorial position on New England or New York State daily. Available September 27. A-758, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter-Desk-Sports editor: Want midwestern city up to 25,000. University graduate. Now employed. Moderate salary to start. A-778, Editor & Publisher.

Stereotyping Foreman with wide experience and thoroughly successful in working wet or dry mats, desires permanent connection. Moderate wage. Young man of settled habits. A-783 Editor & Publisher.

Two Young Executives, one the advertising manager of a newspaper in a city of 250,000 which gained a half million lines last year; the other, manager of the service department of one of the largest printing plants in the middle West, want to connect with the publisher of a newspaper in a town of 5,000 to 20,000, who would like to be relieved of the responsibility, and yet retain control.
These men are looking for an opportunity to acquire an interest in such a paper and offer their services at a fraction of their present salary to obtain this opportunity.
These men are both married, settled, and have the highest references. Both have had wide and varied experience in every department of a newspaper and the printing industry.
Would consider connecting with a trade journal or printing plant and if necessary could make a small investment. A-764, Editor & Publisher.

Web Pressman wishes a position to take charge of pressroom. Twenty years' experience. Best of references as to ability, etc. A-747, Editor & Publisher.

Where is the Publisher who wants an Editor with the zest of youth but with the sanity of experience?
I am twenty-six, eight years a New York daily reporter and editor, and now employed. I have college training and experience. Covering news fields ranging from the criminal courts to real estate and from sports to politics. Or what have you? A-782, Editor & Publisher.

MECHANICAL

Equipment for Sale

Complete Newspaper Plant for sale. Two tubular duplex presses with stereotype equipment; seven intertype machines; photographic and photo engraving departments located San Francisco; Wesel saw and planer and photo engraving plant, Miami, Florida. Whole or in part as is, where is. Address John W. Brodix, receiver. Vanderbilt Newspapers, Inc., 56 Twelfth street, San Francisco, Calif.

For Sale—Direct Current, 220 volt, 50 hp. Press Drive and control at a great bargain for delivery about Oct. 1. All in perfect condition and with an extra new armature which alone cost $550. For price and terms write The Zanesville Publishing Company, Zanesville, O.

Job Presses, Paper Cutters, Wire Stitchers, etc.—A complete line. Overhauled and guaranteed machines at bargain prices. Easy terms. Hoffmann Type & Engraving Co., 114 E. 13th St., N. Y. City.

One 12-page Goss Monitor No. 762 Perfecting Press for sale; also a complete stereotyping outfit with mat roller. A real bargain if taken at once. Globe-News Publishing Co., Amarillo, Texas.

Photo-Engraving plant for sale. Ideal for one or two men. Miles Machinery Co., 409 W. 26th St., New York.

MECHANICAL

Equipment for Sale

Printers', Bookbinders' Outfitters—Modern cut-cost equipment, also rebuilt machinery. Conner, Fendler Branch, A. T. F. Co., New York City.

Thinking About Starting a Weekly? We have complete equipment of a country newspaper and job plant for sale. Bargain price. Moreau & Moreau, Flemington, N. J.

Used Goss Matt Roller for wet mats only, for sale cheap. The Goss Printing Press Co., 1535 So. Paulina St., Chicago, Ill.

Equipment Wanted

All Kinds of Photo-Engraving, electrotyping and stereotyping equipment wanted. We pay cash. Miles Machinery Co., 409 W. 26th St., New York.

Newspaper Properties

Bought, Sold and Appraised.
All negotiations confidential.

PALMER, DEWITT & PALMER
350 Madison Ave., New York
Business Established in 1899.

CONSOLIDATION

The merging of newspaper interests is a subject that has received special study and investigation by this firm for nearly 17 years. It is a big subject and requires considerable technical knowledge, both as to valuation and operating methods. When properly organized, the results are never disappointing.

We have been factors in many important consolidations, sales and appraisals.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

WE ARE MOVING

On September first into Springfield's newest and finest office building. Please note our new address:

509-511 Security Bldg.
44 Vernon St.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
SECURITY BLDG. SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

"PEP"

A Publisher writes: "Put us in touch with an advertising man who has some pep."

There are several advertising men represented under "Situations Wanted" in this issue. They demonstrate the first requisite of good salesmen—they believe in the product they sell; and they surely have "Pep."

DOLLAR $$ $$ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

A SURE fire method on increasing business by appealing to common sense is to play up the fact that merchandise costs more in college towns and urge that students buy their supplies before leaving for school in a few weeks.—George Deery.

The Glendale (Cal.) Evening News has just published a tabloid supplement to its regular edition, "Cook Book and Household Hints." This tabloid was published on the regular press, the type being set across the chase and folded in the center making a very attractive layout. Advertising from every angle of household goods was carried and the news matter was made up mostly of choice recipes to attract the housewife. Edition totaled 14 pages.—Hil. F. Best.

Plumbers will this fall and winter do more business than ever in fixing up private garages so that they can be heated. Devote a page to stories and ads on this proposition. Tell how a heated garage keeps radiators from being frozen. And let the ads on the page be the announcements of plumbers that want this sort of business.—Frank H. Williams.

Thirty-five union barber shops of Rockford, Ill., recently took full page space in Rockford newspapers to advertise the service standards of union operated shops. This may give advertising managers an idea on how to swing over the notoriously hard-to-get barber shops in other cities. Further space might be taken by the barbers to advertise the advantages of getting tonsorial work done early in the week and early in the day to avoid the week-end jams.—F. D. Hicks.

When a town is quite small it is sometimes possible to accept advertising from merchants in nearby larger towns. The Turlock (Cal.) Daily Journal is running a page entitled: "Modesto Specials for Tuesday and Wednesday" with dates. It carries seventeen small advertisements and an introduction boosting Modesto stores as compared with those in more distant places.—Fremont Kutnewsky.

This fall line up your music teachers and musical instrument dealers and sell them the idea of a special page to run four successive weeks on a certain day each week. Music teachers are eager to resume studies after the summer let-up. —L. E. Comey, Rutland, Vt.

This plan evokes a great variety of view points; pertinent discussion of local topics; no doubt is eagerly read and advertised by those whose articles are published. Prizes offered are a potent stimulus to contributers to submit the best they have.—James A. Patterson.

Both the Long Beach (Cal.) Morning Sun and the Santa Ana (Cal.) Register carried stories about strange things kept in bank safety deposit boxes. A few leading question to the custodian of the safety deposit department brings forth a wide range of experiences with those using the boxes for storing everything from letters to traveling bags.—Harold J. Ashe, Long Beach, Cal.

How many children will go to school for the first time in your city this fall? How many schools will they attend and how many teachers will instruct these beginners? What procedure is necessary for the enrollment of new pupils? Answers to these questions will make a story which will be read by every mother in your city.—L. C. Pratt.

The Brownwood (Tex.) Bulletin is printing once each week a story of one of the Sunday Schools of the city. Along with the story is a picture of the superintendent of the particular school described. An effort is made to make the description of interest to every member of the school—a sure enough news story, and not a bunch of statistics.—H. F. M. Brownwood, Tex.

One newspaper can work with the English Department of the city grade and high school and have an interesting feature every week. Talk over with the English instructors and have them select one theme—or story—every week from those submitted by their pupils and give it to you for publication. A thousand words can be the limit, and if the winner is kept secret until publication day, interest in your paper will be at high pitch. If you wish, offer a $3 or $5 prize to the winner.—Ralph Gibler, Huntington, Ind.

IOWA DAILY EXPANDS

The Des Moines (Ia.) Register & Tribune this week moved its editorial partments from the second floor of main building to its new Register Tribune Annex, formerly the Rogg bu ing on the corner of Eighth and Loc streets, completing the program of a per cent expansion in floor space beg several months ago.

MATS USED FOR DECORATION

Full-page newspaper mats are used the offices of the Xenia (O.) Gazette & Republican as decorative wainscot along the stairway leading from the bu ness office on the main floor to the e torial department and the office of R. Higgins, editor, on second floor. T mats are used as so many squares wall paper, stained green, shellacked surmounted with a heavy mahog moulding. The Gazette and Republi are published by the Chew Publish Company.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "H U N C H" PUBLISHED

A CITY story, replete with local interest, which was first used by the Westfield (Mass.) Herald some weeks ago as an original idea and has since been copied by Boston and Springfield dailies in localized form, is based on dogs' names as found on the license blank stubs at the city clerk's office. The feature which the reporter here played up in handling the story was that out of 900 dogs in the city, only three were named "Fido." The names that predominate, along with odd and trick names, such as a pair of hounds named "Is" and "Tis," with names of owners, give the story plenty of interest.—R. D. Fobes, Westfield, Mass.

"A Helping Hand," is the head over a little daily feature in one daily. Each day, the paper presents the case of someone in whose life readers might throw a little sunshine. One day, it is a case of orphans who would enjoy an auto ride, etc. Readers are requested to send in the facts on any cases that come to their attention. The feature is proving quite popular and is a real cheer spreader.—B. A. T.

The Rockford (Ill.) Star sends a reporter out to ask pedestrians what firms occupy the second or third floors above well known stores with the discovery that hardly anybody knows. Making one important building each day a considerable amount of reader interest has been aroused by the plan. The story includes a brief history of the building and the site upon which it is built.—F. D. Hicks.

The Denver Post devotes a page of the Sunday edition to the "Open Range" to which readers are invited to contribute 250-word editorials on any subject in which they are vitally interested. Offers prizes of $10 to the best, $5 to second best, and $1 each for the next five best.

No poetry wanted, no MSS. returned. Initials only will be printed, if requested. Judges are selected from among the ministers, teachers, and municipal officers of the city—different ones for each week.

How To Play GOLF
By JOHNNY FARRELL
Famous Teacher of That Game
24 LESSONS
Illustrated
For release daily
KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, Inc.
New York City

AGAIN
A Great Roosevelt Series
Weekly Release
Most Americans remember the late Colonel Roosevelt's vivid account of his adventures in Africa and South America. They have followed with lively interest the expedition which his sons, Theodore and Kermit, made to the remote Himalayas last summer. The latter have written an enthralling story of what befell them, and the Cosmos Syndicate is happy to offer the first newspaper rights. These articles will be fully illustrated.
COSMOS NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE INC
Covering the World
NINE EAST THIRTY-SEVENTH STREET NEW YORK CITY
Herbert S. Houston, President and Editor-in-Chief
Myles F. Lasker, Vice-President and General Manager

BRIGGS Feature Pages
—can make new local lineage records for you. Our plan converts firms that have resisted every effort of your solicitors into regular advertisers in your paper.
Accounts developed under our plan are permanent, self-renewing. It involves absolutely no expense on your part.
THOS. W. BRIGGS CO.
Columbian Tower Bldg.
MEMPHIS TENN.

COMPLETE WIRE REPORTS FOR EVENING AND SUNDAY PAPERS
International News Service
"Get It FIRST but First Get It RIGHT"
63 Park Row
NEW YORK CITY

for six weeks!
The sure appeal of YOUTH, ROMANCE, ADVENTURE ACTION
in MYRA
by
Mabel Greene
A serial written especially for newspapers. Supplied in 1000-word instalments, with daily synopsis and PHOTOGRAPHIC illustrations.
Released October 4
The McClure Newspaper Syndicate
373 Fourth Avenue, New York

The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service
Supplying a complete and exclusive daily illustrated feature service to newspapers throughout the United States and in foreign countries.
4 page ready-print color comics.
Write for samples and rates
NEA SERVICE INC. 1200 W. 3RD STREET, CLEVELAND, OHIO

BY UNITED PRESS
AROUND THE WORLD AROUND THE CLOCK
UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS
World Building New York

Facts About New England

No. 1 — New England Produces one-half the footwear made in the entire United States

More than 1000 factories employing upward of 125,000 skilled wage earners are busy all year 'round turning out one-half of the nation's footwear. About 500,000 pairs of shoes is the daily average, and the annual value in production is placed at approximately $500,000,000.

Here is only one of the many great staple important industries that keeps a great army of people busily at work all the year at high wages. This fact alone demonstrates the value of New England as a great buying power for advertisers anxious to cover a highly intensified productive territory at the lowest possible investment cost.

If you have never investigated the buying power of this concentrated area, write to the papers listed below. They have the facts at their finger tips, and are yours for the asking.

MASSACHUSETTS—Population, 3,852,356

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Attleboro Sun .....(E)	5,845	.03	.03
Boston Globe .....(M&E)	287,590	.50	.50
Boston Globe .....(S)	332,282	.55	.55
*Boston Transcript ....(E)	38,807	.20	.20
Boston Post .....(M)	377,443	.60	.60
Boston Post .....(S)	349,596	.55	.55
Fall River Herald-News (E)	22,000	.06	.06
Fitchburg Sentinel ...(E)	11,828	.06	.045
*Haverhill Gazette ....(E)	15,729	.065	.05
††Lynn Item .....(E)	16,699	.065	.05
††Lowell Courier-Citizen and Evening Leader ..(M&E)	21,918	.07	.07
New Bedford Standard Mercury (M&E)	33,321	.10	.10
New Bedford Sunday Standard (S)	28,806	.10	.10
North Adams Transcript (E)	9,918	.0425	.035
††Pittsfield Eagle .....(E)	17,011	.05	.05
Salem News .....(E)	21,398	.09	.07
††Taunton Gazette ....(E)	9,279	.05	.04
Worcester Telegram-Gazette (M&E)	92,314	.28	.25
Worcester Sunday Telegram (S)	51,096	.21	.18

NEW HAMPSHIRE—Population, 443,683

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Concord Monitor-Patriot (E)	5,215	.0375	.025
††Keene Sentinel .....(E)	3,887	.036	.023
Manchester Union Leader (M&E)	29,368	.13	.10

RHODE ISLAND—Population, 604,397

††Newport Daily News..(E)	6,271	.0336	.0293
Pawtucket Times .....(E)	27,849	.07	.07
Providence Bulletin ..(E)	68,815	.18	(B).25
Providence Journal ..(M)	36,416	.11	(B).25
Providence Journal ..(S)	70,518	.18	.18
Providence News ....(E)	29,123	.08	.08
Providence Tribune....(E)	21,961	.10	.09
Westerly Sun .....(E&S)	4,950	.025	.025
Woonsocket Call ....(E)	14,503	.05	.05

VERMONT—Population, 352,428

Barre Times .....(E)	7,112	.03	.025
††Bennington Banner ....(E)	3,144	.0125	.0125
Brattleboro Reformer ..(E)	3,370	.03	.0175
Burlington Free Press (M)	13,071	.05	.05
Rutland Herald .....(M)	11,038	.04	.04
††St. Johnsbury Caledonian-Record (E)	4,055	.03	.0175

CONNECTICUT—Population, 1,380,631

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Bridgeport Post-Telegram (E&M)	42,743	.15	.15
Bridgeport Post .....(S)	21,162	.10	.10
Hartford Courant ....(M)	33,003	.08	.08
Hartford Courant .....(S)	56,274	.11	.11
Hartford Times .....(E)	53,121	.13	.13
Middletown Press ....(E)	8,359	.0325	.03
††New Haven Register (E&S)	46,218	.14	.13
New London Day.....(E)	12,054	.07	.045
††Norwich Bulletin ....(M)	12,724	.07	.05
Norwalk Hour .....(E)	6,107	.04	.04
††South Norwalk Sentinel (E)	5,043	.04	.025
Stamford Advocate ..(E)	10,329	.05	.04

A. B. C. Publisher's Statement, March 31, 1926.

††Government Statement, March 31, 1926.

(B) Combination rate Daily Journal and Eve. Bulletin.

1 out of 3

families living in the better districts of Manhattan is reached by
The New York Telegram.
The Telegram is even stronger in the very best sections of this market, particularly Central Park West and Columbia University, where nearly every other family
is reached.
In fact, 87 per cent of the Telegram's
total circulation
in Manhattan is in those districts where the greatest purchasing ability is found.

THIS ISSUE: FORECAST BIG INCREASE IN ANNUAL AUTOMOBILE ADVERTISING

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1926

MEMBER A.B.C.

SUITE 1700 TIMES BUILDING, NEW YORK
42ND STREET AND BROADWAY.

MEMBER A.B.P.

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; Newspaperdom, March, 1892; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Advertising, February 7, 1925; Revised entry, Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916, at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Vol. 59. No. 16 | NEW YORK, SEPTEMBER 11, 1926 | By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A. $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign | 10c Per Copy

What Advertising Gain Will You Show This Fall?

To Duplicate the Advertising Success of The Chicago Tribune Use The Chicago Tribune's Newspaper Advertising Service

JOURNALISM LIBRARY
Not to be taken from this room

To share in the success of the Chicago Tribune, use one of its major forces for getting and holding business. Now one publisher in every town can secure the exclusive rights to The Chicago Tribune's Newspaper Advertising Service in mat form.

A New Lineage-Building Factor

Ten years ago the Chicago Tribune started to service its local advertisers with copy, illustrations and merchandising ideas. Its local lineage then was 5,582,211 lines. Last year it was 16,153,941 lines. Trebled in 10 short years! Will you let The Newspaper Advertising Service of the Chicago Tribune write a similar story for you?

This service contains reproductions of copy, artwork, illustrations, layout, merchandising ideas and complete advertisements, most of which have appeared or will soon appear in the Chicago Tribune—material that every newspaper advertiser wants and every advertising manager needs for the big gains his publisher expects of him this fall.

Already the Rockford Register-Gazette writes "Your service has been received and is paying us dividends." The South Haven (Mich.) Daily Tribune says "This looks like the finest thing for dailies ever produced"—and from the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, "I believe we can use it to excellent advantage."

Proven and Tested in the Columns of the Chicago Tribune

Twenty-eight artists and ten copy and merchandising men, retail advertising specialists of the highest calibre, are employed by the Tribune in the making of this service. Most newspaper advertising services are based on theory. Tribune Service is the only tested means of furnishing copy, illustrations and ideas that advertisers will use more generously and resultfully.

Forty pages of mats are shipped prepaid each month—more quantity, more completeness and more useability than ever offered a newspaper before. Mats come complete with type matter—exact reproductions of the proof sheets. A binder is furnished. There is no filing problem.

A Mat Service Produced by a Newspaper to Meet the Needs of All Newspapers

No one knows as much about a business as those who are in it. To solve your problems and bring your lineage gains a mat service for newspapers should be created by a newspaper. We give you nothing in this service that we ourselves do not or would not use. We include copy and illustrations which have been proven and tested through use by our advertisers. You get apparel illustrations that are authentic and like what your local merchants are showing, in prodigal quantity; a wonderful array of hand-lettering, borders and hand-set type (which means saving in the composing room); promotional campaigns and timely merchandised ads on any and every business in your town—all in the size and quantity you want!

Costs Nothing Because It More Than Pays for Itself —Classified Advertising Promotion Included Free

The Newspaper Advertising Service pays for itself because—

1. It increases the volume of your advertising columns.
2. It increases the pulling power of your advertising columns.

—Increased pulling power by reason of advertising scientifically prepared by Tribune experts, proven and tested beforehand in the Tribune; increased volume because of pulling power—advertising prestige—dominance—PROFITS!

And with this we include free each month the Classified Advertising Promotion of the Chicago Tribune—conceded to be the world's best—the promotion that developed the Tribune's immense total of 8,500,000 agate lines last year.

Inquire Today for the Rights to Your Town

Publishers in scores of towns took immediate advantage of our announcement a few weeks ago. The rights for your town may still be open. Sample proof sheets were sent you some time ago. Examine them again—remember you are buying in a rising market—ask yourself "What will my advertising gain be this fall?"—then write, or better still wire your acceptance or ask for further particulars.

Address Newspaper Advertising Service of Chicago Tribune

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

Deal with these 28 leading Iowa daily newspapers as with one publication. Uniform merchandising help over the entire state under our "Iowa plan."

Here is ideal set-up for real selling

In your next campaign you very likely plan to cover Iowa.

For it is no secret that Iowa is one of the very best paying markets.

You will be interested then in the most direct, most effective way of reaching Iowa buyers.

Through this association, you can cover all Iowa in one transaction if you wish. One order, one plate, one billing for these 28 leading Iowa daily newspapers.

Total circulation 571,151. Families in Iowa—550,000.

In addition, each of these Iowa daily newspapers offers uniform merchandising service that will add greatly to the effectiveness of your campaign.

Write to this office, confidentially, outlining what you wish to accomplish in Iowa. You will not be obligated in any way.

We will reply, showing how our "Iowa plan" can be adapted to fit your specific need.

It is never too early to start plans. Why not write to us now?

THE IOWA DAILY PRESS ASSOCIATION

DAVENPORT, IOWA

Ames Tribune
Boone News-Republican
Burlington Gazette
Burlington Hawk-Eye
Cedar Falls Record
Cedar Rapids Gazette
Centerville Iowegian & Citizen
Council Bluffs Nonpareil
Davenport Democrat
Davenport Times
Des Moines Capital
Des Moines Register and Tribune
Dubuque Telegraph-Herald
Dubuque Times-Journal
Fort Dodge Messenger
Fort Madison Democrat
Iowa City Press-Citizen
Keokuk Gate-City
Marshalltown Times Republican
Mason City Globe-Gazette
Muscatine Journal
Oelwein Register
Ottumwa Courier
Sioux City Journal
Sioux City Tribune
Washington Journal
Waterloo Evening Courier
Waterloo Tribune

IOWA—WHERE EVERY FAMILY READS A DAILY NEWSPAPER

RADIO

IN THE WORLD'S GREATEST MARKET

first

196,952

lines of Radio advertising were carried by the New York Herald Tribune during the first eight months of 1926. As in past years the Herald Tribune is first in volume of radio advertising carried by New York morning newspapers.

Visit the Herald Tribune booth at the Radio World's Fair, Madison Square Garden, New York, Sept. 12th to 19th

NEW YORK
Herald Tribune

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads THE BULLETIN"

not just a slogan a fact

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

Net paid daily average for six months ending March 31, 1926:

533,169 copies a day

The circulation of The Bulletin is larger than that of any other Philadelphia newspaper, and the third largest in the United States.

The Evening Bulletin

PHILADELPHIA

America's third largest market

New York.....247 Park Avenue (Park-Lexington Building)
Chicago.....Verree & Conklin, Inc., 28 East Jackson Boulevard
Detroit.....C. L. Weaver, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 321 Lafayette Boulevard
San Francisco.....Thomas L. Emory, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 681 Market Street

(Copyright, 1926, Bulletin Company)

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication by The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor; Suite 1700 Times Building, 42nd St., at Broadway, New York. Telephone, Bryant 3052-3053-3054-3055-3056. Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations. Member Associated Business Papers, Inc.

Vol. 59 | NEW YORK, SEPTEMBER 11, 1926 | No. 16

How Nation's Newspapers Are Fighting To Control Increasing Motor Traffic Perils

Fear Last Year's Frightful Toll of Life and Limb Is Being Duplicated in 1926—Random Survey of Safety Methods Employed by Editors in Various Cities—22,500 Killed Last Year

DESPITE everything that has been said and printed on the subject and multiplied effort to control the evil, the year's list of automobile casualties on city streets and country roads threatens to equal the ghastly total of last year when 22,500 perished and 675,000 were injured in the United States, according to the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters.

Hundreds of newspapers have shown enterprise and high public spirit by crusades in various forms to insure greater safety for automobile riders and pedestrians, and the power of the newspaper to control such situations has been shown by instances of materially reduced casualty lists following intensive safety campaigns in a number of cities.

Study of the causes of motor accidents increasingly shows, according to editors who have been interviewed by EDITOR & PUBLISHER, that more than two-thirds of the victims are pedestrians who are struck down in the streets or on roads. "Jaywalking" is a prime cause, and the list of children who have been slain or injured by crossing streets against traffic regulations or while playing is one of the most pathetic phases of the year's statistical reports.

Contrary to popular belief the fatalities resulting from intoxication, bicycle riding, skidding, defective roads or poor lighting are not great in relation to the whole, but speeding and the inattention of drivers are leading causes. Death and injury resulting from collisions are common. Accidents involving collisions with steam or electric trains are numerous.

Every expert that has studied this progressing evil in American life is agreed that, following the installation of sensible legal traffic regulations for both city and country, and rigid enforcement of them, the educational work that newspapers may do is the leading solution of the safety problem.

In a review of this situation this week EDITOR & PUBLISHER found scores of newspapers actively engaged in promoting safety in their respective localities, many of them employing novel means. The following is a random survey of editorial methods employed to counteract the frightful waste of human life and materials through misuse of the automobile:

St. Louis (Mo.) Star recently began a city-wide search for careful motorists. Each day the newspaper awards ten dollars in gold to the most careful driver in the city. The honorable mention is naturally a general safety incentive, and the Safety Council and police executives have praised the Star for its enterprise. The Star was an original campaigner in the country for safe streets and has contributed many suggestions to the movement.

Speaking of the work done by the Oklahoma Daily Oklahoman and Times, Walter M. Harrison, their managing editor, this week said:

"Beginning in January and continuing until August, each month we attempted to make the new month a 'no-death' month. Starting in with the first day of the month and continuing until the first fatal accident of the month, we conducted a campaign of personal responsibility for every pedestrian and automobile driver. At the beginning of each new day we complimented everyone on going through the previous day without a fatal accident. The farther along in the month the campaign got without a fatality the more we played the story. We succeeded in getting through one month to the 23rd or 24th before a death occurred, and by that time we were using ribbon heads clear across the front page to tell the people that we were approaching our goal, a no-death month. Unfortunately, we were not able to go through an entire month, and it was my judgment that we had devoted so much effort and so much space to the campaign that it might better be abandoned and tried again another year.

"We pound constantly for strict observance of all traffic laws and are always encouraging the widening of all main traveled streets and the boulevarding of crosstown avenues on which the bulk of the travel is carried. Frankly, we have not seen any reduction in traffic accidents as the result of our campaign, but it is our belief that the only way to keep this monster from growing even beyond its present amazing size is to keep everlastingly at it, to drive home the safety talk at every fatal accident, and to try every new suggestion that anyone makes for the elimination of traffic accidents."

C. P. J. Mooney, editor of the Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial Appeal, described the situation in that city as follows: "For two years Memphis has had a safety council. We have had campaigns which have resulted in a lowering of the percentage of accidents. The safety council is part of the Chamber of Commerce. It is supported by the public and also largely by the public service corporations. But automobile accidents and fatalities are to be expected. This is an age of cheap life. The price of everything else has risen except human life. We may expect little else until the world forgets that Christendom was engaged in a business of organized and glorified killing for four years."

For the past six years Detroit (Mich.) Free Press has carried on a continuous campaign to improve street traffic conditions and hold down the toll of automobile fatalities. The Free Press began its crusade with a series of weekly articles designed to bring the police traffic division and the army of motorists to a better understanding.

Since the beginning the paper has made the traffic problem the subject of one of its most important weekly articles. It has given its support to citizens who sponsor the annual Safety Week drives and, through its monthly reports of street accidents and deaths, it has been able to do much toward curbing careless and intoxicated drivers.

The Free Press is given credit for the return of a permanent traffic court. Several years ago Judge Charles L. Bartlett sat continuously as traffic judge, and his drastic treatment of traffic law violators held the death rate low. The new law revising the recorder's court ordered the nine judges to rotate monthly and then Bartlett had the traffic bench but one month out of every nine. Some of the other judges adopted a lenient attitude and recklessness on the part of drivers increased. A series of editorials demanded the return of the permanent traffic court. The judges finally agreed. Bartlett has been sitting for three months and his prison terms have cut the traffic death rate in half.

The efforts of the Free Press are credited in Detroit with securing the installation of protected safety zones at all important street car stops on all of the local lines. More than 150 of these post type safety zones have been installed and five or six more are being added each week. The Free Press has inaugurated a number of brake test campaigns, and in one of them made arrangements with the different responsible service stations of the city to give free brake tests to all motorists and to issue safety certificates to all cars found with adequate brakes.

The appointment, this week, of Arthur T. Waterfall, vice-president of Dodge Brothers, as special police commissioner in charge of traffic, is the result of the campaign waged by the Free Press against an over-abundance of outside interference with the work of the police traffic division.

The Free Press with former Director of Traffic Harry H. Jackson plotted the present traffic loop of the downtown district which is designed to divert crosstown traffic from the heart of the city and thus reduce the traffic load on the main artery streets.

At the present time this paper is warring on the useless traffic signs disfiguring the streets without purpose, and is agitating the scrapping of dead regulations now in the traffic ordinance.

In an effort to end the abuse of park-

(Continued on page 40)

AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS AND CAUSES

ONE of the chief responsibilities of the modern newspaper is to educate the public in the matter of street safety and urge rational traffic control. The danger of the automobile is a public issue in every American city. Statistics seem to indicate that last year's ghastly death and injury roll will be equalled if not exceeded this year. Editor & Publisher here tells what some editors are doing in defense of their duty to the public. Following are incomplete statistics, furnished by the Automobile Chamber of Commerce for June, 1926, indicating the causes of automobile fatalities:

	June
Total motor fatalities reported	196
Total adult fatalities reported	102
Total child fatalities reported	57
Total not classified as to age	37

TYPES OF ACCIDENTS

Motor vehicle vs. pedestrian	86
Collisions between motor vehicles	16
Motor vehicles vs. electric railway	9
Motor vehicle at railroad crossing	2
Motor vehicle striking stationary object	6
Motor vehicle striking bicycle	6
Motor vehicle overturning	7

CAUSES OF FATALITIES

Where Physical Conditions Were a Major Factor

Fog, snow or rain	1
Skidding	2
Defect in vehicle	3
Too strong lights on vehicle	2
Poor street lighting	5
Defect in road	4
Confusion in dimming	1

Where Fault of Motorist Was a Major Factor

Too fast for conditions	15
Violating rules of road	15
Inattention	16
Inexperience	9
Confusion	8
Intoxication	9

Where Fault of Pedestrian Was a Major Factor

Adult jaywalking	13
Children coasting in street	—
Children crossing against traffic rules or playing in street	26
Pedestrians confused	9
Physical disability	1
Inattention	14
Fell	4

HIGH PRODUCTION COST INLAND PRESS TOPIC

Members of Middle West Association Will Seek Means of Meeting increasing Publishing Expenses at October Chicago Meeting

Means of meeting increasing costs of newspaper production will be sought by members of the Inland Daily Press Association at the annual October meeting to be held in Chicago Oct. 19-20. Detailed consideration of the subject will be presented by E. P. Adler, publisher of the Davenport (Ia.) Times.

WILLIAM SOUTHERN, JR.

The association maintains that while costs in other businesses have come down, the expenses of newspaper publishing have increased steadily in the last few years. Last year costs were the highest ever known, it is claimed, while now they are even higher than the peak year, 1920.

The question of newspaper consolidations will also be taken up with A. O. Linday, publisher of the Quincy (Ill.) Whig, in the chair. The following merger questions are listed:

Does a consolidation increase business? Is it worth while to buy out a competitor? Will buying a competitor invite somebody else to the field? Will two competing newspapers make better papers and more business for both?

Editorial, circulation, advertising and mechanical problems are also scheduled for consideration.

Stephen Bolles, of the Janesville (Wis.) Gazette will speak on news policy, taking up the questions whether or not newspapers are becoming mere press association and feature bulletins. He will also discuss the correct proportion of local and foreign news.

Other speakers and their subjects are: R. D. Rainey, Decatur (Ill.) Review, "Building a Bona Fide Circulation Requires the Use of Bona Fide Methods"; William Thomson, director of the Bureau of Advertising, American Newspaper Publishers Association, "Better Service to Advertisers Means Bigger Business for Newspapers"; James Powell, Ottumwa (Ia.) Courier, "Dealer Co-operation"; R. S. Chapman, Rockford (Ill.) Star, "Advertising Agency Questionnaires"; W. I. Goodland, Racine (Wis.) Times-Call, "Serving the National Advertiser"; C. E. Broughton, Sheboygan (Wis.) Press, "The Composing Room Deadline and Classified Copy"; R. V. DeBarry, Lansing (Mich.) State Journal, "Saving Money in the Press Room," "Advantages of an Open Shop," "Group Disability and Group Insurance."

William Southern, Jr., publisher of the Independence (Mo.) Examiner, is president of the Inland group.

PLAN NEW OREGON DAILY

The Medford (Ore.) News, a new morning daily, will begin publication on Oct. 1. The Jackson County News, a weekly, will be merged with it. At present Medford has only one daily, the Mail-Tribune, an afternoon newspaper. The Medford News will have United Press service. The incorporators are L. B. Tuttle, James W. Young, C. A. Swigart and Dan Bowerman.

VIRGINIA EDITOR STRICKEN

Louis Case Martin, editor of the Farmville (Va.) Leader, suffered a paralytic stroke at his desk Friday, Sept. 3, and he is not expected to live. He is one of the best known newspaper men in Virginia.

A. N. P. A. FORMS TRAFFIC DEPARTMENT TO SAFEGUARD PUBLISHER INTERESTS

W. J. Mathey, Formerly an Erie Railroad Executive Placed in Charge—Analysis of Rate Situation Now Being Made—Baggage Transportation on Docket

ESTABLISHMENT of the Traffic Department, first of two projected service improvements of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, was announced this week by L. B. Palmer, association manager.

W. J. Mathey

W. J. Mathey, during the last year assistant general freight agent of the Erie Railroad Company, has been appointed manager of the new department, which will maintain offices in Room 605, 270 Madison Avenue, New York.

The second proposed addition in the A. N. P. A.'s expansion program, formation of a mechanical department, has not yet been organized.

An announcement from Mr. Palmer reads:

"The traffic department was created for the purpose of acting as a point of contact between the publishers and the various transportation companies and of safeguarding the interests of the publishers in the matter of their traffic relations with the carriers.

"Some of the principal activities of the department will be:

"1. To make a check of all rates paid by the members for transportation and accessorial services to the end that they will be no more than just and reasonable and that the newspapers will not be obliged to bear more than their fair share of the transportation bill of the country.

"2. To advise the members as to the most economical and satisfactory transportation routes to be employed.

"3. To assist the members in reducing the item of 'loss and damage' to the absolute minimum.

"4. To assist the members in arranging for expedited service and schedules on their newsprint, as well as on their outbound shipments in baggage service.

"The necessity of a Traffic Department to protect the interests of the newspapers has become more and more apparent since 1917 when the paper manufacturers, all of whom maintain their own traffic departments, to safeguard their own interests transferred traffic problems to the newspapers by changing the selling of their product from F. O. B. sidewalk or pressroom to F. O. B. mill.

"Since that time many irregularities and inconsistencies have crept into the rate structure to the disadvantage of the publisher, some, if not all, of which would have been avoided by properly directed concert of action of publishers such as this department makes possible.

"This department will not only protect the publishers' interests in the future but it is confidently believed will succeed in its program to correct such errors as have crept into the rate structure in the past.

"The Traffic Department is now engaged in making a thorough analysis of the entire rate situation preparatory to opening negotiations with the interested carriers looking to the removal of such inequalities and maladjustments as may be found to exist.

"Some of the pressing matters which will have early attention are:

"1. The question of newsprint rates to the South, particularly the readjustment which will probably follow as a result of the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission in Docket No. 13494.

"2. Rates between so-called Official Classification Territory (which roughly speaking embraces the territory north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers and east of the Mississippi River) which may be influenced by the result of the Eastern Class Rate Investigation, I. C. C. Docket No. 15879.

"3. The rumored realignment of rates soon to be undertaken by the Canadian roads respecting the Newsprint structure from Canadian mills to the United States.

"4. The problem of reasonable rates for transportation of newspapers in baggage service.

"The progress and development of these and other related matters will be carefully watched by the Traffic Department to the end that the interests of the membership may be fully protected.

"Summing up, the Traffic Department will be on the alert at all times to detect and oppose all proposals relating to rates, regulations, etc., which may prove detrimental to the newspaper industry."

Mr. Mathey, manager of the department, was born in Chicago, March 22, 1891. After leaving grammar school, he attended St. Cyril's College and DeLa-Salle Institute, being graduated from the latter in 1907. He entered the employ of the Erie Railroad Company in March, 1907, as stenographer in the Traffic Department and successively held various positions in the Rate and Tariff Departments of that company. July 1, 1925, he was appointed Chief of Tariff Bureau at New York. On Oct. 1, 1925, he was appointed Assistant General Freight Agent, which position he held until his recent appointment as Traffic Manager of the A. N. P. A.

POLICE RECORDS OPENED

The police blotter system, whereby names of all persons arrested will be available for inspection by reporters, will be inaugurated in Charlotte, N. C., following an investigation by Maj. W. R. Robertson, commissioner of public safety, which determined that arrest reports are public records. The investigation was made following a decision by the police department that the names of prominent men under arrest be protected. The matter of withholding any name is "a matter purely with the newspapers" Maj. Robertson stated.

STORE BUYS 44 PAGES

Declared to be the greatest amount of advertising ever used for any retail event in Texas, purchase of 44 full pages of space to appear in the Sunday editions of four newspapers was announced recently by E. P. Simmons, of the Chester L. Jones interests, which has just taken over the Sanger Bros. department stores in Dallas, Fort Worth and Waco. The 44 page advertisements were to boost the "Sanger Bros. reorganization sale."

THEN HE FAINTED

THE Fort Worth Sunday Star-Telegram and Record-Telegram has been conducting a slogan contest in which various advertisers ran their slogans, and readers were asked to compete for prizes, supplying the names of the firms advertising, identifying them through the slogans published in the various ads.

Among the advertisers was the distributor for Packard motor cars in that city.

One morning his phone rang, and here is the conversation that ensued:—

Lady's voice:—"What is the slogan of your car?"

Distributor:—"'Ask the man who owns one.'"

Lady:—"But I don't know any man who owns one."

BELL APPOINTED GOS N. Y. REPRESENTATIVE

Philadelphia Manager Promoted Press Company—Has Served Firm 27 Years—Brion and Arnold Assistants

Harvey D. Bell, for 27 years with t Goss Printing Press Company, was th week named manager of the New Yo office of that company in the Candl Building, 220 W. 42nd street.

Harvey D. Bell

In addition to duties connected wi the New York office, Mr. Bell will be charge of the sales department coverir the Eastern states, including the seaboa states South and Eastern Canada.

Mr. Bell has been with the company various capacities, including superinten ing of installations, service and sales d partments continuously for 27 years, ar since 1911 has been sales representativ for Pennsylvania and the seaboard stat South with headquarters in Philadelphi

He will be assisted by Oscar P. Brio and Everett M. Arnold.

Mr. Brion was superintendent of th printing department of the New Yor Times several years ago, and, for number of years, until recently, trave ling representative in the service depar ment for the International Paper Com pany.

Mr. Arnold has been connected wit the sales department of the Goss Com pany's New York Office for the past fiv years.

Mr. Bell is succeeding the late R. I Thomas, whose sudden death occurre recently.

A Presidential vacation results largel in transferring the hard work of politica news gathering from the White House t White Pine Camp.—Washington Star.

AUTOMOBILE LINAGE UP 50 PERCENT IN 1926

Gradual Enlarging of Copy and Liberal Use of Full Newspaper Pages Has Marked Industry's Advertising—Wave of Optimism Prevails—No General Let-up in Schedules Foreseen

(Special to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

DETROIT, Sept. 7.—America's motor industry continues pyramiding new records this year in an amazing fashion, both as to production and advertising. When the show season was on last January the makers who predicted a bigger volume of cars for 1926 were few. It was generally accepted that some of them were talking for mere publicity effect. Some of the foremost leaders in the industry were watching their steps as the year opened, with weather conditions generally pretty bad. It is no secret that some of the motor shows in the first few months of 1926 did not bring the returns expected. There was talk of slowing down, and for a time some of the factories did ease up a bit. Later on, with new models coming through, factories did cut production to give dealers time to get rid of what they had on hand.

Then the rush speeded up again. But it will slow down somewhat as the year advances and when 1926 passes out of the picture the volume above 1925 will not be staggering. It is a remarkable job that has been accomplished this year by the men in executive positions at the factories and the distributors and dealers out on the firing line. With the pitfalls of two slumps since the war ended charted up, and the easy going style of men content to slide along with the tide eliminated, those responsible for getting the dollars into the hands of the makers and merchandisers went about their work so well that today in a number of factories orders are well ahead of production.

There is a wave of optimism sweeping over the motor field today. Roam around here and it is prevalent, but not boisterously so. Weave out to the various cities and towns in this State and others West and South as far as the Mississippi and East to the Atlantic Ocean and the air is the same. Yet there has not seemed to be any specific boom on throughout the country.

While there has been a much greater effort at cooperation between the factories and the men selling cars, yet those who have been watching the situation feel that the third great prop that has helped put over the business has been the advertising. Last show time the makers began their campaigns in newspapers to give the early shows some pep and bang. And there were some results. There was not much spirit manifested, however, in January and February, nor into March. In some places sales for the two months were anywhere from 25 to 75 per cent. behind 1925. It was felt that the dealers never would have a chance to get anywhere near even with the 1925 figures. Then there followed a steady gradual climb as the makers and dealers plunged into big newspaper space.

In some sections of the country the increase in automobile display linage over 1925 for the first six months of this year was more than 60 per cent. The general average throughout the country for the year will probably be at least 50 per cent., which is a very remarkable story. There has been a gradual enlarging of copy. Page advertisements are no longer a novelty. Several times this year some of the larger papers in big centers have had in a Sunday issue within a few thousand lines of the total they carried in an entire show number a couple of years ago. When one considers what effort and work goes into a show number and then begins to figure out that nearly as much linage showed up and was printed without any special preparation, it shows how the newspapers today have prepared to meet the needs of the motor industry.

It is worth giving a brief analysis of results. It is generally admitted that there was practically no spring in a large area of the country. It was evident people were not in a buying mood as far as motor cars were concerned. Instead of retrenching on advertising expenses, cutting down production a great deal, mentally picturing an obscured horizon the reverse action followed. Advertising increased. Production continued along and the factories took care of the storage in many instances. Salesmen worked harder.

There was a certain psychology about picking up the big newspapers and finding scattered through the different sections various automobile advertisements. There were too many for the automobile departments so they found their way into the editorial, the sporting, the financial and other parts until motor car makers were telling their stories to all classes of individuals. Like a comet in the sky everyone does not see it the same night for divers reasons, but eventually the vast majority get a peek at it.

Then there were the new models brought out. These were put over by increased advertising. There was the usual talk about the survival of the fittest, but one does not find a lot of cars falling by the wayside this year. In fact, it is rather remarkable how some of them have come back. Newspaper men in different sections who keep tabs on copy in their own and rival papers have been watching the growing linage closely. Even they have been amazed.

General Motors wonderful year is being reflected by the large amount being turned back into advertising channels. Compared to a year ago and basing the averages sectionally, one finds that Buick is advertising about 75 per cent. heavier and Cadillac more than 100 per cent. Oakland with its new Pontiac has passed above 100 per cent. figures for this same time a year ago and Chevrolet has gone 200 and even more heavily in different sections. Oldsmobile is nearly 50 per cent. above last year's figures. Willys-Overland has passed the 100 per cent. increase and Chrysler is approaching it over 1925.

Studebaker is leading every other individual car in linage in many places throughout the country. The increase is greater than 100 per cent. Nash has jumped its total about 50 per cent. and will keep it there for the year. Dodge Brothers has now become a big advertising factor in the newspapers and compared to its previous schedules the 1926 figures looms up some 400 per cent. larger.

Then there is Reo with its full pages running consistently every other week throughout the country instead of intermittent campaigns in the past. Star has come back with a rush and is above 100 per cent. over 1925 figures. Hudson and Essex are up in the 100 per cent. class also. Hupmobile dropping its four and bringing out a six and an eight is producing 300 per cent more cars monthly now than a year ago, and for which its much larger newspaper advertising is responsible in a measure.

Outside of a denial wired to some of the branch managers by Edsel Ford, stating that there would be no changes or new models, no one seems to know for a certainty what Henry Ford is going to do. But it is generally admitted that he is not going to allow his motor prestige and profits to suffer too much. His cancelling the advertising program does not mean that it is irrevocable. He did something similar before and changed his mind. It is not so long to show time, and everyone knows that when the big national exhibitions are on, while the other makers are getting publicity in the automobile sections. Henry is generally featured on the front news pages. Just watch him.

It may not be noticeable to the general public but to newspaper men it must be evident that the newspapers are getting a good share of motor business by just watching how frequently the copy is appearing of various cars such as Paige, Jewett, Franklin, Jordan, Kissel, Marmon, Locomobile, Moon-Diana, Packard, Peerless, Pierce Arrow, Rickenbacker, Auburn, Chandler, Velie, Wills. And out of this number observant advertising men can recall that in the last couple of years there were some whose copy was rather spasmodic.

On the other hand the tire and truck copy is not setting the world afire anywhere. There is a general feeling among some of the tire people that the billboards and magazines are better mediums than the newspapers. That is not so very new. However, some of the executives will be looking for newspaper support in the near future when the Interstate Commerce Commission takes up the problem of regulating commercial vehicle transportation from State to State. Hearings are going on now throughout the country. But there has been no widespread magazine articles regarding them. Had it not been for the newspapers in the past the motor industry would have been burdened with red tape taxation which would have handicapped it seriously. Aside from that viewpoint, when one or two of the executives takes a notion to break away from the general trend and go back to the newspapers for quick results, others will follow, and wish that they had not been in the rear of the parade.

Is the advertising going to continue? That is what many newspaper men would like to know, particularly publishers. Looks so. New schedules are being prepared here and there. One hears of Marmon trying to work out some plan with its distributors, but undecided whether to make it a 50-50 plan or pay for it all. Kissel is investigating what the other fellows are doing and may go to a general cost per car basis. General Motors has had such a rush of business that it will continue rolling up the stories and adding to its prestige. Studebaker is going along with its weekly pages on a continuous schedule without interruption that appears to be the largest in the country.

John Willys has put the Whippet over, but intends to see that its sales do not cut into the Willys-Knight and Overland Six lines, and so he will increase the copy on all lines. Walter P. Chrysler now has four distinct classes which must get individual attention and that needs specific copy for each. Chandler has followed the plan of Chrysler's, dropping the name Maxwell, and Nash merging Ajax into his own name, so the slipping of Cleveland out of the picture by name and making it a small Chandler, is resulting in page copy now. Pierce Arrow tried out a sales contest covering the past few weeks, which was backed up by consistent advertising telling the world it was possible now to get one of those cars with all its reputation under $3,000. The results were astonishing, sales increases running as high as 300 per cent. and more in many places. It will continue. Peerless, stronger than ever under Mr. Ver Linden and his rejuvenated organization, is back in the picture stronger than ever through newspaper copy and the business will be kept up. Packard has awakened to the value of big copy and its dealers are now O. K.-ing full page and half page slices continuously. In some sections of the country Nash dealers report that they now have sold more cars than during the entire 12 months of 1925. And Nash's position on newspapers is too well-known to need any comment. Rickenbacker is now working out plans for a new campaign that may break any time. Paige Detroit has copy ready at all times in the hands of dealers that they may release while a new schedule is being made up. Velie is slipping out some full pages and six column copy to aid dealers paying for the total cost. The new Moon car is about ready to break into the limelight and that means more business. Auburn has had a splendid year and it is putting some of its surplus into advertising. The same is true of Gardner. Wills Sainte Claire is coming back rapidly and its appropriation is increasing.

With Labor Day and vacations out of the way, of course there will be no general letup in copy right away. The plan seemed to be among some of the big executives early in the year to plan a campaign to run through an entire 12 months and find out if keeping everlastingly at it was not the right way to sell cars the same as any other merchandise. They are finding out that this is so. And the linage will continue good the balance of the year with a tapering off around Thanksgiving to give time for a breath to plan for the 1927 shows.

EDGECOMBE GETS COMMUNITY SERVICE CUP

ABOVE is the EDITOR & PUBLISHER silver loving cup recently presented to Frank O. Edgecombe, editor of the Geneva (Neb.) Signal, as the prize for winning the National Editorial Association contest for the best community service.

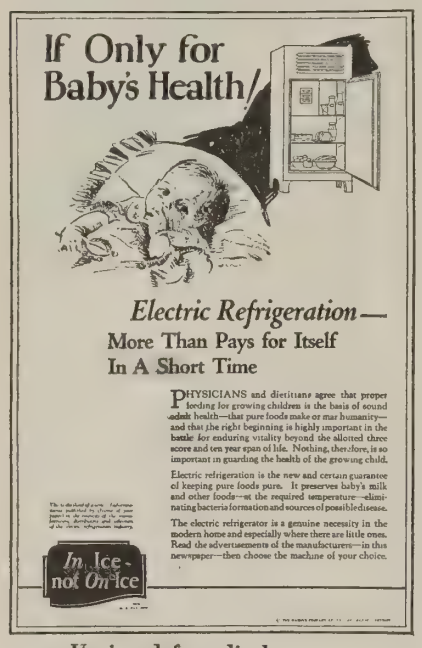
Mr. Edgecombe was announced as winner of the contest at the N. E. A. national convention in Los Angeles in late June.

Last year the Geneva editor served as president of the N. E. A.

NEW AD BUREAU MEMBERS

The Astoria (Ore.) Morning Astorian and the Centralia (Wash.) Chronicle have become members of the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association. The Hoquiam (Wash.) Gray's Harbor Washingtonian and the Olympia (Wash.) Morning Olympan & Evenng Recorder will become members effective Jan. 1, 1927.

BAILEY PROMOTION CHIEF



Truman Bailey has been made director of promotion for the San Francisco Examiner, succeeding J. R. Baker who now is connected with the Hearst general management in New York.

NIP THIS NEW FREE PUBLICITY SCHEME IN THE BUD, PUBLISHER ADVISES

Free Display Advertisements Broadcast from Detroit to Create Demand for Oil Burners and Electric Refrigerators—Publishers Offered Possible "Good Will" of Advertisers in Exchange CREATE public interest in an industry and expect the advertising of that industry to flow into your newspaper! Maybe it will and maybe not!

This new theory is being experimented with by the Detroit (Mich.) Free Press,

Unsigned free display space which is publishing, free of cost, display advertisements to command the attention of its readers to electric refrigeration and oil burning apparatus.

While the Free Press and several other newspapers, favor this new twist to free industrial publicity, the scheme is frowned upon by publishers who this week communicated with EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

Recently the Free Press ran a series of unsigned display spaces to advertise the advantages and alleged economies of mechanical home refrigeration and the use of oil burners to substitute for coal. Two of these display advertisements are reproduced in miniature on this page. They proclaim the virtues of these innovations without reservation, although it must be obvious that there is as much of a controversy in commercial circles today as to the merits of oil burning over coal as there has been in recent years concerning the merits of the air-cooled motor car over the water-cooled car, or alum baking powder, or similar trade disputes. However, it is claimed by the Free Press that its publication of these enticing free display notices in behalf of these industries has resulted in giving that paper favor from oil burning and mechanical refrigeration advertisers when they sought to place their branded articles before the consumers of Detroit.

Within the past two weeks the Warner Company, of Detroit, heretofore known as copywriters, but not well-known as advertising agents, broadcast to newspaper publishers proof sheets showing the Free Press free advertisements, seeking to induce publishers in general to print them on the theory that they, too, would be favored by the oil burner and refrigeration concerns, if and when they entered their cities with advertising schedules. A circular letter signed by the Warner company said: "We believe that in aiding the manufacturer in this manner, the newspaper renders a service that will be fully appreciated and for which it will be amply repaid. We believe that such a service will gain the advertiser's good will, and, incidently his business—far more effectively than by attempting to sell him ONLY on circulation, market and bulk of linage." The letter asserted that by this method the Detroit Free Press has "had more than its share of the business."

Of course, the Warner company will supply mats, and the usual press agent offerings to advance this valuable scheme for the oil burner and refrigeration interests. Whether the Warner company is being paid for getting this free publicity from newspapers, making liberal use of Detroit Free Press auspices, is not known, but the expense it is incurring to encourage publishers to print the free stuff would necessarily have to be recompensed in some form.

One publisher, who sent the Warner concern's letters and proofs to EDITOR & PUBLISHER, made the following comments: "It is bad enough when a newspaper opens its news columns to free advertising or propaganda, but it seems to me that it is about the limit when a newspaper gives its display space away. The writer cannot think of a more unethical procedure than this plan used by the Detroit Free Press, one of the leading newspapers of the country. It amounts to a rebate to the oil burner and electric refrigeration industries and it seems to be unfair competition to the competitors of the Free Press. This sort of thing should be nipped in the bud. It should not be extended to other newspapers. Newspapers must depend upon selling their space and if they are going to train advertisers to expect to receive advertising for nothing as an inducement to advertise, the whole fabric of the newspaper business could be eventually undermined. There is already too much space devoted to radio publicity, but if such newspapers as the Detroit Free Press encourages advertising agencies and manufacturers to resort to this sort of tactics, as indicated in this publicity, serious harm would be done to the newspaper business. Already, as you know, the question of co-operation with national advertisers has brought many abuses into the newspaper business.

Agent asks free insertion of this valuable advertisement

"One newspaper extends co-operation to a national advertiser or agency that another newspaper cannot afford to extend. The metropolitan newspapers will do almost anything now to co-operate with national advertisers. This leads the national advertisers and agencies to expect similar co-operation from newspapers in small towns and the income of the newspapers in the small towns does not justify service bureaus and the extensive co-operation which the metropolitan newspapers find it possible to render.

"My first thought was to send this letter to the A. N. P. A., my second thought was that perhaps EDITOR & PUBLISHER might wish to go into this tendency in the newspaper business. If the publication of display advertising by a newspaper in order to promote an industry is possible in the case of electrical refrigeration and oil burners, why should not that same course be applied to all lines of industries in which the newspaper hopes to obtain national advertising, or in which a newspaper desires to outstrip its contemporaries in the volume of display advertising carried."

HEADS N. Y. STAFF

William Forte Named Chicago Daily News Correspondent

William Forte has been appointed New York correspondent of the Chicago Daily News to take the place made vacant by the recent death of George T. Briggs.

WILLIAM FORTE

Mr. Forte has been a member of the News staff for more than seven years, coming to that paper from the Chicago City News Bureau. For the past five years he has covered the Federal building in Chicago.

The new New York correspondent is a graduate of the University of Michigan, Class of 1916. After leaving college he entered newspaper work via City News in his home city, Chicago.

When the United States entered the war he joined the army but did not see service abroad. Upon his discharge he joined the Daily News staff.

NEW MORNING PAPER

Abilene (Tex.) News Succeeds Reporter—Under Same Ownership

The Abilene, Tex., Reporter Publishing Company, has begun publication of the Abilene Morning News, which has taken over circulation of the former Morning Reporter, early night edition of the Daily Reporter, afternoon paper. This will be augmented by local circulation for the new paper, the first issue of which was 16 pages and carried full Associated Press dispatches.

Max Bentley, former managing editor of the Houston Chronicle and more recently staff correspondent of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, is managing editor of the News and the Reporter, while Frank Grimes, former editor and managing editor of the Reporter, is now editor of both papers.

BANK USING NEWSPAPERS

Members of the American Bankers' Association will consider the best forms of bank advertising in newspapers at the annual convention to be held in Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 4-7.

NEW AIR MAIL EXTENSION

Postmaster General New this week fixed Sept. 15 as the date when service will be inaugurated on the extension to Atlanta of the Miami-Jacksonville contract air mail route.

DEFINES "PETTER"

A 16 year old high school girl won the Chicago Evening American's prize of $100 for submitting the best definition of the word, "petter." She is Miss Rosalie Sabath, daughter of a real estate dealer, living at 3415 West Adams street. Her definition was: "A petter is a philanderer with a propensity for pawing." The contest was held to stimulate interest in the new serial.

ELECTRIC FIRMS PLA CO-OPERATIVE DRIVE

All Branches of Industry Agree on Fi Year Continuing Campaign Using Newspapers and Other Mediums —Large Fund Planned

An expansive campaign of advertisi both national and local to broaden service of electricity to the people of United States and Canada is in prepa tion. This campaign will be an import phase of a joint-effort program of mar development by the electrical indust For the first time the various branches the industry—manufacturers, electric s vice companies, wholesalers, local elect leagues, appliance retailers and contr tors who wire houses—are co-operating build business.

The plan, which is on a five-year co tinuing basis, has just been approved a adopted by 250 representatives of all f tors in the industry at Camp Cooperati on Association Island in Lake Ontar This camp is conducted each Septemt by the Society for Electrical Develc ment whose headquarters are at 522 Fi Avenue, New York.

By advertising, radio talks, literatt and exhibits the movement will atten to give people such a clear conception the comfort and convenience they can g out of electricity that the increased use electric current and appliances will redt prices to the public while expanding t market for these commodities.

To carry out this plan, which was pr pared by the Society at the direction 140 electrical leagues all over the Unit States and Canada, a continental orga ization is forming with the Society as head and with 400 or more electri leagues as local chapters. The plan co templates no reduction of competiti among manufacturers and among dist butors, but is designed to make keen co petition constructive instead of destructi

To support the plan a large fund w be provided for both national use by t Society and local use by the chapt leagues, each of which will operate wi the freedom of action that a state has relation to the federal government—it c initiate any activities it wishes so lo as it carries out carefully the defin national policies.

In the advertising campaign the Socie will handle national space, assisting t local leagues in local programs whe such assistance is needed to make it co form to the main plan.

An important novelty in the big pl is that the electrical industry is linking non-electrical retail distributors such department stores which now sell mo than 25 per cent of the country's ele trical appliances. These also will ha the benefit of the co-operative work. The stores will be included as members of t chapters along with the local power co pany, the contractor-dealers and t strictly electrical dealers of the region.

The finances behind this huge but fle ible plan will come from special fun set up by groups of manufacturers a from membership fees both national a local, those of each classification bei divided on a 50-50 basis.

NEW OWNERS MEET STAFF

Executives of Reorganized Los Angel News Hosts at Banquet

More than 200 employes of the L Angeles (Cal.) Illustrated News we recently the guests of their new e ployers at a banquet given at the Cha ber of Commerce Building. The affa was by way of celebrating the purcha of the newspaper property by the origi stockholders of the concern.

Testimonials to the loyalty of t newspaper's workers, and plans for t future were outlined by the officers. B. Andrews, vice-president of the ne publishing company, was toastmast Speakers at the banquet included: H. Granlee, business manager; Elias J Boddy, editor and publisher; and W liam Oliphant, president.

C. H. CLARK, HARTFORD COURANT EDITOR, DIES

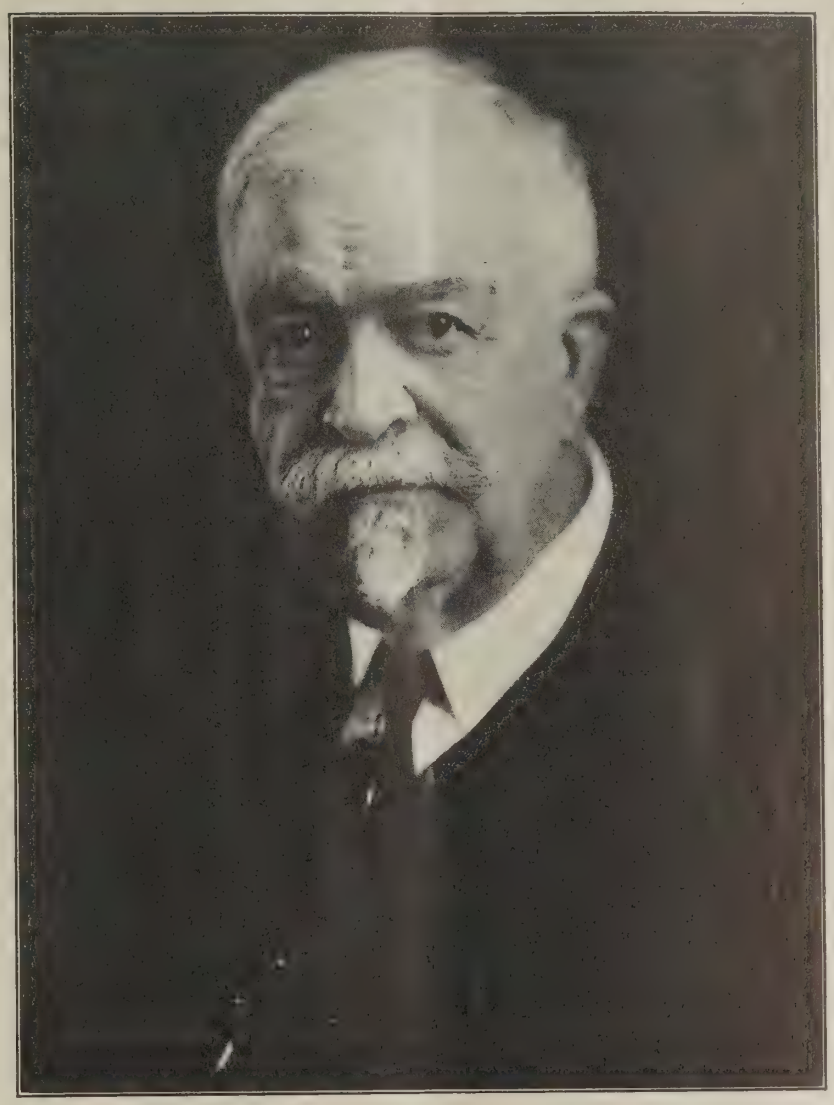
Noted Journalist Had Served 55 Years on Same Paper—Was Director of Associated Press from 1910 Until His Death—Publishers and Men High in Public Life Mourn His Passing

CHARLES HOPKINS CLARK, 78, veteran editor and publisher of the Hartford (Conn.) Courant, and since 1910 a director of the Associated Press, died at 8:22 o'clock Sunday evening at his home in Hartford after an illness of several months. The direct cause of his death was cerebral hemorrhage.

Mr. Clark had been in failing health for a number of years but continued at his desk daily to direct the affairs of the paper. Last January he suffered a cerebral hemorrhage and it was not believed that he would recover, but his vitality was such that he rallied and in a few weeks was able to sit in his chair at home and receive friends. In July Mr. Clark went to his summer home at Madison but returned after a brief stay. From his weakened condition it was known that there was no hope for his eventual recovery.

One of the oldest working journalists in the country, Charles Hopkins Clark had devoted all his active life to the service of a single newspaper, with which he was associated for 55 years.

He was born in Hartford, April 1, 1848 the son of Ezra and Mary (Hopkins) Clark. His father was for two terms a Representative in Congress. He was of early Colonial descent, his first American ancestor having been Lieutenant William Clark, who came from England and settled at Dorchester, Mass., in 1636, and from whom Charles Hopkins Clark was in the seventh generation. He was late in completing his academic education, not being graduated from Yale until 1871, when he was twenty-three years old, but his education was exceptionally thorough.



He had been out of college only a few months when one evening he entered the office of the Hartford Courant and asked for a job. General Joseph R. Hawley and Charles Dudley Warner were then the editors, assisted by Stephen A. Hubbard, who made up the forms and sent the paper to press. There was also an editor of telegraphic news and usually a reporter of local news who assisted in the office as a general utility man. But on this evening the reporter was absent without leave, so that the office was 20 per cent short handed. It was the day of the great Chicago fire. In a few minutes Clark was seated at a desk with a map of Chicago before him, tracing the advance of the fire and editing the dispatches as they came in.

In an article written for EDITOR & PUBLISHER, March 9, 1918, Mr. Clark told in his own way how he became associated with the Courant.

"Soon after leaving college I heard that there was to be a competitive examination in Chicago for a position as teacher in the high school there, and I went out—and came back again," he wrote. "I was handsomely beaten by a woman competitor.

"When I came home, uncertain what to do, I applied by chance to the Courant for an opportunity to work, and happened to hit on the right day. The most useful man on the very small force then employed was away on a spree and the proprietors themselves were having to work overtime. They took me on 'temporarily' and I have been here ever since. Under the circumstances I cannot condemn 'wine and women as strenuously as some others do, for I owe them my life job. How much the youth of Chicago of that period lost for lack of my influence, and what would have been the status of the city today had I been allowed to steer its susceptible boys into manhood, must be left to the broad but barren field of conjecture."

For a time he filled the place of the missing reporter, and then step by step advanced to more responsible duties. After ten years General Hawley went to the United States Senate and Clark took up his work on the paper, especially that relating to state and national politics, Warner preferring to occupy himself with literary work and criticism. Then in 1890 Hubbard died and Warner and Clark were left at the head of the paper with Clark as editor-in-chief. In the fall of 1900 Warner died and Clark was left in sole command.

Charles Hopkins Clark

The training which he received under Hawley and Warner in his early years was of the most thorough and scholarly kind. He adapted himself to the revolutionary changes which the years brought into all departments of newspaper making and thus made the staid Courant one of the most enterprising and progressive of papers, though always retaining the literary impress which Warner and others had given to it.

In 1910 the editor of the Courant was elected a director of the Associated Press and afterward he became a member of the executive committee of the board which places he held at the time of his death. The affairs of the news-gathering organization had his constant attention from 1910 until a few months before his death. He was never too busy to carry on a voluminous correspondence in connection with his directorship in the association; he attended every meeting of the board, when it was physically possible for him to reach New York.

His loyalty to the Associated Press was only second to that given the Courant, if there can be any second place where the loyalty is 100 per cent. in both cases. Mr. Clark was not only loyal to the Associated Press himself, but he also insisted that everybody in the newsgathering end of the Courant be loyal. He emphasized the idea that his newspaper was not merely a receiving station for Associated Press news—not simply a user of the A. P. service—but that the Courant was full partner in the Associated Press.

It was also in 1910 that Mr. Clark became a fellow of the Corporation of Yale University and he attended as closely to the duties he had undertaken for his alma mater as though he had no other interests. Throughout his life Mr. Clark was devoted to the university at New Haven and identified himself generously with its every undertaking. While at college he formed associations and friendships which never were broken save by death. Until the last he corresponded with surviving classmates and conspicuous on his desk after he had left the office for the last time were notices from his class secretary, Rev. Charles H. Peck of Broad Brook.

Mr. Clark was active nearly half a century in Republican party affairs and always kept the Courant stalwartly Republican. He began attending Republican national conventions as a reporter with the Connecticut delegation in 1888 when Benjamin Harrison was nominated at Chicago from a field of 14 candidates, and attended every national convention since. In the last five, beginning with that at Chicago in 1908 which first nominated William Howard Taft, Mr. Clark went as a delegate-at-large from Connecticut.

The Courant editor was a friend of many presidents. He had met Mr Taft as a fellow member of the Skull and Bones at Yale a quarter of a century before the latter became President. Mr. Clark also enjoyed the acquaintanceship of President Roosevelt, and President McKinley before him. He had been a warm friend of President Coolidge long before the latter became President.

As an editor Mr. Clark was tolerant and respected the views of those who differed with him.

The kindly acts of Mr. Clark where Courant men were concerned, were many, but his good deeds were done quietly and few knew of them except the beneficiaries themselves. A man who was loyal to the Courant was sure of a lifelong friend in Mr. Clark. The man who tried to undermine a loyal Courant man with the editor of the paper found cold comfort. One day, the story goes, a man entered Mr. Clark's office, which was always open to the public, and there were no formalities connected with seeing the head of the paper, to make complaint against one of the reporters. Mr. Clark heard the man through. From his knowledge of the reporter, feeling confident that he was not at fault and that the caller simply wanted to do him an injury, he looked up and said: "There are two ways out of this office; one is the door and the other the window."

On another occasion, a man employed by the Courant in its news department, had failed to appreciate what had been done for him in his time of affliction, and had become a steady cause of worry, so irregular—or, perhaps it should be said so regular—had he become in certain habits, it was suggested to Mr. Clark that the thing to do was to discharge the man and some employers would have said: "Go ahead; don't bother me about it."

This particular employer simply asked: "What is he going to do, if we let him go?"

And the man stayed—but mended his ways.

The Courant editor was an extensive traveler in almost all parts of the world and was an occasional contributor of scholarly articles to The North American Review and other magazines. He was a director of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company, the Phoenix Fire Insurance Company, the Collins Company, of Hartford, and of the Connecticut Reformatory; a trustee of the Wadsworth Athenæum, the Watkinson Library, the Hartford Public Library and the Good Will Club, of Hartford.

Mr. Clark was a member of the Century, Yale and University Clubs of New York, the Hartford Club of Hartford

COOLIDGE PAYS TRIBUTE TO HARTFORD EDITOR

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE paid tribute to Charles Hopkins Clark in the following telegram sent to Mrs. Clark, Monday:

"The death of your husband, my friend, Charles Hopkins Clark, I feel as a great loss. He held one of the high places in the journalism of our country. His newspaper always stood for high ideals in the social and political life of the nation. For many years his great ability as an editor was a distinct influence in guiding the public mind in accordance with principles that were sound and ethics that were high. He always represented the best that there is in American life. I trust that your knowledge that you have the sympathy of the nation may comfort you in your time of bereavement."

and the Graduates' Club of New Haven. In 1910 he received the degree of Litt.D. from Trinity College. He was twice married; first, in 1873, to Miss Ellen Root, daughter of Elisha K. Root, president of the Colt Firearms Company, who died in 1895; and second, in 1899, to Miss Matilda Colt Root, sister of his former wife.

Mr. Clark is survived by his wife and two children, Horace B. Clark, secretary of the Courant Company and Mary Hopkins Clark, wife of Henry K. W. Welch.

Immediately when news of his death became known, telegrams of condolence from editors, publishers, and men in public life paying high tribute to the deceased Courant editor poured in upon his family.

Funeral services were held at 1:30 o'clock Wednesday at the Asylum Hill Congregational Church. Burial was at Spring Grove Cemetery.

The following were honorary bearers: Judge Edward B. Bennett of Hartford; Charles F. Brooker of Ansonia, chairman of the board of the American Brass Company; ex-Mayor Louis R. Cheney, Henry H. Conland, treasurer, and Edward M. Day, a director, of the Hartford Courant Company, all of Hartford; Dr. Frederic S. Dennis of Norfolk and New York, professor emeritus of surgery, Cornell University Medical College; ex-Governor Marcus H. Holcomb of Southington; United States Senator George P. McLean of Simsbury; James Lee Loomis of Granby, president of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company; Lawyer Howard Mansfield of New York; Edward Milligan of Hartford, president of the Phoenix Insurance Company; Frank B. Noyes of Washington, D. C., president of the Associated Press; Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the New York Times; Colonel Norris G. Osborn, editor of the New Haven Journal-Courier; Judge John H. Perry of Southport, former speaker of the Connecticut House of Representatives; J. Henry Roraback, chairman of the Republican state central committee; Melville E. Stone, counselor of the Associated Press; and Archibald A. Welch, president of the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Company.

Men long associated with Mr. Clark at the Courant were the active bearers, Harry I. Horton, editorial writer; Frederick W. Turner, superintendent of the mechanical department; Bertrand H. Turner, foreman of the composing room; Theodore C. Wallen, assistant managing editor; Walter S. G. Harris, assistant secretary, and John Sudarsky, office manager.

"DON'T FIGHT, ADVERTISE"

Sir Charles Higham Handling British Anti-Strike Campaign

Large business interests in England are advertising to the striking coal miners, urging them to go back to work.

The campaign was planned by Sir Charles Higham, British advertising agent, and it is said that $50,000 a month has been spent in newspaper advertising in the last two months.

This week the New York Evening Journal commented on the news as follows:

"The late Joseph Pulitzer is said to have advised certain quarrelsome individuals, 'Don't fight, ADVERTISE.'

"Business men in England, their business hurt by the long coal strike, raised $100,000, and told Sir Charles Higham, advertising expert, to use it persuading British coal miners to go back to work.

"Our Government might try that advertising plan on bootleggers. Everything else has failed."

OFFICIAL ATTACKS EDITOR

Dean Brua, county clerk of Rice county, Kansas, attacked Paul Jones, editor of the Lyons (Kan.) Daily News recently, when they met on the steps of the courthouse. Jones, in a series of newspaper articles, has been demanding an investigation of county affairs. Jones refused to prosecute.

VETERAN COURANT EDITOR HONORED IN TRIBUTES BY FRIENDS

LEADERS in public life and representative newspaper publishers and editors paid tribute to the character of Charles Hopkins Clark, editor of the Courant.

Among these expressions were the following:

FRANK B. NOYES, publisher of the Washington Star, and president of the Associated Press:

"In the death of Charles Hopkins Clark the country has lost a really great journalist, Hartford one of its first citizens and the Associated Press one of its wisest advisers. I have known him well for many years, respected and admired his great qualities of mind and heart and held him in tender affection as a dear friend whose passing is a keen sorrow to me."

ADOLPH S. OCHS, publisher of the New York Times: "In the death of Charles Hopkins Clark the country loses one of its foremost citizens, a true patriot, a wide counselor, a courageous leader, a type of the best American manhood. He was a man of the broadest sympathies and intelligent appreciation of human problems and perplexities, of scholarly attainments and had an intimate knowlege of the political and economic questions of the world.

"His genial nature and warm-hearted friendship affectionately attached to him men of diverse opinions and predilections. He was a practitioner of the highest standards of journalism, an honor to the profession and a noble inspiration to his contemporaries. He was, for many years, a most useful member of the board of directors of the Associated Press and of its executive board. He goes to his rest crowned with a record of great and distinguished public service and with the respect and admiration of all who knew him. His life and works will be treasured memories. I have a sense of keen personal bereavement and I mourn with his family and associates, for I have lost a dear and good friend."

KENT COOPER, general manager of the Associated Press: "Charles Hopkins Clark was the personification of the word loyalty; loyal in all things to which he adhered he had almost a superloyalty for his friends. There abided in him genuine affection for those who were fortunate enough to be associated with him. No man devoted himself more loyally to a duty than Mr. Clark devoted to the responsibilities of serving as a director of the Associated Press. For that reason he will be greatly missed by his fellow directors and by the management of this organization."

OGDEN REID, publisher, New York Herald Tribune: "Charles Hopkins Clark was an editor of force and individuality. He brought the strength of the older school of American journalists to the conditions of modern publication and newsgathering. His unfailing interest in the expansion of the Associated Press and his contribution of character and judgment thereto won him the highest regard from his fellow-newspapermen. He served his community, his state and the country and his death will be universally regretted."

ROBERT MCLEAN, Philadelphia Bulletin: "The death of Charles Hopkins Clark is a great personal loss and sorrow to all of us who have known him and loved him. It is the passing of a newspaper publisher whose high ideals and lovable qualities made a lasting impression on those who came in contact with him during his long and useful life."

EDWARD PAGE MITCHELL, former editor, New York Sun: "Grief for the loss of a noble veteran and a great leader in American journalism of the best sort and personal sympathy from a coeval whose dates in the profession correspond almost exactly with Mr. Clark."

STUART H. PERRY, publisher, Adrian (Mich.) Telegram: "The death of Charles Hopkins Clark is to me a personal bereavement, for through long association with him on the directorate of the Associated Press I had come to love him as well as to admire his character and ability. He will be missed not only by all who have worked with him and enjoyed the benefits of his wise counsel, high ideals and charming personality, but by the public that he served so well and by the publishers throughout the country, among whom he occupied so honored and distinguished a position."

ARTHUR TWINING HADLEY, president emeritus, Yale University: "Charles Hopkins Clark was one of the warmest hearted men that ever lived. He knew how to make friends and to keep them. Sympathetic contact with others was the ruling passion of his life, and the greatest source of his power."

DWIGHT W. MORROW, of J. P. Morgan & Co.: "The death of Charles Hopkins Clark will bring a sense of loss to a great number of people, old and young, all over the United States. His honesty, his courage and his intelligence made him a great newspaper man. His vigorous personality and dominant will made him a stout enemy and also tenacious friend. He loved his friends and his friends loved him. They will be poorer without him and richer because he was a part of their lives."

NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER, president, Columbia University: "His great ability, his grasp on public questions, his courage, his instinct for the right side of a disputed issue and his exceptional power of convincing statement, all united to make him a great journalist and a great citizen. His was a rich and deep personality whose passing leaves a void which will not be filled."

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT, Chief Justice of the United States: "His going creates a real void in the life of those who were privileged to know him and to appreciate his friendship and in the community where he had been a tower of strength for forty years."

COMMUNITY ADVERTISING

To Ask Legislation in 34 States Legalizing Public Funds

Appointment of a legislative committee whose duty it will be to prepare an enabling act for introduction into some 34 states, granting authority to municipalities to appropriate funds from municipal revenues for community advertising, has been announced by Charles F. Hatfield, St. Louis, president of the American Community Advertising department of the International Advertising Association. The selection of the committee is in accordance with the action of the association at the annual convention of the World Ad Clubs in Philadelphia last June. The committee consists of:

Martin Keet, secretary of the Sunbury, Pa., Chamber of Commerce, who spoke at the Philadelphia convention on legislative enactment to aid community advertising, chairman: Dr. Leonard P. Fox, research manager of the Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce; George T. Armitage, Honolulu; H. J. Gray, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Dowell Livesay, Denver, Col.; Claude Simpson, Roswell, N. Mex., and E. B. Walker, Fitchburg, Mass.

WATER DAMAGES PRESSROOM

Water stood 30 inches deep in the press room of the Galesburg (Ill.) Evening Mail Sept. 1, following a cloudburst in the district, saturating the new motor drive equipment for the main press, delaying publication and causing damage to 47 rolls of paper on that floor. Seven tons of paper were discarded and the day following the downpour the Mail was limited to 12 pages.

NEW DAILY IN TEXAS

James M. Bird, publisher of the McAllen (Tex.) Telegram, has started publication of the Harlingen (Tex.) Globe.

PAPER'S STAFF JAILE FOR ALLEGED LIBEL

Governor of Mexican State Tal Summary Action After Court Had Released Men for Lack of Evidence

By JULIO TRENS

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 1.—All of members of the editorial, mechanical a business staff of El Correo del Cent published in the city of Leon, Guanaju have been imprisoned by order of G ernor Enrique Colunga in connect with a suit for libel recently institu by the State Executive against the ne paper. The prisoners were taken fr Leon, fifty miles to the state capital a were confined in the historic Castle Granaditas.

During the recent gubernatorial ca paign in the state of Guanajuato, Correo del Centro, an independent, position paper, made several atta against Governor Colunga, who was r ning for re-election. Suit for libel w started against the paper by the G ernor and Manuel S. Vazquez, the m aging editor, was arrested. He was f lowed by Arturo Cisneros Peña, w was likewise promptly jailed.

The two editors were brought bef Judges Agapito Pozo and Ildefor Quirox, respectively, and were discharg by the court for lack of evidence. G ernor Colunga then took the matter of the hands of the Leon courts and tained from Judge Federico Carrion, the penal court in the state capital, order for the third editor, Octavio H nandez; Romulo Mendivil, the busin manager; Ruben S. Estrada, the linoty operator; Adres Gutierrez, linotype prentice, and Laon Rayas, the office b He also started criminal proceedin against Judge Pozo.

The newspaper is a member of t Associated Press of the Mexican Sta and this body is endeavoring to obt action against Governor Colunga. R mulo Mendivil is a member of the E tors' Association of the Federal Distri and Ruben S. Estrada is a member the Linotype Union. Both organizatio are now active in behalf of their asso ates. The Federation of Graphic A and the Confederacion Regional Obre Mexicana are also active.

STATE A. P. GROUPS MEET

Cummins of Wilmington News Hea Maryland-Delaware Members

More complete coverage of local ter tory was decided upon at a meeting the Associated Press representatives Maryland and Delaware, held in Sal bury, Md., Saturday night, Sept. Through a budget, subscribed by t papers of the territory, it is proposed cover all of the towns where there a not now correspondents, also to cover t Maryland Legislature in detail.

The group formed the Maryland a Delaware Associated Press Associatio Albert W. Cummins, editor of the W mington Morning News, was elect president; Ralph O. Brown, in charge the Baltimore office, secretary. Jose B. Finan, of the Cumberland (Md.) Ev ning Times, was re-elected the distri member of the Eastern Division Adviso Board.

The chief feature of the meeting was banquet at which F. P. Adkins, pu lisher, and Charles J. Truitt and A. Truitt, editor and business manager the Salisbury Evening Times, we hosts.

It was decided to hold the next mee ing in Wilmington.

PRICE SCHOOL OPENS OCT. 7

The Charles Morris Price School Advertising and Journalism, conducte under the direction of the Poor Richa Club of Philadelphia, will open for th school year Oct. 7. The school is bein given splendid support by the adverti ing leaders of Philadelphia.

ADVERTISING BUILDING OIL BURNER INDUSTRY

Automatic Burner Companies Making Increased Use of Newspaper Space—Infant Industry Has Grown in Six Years to $100,000,000 Giant CONSIDERABLE talk these days centers around "modernization of home heating appliances." Some there are who believe the epoch of the coal shovel and the ash barrel is already ancient history. They are the manufacturers of automatic oil burners and they are now purchasing newspaper space on a national scale to teach home owners the newest way of fighting next winter's cold waves.

Among the largest and most consistent newspaper advertising campaigns conducted by an oil burner manufacturer is that of the May Oil Burner Corporation, Baltimore, Md., of which B. R. Canfield is advertising manager.

This concern is now running in excess of a 10,000 line contract in morning and evening newspapers in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, New Orleans, St. Louis and Cleveland. In addition it is helping to pay for dealer tie-up advertising in dailies in smaller cities throughout the east and middle west. The present fall campaign consists of a series of 42-line teaser advertisements, followed by some 840 line insertions, dramatizing the quietness of the "Quiet May."

Noisiness of the earlier type of oil burners has caused consumer resistance which the May Oil Burner Corporation is seeking to break down by advertising. The copy in this campaign, and the schedules and media, were all prepared by N. W. Ayer & Son, New York.

A more sentimental angle is taken by the Caloroil Burner Corporation, New York. G. H. Rittenhouse, director of sales, has placed his company's advertising problem in the hands of Charles W. Hoyt, Inc., New York advertising agency. The copy prepared stresses the comforts of using oil burners, comforts for the young baby in his morning tub, the young wife relieved of the worry of a balky fire and "trips to a dirty cellar."

This firm is spending approximately $18,000 this fall in newspaper space along the eastern coast. In addition to this appropriation it has agreed to pay dollar for dollar with all local dealers who wish to place copy in their home town newspapers. There are about 65 Caloroil dealers in that many eastern cities.

The bulk of the company's advertising began appearing Sept. 9, in the Richmond Times-Dispatch, Philadelphia Morning Public Ledger and Evening Public Ledger, Washington Star, Baltimore Sun, Boston Transcript and New York Herald Tribune. The schedule calls for 1000-line contracts with copy appearing usually weekly throughout September and in some cities to the middle of October.

Another big user of newspaper space is the Williams Oil-O-Matic Heating Corporation, of Bloomington, Ill. Since the early days of its history, this company has relied almost exclusively on newspaper advertising to reach consumers, starting in a small way using Chicago dailies, and gradually expanding its list. F. D. Chamberlain is advertising manager.

It is doubtful if Williams Oil-O-Matic manufactured more than 200 burners in 1920. In 1924 their output was fixed at 9,000. In 1925 their production schedule called for 20,000 burners, but fell short of that due to production difficulties. Their production schedule for 1926 is said to be for 50,000 burners.

These figures are more or less typical of what is going on throughout the entire oil burner field. During the last six or eight years the industry has grown from an infant to a giant industry with annual sales of nearly $100,000,000.

Each year shows an increase in the amount of money spent for oil burners for both domestic and industrial use. Many manufacturers show an increase, within a very few years, of several hundred per cent, some several thousand per cent. One concern shows an increase, between 1921 and 1924, of 4,500 per cent, and another, an increase of 6,000 per cent. Directly in line with this growth in the sale of burners is a similar growth in the sale of all the auxiliary equipment used in manufacturing and installing burners; for example, one tank manufacturer shows an increase of 228 per cent, from 1921 to 1924, in his sales of tanks for domestic use alone.

H. O. Raymond, of the advertising department of the W. B. Wilde Company, reported to EDITOR & PUBLISHER that his concern is concentrating the bulk of its advertising allowance in newspapers, supplemented by direct mail. Magazine space, radio broadcasting and some billboard showings are also on the schedule. The W. B. Wilde Company manufactures the Hart Oil Burner.

The Henry L. Doherty Company, New York, is working on a new device to be called the Doherty Gas Oil Burner, which, however, will not be ready for consumer advertising until next summer. Then the advertising department expects to go heavily into newspaper space.

In addition to accepting paid advertising at regular rates, newspapers are supporting the growing industry in other ways. The Boston Evening American and Daily Advertiser last month began publishing a series of six advertisements stressing the advantages and comforts to home owners through the use of oil heating installations. This series was originated by the Boston daily, it is claimed, and has no connection with the free publicity hand-out ad copy being supplied other dailies by an advertising agency. The latter copy is described on another page of this issue.

The oil burner manufacturers have reached the stage of development where they have their national association, and already there is some talk of co-operative consumer advertising. It is called the American Oil Burner Association and is managed by Leod D. Becker with offices at 350 Madison avenue, New York.

Insufficient funds limit the co-operative advertising efforts at the present time. The association is getting out pamphlets and other literature to appeal to architects, builders, and apartment house and hotel owners.

The industry is growing by leaps and bounds, and Mr. Becker believes it will not be long before some co-operative advertising will be placed on a large scale.

Approximately 520 manufacturers are making oil burners of all types.

Quantity production marks only one phase of the increase in the domestic burner field. The increase in the number and kinds of companies entering the domestic burner manufacturing field is of significance to the oil burner industry. With many years of manufacturing traditions in other fields, large organizations, amply financed, are beginning to develop and manufacture oil burning equipment.

Among such nationally known companies which are now manufacturing domestic burners are: The Standard Oil Company of New York; the Wayne Tank and Pump Company; Gilbert and Barker Manufacturing Company, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey; Bethlehem Ship Building Corporation; Sunstrand Adding Machine Company; Henry L. Doherty & Co.; the Timken-Detroit Axel Company; the Gulf Refining Company. Several other firms of similar size and standing have oil burners in developmental stages, which will soon be placed on the market. The entrance of these companies into the field gives much needed stability to the industry and insures its perpetuation.

Following are estimates on the production of some of the leading burner firms, based on figures given by the manufacturers and checked with manufacturers of auxiliary equipment used with these burners, who have a fairly accurate check on output:

Oil-O-Matic	12,000
Nokol	7,000
Kleen Heet	6,000
Johnson	5,000
Ray	5,000
A. B. C.	3,500
Baker	2,500
Electrol	2,500
Aetna	2,500
Hart	2,500
Hardinge	2,000

Many other companies' production figures came close to the 2,000 mark during 1925, and should a 1926 schedule be made they would appear as important producers, while the figures of those listed here would show substantial increases.

The estimate for burners installed in homes at the end of 1925 was 686,000, and the official estimate shows that there should be at least 220,000 domestic installations made during 1926. It must be understood that this estimate covered not only automatic and forced draft furnace burners, but also the less expensive natural draft burner used in cook stoves, heating stoves, etc. Estimates also indicate that at the close of this year there will have been 18,000 commercial (hotels, apartments, office buildings) installations made during the previous twelve months, also 8,000 industrial burners totaling for the year 246,000 installations.

Young Mr. Chub is fussy!

WHEN Young Mr. Chub has his bath, he wants things right. His bathroom and nursery must be warm. He's fussy.

So is his mother. She has to worry about the temperature of the rooms. But what a relief it is to have a Caloroil Burner in the cellar. She can have whatever temperature she wants in a jiffy. And she can have uniform warmth day after day, regardless of weather changes. Never is the house as hot as an oven one hour, cold as an ice-box the next.

Caloroil thinks for you

PUT Caloroil in your cellar and put heating off your mind. Take perfect warmth for granted—"Balanced temperature" thinks for you, day and night. Caloroil turns on when room temperature falls to 70° —shuts off at 72° (or whatever other temperature you want it set for, day or night).

Caloroil can settle any doubts you have about owning an oil burner. And Caloroil offers a liberal deferred payment plan.

Send for Caloroil Book

IT TELLS why every particle of oil is burned . . . why Caloroil is clean heat . . . is noiseless heat . . . publishes testimonials from Caloroil users who have cut large slices from their fuel bills . . . shows how Caloroil can be installed in any furnace economically.

70° ON ▲ 72° OFF
"BALANCED TEMPERATURE"
Caloroil has it

Please send me your free book telling how Caloroil makes heating as simple and efficient as electric lighting.
Name .....
Street .....
City ..... State .....

Caloroil 70°-72°

The "BALANCED TEMPERATURE" Oil Burner

Listed as standard by Underwriters' Laboratories Member, American Oil Burner Assn. © 1926

Keeping the kiddies warm this coming winter is one slant taken by an oil burner manufacturer whose newspaper copy is reproduced above. Many different appeals are being used by concerns now trying to reach the public through the daily press.

REFRIGERATOR TIE-UP DRIVE

Electrical Society Distributing Mats to Dealers

The Society for Electrical Development, New York, has prepared newspaper mats on electric refrigeration in four-column and five-column sizes to be used by dealers in tie-up campaigns.

Firms joining in the campaign are: Servel Corporations; Delco Light Company (Frigidaire); Kelvinator Corporation; Copeland Products, Inc.; Nizer Corporation, and General Electric Company.

TO ADVERTISE OKLAHOMA

Oklahomans, Inc. is planning a drive to start Sept. 20 to obtain 50,000 members and a fund of $675,000 to advertise Oklahoma nationally and within the state. N. R. Graham, of Tulsa, is president.

GILDED FIFTH AVENUE SEEN AS SYMBOL OF AMERICA'S SPENDING AGE

Western Newspaper Man Finds Luxury of Metropolis Transcends Ancient Glories—Leveling Process of Modern Fashion Operates Through Advertising

By IRVING BRANT

TO one who has just driven an automobile from San Francisco to the Hudson River, avoiding the cities and receiving impressions direct from the countryside, America still retains some of that simplicity which dates from the time of homespun and the open hearth. But there is nothing homespun about the great cities. In them is the spending power of America, the lavishness of unprecedented wealth, the ostentation of social rivalry and the recklessness of the material, industrial age.

All that the smaller cities dream of being, New York is. Wealth and the display of wealth center here. The riches of America pour into the concavity of New York like sunrays into a burning glass, and money is spent with the concentrated fervor of the sunbeam focused to a fiery point.

The titanic display of wealth and luxury in New York needs no somber background to set it off, but the contrast is furnished nevertheless. Second avenue is back of Fifth avenue. New York wears broadcloth over burlap.

To walk down Fifth avenue, at this date in early September, is to encounter all the allurements that human genius can devise to extract the winged dollar from its uneasy resting place. To stroll through the motor palaces about Columbus Circle is to strike that phase of American psychology which stratifies the population into the one-car family, the three-car family and the nine-car family. Three motor cars in Maine, three in New York and three in Florida are not merely the minimum ambition of a well-ordered American family: they are the natural concomitant of the country house, the town house and the winter residence, without which no real family life can be said to exist.

Fifth avenue, then, is a symbol of the age. It satisfies and stimulates the spending urge. Its overpowering beauty, transcending the dreams of silken Samarcand and ruby-laden India, is a soporific to the sense of touch. Nowhere else in the United States, except at the ringside of a prize fight, is there so vast, so universal an appeal to that state of mind in which a twenty-dollar gold piece looks like a plugged nickel.

In the realm of fashion, Paris proposes but New York disposes. The old-fashioned Englishman, as everybody knows, gets up in the morning and remarks: "It's a fine day. Let's go out and kill something." The New York woman remarks: "My but I'm tired. Let's go spend something."

I wandered into the most reserved and richest looking fur shop in Fifth avenue and stunned the proprietor by asking:

"Do people ever buy furs here on the installment plan?"

"My God, no!" he replied. "They do that in Sixth avenue."

I let him know that my interest was only hypothetical, and asked what he had in a really high grade ladies' fur—the best in stock—again explaining that my interest was hypothetical.

"The best we have," he answered, with the air of making change for a dime, "is something in a mink or broadtail, about $4,000 or $5,000."

"What makes people buy them?" I asked, indicating the general array of priceless garments. "What is the real basis of your business?"

"The real basis of my business," replied the shop-keeper, "is that the people have so much money they don't know how to spend it."

The advertising manager of one of the larger exclusive shops told me that his establishment was advertising higher priced goods this fall than had been its custom.

"We are acting," he said, "on the theory that there is more money to be spent this year than ever before."

Perhaps he was wrong. What he really meant is that the people never were freer in spending for luxuries.

I strolled up and down Fifth avenue, looking at the shops and looking at shoppers.

The simplest street dress, today, is a glorious creation of chiffon or silk which would have passed for a ballgown a few years ago. The shoppers one and all look as if their entire wardrobe had been bought within the hour. Go into an office where girls are working for small salaries, and there is that same rustle and shimmer of costly fabrics, ever and always topped by the permanent wave.

As flowering plants tempt the bee and hummingbird with showy petals, so the windows use the brilliant sheen of silk and the glitter of spangled velvet to entice the human eye. For a single window displaying the quiet richness of wines and browns there are a dozen gleaming with the colors of the rainbow.

Clothes and jewels, jewels and furs, make up the endless array.

The old-fashioned jewelry store, with its large display of watches and marble clocks, its trays of rings and shelves of table silver, has sunk to oblivion in the age of luxury. The jeweler today could furnish a house with everything up to a four-post bed in jade and ivory. His shop is a blend of the Palace of Versailles and a Flemish monastery. He has golden clocks a quarter of an inch thick and fifteen inches in circumference. Bracelets, amulets, circlets, tiaras, pendants, lavallieres, ear rings—nothing is lacking but the nose ring to testify to the universality of the human craving for bodily adornment.

The jeweler encroaches upon the house furnisher, the couturier borrows from the jeweler and wages a death struggle with the furrier. "Velvet on gowns," says one Fifth avenue house, "is the mark of Paris elegance." Velvet is also the cloth of cloths for the display of jewels, and the American woman buys a gown compounded of velvet and pearl, velvet and brilliants, velvet and sequins or some other light-reflecting armor. The maker of cloth coats, witnessing the ever-mounting vogue of fur, first essays a bit of fur trimming, then a fur border, and now the windows are full of coats, ranking as cloth and made by the cloth houses, which display more than 50 per cent fur.

The fur houses, not to lose their share of early season trade, offer pre-season discounts, and for a deposit of 10 per cent will hold any fur garment until November 1 free of extra charge.

What in the meantime is happening around the block? The Sixth avenue furrier, in his dingy store beneath the elevated, announces in somewhat larger lettering that a deposit of $5 will hold the most expensive fur in his stock. So the New York shopgirl will go to work next winter in Hudson seal or silver muskrat, and the last instalment will be paid in the fall of 1928, just after she puts down her first deposit on a caracul or white ermine wrap.

This is the time of the year when, in the old days, mother went downtown and bought school clothes for little Willie—a pair of stout shoes, two or three pair of heavy black stockings and perhaps, if he absolutely had to have it, a new suit.

I stopped before a Fifth avenue window which displayed an ideal outfit for a boy of thirteen years. It centered in a large brassbound trunk. Not for the pupil of the public school was that window arranged, but for the youthful traveler to a boys' boarding school upstate, in the Appalachians, or in Switzerland. Again there was the assumption, founded on fact, that this is a spending age and the possession of eleven neckties is prerequisite to an education.

I wish that somebody would compute the cost of serving a patron who does not buy, in one of the more elaborate shops for women. It is not a mere matter of taking the time of a clerk who would be paid anyway. With an easy chair for each patron, and liberal space for the display of goods, the showing of wares to a single person involves a considerable amount of rent money and may require the services of half a dozen people.

For instance: "If you drive your own car," reads a statement by a Fifth avenue shopman, "one of a corps of uniformed chauffeurs will drive it to our private garage and return your car when wanted at our shop.

There you have for one person a chauffeur, clerks and mannequins, and perhaps ten minutes of friendly chat from the proprietor, besides the double rental. Somebody has to pay for it, and the failure of a patron to make a purchase may be an actual item of several dollars in the expense account. Service and rentals form a staggering proportion of the cost of business and of the extravagance of modern life.

The fashion of liberal spending has long been cultivated in the theater, but it remained for the season of 1926 to see $100 charged for a single seat on the opening night of a revue. How much of the cost of the theater is due to the feeling that one must be seen in the most expensive section? I told a friend that I intended to see a certain show.

"Don't go there," he admonished. "The seats are in the hands of speculators and they are getting $10 apiece."

I bought my ticket at the box office and paid $1.10 for a very satisfactory seat.

The excessive spending of money is governed by vanity, fear and artifice, from the 50-cent tip with the 30-cent taxi fare to the $12,000-a-year apartment in which no man knows his neighbors but merely knows that his neighbors know he is paying $12,000 a year. Yet there is something democratic about it all. The priceless ballgown worn three or four times goes from mistress to maid, from maid to secondhand store, and from secondhand store to the ball room of the courtesan. The most exclusive Parisian frock is copied at half its original cost, and the New York copy is copied again, with or without permission, until half the girls who ride in the Times building elevator are gowned in the modes of Patou, Jenny, Mannasse and Charlaine.

The pirating of models may not be ethical, but it serves a social purpose, leveling society up where others would level it down. I fear, too, that it is quite extensive. The variety of articles displayed in one window so impressed me that I stopped to jot their names on a slip of paper. At once a uniformed curbman stepped up and said in a hard, cold voice: "This shop don't allow any copying of its models."

I showed him that what I had on the paper was my own handwriting, the worst that has been seen since Horace Greeley died, but he continued to mistake it for a sketch of the Paris frocks and repeated that I could do no copying. So I merely thanked him for the compliment and went on. The real pirates probably sketch on their cuffs and fume at the size of their laundry bills.

If one were to choose a symbol of the universal love of luxury and luxuriant display, I think the chosen symbol might well be the most familiar object in the sight of men—the stocking.

If Charles II lived in New York today he would modify his fashion-setting remark that he had no use for a leg unless it was in a green stocking. The solitary requirement today is that the stocking be of silk. From Duchess to dishwasher, from ten-cent store cler down to the merest debutante, the si stocking is the sine qua non of feminin apparel. Whatever be the fluctuatio of the knee line, the silk stocking goes forever.

What lies back of this gigantic expe diture, this vast and repeated turn-ove this concentration of spending pow and the lavishness of material objects t wards which it is directed?

Beyond question, it is advertising. A vertising moves the wheels of fashio Advertising directs the inevitable outflo of money from the wealthy and stimu lates the impulse to rival or excel. A vertising tells the working girl that sh too can wear clothes of silk, chiffon, ve vet and fur. Advertising has created th great American anomaly—a society i which no stenographer is too poor fo gowns that in another age would hav excited the envy of a queen.

Back of the advertising, of course, human nature, but if one would unde stand human nature in reference to mo ern extravagance let him study the a vertising appeal.

First, consider the appeal directed t ward those who, as the Fifth aven shopkeeper said, "have more money tha they know what to do with." Price lis are used, not to put forward bargain but as assurance of quality and exclusiv ness. The advertising appeal stirs th senses with suggestions of social rivalr and the voluptuousness of rich appare The girl "must appear well in her set The boy must have "swagger togs. The family must be known by the nun ber of its motor cars and the length wheelbase.

The advertising which makes this a peal does not originate the envy and r valry of society, but responds to it, ju as it responds to something quite diffe ent when it appeals to the person of sma means. Here the price tag denotes bargain. The purchaser is told how t save money while spending it.

In short, advertising makes the societ girl want what she can have, and tel the working girl how she can have wha she wants.

How the great world of fashion bow before the little word "Paris!" Frock for madame! Frocks for mademoiselle though madame and mademoiselle are bu plain mistress and miss in their nativ lexicon.

What makes Paris the shibboleth o the fashionable, or fashion-selling, world Is it Parisian superiority? Is it the de sire for exclusiveness? Or is it the valu of having a social arbiter whose wor cannot be challenged?

Superiority and exclusiveness bot break down under the challenge of th copyist. A Fifth avenue house announce that it will "present a continuous strea of those models of the great Parisia dressmakers most distinguished for thei beauty of line. In our own shop, w will copy and copy them perfectly." S too, the department stores buy model to copy them, and others less scrupulou copy without buying.

But it is the voice of a dictator, th voice of the goddess of fashion, whic declares through its New York oracle that "nasturtium shades are a new colo Paris is showing in autumn hats." Wha can an American mademoiselle do whe she is advised to buy pajamas with "French silhouette" and "many-hued Rus sian colorings"? And in sports clothe "the old things based on English model are passe! France has come into he own in sport things." In the face o such utterances, protest is mute. Th court of last resort has spoken.

What will come of it all?

Shall we be optimistic over the busines outlook or pessimistic over the stat of the human soul? And if unduly in clined toward pessimism, may we no ask whether there was less rivalry, les envy and fewer tears in the days of the crinoline gown, the tandem coach an the mansion on the hill? Was there a that time any such leveler of the rank of society as the present universal crav ing for luxury and its satisfaction through the power of advertising?

DON'T GIVE THE PUBLIC ALL IT WANTS!

'Give It What It Doesn't Expect, Instead," Is Editorial Philosophy of Claude MacKay, Part Owner of Sydney Guardian—He Tells of Circulation Building in Australia

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

A NEGATION of the generally accepted theory of newspaper circulation building is the editorial philosophy of Claude MacKay, one of the owners of the Sydney (Australia) Guardian and Smith's Weekly, who is visiting this country with Miss Beryl Mills, winner of "most representative girl" contest conducted by the Guardian.

"Don't give the public all it wants. Give it what it doesn't expect, instead," he declared in an interview in New York this week.

The MacKay philosophy is good for the pragmatic reason that it works. In just three years, the Guardian has jumped from scratch to a circulation net paid of about 154,000. Sydney is a city of 1,000,000 and there are only a little more than 5,000,000 people in all the country.

Of course, those who believe that the only way to build mass circulation quickly is to give the public what it wants will contend that crowd psychology in Australia must differ radically from that of this country.

Mr. MacKay agrees that is true. Australians in the mass, he says, are more skeptical and less emotional than the large numbers who thrive on sensationalism of the racy sort in this country. But a large section of the American press will agree with Mr. MacKay that solid circulation can be built quickly here also when a newspaper shows some restraint, when, in the words of the Australian editor, the people are not given all they want.

"We like to keep just a step ahead of our readers," Mr. MacKay explained. "We reason that restraint is strength and sob sister gushiness a weakness.

"A newspaper, after all, has a public responsibility. It must do more than merely give the public news and take the public's money. A newspaper has a service to perform, and chiefly that is to edify its readers rather than debase them."

Thus the Guardian in its short history has withheld the animalism that is seemingly in such great public demand everywhere, and, to build its big circulation speedily has given the unexpected instead.

"It's just another way of expressing enterprise," Mr. MacKay continued. "We are always trying to do things the other papers haven't thought of doing.

"Not long ago, for instance, there was a railway strike in Queensland, a state of Australia. For five weeks transportation in this state was at a stand-still. The Guardian was the only daily to go west of Queensland. We used fast motors to carry our papers to Burke, southwest of Queensland, and from there chartered two airplanes which were flown over a 1,000-mile circuit supplying a district with news that otherwise would have been isolated.

"Then again, when there was a railway smash 300 miles from Sydney, we did what the other papers did not think of doing. A news flash telling of the accident came into our office at midnight. We immediately sent staff writers and cameramen in a fast car to the airdrome. As soon as it was light enough they flew to the scene. By a little after four o'clock we had a complete story with pictures, beating all our competition."

The Guardian has indeed found airplanes so useful that Mr. MacKay recently placed an order in England for a ship to be used by the newspaper exclusively. It will be used primarily to carry daily editions of the paper from Sydney to Camberra, a distance of 250 miles. After next March Camberra will be the state capital, and executives of the Guardian want their paper on the breakfast tables of all state officials.

The contest which culminated in the selection of Miss Mills as Australia's most representative girl was also the "unexpected" in the Australian newspaper world, and Mr. MacKay believes it differs from anything that has ever been done in this country.

It wasn't a mere beauty contest such as many newspapers foster in America to the glory of naked limbs and the boardwalks of Atlantic City. Nor was it a popularity contest, dependent upon coupon votes clipped from the paper.

If it is at all possible to judge "the most representative girl" of a country, Miss Mills has been so judged. After initiating the contest, the Guardian immediately placed it in more capable hands, a committee made up of leading artists, sculptors, doctors, educationalists, and athletic groups. A strict vote was insisted upon. The winning girl was to be tested on her health as well as her beauty, her brains as well as her face, and her athletic ability as well as her figure.

Some 8,000 girls from all over Australia entered the contest, and Miss Mills who lives at Perth, 3,000 miles from Sydney, was named the winner. The prize is the present visit to this country.

Another similar contest which will end next year has already been started, and the "educational tour" now being offered as a prize, will take the winner through England, Ireland, Scotland and France.

This year's contest cost about $30,000, Mr. MacKay has estimated. But he considers the gains made in circulation well worth the price. On the day the winner was announced, 275,000 copies of the Guadian were sold, showing the widespread interest in the event, and as a result of the whole contest it has been figured that about 20,000 new readers have been added to the list. The Guardian figures every subscriber is worth $5 to the paper, and so the satisfaction expressed by Mr. MacKay can be understood.

Such promotion and distribution enterprise has put the Guardian in many new hands and editorial excellence has kept it there.

"The life-blood of a newspaper is its news, we believe," Mr. MacKay said, "and therefore our most highly paid men are the news writers and the news getters, the men who actually make the paper bright and reliable. To get the very best men we could in Australia, we raised the rates paid to reporters 200 per cent. Unless a man is worth at the very least $75 a week, he does not belong on our pay roll. Several reporters on our staff are paid $10,000 a year. One sports writer gets that much.

"We insist on brightness, but not at the expense of reliability. The fundamental of a newspaper is its reliability. We differ from some other Australian papers with the same idea, in that we believe that we don't have to be dull to be reliable. With the exception of the headlines, therefore, which are copied rather after the London Daily Mail, we follow the American style of news presentation. We agree with the newspapers of this country that in this present era of rush and hurry newspaper readers want to get their news quickly and easily. The narrative style of news writing has become passé with us as it has long ago with you."

As a visitor to this country, Mr. MacKay was not inclined to criticize American newspapers too harshly. There was one thing, however, he could not understand, and that was the "thumbed over news values represented by the lengthy play given to Valentino's death.

"We believe in getting the news, giving it out, and passing on immediately to something else," he explained. "This business of having Pola Negri weeping her way from Los Angeles to New York and from New York back to Los Angeles would not go at all in Australia. Here is where the difference in the two crowd psychologies is best exemplified, perhaps.

"Americans, it seems, are great believers, while the Australians are apt to be more cynical. In our country the American sob-sister stories would be taken as comedy. The Australian easily gets the idea that he is having his leg pulled, and resents any lack of restraint.

"You know, perhaps, that story of the American who was showing the Australian Niagara Falls. The American was telling the visitor of the billions of gallons of water flowing over the precipice, expecting him to be astounded by the array of figures he had marshalled for his benefit. Instead, the Australian dryly remarked:

"'Well, what's to stop it?'

"If Miss Negri was in love with Valentino, our public would take it for granted that she would be affected by his death. They would begin to smell something wrong, if we gave big play to the obvious, thinking we were trying to fool them in some way.

"By and large the public everywhere is more intelligent than editors generally seem to believe.

"That is the chief reason we have for not being a party paper. Such a paper makes much of the obvious virtues of its own particular party and suppresses all its faults. In so doing, instead of leading the people, I believe a party paper is only stultifying itself.

"Of course a newspaper should have its own standards. A newspaper ought to be big enough for that. But then you can see the good in all sides and the faults in all sides.

"Then a newspaper becomes, what I think it should be, a vent for all sorts of opinions, a forum where every point of view will be given a hearing.

"Suppression is the mother of revolt. Let everyone have his say, and, if what is being preached is unsound and poisonous, the quickest way to kill it is to report it."

The three year history of the newspaper with these ideals, and the eight year story of Smith's Weekly, the paper that preceded it, forms a romantic chapter in Australian journalism.

Mr. MacKay as a young man started newspaper work as a reporter for a small country paper in Victoria, Australia. After about 16 years as a working journalist on Australian dailies, he became the house author for a musical comedy house in Sydney. Later his services were required by the government in raising war loans. While he was working in this capacity, Mr. MacKay met Sir Joynton Smith, who was then Lord Mayor of Sydney. Sir Joynton took an interest in the young newspaper man.

"What do you intend to do eventually?", he asked him during this time.

"I want to be a newspaper proprietor," Mr. MacKay replied, because he had made up his mind he would never reenter newspaper work unless he could come back at the very top.

Eight years ago the former Lord Mayor of Sydney again came to Mr. MacKay and asked him if he still wanted to be the publisher of a paper. When Mr. MacKay answered in the affirmative, Sir Joynton wanted to know how much it would cost.

"I haven't the faintest idea," Mr. MacKay replied.

"Do you think £20,000 will do?" Sir Joynton asked.

"That ought to do," Mr. MacKay decided.

Thereupon Sir Joynton Smith agreed to finance a paper for Mr. MacKay and his friend, Clyde Packer, with the understanding he would give both men an interest in the paper if it succeeded.

Mr. MacKay had been far too optimistic in his cost estimate. Smith's Weekly was founded and immediately lost about $500,000. In fact two years passed before it had its first winning week.

When Smith's Weekly really began to pay, the good angel who had paid the bills in the early stormy days, called the two men who had furnished the work to his office to fulfill the promise of an interest in the paper. Neither of the men expected more than a small percentage in the property. They were amazed when Sir Joynton made them both equal partners with himself.

The Guardian was established three years ago, when Mr. MacKay and his partners decided that it was foolish for the big plant they had built up to publish the weekly paper should lie idle any of the time.

At the very start the partners had high ideals for their daily paper. They wanted the most modern press equipment and so presses were purchased in the United States. They wanted their paper to be individual, and instead of subscribing to any news agency, built up the Guardian's own cable service.

In the first month they lost $100,000. In the first year the total loss was $500,000. During the last two years, however, the Guardian has been steadily gaining, and now with a big volume of paid advertising the sign posts point to "Easy Street."

Among the advertisers making use of both the Guardian and Smith's Weekly are many American manufacturers, according to Mr. MacKay.

"Australians purchase about $125,000,000 worth of American commodities each year," he said, "and the Americans are spending less than a million dollars a year in our country for advertising. It is obvious, therefore, that the surface has barely been scratched. The biggest American advertisers in the Australian market are the automobile advertisers. We buy more American automobiles than all the countries of Europe put together.

"As far as our papers are concerned, we believe that the quickest way to get an advertiser into the paper is to get the people talking about it. If your paper is going ahead, the advertisers want to come along with you. If your paper is the sort that is only a good blind to doze behind, no one wants to put money into it. But if it is lively and wide awake, the difficulty is to keep them out."

Because of their enterprise, these two young Australian publications claim to have many "firsts" to their credit. They claim:

To be the first in Australia to run news on page 1.

To be the first in Australia to accept display advertising in the American manner.

To be the first newspaper in Australia to operate a broadcasting station.

HOW AUSTRALIA HAS SOLVED RADIO MESS

THE radio situation has been satisfactorily met in Australia. There the receiver rather than the broadcaster pays for the entertainment and news furnished over the air.

Every owner of a receiving set pays an annual license fee of $6. Of this sum the government keeps $1 and the remainder is divided among the broadcasting stations.

The Guardian is allotted $60,000 a year to operate its station. All political propaganda is barred, the broadcasts being limited to news, market and weather reports, and entertainment.

BAB-O ADVERTISING PLACED ON A "PAY AS YOU GO" BASIS

Newspaper Space Increases In Fixed Ratio To Sales Making Cleaning Product "Pay Its Own Freight"—Agency's Plan Analyzed

By HAMMOND EDWARD FRANKLIN

A NOVEL plan for making a new product "pay its own freight" as it goes is being used by the B. T. Babbitt Company of New York City in introducing Bab-O, a new specialty for the bathroom, tile, enamel, porcelain, etc.

When a company with a varied line perfects and launches a new item, it faces not only the problem of getting dealers to stock it, but also of getting actual popular demand at a time when the consumer has many matters clamoring for his attention. Should the company make the product take care of the cost of advertising or should an investment be made for two or three years in advertising until the product is well established?

From a strictly dollars and cents basis any corporation naturally would prefer to have a leader take care of its own advertising cost and show a net profit. Often this is not possible. The market may be highly competitive. A huge amount of education may be needed before the public will act. Hence, it is often as wise to make a capital investment in the market as it is in the physical plant and in due time pays handsomely.

However, the B. T. Babbitt Company wanted to make this new item stand on its own legs and automatically take care of the advertising cost. The company also was willing to have the advertising expand as rapidly as actual sales warranted.

Bab-O is a safe scratchless product especially for the bathroom, porcelain and enamel. Hence, the slogan, "A wipe and it's bright" was adopted.

The agency and the company's sales manager decided upon a flat amount per case—less than a dollar—to be put into advertising and to be spent only as the cases were sold to dealers. A complete series of small and large advertisements were worked up.

Various cities in charge of company district managers were picked for attack. Wherever possible, the strongest local evening newspaper was told frankly what the company wanted to do and that the amount of advertising would depend entirely upon distribution and volume. The paper's co-operation was enlisted. The company's salesman calls on the dealer to whom he tries to sell at least a case. He shows the proof of the advertising, explaining that copy will be released only after there is adequate distribution. With every case, the dealer is given 48 samples to hand out to help get demand going. The orders all are billed through jobbers.

A thorough merchandising job is done first—then the agency issues a schedule which is based on the money available from sales. This makes the schedule vary for every city, a vast amount of detail for the agency.

City by city, the sale of Bab-O has been extended quickly and widely since last year so that now the company feels justified in doing a certain amount of national advertising in women's magazines, but still puts the bulk of its effort in intensive local newspaper advertising.

At present campaigns are running in about 100 cities. In all cases, where feasible, the company ships in carload lots.

"We believe strongly in getting the manufacturer to base his appropriation on a small amount per unit," stated the Peck Advertising Agency, New York City. "When we obtain an account, often the first thing we do is to base the expenditure on an economic basis.

"We ask a manufacturer what he feels he can afford to spend per pair of shoes or per case for advertising. If he thinks our figure is too high or vice versa, the exact amount is adjusted until it is thought to be mutually right. We start with that as a basis and keep within it.

"Then, as sales grow, the expenditure for advertising automatically keeps pace without any argument or difficulty, with everybody pleased. Over a period of time, the appropriation may become greater than it would have been on any other basis, such as setting aside an arbitrary amount per year.

"For example, one of our clients, who in 1922 allotted 3c per unit for advertising, this year has a total appropriation six times that of the first year, based on increase in sales. The advertising appropriation has taken care of itself. Each month the 3c per unit is deducted and put aside for advertising. In my opinion this approach to the question of an advertising expenditure is much more satisfactory in many cases, both to the agent, who has every incentive to get an increase, and to the manufacturer, who wants to keep his expenditures within reason."

A broadside, "Bab-O-Grams," is delivered to grocers where salesmen are going to work.

The series of copy is an excellent example of how much may be obtained from fairly small space. The name, "Bab-O for the bathroom," fairly leaps out of the page to meet the reader. "A wipe and it's bright" appears frequently.

Hand-lettering is used copiously. Copy is tipped in at odd angles. Clean-cut, simple (for the sake of clean printing) drawings of bathrooms are included. Single column advertisements of only 50 and 100 lines almost dance with life.

Fifty lines single column has been claimed by advocates of the Golden proportion measurements to be the ideal single column size. It is the correct shape and it often gets a better break on position than a large advertisement at the top of the page or bottom of column.

By applying white space and introducing "queer" futuristic borders, the eye is captured and the message delivered to it in next to no time. Yet no piece of copy is just like any other of the series, although the trademark and story are put across with equal vigor by each. Any advertiser who is puzzled at how to use 50 lines to advantage need not be discouraged after he notes how Babbitt has succeeded in doing so.

Vigorous local advertising preceded by thorough merchandising, and by making the advertising pay its way! Bab-O may be added to the large list of current newspaper advertising successes.

Single column advertisements for Bab-O, examples of which are shown above, although only 50 and 100 lines almost dance with life.

CHESTER (PA.) TIMES FIFTY YEARS OLD

Celebrates Anniversary with Big Special Edition, Including 72-Page Rotogravure Section

The Chester (Pa.) Times observed its 50th anniversary Sept. 7, by publishing a 92-page special edition containing a rotogravure section of 72 pages, the first ever published in Delaware county. Charles R. Long and Frank C. Wallace are the editor and publisher.

The Times pledged itself as follows in an editorial on the anniversary:

"In beginning a new half century of service to the community the owners and editors of this paper pledge themselves anew to maintain the high principles of journalism for which the Times always has stood. As it was in the beginning, so will it ever be the aim of our organization to support any movement that is for public good and to decry anything that is harmful; to print news as it finds it, without fear or favor; to espouse what is beneficial; to expose what is shameful. We believe that our readers are entitled to know facts and it shall be our aim to see that they get them. More than this no newspaper can accomplish."

Major John Hodgson, who sponsored the launching of the Times 50 years ago, stated in his leading editorial just what sort of a publication he intended to run.

"The extent of our promise is," he wrote, "to please ourself. If we do that we shall accomplish a great deal. It is the greatest nonsense in the world to try to please everybody; and the editor who promises to please his patrons has seen but little of the world.

Further on the Major had this to say:

"—we shall not bow to 'rings,' 'cliques,' 'factions,' or parties in the advocation of any measure that we do not conscientiously believe calculated to advance the public good. In all matters public or secular we shall aim strictly at the truth."

And the present owners this week added this comment:

"Here is a paragraph fashioned according to what always has been the top rung on the ladder of decent journalistic tradition. It is the intention of the present editors of the Times to stick religiously to that principle."

STATE "SLEEPER" LAW SLEEPS AGAIN

No Suits Brought Against Political Candidates in Wisconsin for Not Filing Newspaper Stock Connections

The provision of the corrupt practices act of Wisconsin, injected into that state's political campaign after having lain dormant for 15 years, to frighten a few editors and candidates, is destined to pass into oblivion again.

No member of any political camp came forth to grasp the opportunity to bring suits to compel disqualification of any of the candidates or to exact the penalty of the law from the editors who unknowingly had violated the act.

After a few of the candidates had used the act for political thunder against their rivals, interest in the sensation died. Editors resumed the comfort of their swivel chairs. Candidates who owned stock in newspapers and had failed to file statements of their ownership with county clerks breathed freely again.

Of course, a few of the men in the race for state offices belatedly filed the necessary statements. Nine Socialist candidates, soon after the act was unearthed, hastened to the county clerk of Milwaukee county, and recorded the extent of their ownership in the Milwaukee Leader.

The act, if it had been invoked in prosecution of the editors and candidates for office would have made the former liable to fines and imprisonment ranging from $25 and thirty days in jail to $1,000 and three years in the state's prison, and the latter to disqualification from office.

CIRCULATION MEN MEET

California Group Gathers in Long Beach to Plan Program

Circulation managers from leading papers throughout southern California met at the Hotel Virginia, Long Beach, Cal., Sept. 2, preparatory to the annual convention of the Newspaper Circulation Managers to be held in San Francisco, Oct. 18 and 19.

A similar meeting will be held in the northern part of California by the members in that part of the state.

At the Long Beach meeting newspaper circulation problems were discussed. Ed Pugh, circulation manager of the Long Beach (Cal.) Press-Telegram, had charge of the program.

Circulation men in attendance were: Charles A. Fay, San Pedro Pilot; Ed Pugh, Long Beach Press-Telegram; O. K. Williams, Pomona Bulletin; A. E. Greenleaf, Long Beach Press-Telegram; R. J. Corrigan, Los Angeles Examiner; W. V. O'Farrell, San Diego Union and Tribune; Roscoe Searles, Hollywood Citizen; K. O. A. Thayer, San Bernardino Sun; L. O. Hammond, Redlands Daily Facts; H. P. Yehling, Los Angeles Times; W. McKay, Santa Ana Register; V. G. Sodler, Long Beach Sun; O. S. Crockett, Long Beach Press-Telegram and James W. Berry, Los Angeles Times.

OPENS GOOD ROADS BUREAU

The Kansas City Journal-Post on Sept. 1, announced the establishment of the Journal-Post Good Roads and Tour club to furnish road information and extend courtesies to Kansas City motorists and tourists and to promote construction of good roads. The club is managed by J. Frank Smith, for seven years manager of the Good Roads Asociation of Greater Kansas City. The club's first activity will be to work out a plan whereby visiting tourists will be exempt from arrest for minor traffic violations.

ADVERTISING COURSE IN N. Y.

The Advertising Club of New York will open its annual course in advertising and selling Oct. 14. Paul Cornell, vice-president of Hommann, Tarcher & Cornell, is chairman of the course committee.

PARISIAN PRESS SHOCKED BY PUBLICITY IN HIGH-LIFE MURDER CASE

Court Record with Sordid Details Printed with Enthusiasm but Editors Later Revolt—Sympathy for the Socially Prominent Principals

By O. W. RIEGEL

PARIS, Sept. 2.—This time it is France that has been outraged by the scandal-mongers.

The recently concluded Lancel murder case provided the scandal, which Parisian newspapers published with great enthusiasm. The public read the reports, talked about them, and rushed to the courtroom for a glimpse of the principals.

Now the Parisian press bemoans the passionate interest shown in the trial throughout the length and breadth of France.

The simple and sordid fact of the case was that M. Lancel shot to death his wife's lover. Other husbands have killed "the other man" before, just as cleanly and efficiently as M. Lancel, only there was less talk about it.

Social prominence made a difference in the Lancel case. The victim had been a prominent sportsman; M. Lancel is a wealthy leather manufacturer; Mme. Lancel is reputedly beautiful.

The trial therefore became a social and sporting event of great importance, and news of Abd el Krim and the latest revolution in Portugal was pushed back to page two in order to provide front page space for pictures and stenographic reports of the trial.

The case had scarcely been concluded (M. Lancel was acquitted), when certain Paris journals indignantly attacked the extent and intensity of popular interest in the trial.

"Now that the emotion caused by the trial has abated," M. Albert Chenevier declared in a front-page Quotidien article entitled "The Publicity Scandal,'" "it is time to pass judgment on the passionate zeal of the feminine public which came to hear the unbeautiful crime.

"What so many think should be stated: in these courtrooms jammed with the curious, attracted by a taste for murder and the savor of clandestine love; in these feverish eyes which scrutinize the face of the accused and the witnesses to feed on their emotions, to find in their expressions a reflection of libertinage suddenly stained with blood, is a scandal which must be stopped.

"Will it be believed that two little girls from 14 to 15 years of age were in the audience? What an outlook upon the world and life is given to these children at an age when impressions form character!

"It is well in this case to recall the remarks of a judge, who, upon taking his chair to preside in a particularly scabious case recently, saw that the courtroom was crowded with women.

"When court opened, the judge, with perfect courtesy, addressed the audience as follows: 'The debates about to begin are of such a nature that I request all honest women to leave.'

"There was a long silence. No one moved.

"The judge then turned to the court police.

"'Now,' he ordered, 'turn out the others.'

"It is to be regretted that in the present case the judge did not act like his predecessor.

"Custom, of course, is responsible. It is the practice to open sensational court proceedings to a curious public eager for this kind of scandal. But it is a detestable practice.

"Moralists and sociologists have observed the force of the imitative instinct. Proceedings such as those of the Lancel case are forceful object lessons in adultery and violent murder.

"If the judges do not think they have the power to stop the practice, why doesn't the Minister of Justice call their attention to the fact that in trials following crimes of passion, secrecy is a homage which must be paid to good morals?"

Other papers, notably l'Oeuvre, Le Petit Bleu, and several weekly publications, joined the protest, but it should be noted that criticism was rarely aimed directly at the policy of the newspapers, whose ample accounts and clear photographs are chiefly blamed for the widespread interest in the case.

Some newspapers vaguely hinted at equal guilt, but not one of them came out flatly against the policy of the press. In America, on the other hand, newspapers have frequently avowed their sin in public and sworn to follow the path of virtue—within the limits of expediency, certainly.

What the outcome will be in France is a question. The Parisian press jealously guards its freedom, yet there have been several instances recently of a voluntary change of policy in regard to sensationalism.

The softening tendency has shown itself in spite of the growing ambitions of business managers. French business offices have not been blind to the success of American popular dailies that exploit crime and scandal. What is more, sensationalism itself has long flourished in France along with other native flora.

It need hardly be added that any move toward regulation or censorship of the press would be met with boos and hisses. Very few would have the courage to suggest it. Yet another Lancel case will undoubtedly revive the old protest against flaunting the soiled linen of French society.

NEWSBOY WELFARE BIG RESPONSIBILITY OF NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS

Bad Influence to Which Boys May Be Subjected Worthy of Deepest Study, Virginia Editor Declares

By LOUIS F. JORDAN

Editor, Waynesboro (Va.) Valley Virginian

"TO find out how much work and what kind of work is beneficial to the young is a modern educational problem."

This statement from a social worker several years ago might find its companion remark in the assertion: "What is the truth regarding the moral influence of newsboy service?" Both statements provoke one to thought, but, unfortunately, an answer to the latter, if present statistics are reliable, is not so easy as might first appear.

Interest in the welfare of our youth has been on the increase in the past decade. A survey of this field from the historic tenderness of Judge Lindsay to the American scene today, with its countless juvenile courts and welfare institutions, reveals much that is of value in the handling of youth's problems; but in the sphere of newspaper circulation through thousands of boys in the United States, there is still much to be said, still much to be done in order to determine accurately, the influence of this occupation on the newsboy and what corrective measures, if any, are needed to elevate him in those things which make for better manhood.

Leaving aside the question of statistics, it would be of interest to the newspaper profession generally, to hear something from the men who are in a daily position to see the practical workings of the system in vogue all over the United States of circulating the daily paper, in large measure, by the means of boy carriers and boy salesmen on the streets of the great cities.

Some disreputable statements have been made on this subject. No less a person than Mr. Scott Nearing once said: "Whatever the cause, the effect is the same. The professional newsboy is the embryo criminal." This will be found in a little book bearing the title "The Newsboy at Night in Philadelphia." Another writer a few years ago asserted that 63 per cent of the inmates of the House of Refuge in New York have been street traders (newsboys) and asks: "If the majority of such have begun their so-called criminal careers, which end invariably in the state penitentiary, why do we permit children to trade on our streets?"

In 1911 there was a Federal inquiry into the question of the relationship of occupation to delinquency, which was based on the Juvenile court records of seven of our largest cities. "It included," says a summary of the proceedings, "children 16 years of age and under and reported that 58.6 per cent, or nearly three-fifths of all the working delinquents up to 12 come from among the newsboys. What we do want to know, and what we must know before statistics of this class are of any real value is: How many wage-earning boys are there? How many are newsboys? How many in each group are delinquent and how many are non-delinquent?"

Whether the newspaper today is encouraging in as large measure as it should, home responsibility and thrift as an important phase of education, remains a question of some doubt and might be considered by the press of the country to much profit. Such a survey of the newsboy field will not only add glory to the profession of journalism but it will add much to the making of better men of the boys now engaged in the business of carrying or selling newspapers all over the United States.

Reverting for a moment to Mr. Nearing's unpleasant indictment, we find that his remarks were prompted by a request from the National Child Labor Committee in 1910. At that time the opinion was sought of juvenile court judges, superintendents of boys' reformatories, and others qualified to speak with authority on the subject. The information sought was: "The character of newsboys and the moral influence of their work."

Statistics, so far as can be found, are neither abundant, authoritative, nor sufficiently recent to be of material advantage at the present time. They are of value for several reasons. They reveal, from the standpoint of what may be called Police Figures, an unwholesome state with respect to newsboys. They show further that those entrusted with child welfare have been engaged in a sincere way, to learn something about the status of the newsboy as well as the status of the youth engaged in other spheres of industrial activity.

As well known to newspapermen, the investigations have not been without a response from the various legislatures of the states. A compilation of state law from a number of commonwealths would make interesting reading as to the attitude of the lawmaker toward the newsboy. The trend has been plainly toward some restriction. There has, as yet, been no manifest hardship either against the newsboy or the newspaper, but (and here is something of timely interest), like all other reform movements, it is plainly the duty of the newspaper profession to be active in obtaining a truthful tabulation of the condition of newsboys they employ. Heretofore, the tabulation has been a one-sided, though sincere affair, conducted by the law-enforcing and law-enacting powers of the government. Is the American citizen today in possession of the important facts he is entitled to know on the subject? Is the censure laid, in a measure, at the door of the American newspaper as to its influence on the newsboy, a just and deserved censure? Are newsboys, considering their tender years, as a rule, subjected to vicious influences in the large cities?

A number of questions similar to those propounded come readily to mind. The average newsboy, one naturally imagines, resorts to this means of livelihood because his family's financial status demands it. The poor of the cities are compelled to have their children perform many tasks which are distasteful, but made necessary by circumstances.

Many of our finest American figures have been newsboys. On its face, it does not seem that a newsboy is subjected to more vicious evils than the well-to-do and the pampered youths of the cities who run as they will, after school hours and at all other hours, in large measure. The truth is that the young fellow who is brought up on the pennies he obtains through the sales of newspapers, learns not only the value of the dollar when he gets it, but that he learns in the best possible school in the world, how to stand up and take care of himself and fight for a living.

There is something picturesque to most of us in the American newsboy. Often when we have just thrown a newspaper in the scrap basket we will stop on the street and patronize a little urchin whose appealing face beckons us to lessen his stack and send him on to his next prospect. Herein, of course, lies a pleasant field for the newspaper itself. Can it not institute some means for bettering the conditions of these boys? Can it not formulate, if it has failed in the past to do so, some system whereby the newsboys will receive a little better supervision; a little warmer place in the heart of the newspaper management itself?

There is no attempt here to write a constructive article on the newsboy. The thoughts come at random and are intended more to invite discussion by those who are in a better position to give us an insight into what is, at least, a most interesting and appealing subject.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER CALENDAR

Sept. 12-13—Texas Press Association, convention, Galveston, Tex.
Sept. 13-18—International Typographical Union, annual convention, Colorado Springs, Col.
Sept. 13-14—New York State Dailies, Advertising Departmental, meeting, Schenectady, N. Y.
Sept. 13—Texas Circulation Managers Assn., 13th annual convention, Fort Worth, Tex.
Sept. 14—Interstate Circulation Managers Association, meeting, Hotel Walt Whitman, Camden, N. J.
Sept. 14-18—Press Congress of the World, meetings in Geneva and Lausanne.
Sept. 17-18—United Typothetae, District 4, meeting, Lynchburg, Va.
Sept. 20-23—Financial Advertisers Assn., annual convention, Detroit, Mich.
Sept. 20-23—Advertising Specialty Assn., annual convention, Hotel Sherman, Chicago.

ALBRIGHT PLANS A DAILY

Ernest G. Albright, publisher of the Ponca City Kay County Times, will begin publication of a new morning paper there some time in September. The paper will carry a full leased wire report.

A. P. DIRECTORS TO MEET OCT. 6

Directors of the Associated Press will hold their next meeting at New York headquarters, Oct. 6.

PUFF, PUFF, PUFF INDUSTRY THRIVING IN SOPHISTICATED GOTHAM

Twenty-Dollar Adjectives Stream Recklessly From Typewriter Keys to Weave Golden Haloes for "Subscribers" Who Buy Magazines in Large Quantities

By BENJAMIN DE KAY

Writers: short business articles; commission to those qualifying; drawing account; large earnings. The Commercial Reporter, 5 Columbus Circle.

ANSWERING the above advertisement, which appeared in the issue of the New York Times of Auugst 23, gave me my first intimate knowledge of the "puff" industry prevailing more or less successfully in New York City, New Jersey and in other outlying towns.

And it is puff, puff, puff all the way through, for most of the editors of the so-called business magazines which are being printed by the dozens in New York do not hesitate to tell you, "You understand this is a puff sheet"

I called on my first prospect. What I sought was some part-time or full-time work as a newspaper man with many years' experience in and around New York. And that is just what they wanted—lots of experience

Calling on the above magazine I found without much effort, that I qualified. In fact almost anyone can qualify if he can write at all. They must have writers.

"I guess we can use you," said the editor of this magazine. "Here's the proposition:

"We hand you leads. You write them up. And when the person or company you write about buys the magazine we pay you commission."

That sounded fine. But I wanted more information.

"Where do you get these leads?" I asked.

"Why we clip newspaper stories, magazine items and advertisements."

"Do I interview the prospect?" I asked.

"Of course not. You are not supposed to interview them. You just write the story from the clipping. We do the rest."

"Well, how do you do it?"

"After you write the story, about 300 words or more, if the man or company is very big, we call them on the wire and tell them what you wrote. We ask whether he wants to have any corrections made or to make suggestions. He is usually so tickled with what he has heard his only question is, 'Where did you get those things to say about me?'

"Our salesman will tell him that our reporter got the information, and, of course if it is all right it will appear in our next issue. Then the salesman will ask whether he would like to have a few copies of the magazine to distribute to his friends and clients, say about 400 or 500 copies. He'll probably say that that is to many but he'll take anywheres from 50 to 200."

"What do I get for it?"

With great pomp the editor informed me that I would get 10 per cent of the selling price of the magazine, which is thirty-five cents, and that if I also make the sale I will get 25 per cent.

"How much can I earn doing this kind of work?"

"Well, we have one fellow here that has gotten as much as $48 a week. Yes, and one of our regular writers got as much as $52."

"That isn't very much," I said, "considering the fact I must write about 20 stories a day."

"We think it is pretty good pay. And if you write and sell the story both you get more."

And so that is the way a comparatively new business is thriving in New York.

What kind of grandiose material do the "puff writers" grind out?

Here is a typical sample from the Commercial Reporter for August:

"FINANCIAL EXPERT HAS OPTIMISTIC OUTLOOK

"Lecturer, economist and above all one of the present day's leading international finance experts, Mr. ——— ———, of Blank & Co., has always enjoyed the responsible position of being one of the stabilizing personalities in the realms of international monetary transactions.

"When we consider that in the course of the last decade the world has, as it were, 'grown smaller' as far as international relations are concerned and that due to the ever increasing closeness of all the financial and industrial markets of the world, it is not at all surprising that it has become generally acknowledged that the world is in greater need of such men as Mr. ——— ——— than ever before in the history of commerce and industry.

"The coming conditions are inevitable. We are beginning to be more and more dependent upon one another in all phases of endeavor. Slowly but surely this change is making itself felt and is apparent in the unprecedented activity in foreign securities. It is practically a situation that will require for its safe guidance experienced advice and leadership as can be supplied by such men as Mr. ——— ———. Men who have devoted a lifetime of study to the problems of world wide finance."

The article carried a one column cut of the subject.

The masthead of the Commercial Reporter notifies subscribers that "change of address must reach us ten days in advance of next date of issue" but does not carry the regular date of issue.

Below this statement is the following:

"By Law: The Publisher shall not be responsible for statements or opinions advanced in papers or printed publication. (B2. Par. 30.)"

There is no mention of entry as second class matter, but "Copyright 1926" and "All Rights Reserved" lines are displayed.

The next publication on my list to try was the National Business Review, 1819 Broadway. I found the identical condition there, with the possible exception that, having been in business somewhat longer than the Commercial Reporter the offices were somewhat more elaborate.

This publication was ready to pay me 10 per cent commission for all articles bought by the person written about. After a week in the office they would also permit me to attempt to sell the story, thereby increasing my commission to 25 per cent.

The man I talked to pulled out a copy of his publication, a magazine printed on high grade paper and giving all the evidence of being a high class, and important publication. He then showed me a story and explained the process of writing and selling it and the fact that the writer who rewrote an ad received $7.50 for his 300 word story.

The editor of this magazine also showed me a badly mutilated magazine from which he had clipped items for rewrites. The job, he assured me, with my experience would be simple. He explained that there was very little information contained in the flat items of the magazine and therefore it would be necessary for me to say a lot of nice things about a man I knew nothing about, and then fill in his name and address and to be sure that he had a phone so that he could be called and told about the write-up.

In looking over the magazine it could be easily seen that among those picked for write-ups were many whose vanity could easily be touched. The success of the man means nothing to the editor of the magazine. In fact, the man might be the owner of a small tailoring establishment who has placed an ad in a local paper.

The magazine, to make itself pretentious in appearance does carry stories of some of the bigger men in industry, possibly with the idea of making an appearance. It is doubtful whether a man, who probably appeared in the public press innumerable times, would be interested in a story in a magazine of which he knows nothing about.

Some of the magazines carry names which bear a great resemblance to those of national prominence. When a prospective client is called on the phone he may confuse the true name of the bigger magazines and believes himself picked out because of the fact that he is possibly becoming prominent in his line of endeavor.

The National Business Review, which has a name similar to others in the magazine field, has an office in Philadelphia. I was informed at their New York office that should I get a story big enough coming from Philadelphia they would use it, for they could make the sale from the local office there.

They also informed me that should a story warrant it they would call Washnigton or any other distant city with the hope that a sale could be made.

The magazines, I found, are located in various parts of New York. Several taking the slant of Wall Street reporting sheets, are located in that section of the city. These are used mostly to puff up a stock, if they are with the company, or take a reverse attitude if there is nothing in it for them using the other method.

There are also many, the writer has been informed, thriving in Jersey City.

When one answers an advertisement in any of the metropolitan papers he will find the office crowded with ex-newspapermen, free lance writers, and men who seek part-time jobs. They are asked whether they have any prospects who would like to get some publicity. Some of the writers may have one or two, or perhaps more. He will write them up and the salesman will get busy. If he has no more prospects, or if he finds the work odious from the ethical standpoint of a newspaperman, he quits.

Either the following Sunday or Monday will find another advertisement in the paper asking for writers. From the number of ads that have appeared it is unquestionable that a man taking one of these jobs finds, very quickly, that it is not what he is seeking.

The offices of the magazines are in some cases rather pretentious. In some of the smaller offices the sides of the rooms are lined with wall desks, each having a typewriter. A typewriter and a clipping from some magazine or newspaper are the tools of this craft.

Trade papers are found to be most prolific in producing lead material for this type of publication. If it is a clothing ad, then the story run is about the success of the head of the firm, generally without knowledge of the financial standing of the firm. Rich or poor, the head of a concern which advertises, in the estimation of the editor of one of these so-called business magazines, must be good copy.

A story appearing in these magazines, puffing a man, should certainly help his credit. That is, if his creditors are among the non-reading class of this magazine in which his history is listed.

NEW ROTO SUPPLEMENT

A literary supplement in rotagravure, in addition to the regular eight-page picture supplement in rotagravure, is now being published on Sundays by La Prensa, of Buenos Aires. This supplement consists of eight full size pages, and takes the place of the literary supplement that has been printed for many years by the usual method. The first edition with the new supplement was published Aug. 8.

When a landlord has a room that is too small for a hall bedroom he rents it for a night club.—James J. Montague in New York Herald Tribune.

BUSINESS GREW WITH MODEL HOME STUNT

Raleigh Times Got Whole Town Talking When It Went Into House Building With Local Woman's Club—Accounts Obtained

Good results were obtained this ye by the Raleigh (N. C.) Times, when went into the model home building bu ness together with the local women's cl

"The undertaking turned out to be ve satisfactory," John A. Park, publish told EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week.

"The chief value of the project was the intense interest aroused on the pa of the woman's club members and th husbands about building and beautifyi their homes. We had a series of lectur arranged and the inspection week was tremendous success in the point of atten ance.

"Some very satisfactory advertising a counts were obtained and advertising the part of the contractors and mater houses has been good business for t Times."

In addition to the fact that procee were in excess of the actual investme involved in the building project, the new paper got big promotion value out of t manner in which the enterprise was co ducted.

The Times got the whole town talki about the romance of home buildi Every possible tie-up stunt was used. series of "model home recipes" was ev run, immediately following the openi of the house. The townspeople, in fa were given a liberal education by th daily paper in modern home constructio household science, and landscape garde ing. From the early days when the quo tion of site selection was being discuss until the house was finally sold at auctio the paper carried a running story on ho building which was a good feature fr the circulation viewpoint.

DAILY TO START SEPT. 14

Plant of New Scranton (Pa.) Sun Readiness and Staff Engaged

The first issue of the Scranton Su that city's new afternoon newspaper, scheduled to make its appearance on Se 14. The Sun's plant has been finished a all of the machinery has already been p to a thorough test.

It is understood the new journal ai to start with around 12,000 circulatio canvassers having been at work for t past six weeks.

Joseph Hosie, formerly foreman at t Scranton Republican plant is to be charge of the Sun's composing room wi John Kilcullen, also formerly with t Republican as assistant. The Sun w have a full United Press report. W. Pattison, former manager of the Repub can, is to act in the same capacity at t Sun.

TO SELL N. Y. MARKET

Publishers Will Discuss Plans Schenectady Meet Sept. 13-14

Plans for selling the New York sta market and the newspapers which cov that market will be discussed at the sem annual meeting of the advertising depar ment of the New York State Publishe Association to be held at the Hotel Va Curler, Schenectady, N. Y., Sept. 13-1

The association is composed of adve tising managers of New York state new papers outside of New York City. It w founded a year ago as a clearing house f selling and promotion ideas.

Officers are L. S. Chubbuck, Watertow Standard, president; L. G. Speide Mount Vernon Argus, vice-president; a R. C. Harris, Utica Press, secretary.

40,000 NON-UNION PRINTERS

There are between 30,000 and 40,0 non-union printers in the United State according to a recent issue of the Typ graphical Journal.

Win the Detroit Radio Market

By Employing an Accepted Radio Medium—The News

Perhaps no other newspaper anywhere has so complete an interest for radio listeners as The Detroit News in Detroit, for this paper was the first in America to broadcast regular radio programs. This initiative and the subsequent splendid programs broadcast daily by WWJ have won for the News a radio audience depending on it for all the interesting developments in the radio world. Over 20,000 letters were received by The Detroit News radio department during the first half of this year, not to mention the thousands of letters submitted to other departments for reply which came in response to special features broadcast via WWJ. Such voluntary response plus the wonderful coverage of The News—the most thorough in any city of Detroit's size or larger—point the way to radio advertising success. Grasp it.

Radio Advertisers Choose News

During the first 6 months of 1926 The News led the second medium in radio advertising by 184,772 lines as shown below

News	288,946 Lines
Second Medium	104,174 "
News Lead	184,772 "

The Detroit News

Detroit's HOME Newspaper

EDITOR INVOLVED IN COAST SLAYING

Death of Alleged Bootlegger During Raid Being Investigated by State and Federal Authorities

George A. Seeley, editor of the Orting (Wash.) Oracle and pastor of the Free Methodist Church of that city continues publication of his weekly paper while state and federal authorities engage in a battle to determine whether or not charges of first degree murder shall be preferred against him and three federal prohibition agents for the killing of Emil Matsumoto, moonshiner, Aug. 30.

Seeley had discovered the location of a still near Orting and informed the three prohibition agents of its existence. He had accompanied them on the raid and before it was over Matsumoto had been killed while trying to escape.

Seeley was taken to the Pierce county jail in Tacoma and held there on a first degree murder charge without bail. The other men were arrested in Tacoma and brought to Seattle under federal orders. Later the case was ordered changed from state to federal jurisdiction and the men released on their personal recognizance.

According to James W. Selden, prosecuting attorney of Pierce county vigorous prosecution of the four men will follow the removal to federal court and on the other hand Assistant United States Attorney C. T. McKinney said he doubted if the raiders ever would be prosecuted for murder, declaring they were justified and fired in self defense after being, themselves, fired upon.

PAPER COMPANY EXPANDS

Inland Empire Adds $350,000 Capital —Cowles Named Trustee

W. H. Cowles, publisher of the Spokane Spokesman-Review, was elected a trustee of the Inland Empire Paper Company to succeed John E. Alexander, of Port Edwards, Wis., at the annual meeting held recently at the plant, Millwood, Wash.

It was also decided to increase the capital stock by $350,000, making a total of $2,000,000. The new stock is preferred and half the capital stock is now common and half preferred.

Plans for expansion, which will be carried out immediately, were decided upon and include addition of a third digester, a 500-horsepower boiler, additional grinders and an additional paper machine. Production will be increased from 2,800 tons to 5,000 tons per month when these improvements have been completed.

PROFESSOR WRITING NEWS

Prof. James Taft Hatfield of the department of German of Northwestern University is sending stories about conditions in Germany to the Chicago Daily News.

ARKANSAS DAILY ADDS TO STAFF

Important additions to the staff of the Pine Bluff (Ark.) Daily Graphic were announced this week by George H. Adams publisher, who also reported prosperous conditions in his territory. S. R. Bowen, formerly of the Memphis Commercial Appeal, is the new classified manager, and C. V. Radic, formerly of the Fairmont (W. Va.) Times, has taken charge of the circulation department. Leroy Pope, from the sports department, St. Louis Times, has been made managing editor, while James Thomasson has joined the reportorial staff.

NEW TYPE FOR AD COPY

A new type called the Garamond, particularly adapted for advertising composition, was announced this week by the Intertype Corporation, New York. It is described as "a rendition of the early showings of the types made by Claude Garamond in the 16th century."

JOURNALISTIC TRICKSTER

Frank Power

NEWSPAPERS all over the world were tricked by Frank Power, British newspaper man, who built up a sensational story on the finding of Kitchener's body, later declared a fraud by British government officials.

Power went so far as to bring a coffin from Norway, in which, he said, Kitchener's remains would be found. The coffin was opened and found to be empty, but not before newspapers had given thousands of columns of valuable space to spread the hoax.

"SWEET ADD-A-LINE"

Columnists In Aggressive Co-operative Drive to Fill Space

The following "Sweet Add-a-line" symposium has been running the gauntlet of the columns:

Is it hard to write columns? Well rather.
It isn't all skittles and bliss.
The quatrains especially bother—
They are seldom as easy as this.
—John D. Well, Buffalo News.

Which accounts in a way for the habit,
And it surely is nothing amiss,
When we see a four-liner we grab it
And tack on another like this.
—Chas. Leedy, Youngstown Telegram.

We thank you, dear colyuming brother, for saving us labor and fret.
Behold! We have written another,
And, happily, the end is not yet.
—Ted Robinson, Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Let me get in while it's going,
I can tack on a verse, and I will.
Just look at the way it is growing
And notice the space it can fill.
—Edgar A. Guest, Detroit Free Press.

When the mail offers nothing but drivel
And the ones you rely on don't please,
It is then that you twitch in your swivel
And thank Heaven for fillers like these.
—Walter Winchell, New York Graphic.

MAGEE TO SPEAK

Carl Magee, editor of the Albuquerque (N. M.) State Tribune, will be the honor guest and speaker at a special joint meeting of the Advertising Men's Post of the American Legion and the Advertising Council of the Chicago Association of Commerce, Monday, at 12:15, Sherman Hotel. His subject will be "The Freedom of the Press."

ADVERTISING RULES

Paul S. Armstrong, assistant general manager of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, contributed five simple rules to be followed in advertising in the current number of the Adcrafter, Detroit. They are:

1—Be truthful. Truth builds confidence.

2—Be specific in all claims.

3—Make your copy straightforward and dignified. The purpose of advertising is not to entertain, but to sell.

4—Tell enough to prove your case.

5—Consider the customer's point of view, instead of your own.

TO EXPLORE ABYSSINIA

Chicago Daily News Co-operating in Field Museum Expedition

To unearth the past and present secrets of the Queen of Sheba's ancient empire, the Chicago Daily News has joined with the Chicago Field Museum of Natural History in sending a scientific expedition into remote Abyssinia.

The expedition left Chicago last Sunday to spend at least six months on the vast Abyssinian plateau, which is one of the little known lands of the earth. Covering the expedition for the Daily News is Jack Baum, special writer, while two of his companions are expert photographers and one an artist.

Baum is taking along a short-wave radio outfit, so it is possible that the first news ever wirelessed out of Abyssinia will tell readers of the Daily News about new discoveries on the same day they are found.

Dr. Wilfred Osgood, curator of the department of zoology of the Field Museum, will be commander-in-chief of the expedition.

Ras Tafari, prince regent and the present ruler, has officially welcomed members of the expedition to his country by letter.

U. P. EXHIBIT AT FAIR

The United Press showed visitors to the recent Wisconsin State Fair how printer machines operate at a booth maintained inside the fair grounds by the news service in conjunction with Marquette University School of Journalism.

CIRCULATORS GROUP TO DISCUSS CRIME NEWS

Interstate Association Will Consider Sales Value of Sensational Murder Trials at Camden Meet, Sept. 14

Sales value connected with sensational murder investigations, such as the Hall-Mills case in New Brunswick will be considered by the Interstate Circulation Managers Association at its fall meeting to be held at the Hotel Walt Whitman, Camden, N. J., Sept. 14.

The subject will be opened by an address by C. L. Stretch, circulation manager of the Philadelphia Bulletin, who has been assigned to answer the question "Are Lasting Results Obtained from Sensational Murder Trial Reports."

L. P. Rutherford, Wilmington (Del.) Every Evening, association president, will preside at the sessions. John H. J. Kuntz, Lancaster (Pa.) Intelligencer-News Journal is secretary-treasurer of the group.

Other speakers will include: K. F. Channon, Audubon (N. J.) Dealer; J. J. Carr, Beverly (N. J.) Dealer; Joseph B. Taylor, West Chester (Pa.) Local News; F. M. Hetrick, Altoona (Pa.) Mirror; W. B. Wilson, Washington (Pa.) Observer and Reporter; B. C. Still, Baltimore Sun; Vattier Snyder, Pittsburg (Pa.) Chronicle-Telegraph; and W. D. Miller, Washington (D. C.) Post. H. C. Lee, Philadelphia Inquirer, and R. L. McLean, Philadelphia Bulletin.

Jacksonville's and Florida's

BUILDING ACTIVITIES bring BUYING ACTIVITIES—an increased buying power that may be directed to your benefit. Circulation takes care of that.

JACKSONVILLE'S BUILDING PERMITS FOR FIRST 8 MONTHS, 1925-1926.

	1926	1925
January	$1,383,555	$374,467
February	1,436,530	404,620
March	1,516,203	642,592
April	2,088,100	654,384
May	2,103,185	724,154
June	2,197,109	802,803
July	2,253,415	802,806
August	2,720,590	1,177,363
Totals	$15,698,687	$5,583,269

BUILDING PERMITS FOR PRINCIPAL FLORIDA CITIES AUGUST, 1926.

Jacksonville	$2,720,590
Miami	2,088,025
Coral Gables	1,615,000
Tampa	1,314,518
Orlando	1,012,356
St. Petersburg	881,000
Miami Beach	447,110
West Palm Beach	438,924
Winter Park	301,000
Winter Haven	283,600
Lakeland	170,935
Clearwater	142,920
DeLand	124,150
Sarasota	121,721
St. Augustine	120,040

The Florida Times-Union

JACKSONVILLE

Four Suburban Rotogravure Sections of The New York Times

A fourth tabloid suburban rotogravure section, published with the Sunday edition of The New York Times, will be inaugurated September 12. It will contain 16 pages of pictures of interest to the section of New York City north of 110th Street—the Bronx, Harlem, Morningside-Washington Heights—and will be distributed only in that territory.

Sixteen-page tabloid suburban rotogravure sections are now issued with the Sunday edition of The Times, in addition to the regular full-size rotogravure section, and distributed where specified, as follows:

	Net Paid Circulation
1. Westchester and Connecticut Section—in Westchester, Putnam, Dutchess and Rockland Counties and Connecticut	59,000
2. New Jersey Section—throughout New Jersey	78,000
out Long Island	92,000
4. Bronx, Harlem and Washington Heights—first issue Sunday,
3. Brooklyn and Long Island Section—in Brooklyn and through- September 12, in territory north of 110th Street, Bronx, Harlem, Morningside-Washington Heights	63,000
	292,000

Each suburban section contains local pictures—social affairs, groups of familiar faces, civic bodies, sports, current events, and offers the advertiser a medium which has intense local interest together with the prestige of The New York Times.

The New York Times prints a greater volume of rotogravure advertising than any other newspaper in the world, publishing 631,902 agate lines of rotogravure advertising in eight months this year, a gain of 107,936 lines over the corresponding period of 1925 and 301,738 lines more than the second New York newspaper with rotogravure sections.

Net paid circulation of the Sunday edition of The Times is in excess of 600,000. Total net paid circulation of the four suburban rotogravure sections is 292,000 copies.

Advertising Rates
Suburban Rotogravure Sections

	Per Agate Line
Any one section	$ .40
Any two sections	.75
Any three sections	1.10
All four sections	1.50

Mechanical Requirements

Size of page—5 columns wide
Width of column—12 ems pica
206 lines to a column
1030 lines to a page

[Advertising forms close 12 days in advance of publication.]

U. S. PRESS CONGRESS DELEGATION MEETS ABOARD S.S. CARMANIA

Glass Named Member of Geneva Resolutions Committee at First Mid-Sea Meeting—M. Koenigsberg Upholds Reportorial Power as Peacemaker in Farewell Speech

(By Wireless to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

ABOARD S. S. Carmania, Sept. 9.—North American delegates to the Press Congress of the World in Geneva Sept. 14-18 held their first meeting in mid-Atlantic yesterday, with President Walter Williams presiding, assisted by J. W. Brown, publisher of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, secretary of the congress.

Frank P. Glass former editorial director of the St. Louis Star, was elected a member of the Geneva resolutions committee to represent the United States, and Joe Mitchel Chapell, special newspaper writer, was made chairman of a committee to suggest resolutions.

All members of the delegation are enjoying the voyage despite a strong head sea and stiff breezes. Many publishers are becoming ship sportsmen, taking up deck tennis, quoits, and shuffle board games.

Capt. F. G. Brown reported today that the ship would dock in Havre at noon Sunday, Sept. 12. The delegates will proceed first to Lausanne, arriving there Monday and in Geneva, Tuesday.

Departure on the S. S. Carmania was without incident, following a busy three days of entertainment in New York. The final luncheon to the delegates was given Sept. 3 by M. Koenigsberg president of the International News Service. Mr. Koenigsberg in an address to the group urged the American police reporter as a substitute for an international police force in achieving world peace.

Mr. Koenigsberg said:

"You are going to the theatre, indeed, to the very center of the stage of international peace conferences. On every hand you will hear discussions of the struggle to lead the world into some sort of international compact to assure peace on earth.

"I believe it is agreed that in the search that is being made for a method to assure peace between the nations of the earth no program has yet been evolved that does not include a central authority —an agency to avert clashes between national ideals and to compose differences between conflicting national interests. I believe it is also agreed that such an authority could not function without the power to apply force. Therefore, after all, the quest is for an international police force.

"I want to enlist your sympathy for my proposal that the surest, quickest, safest and most far-reaching method to establish world peace is to substitute for an interenational policeman the American police reporter.

"By this I mean that the ideals of the American police reporters, if adopted by the press of all the world and applied to the operation of news services and newspapers throughout the world, would make unnecessary any other struggle to avert international misunderstanding.

"I think we all share the belief that international conflicts are made possible only by international misunderstandings. The great yearning of those who wish to establish world peace is for an assurance of the truth to avert international misunderstandings.

"No one can always secure and determine what is the truth. But we can always get the facts. If a man says something it is a fact that he said it though what he says may not be the truth; though what he says he may think is the truth or may deliberately misrepresent. But because we know that he said it and we know who said it we are in position to judge for ourselves whether or not he is authorized and competent to speak for a group, a government or a national frame of mind.

"The ideals of the American police reporter, if adopted by the press of all the world and applied to the operation of news services and newspapers throughout the world, would bring the facts and only the plain, unvarnished, untarnished facts, to all people.

"American journalism, perhaps alone in the world, has traditionally abhorred the fashion of mixing propaganda with information. The anchor of this admirable and salutary policy has been the unwritten law instilled in every American editorial room into the minds of its reporters from journalistic infancy, that with every statement of fact or alleged fact should go the source of an authority for that statement.

"As you well know, the American police reporter seeks only the facts. When he gets the facts he not only presents them truthfully, but he tells where he got them. That leaves no loophole through which can wriggle the insidious, insinuating, anonymous but often diabolically effective influence of politics, self-interest and conspiracy.

"In international journalism facts can be made facts and kept facts only so long as they deal with straightforward statements assigned to the source responsible for them.

"I believe that if this principle, which American newspapers apply to the simple items of local and domestic affairs in their columns, will be religiously enforced in the publication of international news, it will do more than treaties, leagues or any other political systems toward establishing lasting understandings and substantial harmony between the many and different races, creeds and countries.

"American journalism has been the American salvation. We have had our wounds and we have sterilized and healed them with the sunlight of truth and the fresh air of free argument. Our internal conflicts have thus usually healed themselves. The rest of the world would do well to adopt our newspaper ideals and follow our newspaper methods. Centuries of secret entanglements and an ancient cobweb of international intrigue could be wiped away by clean, clear-cut American newspaper methods and the Old World would profit by a vigorous house-cleaning through it.

"With all the facts constantly before the eyes of all the world I believe the world will reach an understanding and a common point of contact for the settlement of differences other than war. And I recommend to American newspapermen, the protagonists of fact-reporting, that they present this hopeful cure to the editors of all other civilized nations."

The modern jam, composed of motor cars, jells much quicker than the old variety.—Milwaukee Journal.

245,990

was the average net paid daily circulation of The Baltimore Sun (morning and evening issues) for the month of

August, 1926

The average net paid circulation of THE SUNDAY SUN per Sunday for the month of August, 1926, was 189,419.

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

Morning Evening Sunday

GEORGE F. BABBITT

Noted Boston Editorial Writer and Paragrapher Dead

George Franklin Babbitt, for 25 years an editorial writer of the Boston (Mass.) Herald, died at North Scituate, Sept. 5, in his 75th year. Mr. Babbitt started his newspaper career on the Boston Post as a reporter after being graduated from Harvard. During Horace Greeley's time, he was active in the formation of the Newspaper Paragraphers' Association. In his days he was considered as the most famous paragrapher in the country. He had contributed to many papers, notably the Boston Herald, for the past 16 years, since his retirement from active work in 1909.

NEW S. C. PLANT

The Statesville (N. C.) Landmark and Daily, of which Pegram A. Bryant is publisher, is to have a new $21,000 home in the near future. Plans were recently made for a modern newspaper building to be erected thereon, and conditional contracts have been let for the building and equipment. Work will begin within the next ten days.

KANSAS WEEKLIES MERGE

The Clayton (Kan.) News and the Clayton Citizen, weekly newspapers, have been combined under the name of the Clayton News. M. C. Johnson is president and J. A. Wikoff, vice-president of the News company.

OELWEIN REGISTER'S SURVEY

The Oelwein (Ia.) Register has issued a four-page survey of its territory for distribution among national advertisers and advertising agencies.

There are too many wrecks in a one-track mind.—Columbia Record.

$500 PRIZE CONTEST LAUNCHED BY BUREAU

A. N. P. A. Subsidiary Seeks to Obtain Ideas on Best Methods to Advertise Newspaper Advertising—Opens Sept. 20

A $500 prize contest seeking ideas on advertising newspaper advertising was announced this week by the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, of which William A. Thomson is director. The contest opens Sept. 20 and closes Nov. 30.

The bureau has invited all persons who believe they can write good advertising copy to take part in the competition. Prizes are offered for the three best advertisements submitted to be divided as follows: first prize $300; second prize, $150; and third prize $50.

In addition to the prizes the bureau reserves the privilege of buying at $5 each 40 or more advertisements that do not win any of the leading prizes. Copy submitted must deal with the value of newspaper advertising to the national advertiser and must not exceed 200 words, it was announced.

BENNY IN HOSPITAL

Elmer Benny, of the New England sales organization of the Ludlow Typograph Company, is in a Springfield, Mass., hospital recovering from a fractured skull, received as the result of a fall. Until three years ago he was in the Ohio Valley district for Ludlow, and previous to that was business manager of the Bayonne (N. J.) Daily Times.

SATURDAY COMIC SECTION

The Jefferson (Ind.) Evening News recently added a four-page comic section to its Saturday edition.

The INDIANAPOLIS NEWS

The Indianapolis News has all three: Circulation leadership, editorial preeminence and advertising dominance. By any standard it is Indiana's greatest newspaper and supreme advertising medium. It has been for 56 years.

Dan A. Carroll, 110 E. 42nd, NEW YORK

J. E. Lutz, Tower Bldg., CHICAGO

Frank T. Carroll, Advertising Director

Something to tie to

IN THE language of the old river-man, "something to tie to" meant a rock or tree that was solidly enough planted to hold the boat against all the power of wind and current. "Something to tie to" meant stability to trust.

This simple phrase has become current in our language. It has not lost its meaning. And nowhere in all the rush of American life is "something to tie to" more important than in the choice of a newspaper.

PUBLISHING has undergone many changes. Favorite journals have disappeared. Ownership has changed again and again. New money has brought new voices to be heard. "Who speaks?" is a fair question when any newspaper utters an opinion.

In this shifting scene, steadfastness, which has been a principle of Scripps-Howard journalism since its beginning in 1879, is valued more than ever by the readers of these newspapers. Scripps-Howard fearlessness, honesty of opinion and independence of control furnish something for the public to tie to.

SCRIPPS-HOWARD

HERE is the most potent reason why Scripps-Howard newspapers enjoy the confidence of more than a million and a half families in twenty-four cities. They are dependable; they can be counted upon for accurate news and for sane and constructive liberalism in policy.

The highest reward of journalism is the respect and confidence of newspaper readers. This, the Scripps-Howard organization values above all else.

SCRIPPS-HOWARD NEWSPAPERS

MEMBERS AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS

Cleveland (Ohio) - - -	Press	Denver (Colo.) - - -	Express
Baltimore (Md.) - - - -	Post	Toledo (Ohio) - - -	News-Bee
Pittsburgh (Pa.) - - -	Press	Columbus (Ohio) - - -	Citizen
San Francisco (Calif) - -	News	Akron (Ohio) - -	Times-Press
Washington (D. C.) - - -	News	Birmingham (Ala.) - - -	Post
Cincinnati (Ohio) - - -	Post	Memphis (Tenn.) - - -	Press
Indianapolis (Ind.) - - -	Times	Houston (Texas) - - -	Press

MEMBERS OF THE UNITED PRESS

Youngstown (Ohio) -	Telegram
Ft. Worth (Texas) - - -	Press
Oklahoma City (Okla.) -	News
Evansville (Ind.) - - -	Press
Knoxville (Tenn.) - - -	News
El Paso (Texas) - - - -	Post
San Diego (Calif.) - - -	Sun
Terre Haute (Ind.) - - -	Post
Covington (Ky.) -	Kentucky Post*
Albuquerque (N. Mex.)	State-Tribune

 Kentucky edition of the Cincinatti Post.*

ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, Inc.
National Representatives
250 Park Avenue, New York, N. Y.
Chicago Seattle Cleveland
San Francisco Detroit Los Angeles

ABOLITION OF 2% CASH DISCOUNT URGED BY PRESS FIELD MANAGERS

Abuse of System by Agencies Cause for Action, Bemis Declares —Uniform Billing Invoice for Publishers Proposed

By NORMAN J. RADDER

FIELD managers of state press associations openly declared war on the present two per cent. cash discount to advertising agencies at their recent annual meeting in St. Paul, when they passed a resolution approving abolition of the system.

BEN H. READ

Abuse of the privilege by agencies was given as the chief cause for the action.

Edwin A. Bemis, president of the field manager's group discussed the resolution in the following statement to EDITOR & PUBLISHER:

"Believing that the 2 per cent discount privilege had become so badly abused that the newspapers throughout the country had come to a point where they deemed it advisable to discontinue it, the state press field men, in their annual meeting at St. Paul, Aug. 25-30, passed a resolution pledging their support to the abolishment of the 2 per cent discount idea.

"This move on the part of the field men was made after a very deliberate discussion of that particular problem, and was taken only in the interest of better business methods and a better relationship between the newspaper industry and the advertising agencies.

"In many cases the 2 per cent has been, and is being, deducted when remittances reach the publishers from 30 days to several months late.

"The 2 per cent idea was originated for the specific purpose of encouraging early settlement of accounts and to obviate extra billing and book-keeping costs, but through the past years it has developed into nothing more than an added commission for obtaining the business.

"In allowing 15 per cent discount, the regular agency commission, editors generally feel that they are paying all that should be required as commission for the advertising.

"The movement in no way involves the integrity, or credit standing of the agencies, but is but a notice to all users of newspaper space that the publishers are abandoning the idea of an additional discount. While this may be cause for a condition of slower settlement from home agencies, yet there is little doubt but that the agencies which stand high with the publishers will continue to make early settlements."

The resolution passed by the field men follows:

"Resolved that we pledge our co-operation with efforts now under way or that may be attempted by the newspapers of the country to dispense with the 2 per cent cash discount now being taken by advertising agencies."

The jumble and maze of billing invoices now used by publishers cries for standardization, George W. Cushing, of McKinney, Marsh & Cushing, Detroit, told the convention. Mr. Cushing's agency handled Ford advertising and the experience he related was based on his agency's relation with 10,000 daily and weekly papers.

The convention, in an attempt to bring some semblance of order out of the chaos of billing methods, passed a resolution advocating a uniform invoice for weekly newspapers. Herman Roe, president of the National Editorial Association, and Herbert Hotaling, secretary, who were in attendance at the field managers' convention, promised the co-operation of the N. E. A. for the uniform invoice plan.

Detroit, Mich.,_____ 192

THE BLANK PUBLISHING CO.

Publishers of

THE NAME OF YOUR PAPER
ADDITIONAL PAPERS OR EDITIONS (if any)

Slogan can be set here

Address of Agency or Advertiser can be used in Open Faced Envelope

Month of_____ Advertiser_____

Date	Description	Edition	Lines Inches	Rate	Gross	Net

DUE A Cash Discount of 2% will be allowed on current charges if paid by 15th of month 15th

Proposed standard billing invoice

Plates will be made of the standard form and these plates will be distributed to field managers and state vice-presidents of the N. E. A.

In suggesting a uniform invoice, Mr. Cushing said:

"This suggested invoice is no more complete or practical than many now in use, but the majority of publishers are using forms that lack the essentials necessary for the advertiser or agency properly to pass them for payment.

"Some invoices carry so little information that it is almost impossible to recognize the publication or the advertiser, thus causing delay, expense of handling, and sometimes inability to pay at all.

Mr. Cushing declared that all invoices should carry the following information:

1. Town, state and date.
2. Name of the paper or papers published. (Name of publisher is not necessary, but may be included if desired.)
3. Name of advertiser or agency.
4. Date of insertion.
5. Edition (if more than one is printed.)
6. Number of lines or inches.
7. Rate, gross and net.
8. Agency terms and cash discount dates.
9. Description of ad is often necessary.
10. Checking proof informaton.

Mr. Cushing recommended a size 6¼ by 10½ or 6¼ by 7, both of which would cut without waste.

While the more flagrant cases of carelessness in billing were found among invoices of weekly newspapers, yet Mr. Cushing's exhibit showed that dailies are by no means perfect in this regard.

The forms suggested by Mr. Cushing carried a provision allowing for a 2 per cent cash discount. The convention voted to cut this out of the standard form to be distributed by the N. E. A.

In its 5-day session, the conventi discussed advertising, rates, local a national differentials, state associatio rate books, free circulation, subscripti trade acceptances, printing as a preferr claim, the financing of the field secretar and extension of the field manager pla

Dissatisfaction with the Americ Press Association as the representati of the weekly paper in the national fie was expressed in the following resol tion:

"Resolved, that we are not in syr pathy with many of the policies a practices of the American Press Ass ciation, believing that same are not co ducive to the permanent development national advertising in the country press

Promotion of the country newspap as a medium for national advertisi could best be carried out by its ow organization—the National Editori Association—in the opinion of the co vention. With this in view a resoluti was passed which reads in part:

" * * * We further recomme that the N. E. A. give a thorough i vestigation to the plan of issuing national advertising rate book to inclu all the weekly papers of the nation."

In connection with the activities of t N. E. A. in the national advertising fiel the convention urged the association "undertake the establishment of a pl of guaranteed circulation statements f weekly newspapers and to confer wi the Audit Bureau of Circulation" in a attempt to find a way to guarantee circ lation of small papers.

All officers were re-elected as follows Edwin A. Bemis, Littleton, Col., pres dent; Len W. Feighner, Nashville, Mich vice-president; and Ole Buck, Harva Neb., secretary-treasurer.

The directors are Ben H. Read Los Angeles; G. L. Caswell of Ame Iowa, and O. W. Little, Alma, Kan.

In addition to those mentioned, oth field managers in attendance at the co vention were Sam S. Haislet of Minn apolis, Fred Kennedy of Seattle, E. Tucker of Ames, Iowa, and J. Hubbard of Columbia, Mo.

The next convention will be in Kans City.

Our Customers Write Our Ads

Bloomington, Ind., Evening World Says—

"We print over 4,000 papers of clear, sharp print on our DUPLEX TUBULAR press in 12 minutes without the least trouble."

DUPLEX PRESSES

FOR ALL NEWSPAPERS

Duplex Printing Press Co.
BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

The DAILY OKLAHOMAN
OKLAHOMA CITY TIMES

thoroughly and alone — COVER — the Oklahoma City Market

Circulation 140,000 daily. But that's only a part of the story—Not just any 140,000, but 140,000 prosperous families concentrated largely in Oklahoma City and its trading territory—140,000 of the most progressive, straight thinking families in Oklahoma—140,000 who believe in and respond to the advertising appearing in Oklahoma's largest morning and largest evening newspapers.

Circulation Daily 140,000
Sunday 83,000

E. KATZ SPECIAL ADVERTISING AGENCY
New York Chicago Kansas City Detroit Atlanta San Francisco

The Best Buy in Buffalo Today

(Black and White or Roto)

Daily and Sunday, seven days a week, over one-half of all the newspaper readers in the Buffalo market territory call the Buffalo Times "My Paper."

Circulation and local advertising volume prove it!

Compare the rates.

BUFFALO TIMES

NORMAN E. MACK, Editor & Publisher

New York
Detroit

National Representatives
VERREE & CONKLIN, INC.

Chicago
San Francisco

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

THE editorial "Valentino and Yellow Journalism" occupies a page in The Nation for September 8. Its opening paragraph is an "attention-arrester" that "grips the reader" as the following quotation will show:

> Public sobbing, onion-produced tears, and peach-colored extras made the illness and death of Rudolph Valentino a startling and hideous orgy of sentimentalism. Lines of the curious eleven blocks long waited in the rain to see his body; women screamed and fought for a glimpse of him. Was this demonstration a revelation of "the American mind" or was it a phenomenon of publicity produced by the press?

Nothing is said in the editorial about the small amount of newspaper space devoted to the passing of Charles William Eliot of Harvard, but the way interest was created in Valentino is thus described:

> While Valentino was dying the newspapers made him into a colossus by the simple device of featuring everything about him; his breathing, his temperature, his ex-wives, and his bracelet. They could probably create a similar interest in any tolerably famous person whom they sought to exploit. They have done it at various times with Dempsey, Helen Wills, Harry Thaw, Gerald Chapman, and Calvin Coolidge. Only last month the papers of Los Angeles performed a similar feat with Aimee Semple McPherson. The mob likes familiarity.

Details are then given of how one paper in particular covered the death, not only in its news columns but also on its editorial page.

The concluding note struck in the editorial warns against censorship which would prevent such sensationalism because at the same time it might destroy many a pioneer of social idealism. The remedy suggested by The Nation is that "we must trust to a growing intelligence in the reading public to demand more accurate, honest news."

* * *

WHEN E. W. Howe, in 1911, retired from the active management of the Globe of Atchison, Kan., he found himself without a paper—for him it was almost like being without a country. And so he started a little monthly to which he gave his name. It soon became a favorite with exchange editors because of its cryptic comment on all sorts of topics.

From his contributions to his monthly Mr. Howe has brought a number together in "Ventures in Common Sense" (Alfred A. Knopf). To the new edition an introduction has been contributed by H. L. Mencken. The topics treated include women, religion, politics, business, literature, fools, professors, and—last but not least, as the country weekly would say—newspapers.

Most of us will agree with the indignation expressed about these topics except where Mr. Howe comments about the press. Commenting about editors in general, Mr. Howe says:

> Editors formerly poor are now rich and powerful; and instead of being dishonest men, they reek with virtue. They are not only good men; they are too good; they demand a perfection in business that they do not equal in their own business offices. It is absurd to say that these powerful, rich and intelligent editors are corrupt. They are as honorable in their dealings as other business men; but their greatness and power have turned their heads, and they have become insolent in demanding that the people dance attendance on their excessive virtue measures, and give freely to their too-liberal plans for community and social betterment.

Immediately following these remarks about editors in general Mr. Howe prints the following about one editor in particular—the big editor who has acquired a big circulation, a big advertising patronage, a big building, and a big fortune:

> Being rich himself, he advocates all sorts of public improvements, that they may become monuments to his memory; as the preacher insists on building a new and unnecessary church as evidence of his activity. The big editor is more insolent with his power than the rich are with their money, and pursues his enemies with a viciousness that will in time, I hope, be prohibited. He is the patron of all other visionary ladies and gents, and joins them in private consultations about the slowness of the people, and their lack of proper enthusiasm. Although always praising The People in print, the big editor really feels superior to them, and harshly criticizes them in his private conferences with fellow uplifters.

Mr. Howe frankly confesses that his publication is at times one of indignation. During one of these fits of indignation he penned the following about the press:

> The newspapers exaggerate the poverty of the poor and the riches of the rich; they exaggerate the importance of the Old Flag; they exaggerate the importance of our schools and churches, the patriotism of old soldiers, and the importance of a Free Press. In advocating truth, they are untruthful; in advocating justice, they are unjust; in teaching fairness, they are unfair; in their eagerness to attack wrong, they accuse honest men of wrongdoing; in fighting demagogues, they become demagogues; in sympathizing with the poor, they are unjust with those who have worked their way out of poverty, and are the best friends of the poor; in their devotion to the public, they often demand so much as to become enemies of the public.

The sage of Potatoe Hill Farm certainly does not believe in sugar-coating the pills which he gives to fellow editors. Sometimes Mr. Howe suffers from indigestion, but in spite of that fact he is one of the finest fellows we have ever met. His little monthly never goes unopened.

* * *

THE September issue of The Iowa Journalist gives, relatively speaking, considerable space to "The Best Weekly in the United States"—the Walton (N. Y). Reporter. The title was awarded by the National Editorial Association. The Reporter is a great weekly—and no one knows it better than myself. I was once connected with a newspaper in an adjoining county and so I know of its excellence from first-hand experience.

This August issue also passes along a bouquet to EDITOR & PUBLISHER for "its leadership in the fight to enable George R. Dale of Muncie, Ind., to carry his libel case to the United States supreme court." The bouquet is tied with this string:

> Until this case is settled right, the newspapers of the United States have not won the fight for freedom which was begun by William Bradford in Pennsylvania and continued by John Peter Zenger in New York.

Publishers of community weeklies will be interested in the article, "A Study of News Evaluations," based upon a survey of 31 respective weekly newspapers in Iowa and Illinois. The weeklies selected represented every type from the least to the most prosperous.

The Iowa Journalist is published by the School of Journalism of the University of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa.

* * *

MERLE THORPE, editor of The Nation's Business at Washington, is the author of the pamphlet, "Fringe Markets," based upon his address before the National Industrial Advertisers' Association of Philadelphia, June 23, 1926.

A popular fallacy about advertising is thus set forth:

> A Harvard professor calls advertising simply "puffing" and a direct charge on the consumer which spells waste in large letters.
>
> A jewelry clerk told a customer in my hearing the other day that Rogers' silver cost more than another just-as-good brand because Rogers spent $7,500 for a single page of advertising!
>
> My own experience with a hat salesman was similar. This clerk showed me a hat which he said was the best value on the market. I asked him why it was better than a Knox.
>
> "Because," he said, "this manufacturer puts his money into the hat instead of into advertising."

How should this fallacious argument against advertising be met? Here is the answer of Mr. Thorpe:

> It is the ignorance of advertising on the part of the public that has caused Congress, the public's representatives, to place a tax on mass selling. No one would think of taxing mass production.
>
> In the old days a man made his goods and went out and peddled them. As he prospered he hired a man to do the peddling. It would take several million peddlers today to sell the output of American factories.
>
> Advertising has taken the place, in much more economic fashion, of those million peddlers.
>
> We know there are wastes in advertising, just as there are wastes in manufacturing, in transportation, in retailing. But advertising on the whole is a necessary tool in this age of mass production and we should not be ashamed of that tool.

Copies of the booklet for those who want to know other interesting facts about the "fringe market" may be had upon application to Merle Thorpe, The Nation's Business, Washington, D. C.

* * *

A RECENT issue of Commerce Reports, the official government publication, contains an article on "An American Daily Newspaper for Shanghai" by Julean Arnold, commercial attaché of Shanghai, China. This paper, according to Mr. Arnold, is to be owned and edited by American citizens who have resided in China for several years and who have been identified with the development of American commercial and other interests in China. The title of the paper has not yet been selected, but the publishing company has been incorporated as "The American Publishing Company."

Details about the paper are thus given by Mr. Arnold:

> Attention is called in the prospectus to the fact that although Shanghai has one of the largest American populations of any city outside of the United States, it is the only important city in the Far East without an American newspaper. The statement is made that Shanghai has American schools, clubs, churches, shipping, banking, insurance, and mercantile firms, and that obviously it should have a newspaper under American control and management which will present American opinion and point of view on the many local and international problems which arise. This is of importance, states the prospectus, not only to Americans but to Chinese and nationals of other countries who want to know American opinion, for "without an organ to lead, express, and interpret the opinion the American community must remain inarticulate and play a minor or negligible part in the affairs of Shanghai, and in view of the readjustments which are being made in China this is a situation fraught with danger."

He then goes on to say that the chief policy of the proposed newspaper will be the exchange of news between America and China. The equipment will be purchased in America. An analysis of Shanghai as a newspaper field shows a foreign population of about forty thousand of which more than one half are English reading. Of the Chinese population of 2,000,000 it is said that about 50,000 can read English. It is planned to staff the paper, so far as it is possible, with American trained men.

PHOTO ILLUSTRATORS UNITE

Eight New York photographic illustrators have formed an association called Photographic Illustrators, Inc., designed to increase the use of this form of illustration in advertising copy. Organizations participating are the Fab Studio, Inc., Alfred Cheney Johnston, Mua Studios, Steichen, Oliver C. Underhill, Underwood and Underwood, H. William and Winemiller and Miller, Inc.

K. C. STAR STARTS ROTO

The Kansas City Star has started a Sunday rotogravure section.

CIRCULATION BUILDING SUPREMACY

We opened 1926 with the greatest newspaper campaign ever conducted, and secured over $300,000 in prepaid subscriptions for The Cleveland Plain Dealer. We can attain similar success for you!

THOUSANDS OF NEW, PREPAID, BONA-FIDE HOME-DELIVERED SUBSCRIBERS SECURED IN TEN WEEKS' TIME

HOLLISTER'S
Circulation Organization

Wire or Write us at 717-718 Commercial Exchange Bldg. LOS ANGELES

THE PEOPLE OF ARGENTINA PREFER PICTURES

LA PRENSA

OF BUENOS AIRES

was the first newspaper in South America to buy and install a Rotogravure plant in order to satisfy this preference. The success of the supplement was such that it became immediately necessary to order a second large Rotogravure press.

Your advertisement in La Prensa's 8 page Rotogravure Section is assured of an average net paid circulation of 290,000 a larger audience than that reached by any other publication in the country. Every advertising campaign in Argentina should be based on the producing power of

LA PRENSA

JOSHUA B. POWERS
Exclusive Advertising Representative
250 PARK AVENUE, NEW YORK

FREE A booklet of facts, "Argentina as a Market for American Products" mailed free on request.

"South America's Greatest Newspaper"

As many faces as you need in standard, interchangeable magazines, ready for use on either type of Linotypes:

SINGLE DISTRIBUTION
OR MULTIPLE DISTRIBUTION

Mergenthaler Linotype Company

Brooklyn, New York

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS
CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO
Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

Linotyped in the Cloister Family

SINGLE DISTRIBUTION

One, two or three interchangeable main magazines

MODEL 8
without auxiliary magazine

MODEL 14
with auxiliary magazine

Also built as Display Linotypes
MODEL 21—without auxiliary
MODEL 22—with auxiliary

MULTIPLE DISTRIBUTION

Two interchangeable main magazines

MODEL 25
without auxiliary magazines

MODEL 26
with two auxiliary magazines

Faces from all magazines mixed in the same line

S20.26.8-F

An Industria

A New Conce

OUR engineering policy is based upon the conviction that delay machinery, whatever its price, or permit its machinery to deteri

Our machines, therefore, are built wholly regardless of the cost of th respects they are the best the metallurgical and engineering sciences

Not only do we build our machines so well that they need the r happen to require. For this purpose our service department is ope inspects regularly every Wood Machine in use, without cost to its ow

These practices have borne such good fruit, that we are now ab our guarantee the time limit and m Machine remains in the hands of i and its owner is permanently insur

Moreover, he is entitled to ha time the benefit of the oversight of and maintenance, wherever he ma

Although the foregoing policies are in a them sufficient to discharge the entire duty o to supply the machinery upon which the s right to expect the manufacturer to forecast t entitled to demand that a part of his earning productive and economical machinery for th

Belief in this has led us to establish a phenomena involved in the work of producin tion, improving quality, reducing operating co are not content to have our establishment reg to be valued for the daily service it renders a of permanent practical worth to the newspap

HENRY A.
P

WOOD NEWSPAPER M
501 Fifth Av

INSTALLATION

ESTABLISHED 1848

Brooklyn Daily Times

TIMES PLAZA BROOKLYN, N. Y.

August 24th, 1926

Wood Newspaper Machinery Corporation,
501 Fifth Avenue,
New York City.

Gentlemen:

We want to congratulate you heartily on the rapid and successful installation of our new Double Junior Autoplate equipment.

The dismantling of the old equipment began at one o'clock Sunday morning, July 4th, and the new equipment was turning out plates at four o'clock Monday afternoon, July 5th. The new equipment took its place on the floor of our foundry on the same location previously occupied by the old machinery.

We want you to know that we appreciate this splendid cooperation, and do not know how any installation could have been completed more rapidly or more successfully.

Very truly yours,

Fremont C. Peck,
Publisher.

FCP/JBL

INNOVATION

ion of Service

blication are so costly that no newspaper can afford to use inferior rials, workmanship and engineering skill that go into them. In all three duce in a modernly equipped and scientifically administered plant.

m of attention, but we furnish instantly such service as they may operating twenty-four hours a day. Furthermore, our field force nounce a policy that is new in industry. We have eliminated from perpetual. So long as a Wood nal purchaser, this warranty holds inst defective construction.

nout cost during the whole of that rvice department in its operation the United States or Canada.

of prevailing practice, we do not consider facturer to those who depend upon him f their business depends. They have the anical requirements of the future; and are voted to the development of even more laboratory for investigating the physical wspaper, with a view to increasing produc- lessening working space and waste. We erely as a business enterprise; we wish it s contribution of new thoughts and tools try.

E WOOD

NERY CORPORATION
ew York

MAINTENANCE

Elzey Roberts. Publisher
T. L. Ryan, General Manager Frank W. Taylor, Jr., Managing Editor

THE ST. LOUIS STAR

Star Building Star Square

August 17, 1926.

Wood Newspaper Machinery Corp.,
501 Fifth Avenue,
New York City.

Gentlemen:

You certainly did take quick action on our telegram that reached you at 4:15 P. M. Tuesday, August 10th, telling you of a serious break-down in one of our Junior Autoplates and requesting that you send us two gears by aeroplane mail. The gears arrived in our office Wednesday morning, August 11th, about 11 A. M.

This is the kind of service that will make your already great firm greater.

Very truly yours,

THE ST. LOUIS STAR,

T. L. Ryan,
General Manager

TLRyan.
MB

EDITORIAL

Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves: be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves.—St. Matthew; X, 16.

ADVICE TO MR. COOLIDGE

THE time has come firmly to advise President Coolidge to discontinue his "spokesman" conferences with the press. All political questions aside, Mr. Coolidge should do this in the interest of the press and the orderly processes of public opinion. "Unofficial spokesman" diplomacy may be a clever political device, but it is very damaging to the newspapers.

No one will dispute the statement that the incident of the past week was harmful to the reputation of the press for accuracy of statement. The people of the United States believe Mr. Coolidge tells the truth and when he asserts that the newspapers have misquoted the "unofficial spokesman" the burden of responsibility falls on the press. As a newspaper's chief asset is the confidence of the reading public a Presidential repudiation of a published statement of fact may be regarded as of incalculable harm. The mischief that is being done in the field of public opinion by these "unofficial" announcements, which within a few days are "officially" denied, may be very great indeed.

It may be said that the newspaper reader of discernment has been able to discover for himself that the "unofficial spokesman" is indeed the President himself, but the answer to that suggestion is that the rank and file of readers are not abstract thinkers and that the flow of denials from the White House during the past two years or more must have very materially shaken public confidence in the reliability of the newspapers and their political representatives.

On Friday, one week ago, Mr. Coolidge talked to the newspaper men at White Pine Camp as the "unofficial spokesman" and all accounts agree that he discussed the international armament situation. The page one headline that the New York Herald Tribune put over Carter Field's story read, "President Warns Europe to Cut Arms or See U. S. Build Biggest Air Fleet." Mr. Field's lead read as follows: "President Coolidge today served notice on the world that unless there is an armament limitation agreement the United States will go ahead with the development of naval aviation even to the point predicted by Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, which would make America lead the world in this branch." As this vitally important account proceeds the reader is informed that it is based upon remarks made by the "official spokesman" of the White House. We have compared the account with other accounts and find them in general agreement. So the "spokesman" must have offered some substantial ground for these important assertions.

Three days later, after these threatening statements had been broadcast over the world, and the European newspapers had quoted their diplomats in strong and in instances even war-like interviews, Mr. Coolidge called the correspondents around him and with some show of anger repudiated the newspaper accounts, saying that his armament program had been misinterpreted. Herald Tribune did not publish this denial but New York Times said: "Mr. Coolidge expressed amazement that his attitude could have been misinterpreted," adding that he seeks reduction rather than increase in American armaments and those of other powers.

If this were an isolated instance it might be regarded as unfortunate and be quickly forgotten, but "unofficial spokesman" diplomacy has become so insistent and absurd, and we think destructive, that it is subject matter for the jokesmiths. To conserve the dignity of the office, as well as do justice to the press and the people, we feel that Mr. Coolidge should discontinue the practice and if he feels that he cannot speak on any subject with full authority for publication in quotation marks he should remain silent. The present system makes only for misunderstanding and confusion worse confused.

There are plenty of precedents for Mr. Coolidge if he decides to discontinue his "unofficial" conferences. President Wilson came to the decision and stopped talking. President Roosevelt's administration was seriously marred by his occasional strenuous repudiations of interviews for diplomacy's sake and the disagreeable business finally resulted in the brandishing of the short and ugly epithet. Perhaps a President should never be quoted. Perhaps a President should speak plainly to the people through the press on all subjects, and stand behind his statements. But certainly, pride and honor and many practical considerations, should prevent any President from speaking unofficially and repudiating his remarks when it is diplomatically expedient to do so.

In the circumstances, EDITOR & PUBLISHER advises Mr. Coolidge to dump the "unofficial spokesman" into some convenient Adirondack lake and return to Washington free of his destructive influences. We are no judge of the temper of the newspaper men of this country if this opinion does not reflect the popular professional view.

Buoyant youth is valued in newspaper offices because of its sublime vision of possibilities—don't discourage it!

CHARLES HOPKINS CLARK

THE flood of tributes from prominent people that poured into newspaper columns following the death of Charles Hopkins Clark, editor of Hartford (Conn.) Courant, indicated the high position that this newspaper man had established for himself through his works. It reflected the respect in which the aged editor was held, both locally and throughout the nation. Mr. Coolidge expressed the general view of the profession when he wrote of Mr. Clark: "He always represented the best that there is in American life."

In his quiet way Mr. Clark went about his duties in his home city and became identified with the most powerful factors of the local and state society. Melville E. Stone, who knew him intimately for more than 30 years, they being drawn together in the Associated Press enterprise, found him to be a man of sturdy character who felt that the responsibility of journalism was real and sought to execute a public trust with honor and credit. Mr. Clark was an able editor and good citizen.

The smaller the head the higher the hat.

AUTOMOBILE SAFETY

THE American newspaper is conceded to be the backbone of the fight to enforce traffic regulations that safeguard the people against the growing menace of automobile accidents. The annual toll of life and limb on the streets of the cities and roads of the country has taken on the proportions of a national horror. The condition creates a responsibility that cannot be evaded by any editor. Newspapers in hundreds of cities are using their finest talents to solve this vast new problem of American life. EDITOR & PUBLISHER seeks to shed light on the subject in this issue. We have made merely a random survey of the field, but find editors fighting automobile abuses in many cities. We shall appreciate word from any editor who has an idea to offer to the crying need for improved safety methods.

The automobile has contributed to the American public an incalculable measure of happiness, freedom, health, interest and practical service. It has changed the whole mode of life and vastly improved it. But so serious are the results of abuse of the automobile that its beneficence is being overshadowed and unless the horror of 22,500 fatalities in a single year is curbed, outraged public opinion will react against it, threatening alike desirable pursuits of the public and the automobile industry.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S suggestion to editors is to study the most advanced methods in traffic regulation and apply them to meet local conditions. Nothing is more certain to bring the reward of reader gratitude.

SUCCESS OBSERVATIONS

IT will not be disputed by newspaper executives o experience that Walter G. Bryan is an authorit on efficient methods in the advertising and busines offices. Mr. Bryan, we find in reviewing the transcrip of the proceedings of the Association of Newspape Advertising Executives, at Philadelphia, made a address fairly bristling with valuable technical infor mation which, through some mischance, appears t have been overlooked by the trade press. Here ar some of his observations:

Last year American newspapers wasted 300,000,00 pounds of newsprint, with a cash value o $12,000,000—unconscious waste! The amount o white paper turned out at the mills and the amoun turned out as finished newspaper product shows loss of about ten per cent. Of this, fifty per cen should be saved. The average newspaper executive i mistaken when he claims that his news print waste i "only about four per cent." Checked, it will be foun to be nearer ten per cent. If a newspaper's wrapper transit white, press room white, printed, bale an core total more than four per cent of the whol there is unnecessary waste. If free copies, returns over-runs, allowances, office copies, etc., exceed 1 pe cent daily and 1½ per cent on Sunday there is in efficiency.

Concerning classified advertising Mr. Bryan said "If the classified advertising rate is not as high as th foreign advertising rate, the paper is not efficientl managed." Classified linage now exceeds foreign an "stands to eventually outstrip local display." On on newspaper five girls made 50,552 telephone calls in year, secured 37,434 advertisements, 85,899 insertions and increased revenue $118,062.05 at a cost of les than four per cent.

Classified pages should yield 14 lines to the inch not 12 as usually happens. About 30,000,000 line of space with a cash value of $5,000,000 is lost an nually through failure to attend to this seemingl small detail. In the Hearst Organization Mr. Brya worked for a year and a half to get the 12-er standard adopted and clipping off the half em save three per cent on an annual newsprint bill o $20,000,000.

Some newspapers are satisfied when they collect 9 per cent of their classified accounts, but one news paper in Los Angeles succeeds in collecting 99 pe cent on a classified business of about 10,000,000 line per year. If more than ten per cent of classifie accounts are on a newspaper's books after the tent of the succeeding month the collection system shoul be shaken up.

Concerning subscriptions Mr. Bryan told of the ex perience of the old Chicago Record Herald, whe 23,852 new subscribers were put on in eleven month at a cost of only 42.2 each, by telephone solicitatio a crew of girls doing the work. This was less ex pensive and more effective than the work of a cre of bell ringers, who were offering free sets of dishe

Mr. Bryan advocated promotion. "Practice wha your advertising solicitors are preaching to the mer chants of your city," he said, adding that not 50 news papers in America are advertising consistently and per sistently.

He advocated spending five per cent of th revenue derived from classified and display advertisin for promotion.

In reference to rates, he said: "The most efficien way to increase linage is to increase rates. Thi applies to both classified and display. I speak fro 20 years' experience, without a single failure on tha score. If your newspaper is not operating on thi effective method of growth, it is not efficient. . . Henry Beverage of the Portland Press Herald i one year raised classified rates twice and gaine 200,000 lines, while his competitor lost. And h brought the net per line up until it exceeded bot local and foreign."

Philadelphia's Sesqui-Centennial is the most conspicuous sacrifice to ineffective press agentry that we can cite, but its promoters are still sold on "free stuff" which doesn't get printed and are broadcasting to editors a silly certificate of appreciation for "conspicuous service in assisting the directors by bringing the message before the public."

PERSONAL

JOHN C. SHAFFER, publisher of the Chicago Evening Post, accompanied by his wife, returned this week from Colorado where they spent the summer on their ranch, Ken-Carroll, near Denver.

John Stewart Bryan, publisher of the Richmond (Va.) News--Leader and president of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association is visiting friends in Belfast, Ireland.

Henry Justin Smith, managing editor, Chicago Daily News, has just returned from a trip to Europe ,and is writing a series of articles about Paris for the News.

R. C. Whinery, editor of the Tonkawa (Okla.) News, suffered painful injuries in an automobile accident recently.

IN THE BUSINESSS OFFICE

CLIFFORD H. HOUSE, local display advertising manager, San Francisco Examiner, has gone on a trip to Europe.

R. C. Caravati, of the advertising department, Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, has resigned, to join the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce.

Jeff Barnette, formerly with the Houston Chronicle, has joined the business staff of the Houston Press.

P. W. Walsh, national advertising manager of the Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser, was a visitor in New York this week.

Howard Welsh, for many years advertising manager of the San Francisco Bulletin, has joined the San Francisco Chronicle display department.

Frank E. Rutledge, formerly Brooklyn sales manager for Brown and Bigelow, has joined the New York Evening Graphic as a member of the national advertising department.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

CHARLES R. CORBIN, assistant managing editor, Toledo Blade, is acting managing editor during the vacation of William F. Hedrick.

Howard White, society editor, New York Herald Tribune has gone on a two-weeks' tour of the Adirondack and White mountains.

D. H. Bancroft, for several years oil editor of the Shreveport (La.) Times, has been named night managing editor of the El Dorado (Ark.) Daily News, and assumed that position on Sept. 1. Alex. H. Washburn has been promoted to managing editor of the Daily News and Evening Times, and Robert Hays has been named city editor.

L. M. Benedict, Columbus correspondent for the Akron (O.) Beacon Journal and the Springfield Sun, has resigned and will become associated with Myers Y. Cooper of Cincinnati, Republican candidate for governor of Ohio.

Beverly W. Smith has joined the staff of the New York Herald Tribune.

W. Clark Harrington, a reporter on the Springfield (Mass.) Union, recently had two musical compositions, "My Little Brown Shack and You" and "Lantern of Gold" published by the Harden Music Company, Inc.

Jerry McWilliams, of the Newark Evening News staff, has returned after a tour through the New England States.

George Flory, formerly police reporter for the Chicago Evening American, has resigned to enter the bond business.

Harley A. Grantham, editor of the De Witt (Ia.) Observer, is author of "Tag Ends" a collection of his writings which first appeared in a column conducted by him in a Cedar Rapids, Ia., daily.

James Copeland has joined the Orange staff of the Newark Star-Eagle, succeeding Frank J. Porter, who has resigned to become a professor of English and mathematics at Seton Hall, South Orange, N. J.

Harland Rohm is the newly appointed golf writer of the Chicago Tribune, taking the place made vacant by the resignation of Morrow Krum.

Paul N. Gottlieb, for years political editor of the old Philadelphia North American, is now executive clerk in the Department of the City Treasurer.

Frank Ridgeway, agricultural editor, Chicago Tribune, has been touring the northwest reporting crop conditions for the Tribune.

Ben S. Hibbs, former director of the department of journalism, K. S. T. C., Hays, Kan., has taken charge of the Goodland (Kan.) News-Republic.

Hubert C. Tillery, state editor of the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, has been ill for the last several weeks and will have to undergo an operation.

Philip Kinsley, staff reporter, Chicago Tribune, is in Tekamah, Neb., wiring stories on the bread and water treatment afforded bootleggers there.

Edward Lynett, Jr., who has been serving on the staff of the Scranton (Pa.) Times during the summer vacation, is planning to resume his studies at Holy Cross University.

Leland H. Reese, staff reporter of the Chicago Daily News, obtained an interview with President Plutarco Calles of Mexico this week.

A. J. O'Malley, city editor of the Scranton (Pa.) Times, has left on a six weeks' trip through the west. He will attend the convention of printers in Colorado Springs while away.

Arthur Sears Henning, Washington correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, has been covering the New Hampshire election during the past ten days.

James S. Gibbons has resigned as editor and manager of the Scranton Sunday Dispatch. For the time being John Durkan, former mayor of Scranton is serving as manager of the publication.

Albert S. Keshen of the University of Missouri school of journalism has joined the staff of the Elizabeth (N. J.) Times as suburban reporter.

Howard Cushman, formerly reporter for the Buffalo Evening News, has resigned to become manager of radio station WGR of the Federal.

James Kennedy, city editor of the Newark Star-Eagle, has returned from a two weeks' vacation.

Curtis Vinson has resigned as staff correspondent of the Dallas News and on Sept. 1 became director of publicity, Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College, College Station, Tex.

Miss Sylvia Ragon, a graduate of the University of Missouri school of journalism has joined the staff of the Jeffersonville (Ind.) Evening News.

Joseph A. Bush, head of the Newark Star-Eagle's Orange, N. J., bureau, is sojourning with his family at Cape Cod.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

CLARENCE E. WATKINS, editor and owner of the Chillicothe (Mo.) Constitution, is also president of the Northwest Missouri Press Association and a director of the Missouri Associated Dailies.

Clarence Watkins

Educated in the Chillicothe public schools, Mr. Watkins at 10 began newspaper work as carrier boy for the paper he now publishes. His uncle, William L. Watkins was then the owner of that paper. On the death of his uncle in 1912, the newspaper became the property of James E. Watkins, a successful attorney of Chillicothe and father of the present owner. The elder Mr. Watkins depended largely on his son for the successful management of the newspaper, and upon the death of his father C. E. Watkins assumed control, in January 1923.

Under his supervision, the Constitution has grown rapidly and has prospered. Many extensive improvements have been made in the plant, including the installation of a high speed web perfecting newspaper press.

W. W. Jermane, chief of the Seattle Times Washington bureau, spoke on "Experiences of a Correspondent in Washington" recently in Seattle.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

JOHN L. BRADFORD, from night editor, Salem (Mass.) News, to city staff, Montreal Star.

George W. Shaw, from copy desk, Springfield (Mass.) Union, to copy desk, Hartford (Conn.) Times.

Irwin F. Harrison, from city editor, Sioux City (Ia.) Tribune, to Omaha (Neb.) World Herald staff.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

M. T. PAEHNE, Kansas newspaperman, more recently of Oklahoma and Texas, has purchased the Burdette (Kan.) News from E. Ray, of Garfield.

C. C. Charles, who recently sold the Pilger (Neb.) Herald, has purchased the Ponca Nebraska Journal-Leader, from E. B. Kingsbury who has been its editor the last 24 years. Mr. Kingsbury plans to retire.

H. W. Haislet has sold his St. James (Minn.) Independent to E. M. Cupper-

(Continued on page 28)

Central Press Service
Used in 47 States with additional clients in Canada, Mexico, Central America, Panama, Porto Rico, Cuba, Hawaii, Philippines, China and France.

What further evidence need be given of the world wide scope of America's fastest growing news mat and feature service?

Now over four hundred subscribers with five hundred as the goal set for January 1, 1927. Hadn't you better

Investigate—

The Central Press Association

V. V. McNitt, President — Central Press Bldg., Cleveland — H. A. McNitt, Editor and Manager

In Making Your Plans for the Fall

Do Not Fail to Consider These

METROPOLITAN
Weekly Winners

STEPHEN LEACOCK
A. A. MILNE
PINNACLE FICTION
ZENITH FICTION
EXPLOIT and ADVENTURE
PRE-EMINENT ARTICLES

JUVENILE

SECKATARY HAWKINS STORY
HAWKINS CLUB PAGE

WEEKLY COMICS

ELLA CINDERS COLOR PAGE
By Bill Conselman and Charlie Plumb

DOWN THE ROAD
By Frank Beck

DICKEY'S DOGS
By Robert L. Dickey

Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Maximilian Elser, Jr. General Manager — Earl J. Hadley Associate

150 Nassau St. New York City

(Continued from page 27)

null of St. Paul, who took charge Sept. 1. The Independent was established by Mr. Haislet in 1914. He is a brother of Sam Haislet, field secretary of the Minnesota Editorial Association.

W. F. McQuitty has sold the Alexis (Ill.) Argus to Don McKelvey, who has been employed in the Argus shop.

Homer B. Gaston, for the last eight years editor of the Richmond (Ill.) Gazette, has purchased the Antioch (Ill.) News from John Horan and assumed management. He recently sold the Gazette.

Stanton Hudson, formerly publisher of the Fort Scott (Kan.) Bourbon County News, has purchased the stock of Dr. J. G. Sandidge and O. B. Strong in the Mulberry Independent and is now in charge.

The F. W. Hughes estate has sold the Postville (Ia.) Herald to William Klingbell, who founded the paper, which he sold two years ago to the late Mr. Hughes.

MARRIED

STANLEY N. TREW, foreman of the composing room, Lethbridge (Alta.) Herald, to Miss Dora Nimmons recently.

Billy F. James, of the Kansas City Star staff, to Miss Lucille Grace of Kansas City, last week.

Richard B. Dolbeare, son of Harris Dolbeare, publisher of the Wakefield (Mass.) Daily Item, to Miss Alice Preston at the Congregational Church, Wakefield, last week.

Marguerite Leah Breton, of the advertising department, Springfield (Mass.) Union, to Edward Joseph Cook, Jr., of Springfield, in Chicopee, Mass., Labor Day.

Emerson Reck, assistant sporting editor, Springfield (O.) Daily News, to Miss Hazel January, Sept. 6. With his bride he has left for Fremont, Neb., where he will direct publicity and act as instructor in journalism at Midland College.

Charles W. Pratt, editor of the Pratt (Kan.) Daily Tribune, to Miss Beulah Heldstrom of McPherson, Kan., recently.

Miss Ella May Margaret Anderson, bookkeeper, Jamestown (N. Y.) Journal, to Roy William Bader, linotype operator, Jamestown Evening Post.

John Leonard O'Neill, composing room employe of the Boston (Mass.) Transcript, to Miss Anna Elizabeth Bloomer of Malden in that city, Sept. 4.

Willis F. Forbes, city editor of the Sioux City (Ia.) Journal to Miss Myrtle Lillian Gleason of Sioux City, Aug. 28 at LeMars, Ia.

WITH THE SPECIALS

POWERS & STONE, INC., publishers representatives, New York, have been named to represent the Poughkeepsie (N. Y.) Eagle News in the national field.

Edwin S. Wells, Jr., is a new member of the Ford-Parsons Newspaper representatives company in the Wrigley Building, Chicago. Mr. Wells is the son of Edwin S. Wells, a well known Chicago advertising man who has been a member of the Chicago Daily News' advertising staff for many years.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

ELGIN (Ill.) COURIER-NEWS, 42-page Old Timers' edition, Aug. 30.

Marshfield (Wis.) Daily News, special Fair edition, Sept. 1.

Excelsior Springs (Mo.) Standard, 38-page National Resort Number, Aug. 29.

Massillon (O.) Evening Independent, Centennial section in rotogravure celebrating city's 100th anniversary, Sept. 4.

ON THE MECHANICAL SIDE

SPOKANE FALLS Typographical Union No. 193 recently celebrated its 40th anniversary. H. W. Greenberg, only living member who was among the seven organizers of the union, was one of those present. About 200 attended.

Everett Beckwith has resigned from the press room force of the Batavia (N. Y.) News to enter a business school. He has been succeeded by Robert Susat.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENT

JEFFERSONVILLE (Ind.) EVENING NEWS has just installed a new Linotype.

Shipment has been made to the Los Angeles (Cal.) Record of four Goss high speed press units, a color unit and one pair of folders.

NEW PUBLICATIONS

A. MATHIAS has begun publication of the Cleo Springs (Okla.) Major County News in a plant he recently purchased.

Mayfield (Wash.) Record published its first issue August 20. F. J. Oeltjen is editor and publisher.

SCHOOLS

H. BABCOCK, professor of English and journalism and editor of the Virginia Gazette, has resigned his position at the College of William and Mary, at Williamsburg, Va., to accept a similar one at the University of South Carolina. The Virginia Gazette, the South's oldest journal and the first newspaper in the United States to publish the Declaration of Independence, was revived and published by Professor Babcock in connection with his classes in journalism.

Evening courses in advertising will be continued this fall at the Northwestern University School of Commerce in Wieboldt hall on the lake front. The subjects offered include principles of advertising, advertising copy writing, advanced advertising copy writing, typography, advertising campaigns, direct-by-mail selling, general psychology and advertising psychology.

ASSOCIATIONS

CITY PRESS CLUB of Chicago were to hold a combination dinner-dance, theatrical and swimming party Sept. 11, at which "Red" Grange, football star, was to be the honor guest.

E. E. Beard, former president of the WASHINGTON PRESS ASSOCIATION has joined the state department of efficiency at Olympia.

First fall meeting of the DAYTON ADVERTISING CLUB will be held Sept. 15.

The annual convention of the WESTERN DAILY NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING MANAGERS ASSOCIATION OF CANADA was held at Banff, Aug. 16 and 17. Newspapers from every part of Canada from Victoria to Winnipeg were represented. H. Save, of the Regina Leader, was elected president for next year.

DALLAS ADVERTISING LEAGUE, at a meeting celebrating the 21st anniversary of Holland's Magazine, Dallas, was addressed by Col. F. P. Holland, publisher.

Kansas editor-golfers will hold their annual fall tournament at Arkansas City, Kan., Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Oct. 21-23, as guests of Arkansas City newspapermen and the Chamber of Commerce. W. R. Kercher, Topeka, editor of the Southwest Bell publication, is president and Angelo Scott, Iola Register editor, is secretary-treasurer of the Editorial Golf Association.

J. F. Halladay, secretary of the SOUTH DAKOTA PRESS ASSOCIATION, has prepared a newspaper exhibit for the State Fair being held at Huron, Sept. 9-13. Editors of the state were asked to submit two copies of their paper for display. The exhibit was mounted by Charles D. Byrne, editor of publications, South Dakota State College, Brookings.

James M. Yard spoke on "Advertising in China" at the Sept. 8, luncheon meeting of the BALTIMORE ADVERTISING CLUB.

The Kansas City chapter of the MISSOURI WRITER'S GUILD, INC. has organized a speakers' bureau among its members to meet the great demand for speakers. Clarence N. Cook is president. Another feature the chapter has installed is a manuscript bureau, where for a small fee, criticisms are made of manuscripts.

Members of the BOSTON NEWSPAPER GOLFERS' ASSOCIATION held a tournament last week at the Tedesco course at Swampscott. The winners for the day were: In Class A, Burt Whitman, of the Herald, 88-7-81; F. E. Drummond, Post, 102-20-82; W. A. Grimes, American, 93-10-83; J. A. Dipesa, Italian News, 106-22-84. In Class B, J. R. Kelley, Post, 115-13-102; M. G. Starke, Post, 122-10-112.

CHAMPAIGN (Ill.) ADVERTISING AND SELLING CLUB will begin its fall season Sept. 28 in the Beardsley hotel with Edward H. Stafford, president, presiding. Plans for the year provide for the appearance once a month of an out-of-town expert and the club will be conducted on a purely professional basis with membership restricted to actual advertising men. University of Illinois students studying advertising will be admitted.

W. G. Weagant of the Chicago Herald and Examiner won the gold medal in the qualifying round of the CHICAGO PRESS GOLF CLUB'S annual championship at Edgewater golf club this week. Second place was shared by J. H. Forrest of the Chicago Evening American, Harry Munzell of the Herald and Examiner and Fuller McGants of the American. Fred Lewis of the Chicago Daily News and Ernest L. Heitkamp of the American were tied for third.

FLASHES

It appears that the President cannot even escape the White House Spokesman when he is on his vacation.—Dayton News.

Clerk—You wish a birthday gift for your daughter? How about a dainty garter purse?

Father—No: it would be unwise for her to carry her money in plain sight.—Capper's Weekly.

A high pitched voice on the radio is said to have put out a fire; it has often put a quiet, loving soul out of his apartment.—New York Evening World.

Peggy Joyce will wed her fifth husband just as soon as his wife gives consent.—Florence (Ala.) Herald.

One does not need to ask if the hosiery mill which closed its doors was making them of silk or cotton.—Dayton (O.) Daily News.

An Oklahoma City woman who tried to shoot her husband's "lady friend" had bad aim and shot hubby instead. If she can't be given credit with a hit she is at least entitled to a sacrifice.—Wichita Eagle.

When it came time to return to America, Miss Ederle weakened and took a boat.—Detroit News.

Pretty often it takes more elbows than brains to push to the front.—Bartlesville (Okla.) Enterprise.

Aren't the Hoosiers the inconsistent folks, though? They praise their literary men and women and then shove an editor into jail for telling the truth.—John R. Wolf in Milwaukee Journal.

Another thing about naughty movies that offends people is that they never are as naughty as the advertising promises.—Muskogee Phoenix.

While it may have been a typographical error, the statement of an exchange that a man was "blinded by a flask of lightning" is entirely plausible.—Florence (Ala.) Herald.

Largest morning and Sunday circulation in the Greatest Market west of Chicago
170,000 Daily
390,000 Sunday
LOS ANGELES Examiner

Distinctive Advertising
Set on the Ludlow

Call the honor roll of America's greatest newspapers—there you will almost invariably find Ludlows.

It's the ability of this system to furnish unlimited quantities of display in the most modern faces from 6 to 60 point bold, extended and full-flowing italic included, that has made it the unanimous choice of papers which appreciate good composition.

That the Ludlow has saved them time and money as well, are added advantages. To know the Ludlow is to realize why it is the simplest, most practical system of setting display composition. Let us show you.

Ludlow Typograph Company
2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago
San Francisco: 5 Third Street
Atlanta: 41 Marietta Street
New York: 63 Park Row
Boston: 261 Franklin Street
LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

Suppose There Were No Editor & Publisher's

MARKET GUIDE?

It is inconceivable that any national newspaper campaign ever be entered into without first consulting just such a compendium of vital market statistics as is to be found in the Market Guide exclusively—between the covers of one book.

Suppose an Agency or a National Advertiser did not know about Editor & Publisher's Market Guide, or a copy of the book were not available?

To get the information which it alone contains—information that is supremely essential in determining upon trading areas to be reached, copy to be used and media to be employed—there are but two other courses to be pursued.

One is to buy any number of books, costing $8, $15, $25 or $100 each; none of them complete in itself; all of them filled with a vast amount of unrelated and irrelevant facts, from which the essential data must be laboriously dug.

The other is to send out several thousand questionnaires, replies from any considerable portion of which can be secured only after repeated follow-ups.

In either event, the material obtained will be undigested, un-edited, unverified, unreliable—biassed, probably, in many cases.

Think of the time and money involved.

But in Editor & Publisher's Incomparable Market Guide

all this material is already gathered, first hand, for the Advertising Agency and the National Advertiser; it is presented in just the right form; verified by checking and re-checking; edited by experts; confined exclusively to the facts needed in visualizing the exact trading conditions in each market under survey—facts which make easy decisions on both copy and media. IT IS READY TO BE USED.

The 1926 edition of the Market Guide will be published early in November, as part of the service of EDITOR & PUBLISHER to the advertising agency, the national advertiser and the daily newspaper publisher—a service which goes hand in hand with all the other big things EDITOR & PUBLISHER is continually doing for all three of these classes of its readers, whose larger interests are so closely intertwined and interdependent.

Note that the Market Guide is as much of a service to the daily newspaper publisher as it is to the advertising agency and the national advertiser.

For it presents an unrivalled opportunity to the publisher of the daily newspaper to get across the story of his paper to the men who buy space and influence the choice of media AT THE VERY MOMENT they are studying the potential buying power of the readers of his paper. That the Market Guide is an active, energetic, consistent builder of national linage in the local newspaper is indicated by the fact that so many of the daily newspapers, not only have display advertisements year after year in the Market Guide, but increase their space. That tells the story, does it not? Want to know more about it? No obligations. But be quick—as the forms close early in October.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

A. B. C.
Charter Member

SUITE 1700 Times Building, New York

A. B. P.
Member

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

New York World Claims Largest Telephone Switchboard Equipment—Brooklyn Eagle Makes Bid for Second Place—Introducing Small Towners to a Classified Page

WHAT Frank MacCabe, classified manager, claims is the largest newspaper telephone switchboard equipment in the world, has been installed by the New York World, and went into operation this week.

In a room on the fourth floor of the Pulitzer Building, measuring 50 by 26 feet, 40 telephone "positions" constitute the visible portion of this huge installation. It is the invisible elements of it that make it notable among telephone rooms.

Both walls and floors, by means of cork insulation, have been so deadened that an ordinary conversation cannot be heard beyond a few inches of the speakers.

The installation consists of forty "positions," each attended by a skilled ad-taker. Each operator sits in front of a miniature switchboard of her own, termed a "monitor," each one of which contains 202 separate apparatus units, 80 tiny lights to indicate incoming calls, 240 individual wires, totaling length of half a mile, and 833 separate soldered connections.

In each of the four corners of the room is a larger, or supervisor's monitor. These four supervisors can instantly pick up any conversation from any other monitor in the room, and all calls requiring any discussion whatever beyond the actual taking down of the advertisement itself is immediately picked up by a supervisor and handled without interrupting the routine work of the ad-taker.

In turn, all 40 monitors are interlocked, so that an incoming call is registered at 40 positions. The instant it is picked up by any one operator the light goes out on the other 39 boards. Thus has "busy wire" been reduced to a minimum.

Designed by the engineering department of the New York Telephone Company and built by the Western Electric Company, it required five months to complete the manufacture and installation of the system, which is primarily served by 43 trunk lines connecting with local and long-distance lines. Large as it is, the new installation is regarded as only an initial unit, and it has been so planned that both the floor area devoted to it and its wire capacity may be doubled as the demand for increased service arises.

Last year the World received 848,166 insertions of classified advertisements, of which 577,259 were received over the telephone or nearly 2,000 every working day of the year, Mr. MacCabe said.

During the first eight months of this year the World has printed 1,273,796 classified advertisements, of which 629,398 have come over the telephone wires.

A close second place for classified telephone installations is claimed by the Brooklyn Eagle, of which Chester Nolan is classified manager.

The chief distinction of the Eagle's installation is that it has direct trunk line connection. It has 20 positions, which are not divided by partitions, Mr. Nolan reasoning that the walls simply caused discomfort to the operators.

The Eagle's new system went into operation this week.

Introducing small towners to the classified page has been well accomplished by Frank M. Keffer, owner of the Van Nuys (Cal.) News, a semi-weekly, which ran a total of 3,599 inches of classified advertising during the first three months of this year.

"When I determined to put over a classified page, I took the back page of the News, got a good head for it, and went out and canvassed nearly everyone I met on the street," stated Keffer. "Many conversations brought to light this or that article that a resident had for sale, or wanted to purchase. I stuck the advertisements in, in some instances without the advertiser's knowledge."

The first week the paper had a half column of classified ads. Most weekly publishers would have presumed that the saturation point had been reached, but not Keffer. He realized that the classified page would only be effective if it were made big enough to be a regularly read part of the News; that every additional advertisement would give cumulative pulling power to every other advertisement.

Almost from the first issue the advertisements sold themselves to the people. Most of them, being farmers, were not in the habit of making their wants known through the medium of the printed word; they needed an introduction to the classified page; but once they realized its power, they kept on speaking terms with it. It provided the farmers with a medium of barter.

Mr. Keffer says: "The smallest weekly can make the classified advertising section a regular feature, but he must show what it will do. He must make a demonstration, even if he derives no revenue from the page for six months. It will prove the greatest feature he can run in his paper."

The Spokane Chronicle recently sold a member of its local chamber of commerce's membership team space on its classified page to save him shoe leather in making rounds. This was the ad:

"WANTED—At least 1 live person to join the Spokane Chamber of Commerce by next Tuesday. Apply in person, 722 Peyton Bldg., or call Main 1448."

The member obtained his quota easily.

The Seattle (Wash.) Post-Intelligencer changed its classified charges from a line basis to a word rate, Sept. 1.

The Boston (Mass.) Herald-Traveler has opened a new classified ad office at 264 Washington street.

James A. Doherty, classified advertising manager of the Providence (R. I.) Journal, is spending his vacation in Montreal.

W. J. Oldham, formerly of the San Francisco Call's classified department, now is classified manager for the San Francisco Chronicle.

Clyde Reid, classified salesman, San Francisco Examiner, has been transferred to their local display department.

Few want ads ever brought better results than one run in the Mitchell (S. D.) Republican by Chris Steiber recently. He spent 25 cents and advertised for five inches of rain. And then it rained for 17 hours and the radio announcer said it was worth a million dollars an hour to the state. Seventeen million dollars! No so bad for 25 cents, what?

URGED TO PAY BILLS

Local business and professional men sponsored a full page advertisement published in the Duluth Herald, Sept. 6, urging prompt payment of bills. The copy carried the slogan: "Pay August Bills Now—They Become Delinquent After the 10th." The copy showed the bad social and business effects of a poor credit standing.

ADDS AUTO SECTION

The Spokane Chronicle has inaugurated a weekly automobile section, published as the second section of Thursday evening's paper.

18 INTERTYPES

are being used by

No Standardized Intertype has ever become obsolete

Prize Contest to Advertise Newspaper Advertising

¶ To develop the best and newest thought concerning the value of newspaper advertising to national advertisers, the Bureau of Advertising, American Newspaper Publishers Association, is conducting a prize contest.

¶ The Bureau invites all persons who think they can write good advertisements setting forth the advantages of national newspaper advertising to take part in the competition.

The prizes offered for the three best advertisements submitted are:

First prize	$300
Second prize	$150
Third Prize	$50

¶ In addition to these, the Bureau reserves the privilege of buying at $5.00 each, forty or more advertisements that do not win any of the leading prizes.

¶ All advertisements submitted must deal with the value of newspaper advertising to the national advertiser. No advertisement is to exceed 200 words in length.

The Contest Opens September 20 and closes November 30

A circular giving full details can be obtained by addressing

PRIZE CONTEST
BUREAU OF ADVERTISING
American Newspaper
Publishers Association
270 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

NEW YORK STATE

The Financial and Commercial Fabric of the Nation

Just as Paris dominates France; London the British Empire—so does New York State dominate the United States.

A State possessing the greatest wealth—commercial enterprises of international magnitude and reputation—industries employing millions of wage earners—great farming areas whose annual farm crops in value vie with the leading agricultural states in the Union.

Where can you find a greater buying power? The Empire State is your major market. You can't afford to stay away from it. These papers listed below can tell you why—

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
Albany Evening News (E)	34,444	.10	.10
Albany Knickerbocker Press (M)	34,018	.11	.11
Albany Knickerbocker Press (S)	56,924	.16	.16
Amsterdam Recorder-Democrat (E)	7,810	.04	.04
††Auburn Citizen (E)	6,389	.065	.055
Brooklyn Daily Eagle (E)	73,764	.22	.22
Brooklyn Daily Eagle (S)	84,997	.22	.22
Buffalo Courier-Express (M)	116,000	.22	.22
Buffalo Courier-Express (S)	155,000	.30	.30
Buffalo Evening News (E)	138,294	.25	.25
Buffalo Evening Times (E)	115,000	.21	.21
Buffalo Sunday Times (S)	135,000	.21	.21
††Corning Evening Leader (E)	9,339	.05	.05
Elmira Star-Gazette Advertiser (E&M)	33,487	.11	.11
Freeport Daily Review (E)	7,991	.05	.05
††Geneva Daily Times (E)	5,040	.04	.04
Gloversville Leader Republican (E)	7,238	.035	.035
††Ithaca Journal-News (E)	7,751	.05	.05
Jamestown Morning Post (M)	11,722	.04	.035
Middletown Times-Press (E)	7,127	.04	.04

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
Mount Vernon Daily Argus (E)	10,437	.05	.05
Newburgh Daily News (E)	12,132	.06	.06
New Rochelle Standard-Star (E)	8,598	.04	.04
The Sun, New York (E)	257,067	.60	.56
New York Times (M)	356,471	.80	.784
New York Times (S)	610,041	1.00	.98
††New York Herald-Tribune (S)	345,484	.693	.672
††New York World (M)	287,632	.595	.58
††New York World (S)	532,929	.595	.58
††New York Evening World (E)	294,442	.595	.58
Niagara Falls Gazette (E)	20,629	.07	.07
Port Chester Item (E)	4,732	.03	.03
Poughkeepsie Star and Enterprise (E)	12,824	.06	.06
††Rochester Times-Union (E)	70,406	.21	.20
††Syracuse Journal (E)	65,326	.16	.16
Troy Record (M&E)	22,679	.06	.06
Watertown Standard (E)	17,617	.07	.07
Watertown Times (E)	17,334	.08	.08

 A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1926.
†† Government Statement, March 31, 1926.
 Merged as Buffalo Courier-Express, June 14, 1926.

DE MAR, PHILADELPHIA CARTOONIST, DIES

Drew Daily Cartoon for Record for 23 Years—Succumbed Following Operation—Outlined Career in Radio Talk

John L. De Mar, 61, for many years cartoonist of the Philadelphia Record, died last Sunday at his home in Penfield, Pa. Burial was in Philadelphia Thursday.

J. L. De Mar

By a peculiar twist of fate, Mr. De Mar, who was one of the foremost American cartoonists, wrote his own obituary. In a talk over the radio a short time before he was taken ill, he told the story of his life which, in many ways, was an exceptional one. Incidentally, at the time of his radio address he gave some interesting sidelights into the business of "cartooning." Mr. De Mar said, in part, in his last public talk:

"What talent I possess in drawing was, I suppose, inherited. My father was an architect and builder. My first essay at art was when, at the age of 6, my school teacher offered a prize for the best drawing by any of her pupils. My attempt won the prize—a Barlow knife.

"I spent my youth in Kansas, where, as a farmer, I drew pictures on barns. Later, as a railroader, I knocked off sketches on freight cars. As a drug clerk, I decorated prescriptions. While I was a hotel clerk I drew a picture on the hotel register. It represented a man riding a mule, and holding just out of the animal's reach an ear of corn tied to a sunflower stalk—an inducement for the mule to travel.

"A wealthy Texan saw this masterpiece, and said that when he returned to Texas he would have it printed in a newspaper.

"At last the picture was printed with my name upon it. Since that time I have seen my first cartoon—varied a little in detail, perhaps, but essentially the same a hundred times signed by other artists. It's worn threadbare now.

"At 21 I came back to Philadelphia, longing to find an occupation in which I could make use of my knack for drawing. I was handicapped by the lack of an art school education, but the manager of the twentieth place I visited engaged me to draw maps for three dollars a week. Later I graduated to the art department of the Philadelphia Record, where I have been ever since, drawing a daily cartoon since.

In the last 30 or 40 years the cartoon has undergone a remarkable change. It is no longer a bitter, savage attack on your adversary—it must be not brutal, but ingenious and humorous.

"The old-time cartoonist picked up an ugly weapon and viciously struck at his victim. I don't believe in that method. I prefer to throw my missile around the barn and still hit the fellow I am aiming at; and his anger is swallowed up in his admiration of the trick."

In its issue of last Monday, at the time announcement was made of Mr. De Mar's death, the Philadelphia Record paid glowing tribute to the cartoonist.

Mr. De Mar was born in Philadelphia September 22, 1865. He went to the Philadelphia Record in 1892 as a member of its art department. In 1903 he became its regular cartoonist. His art work was unique and attracted favorable comment in all parts of the country. His art was noted for its faculty of "hitting the mark," but never was it in bad humor. His last cartoon appeared August 28, a few days before he was taken to Hahnemann Hospital for an operation. A widow and a young son survive him.

WALTER PULITZER

Nephew of New York World Founder Dies in Buffalo

Walter Pulitzer, of 121 West Thirty-ninth street, New York, author and former publisher of several magazines, died in Buffalo last Saturday. He was forty-eight years old.

Mr. Pulitzer was a well known figure in literary circles ten or fifteen years ago. He organized the Pulitzer Publishing Company in 1911, which had no connection with the New York World and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. He had previously promoted the American Chess Magazine, and had been editor of the American Tidbits, The Pulitzer Publishing Company published Satire, and later Mr. Pulitzer brought out Pulitzer's Magazine, The Welcome Guest and Pulitzer's Review. In 1917 he founded a weekly syndicate service called "Pulitzer's Pertinent Paragraphs."

Mr. Pulitzer was the son of Albert Pulitzer who published the New York Journal before it was purchased by William Randolph Hearst, and the nephew of Joseph Pulitzer, founder of the World. Ralph and Joseph Pulitzer, sons of Joseph Pulitzer, who now publish the World and the Post-Dispatch, were his cousins.

HENRY J. HATFIELD

Managing Editor of New York Morning Telegraph Died Sept. 7

Henry J. Hatfield, managing editor of the New York Morning Telegraph, died Sept. 7, following a year's illness.

Mr. Hatfield was born in Boston 46 years ago. While a high school student he joined the staff of the old Boston Traveler and remained with that paper until the Boston American was started. He attended Boston University while doing reportorial work on the American. He resigned to attend Dartmouth College, where he won a scholarship.

Twenty years ago he came to New York and was employed by the New York City News Association. Subsequently he worked on the New York Times, the Daily News and the New York American.

For several years Mr. Hatfield was in the United States Secret Service under Chief William J. Flynn.

FRANK L. McGRATH

Advertising Manager of Buffalo Times Dies of Heart Attack

Frank L. McGrath, advertising manager of the Buffalo Evening and Sunday Times for the past 15 years, died suddenly of heart disease on Sept. 3 at his summer home at Prospect Beach, Ont. Mr. McGrath, who apparently had been in excellent health, was stricken and died before medical aid could be had.

He was born at Cleveland in 1869. He obtained employment as a boy with the Buffalo Commercial, joining the circulation department of the Times in 1886 and remaining with that newspaper for 40 years, in various capacities. He was a member of the Greater Buffalo Advertising Club, the Knights of Columbus and other organizations. He is survived by his widow, two sons and two daughters.

CHARLES W. ARMOR

Charles W. Armor, 58, newspaperman of Pittsburgh, died at his home there Sept. 1. At the time of his death he was a member of the editorial staff of the Gazette-Times. Mr. Armor joined the staff of the old Pittsburgh Times in 1897 and when the Times and Gazette were merged in 1906, Armor went with the Gazette-Times. Since then he served successively as reporter, city editor, Sunday editor and at the time of his death he was literary editor. Mr. Armor was the first writer on golf in Western Pennsylvania. He was a director of the Pittsburgh Press Club. His widow and five children survive.

Obituary

Jacob L. Isenberg, 77, who took part in the stampede into the Cherokee Strip in Oklahoma, and established the first daily newspaper in that territory at Enid, Okla., died recently at his home in Los Angeles, where he had resided for 15 years.

Frank Buell Moore, 62, for more than a score of years connected with the circulation department of the Peoria (Ill.) Star, died Aug. 29 in his home after a lingering illness. The widow, a daughter, a son, and two brothers survive.

Patrick Sarsfield Egan, 60, sporting editor of the old Pittsburgh Times, died suddenly Sept. 3. One daughter and one son, Pierce Egan, financial editor of the Gazette Times, survive.

Wesley A. Garrad, 87, father of P. C. Garrad, automobile editor of the Columbus (O.) Dispatch, died at his home in Marsville, O., a few days ago.

Mrs. Kate Richville, 54, for 15 years society editor of Seattle papers, died at the home of her daughter, Aug. 28 after a long illness.

Frank Fockele, 82, veteran Kansas newspaperman, who was connected with the Le Roy (Kan.) Reporter since 1880, died at his home Aug. 31. He had been ill since May. Mr. Fockele was born in Westphalia, Germany, in 1843 and came to the United States in 1864, coming soon to Kansas where he worked on newspapers. In 1880 he formed a partnership with B. Frank Smythe who had bought the Le Roy Reporter and later bought out his partner. His son, Flock Fockele, is now editor of the paper.

Samuel Wilbur Chaddock, 57, for many years an editorial writer on the Detroit News, died at his home in Ottawa, Kan., recently, following a stroke of paralysis.

Mrs. E. S. Wenis, wife of the city editor of the Chillicothe (O.) Scioto Gazette, died at her home in that city this week.

Charles Alexander Burnham, formerly on the staff of the Boston (Mass.) Transcript for 45 years, died at Pasadena, Cal., last week where he had gone because of failing health.

Miss Kathryn Hayden, for 11 years linotype operator on the Butler (Mo.) Democrat, died at Warrensburg, Mo., while on a visit to her parents.

Maurice J. Gonder, former advertising manager of the Niagara Falls (Ont.) Review, was drowned while swimming at Port Dalhousie, Ont. He had retired from active management of the newspaper advertising department several years ago.

John C. Christopher, a captain in the A. E. F., former editor of the Red Oak (Ia.) Express, died Aug. 29 in a government hospital at Denver, Col., as the result of tuberculosis, contracted in overseas service. He left Red Oak five years ago when his health failed. His wife survives.

Helen E. Dively, 26, reporter on the Baxter Springs (Kan.) Daily Citizen for several years, died at the home of her parents in Baxter Springs, recently.

Mrs. M. F. Blair, mother of Mrs Frank Hussey of the Chicago Evening Post, died last week in Chicago. She is survived by a son, T. E. Blair, and Mrs Hussey.

SHERMAN LEFT ESTATE TO WIFE

Stuart Pratt Sherman, literary editor of the New York Herald Tribune, who died Aug. 25, left the bulk of his estate estimated at "more than $10,000" to his wife, Mrs. Ruth Mears Sherman.

MEXICAN UNION ELECTS

Novaro Named Secretary-General of Syndicate of Editors

Luis Novaro was elected secretary general of the Syndicate of Editors and Employes of the Press of the Federal District, Mexico, at the recent annual election held in Mexico City.

He is a member of the staff of El Universal Grafico. Other members of the central committee were Santiago R. de la Vega, of El Universal, secretary of the exterior; Everardo Flores, of Excelsior, secretary of the interior; Emilio J. de Parraga, of Excelsior, recording secretary, and Manuel de Riquer, of El Universal, secretary-treasurer.

The newspaper staffs are well unionized in Mexico at the present time and the national body, the Federation of Graphic Arts, including all employes from news boys to managing editors, is one of the strongest and influential in the Republic. The Secretary-General is the means of communication between the Central Committee and the members of the Union, the presiding officer being selected at each meeting.

The papers which are now being published daily in the Mexican capital are Excelsior and El Universal, in the morning; El Imparcial and Dia Español at noon, and El Universal Grafico and El Sol in the afternoon. An English weekly, The Mexico News, has been published regularly since the first of the year.

JAPAN TO CUT CABLE RATES

Dispatches from Tokio Sept. 6 indicated that the Japanese department of communications would agree to a 20-cent per word rate for cables between America and Japan, provided all cable and wireless companies accept. The American Radio Corporation has offered a 10 cent word rate between the two countries.

Editor & Publisher classified ads sell the odds and ends.

When a service reaches the point where it is serving over three hundred newspapers with absolute satisfaction by giving them, their advertisers and agencies, the greatest possible cooperation with their checking requirements, it logically follows that such a service should have some definite appeal as a solution to other publishers' checking proof problems. The proof of such appeal could easily be demonstrated by the two months' trial test that we offer all newspaper publishers.

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.

538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO

79 Madison Ave. NEW YORK

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

Right Wing Company Started in New York to Handle Amateur Sports—McNaught's Takes Over "The Fun Shop" Puzzle Page Being Offered by King

HERBERT REED ("Right Wing"), recently sports writer for Universal ervice, now on the staff of the New Yorker, has ¶ arted the Right Wing Company, 0 Madison ve., New York, handle amateur port features. W. P. Sarver, for te past nine ars with Asso- ated News- pers, is general nager, retain- ig his present sition. The st product of te new company a polo feature. daily column and football coverage e promised.

W. P. Sarver

Both Reed and Sarver are veteran New rk newspapermen. Reed began his reer with the old New York Evening n and was for many years with the w York Evening Post, where he be- me widely known under his pen name "Right Wing." Sarver was at one tne sports editor of the New York n and was also make-up editor of the New York Mail.

McNaught Syndicate, Inc., this week ned a contract with Maxson Foxhall dell to handle his feature "The Fun op," following expiration of Judell's ntract with the George Matthews lams Service, Oct. 2.

Herbert Corey has written "A Life Gene Tunney" for Associated News- pers, Inc., New York.

A puzzle page, edited by Leo Rae Ax- l, is now being offered by King Features ndicate, Inc., New York.

The New York World Syndicate and New York World News Service plan move to new and larger quarters in Pulitzer Building, Sept. 15. Floor ce has been doubled, and according to B. Knapp, syndicate manager, mechani- facilities have been increased.

. B. Wallach has been appointed gen- l manager of the Harland H. Allan iture Service, New York. Mr. Wal- h has been with this service as assistant tor for more than a year. He was duated from Harvard with the class 1925.

A new fashion service signed by "Daré" been taken over by Associated News- ers, Inc., New York.

"Around the Radio Dial," new daily ture, has been added to the list of dio Service, Chicago.

Barry Payne, creator of "Otto Watt" the "Jimtown Weekly" for Associated tors, Chicago, will be married Sept. to Miss Marian Walker in Riverside, l

Second serial rights to "Summer helors" by Warner Fabian have been ained by King Features Syndicate, ., New York.

Eastern interests of the Eugene Mc- n Syndicate, San Francisco, have been en over by the McClure Newspaper dicate, Inc., New York.

"The Secret Studio" by Hazel Living- n is the latest serial offering announced Knig Features Syndicate, Inc., New k.

Walter Scott and Harlowe R. Hoyt creators of a new strip called "Dramatic Events of Bible History," to be distributed by Publishers' Syndicate, Chicago.

Betty Brainard, feature writer for Associated Newspapers, Inc., New York, has gone to Seattle, Wash., her home city, on a visit.

Publishers' Syndicate, Chicago, is now handling the editorial paragraphs of Robert Quillen.

Frank King, Chicago Tribune cartoonist, creator of the "Gasoline Alley" strip, has published a new sketch book for children, entitled "Skeezix at the Circus."

McClure Newspaper Syndicate put out Rudolph Valentino's book of 50 poems and the story of why he considered himself a failure at love.

Joe Archibald, creator of "Why Boys Leave Home" and a three-column daily sports cartoon has joined the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

TEXAS CIRCULATORS MEETING SEPT. 13

Methods of Increasing Sunday Sales to Be Considered at 13th Annual Convention in Fort Worth—Many Speakers

Methods for increasing Sunday sales will be treated by three speakers addressing the 13th annual convention of the Texas Circulation Managers' Association to be held in Fort Worth, Sept. 13. L. J. Hagood, Houston Post-Dispatch, is association president, and H. E. Murphree, Houston Chronicle, secretary-treasurer.

Harold Hough, of the Fort Worth Star Telegram and Record Telegram, will talk on the effect of a rotogravure section on Sunday sales; W. D. Wolf, Waco News Tribune, on establishing Sunday auto routes; and William Armor, San Antonio Express and News, on promoting Sunday circulation through dealers and independent carriers.

Other speakers will include C. C. Moore, Austin American and Statesman, "University Students as Carriers"; Walter Golden, Galveston Tribune, "Office Controlled City Carriers"; A. Cohen, El Paso Times and Herald, "Maintaining Circulation Without Rate Reduction"; W. P. Allen, Laredo Times, "Promoting Circulation in Mexico"; Herbert Peters, Corpus Christi Times, "Country Agents' Collections"; and R. P. McIntyre, Corsicana Sun, "How to Handle Oil Field Circulation."

J. R. Yerka, Fort Worth Star Telegram, "Selling Baseball Editions in Residential Sections"; A. B. Harris, Dallas Times Herald, "Sample Copies"; E. C. White, Houston Post-Dispatch, "Direct Mail Promotion"; R. R. Russell, Wichita Falls Times, "Handling R.F.D. Circulation"; A. T. Lawson, Dallas Dispatch, "Street Sales Promotion"; H. Nogle, Dallas Journal, "Cost of Obtaining Evening Paper Subscribers"; E. C. Davis, Beaumont Enterprise and Journal, "Sub-Stations—Are They Beneficial"; W. Dyer, Houston Press, "Promoting City Circulation"; and Jack Estes, Dallas News, "Methods of Increasing Country Agents' Circulations."

DAILY MOVES SERVICE OFFICE

Within a few days the public service office of the Chicago Tribune will move from its present location at 11 South Dearborn street to the corner of Madison and Dearborn streets, the Tribune building, where its business office in the loop is located. The capacity for service will be greatly enlarged.

Famous Features Syndicate, Inc.

OFFERS

Smashing Fiction Hit!

Romance! Adventure! Perils! Escapes! Temptations! Triumphs!

"JOY"

By BARBARA WEBB

The thrilling love story of a real, live American Girl. 60 Instalments—Synopses all written—Specially posed photographs

AND PROMOTION WORK ALL DONE

Wire for Promotion Book and Territory

"My Story"

By CHARLOTTE MILLS

Daughter of Slain Woman in Hall-Mills Murder Mystery

THIS STORY SOLD IN FOLLOWING CITIES

New York	Providence
Albany	Buffalo
Baltimore	Philadelphia
Rochester	Pittsburgh
Cleveland	New Britain
Camden	Newark
Boston	Dubuque
Washington	Windsor, Canada
Syracuse	Chicago
Milwaukee	Scranton
Greenville	New Haven

18 instalments

Wire for Territory

"MY HONEYMOON DIARY"

By "PEACHES" BROWNING

While not claiming any great literary merit for this story we do claim and can prove from past performance that the story pulls and holds circulation.

18 instalments
1000 words each
Intimate photographs

Territory Going Fast

Wire Now

Famous Features Syndicate, Inc.

1819 BROADWAY NEW YORK, N. Y.

WITH THE GENERAL ADVERTISERS

United States Fisheries Association Planning National Drive—Coldak Using Large Newspaper Space—Chandler-Cleveland Appoints Sid Black

THE United States Fisheries Associations will discuss plans for a national advertising campaign at the annual convention to be held at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Philadelphia, Sept. 15-18, E. H. Cooley, association manager, announced this week.

An investment of about $155,000 annually for the next three years will probably be made, he said. About $90,000 has already been pledged toward the first year's campaign.

"This campaign," Mr. Cooley said, "is the first ever attempted by the fishing industry as a whole. Local campaigns have been in progress in various cities and private concerns have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in advertising their product. But never before has the entire industry—representing fresh fish of all kinds—subscribed collectively to a fund for this purpose."

The Coldak Corporation, makers of electrical refrigerators, is planning a large space newspaper advertising campaign in eastern and middle western cities in which it has distribution, John W. Welles, advertising manager, informed EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week. The drive is scheduled to run the balance of this year. Supporting the newspaper list is a trade paper campaign in three large papers of the electrical field and in five architectural magazines.

Sid Black, vice-president of the Cleveland-Chandler Motor Corporation, Cleveland, O., has been placed in full charge of sales, service and advertising. H. W. Fortey is in charge of sales promotion; R. A. Lammers heads the advertising department, and J. T. Nicholson is service manager.

George W. Hopkins, formerly vice-president in charge of sales of the Coral Gables Corporation, is head of the new Coral Gables Sales Corporation which will have the exclusive sale of properties of the Coral Gables Securities Corporation, and the Coral Gables Resale Corporation.

Miami, Fla., has appropriated more than $500,000 for an advertising campaign. Details have not yet been worked out, but it is understood a large part of the sum will be used in newspapers.

Copeland Electric Refrigerator is advertising consistently in newspapers in some 92 cities, with an expenditure of approximately $15,000 a month.

Apple men of the Pacific Northwest are forming a corporation to advertise and merchandise boxed apples.

David Lampe has joined the executive staff of Lansburgh & Brother, Washington, D. C. He was formerly associated with the Hub, Baltimore, Md., department store, as advertising manager.

George B. Whitson has resigned as advertising manager of Rice-Stix Dry Goods Company, St. Louis, to become advertising manager of Elmer Richards Company, Chicago, effective Sept. 20.

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

Three Newspapermen Join Staff of Roche Advertising Agency, Chicago —New Firm in Dayton, O.—Ford Becomes Vice-President of Richmond Company

THE Roche Advertising Agency, Straus Building, Chicago, has recently added three former newspaper men to the staff. They include Morgan W. Gibney who has worked on Chicago and Detroit newspapers, Rockwell Stephens, formerly of the Chicago Daily News, and Morrow Krum, who has been on the staff of the Chicago Tribune for the past ten years.

J. P. Roche is president of the Agency and M. F. Williamson, vice president. Among the accounts they are handling are the Studebaker Automobile Company of South Bend, Ind.; Chicago Tribune; Chero-Cola of Columbus, O., and Kling Bros. of Chicago.

A new general advertising agency has been formed in Dayton, O., under the name of the Advertising Laboratories, Inc. Incorporators are H. M. Tucker, Clara Tucker, D. S. Randolph, J. J. Quigley and W. E. Grenell.

Clarence Ford, Jr., for the last six years financial advertising solicitor for the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, has resigned to become vice-president of the Freeman Advertising Agency, Inc., of Richmond. He will take charge of the department of this agency which specializes in local advertising.

Since its re-organization in June, 1925, the Freeman Advertising Agency has been headed by Raymond Hall, and associated with him are J. Errett Hall and E. Earle Hickerson, the latter in charge of the Tampa, Fla., branch.

A. H. Syverson, head of the Syverson-Kelly Advertising agency, Spokane, Wash., was named recently a member of the international committee on publicity of the Kiwanis clubs.

Arthur S. Roberts, who for four years was senior manager in the advertising department of Lever Brothers, Ltd., London, England, has joined the Joseph Katz Company, advertising agency, Baltimore, Md.

Announcement is made by K. L. Hamman of the affiliation of Crossley & Failing, Inc., of Portland, Oregon, with the Johnston-Ayres Company, L. S. Gillham Company and K. L. Hamman-Advertising, Inc. Crossley & Failing, Inc., will continue to operate under the same name as do the agencies in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City and Oakland.

Sam Lebensburger, of the Lebensburger Advertising Counselors, Dayton, O., has been made president of the Dayton Junior Chamber of Commerce.

The Caples Company has moved its offices to the First National Bank Building, Tampa, Fla. Marvin S. Knight is manager.

G. B. Cabanis has joined the staff of Albert Frank & Co., New York.

Greater Merchandising Service offered, than any other Milwaukee paper.

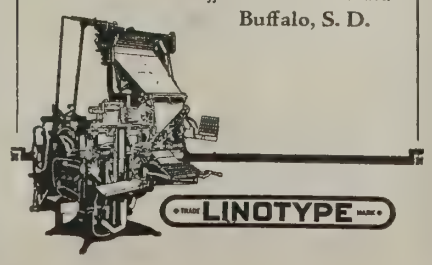
THE MILWAUKEE LEADER

"Unawed by influence and Unbribed by Gain"

Advertising Representatives

FRALICK & BATES

Chicago, New York, Atlanta, Los Angeles



From the Linotype Mailbag

"50 miles from a railroad"

"I wish to thank you for the quick service rendered in supplying a part to my Linotype.

"Buffalo is 50 miles from a railroad, and when the second elevator cam lever broke Tuesday, July 6, a telegram was dispatched from Bowman, N. D. (nearest railway point), at noon on that day, and the part was received in Buffalo before noon on Thursday, July 8. I call this real service."

Buffalo Times-Herald
Buffalo, S. D.

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

6½ pt. Ionic No. 5

COMBINES

The word count of 6 point and the legibility of 8 point

The British delegation of trade-union representatives, who came here on Tuesday at the invitation of "The London Daily Mail" to study reasons for the disparity between the high wages and prosperous living conditions of the American worker and their own lower wage standards, gained considerable light in a tour of several industrial establishments in Brooklyn yesterday.

They had been curious to know how it was that the average wage of the American toiler virtually doubled that of his British brother, and how it was possible for industries here to offer such fat envelopes to their employees and at the same time compete successfully in world markets.

American More Productive

After a study of the Brooklyn Edison plant and the factory methods of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company in Brooklyn, the delegates remarked that one of the vital reasons for the disparity was that the American worker was capable of producing and actually did produce more than the British toiler in a given time.

This he was enabled to do, they learned, because of the high standards of efficiency obtaining here, mass-production methods, the utter perfection of organization for which the American industrialist seems always to be striving, and labor-saving devices evident on every hand.

The comments of the delegates were voiced by Sir Percival Phillips, special correspondent of "The Daily Mail"; Fenton MacPherson, of the same newspaper, and William Mosses, J. P., who had a prominent part in the British Labor Ministry during the war.

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY

Brooklyn, New York

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS

CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

WOMEN IN ADVERTISING AND JOURNALISM

Elsie McCormick Aims Only to "Cheer Exhausted Business Men"—Miss Stewart Jumps from Secretary to Society Desk—Bonus Awarded Ishbel Ross

AFTER a brilliant newspaper career, Elsie McCormick, feature writer of ıe New York World, has now decided ıat her only aim is "to cheer the exausted business man."

Elsie McCormick

"I'd rather write a feature or a short tory with a few laughs in it than to be eft alone for an hour in the mint," she aid this week.

"Although it had no background of old lace or Oriental color, one of my nost interesting assignments was a reent series for the World called 'Twelve Hours With People You Read About.' For three months I camped among Goiaths of Wall Street, finding out from hem how they liked their oatmeal, what ind of razors they used, and the truth bout their daily dozens. It was necssary during the assignment to murder few private secretaries, but their loss vas everybody else's gain.

"My first downward step was taken at he age of eleven, when the city editor of the San Francisco Daily News gave ne a column he didn't particularly want nd told me to fill it each week with tems from the local schools. Until then here was some hope of salvation. But ifter I had seen my jottings printed, and n the presence of my open-mouthed chool mates had measured the nine nches that I had retailed for 35 cents an nch, nothing short of carbolic acid could have kept me out of the newspaper busiiess.

"Through the years that I attended Oakland High School and the University of California, I kept a thin stream of copy trickling through the San Francisco and East Bay newspapers. Then, after graduated, somebody carelessly left open the front door of the Oakland Post. came in and took a desk.

"Since then I've roved and roamed all over the meridians of longitude. I've parked my powder-puff and galoshes in the headquarters of the Interchurch World Movement, the China Press of Shanghai and the Sunday Department of the New York World. I've been in 27 foreign countries and on five continents, covering everything from a victory procession in Rome to a devil dance in the Lama Temple at Peking.

"One of the nosegays in my garden of good times is the day that I crashed the gate into the Fourth Plenary Session of the Peace Conference. I passed the outer guards on my vaccination certificate, and then entered the inner chamber by the simple process of ducking under the major domo's arm when he opened the door to let someone out.

"Also pressed with lavender is my memory of the day on which I interviewed the Confucian Duke, descendant in the seventy-seventh generation of China's greatest sage. I travelled through Shantung in a trainful of unfumigated Chinese soldiers and then changed to a prematurely born laundry-wagon that was cozily tired with studded iron rims.

"All the way on this gruelling trip, I was planning out questions sufficiently grave and philosophical to fit in with the dignity of so exalted a person. But the questions, it happened, were never asked. The Confucian Duke turned out to be two years old."

Miss McCormick in private life is Mrs. Marshall L. Dunn.

"I am," she explained, "one of these modern women who sail under two flags."

Ishbel Ross, staff member of the New York Herald Tribune, whose work in reporting the Hall-Mills case in New Jersey was so highly commended by Col. Henry W. Sackett, libel law expert, has been awarded a substantial bonus by the Herald Tribune.

Miss Jean Stewart, for the last two years secretary to M. W. Dickey, managing editor of the Springfield (Mass.) Union, has been made social editor, succeeding Mrs. R. K. Winans, who has joined the staff of the Toledo (O.) News Bee.

Mrs. Zell Hart Deming, owner of the Warren (O.) Tribune-Chronicle, has returned to Warren from an extended European tour.

Miss Hazel Ross, formerly of the New York Evening Graphic, who has been ill for a year, has joined the staff of the Des Moines Register, writing Sunday features.

Miss Virginia Farrar and Miss Bertha Fedberg are new staff members of the Chicago Daily News. The former is doing women's sports, while the latter is on the reportorial staff.

Miss Gladys Estus has joined the staff of the Columbus (Kan.) Daily Advocate.

Miss Dorothy Faye, feature writer on the Chicago Evening Post has returned after a ten weeks' trip to Europe.

Miss Mary Doherty ("The Chaperon") of the Chicago Evening American has returned from an extended vacation spent on the New England coast.

NEW EDITOR OF "BOOKS"

Irita Van Doren Succeeds Stuart Sherman for N. Y. Herald Tribune

Irita Van Doren has been appointed to succeed Stuart Sherman in the editorship of "Books," weekly literary supplement of the New York Herald Tribune.

In announcing the appointment, Ogden Reid, editor, said:

"Our aim is to preserve the spirit which guided the original planning of the magazine.

"No one is better qualified to do this than Mrs. Van Doren, who worked with Mr. Sherman during the period of his editorship.

"Mrs. Van Doren will enlist the services of distinguished writers and experts in this country and abroad."

DAILY OPENS NEW PLANT

The new building of the Salamanca (N. Y.) Republican Press was formerly opened last week and was visited by hundreds of residents of that city. A special souvenir edition was issued on the day of the opening. The new plant represents an investment of $90,000.

Consolidation

Easton (Pa.) Community Becomes another one-paper region

The EASTON EXPRESS announces to its friends and space-buyers the purchase of the good will and property of the Easton Free Press, effective August 28.

This is another consolidation that will simplify and economize.

The EXPRESS is now the only daily newspaper in the prosperous industrial and college community of Easton and Phillipsburg, with an immediate trading population exceeding 65,000. Easton is the county seat of the fourth industrial county of Pennsylvania and the trading center for Northampton and Bucks Counties, Pa., as well as for Warren and Hunterdon Counties, New Jersey. There is a surrounding trading community of some 110,000 additional population, including such towns as Nazareth and Bangor, Pa., Washington, Hackettstown, Belvidere and other communities of Western New Jersey.

As Hugh Moore, President of the Dixie Drinking Cup Corporation and President of the Easton Board of Trade, remarked prior to the consolidation of the two papers: "Few papers in America published in cities of the size of Easton have such a strong regional circulation."

The additional circulation gained through this consolidation of the Free Press enables us to guarantee 33,000 net paid—the largest circulation in the Lehigh Valley.

EASTON EXPRESS

Easton, Pa.

Howland & Howland Representatives

New York Philadelphia Chicago

BUILDING NEWSPAPER CIRCULATION

Postal Official Suggests Ways of Improving Newspaper Mail Service—Greeting Newcomers to a Small Town—How San Franciscan Advises New Carrier Boys

SEVERAL suggestions for improving newspaper mail service were recently offered by A. M. Vincent, assistant superintendent of mails in the Buffalo, N. Y. post office. They follow:

"Circulation managers should endeavor to make up as many direct state and route sacks as possible. This will in most instances advance the dispatch and delivery of your papers.

"You should study the routing which papers should follow and keep in touch with the post office employe whose business it is to see that newspapers are correctly and promptly handled.

"Frequently your issue is ready too late to make certain important trains through the post office, and in such cases it is often practical to arrange with the post office to allow you to take your papers direct to the station and there have them weighed and placed on the proper train. This plan, of course, requires the making up of sacks to directs and routes. Several of our Buffalo papers avail themselves of this time-saving plan. Wherever railway mail service transfer clerks are located this method may be followed by arranging with the post office.

"Wrapping: Whenever envelopes are used it is necessary to show on the envelope the name of the publication together with the fact that the paper is entered as second class mail matter.

"Folding: Publications should be folded to a size not greater than 9 x 12 inches. The type used in addressing not smaller than long primer.

"Illegal Enclosures: It is not permissible to enclose circulars and handbills in second class matter.

"Supplements: Should bear the full name of the publication preceded by the words,—"Supplement to (name of publication). The date must correspond to the date of the publication itself. Maps, diagrams and illustrations are permissible inclosures when forming a necessary part of a publication. In all cases the added matter must be germane to the publication.

"Weight: The weight allowable to be placed in sacks is 125 pounds.

"Permissible writing: The name, figures, bills, receipts, date subscription expires are permissible inclosures and may be either printed or written.

"Coupons: Order forms for detachment and subsequent use when they constitute only an incidental feature may form a part of an advertisement.

"News Agents: Are persons including newsboys engaged as dealers or sellers, but must not restrict themselves to advancing the interests of any particular paper.

"Outside mail: Papers for outside delivery must be addressed in bold type on wrapper of mail packages as follows: 'U. S. mail for outside delivery at publishers' risk.'

"Lotteries: When employing schemes to stimulate circulation, wherein prizes are distributed, you should be careful that the element of chance does not enter into the plan. Such are lotteries and render your paper unmailable. In the case of ties, it is necessary that each person tied, must receive the equal of the prize, the same prize—it is not permissible to divide the prize equally among those tied. It is not permissible to prescribe that the first correct solution in, wins, as the element of chance enters into such plans. The following may usually be employed in your schemes without encountering the element of chance. Puzzles, limericks, best names for some products or merchandise, the best essay or story setting forth the reasons why the particular product is better or best. Bear in mind that when merit, skill, excellence or worth decide who is successful, then your plan is apt to be acceptable. When in doubt always consult the post office, they will help you with valuable suggestions. The post office is interested in the schemes appearing in papers going through the mails. Frequently lottery schemes appear in so-called street editions only and not in those papers prepared for mail subscribers.

"Box holders on rural routes: It is permissible to address mail,—Box Holder, Route No. 39, Buffalo, N. Y. and have same delivered to each box located on a given route. At present it is not permissible to prepare a package unaddressed papers, furnish the rural carrier with a list of your subscribers and have copies delivered to such subscribers only. However, the post office is liberalizing its service constantly and some day you may be able to so prepare your papers for rural delivery. The question has been asked, and all I can say is that to this time, no permission has been granted to dispatch papers as outlined."

A circulation building tip for small town newspapers is practiced by the Waxahachie (Tex.) Daily Light. Whenever a new family moves to town a Daily Light reporter interviews its members. The story he obtains is run under the standing box head "Our Newest Citizen" and tells briefly where the family came from, the names of the children, the business of the father, etc.

The Brooklyn Times, Edward S. Dobson, circulation manager, has initiated a circulation building contest to send the most popular policeman, fireman and mail carrier in Brooklyn as its guests to the Dempsey-Tunney fight in Philadelphia. Coupons are being printed in the paper each day and readers are being invited to name their favorites in the respective branches.

New carriers for the San Francisco Call are given the following advice by A. G. Williams, circulation manager:

"Always deliver your papers promptly. Collect your route on the first day of each month. Pay your Call bill always before the 10th of the month. Always come to all your meetings at the Call office. Your route list must be neat and correct. Return it the next day after getting it. Give perfect service every day. Give all subscribers your phone number. Make friends out of your customers. Keep your cap in your hand while talking to your subscribers. Try to keep your hands and face clean while on your route. Write and tell us how you like your route."

L. J. Hoffman, circulation manager, St. Louis Star, this week wrote to this department:

"Circulation managers throughout the United States are constantly discussing features that will induce the vacationist to read his newspaper away from home as well as at home.

"The Star tried this summer, a new style of approach to the reader instead of as in former years of suggesting that the subscriber take the Star with him or her on vacation to keep up with the world events. We have found from experience, the majority don't want to keep up with the trials and tribulations of the world but want to get off where they can throw off from their minds any worries that may be caused by some news story. So the Star suggested to them the funny side of life and all of the office vacation copy used by the St. Louis Star this year has been along that line. Special copy was prepared using the comic strip characters and suggesting to the readers their desire to accompany them on their trip and help to brighten any dull moments that might occur during the stay away from home. This has met with the popular approval of the readers and as a result our vacation mail list has increased many times over previous summer totals."

The Terre Haute Post is offering school children an opportunity to earn their school supplies, promising a pen and pencil outfit in a leather case free to boys and girls obtaining three new subscribers.

James J. Allerdice, circulation director of the Brooklyn Eagle, arranged an outing for the Eagle's 200 route boys held last week at Coney Island. Details were in charge of Thomas M. Cleary.

The Denver Post held a "Juvenile Frontier Day" Sept. 6. Every child 15 years old and under was admitted free by presenting coupons previously published in the Post.

The Denver Post jumped at the opportunity for service offered when the Western Union announced Sept. 1, it would no longer furnish the correct time to those telephoning for it.

This box was immediately published under the heading "Ask the Post, We Know Everything":

"Service, more service, and still more service is what we are here for. Our first ambition is to be 'the servant of all' the people.'

"The telephone company has stopped telling you the time when you call up; the city is unable to give you the time any longer, when you ask for it, owing to the crowded condition of the city's telephone lines, and the telegraph companies have also stopped telling you the time.

"But the Post, the old standby, bless goodness, is still willing to carry the load so if you want to know the time, day or night, ask the Post.

"We are here to serve the people, all of the people, all of the time."

As a reward to the 50 newsboys showing the greatest increase in their routes the Seattle Star took them as their guests on a trip to Victoria, B. C., Aug. 29. The boys left at 9 A. M., were served lunch eon and dinner aboard the boat and returned to Seattle late the same evening.

Make Your Title A Mark of Pride with

Hardened Steel Newspaper Heads

—they last forever

A. J. SOSSNER
361 West Broadway
New York

Leadership in New York

For the first eight months in 1926 The Sun published 10,273,562 lines of advertising, or a gain of more than 1,500,000 lines over the corresponding period in 1925.

The Sun published 924,086 lines more than the second New York evening newspaper published in the first eight months of 1926.

The Sun
280 Broadway New York

EAD APPOINTED N. E. A. WESTERN MANAGER

oup Launches Policy of Naming Regional Field Managers—State Vice-Presidents Announced by Roe

o co-ordinate its activities more efively, the National Editorial Assoion this year has adopted a new plan, t of appointing irict managers o will direct practical rk of the oup in their tions, and will port to the in office.

BEN H. READ

he first of the tional directors be named by esident Herrn Roe is Ben Read, manag- director of Southern lifornia Edial Association, who will have charge the Western division, which includes states of California, Washington, egon, Utah, Idaho, Arizona, New xico and Nevada. Mr. Read's office l remain as heretofore at 515 Ameri- Bank Building, Los Angeles.

President Roe also announced the comte list of state vice-presidents of the tional Editorial Association this week. They are:

labama—Marcy B. Darnall, Florence Herald.
rizona—Wesley Knorpp, Phoenix Republican.
rkansas—W. H. Plank, Bentonville Record.
alifornia—Timothy Brownhill, Puente Journ- olorado—George C. McCormick, H. Collins ress-Courier.

onnecicut—John E. Hersam, New Canaan ertiser.
elaware—Theo. Townsend, Milford Chron- lorida—John C. Lochner, Clermont Florida lisher.

eorgia—G. S. Chapman, Sandersville Prog- daho—Henry C. Dworshak, Burley Bulletin.

llinois—Paul Goddard, Washington Reporter.
ndiana—John D. DePrez, Shelbyville Demo- owa—C. M. Richards, Toledo Chronicle-mocrat. ansas—O. W. Little, Alma Enterprise.

entucky—J. Curtis Alcock, Danville Mes-ger.
ouisiana—D. E. Gallagher, The Southern nter, 625 Audubon Bldg., New Orleans.
laine—Chas. H. Fogg, Houlton Times.
aryland—George C. Rhoderick, Jr., Middlen Valley Register.
assachusetts—Gardner E. Campbell, Wakeld Item.
ichigan—M. H. De Foe, Charlotte Republn.
innesota—E. K. Whiting, Owatonna Jour-Chronicle.
ississippi—L. H. Bowen, Brookhaven Times.
issouri—J. S. Hubbard, Columbia Missouri blisher.
ontana—H. O. Woare, Chester Reporter.
ebraska—H. D. Leggett, Ord. Quiz.
evada—Harold P. Hale, Elko Independent.
ew Hampshire—Chas. G. Jenness, Rochester rrier.
ew Jersey—Richard C. Anzer, Union City dson News.
ew Mexico—J. G. Greaves, Portales News.
ew York—C. G. Clarke, Perry Record.
orth Carolina—J. A. Sharpe, Lumberton besonian.
orth Dakota—M. I. Forkner, Langdon Reblican.
hio—C. R. Callaghan, Bellevue Gazette.
klahoma—N. A. Nichols, El Reno American.
regon—Hal E. Hoss, Oregon City Enterse.
ennsylvania—Marion S. Schock, Selinsgrove nes.
hode Island—Jonathan F. Comstock, Crann News.
outh Carolina—Robert Latham, Charleston ws and Courier.
outh Dakota—E. B. Oddy, Woonsocket News.
ennessee—Hugh J. Doak, Manchester Times.
exas—Mrs. Lee J. Rountree, Bryan Eagle.
tah—Chas. England, Logan Journal.
ermont—Harry E. Parker, Bradford United nion. irginia—Paul Scarborough, Franklin Tidester News.
ashington—E. L. Wheeler, Waitsburg Times.
est Virginia—R. H. Pritchard, Weston mocrat. isconsin—Louis H. Zimmerman, Burlington tandard-Democrat.
yoming—R. H. Alcorn, Rawlins Republican.

EMERGENCY MAT MAKING

Burlington Free Press Used Steam When Rolling Table Didn't Work

What do you do when the motor of your rolling table refuses to work?

David W. Howe, assistant manager of the Burlington (Vt.) Free Press, was forced to find an answer to this question in a recent emergency.

"When our rolling table failed to work," he explained, "we took our compressed air steam-table, and, by letting the platen down with all the force and rapidity possible, we were able to get enough impression to make good mats. This was done with 120 pounds of compressed air pressure."

Mr. Howe declared he did not recommend dispensing with the rolling table, but suggests his trick is a handy tip in an emergency.

AD TIPS

Caples Company, 225 East Erie street, Chicago. Issuing contracts on Baltimore and Ohio railway.

Nelson Chesman & Co., 1127 Pine street, St. Louis. Will conduct a campaign of advertising for circulation in English dailies for the St. Louis German daily.

Conover-Mooney Company, 111 West Monroe street, Chicago. Placing orders on Hoffman Heater company, Louisville, Ky., in some Ohio papers.

Lawrence Fertig Company, Inc., 183 Madison avenue, New York. Now placing accounts for the Pansin Engineering Company, Newark, N. J., to advertise their Octacone, loud speaker and Dunlap & Ware, Eastern distributor "White Rouge."

Albert Frank & Co., 14 Stone street, New York. Placing accounts for Charles Freshman Company, manufacturers of Freshman Masterpiece and other radio apparatus, Hall & Ruckel, Inc., Brooklyn, manufacturers of X-Bazin and Sozodont and the Ownmore Company, developers of Mountain Lake, N. J.

Charles C. Green Advertising Agency, Real Estate Trust Building, Philadelphia. Placing account for the Christiana Ferry Company, Wilmington, Delaware.

Green, Fulton and Cunningham, 360 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Placing copy on Electrical Research Laboratories, Chicago. (Erla Radio.)

Lord and Thomas and Logan, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Placing copy for Pines Winterfront company, Chicago.

MacMartin Advertising Agency, Inc., 500 Security Building, Minneapolis. Will place account for the Anderson Lumber Company, Bayport, Minnesota, manufacturers of window frames.

Newell-Emmett Company, Inc., 116 West 32nd Street, New York, has been selected as advertising counsel for an Association composed of a majority of the large soap manufacturers of the country, which has formulated plans for the promotion of soap and glycerine.

Irvin F. Paschall, Inc., McCormick building, Chicago, has secured the account of the Heit-Miller-Lau Company, Fort Wayne, Ind., makers of "Mary Wayne" box candies and dime candy bars.

U. S. Advertising Corporation, Home Bank Building, Toledo, Ohio. Issuing contracts generally to newspapers on Willys-Overland company, Cleveland.

Warner Company, 721 Lafayette building, Detroit. Has prepared a special promotion campaign for The Detroit Free Press, designed to educate people to the advantages of electrical refrigeration and oil burner heating.

NS

The Psychology of Crime

Ten Weekly Articles

By DAVID SEABURY

Author of "Unmasking Our Minds"

FIRST PUBLICATION

Why Jealousy Leads to Crime
Wealth and Wild Youth
Girl Gangsters and Gunmen
The Sins of the Fathers
Can a Good Man Become Bad, etc.

The O'Dell Newspaper Service

Fifty-Five Fifth Avenue New York City

Imperial METAL

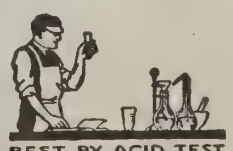
For Better Plates

Try Using the Plus Plan

PERHAPS nine-tenths of the delays in the stereotyping department are due to cold shots, sinks or other flaws in plates that call for second castings.

Most of these troubles are traced to metal difficulties and can be eliminated. Give your stereotyping department the finest metal you can obtain—Imperial Type Metal—then see to it that that metal is served by the Plus metal to keep it in A-1 condition.

That's the way to make your stereotyping department one of the smoothest running departments in your plant. When you use the Plus Plan you can count on plates being delivered on the second, moderate operating cost and no run-overs.



The Plus Plan is an efficient trouble remover. It's efficient, economical and dependable. Prove it to your own satisfaction.

IMPERIAL TYPE METAL CO.

Manufacturing the following metals:

LINOTYPE MONOTYPE INTERTYPE STEREOTYPE
ELROD LUDLOW LINOGRAPH THOMPSON

Philadelphia Cleveland New York Chicago

BEST BY ACID TEST
TRADE MARK REG.

CELOTEX USES RELIGIOUS APPEAL TO MOOCH FREE SPACE

ECHO HAUNTING CHURCH FOR 28 YEARS BANISHED BY SCIENCE

Felt Cloth on Which Echo Refused to Bounce. Bulletin Board Heralding Echo's Death.

Exterior of Haunted Church Which Won 28 Year Battle With Mysterious Voice.

A mysterious, tantalizing echo, which has haunted the First Congregational church of Clinton, Mass., for twenty eight years, has been banished.

Every device known to architecture was tried over a period of more than a quarter of a century, but in vain. Parishioners left and went to other churches because they could not hear the pastor's sermons.

Science came to the rescue when a Boston acoustic engineer gambled $5,000 that he could remove the echo by acousti-celotex, a new sound absorbing material. If he failed, it would cost the church nothing. If the echo was routed, he was to get $5,000. He won. The church sent out a bulletin: "Our Famous Echo is Gone. Come to Church Next Sunday and See for Yourself." The Rev. Nathan H. Gist, the pastor, preached on this occasion the first sermon which the parishioners were able to hear in 28 years.

When the church was opened twenty-eight years ago, it was discovered that a noisy echo had taken lodgings in the rafters. Organ tuners found it impossible to tune the organ, as the echo, intercepting each chord, would fling it back with much the same force that had blown it from the pipes. The mocking little voice from the rafters prevented parishioners from hearing the sermons. The Rev. W. W. Jordan, the pastor, nearly ruined his voice trying to foil the mimicking echo. It took him twenty years of ceaseless study and patient practicing in the church before he was able to even partially overcome the eerie voice, which was so loud that people in the fourth pew could not hear him. Many of the flock left and went to other churches.

During these twenty-eight years every known means of exterminating echoes was tried, but to no avail. Wires were strung from the rafters to intercept the vibrations of the echo, but the dexterous voice continued to mimic the pastor and the music. An enormous felt cloth was hung over the back wall for the echo to bounce against, but this, too, failed. Then a mammoth sounding board was erected above the pulpit, but this had no effect on the tantalizing echo. During more than a quarter of a century suggestions poured in to the pastor and expert advice was sought continuously, but all the devices failed to banish the haunting voice.

About two months ago it was decided to remodel the church. It was then that a Boston acoustic engineer told the pastor that he could drive out the echo of twenty-eight years from the edifice. He was F. E. Berry, Jr., who was so confident that he could solve the quarter of a century problem that he agreed to take a gamble on it. He would charge the church nothing, if he failed, but would demand $5,000 if he drove the echo out. It was so agreed, and the acoustic engineer started to work.

More than 10,000 square feet of "acousti-celotex" board, a sound absorbing material made from the tough fibres of sugar cane after all the juice has been extracted, pressed into perforated one foot squares seven eighths of an inch thick, were placed on the ceiling of the auditorium to absorb the echo. Tests were made and the mimicking voice no longer sent out its tantalizing vibrations.

Scientists and architects have played tag with echo for centuries. They have tried to outwit it by building auditoriums on certain "perfect" proportions. But it is only within the past few years that they have learned that absorbent wall and ceiling surfaces are more effective in silencing an echo than the intricacies of architectural design.

The acousti-celotex which has vanished the echo in the Clinton church is made from the felted fibres of sugar cane. This vegetable material, full of tiny connecting air pockets, is sound absorbent, but its efficiency has been greatly increased by drilling the surface full of tiny holes, which adds 150 percent to its absorbing area. Four hundred holes, ½ inch in diameter are drilled into each of the foot square blocks of Celotex, with which the ceiling of the church has been covered.

CELOTEX is the brand name of a building material. To spell the name with a lower-case "c" is the trick of a press agent. Observe, in the above reproduction of a matrice sent broadcast last week as "news," how this advertised product seeks charity publicity in the newspaper press.

The company that manufactures Celotex is a heavy user of paid magazine space, but has evidently been advised by some agent that newspaper editors are a little weak in their attics and will publish a slick story and free picture as editorial matter and never notice the lower-case "c". As in this instance, nothing could be better than a puffed-up yarn about a church.

A press agent or advertising agent has been paid, directly or indirectly, to impose this graft on newspapers. Newspaper editors who print it earn only the contempt of the craft, and likely enough the advertiser himself since he must realize that the trick of getting his brand name repeated five times in news space is a trick to which only an inferior intelligence would yield. There is less of this sort of mooching than when EDITOR & PUBLISHER began its expose of commercial space grafting two years ago, but the space grafter is a hopeful soul.

HALF A STATE COMPLETELY COVERED
at one Combination Rate
EVENING COURIER MORNING POST
Two Great Newspapers—Published at Camden, N. J.
National Representatives
STORY, BROOKS & FINLEY

PLANS SPANISH DAILY FOR LOS ANGELES

I. E. Lozano, Publisher of La Prensa at San Antonio Leaves for Coast to Organize Plant and Staff

Ignacio E. Lozano, owner and publisher of the San Antonio (Tex.) La Prensa, morning paper, left this week with several members of his organization for Los Angeles, Cal., where, some time between Sept. 16 and 20, he plans to start publication of La Opinion, a seven-day morning Spanish daily.

IGNACIO E. LOZANO

Mr. Lozano said he was installing his own plant at Los Angeles, to include, at the start, a Goss rotary press and three type-setting machines. He will personally spend some time getting the new publication going, before returning to La Prensa. He asserted he intends to use either United News or Universal Service for the Los Angeles paper. La Prensa has just started use of Universal printer service.

Accompanying Mr. Lozano to Los Angeles was Alexandre Jouffray, advertising manager of La Prensa, who will organize La Opinion's advertising department, which will be left in charge of Francisco Olivares, Jr., who also is going from San Antonio. A. F. Cantu, who has represented La Prensa in the Brownsville, Tex., section, and who will be manager of La Opinion, was in Mr. Lozano's party, as was Miguel Arce, editorial writer of La Prensa, who is to be editor of La Opinion.

At the age of 39 Mr. Lozano is launching his second major newspaper venture after having built La Prensa, in less than 14 years, to its present position. The paper now employs, according to the publisher, 76 persons. It is housed in its own three-story building. It has just announced inauguration of a "Border Edition," a 9 p. m. "bulldog," pre-dated.

Still Gaining!

The net paid average daily circulation for THE BALTIMORE NEWS for April was 124,636—the highest under its present management.

The net paid average for the American was 57,503.

You need these papers to cover Baltimore, they reach more than half the City.

Sold separately or in combination.

THE BALTIMORE NEWS
and
Baltimore American

ANNOUNCEMENT

To National Advertisers and Advertising Agencies

The National Advertising Departments of
New York Evening Journal
Baltimore Evening News
Baltimore American
Washington Evening Times
Washington Herald
Atlanta Evening Georgian
Atlanta Sunday American
are combined with offices in New York—Chicago—Detroit

New York Office:
W. G. HOBSON, Eastern Manager
2 Columbus Circle
Telephone: Circle 5400

Chicago Office:
F. E. CRAWFORD
Western Manager
913 Hearst Bldg.

Detroit Office:
FRANKLIN PAYNE
Representative
1351 Book Bldg.

All under direction of:
JAMES C. DAYTON, Publisher
NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

Flapper Fanny

Courtesy of NEA Service, Inc.

One of the many features which has made the NEA so popular is none other than friend Flapper Fanny.

Of course, she's particular about her appearance, and so are her sponsors, too. 33 years of experience have taught the NEA Service, Inc., that only the best should be offered to newspaper publishers—the best talent and materials that are to be had.

It was therefore quite natural that the NEA chose Certified Dry Mats as the medium for distributing their services. Extensive use of other dry mats preceded their adoption of Certifieds.

In fact where publishers and stereotypers COMPARE our dry mats with others the verdict is almost invariably with Certifieds.

Our policy of having one standard size; of making only one quality of newspaper mat—the best that we know how—and of maintaining one price, has already won several hundred of your fellow publishers.

Please bear in mind that thickness and thinness of our mats do not affect the quality and hence do not influence the price.

¶ We leave it to you to judge Certified Quality and that is why we repeat — COMPARE.

CERTIFIED DRY MAT CORPORATION
340 Madison Avenue
New York, N. Y.

For wet mat printing with DRY MAT facility—use Certifieds

Made in the U. S. A.

WATERLOO TRIBUNE MARKS ENTRY INTO NEW HOME WITH 68-PAGE EDITION

THE newly remodeled home of the Waterloo (Ia.) Tribune was opened ast week and celebrated at an open-house hich occupied the week-end and pre-ded publication on Sunday of a 68-page ew Home edition, replete with descrip-ons of the building and a history of ie paper and community.

The Tribune building has a 60-foot rontage on East Third street and 150 long Lafayette, with a reserve ground pace of 60x60 feet for future extensions. he building is three stories high with sub-basement. It is built of brick with rick and tile retaining walls, extending hrough the first and second floor land-ngs.

The main entrance is on Lafayette reet, the doorway opening upon a stair-ay leading to either side to the sub-asement wherein the press room is ocated. Along the main floor lobby at ie left is the commercial printing department. On the opposite side is the business office and along the north of the building the advertising department. The office of Harry Shaw, vice-president and treasurer of the company, is at the northeast corner.

To the rear of the lobby is the information desk and classified department. The news room is on the second floor to the right of the stairway and William Reed, president and editor of the Tribune, has his office in the northeast corner of this floor. The composing room is on the left with the matrix-making department to the rear, connecting directly with the stereotyping department in the sub-basement. The presses are on the East Third street side of the sub-basement and the circulation department is there, too.

A file room, directors' assembly and women employes' room occupy the third floor, all of them large, well equipped rooms.

DAILY PRAISES ADVERTISER'S EDITORIAL PRINTED IN DISPLAY SPACE

THE following discussion of editorials in advertisements appeared in the ept. 6 issue of the Tulsa (Okla.) Vorld:

"EDITORIAL ADVERTISEMENTS

"Editorials in advertisements are not ew. Twenty years ago, to seek no fur-ier and to rely altogether on personal nowledge, a firm in Kansas City be-ime famous and its ad writer renowned, hrough the use of this device in a small isplay in the same position in a certain ewspaper day after day.

"Recently this practice is being re-imed to a greater extent. Just now iere comes to attention one such appear-ig in the San Antonio Light, over the rm name of a realty concern. It does omething more than call attention to the articular firm; it impresses one—and ithin the circulation of that paper must ttract much more than ordinary at-ntion and create good will. Let us ote:

"'If in the opinion of the people the istribution and modification of the con-itutional powers are in any particular rong, let them be corrected by an mendment in the way the constitution rovides, but let there be no change by surpation, for though this in one instance ay be the instrument of good, it is the ustomary weapon by which a free gov-rnment is destroyed. The precedent ust always greatly overbalance in per-anent evil, the partial or transient bene-t the use can at any time yield.

"'—From WASHINGTON'S farewell ad-ress.

"'Do not allow the selfish self-seeking faction to change or nullify the constitution under the pretext of public protection.

"'CHARLES E. HUGHES, in a recent speech before the American Bar Association, said this country was being turned into a bureaucracy—millions of bogus laws under the pretext of public protection.

"'I say, drive these presumptuous persecutors and petty pretenders to princedom or perdition.

"'I say—Take your hefty hands off of my shoulder.

"'I say—Take your uninvited opinion off of my mind.

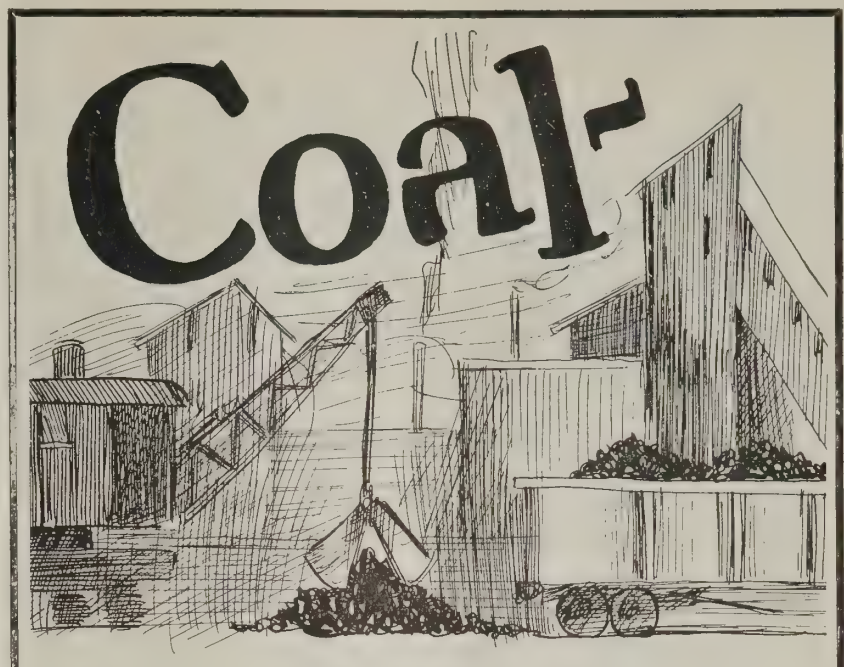
"'I refuse—to accept your sugar-coated tyranny.

"'I refuse—to submit to your polite peonage.

"'I refuse—to partake of your pernicious paternalism.

"'I refuse—to be truant to the trust reposed in me as a sovereign citizen of this great republic.

* * *



"'As between preachment and parchment I choose the parchment.

"'The Constitution is my paper, my party, my laws, my liberty, my bulwark.'"

* * *

"When business concerns quite generally merge their business interests with the welfare of the country it may happen that there will not be so much room for the demagogue and the insincere reformer.

"The subject is worth thinking about."

An Important Industry in

ILLINOIS—

How many people know that Illinois is the third coal producing state in the United States?

It is an important industry representing investments of millions of dollars' worth of machinery and equipment, and employing skilled labor at good wages.

Illinois is a compact unified market with high standards of living, economic independence and buying power. Situated in the very heart of the country's most fertile and prosperous valley, it offers a market of unlimited possibilities to the National Advertiser. Consult the papers listed below. They are ready to assist you.

	Circulation	Rates for 2,500 Lines	Rates for 10,000 Lines
Aurora Beacon-News .....(E)	18,694	.06	.06
†Chicago Herald & Examiner....(M)-	385,276	.55	.55
†Chicago Herald & Examiner.....(S)	1,153,360	1.10	1.10
†Chicago Daily Journal .....(E)	123,771	.26	.24
Evanston News Index .....(E)	6,729	.04	.04
Freeport Journal-Standard .....(E)	9,613	.045	.045
Joliet Herald News .....(E)	19,591	.06	.06
††Mattoon Journal Gazette .....(E)	5,712	.03	.03
Moline Dispatch .....(E)	11,556	.045	.045
Monmouth Daily Review Atlas..(E)	5,416	.035	.035
Peoria Star .....(S) 22,497..(E)	29,874	.085	.07
Rock Island Argus .....(E)	11,248	.045	.045
Waukegan Daily Sun .....(E)	5,213	.03	.03

A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1926
†Government Statement, March 31, 1926
††Government Statement, September 30, 1925

HOW NATION'S PRESS FIGHTS MOTOR PERIL

(Continued from page 3)

ing privileges and thus clear the streets to permit the movement of more traffic lines the Free Press is urging the establishment of a larger auto pound and the use of more tow wagons as the tagging system has failed, and impounding cars is the only method feared by drivers.

In Albany the Knickerbocker Press and Albany Evening News last year made an independent survey of traffic congestion and traffic accidents in that city. The survey, illustrated by diagrams, photographs and charts, and supported by cartoons and editorials, amply demonstrated continuous economic loss to the city and unnecessary hazard to its citizens. This effort was followed by a semi-official survey under the direction of a citizen's traffic committee, appointed by the late Mayor Hackett, who pledged that the recommendations of the committee would be followed by the administration. Automatic control lights have been installed at principal intersections in Albany's business section during the summer and the city's traffic ordinance has been modified to eliminate traffic congestion, establish one way streets and minimize parking time. A jaywalking ordinance has been passed and a general campaign of traffic education has marked the summer program in the city's playgrounds.

The city administration which succeeded Mayor Hackett, at his death, has, however, rejected one of the most important items of the traffic committee's program—installation of the boulevard stop system on designated through streets as complementary to the central control system. In some cases flicker lights have been substituted for the boulevard stop system recommended. On this point the Press Company's publications have taken vigorous issue with the administration as a matter of economy, efficiency and coordination of a general system.

The experience of Albany has been that of other cities where radical revision of traffic and parking rules has been undertaken. Immediate inroads have been attempted upon parking provisions in the interests of particular sections before the new ordinance has been enforced.

Albany has made substantial progress, but the result is unsatisfactory and the traffic issue will figure in the coming municipal elections.

The San Francisco (Cal.) Call has contributed conspicuously to a campaign of San Francisco and other California newspapers to lessen automobile fatalities. The Call has not been content to warn motorists, advocate elimination of dangerous grade crossings, "play up" traffic accidents and fatalities and scold responsible authorities when bad conditions have continued or grown worse. It has taken the initiative on at least two occasions by organizing movements to bring about safer driving and safer walking, and the results have been gratifying.

Three years ago The Call had made more than 25,000 heavy tin emblems for the radiator of the automobile, in red and white, which proclaimed the driver of every car displaying such emblem to be a member of The Call's Safe Drivers' Club.

These emblems were given to every automobile owner who called, wrote or telephoned for one. The campaign to enroll members was turned over to a feature writer and the campaign was played up for weeks. Every emblem was called for and used.

More important, for many days there was not one automobile fatality in or near San Francisco, whereas before the inauguration of The Call's drive there had been several every month

Last year, at a time when a good many pedestrians were being run down while crossing crowded streets, The Call put on a "Don't Jaywalk" crusade. Several hundred heavy metal signs, in yellow, were wired to electroliers throughout the downtown section of San Francisco. The conspicuous feature of this sign was a traffic policeman holding up his right hand, giving the "stop" signal.

The signs were put up for the duration of Traffic Week, but after the week had gone by the police department requested that they be continued in place. It was the testimony of traffic officers that The Call's emblem was doing more to curb jaywalking than their combined efforts, plus constant warnings, plus frequent accidents.

At the request of the California Development Association, whose women's division has been engaged for months in a Statewide drive to induce safe driving. The Call's signs have been lent to other cities having Traffic Week demonstrations. At the present time they are up in Santa Cruz, a seaside city, where a Traffic Week celebration is soon to be held.

Use of the signs has been requested by other cities, and while they carry the name of The San Francisco Call, communities not reached by The Call are glad to use them.

The Safe Drivers' Club emblems and the "Don't Jaywalk" signs were rather expensive, but, in addition to doing real good, they are credited with having made many new friends for its paper.

San Francisco Chronicle for several years has carried on an aggressive campaign in the joint interest of the motorist and pedestrian to reduce accidents and obtain better regulation of traffic. It recently assisted in securing the appointment of a non-political traffic commission which will conduct a survey and arrive at a broad program of regulation. The Chronicle is now urging that measures to check jaywalking be taken, so that the pedestrian accident hazard may be considerably lessened. The Chronicle has made independent checks in the principal thoroughfares of violators of traffic regulations, publishing the license numbers of offenders. Has secured the adoption of the "boulevard stop" plan and is insisting upon its enforcement. It has brought about the establishment of safety zones on the principal motor ways in the outlying sections of the city and is constantly studying other proposals having for their purpose the reduction of automobile fatalities and a smoother flow of traffic through the city's arteries.

At Boston a very vigorous motor vehicle registrar furnishes the newspaper with so much crusading for safety on the highways that no newspaper is competing with him. The Boston papers print his many speeches and statements.

All four Cincinnati newspapers have made energetic efforts in recent months to curb automobile fatalities. Each newspaper keeps an individual record of fatalities and each news story in which a fatality is reported states the number of automobile deaths since January 1.

The Cincinnati Post carries a large black face figure at the head of its stories, the number being changed with each fatality.

Recently, the Enquirer has made a special grade-crossing campaign to eliminate some of the more dangerous grade crossings. Through daily picture features and black face stories, each grade crossing was pictured and its dangers described. City officials have taken their cue from these articles and a general grade crossing survey was made by members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce for the city. Plans now are being made to seek bond issues for elimination of these crossings at the rate of four or five yearly, until all of the more dangerous crossings have been eliminated. The Commercial has also been active.

The Junior Chamber survey, which is a novel idea that could be tried to advantage in any city, gave the city officials some highly interesting facts about the various grade crossings and their degree of danger, as compared with other crossings.

The Times-Star is devoting much time and effort to reduce automobile fatalities. Led by Moses Strauss, managing editor, who formed the first local safety committee, traffic problems relating to safety of pedestrians and motorists were studied with the result that the number of deaths have been reduced, while many other large American cities show increases over last year's figures. The safety committee was fostered by the Cincinnati Automobile Club and was composed of two divisions—automobile owners and non-owners—from 48 different civic and other organizations.

The paper is publishing each week an investigation report and map showing how one fatality occurred and what is needed to correct the situation. Fred Burns, automobile editor, has started a column of safety recommendations. City officials answer all queries and have taken immediate action on a number of suggestions received and published by the paper in its weekly Autoists' Section.

Managing Editor Strauss was elected a trustee of the Cincinnati Auto Club about a year ago. He was named to the Hoover Safety Conference from Ohio by Governor Donahey because of his accomplishments in Cincinnati in safety work. Mr. Burns recently completed a tour of the northwest and Canada, where he collected material on safety regulations in other cities as the basis for a series of articles applied to the situation at Cincinnati.

For several years the Chicago Tribune has maintained a careful daily record, running through the year, of automobile fatalities in Chicago and Cook County. This mounting annual figure has been used in the newspaper's campaign for safety. But with 15 or 20 per cent. annual increase in the number of motorcars in the Chicago population area little, if any, improvement has been achieved. The Tribune is now campaigning for the widening of important highways radiating from Chicago from the present 18 feet to 40 feet. Up to today the Tribune's published figures show that 552 persons have been killed in Cook County (coroner's district) since January 1, in motor car and truck accidents. The number includes those in automobiles killed by collisions with trains at grade-crossings. The total is considerably over two a day on the average.

For more than two years Minneapolis (Minn.) Journal has campaigned editorially for enactment of a driver's license law in Minnesota. The measure failed of passage in the last Legislature, due largely to opposition in the rural districts, where it was feared a license requirement would work undue hardship on the farmer. Since then, however, there has been a marked change of sentiment. A large section of the rural press is now joining in the demand for licensing. The farmers themselves are beginning to see that the bother of taking out licenses is not nearly so great as the bother of dodging reckless drivers. There is a good prospect now for passage of a license law at next winter's session of the Legislature. The Journal has also made it a practice continually to call attention editorially to typical instances of carelessness and dangerous driving practices.

The Springfield (Mass.) Union, cooperating with the Safety Council of the Chamber of Commerce, is promoting safe highway traffic as well as safety operation in industries and safety measures in the homes. It is at present conducting a campaign to induce young bicycle riders to be more careful. The youngsters are enrolling in a safety league. The Union gives many columns monthly to reports, drives, slogans, and safety pleas of the Council, preferring to back a civic campaign rather than conduct a newspaper campaign. Springfield achieved remarkable results for a long time in keeping down auto accidents in which persons were injured or killed, but this year the record has not been so good. Lenient police and judicial methods are being blamed.

A campaign for safe driving was ended recently by the Syracuse (N. Y.) Herald after a month's crusade. More than one-quarter of the 60,000 automobile owners in Onondaga County had enrolled in the Herald's "Safe Driving Club" when the campaign closed. One of the best staff men was detailed to handle the daily banner stories which induced 15,000 motorists to pledge themselves to drive more carefully on the streets of Syracuse and the country highways. Pledge cards were distributed personally and printed in every edition during the month. Accompanying the thirty columns of news matter which appeared during the drive were daily lessons for the automobile operator. The lessons directed attention to all the common factors of traffic accidents, cautioned avoidance of them and gave hints for the car pilot. Especially posed photographs picturing these common accident causes accompanied each story. Diagrams also were used. Members of a theatrical stock company consented to pose. The Safety Council of the Chamber of Commerce co-operated with the newspaper. Each driver who enrolled was given a green and white button to be attached to his radiator. The button designated him as a member of the Safe Driving Club. The demand for the buttons continued after the campaign was over. Public officials, school heads and prominent citizens joined the Herald in the plea for reduction in the number of fatalities.

The Spokane (Wash.) Spokesman Reviews policy is to back the efforts of the city authorities in enforcing motor laws. The establishment of stop signs on entering arterial highways is reducing the

RECORDS CONFUSE STORK

A MEMPHIS newspaper which prints a daily vital statistic's column has delegated to the head office boy the duty of getting this material on one of his morning copy runs.

Through a mistake on the part of the health bureau, the wrong address was given the parents of a new baby, and the proud father asked for a correction.

The office boy corrected it in this fashion:

"Due to a mistake on the record books a girl was born to J——— G——— and Hazel ——— Aug. 16 at 1529 Madison street, instead of 563 North Sixth street."

FOR PROMPT SERVICE

TYPE

BORDERS ~ ORNAMENTS ~ BRASS RULE

Printers' Supplies

KELLY PRESSES ~ KLYMAX FEEDERS ~ PAPER CUTTERS
HAMILTON WOOD AND STEEL EQUIPMENT, INCLUDING OUR AMERICAN CUT-COST EQUIPMENT

Carried in stock for prompt shipment at the following Selling Houses of the

American Type Founders Company

BOSTON	RICHMOND	DETROIT	MINNEAPOLIS	SAN FRANCISCO
NEW YORK	ATLANTA	CHICAGO	KANSAS CITY	PORTLAND
PHILADELPHIA	BUFFALO	CINCINNATI	DES MOINES	SPOKANE
BALTIMORE	PITTSBURGH	ST. LOUIS	DENVER	WINNIPEG
	CLEVELAND	MILWAUKEE	LOS ANGELES

mber of accidents. Groups of civilians d deputies periodically hold up at ints on main highways all motor cars ith dazzling headlights. One warning given. After that a stiff fine results. ditorial comment on police court pro-edings is freely given, and this has a iffening effect on the authorities.

Spokane judges deal severely with vio-tions of city regulations.

Carrying out a campaign inaugurated d promoted by the Los Angeles (Cal.) vening Herald that city has completed o and is constructing sixteen pedestrian nnels located at the busiest traffic cor-rs in the residential district of the city. hey are designed to afford school chil-en and others an opportunity of cross-g without danger from vehicular traffic. he expense of this safety campaign is eing borne by a $350,000 bond issue. he two tunnels now in operation have oved so successful and so popular that e city is already preparing to widen e scope of this safety effort and in all obability not less than 50 of these destrian tunnels will be completed and operation by January 1, 1928. In ad-tion to this Los Angeles is networked ith safety surface crossings which are arked by painted lines on the pavement d before crossing which every auto-obile must come to a dead stop if any destrian is in the act of crossing as hicle approaches. This also is the re-lt of the Evening Herald's campaign r pedestrian safety. Since Los Angeles s put this system into operation many her cities have followed the example.

The Kansas City (Mo.) Journal Post s been a medium through which the ansas City Safety Council has brought uch educational matter to the attention the public. The Journal-Post has en persistent in publishing sketches of oper methods of driving, arm signals d so forth. The paper also gives much blicity to the proceedings in traffic urt and recently ran photographs of reless drivers and speeders in leg chains the municipal farm. Fatalities at Kan-s City have passed last year's record r the period. In each fatality story e Journal-Post calls attention in a box the total fatalities for the year, with e warning "be careful." The Journal-ost Road and Tour Bureau also gives tention to safety education.

Oakland (Cal.) Post Enquirer is co-erating with the Safety Council, com-sed of 3,200 citizens empowered to re-rt traffic violations to the police, and ith the police, with results as follows: per cent decrease in accidents at in-rsections, with enforcement of new oulevard stop ordinance; 7,335 arrests in e first six months this year for traffic olations as compared with 4,521 for the ntire year 1925; boulevard stop, brake spection and traffic signal weeks are pported with generous publicity; deaths ring the first six months this year to-lled 37, compared with last year's 32 r the same period. In proportion to e increased number of cars this repre-nts a decrease.

The Milwaukee (Wis.) Journal does ot advocate sporadic campaigns to pro-ote street and highway safety, but ather persistent day in and day out de-fense of safety laws and measures. It was a factor, for example, in getting a bill through the Legislature providing jail terms instead of fines for intoxicated drivers. When the law was silent on jail sentences the Journal constantly advocated jail terms as the only effective means of combating this menace. Now an offender rarely, if ever, escapes without a term in the work house. The Journal was instrumental in establishing Milwaukee's arterial highway system. This includes breaking the bottle neck at street intersections by providing for double lanes of traffic. Buses must stop within, not outside, safety zones. The paper is now pressing for the passage of a drivers' license law. The Journal devotes a column to touring and automobile news in which articles on safety figure prominently.

For some months the four Portland, Ore., daily newspapers have been cooperating with the Mayor and Police Bureau in an effort to reduce traffic accidents, proceeding on the theory that frequent and prominent publicity will help instill caution in the minds of motorists and pedestrians.

The Portland News has just discontinued a daily "crash box" in which were listed the names and addresses of persons killed, injured or present at accidents.

The St. Louis (Mo.) Globe Democrat's policy is to give prominence to automobile fatalities and to support, both in its news and editorial columns, the work of the local Safety Council.

The Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat and Chronicle and Herald, pushed vigorously in both news and editorial columns for the making of East Avenue, beautiful residential thoroughfare, an "arterial highway," and it is likely that at an early date practically every main thoroughfare here will be "arterial," which means that every vehicle coming into such a thoroughfare will first have to come to a dead stop. These papers have also carried an average of an editorial a week treating of some phase of street safety. The monthly accident figures from the Police Traffic Bureau are published.

The Syracuse (N. Y.) Herald has done commendable work with regard to street safety. One of its regular features is illustrated perils of motor traffic.

While there has been no general promotion of "safety first" drives by the Hearst newspapers, many individual papers of the organization have taken militant steps toward campaigning against reckless automobile driving, EDITOR & PUBLISHER was told at the New York executive offices. There it was said that Hearst newspapers in the western states were leading in a unique drive which provides that automobile owners be sworn in as deputies to arrest themselves and offenders against themselves.

The Kansas City Star last Sunday began an intensive campaign to prevent motor car accidents, with school beginning the next Tuesday, it printed pictures of the children killed by motorists this year with this caption stop, look and listen. Underneath were the lines "This Is Not A Pleasant Picture To Print, But The Number of Deaths In Kansas City From Motor Car Accidents Makes It Necessary."

Last year there were 77 deaths; already this year 46 persons have been killed.

In addition there was a first page interview with the Chief of Police, the Safety Council Director, the judges of the Municipal Courts, all of whom declared war on speeding motorists and demanded protection for the children. Every day since the Star has kept up the fight.

N. Y. WORLD ADDS TO COMICS

The New York World increased its Sunday comic section to eight pages with the issue of Sept. 12. The new pages include "Nize Baby" by Milt Gross, "Who's Zoo," by Tom Dibble, Jr., and "Drowsy Dick," by E. J. King.

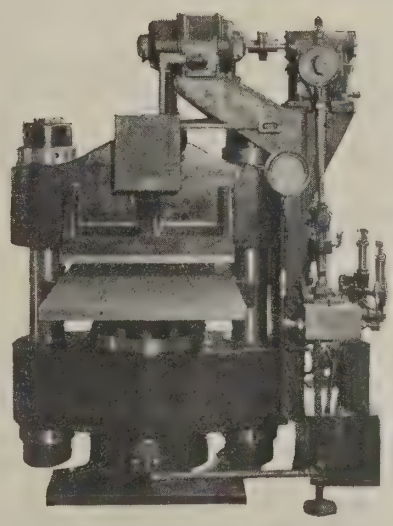
RADIO "COLUMN" IN CHICAGO

The Chicago Daily News inaugurated this week its new contributor's radio air "column" from its radio station WMAQ. The "air line" will be broadcast four evenings a week and will include contributions from radio fans which are thought worthy of being broadcast. Keith Preston, literary editor and conductor of the humorous contributors' column, "Hit or Miss" in the Daily News, will conduct the new radio "column."

It is said to be difficult for flappers to make up their minds. Yet they get plenty of practise on their faces.—James J. Montague in New York Herald Tribune.

TO NEGOTIATE SCALE

Conferences are to start in Scranton, Pa., soon on the wage demands submitted by the printers recently. The printers are seeking a wage increase, a seven hour day and paid vacations for all men who have worked at the newspapers for a certain period. The agreement between the Scranton printers and employers expires the last of this month.



COWLES GROUP EXPANDS

The Pacific Northwest Farm Trio, published by the Cowles Publishing Company, publishers of the Spokane Spokesman-Review, has purchased the Western Farmer of Portland, Ore., and consolidated it with the trio, which is composed of the Washington Farmer, the Oregon Farmer and the Idaho Farmer. The subscription list of the Western Farmer has been divided among these three publications. Publication office of the trio continues in Spokane with branch offices in Seattle, Boise and Portland.

You can't buy classified success, but you can win it—as scores of our clients are winning it today

THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, Inc.
International Classified Advertising Counsellors
Packard Building Philadelphia

BIROTADRUCK

HYDRAULIC MATRICE PRESS
Direct Pressure Under Complete Control. Fast, Positive, Non-Vibrating Hydraulic Operation. The first successful hydraulic matrice moulding press to be introduced into this country.
Birotadruck Presses are now in operation on the plants of The New York Times (3 presses), New York Herald-Tribune (2 presses), Boston Globe, Cleveland Press and Dallas News.
AMERICAN BIROTADRUCK CO., Inc.
120 West 42d St., New York City

FLORIDA
continues to be the fastest growing state in the Union.
TAMPA
is the recognized industrial center and the most substantial city in Florida.
THE TAMPA MORNING TRIBUNE
is the only morning and the only Sunday newspaper in Tampa, covering the entire rich, productive and populous territory of Southwest Florida, reaching a population of 713,943.
200,000 Daily Readers.
300,000 Sunday Readers.
Represented nationally by
The S. C. Beckwith Special Agency.

CLINE SYSTEM
CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO. CHICAGO
Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control is used by
CHICAGO TRIBUNE
Chicago, Ill.
Ask them about it.
CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO.
Chicago: 111 West Washington Street
New York: 47 West 34th Street
San Francisco: First National Bank Building

The World
These two newspapers offer the most powerful all-day service in New York available as a unit under a single contact. The 600,000 DAILY WORLD — EVENING WORLD readers constitute a highly concentrated force to be reckoned with in any campaign designed to effect distribution in Greater New York.
The Evening World
Pulitzer Building, New York
Tribune Tower, Chicago

Use the
COMBINATION RATE
OF
The Gazette Times
(Morning and Sunday)
AND
Chronicle Telegraph
(Evening)
in order to cover Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania thoroughly at the lowest cost.
Member A. B. C.
URBAN E. DICE, Nat. Adv. Mgr.
GAZETTE SQ., PITTSBURGH, PA.
National Representatives:
E. M. BURKE, Inc.
42nd and Broadway, N. Y.
122 S. Michigan Blvd., Chicago.
Constitution Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.
R. J. BIDWELL CO.
742 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.
Times Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

creating Impression!
nearly half the 2013 national advertisers using the Cleveland Plain Dealer in 1925 used it exclusively.
The Plain Dealer
ONE Medium—ONE Cost ALONE Will sell it
J. B. Woodward, 110 E. 42d St., New York
Woodward & Kelly, 360 N. Mich. Ave., Chicago

CITY EDITOR RUNS OWN JOURNALISM SCHOOL ON SMALL TOWN DAILY

Little Time Available for Individual Instruction in Spelling or Writing Leads, But Weekly Critical Meetings and General Attention Help

By GORDON MAC QUARRIE
City Editor, Superior (Wis.) Telegram

WHILE the day of instruction from the city editor for the cub on the large newspaper has been over for a long time, hundreds of city editors on small papers still have this problem on their hands. On papers from 10,000 to even high as 40,000 circulation, the city editor is not only the responsible person for all local news, but he must, in addition, be continually developing reporters from raw material.

It has ever been this way and it will also be the same until that bright day when the journalistic millennium arrives and reporters, city editors, et al, shall receive their just due in wages. The fact is that reporters on the smaller papers are not paid enough and are therefore, always using the smaller paper as a stepping stone to the paper in the bigger city. The task of keeping typewriter desks occupied with something more than mere high school boys with a knowledge of typing falls upon the city editor.

The city editors have always risen to the occasion, God bless them. They are usually willing to tackle anything in the news game from instructing a dense-headed cub to running the whole paper without assistance from anyone. Their job, then, is to insert in the folds of young reporters' cerebrums certain salient useful facts and knowledge concerning what is probably the most difficult thing about a newspaper—reporting.

Whether or not the current method in vogue in small towns of engaging raw youths with great ambitions to pound out words and represent the newspapers with its public is commendable and profitable is no affair of ours here. I speak for the work-ridden city editors of the nation who have one or four of these lads on their hands and, poor devils, must stop in the midst of an important piece of work and show the fellows how to write a lead or spell a word.

We city editors, then, are faced with brutal facts, not theories. Maybe we would like to dash into the front office some particularly awful day and tell the old man he's either got to pay more to his reporters or the local work is going to pot. We did it once ourselves and the old man said "let 'er go."

Through one particularly turbulent year where changes were occurring constantly, with the usual result in mistakes, poor work and general grief for everyone and the city editor in particular, I resolved, finally to do something. I had been doing something all along—in an unsystematic way. But I resolved to produce a school of journalism in my own office that would handle from one to four or five greenhorns and within two or three months, providing the patient was the right material in the first place, produce a reporter who, at least, would inspire a grain of confidence in the customers on his run and turn in a fairly decent sheetful of copy.

Books on journalism—the libraries are full of them—were a great aid. The young man wanting to get along will drink these in avidly and it is surprising the amount of practical knowledge they contain. After a few weeks of absorption from books a cub listens to what you say intelligently. He is rather thrilled, too, to learn that the book knowledge he has acquired has made such a hit with the city editor. A sympathetic desk man working with the city editor can accomplish miracles. He can be one of the instructors in the school and the city editor can be principal. The experienced reporters can also be instructors and the managing editor ought to be a professor emeritus, at least, if he has the proper sympathy for his crew.

Conferences—one on each Monday—with all the local staff gathered in the society editor's office are wonderful aids. The city editor may keep a slip of paper on which to jot down ideas that come to him as he looks over the copy that comes from his cubs. On Monday this slip of paper is the basis for the discussion. The little, unimportant and often annoying matters come up and are threshed out. Without jotting them down they are forgotten and recur everlastingly until the man handling the copy recommends that the neglected cub responsible for them be discharged. The conferences should be friendly chats. If there are any bawlings out coming, administer them in private. There never yet was a reporter worth his salt that could be bulldozed by a husky managing editor or cocky city editor.

Carbon copies—the reporters may keep copies of their work and then compare it with the final product as corrected or rewritten in the paper. Many editors resort to this method.

Learning by watching—how many cubs have never had a fair chance because they were thrown the first day into the maelstrom. The sad part of this is that the more capable ones always meet their end in this fashion. The bedeviled city editor looks 'em over on their first Monday morning and a grain of hope rises in his breast. He decides the person is smart enough to start right in and do the job with little or no breaking in with an experienced man. The result is a defeated, discouraged cub and a disappointed, often angry city editor. The dumb-looking ones often come out a lot better. They don't impress the boss so favorably and have a chance to bathe their tummies in the frigid waters of small city newspaper work before being thrown off the dock.

Reading—but all the good reporters are omnivorous readers anyway. Encouraging the cubs to soak up everything in the other newspapers that are on the exchange desk helps to round out their way of writing. They run across suggestions in every story.

Sympathy—this is the big thing. Sometimes nothing else will do but an emphatic order from a city editor. In most cases sympathy with the problem of the cub will get the best results. Too many small papers are struggling along full of mistakes and rotten news stories because a maniacal city editor, poor cuss, knows not which way to turn to get results and resorts in his despair to sarcasm and cussing. This person is the city editor of fiction—the hard boiled city editor. The good city editor may be hard boiled—but he doesn't show it.

FILES $100,000 SUIT

Oklahoma Oil Man Claims Blackwell Papers Libelled Him

Ed Tippett, drilling contractor of Blackwell, Okla., has filed suit in the district court against C. Robert Bellatti, editor and publisher of the Blackwell Morning Tribune and the Blackwell Evening News and both papers asking $100,000 damages for an article appearing in the Evening News of Aug. 2. The article concerns an alleged liquor party in which several prominent Blackwell residents were mentioned as having taken part.

Tippett alleges his character was damaged by the publication of the article. He claims they were maliciously composed and published by Mr. Bellatti and that reports were sent out over the Associated Press wire to other towns in the state for the purpose of injuring him.

SUNBERRY ON WIRE CIRCUIT

The Sunberry (Pa.) Daily this week started using the leased wire report of the Associated Press.

GERMAN DAILY AMERICANIZING

Americanization of a German newspaper without departing from use of the mother tongue is being worked out by the New Jersey Freie Zeitung, published in Newark, N. J. The typical German make-up and method of news selection has been replaced by more modern American practice. The paper this year passed into the hands of William C. Fiedler and Fred J. Hartman. J. Douglas Gessford, formerly with the Bergen (N. J.) Record, is general manager of the new organization.

BELLIGERENT COP OUSTED

Assault on a photographer of the Chicago Daily News coupled with other misdemeanors led to the dismissal this week of Policeman Getzel Horwitz of the Chicago police force, by the police trial board.

DOMINANT!
in
Pinellas County, Florida
Daily News
ST. PETERSBURG'S PICTURE PAPER
Owned by Frank Fortune Pulver
Edited by Major Alfred Birdsall
America's Biggest Tabloid
Florida's Fastest
Growing Newspaper
To be assured of Complete Coverage—
USE THE NEWS
Represented by
GEORGE B. DAVID COMPANY
NEW YORK: 110 East 42nd Street
CHICAGO: 1010 Hartford Building

DO YOU NEED A TRAINED MAN?
The Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, an organization of college trained newspaper, magazine and advertising men, wants to help you find him. The Bureau puts you in touch with experienced, energetic men—it saves you time by recommending only those who meet your requirements.
If you expect a vacancy, please write Robert B. Tarr, Director, Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, P. O. Box 115, Pontiac, Michigan.
NO CHARGE TO EMPLOYERS

IN some cities, the "leading" newspaper may have merely a few hundred more circulation than its competitor. The Press has 40,000 more net paid circulation in Pittsburgh than the other two evening newspapers combined—and 35,000 more net paid circulation in Pittsburgh than the other two Sunday newspapers combined.
THE PITTSBURGH PRESS
A Scripps-Howard Newspaper
Member of the A. B. C.

BUILDINGS
PLANT LAYOUTS
PRODUCTION
OPERATION
An organization specializing solely in newspaper building design, manufacturing and production problems.
S. P. WESTON
Newspaper Buildings
Plant Layouts
Production, Operation
120 West 42nd Street New York

If Quality
of circulation is your first consideration
The Evening Star
With Sunday Morning Editions
Washington, D. C.
will have your preference—same as it has the preference of practically everyone in the National Capital.
The Star's circulation is home circulation—both quality and quantity—the kind that counts most with advertisers.
N. Y. Office—110 E. 42nd St.
Dan A. Carroll
Chicago Office—Tower Building
J. E. Lutz

Largest Evening Circulation in Largest Market
For 26 consecutive years the Evening Journal has had the largest evening circulation in America—concentrated in New York and suburbs. More than DOUBLE the circulation of any other New York evening paper.
NEW YORK JOURNAL
America's Largest Evening Circulation and at 3c a copy

Peoria
The Try-Out City
THE PEORIA JOURNAL Transcript
Puts Tryouts Over!
CHAS. H. EDDY CO.
New York - Chicago - Boston

ONG BEACH COMMUNITY ADVERTISING TAPPED LOS ANGELES' TOURIST FLOW

15,000 Municipal Fund Spent in Two Dailies to Herald Smaller City's Attractions—Business Increased, Strict Check-Up Revealed

By HAROLD J. ASHE

OES community advertising pay? Officers, directors and members of te Long Beach (Cal.) Chamber of Commerce are generally agreed that it es, following the findings of an exhaus-e survey made to ascertain the re-lts of such publicity.

Practically every line of business en-

Attractive copy used in Long Beach campaign

avor, which could be used as a bar-neter, was queried as to its business ring the six month period of Nov. 1 April 30 inclusive in 1925-26, during e period the advertising campaign was ing conducted, and also as to business r the similar period in 1924-25, at which ne there was no such advertising. The iversal report was that a material gain volume of business was enjoyed.

The advertising campaign was launched ter it had been carefully planned out several advertising experts, and was nducted under the direction of a Long ach advertising agency, which had won e right to conduct the campaign through mpetitive bidding.

Among the reports filed with the amber of Commerce were the follow-g:

The Catalina Island Company, opera-ng steamships to Catalina Island, a rely pleasure resort enterprise, reported increase of 4½ per cent during the x months in 1925-26 over the previous ar's six-month period.

The leading urban transportation com-ny carried 3,258,159 passengers during e first six month period, while 4,212,118 were handled during the period of the advertising campaign, a gain of more than 900,000 passengers.

The city's largest storage and transfer company handled more outgoing than incoming furniture shipments during the first period and the incoming and outgoing shipments were about evenly divided during the second period.

The city library reported a gain of 27,836 in books circulated during the 1925-26 period, while theatre managers also reported an increase in business.

Retail stores also felt the effect of the community advertising program. Four department stores and one men's wear store reported. One showed a gain of 28 per cent, another 12.78 per cent, a third, 5 per cent, and the remaining two each 15 per cent.

In the check of office building tenants, only those buildings in operation during both periods were covered. Several new buildings were erected during the second period and drew heavily upon the older buildings' rentals and yet those reporting showed a 10 per cent gain in tenants.

During the 1924-25 period bank clearings were $177,063,100, while in 1925-26 they had climbed to $189,488,854, a gain of more than $12,000,000. One building and loan association reported a gain of $129,443 in assets, and another $255,047.

As the quickest response to the community advertising was expected to be felt from the transients and tourists making Los Angeles their headquarters, it is significant to note that these expectations were mirrored in the results felt by the hotels, which reported a 30 per cent gain in guests. This is again strikingly illustrated in the business report of the Long Beach Amusement League, made up of concessioners on the Pike, the ocean-front amusement zone. The Silver Spray Pier, the one section where an accurate check could be kept on all business large and small, had a volume 20 per cent greater during the 1925-26 period than the 1924-25 six-months.

Unlike many community advertising campaigns, that conducted at Long Beach did not use local mediums. Neither did it employ newspapers in the East. In fact, it confined its appropriation to two papers in Los Angeles, the Times and the Examiner.

Other larger advertising programs by various California and Southern California organizations were depended upon to bring tourists and permanent residents to the Pacific Coast. Therefore, all the Long Beach campaign was intended to do was to bring a certain per cent of these newly arrived people to Long Beach from Los Angeles, which city is chosen by most easterners as their first port of call.

The campaign fund of about $15,000 was paid out of the city treasury, and disbursed through the publicity department of the Chamber of Commerce. The campaign included 40 eighty-inch display ads appearing in the two Los Angeles morning papers and is estimated to have had a total number of impressions in excess of 22,000,000. The campaign inaugurated the first of November, 1925, was concluded July 1, 1926, running eight months in all.

The accompanying advertisement, run during the Christmas holidays, is typical of the copy used throughout the series of 40 ads. All ads were profusely illustrated, with comparatively little descriptive matter, and that designed merely to intrigue the interest of the reader, and inspire him to "clip the coupon."

Radio played a part in the advertising as can be seen in this ad. Readers were urged to tune in on KFON, the Press-Telegram broadcasting station. Underneath this suggestion was printed pertinent facts concerning the city.

To all those mailing the coupon, which was a part of every ad, literature was mailed by the Chamber of Commerce publicity department.

Significant is the report of the Eberle & Riggleman Economic Service of Los Angeles, which says:

"Since the first of the year there has been a tendency for business to increase in Long Beach and San Diego, while Los Angeles, Fresno, Santa Barbara, Pasadena and San Bernardino show a relatively steady position. In Bakersfield and Phoenix there is a slight tendency for business to decrease."

While the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce Journal adds that "It is reasonable to believe that the municipal advertising campaign conducted in the interest of Long Beach has played a part in bringing about this increase in business."

Since the signal success attained by Long Beach has been made public, no less than half a dozen other southern California cities have launched similar community advertising campaigns, with marked degrees of success. In most instances these campaigns have also employed Los Angeles papers exclusively as their mediums.

HUGHITT GOLF CHAMP

E. F. Hughitt, golf editor of the Buffalo Evening News, won the annual golf tournament of the Press Club of that city last week. His score for nine hole round in 38, close to par, taking top honors and the club championship. Trophies worth $150 were donated for the occasion.

NEW A. P. MEMBER ELECTED

The Perry (Okla.) Journal has been elected to membership in the Associated Press.

A paper with the people

The public decides the progress of a newspaper.

The continuous rising circulation of the New York Evening Graphic vividly demonstrates popular acceptance of this newspaper as a medium of unusual reader interest.

Advertisers daily realize the benefit of this power through achieved results from the advertising columns of the New York Evening Graphic.

With a constantly increasing circulation, plus a constant growth in advertising lineage, the New York Evening Graphic offers the advertiser an extremely profitable opportunity

Published by BERNARR MACFADDEN

NEW YORK
EVENING GRAPHIC

H. A. AHERN, Advertising Mgr.
25 City Hall Place
New York City

The Normal Season in Miami

23%
MORE CIRCULATION

Herald July circulation figures this year as compared with the same period for 1925 show a net increase of 23%—substantiating the continued phenomenal growth of Miami and its market under normal conditions—at a time when nearly every reader is a bona fide resident.

No other market in America is in as healthy a state as the Miami market. No other market offers greater possibilities to the national advertiser.

The Miami Herald
"Florida's Most Important Newspaper"
Frank B. Shutts, Publisher.

Regional Advertising
at Regional Rates
in
The Christian Science Monitor
An International Daily Newspaper
Publishing SELECTED ADVERTISING
ATLANTIC, CENTRAL and PACIFIC Editions
Rates and Circulation Data Supplied on Request

ADVERTISING OFFICES

Boston	New York	Kansas City
Philadelphia	London	San Francisco
Chicago	Paris	Los Angeles
Cleveland	Florence	Seattle
Detroit		Portland

"Buy What You Can Use"

MICHIGAN
is growing faster than any State in the Union.

Its increase in manufacturing products surpasses anything in the world.

BOOTH NEWSPAPERS
cover Michigan outside of Detroit—Eight principal cities with the only or leading Newspaper in its respective community.

The Grand Rapids Press
The Flint Daily Journal
The Saginaw News Courier
The Kalamazoo Gazette
The Jackson Citizen Patriot
The Bay City Times Tribune
The Muskegon Chronicle
The Ann Arbor Times News

National Advertising Representatives
I. A. KLEIN, 50 East 42nd St., New York City
J. E. LUTZ, Tower Building, Chicago, Ill.

Do you know what percentage of errors are made in your Composing Room?

We suggest you go there and take fifty original proofs. Count up the number of lines and the number of errors. Get the percentage of errors to lines.

It takes twice as long to correct an error as it does to make it, so multiply this percentage by three.

Take this resultant percentage and apply it to your total Composing Room payroll for the year. See how much money errors are costing you.

When you find out what they cost you write and tell us the amount. We will show you a source of profit you have never heard of.

Matrix Contrast Corp.
33 W. 42d St., New York City

The Los Angeles EVENING HERALD consistently carries more paid-advertising than any daily newspaper in the west

Representatives

New York	Chicago	San Francisco
Herb. W. Moloney	John H. Lederer	A. J. Norris Hill
604 Times Bldg.	910 Hearst Bldg.	710 Hearst Bldg.

first! in OHIO

13,126,090 Lines

Dispatch advertising record for the first seven months of 1926, exceeding other Columbus newspapers combined by 1,736,902 lines. For the first 6 months, Dispatch exceeded second largest Ohio newspaper by 2,047,726.

NET PAID CIRCULATION

CITY	55,812
SUBURBAN	26,973
COUNTRY	23,666
Total Daily Circulation	106,451

Columbus Dispatch
OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING

"MOST of us may be likened to a radiocasting station, as we are constantly sending out messages, with no exact knowledge of just how far away they are being received. It, therefore, behooves us to put on a consistently excellent program."—Christian Science Monitor.

* * *

SMALL TOWN FIELD CHANGING

"THE newspaper business is not overdone in small towns as it was formerly. Time was when it was not unusual to see three papers in a town of 2,000. I remember when Macon, Mo., for instance, had four papers, and the town was not as prosperous as it is now. Now it has only two papers, and both get fair rates on advertising."—Omar D. Gray, Editor, Sturgeon (Mo.) Leader.

* * *

CRIME NEWS MUST BE TOLD

"A COMMON criticism aimed at the press by religious people is on the score of over-emphasis of crime news. The hero worship of criminals, which thoughtful people so justly criticize, cannot be classed as information in a strict analysis of news values, but is really a vicious form of entertainment for the morbid. On the other hand, the publication of facts of crime and the actual details thereof are essentially information and very important information at that. Present day civilization must face the facts and it is the duty of the newspapers to present them, placing the emphasis of importance where their most conscientious judgment tells them it belongs."—Walter A. Strong, publisher, Chicago Daily News.

* * *

A DANGEROUS OFFER

"DOUBLE CHECKS for instilling propaganda relating to advertised products into free-lance articles may appear alluring to the writer, but forward-looking journalists should be counseled to close their ears against the siren call. Such offers are bound to become known to the editors and it can be seen that the writer who even submits an article featuring the product which seeks publicity in this manner subjects himself to suspicion, and may find himself 'blacklisted.' If the writer has succeeded in 'putting over' such an article and is later found out, so much the worse for his future chances with the chagrined editor. Leave such offers alone; they are dangerous."—Editorial, The Author and Journalist.

AFFIRMS SOUTH'S PROSPERITY

Cashman, Vicksburg (Miss.) Post Publisher, Visits New York

Another affirmation of the South's prosperity was made this week by Louis P. Cashman, publisher of the Vicksburg (Miss.) Post, who was in New York on a vacation trip with Mrs. Cashman.

"The South has all the natural resources necessary for its development; what is needed most at the present time is more population," Mr. Cashman said.

The coast section of Mississippi is booming as a resort section; he declared all parts of the state are reporting good business.

Mr. Cashman's paper recently staged a "Treasure Hunt" in Vicksburg as a local advertising stunt, in which nearly all of the city's merchants participated. The firms donated a large prize list. On the day of the hunt, all copies of the Post were numbered. Numbers picked at random were placed on the prizes, each merchant prominently displaying the prizes he had donated in his store. Readers of the Post then went from store to store comparing the number on their paper with the numbers on the prizes. Holders of corresponding numbers won the prizes.

"This stunt was a tremendous success, and hundreds of people visited the stores," the Vicksburg publisher said. "Of course, it is a lottery, but a fine scheme for use in city circulated papers.

Mr. and Mrs. Cashman will visit Montreal and Chicago before returning to Vicksburg.

MONROVIA NEWS OPENS HOME

The Monrovia (Cal.) News made the furnishing of California election returns Aug. 31, the occasion for holding open house, welcoming the public to its new building completed a year ago this time. Refreshments were served.

NEW OIL TOWN WEEKLY

W. D. Riser, former editor of the Big Lake (Tex.) News, is launching a new weekly, the Upton County Record, at McCamey, a new Texas oil town.

Sell any mechanical cast-off in EDITOR & PUBLISHER classified columns.

J. A. PARK, S.N.P.A. CHIEF, TOURING SOUTH

Publisher of Raleigh Times Heading "Better Paper" Drive—Will Visit Publishers as Far South as Galveston, Tex—Left Sept. 8

John A. Park, publisher of the Raleigh (N. C.) Times, and president of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association, left Raleigh Sept. 8, to tour the southern states in the interests of the S. N. P. A. One of the chief purposes of the trip is for the betterment of southern newspapers. Mr. Park will also discuss with publishers plans for defense of the agency-federal trade commission suit, which, if successful, would have the effect of eliminating advertising agencies.

JOHN A. PARK

Other plans which will receive the attention of the president include:

Modification of libel laws.

Standardization of business records and reports for comparison and interchanging of information.

Progress toward a higher standard of mechanical equipment, management, and employes.

Newspaper "clinics" in every state for intimate discussion of operations.

Commemoration of the association's silver anniversary in the summer of 1927 with an appropriate convention program.

Before leaving on his trip Mr. Park said:

"Persistent efforts to make better newspapers of 200 active dailies in 14 southern states will be the dominant policy of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association during the year.

"I am consulting all directors and officers regarding the year's program, exchanging ideas and establishing lines of activity. Selling the south to southern newspapermen is a past performance now as evidenced by the extensive national advertising campaign that starts Sept. 1 in a large number of publications. The campaign was instigated and financed by southern newspaper publishers."

Mr. Park's itinerary follows:

September 8—Greensboro, September 9—Spartanburg, Greenville and Atlanta; September 10—Birmingham and Meridian. September 11—New Orleans. September 12—Houston and Galveston; September 13—Galveston and Houston; September 14—Dallas and Fort Worth; September 15—Oklahoma City. September 16—Fort Smith, Little Rock and Memphis. September 17—Memphis, Clarksville and Louisville. September 18—Charleston, W. Va., Clifton Forge, Va., and Lynchburg.

NEW YORK STATE

Westchester County's

Fastest Growing Cities

Mount Vernon and New Rochelle and The Vicinity Towns

Are Covered Completely by

THE DAILY ARGUS

of

Mount Vernon

THE STANDARD STAR

of

New Rochelle

Both Members of A. B. C.

Westchester Newspapers, Inc.

Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

GROWING IN IMPORTANCE

The Inter-Mountain territory of Utah, Idaho, Western Wyoming and Eastern Nevada is rapidly developing and becoming more important to the advertiser whose merchandise has national distribution.

Don't overlook this rich section of the West.

The Salt Lake Tribune

THE S. C. BECKWITH SPECIAL AGENCY

—Sole Eastern Agents—
New York—Chicago—Detroit
St. Louis—Kansas City
Atlanta

M. C. MOGENSEN & CO., INC.
Pacific Coast Representatives
San Francisco—Los Angeles—Seattle

MERCHANT & EVANS CO.

PHILADELPHIA

Producers of

SPARTAN TYPE METAL

Since 1866

LINO • MONO • STERO
INTERTYPE
COMBINATION

Stocks in Principal Cities have you been following the remarkable growth

of the Detroit Times

Parkersburg, W. Va.

is growing rapidly

A new $5,000,000 rayon plant and other new industries are now being constructed there.

The city and suburban territory is covered by

The News

Morning and Sunday

with a circulation of 7,500 daily and 9,000 Sunday at only 3 cents a line.

Member A. B. C.

Represented nationally by the
DEVINE-MacQUOID CO., Inc.
New York Pittsburgh Chicago

THE WELFARE COMMITTEE

of the

INTERNATIONAL CIRCULATION MANAGERS ASSOCIATION

Can supply you with competent circulation men of capacity and ability capable to take entire charge of your department or to fill important posts in the department.

Address the Secretary-Treasurer please, Mr. Clarence Eyster, care Star Building, Peoria, Ill.

'EN AND PENCIL CLUB OCCUPIES NEW HOME

hiladelphia Newspaper Organization Now Housed in Its Own $43,500 Clubhouse — Miss Philadelphia Present at Housewarming

The key that had unlocked the front oor of the Pen and Pencil Club of hiladelphia since May 13, 1894, jingled 1 the cobbles of a dark alley when Uncle Jimmy" Campbell, president and arter member, threw it away on uesday night, Aug. 31.

With a gold key a few minutes later

Pen and Pencil Club

iss Philadelphia, beauty contest winner, ilocked the front door of the club's new ome and its members crowded within. dream of nearly 35 years had been alized.

The Pen and Pencil Club, organized ec. 13, 1891, recently purchased its new ome for $43 500. It is a 3-story brick ilding at 1023 Spruce street within a ock of the old quarters at 1026 Walnut reet which the club had leased since ay, 1894, and affords more space and mfort for its members.

The housewarming Tuesday night was e third in the history of the organiza-on. The club's first home was in three per floors of a building at 133 South leventh street. The walls of the top oor were papered with "show bills" of e days when lurid ink was of more im-rtance than artistic effect.

Increasing its membership the club oved to other leased quarters at 1026 alnut street on May 13, 1894, where it mained until its removal last Thursday.

Frequently there were dinners in honor distinguished guests. Among these ests were President McKinley, Mark anna, Victor Herbert, "Gentleman Jim" orbett, and Robert Mantell. On one casion the four honor guests of a din-r were Henry Irving, Ellen Terry, hn Sullivan and Lottie Collins who ng her then famous "Ta Ra Ra Ra oom-de-a" song.

Publishers and owners of Philadelphia ewspapers often were the club's honor guests. Among those of earlier days were George W. Childs of the Public Ledger, Col. A. K. McClure of the Times, Col, James Elverson, Sr., of the Inquirer, William A. Singerly of the Record and Morton McMichael of the North American. Later Cyrus H. K. Curtis was an honor guest.

At the new home there was dancing, vaudeville and music by well known artists and one short speech by Ed Hoban, newspaper reporter, whose father was a charter member of the club.

Some of the charter members who still are engaged in the newspaper business are: Dan Patton of the Evening Public Ledger, Harry R. Nason, Sr., of the Inquirer, George A. Brennan of the Inquirer, and Henry Starr Richardson of the Evening Star.

PINKHAM PUTS OVER BIG PUBLICITY STUNT

Contest With Airplane Trips to California as Prizes Won Large Space in News Columns—Four Winners Named

A hasty decision by a woman to make a transcontinental flight was recently developed into one of the biggest free publicity stunts ever attempted by a nationally known advertiser. It was a scheme which would make the most professional of publicity experts envious. For several days Boston papers and other devoted columns upon columns of space under the guise of news to what was indirectly a huge advertisement for a woman's medicine.

Miss Lydia Pinkham Grove, granddaughter of Lydia Pinkham, known for her famous medicine, was visiting on the Pacific coast with relatives and friends. Miss Grove decided hastily to make a return trip by airplane, being the first woman to fly across the continent.

On her arrival in Salem, Mass., the Lydia Pinkham Laboratories took charge of all affairs, and the scheme was born. It was decided to run a contest for two college students, the prize winners to fly from Boston to Los Angeles. The company enlisted the aid of a Boston newspaper and the merry stunt was on its way. Other papers took interest and the front pages were soon telling the story of the contest. Reports said that thousands of letters were received from many states within the short space of three days. Because of the great interest displayed in the contest it was decided to extend the number of winners to four—two boys and two girls.

The letters were to state why the contestants desired to muke such a trip. The winners' letters were in a pleading vein and had effect.

The party started from Salem early Sept 7, with a huge banner "Lydia Pinkham Grove's Transcontinental Flight" displayed prominently. Some 25 automobiles paraded through the most crowded sections of Salem, Lynn, Revere and Chelsea on their way to Boston. Here several mayors of nearby cities, a governor's representative and presidents of Chambers of commerce made speeches, presented flowers and wished the contestants godspeed. Hundreds of students and other prominent business men were also on hand to share in the ceremonies.

Arthur Pinkham, directing head of the company, further added a purse of $500 to each of the boy winners to help defray their expenses. The girls left Boston by plane, while the young men left on the 20th Century Limited. They are to meet in California and will be entertained by civic and movie officials there. The boys will fly back to their homes, and the girls will return by train.

It is estimated the cost will run into thousands of dollars for the company, but it is conceded that it is very cheap advertising even at that price.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

EDITOR NEEDS HELP

To Editor & Publisher:—Editor & Publisher has been of remarkable value in calling attention of publishers to the issues involved in my contempt case and your efforts will eventually serve to clarify the situation.

Ordinarily the political, feudal and factional disturbances of a comparatively small community would be of no particular interest to the public at large, but since the larger issues in this case are so definitely woven into the fabric of Muncie's community life, conditions here assume an importance they otherwise would not have.

The danger in my case lies in the possibility of forgetfulness. The processes of the courts grind away while we beat the bushes for something new. Just now I am confronted with the actual mechanics of this business, which cannot be brushed aside or solved by rhetoric or published opinions concerning judicial censorship.

My lawyer, Mr. Rooker, is a good lawyer. Thus far he has used practically every dollar that has been raised from various sources. Part of it went for deposits. The first gun will be fired at Washington, Sept. 27, the attorney-general of the state of Indiana having been cited to appear before the Supreme Court of the United States on that date to show cause that the judgment should be affirmed. Rooker says he will need more money. I haven't got it. It seems to me that if publishers in general have any serious intent of participating they ought to get on the job at once. September 27 is only three weeks away. Can you suggest anything? I could have got a pardon, but refused to consider such a thing, preferring to stand fire and send the Indiana decision to the scrap heap, where it belongs.

Thanking you for your interest, I am.

Very truly yours,

Geo. R. Dale.

Muncie, Ind.

in Detroit—

Free Press circulation reaches 31,000 more than the total number of families owning their own homes.

The "Free Press"

"Starts the day in Detroit"

With a stable, uninflated, liberal pursed circulation productive of greater advertising returns at lower cost.

Buffalo, The Wonder City of America

Buffalo—a Profitable Market for Advertisers

Sales in Buffalo are splendid for advertised goods. Employment conditions excellent, retail and other business thriving. One newspaper will put your story over to 83% of the people—that paper is the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS

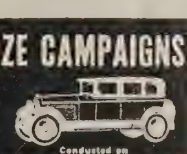
Read in 4 out of 5 Buffalo Homes

Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y. — Tribune Tower Chicago, Ill.
Atlantic Bldg. Philadelphia — Waterman Bldg. Boston

E. F. S.

Editors' Feature Service

Over 70 independent newspapers throughout the country subscribe to this fine daily service as a protection against rising feature costs.



Six Pages Daily
Illustrations in Mat Form

Write or wire for samples, price and territory.

Editors' Feature Service, Inc.
1819 Broadway, New York
Allied with Johnson Features, Inc.

AUTOMOBILE PRIZE CAMPAIGNS

Get the Circulation
Get the Money For It
Get it Quickly
Get it Right

Conducted on THE KENDALL PLAN

Contracts for
FALL and WINTER
CIRCULATION DRIVES
are being made
—NOW—
WIRE OR WRITE FOR DETAILS, REFERENCES OR SPECIMEN CONTRACT.

W. S. Kendall Company
104 NORTH BAILEY AVE.
LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY

GRAVURE SECTIONS PRINTED

SPECIAL AND REGULAR EDITIONS. MAGAZINE INSERTS AND COMMERCIAL WORK

Standard Gravure Corporation
LOUISVILLE KY

42 Football Training Talks

a daily series by Bud Hoban, running seven weeks, beginning September 6th.

Baltimore Evening Sun
heads our order list.

The International Syndicate
Baltimore, Md.

FARMERS' DISPATCH SUSPENDS

St. Paul Dailies Drop Publication of Agricultural Paper

The St. Paul Dispatch on Aug. 26, announced the suspension of the Farmers' Dispatch, published since 1868 by the Dispatch Printing Company and its predecessors. The subscription lists have been taken over by Farm Life of Spencer, Ind.

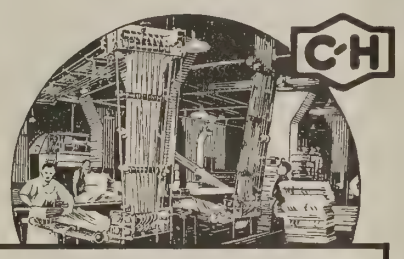
"The St. Paul Dispatch, the St. Paul Pioneer Press and the Sunday St. Paul Pioneer Press have grown so rapidly during the past few years that the Dispatch Printing Company has finally found it necessary to devote all its energy and attention to them, and to turn over to another publishing house, experienced in that field, the task of serving the readers of the Farmers' Dispatch," the formal announcement said.

The Farmers' Dispatch was the oldest farm paper in the Northwest.

50 YEARS ON NEWSPAPERS



George A. Fairfield, Northwest editor on the St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press, on August 31, terminated his day's work at the office by announcing that that concluded for him 50 years of unbroken service in the newspaper field. Mr. Fairfield started his newspaper career Aug. 31, 1876, on the old South Bend (Ind.) Register as a cub, and since that time has run the gamut of newspaper work from cellar to attic.

PUBLICITY HURT INDIAN GUIDE

The unfavorable publicity received by Fred Beauvais, Indian guide, through the James A. Stillman divorce actions, has caused him to lose money and makes people shun his services as a guide, he alleged in a $500,000 libel suit filed against James A. Stillman in New York this week.

Supplies and Equipment

Rebuilt
GOSS & HOE
PRESS
BARGAINS
ALL TYPES
SEND for LIST
THE
GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO.
CHICAGO – NEW YORK – LONDON

Newspaper Conveyors

take the papers in a steady stream, as fast as the presses can deliver them, up, overhead, around corners, through a ceiling or a wall to wherever they're wanted for mailing or delivery. Eliminating waste and delay by their speedy, dependable operation they are profitable equipment for papers large or small. Newspaper plants from London to Tokio have been using them for years.

Let us tell you how you can speed deliveries from your presses.

The CUTLER-HAMMER Mfg. Co.
Pioneer Mfrs. of Electric Control Apparatus
1203 St. Paul Avenue
MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN
CUTLER-HAMMER

Don't "Pig" Metal
It Wastes Money

Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.

MONOMELT
SLUG FEEDER
Eliminates the Metal Furnace
The Monomelt Co.
4509-19 Ravenswood Ave.
Chicago Illinois
World Bldg., New York City

GOSS
STEREOTYPING MACHINERY
Carried in Stock

Fastest, most easily operated, most accurate and durable flat casting box you can buy. Perfectly balanced. New design lock-up bar allows for quick change when regulating thickness of casts. Positive quick lock-up at four points on box with one lever movement. Write for complete catalog of Goss Stereotyping Machinery.

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

USED NEWSPAPER PRESSES

Scott 16, 24 and 32-Page Presses

GOSS 24 and 28-page presses good for black or color work, also Goss Sextuple.

HOE Pony Quadruple, Quadruple, Sextuple, Sextuple color Press, Octuple and Double Sextuple Presses.

DUPLEX Metropolitan Quadruple stereotype presses—print up to 32 pages.

Available For Early Delivery

WALTER SCOTT & COMPANY
Main Office & Factory.....Plainfield, N. J.
New York Office..Brokaw Bldg., 1457 Broadway
Chicago Office.....Monadnock Block

Modern
Composing Room Furniture

as made by us will speed up production and reduce costs—a real saving in your Pay Roll. Are you interested? If so, consult your regular dealer in printers' supplies or write us direct.

Do it now!

HAMILTON MFG. CO.
TWO RIVERS, WIS.

A copy of EDITOR & PUBLISHER reaches practically every Publisher and his executives. Your advertisement in its columns is a salesman every present—backed by the prestige gained and maintained by this publication in every newspaper office.

Hoe Combined Saw Table and Mono-Rail Trimmer

This Machine combines the advantages of the Hoe Pedestal Saw Table and the Hoe Mono-Rail Trimmer.

The Trimmer is supplied with either Style "A" Cutter Head for trimming Wood Blocks or Style "B" for extra heavy cutting on Zinc or Copper. The Hoe Patented Mono-Rail principle allows the Operator to follow the work beyond the Cutter Head permitting more speed and greater accuracy in trimming Wood or Metal Blocks of varied sizes.

IF IT'S A HOE, IT'S THE BEST

R. HOE & CO., INC., 504 Grand Street, New York, N. Y.
7 So. Dearborn Street, CHICAGO, ILL. 7 Water Street, BOSTON, MASS.

Classified

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Classified Advertising Information

TRANSIENT RATES

SITUATIONS (Cash with Order)
1 Time — .40 per line
3 Times — .30 per line

ALL OTHER CLASSIFICATIONS
(Cash with Order)
1 Time — .60 per line
4 Times — .55 per line

White space charge at same rate per line p insertion as earned by frequency of insertic Special rates quoted for 13, 26 and 52 insertio The Editor & Publisher reserves the right classify, edit or reject any advertisement.

COUNT SIX WORDS TO LINE

ADVERTISING

General Promotion

Advertising Promotion—If you want mc business, communicate with the Internatio Publications Service, Incorporated, Suite 10 1841 Broadway, New York City.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIE

Brokers

Big Bargain for Quick Buyer—Populati 15,000; circulation 2100; gross business arou $25,000; plant modern and adequate; pr $14,000; initial payment only $5,000. J. Shale, Times Bldg., New York.

The H. F. Henrichs Agency, Litchfield, I 1012 Times Building, New York; 1216 H lingsworth Building, Los Angeles. Your des to acquire a newspaper, or any dissatisfacti in the newspaper situation in your communi should be reported to this Agency for sat factory solution.

Newspapers Wanted

Daily Wanted in Small City, with futu P. O. Box 382, Green Bay, Wis.

CIRCULATION

Promotion

Circulation—When quick, additional circulat coverage becomes necessary, remember that twenty years in this one line of endeavor your proof against experimenting. Write wire Pacific Coast Circulation Service, I Block, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Circulation Builders—Blair & Austin, 1504 C tre Ave., Reading, Penn. Originators of Sal manship Club Campaigns.

Build Circulation—Try our "Opportunity Clu Plan. Sherman & Eckert, 353 Northampt Street, Easton, Penna.

Premiums

Publishers-Circulation Managers. We offer special new dinner set that can be used at price that will attract circulation, yet pay promotion cost. The Albright China Co., I myra, N. J.

EDITORIAL

Syndicate Features

I want to get in touch with some big new paper, syndicate or person to furnish a da column of original humor. Address A-7 Editor & Publisher.

The Scranton Sun and Los Angeles News the new customers this week. For samples a live, alert, up-to-date service, write T Graphic Syndicate, 25 City Hall Place, N York.

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

Advertising Manager in Canada—Only daily small city in Ontario, Canada, wants man character to take charge of local advertisi Must be effective copywriter and salesma Field demands hard worker. Results will rewarded. Write freely as replies will be h in strict confidence. A-777, Editor & Publish Advertising Solicitor and Copy Writer want for daily in city of 18,000 in central New Yo Want capable, reliable man, steady habits, perienced in business, good personality, init tive, energy. Pay $40.00 week and bon References required, full statement of expe ence. If possible send photograph. A-9 Editor & Publisher.

Employment—Equipment—Services

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

dvertising Salesman Wanted; must be experi- nced, good appearance, good reputation. Per- anent position with old established newspaper Tennessee city, 25,000. No fancy salaries, ut city growing rapidly, and excellent oppor- nity, steady advancement. Tell all first let- r. Address Box A-896, Editor & Publisher.

dvertising Solicitor, experienced, must be able write selling copy. Submit full qualifica- ons in first letter, age, salary, references, etc. Write Mr. Beem, Waterloo Tribune, Waterloo, owa.

dvertisement Writer and Solicitor wanted by outhern morning paper. Man must be able write first-class advertisements for retail tores, and sell his own copy to the stores. ermanent position. Salary $50.00 per week start, quick advancement if deserved. Ad- ress A-903, Editor & Publisher.

dvertising Solicitors—Wanted, for a large ewspaper property in a city of one-million in- abitants, advertising solicitors who have had xperience in difficult selling. We don't want en who have been on successful papers, they re usually soft. We want men who accept hard fight as the ordinary proposition. Write Box A-922, Editor & Publisher, stating what ou are now doing and what salary you would ant.

irculation Campaign Field Men wanted. Our rganization, handling the largest and most uccessful circulation campaigns in the United tates, now enlarging present personnel, has penings for high-class men with circulation r contest experience. Must have excellent eferences. No floaters or boozers considered. rite or wire care Hollister Circulation Organ- zation, Ohio State Journal, Columbus, Ohio.

irculation—Middle West newspaper, 11,000 cir- ulation wants assistant to circulation manager. Must have experience in building carrier circu- ation that holds. No premiums or contests. A-920, Editor & Publisher.

irculation: Want to get in touch with young an with some experience in circulation work, referably both in office and on country circu- ation, but who does not assume to know all bout it, but is anxious to work up. Paper bout 20,000 circulation in north central State. ddress A-907, Editor & Publisher, stating age, xperience and starting salary required.

ity Editor wanted by morning newspaper ith over 11,000 circulation. Must be young, illing to settle in progressive mid-west city of 0,000; have reportorial and executive ability; ep enough to organize and get the best out f his staff; and be able to adapt the latest nd best in modern newspaper making to local onditions. Salary $55, starting at $40. Write A-919, Editor & Publisher.

ity Editor Wanted: Who is not afraid to work ng hours, who is capable of producing lots of opy himself and also handling reporters on oth papers. Write, stating age, lodge, church ffiliations, single or married, education, ex- erience and reference. Position will pay $40 right man. Evening News and Morning ribune. Blackwell, Okla.

opy writer, experienced. We want a copy riter for our advertising department to write mpaigns for regular advertisers, prepare lay- uts and copy for our solicitors to sell to non- dvertisers. Morning and evening combination aper in Pennsylvania city of 45,000. Write etails, past experience, present position, refer- nces, salary expected. Also submit samples of y-outs and copy. A-895, Editor & Publisher.

lassified Advertising Solicitor wanted, pref- rably one who desires an opportunity to de- elop classified advertising in a newspaper of 0,000 circulation. Small salary to start but be increased as the business increases. Write ox A-902, Editor & Publisher.

lumorist Wanted—Capable of writing Comic trip Copy for a Flapper or Family Strip in operation with a cartoonist with snappy tech- ique. Will split proceeds. Send samples of opy. A-906, Editor & Publisher.

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

Experienced Sports Editor wanted. Wire R. S. Tofflemire, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Republican.

Night Editor to take charge of news room on morning paper. Will pay $40.00 to start. Want man who will develop into managing editor. State age, experience, church and lodge affiliations in first letter. A-789, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter—Weekly wants outside man. State all in first letter. A-911, Editor & Publisher.

Salesman who thoroughly understands editorial problems wanted to sell editorial service to newspapers and magazines; a sound, sensible man, rather than salesmanship school type. Product to be sold is unique and there is no competition. Easy to sell to thoughtful editors, hard to sell to others. Salary and commission. Man employed will spend most of time traveling. Give complete information in first letter. Address A-905, Editor & Publisher.

Solicitor—Weekly has fine field for advertising solicitor. Commission. Reference. A-912, Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

Advertising Manager—Can take charge of staff and produce results. At liberty Sept. 15. $75. A-898, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager—Business builder seeks new connection. Any location. Any size paper. Write me. A-915, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Man. 12 years' practical training in all branches of newspaper advertising, seeks connection with growing paper, preferably in Pacific Coast territory. Competent executive, consistent business builder. Would buy interest under favorable conditions. Best of references. Make me a proposition. C. E. Kirk, Sioux City, Ia.

Advertising Man desires connection with live newspaper or other organization. Fifteen years' copy and layout experience. A-916, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager with record of accomplishments and unusual constructive and creative experience on morning and evening newspapers published in cities of 50,000 to 500,000, population, seeks the advertising management of newspaper in need of the services he is competent to render. Is willing to buy an interest. Has $10,000 cash. For particulars address A-917, Editor & Publisher.

Business Manager of wide experience and unbeatable record as organizer and business and circulation getter, seeks wider field with greater opportunity than he has at present. A-770, Editor & Publisher.

Business Manager or assistant to publisher. Successful record of seven years in newspaper work. Know sales, promotion, credits, accounting, and costs in all departments. Losses from bad debts less than one half of one per cent. What is your loss? A natural leader and can get things done profitably. My all 'round knowledge and experience will be invaluable to some busy executive. Now employed but have satisfactory reason for change. Let me give you additional information. Address A-762, Editor & Publisher.

Business Manager—Can act as assistant to publisher. Know how to get results from each department. Age 32. Fifteen years in business. References. A-899, Editor & Publisher.

Business Manager or assistant to Publisher. Accountant, College education. An analyst who believes in maximum results with minimum expense. Knows costs and can find the leaks. Thorough knowledge in circulation, promotion, advertising and credits. A-921, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager, with record of accomplishment. Know promotion, office routine, A. B. C. and mailing. A 1 reference. A-757, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation and Promotion Manager. Fast, clean promotion manager, specialty home delivery installation and building. Well versed circulation executive. Trained in Hearst and Scripps Howard organizations; excellent references. Salary $5,720. Located Atlantic Seaboard. Conference and go anywhere in U. S. Address Circulator, Box 203, Palmyra, N. J.

Circulation Manager—Mr. Publisher, are you in need of a circulation manager who can get results? Have made 100% gain in one year on paper now connected—within one year. Desire change on account climate. Best of references. Nineteen years' experience. Settled. Have family. A-901, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Builder—Newsdealers, newsboys and home delivery expert wants position on established evening newspaper in town over 100,000 population. At present employed, but can make myself available in thirty days. A-900, Editor & Publisher.

City Editor—Fifteen years' experience. Can come on two weeks' notice. $60. A-897, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager—Eight years' experience in north central big city. Know every branch of the work. Hard worker and capable. Will go anywhere. Married; Christian. A-761, Editor & Publisher.

EMPLOYMENT

Situations Wanted

Classified Manager, with 6 years' experience in management of full department in newspaper of 40,000 circulation, in city of 200,000 population; can show record of steady, permanent growth of volume and can prove my ability to promote increased classified patronage for any good newspaper. Familiar with Smith system and acquainted with sound methods of promoting business that sticks; can manage detail and bookkeeping. If your newspaper needs a live, hard-working classified executive to build up that department don't fail to write me now. A-910, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Cartoonist, well known to publishers as a creative producer, formerly staff cartoonist on two New York papers, seeks opening where his forceful individuality can win and hold circulation.

This man can be relied upon to do his own thinking; to interpret the panorama of events vividly, intelligently; to challenge national recognition of a paper's editorial policies.

At present earning $9,000 yearly but would make substantial sacrifice for a place with independent, alert organization. Address, Box A-746, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Writer, Foreign Editor or Managing Editor, 30, University Graduate, Wilsonian Democrat. Best references. A-787, Editor & Publisher.

Editor or Managing Editor—Experienced and successful editor seeks position on smaller paper from three to eleven thousand circulation. West preferred. Married. Eight years editorial experience since completing college. References. A-780, Editor & Publisher.

Editor—Now completing 15 years' engagement as researcher, writer and editor for I. N. Phelps Stoke's Iconography of Manhattan Island, desires responsible new position in New York City as editor of magazine, encyclopedia, or book of local history or biography. Skilled organizer and executive; American, Christian, university graduate. Address, Thomas W. Hotchkiss, Box 248, Peekskill, N. Y.

Experienced Interviewer and Feature Writer; ambition, youth, college education. Position as reporter in any part of the country. A-890, Editor & Publisher.

Feature Writer, theater book, art editor, reporter for daily or publishers. Two years newspaper experience. University Graduate. Wide reader. Magazine experience. Now on city daily. Woman with originality, ambition. Address Box A-769, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor—Varied experience on small and large dailies; now employed; seeks change. No territorial limitations. Will be at liberty on short notice. A-763, Editor & Publisher.

Mature Newspaper man, experienced in every phase of newspaper production with record as newspaper builder and as an effective editorial writer is open for engagement as business or general manager, or editorial writer on a substantial newspaper. Address Charles I. Stewart, President, W. S. Welsh Printing Company, Lexington, Ky.

Mechanical Superintendent or Foreman of composing room wants to get located with good paper. Good reason for wanting to change present position. Best references as to character and ability. A-914, Editor & Publisher.

Political Correspondent and editorial writer, Republican, wishes position on Eastern or Middle Western newspaper. A-768, Editor & Publisher.

Press Erector, thoroughly reliable, with expert knowledge of tubular and semi-cylindrical press work, wishes to get on as working mechanical superintendent with newspaper plant, or will consider erecting any make of presses. Box A-909, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter-Desk-Sports editor: Want midwestern city up to 25,000. University graduate. Now employed. Moderate salary to start. A-778, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter-Desk Position. Young man, six years' experience reporting, feature writing, sports, copy reader, news editor, city editor. University education. Opportunity for advancement first consideration. Immediately available. References. A-904, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter—Journalism school graduate; writes clear and forceful English; lots of imagination. Will devote myself wholeheartedly to the work. Willing to start low salary. O. Henry Goodman, 221 New Lots Ave., Brooklyn, New York.

Where is the Publisher who wants an Editor with the zest of youth but with the sanity of experience?
I am twenty-six, eight years a New York daily reporter and editor, and now employed. I have college training and experience covering news fields ranging from the criminal courts to real estate and from sports to politics. Or what have you? A-782, Editor & Publisher.

MECHANICAL

Equipment for Sale

Complete Newspaper Plant for sale. Two tubular duplex presses with stereotype equipment; seven intertype machines; photographic and photo engraving departments located San Francisco; Wesel saw and planer and photo engraving plant, Miami, Florida. Whole or in part as is, where is. Address John W. Brodix, receiver. Vanderbilt Newspapers, Inc., 56 Twelfth street, San Francisco, Calif.

Cox Duplex Perfecting Press cheap for quick sale. Midway Driller, Taft, Calif.

For Sale—Direct Current, 220 volt, 50 hp. Press Drive and control at a great bargain for delivery about Oct. 1. All in perfect condition and with an extra new armature which alone cost $550. For price and terms write The Zanesville Publishing Company, Zanesville, O.

Job Presses, Paper Cutters, Wire Stitchers, etc.—A complete line. Overhauled and guaranteed machines at bargain prices. Easy terms. Hoffmann Type & Engraving Co., 114 E. 13th St., N. Y. City.

Printers', Bookbinders' Outfitters—Modern cut-cost equipment, also rebuilt machinery. Conner, Fendler Branch, A. T. F. Co., New York City.

Photo-Engraving plant for sale. Ideal for one or two men. Miles Machinery Co., 409 W. 26th St., New York.

Used Goss Matt Roller for wet mats only, for sale cheap. The Goss Printing Press Co., 1535 So. Paulina St., Chicago, Ill.

Equipment Wanted

All Kinds of Photo-Engraving, electrotyping and stereotyping equipment wanted. We pay cash. Miles Machinery Co., 409 W. 26th St., New York.

For Sale—Miscellaneous

Camera, Graflex, 5x7; lens f4.5, B&L Ic Tessar; perfect condition, not old, has plate magazine; $100. (Listed over $200.) Dana, 1416 20th St., Washington.

Newspaper Properties

Bought, Sold and Appraised.
All negotiations confidential.

PALMER, DEWITT & PALMER

350 Madison Ave., New York
Business Established in 1899.

CONSOLIDATION

The merging of newspaper interests is a subject that has received special study and investigation by this firm for nearly 17 years. It is a big subject and requires considerable technical knowledge, both as to valuation and operating methods. When properly organized, the results are never disappointing.

We have been factors in many important consolidations, sales and appraisals.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

WE ARE MOVING

On September first into Springfield's newest and finest office building. Please note our new address:

509-511 Security Bldg.
44 Vernon St.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
SECURITY BLDG. SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

DOLLAR $ $ $ $ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

ON Sept. 1 the Western Union announced that it would no longer give time reports to telephone calls. Telephone companies had previously discontinued the practice, leaving the public in Wabash, Ind., without any place to get the correct time over telephone. As soon as wire announcement of the Western Union action had been received, the Plain Dealer had a third Western Union clock placed in its office and announced that correct time reports would be given anyone calling the office for them. The clock was placed directly over the telephone switchboard in order that the switchboard operator could answer the time queries. We expect it to be the cheapest advertising we ever got.—E. W. H., Wabash, Ind.

"Brighten Your House Over Sunday with Flowers," and "When You Stay at Home, Make it More Cheerful with Flowers," or "Make Your Home a Flower Garden for Sunday!" Write a small piece of copy around these headlines, paste a proof of a flower cut over the top, and letter-in the florist's name below. Then take these layouts and sell your florist a series of Friday ads for several weeks to come. This has been done and you can do it, too!—Ralph Gibler, Huntington, Ind.

Each Wednesday afternoon, the Louisville Times carries a "Truth Campaign" page, paid for by the Louisville retail druggists. The page advertisement features the importance of the retail druggist to the community in the text and carries the names of all the retail druggists and wholesalers or manufacturing co-operating in the campaign in parallel columns along each side of the page and at the bottom. This form of co-operative advertising may be applied profitably to other trades with a message to put over to the public. Very few merchants in town could afford to "stay out" on a proposition of this kind.—D. F., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Papers which charge for memorial notices can increase advertising receipts by listing deaths and a week before first anniversary calling attention of relatives to the policy of running brief memorials. —D. T. M.

"Fall is just around the corner," warn nine Rockford cleaners and dyers in a half page group advertisement in the Rockford (Ill.) Morning Star, stressing the timely need for cleaning, pressing, repairing and remodeling of clothes and the cleaning and dyeing of rugs, draperies and blankets.—F. D. H., Rockford, Ill.

The idea of having Christmas cards individualized through the use of pictures of homes which are designed by artists to look as though they were covered by snow, or through the use of other individual designs, is growing. Cash in on this fact by getting local printers and artists to come in on a page this fall devoted to ads of concerns which are equipped to turn out individualized Christmas cards for local people.—Frank H. Williams.

Your weekly and semi-weekly auction houses which depend almost entirely on classified space should take display space whenever they have the contents of some outstanding residence, a big estate, hotel, or other property in which there is more than usual interest. A little attention and cultivation on the part of the advertising solicitor may educate the auctioneer to the frequent use of display space so that more people will attend the auction and better prices will be obtained for the material offered.—C. M. L., Seattle, Wash.

Does one of the banks in your city operate a real estate department? A bank in Huntington, Ind., has a regular real estate department with a realtor at its head. It is a consistent advertiser in the newspaper. Suggest such a department to your banker as a means of handling the bank's real estate and developing new business and more customers. Then get the advertising. About five inches every day can be obtained in this way. Use a layout in making the sale!—Ralph Gibler, Huntington, Ind.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "H U N C H" PUBLISHED

THE state of Massachusetts recently passed a new firearm law. It is now practically impossible to purchase a revolver in that state. Two of the largest mail order houses in the country have taken revolvers from their catalogues. What is the situation in your state and is the firearm menace a real one there? Here is a good feature story with but little trouble.—C. E. Pellissier, Boston.

To enliven interest in the newspaper, run each day a number of views by a certain class of readers. Have your doctors tell why they read your newspaper, and what they like best therein. They may, incidentally, have suggestions as to possible improvements, which should help the publisher in making future changes. On another day grocers' comments might be given, then butchers', and so on. Photos might accompany readers' observations. The women should not be overlooked. People naturally would look forward to the paper, watching particularly for comments of readers representing the class they are most interested in. On the whole, the observations would give the publisher an interesting sidelight on his newspaper.—Frank V. Faulhaber.

Garages are always a good source of news as well as good will maker. Have a mechanic give an interview on "Why Cars Go Wrong." If the story is hooked up with a local name, it carries more interest than columns of clipped motor news.—R. Buckingham, Austin, Minn.

The Denver Post recently inaugurated a popular contest. Groups of pictures, taken in nearby National parks, are run in each Sunday's auto section. Prizes are given for the best limericks written around the scenes depicted.—M. S. M., Denver.

The Little Rock (Ark.) Arkansas Gazette has a Sunday column on the editorial page entitled "The Arkansas Traveler," in which miscellaneous paragraphs, written by Fletcher Shinault, are published. Mr. Shinault has been traveling over the state of Arkansas for The Gazette for several months and furnishing daily feature stories. The items used in the Sunday column are odds and ends and interesting comments.—R. S. West.

Interview club women and welfare agencies on Rupert Hughes' recently-advanced theory that children, especially of the poor, should be taken away from their parents and "placed in great paradises where they will have all advantages, care being assumed by the state." This made a warmly interesting yarn for the Denver Post recently.—M. S. M., Denver.

Daily play is given by the Lawton (Okla.) Constitution to interviews with two leading business men of the city stating their views regarding business prospects for the winter.—R. N. Swanson.

COMPLETE WIRE REPORTS FOR EVENING AND SUNDAY PAPERS

International News Service

"Get It FIRST but First Get It RIGHT"

63 Park Row
NEW YORK CITY

SOLVING THE LOCAL LINEAGE PROBLEM

The most prominent newspapers in all parts of America are using Briggs Feature Pages regularly. The Briggs plan develops new Business, new accounts in your local field. Not "one-shot" advertisers, but steady, profitable repeaters.

Our representative will tell you all about it—no obligation.

Just drop us a line.

THOS. W. BRIGGS CO.
Columbian Mutual Tower Bldg.
MEMPHIS, TENN.

MYRA

Her migration to New York from her small-town middle-western home—

Her struggles—

Her tribulations—

Her triumphs and disasters—leading to a climax unescapable, but entirely satisfying, from a chronicle of life and its compromises which will prove most fascinating to your readers.

A fiction story of real life today
By MABEL GREENE

Especially written for and offered for serial publication by

The McClure Newspaper Syndicate
373 Fourth Avenue, New York City

How To Play GOLF
By JOHNNY FARRELL
Famous Teacher of That Game

24 LESSONS
Illustrated

For release daily

KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, Inc.
New York City

The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service

Supplying a complete and exclusive daily illustrated feature service to newspapers throughout the United States and in foreign countries.

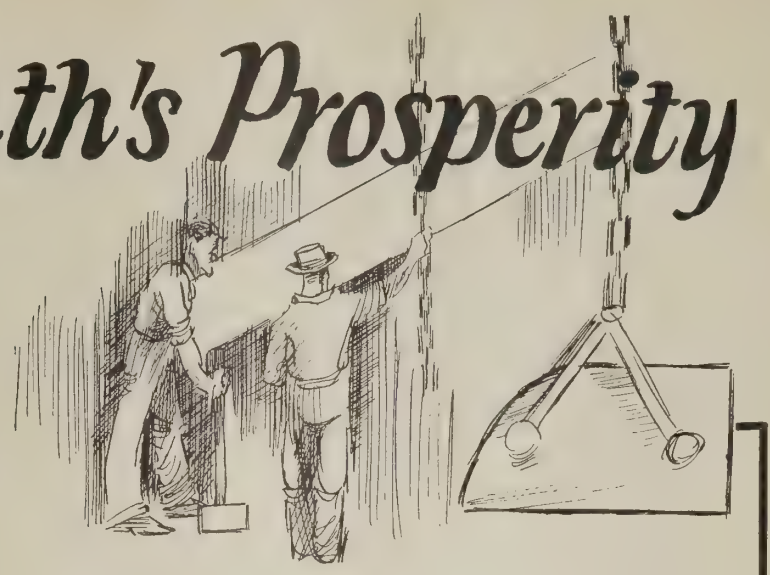
4 page ready-print color comics.
Write for samples and rates

NEA SERVICE INC. 1200 W. 3RD STREET, CLEVELAND, OHIO

BY UNITED PRESS

AROUND THE WORLD AROUND THE CLOCK

UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS
World Building New York



AGAIN
A Great Roosevelt Series
Weekly Release

Most Americans remember the late Colonel Roosevelt's vivid account of his adventures in Africa and South America. They have followed with lively interest the expedition which his sons, Theodore and Kermit, made to the remote Himalayas last summer. The latter have written an enthralling story of what befell them, and the Cosmos Syndicate is happy to offer the first newspaper rights. These articles will be fully illustrated.

COSMOS NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE INC.
Covering the World
NINE EAST THIRTY-SEVENTH STREET NEW YORK CITY

Herbert S. Houston, President and Editor-in-Chief
Myles F. Lasker, Vice-President and General Manager

Why The South's Prosperity first— LABOR

Labor has been one of the factors that has brought about the South's Prosperity. The Southern worker, in the majority, is of Anglo-Saxon extraction, possessing a latent technical skill which makes him adaptable to any industry. He is a sober, industrious employee, who earns good wages, and lives very comfortably in a community that breeds contentment.

The Universal use of the English language is the greatest protection against labor troubles in this territory. The latest statistics show that of the total population in the entire area the percentage of native whites runs well over 60% of the population—with a negligible factor averaging less than 2% foreign born—the negro being attracted by the high wages paid by the new growing industries has become an important part of the South's great army of wage earners.

Greater income means greater buying power. Take advantage of the New South's prosperity—Establish your product in this market. Let these newspapers listed below help you.

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
ALABAMA
*Birmingham Age-Herald ....(M)	34,994	.09	.09
*Birmingham Age-Herald ....(S)	50,699	.11	.11
*Mobile News-Item ....(E)	11,993	.05	.05
*Mobile Register ....(M)	20,427	.08	.08
*Mobile Register ....(S)	32,096	.10	.10
FLORIDA
*Daytona Beach News....(ES)	6,302	.04	.04
*Florida Times-Union (M) 49,903....(S)	59,239	.12(S.15)	.12(S.15)
*Lakeland Ledger ....(E)	5,173	.03	.03
*Miami Herald ....(M)	48,108	.11	.11
*Miami Herald ....(S)	60,006	.12	.12
*Orlando Reporter-Star ....(E)	8,502	.06	.06
*Orlando Sentinel ....(M&S)	10,655	.06	.06
*Pensacola News and Journal....(E&M)	9,805	.07	.07
†St. Augustine Record....(E&S)	3,382	.04	.04
†St. Petersburg Independent....(E)	11,917	.055	.055
*Tampa Times ....(E)	23,325	.08	.08
†Tampa Tribune (M) 34,841....(S)	53,762	.10(.14S)	.10(.14S)
*West Palm Beach Post....(M)	12,243	.06	.06
GEORGIA
*Augusta Herald ....(E)	14,246	.05	.05
*Augusta Herald ....(S)	14,547	.05	.05
*Macon Telegraph ....(M)	24,035	.08	.08
*Macon Telegraph ....(S)	24,439	.08	.08
Savannah Morning News (M), 21,015.(S)	22,204	.06(.07S)	.06(.07S)
KENTUCKY
*The Lexington Leader....(E)	19,640	.06	.06
*The Lexington Leader....(S)	19,531	.06	.06
*Paducah Sun ....(E)	9,256	.04	.04

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
NORTH CAROLINA
†Greensboro Daily News....(M)	27,485	.08	.07
†Greensboro Daily News....(S)	31,505	.09	.08
*Salisbury Post ....(E)	7,188	.04	.04
†Winston-Salem Journal ....(M)	13,702	.05	.05
†Winston-Salem Journal ....(S)	13,720	.05	.05
*Winston-Salem Sentinel ....(E)	18,259	.07	.07
SOUTH CAROLINA
*Columbia State ....(M)	23,186	.07	.07
*Columbia State ....(S)	24,870	.07	.07
*Greenville News ....(M)	21,648	.075	.07
*Spartanburg Journal ....(E)	4,613 }	.05	.05
*Spartanburg Herald (M) 6,860....(S)	9,856 }
TENNESSEE
*Chattanooga Times ....(M)	29,184	.10	.10
*Chattanooga Times ....(S)	28,942	.10	.10
*Memphis Commercial Appeal....(M)	100,934	.18	.18
*Memphis Commercial Appeal....(S)	129,219	.21	.21
*Nashville Banner ....(E)	54,519	.11	.11
*Nashville Banner ....(S)	56,007	.12	.12
VIRGINIA
*Danville Register and Bee....(M&E)	14,313	.06	.06
*Danville Bee and Register....(E&S)	9,065	.09	.07
*Newport News Times-Herald ....(E)	7,968 }	.05	.05
*Newport News Daily Press....(S&M)	5,413 }
*Roanoke Times & World News...(M&E)	25,772	.08	.08
*Roanoke Times ....(S)	16,076	.07	.07
*Staunton News-Leader (M), Leader..(E)	6,855	.035	.035

* A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1926.
† Government Statement, March 31, 1926.

Your National Staff

FIRE!

A general alarm—entire business section threatened—page one scrapped and presses waiting for the "lead" from the men inside the ropes..... Here it comes, scribbled on copy paper, rushed in by a panting messenger boy—a big exclusive story.

No strange phenomenon this, on an enterprising newspaper, but suppose, if it isn't too hard a job, that this same story and all the other stories from the rest of the staff representing the utmost in brain and leg work an energetic newspaper can produce, were sent to the opposition paper, too!

Absurd? Of course! Whoever heard of sharing a local staff!

But what about your National staff?

Furnishing a newspaper with a national staff of writers whose writings no local competitor can reprint has been the policy of the Consolidated Press from its beginning.

This service is yours: leased wires, field and staff force, world-encircling facilities, all belong to you.

The writers are as much a part of your paper as your own reporters. Their stories bear no label, carry no stamp of standardization. They cannot be shared by your competitor.

Such is the service, unique in American journalism, rendered to the newspapers holding the franchise of The Consolidated Press Association.

o o o

The Consolidated Press Association

Executive Offices, Evening Star Building, Washington, D. C.

New York	Chicago	San Francisco	Paris
Eighth Floor	Third Floor	Third Floor	Fourth Floor
World Building	Daily News Building	Bulletin Building	19 Rue d'Antin

THIS ISSUE: OCHS DESCRIBES JOURNALISM'S BESETTING SIN IN INTERVIEW.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1926

SUITE 1700 TIMES BUILDING, NEW YORK
42ND STREET AND BROADWAY.

MEMBER A.B.C.

MEMBER A.B.P.

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; Newspaperdom, March, 1892; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Advertising, February 7, 1925; Revised entry, Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916, at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Vol. 59. No. 17 NEW YORK, SEPTEMBER 18, 1926 By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A. $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign 10c Per Copy

JOURNALISM LIBRARY
Not to be taken from this room

Carrying More Than 50% of Lever Brothers Company Advertising

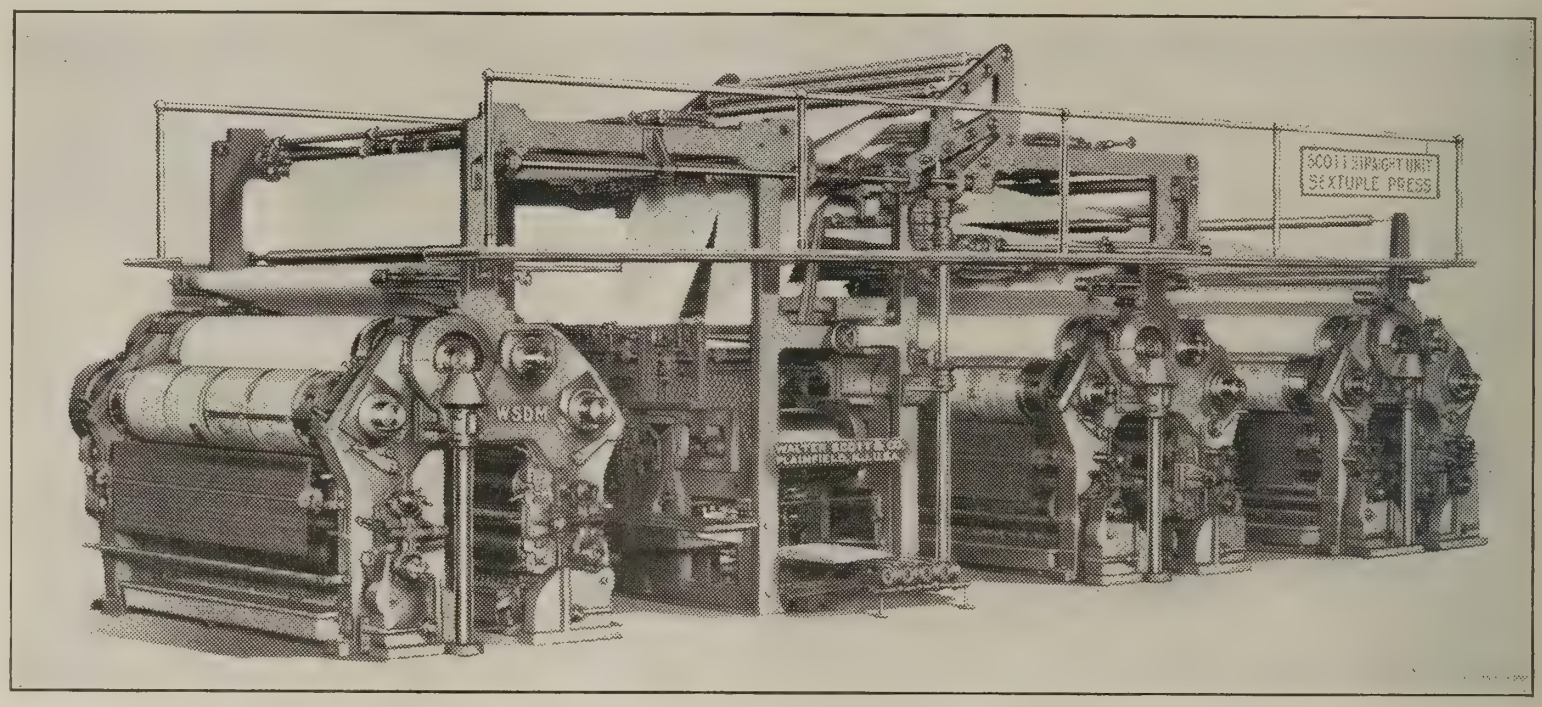
FROM 50% to 100% in The Chicago Daily News—never less than half—is an approved rule to govern the placing of your Chicago advertising.

Then in corresponding measure you do business in Chicago's fundamental market, through the family newspaper in which advertising is assuredly profitable.

The advertising of Lever Brothers Company in The Chicago Daily News—placed by the J. Walter Thompson Company—totaled 62,591 agate lines in the first seven months of 1926. This was well over the 50% share of their total Chicago newspaper advertising.

Advertising Representatives:

NEW YORK
J. B. Woodward
110 E. 42d St.



DETROIT
Woodward & Kelly
Fine Arts Building

CHICAGO
Woodward & Kelly
360 N. Michigan Ave.

SAN FRANCISCO
C. Geo. Krogness
253 First National Bank Bldg.

THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

First in Chicago

Scott Mezzanine-Type "Straight-Unit" Sextuple Press Consisting of 3 Under-Fed Units and 2 Heavy Duty 64 Page Folders

Better Presses are Better for Pressmen

Scott "Straight-Unit" and "Multi-Unit" Presses have been designed and constructed not only to improve newspaper printing but also to better the conditions under which your pressmen work.

While higher speeds have been attained, production increased and work of higher quality has been turned out, safety and accessibility have always been considered. Scott Presses are built to make the work of the pressmen easier, more pleasant and less dangerous.

To Protect Your Pressmen install—

Scott

"Multi-Unit" or "Straight-Unit" Presses

Cylinder Speed—400 r. p. m.

WALTER SCOTT & COMPANY

Main Office and Factory - - - - Plainfield, New Jersey, U. S. A.
New York Office - - - - - 1457 Broadway
Chicago Office - - - - 1330 Monadnock Block

Cable Address: WALTSCOTT NEW YORK

"Sunpaper" Isn't Just a Slogan---

¶ It's a fact that Baltimoreans say "Sunpaper" instead of "newspaper."

¶ Saying "Sunpaper" comes so naturally to a Baltimorean, born and bred, that he or she never gives the origin of the word another thought.

¶ Newcomers to the city get that habit almost before they've learned their way around town. They don't have to know their way around town or to the corner newsstand to get a Sunpaper.

¶ For to practically every worthwhile home in Baltimore—to every home you want to reach—the Sunpapers are delivered Morning, Evening and Sunday by that smooth-running organization of real business men—the Sun Carriers.

Average Net Paid Circulation for Month of August, 1926

Daily (M.&E.) . . 245,990
Sunday 189,419

A Gain of 12,270 Daily and 5,818 Sunday Over August, 1925

JOHN B. WOODWARD
Bowery Bank Bldg.,
110 E. 42d St., New York

GUY S. OSBORN
360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago

C. GEORGE KROGNESS
First National Bank Bldg.
San Francisco

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

MORNING EVENING SUNDAY

Baltimoreans Don't Say "Newspaper"—They Say "SUNpaper"

The Bulletin's Growth is the Romance of Philadelphia

THAT the people of Philadelphia Camden and vicinity appreciate the efforts of The Bulletin to give them all the news of the day as fairly, as exactly and impartially as it can be laid before them, is attested not only by the fact that the name of The Bulletin has become as a household word among them, but that its circulation reaches far beyond the highest point ever attained by a Philadelphia newspaper.

When The Bulletin passed to its present management thirty years ago, its daily circulation was less than 5,000 copies. Today it exceeds 533,000 copies daily—a copy for nearly every one of the 550,000 homes in the Philadelphia-Camden retail trading area—America's third largest market.

This evening, and every evening, The Bulletin is read in more than 533,000 homes—nearly every home in and around Philadelphia and Camden.

The population of the Philadelphia-Camden trading area is over 3,000,000 people. U.S. Census figures give the size of the average family as 5.4 persons. Divide this into the total population and the answer will show you plainly that through one newspaper—The Bulletin—your advertisement will reach "nearly everybody."

New York—247 Park Avenue, Park-Lexington Building
Chicago—Verree & Conklin, Inc.. 28 East Jackson Boulevard
Detroit—C. L. Weaver, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 321 Lafayette Boulevard
San Francisco—Thomas L. Emory, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 681 Market Street

Copyright 1926—Bulletin Company

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication by The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor; Suite 1700 Times Building, 42nd St., at Broadway, New York. Telephone, Bryant 3052-3053-3054-3055-3056. Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations. Member Associated Business Papers, Inc.

Vol. 59 NEW YORK, SEPTEMBER 18, 1926 No. 17

Press' Sacrifice of Quality for Quantity Is Making a Poor Bargain, Ochs Says

Smaller Papers With Quality Circulations and Higher Rates Would Shut Door to Huge Present Day Wastes, N. Y. Times Publisher Believes—"Leadership" Often Embarrassing

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

ECONOMIC waste in newspaper publishing and advertising as it is practiced in America today occupies Adolph S. Ochs' thoughts as he celebrates the 75th anniversary of the New York Times and his 30th anniversary as publisher of that paper.

"Newspapers are sacrificing quality for quantity and are losers in the bargain," he said in an exclusive EDITOR & PUBLISHER interview this week. "And advertisers spending huge sums for space are putting the responsibility of filling it in the hands of small salaried clerks."

"It is not wholly an asset for the Times, I believe, to be leader in circulation and advertising," he said.

I had called on Mr. Ochs for a different kind of a story. I wanted to know how he had achieved success, the danger signals he had heeded, the opportunities he had seized, and the problems he solved.

But this Tennessee printer who had come to New York in 1896, with $75,000, much of it borrowed, and had made a weakling paper into a giant and his own fortune to boot, waved these questions aside to the end of the interview and launched first into the problems he felt he faced today.

Before him on his desk in his luxurious private office in the Times Annex was an advance copy of his paper's 75th anniversary supplement to be issued with the Sunday edition of Sept. 19. During the interview, Mr. Ochs turned the leaves of this supplement, pausing now and again to ejaculate, "See this," "See that," or "Isn't this interesting?"

Finally, he reached page 34 on which are printed two charts showing increases in circulation and linage in the 30 years of Ochs' control and furnishing unusual statistics on the gross income and expenditures of the Times of the present day. The gross income is listed as $25,000,000. There is no indebtedness of any character.

"We printed these statistics against the judgment of many in the Times organization," Mr. Ochs said. "They advised me that such publicity might be embarrassing in some directions. Nevertheless, there they are, let the consequences be what they may. They tell the story of what the Times is today. My personality I do not wish exploited."

Pitted against this story of figures, Mr. Ochs, however, drew an entirely different word picture.

"The Times is embarrassed by its gains in circulation and advertising," he said.

"A newspaper of the character of the New York Times with 100,000 circulation is worth a better advertising rate than we now have for nearly 400,000. A newspaper maintaining a position of circulation or advertising supremacy is tempted to sacrifice character and rates to preserve its leadership. The battle of linage figures is a ridiculous procedure all around. It is not the whole truth, for in one case single advertisers may use many pages at a time, whereas some newspapers would not tolerate such a practice. We are all talking too much about quantity and not enough about quality. It is the besetting sin of our business.

"When a newspaper boasts about its immense advertising linage, does the publisher tell the income he derived from this business? Never! He merely cites the number of lines published.

"Does he ever divulge his circulation income? No. He simply tells the number of copies that were sold.

"How little thought is being given today by the advertisers as to the class of people they are making their appeal to!

"Certainly it seems that there is not sufficient thought given to this question. Much money is wasted in newspaper advertising and in consequence newspapers have grown enormous in size. The production costs are steadily increasing, and it is increasingly difficult to keep the income ahead. We on the Times, for instance, are committed to meet a daily expense of $60,000, which is an increase of more than $6,000 a day over the average daily expense a year ago—in other words, an increase of expenditure of about 13 per cent, which was barely covered by the increased income. Of this increased expense, a good proportion was incurred in the mechanical department, only a small part of it being due to increased production. It is interesting to know that for the year ending June 30, the Times had an expense of nearly one and three-quarter millions for the mere cost of transportation in distributing the Times, that is post office, railroad and city distribution.

"There must be a limitation to size, and we have endeavored to do something in that direction on the Times. We give preference to advertising carrying information. In some cases advertising in a newspaper may be more interesting to a greater number of readers than the news of the day. That is when the copy conveys information. The time may come when we will not have room in the Times for poster advertising. So-called trade mark or billboard advertising may be good for the advertisers, but is of little value, except for income, to the news attractiveness of a newspaper.

"Perhaps half the money that is spent in advertising is wasted. I know it will be considered rank heresy on my part to say this, but it is true, because some of it is not done intelligently. Advertising is not only an art, but a science.

"For example, an advertiser will buy space in a newspaper. He pays $1,800 or more for a page in the Times, let us say. Then he has a small salaried clerk write the copy. Another advertiser sets aside a large advertising appropriation, and then sends 'mats,' not taking the time and little extra expense to supply an electrotype that will give him a sharp and clear impression.

"The intelligent advertiser understands this point of view. He sees the waste in it. Years ago, Robert C. Ogden, of the John Wanamaker store, told me he considered that advertising was the most important part of their business. The best thought of the store was given to it, he said, because the advertising speaks with the authority of responsibility and must inform if it is to influence the reader. The copy, as well as the display, therefore, is of the highest importance.

"Higher prices for advertising will benefit the advertiser as well as the publisher, and will correct, in a measure, the present wasteful, uneconomic condition. Rates should be high enough so the advertiser will realize that he cannot afford to spend his money in advertising that is uninteresting, uninformative and uneconomic.

"The same distorted quantitative view of advertising applies to circulation. A publisher too often adds something new to his paper in the hope of attracting new readers, which matter may be of no interest and even unattractive to his old readers. He perhaps does not count the cost of the increase in bulk of his product and probably overestimates the value of readers obtained by this new attraction.

"Some day I intend to deliver an address in vindication of the newspaper reader, and show that he is not wholly responsible for the vulgar, sensational, vapid publications that make an appeal to the mindless.

"If the New York Times did not publish one line of advertising and printed in the Times only the news we now give, there would be many who would pay $100 a copy for our paper if it could not be had for less, because of the value to them of the information contained therein. Can you imagine many willing to pay a dollar or even 25 cents a copy for the vaudeville features of some publications? The public would not pay the price of producing such publications; they buy simply because it costs little or nothing."

First home of New York Times, established just 75 years ago, was at 113 Nassau Street, a shabby building contrasting with its present 14-story palatial plant in West 43rd Street.

The economic waste involved in the large bulk of present day American newspapers likewise bothers the publisher of the Times.

"Each copy of the Sunday Times last week weighed three and one-half pounds. It will weigh four pounds this Sunday; costing in white paper and transportation from 15 to 20 cents a copy, and we receive from 4 to 7 cents a copy."

This problem reminded Mr. Ochs of a luncheon he attended 25 years ago given by the proprietors of the London Times. He was asked then what he thought of the London paper; what he would do if he were made publisher of it. After hesitating, Mr. Ochs finally ventured the suggestion that the London Times might well split its edition into three sections to be sold separately, one being devoted to news, another to parliamentary affairs, and the third to financial. A penny (2 cents) might be charged for each section and the persons then paying 3 pennies might continue to take all sections, and new circulation could be had for the separate sections.

"I'm afraid they would only take the news section," the proprietor of the London Times replied to his New York colleague, thus confessing that perhaps he was giving something the reader did not want.

"Yet today," Mr. Ochs continued, "I sometimes believe the same idea might be a solution of our present problem.

"Meanwhile we are wasting large sums of money. It costs about $400,000 a year in excess of income for white paper and transportation for the foreign and eighth zone circulation of the Times alone."

Despite his desire to continue disparaging the success of the Times as far as its circulation and advertising supremacy are concerned, Mr. Ochs was pressed for his own personal success story.

"Millions of men could have done what I have done," he began, and his tone convinced that his assertion was not mere false modesty.

"I am no genius, or visionary. It just happened that no mistake was made in the selection of the Times' fundamental policy, which is to print all the news that's fit to print.

"There is too much of a tendency to set me up on a high pedestal, and I fear dizziness. I have many requests to tell my story. There is no story to tell, unless it is simply that I stuck closely to one idea; concentrated on something I had learned in the hard school of experience.

"Back in the days when I was a printer's devil in Knoxville I made myself useful in every way possible in the printing office, and learned much. I had good health and was industrious and ambitious.

"While the other boys used to run out of the shop as soon as the day's work was done, I stayed to learn to set type. I used to like to help others for the selfish reason that in helping them I was helping myself to learn more about the printing trade. Thus they used to call on me to help in various departments, and there was pleasure in doing so.

"You know how copy is placed face down on the hook. When there was bad copy, which meant hard and slow work, it somehow became known and there was "Soldiering." I didn't object to difficult copy. I always tried to do what was in hand with the best of my ability.

"Opportunities come to every man. Ninety-nine out of a hundred men, however, are always seeking opportunities instead of preparing for them. What good is opportunity if you are not prepared for it?"

Mr. Ochs did see the reason behind the question and was prepared when in 1896 he received a telegram from a friend, which read: "Come to New York. The opportunity of your life lies before you."

The friend referred to the business managership of the old New York Mercury, which he believed he could obtain for his friend at a high salary. The

NEW YORK M. E.'S DAUGHTER MEETS COOLIDGE

Little Jean Hunter Tennant, two-year-old daughter of J. H. Tennant, managing editor of the New York Evening World was photographed with President Coolidge when she visited him at Paul Smith's last week.

Mercury, however, was committed to free silver, while Mr. Ochs favored a gold standard. In 1878, when 20 years old, he had purchased the Chattanooga Times for $250 by assuming its debt of $1,500. He was honestly and earnestly advocating the gold standard in the South and did not propose to change his principles simply for a better job.

On his 38th birthday, he received a telegram from another friend, who advised him he thought Mr. Ochs could gain control of the New York Times.

While Mr. Ochs was considering this proposition, he was in Chicago and confided to his friend Herman H. Kohlsaat, then publisher of the Chicago Times-Herald, who encouraged him to go to it as the opportunity of his life.

"I don't think I'm a big enough man for the job," Mr. Ochs said to Mr. Kohlsaat.

"Dont tell anybody and they'll never find out," the latter rejoined.

In the spring of 1896, the New York Times Publishing Company came to grief, and to extricate it from its difficulties, it was placed in the hands of a receiver. Various futile plans of reorganization had been considered when Mr. Ochs was invited to offer a plan and undertake its operation. The plan under which Mr. Ochs became the publisher and controlling owner is concisely told in Elmer Davis's History of the New York Times, and cannot be better given than in his words. As Mr. Davis puts it:

"A new organization, The New York Times Company, was formed, with a capital of 10,000 shares of par value of $100. Two thousand of these shares were traded in for the 10,000 shares of the old company. The holders of the outstanding obligations of the Times, amounting to some $300,000, received in exchange an equal amount of 5 per cent bonds of the new company; and perhaps the most exacting part of the financing of the reorganization was accomplished when $200,000 more of these bonds were sold at par, to provide that operating capital the lack of which had been so severely felt in past years. As a persuasive, 15 shares of stock were offered to each purchaser of a $1,000 bond. Mr. Ochs himself, scraping together all the money he had or could borrow, bought $75,000 of these bonds, receiving with them 1,125 shares of stock. Of the remaining capital stock of the company 3,876 shares were put into escrow, to be delivered to Mr. Ochs whenever the paper had earned and paid expenses for a period of three consecutive years. Thus he would have—and within less than four years did have—5,001 of the 10,000 shares and $75,000 in bonds, the whole acquired by the payment of $75,000 for the bonds and by his personal services. That $75,000 was the financial investment, and the only investment, aside from his own labors, which the controlling stockholder of the Times made for his majority interest.

"The company thus organized bought the Times at public sale on Aug. 13, 1896. The receivership was terminated by court order; on Aug. 18, 1896, the property was formally transferred to the reorganized company, with Mr. Ochs as publisher in unrestricted control; and the saddest chapter in the history of the Times was closed."

At the end of three years and 10 months, the 3,876 shares were delivered to Mr. Ochs which, with what he already owned, gave him the majority of 51 per cent. In 1899, for the first time in many years, the paper had earned and paid its expenses.

But for the first ten months, the newspaper that now holds such a commanding place in America's journalistic field was like the bad copy the printers leave face downwards on their hooks. It was losing money heavily.

"The Times had been offered to several well known newspaper men in New York journalism," Mr. Ochs continued. "They excused themselves gracefully. They didn't believe the paper could ever he brought back to life. But they all had other kinds of newspapers in mind. In those days so-called yellow journalism was at its height.

"The idea for building up the Times was that there was a clientele in New York sufficient to support the newspaper which offered a decent and dignified presentation of the daily news of the world. There might be 30,000 or even 50,000. The present circulation was way beyond my dreams.

"News is simply the happenings and occurrences of each day, and to this should be added its honest interpretation. It is information on affairs of the world, politics of the day, literature, science, art, business, real estate, law, the courts, deaths, births, marriages. It is not crusading, it is not entertainment per se.

"When we took over the Times we were committed to one well-defined idea—print the news. Later, when we could afford it, we never thought what it would cost. If it was news we had to have it, that was all.

"Some people think that the thing to do when managing a losing property is simply to reduce the expenses. We prefer to turn the problem the other way round. We wish to make income run ahead of expenses. When you cut expenses you dampen enthusiasm, which is fatal; the better way is to put your energies into keeping your income ahead of your expenses.

"Sometimes I think we might have done well with the Philadelphia Public Ledger which was sold to Mr. Curtis in 1912. At the time, however, it seemed better to concentrate on the one thing—to make the New York Times. It required all my time, attention and resources.

"One policy never regretted was, not to buy an evening paper in New York and make it the evening edition of the Times. There have been a great many temptations to do this. Probably every evening newspaper that has been sold in New York since 1896 has been offered to us. The offers have been refused. It seems to me that the publisher of a morning and evening newspaper in the same city competes with himself.

"I prefer to stick to one job, the New York Times. And there is no ambition to make it a national newspaper. Rather we want it to be a New York newspaper full of news of national interest, and there is a decided difference between the two if you stop to think about it. In other words what we want to do is publish a newspaper for the metropolitan district of New York and its environs, believing that that sort of newspaper is of interest all over the country.

"The Times today is not a perfect newspaper. Possibly it never will be. Some of its critics say it is too dull, the stories are too long. But a story can never be too long to the persons who are interested in it. It is not expected that a person will read the Times from front to back page. But if a man spends eight hours of a day in work and eight hours in sleep, how can he better spend two of the remaining eight hours than by reading an informative newspaper? The clerk, the housewife, the banker, the business man, the lawyer, doctor, teacher, preacher, adult, child, all will find information interesting and useful to them in the Times. Stories can be long and not be dull. Many people have told me they read the dispatch by Edwin L. James from Geneva the other day, telling of Germany's admittance to the League of Nations, with tears in their eyes.

"I believe we are safe in saying that there is no other newspaper in the world

MRS. THOMAS NEW HEAD OF MORNING TELEGRAPH

MRS. E. R. THOMAS was elect president of the Hermis Pr Corporation, owners of the New Yo Morning Telegraph-Running Horse a meeting of the directors of the corp ration Sept. 13.

Mrs. Thomas began taking an acti interest in the affairs of the paper, f lowing the death of her husband abo three months ago. She succeeds Rufus Trimble as the president of the corpo tion. E. S. Fentress and Charles March, Texas publishers who had be supervising the property for Mr. Thom at the time of his death have withdra whose columns are as free and open f expression of diverse opinions as the N York Times. We lean backwards occasion to give a hearing to those wi whom we differ.

Other directors elected were: Jose H. Dodshon; Roy Tolleson, H. Work; and A. Borenfeld.

Mr. Tolleson is vice-president of t company.

No staff changes are contemplated director of the paper declared.

"And we have proved beyond all dou that there is a demand for news in itself that news is a legitimate commodity whi can be honestly purveyed so that the pr cess may be remunerative."

Mr. Ochs flicked over the pages of t beautiful anniversary supplement, print in rotogravure, that lay on the desk befo him. This section is 64 pages and giv a succinct, sketchy history of the Tim from 1851 to the present day. All adve tisers in its pages have been in busine 75 years or more.

PICTURELESS REVOLUTION

Spanish Revolt Unproductive Fro Photographic Viewpoint

Spain's recent revolution was pictur less as well as bloodless, according to t Madrid representative of the Wide Wor Photo Service.

"There is absolutely nothing we ca photograph," the representative notifie his Paris office. "You can be sure there are news pictures to be got we wi get them, but, believe me, there is n revolution, even such as there was whe Primo de Rivera formed the directora in 1923."

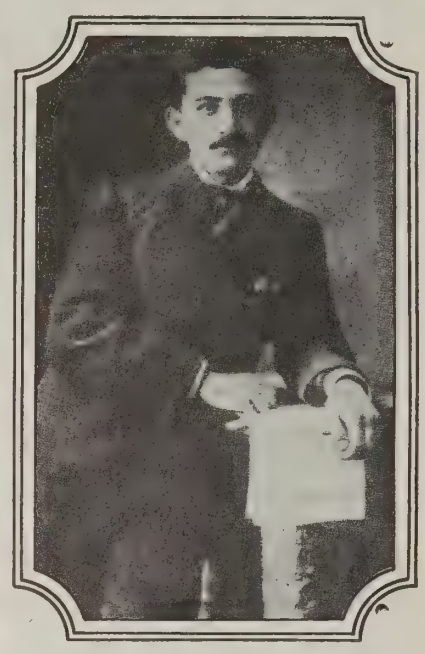
AD GROUP PICKS CRAWFORD

Waco Man Is Managing Director o $500,000 Texas Campaign

W. V. Crawford has resigned as sale and advertising manager of Sanger Bro at Waco to become managing director o the $500,000 Advertise Texas campaign. This campaign was launched by th Tenth District Associated Advertisin Clubs of the World, of which Mr. Craw ford formerly was president.

The Advertise Texas Committee is t maintain headquarters at Waco.

OCHS' CAREER FROM PRINTER'S DEVIL TO FAMOUS PUBLISHER



First Authentic Narrative of His Extraordinary Rise to Power and Wealth Through Native Genius —Borrowed $250 to Buy Chattanooga Times—Control of Times for $75,000

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

Director Department of Journalism, New York University, and Author of "History of American Journalism"

When Mr. Ochs donned cap and gown at New York University last spring. His escort is Dr. James Melvin Lee. Speaker Nicholas Longworth is the smiling figure following. Insert is from a photograph made shortly before Mr. Ochs purchased New York Times. (Left) Mr. Ochs as a 13-year-old printer's devil. (Right) Mr. Ochs as publisher of Chattanooga Times.

JOHN BURROUGHS while fishing along his favorite trout stream in the foothills of the Catskills once met another member of the tribe of Walton. The latter, seeing the string of speckled beauties caught by Mr. Burroughs, requested the secret of his success.

"For one thing," replied Mr. Burroughs, "my heart just now is not in my Riverby Study on the Hudson, but on my hook. In the next place, I have fished this stream for its entire length and know where are the pools that are fed by cool springs. There's where I cast my line. You've the wrong kind of bait. Trout and suckers have different tastes."

The success of Adolph S. Ochs in the newspaper field may be explained, in part at least, by the principles so succinctly set forth by Mr. Burroughs. Even when he was sweeping out the back office of a little paper in Knoxville, Tenn., or when he was delivering papers on a hard route in the same city, he had his heart in his work. Prosperity has brought much to him, but it has never won him from his first love. In the language of the New England housewife, he has kept to his knitting. His heart has ever been with the type and with his presses.

In the second place, Mr. Ochs knows the newspaper stream. Even now he can go over his old route in Knoxville and tell just where he left papers. Incidentally he has never forgotten the meanest man on his list. He has often wiped his hands on the typical towel of the back office after a hard day's work at the case. He has been on the street on all sorts of assignments. Many a time he has trailed his heels while waiting for an advertiser to see him. He knows the cares and worries of meeting a weekly payroll when he had to go out to collect the funds to meet this obligation. From personal experience he knows what constitutes an honest day's work in the newspaper business. This knowledge enabled him, when he took over the New York Times in 1896, to know that the composing room was "heavily, even ruinously, overmanned." Consequently he took the matter up with Union officials with the result that the payroll of the composing room became a thousand dollars a week less without any loss of efficiency.

Always Mr. Ochs has been a discriminating publisher. He knew the type of leader he wanted, and went after him with the right kind of bait. In discussing the success of Mr. Ochs with Melville E. Stone of the Associated Press at the Lotos Club recently, I heard Mr. Stone put the matter rather epigrammatically when he said, "Ochs early discovered that decency meant dollars." I sincerely hope that Mr. Stone puts this clever line in his note of congratulation to the Times on its seventy-fifth anniversary. Mr. Ochs, however, puts it a little differently when he says, "All I have done is to vindicate the reading taste of New York."

When Mr. Ochs was thinking of buying the Times he talked the matter over with his friend, Herman H. Kohlsaat, the publisher of the Chicago Times Herald to whom he confessed that he hardly thought himself big enough for the undertaking. Immediately came this rejoinder from Kohlsaat, "Don't tell anybody and they'll never find it out."

Whether it was the influence of this remark by Kohlsaat, or whether it was some other reason, Mr. Ochs has said very little about himself. For that reason it has been extremely difficult to get material for a little personality sketch. To use his own words, "I have enough fame to live up to now without having any more." But the New York Times is celebrating this week its seventy-fifth anniversary. A few weeks ago Mr. Ochs celebrated his thirtieth anniversary as its publisher. A few facts about him, therefore, are in my opinion, "fit to print."

His father, Julius Ochs, was a captain in the Union army while his mother's brother saw service in the Confederate army. To get the date of birth recorded at once it may be said that Mr. Ochs was born in Cincinnati, O., March 12, 1858. His father, making the journey in a covered wagon, removed to Knoxville, Tenn. The son, it may be remarked in passing, recently went over the same route in a "covered car" and thus gratified one of his boyhood ambitions. But that is another story. At Knoxville, Adolph, while a boy of eleven, secured his first newspaper job. William Rule, the present editor of the Knoxville Journal, thus tells me the details:

I began the publication of the Knoxville Chronicle, a six day paper, in the spring of 1870. One forenoon there came to my office a lad who had seen about 12 summers. I asked him if there was anything I could do for him. He said he wanted to work. Asked what sort of work his reply was, in substance, anything he might be entrusted to do. That was my first meeting with Adolph S. Ochs. He was given a sort of roustabout job, sweeping floors, sent on chores and so on. When he finished a job to which he had been assigned, he did not sit down and wait for something else to do, but asked for something else he might be doing. Soon he was given the additional job of carrier boy for the delivery of the morning paper to local subscribers. In that respect he proved himself a "Johnny on the spot." With unbroken regularity, rain or shine, regardless of cold or heat, he stood as a boy faithful on his job. His next step was at the printer's case learning the art of all arts, printing.

My next question was whether Mr. Rule in those days ever dreamed that his printer's devil would become the great newspaper publisher he is today. Here is Editor Rule's reply.

I know of no other or better way of answering that question than by giving you a copy of a brief note given him when he left Knoxville to go to Chattanooga, of which this is a copy:

"Adolph S. Ochs has been in my employ for more than two years. I have found him honest, zealous, reliable and trustworthy. He is quick to comprehend and faithful to execute whatever he may be entrusted with. He is endowed with an intellect capable of reaching the highest point in mental achievement. He is a very meritorious young man. As such I cordially recommend him to all with whom he may come in contact.

"October 4, 1875.

"Wm. Rule, Editor, Knoxville Chronicle."

Adolph S. Ochs has more than once impressed me that he had something in and about him that was in the nature of bringing dead things to life. Still a minor in age, with a very small amount of money in his pocket, he left Knoxville, went to Chattanooga to try his hand in the matter of resurrecting the Chattanooga Times, which was then awaiting burial. He soon brought this paper to life and it became his own; he made for it a place in the front rank of southern newspapers. Ochs it was that saved it, and in doing so shares the credit of making Chattanooga the growing and prosperous city that it is.

The progress in Chattanooga, however, was not quite so rapid as the reply of Editor Rule would seem to indicate. Before Mr. Ochs became connected with the Times he was associated with the business manager of the Knoxville Tribune in an attempt to establish the Chattanooga Daily Dispatch. The Dispatch, which was started in 1877, was not successful and, in 1878, Mr. Ochs, who was made its receiver, liquidated its debts and consolidated it with the Chattanooga Times. Two months after the consolidation, July 1, 1878, the Times became the property of Mr. Ochs.

Editor Rule remarks that when Mr. Ochs went to Chatanooga he had very little money. As near as I can make out, when he bought the Times he did not have any. Unable to raise ready cash,

Mr. Ochs was able to get a friend to endorse a note for $300. This note was discounted at the bank and a payment of $250 was made for the Times. Debts, amounting to $1,500, were assumed by Mr. Ochs. From that day to this Mr. Ochs has been the sole proprietor of the Chattanooga Times.

Mr. Ochs frankly admits that the Chattanooga Times at the time of his purchase fell far short of what a daily newspaper should be. It contained no telegraph news and had a distribution of only 250 copies a day—"printed on a one-man-press." Today the Times is one of the most valuable newspaper properties in the South. Its building, erected in 1892, is one of the architectural attractions of the city. Brief space must be found for the side trip which Mr. Ochs made in 1875 from Knoxville to Louisville. In the latter city he found work for a few months in the job printing department of the Louisville Courier Journal. Returning to Knoxville in 1876, he became associated with the Tribune of that city, first as assistant to the foreman of the composing room, then as a reporter, and finally as assistant to the business manager. Just before he obtained control of the Times of Chattanooga, he published "the best directory that city had ever had."

The two most important decisions a man is said to make may be found in his choice of a lifework and his choice of a life partner. Mr. Ochs had made the former choice, but not the latter. In spite or his "nothing to say" on this topic, I don't believe he will deny what follows. The scene shifts from Chattanooga back to Cincinnati—the home of that great teacher, the Rev. Dr. Isaac M. Wise, beloved and revered by all who knew him. He had known both Julius and Bertha Ochs when they lived in Cincinnati and naturally when the son visited his birthplace he called on Dr. Wise to pay his respects. There he met the talented daughter, Effie. Here is where a horseshoe brought great luck to Mr. Ochs. He possessed the shoes of the famous racehorse, "Harry Bassett," who had defeated on the turf another distinguished horse by the name of "Longfellow." To the daughter Mr. Ochs told the story of these shoes. She became interested and when he left she had the promise of one of them.

Such was the beginning of the romance, the climax of which may be found in this item which appeared in the Cincinnati Times-Star of Feb. 28, 1883—furnished by the present editor, Hulbert Taft:

> A social event of more than passing interest occurred at two o'clock this afternoon at the Jewish Temple, corner of Eighth and Plum Streets. Parties to the occasion were Mr. Adolph S. Ochs of Chattanooga and Miss Effie Wise. Mr. Ochs is the editor and publisher of the Chattanooga Times.
>
> He is one of the most popular society gentlemen of that city. Miss Wise is the beautiful and accomplished daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Isaac M. Wise of this city. After the wedding the bridal banquet will be served at the Hexters hotel. In the evening the happy pair will go East returning home by way of Chicago.

It may be mentioned in passing that the first gift of Mr. Ochs to his bride was a beautiful horse. Both were very fond of riding and after their marriage they could often be seen riding together around the lovely country near Chattanooga. Such was the romance of the horseshoe.

But the romance was not ended. They still have their sign language when too far apart to converse openly. I first noticed it when I saw Mrs. Ochs enter a box at a luncheon of the Associated Press. Mr. Ochs was at the speakers' table. But what followed is too personal to print, but it warms the heart.

Of the three children of Mr. and Mrs. Ochs two died in infancy. The third, Iphigne, was married Nov. 7, 1917, to Arthur Hays Sulzberger, now Vice President of the New York Times. Her marriage, it may be said in passing, received a much more extended notice in the press than did that of her father.

The brief and somewhat stereotyped marriage notice printed about Mr. Ochs in the Cincinnati Times-Star was accurate in its assertion about his popularity in Chattanooga. In 1890 he had entertained Harry Alloway, a member of the Wall Street staff of the New York Times. The latter had remarked incidentally that the New York Times offered the greatest opportunity in American journalism. Six years later it was Alloway who sent Mr. Ochs a telegram containing information that an opportunity existed of purchasing the New York Times without an actual expenditure of very much cash.

But before I go on with what came from that telegram I want to bring in the first connection Mr. Ochs had with the Associated Press. At that particular time "Mel" Stone did not have time to grace the Lotos Club, nor any other club. He was fighting a pitched battle with the old United Press. Mr. Ochs had organized the Southern Associated Press which had an exchange of news with the parent organization in Chicago. He was the secretary of the Southern Associated when it had its meeting in Atlanta, Ga., in 1894, the meeting at which the organization voted to sever its connection with the Associated and unite its forces with the old United Press. So far as I have been able to learn, Mr. Ochs was the only member of the Board of Directors to cast a dissenting vote. Mr. Stone, who had left Chicago to go to Atlanta, had been unable to prevent the break. It was at this meeting in Atlanta that Mr. Stone first met Mr. Ochs.

What happened after the break can best be told by a story which appeared in the New York World, Dec. 13, 1894, under the headline, "Editor Ochs, Wheel-Horse of the Southern Organization, Cuts Loose from It and Joins the Associated Press":

> Adolph S. Ochs, publisher and proprietor of the Chattanooga Daily Times, the leading morning newspaper in East Tennessee, North Georgia and North Alabama, has signed a ninety-year contract with the Associated Press and withdrawn from the Southern Associated Press. The Southern Associated Press owes its existence almost to him.
>
> Mr. Ochs gives up his membership in the Southern Associated Press because of the recent alliance with the United Press and the cancellation of the contract with the Associated Press. The Southern Associated Press, he says, as now conducted, is simply an auxiliary of the United Press, and hence he was put in the position of choosing between the two organizations. Of course, he chose the Associated.

Mention has already been made of how Mr. Ochs had talked over with Herman H. Kohlsaat the possible purchase of the New York Times. He also talked the matter over with Mr. Stone, who gave him a very intimate note to Spencer Trask, the New York banker who was holding the bag for the New York Times then almost on the rocks financially. This note from Stone is intensely interesting, but if it is ever released for publication it will have to come from Mr. Ochs.

To boil down a long story, Mr. Ochs came to New York and effected a new organization, the New York Times Company, with a capital of 10,000 shares of $100 each par value. Two thousand of these shares were exchanged for 10,000 shares of the old company. Financial obligations of the Times, which were something like $300,000, were taken care of with an equal amount of five per cent bonds of the new company. Two hundred thousand dollars more of these bonds sold at par, provided the operating capital. Fifteen shares of stock went as a bonus with every $1,000 bond thus sold. Mr. Ochs, borrowing all the money that he could, purchased seventy-five of these $1,000 bonds and received with them 1,125 shares of stock. Of the capital stock remaining with the company, 3,876 shares "were put into escrow," to be handed over to Mr. Ochs when he had made the paper meet expenses for three consecutive years. In other words, Mr. Ochs secured the control of the Times through an outlay of $75,000 cash. One reason given for the financial straits of the Times when Mr. Alloway sent his tip to Mr. Ochs may be found in the heavy assessments the Times had to pay the old United Press.

Of the present financial condition of the Times or the mercantile rating of Mr. Ochs, I do not need to speak. But in those early days when he first came to New York he had to carry a tremendous load. One who worked with him at the time once remarked that the lower rounds of the ladder on which Mr. Ochs climbed to succes bent and creaked under the weight. "But all of us who knew the facts had confidence that Mr. Ochs had selected a ladder that would hold. With each step up the ladder the load became less and less."

At the Newspaper Club of New York I was talking recently with one who had worked on the Times at this particular period. I asked him what most impressed him about Mr. Ochs in those early days. Immediately came the reply, "His personal interest in the younger employes."

This interest has not diminished w the passing of the years, nor with the crease in the number of employes. who tells Mr. Ochs that his Times is foremost newspaper in the world or t he is the greatest newspaper publisher America will not get very much o response. But let one show an inte in the glee club, the band, or some ot employe organization connected with Times and one has the ear of Mr. O

Possibly one reason why Mr. Ochs kept so young in spirit in spite of heavy burdens is his interest in yo Mr. Ochs, for example, was a member the Religious School Committee of Te ple Emanu-El before he became one the trustees. He was elected a trustee Temple Emanu-El on Jan. 17, 1916, is at present a member of the Memb ship and Law and Legislation C mittee.

I imagine that Mr. Ochs must have ceived most of his education from daily perusal of the papers he has p lished. Only for a brief period was able to attend the public school. W he obtained control of the New Y Times one of his first orders was t workers should read the paper. Thro this means what might be called ne paper focus was given to the produc of the paper. Frankly one cannot r the New York Times for 30 years w out getting a fairly liberal educat Contact with leaders in all phases human endeavor may have contrib some. Breadth of vision undoubte came from extensive travel. Long a ciation with men like Charles R. Mil so many years editor of the Times, n also be a factor. Financial success later years has brought an intin knowledge of economics and fina Then, too, one must not forget what Cincinnati Times-Star said about daughter of Dr. Isaac M. Wise. quiet force in the home unquestion shows itself in the Ochs of today.

Academic honors have been rece heaped upon Mr. Ochs. They have c from Yale, Columbia, and New Y University. The biblical assertion a a prophet not being without honor in his own country has not been true his case. But of these academic ho the one that must have touched his h was that coming from the University Chattanooga. Here is the tribute was paid to him when he received honorary degree from the University the city where he first achieved ne paper success:

> Adolph S. Ochs, directing genius of the g est newspaper in the world, this college ho itself in honoring you today. Classro libraries and laboratories are not the only tinguishing features of an educational institu In a very real sense the reporters who sen your office news from the ends of the earth, editors who organize and present the mat to the public, and all of the skillful men women who help with the mechanical feat of a newspaper are truly workers in a g educational organization.
>
> You and your colleagues have been crea of educational values. Your slogan, "All news that's fit to print," has set a stan which every newspaper should adopt. Your sistence that the interpretation of news s not be controlled by advertisers or other po ful groups has shown your moral courage well as your love for truth. Thoughtful may differ with you, but they will always spect and honor you.
>
> Your love for humanity at home and ac the seas, your ideals of community serv evidenced so often by your leadership difficult undertakings, your joy in brin benefits to others, have endeared you to m tudes who do not know you. But today you with your personal friends, in the presence men and women who admired you in the d of your early struggles and have rejoiced your great achievements. You are also in presence of a younger generation which been inspired by your sterling virtues. success which they have brought to you, and the modesty with which you have carried y honors.
>
> In conferring this degree the University Chattanooga is acting in behalf of your neigh and fellow-townsmen. If they had higher ho in their power to bestow they would award th

These words by the president of University of Chattanooga, Arlo Ay Brown, go so much into detail that I not need space for elaboration. I n add, however, that the finest tribut have seen of Mr. Ochs came from of my old teachers, later president of University of Chattanooga and now head of the Methodist Book Concern

(Continued on page 46)

FOUR SHORT PARAGRAPHS TOLD OF OCHS' DEPARTURE FROM KNOXVILLE IN 1875

By DEWEY M. OWENS

ON Aug. 18, 1926, Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the New York Times, was presented with various tokens of esteem by his employes and fellow workers. Among these was a silver printer's stick, the gift of the employes of the New York Times composing room.

Perhaps when Mr. Ochs received this token of appreciation, his mind went back to another day when a young compositor received a volume of Tom Hood's poems from the force of another composing room. That day was more than 50 years ago, and the scene was the then struggling little town of Knoxville, Tenn. The young printer was none other than Adolph Ochs himself. The gift of the book of poems was the heartfelt tribute of his fellow workers to a young man going out in the world to make his fortune.

Four short paragraphs in the personal columns of the Knoxville Chronicle of Oct. 13, 1875, tell the story of Ochs' departure from Knoxville. They follow:

"Mr. Adolph Ochs, for some years past an attache of the Chronicle office, leaves on the western bound train today, on a protracted visit to Louisville, Ky., and other points.

"On yesterday evening the compositors and attaches of the office presented him with an elegantly bound volume of Tom Hood's poems, as a token of their regard for him.

"And last night he complimented the 'force' with a sumptious repast of oysters served up in 'Nich's' best style, which was enjoyed hugely by all participating.

"Mr. Ochs carries with him the well wishes of all connected with this office, and we would recommend him to all with whom he may come in contact, as a young man well worthy of their confidence and esteem."

These paragraphs were printed without a head. They were sandwiched in between many other brief items, telling of the comings and goings of Knoxville citizens. They were the conventional pat on the back for the home town boy about to leave to seek his fortunes in the great outside world. For Ochs was leaving Knoxville for good. He had worked around the Chronicle office and learned all it could teach him. He was seeking other fields.

Strangely enough, the man who wrote the paragraphs telling of Ochs' departure is still alive. He is none other than Capt. William Rule, the 87-year old editor of the Knoxville Journal. Capt. Rule has never forgotten Mr. Ochs. His proudest moments are when he relates the triumphs of his one time protege. An autographed portrait of Mr. Ochs hangs in Capt. Rule's office.

And Mr. Ochs has never forgotten Capt. Rule. Whenever he returns to Knoxville for a day or two it is to call on Capt. Rule. Never a May 10, Capt. Rule's birthday, arrives, but Mr. Ochs wires flowers. And Mr. Ochs still treasures the letter of recommendation from Capt. Rule he carried away from Knoxville.

WILLIAMS MAKES PLEA FOR CRUSADING PRESS

Iresident of Press Congress Says "Mission of New Journalism" Is to Denounce Evil—Honorary World Council Created at Geneva Meet

(By Cable to Editor & Publisher)

(ENEVA, Sept. 15.—A stirring plea for more crusaders among newsjpers was made by Dean Walter Wilms, in his address opening sessions of te Press Congress of the World here isterday.

"It is for the Press Congress of the 'orld and other organizations and for ilividual journalists everywhere," he sid, "to denounce the evil and low and cwardly in their profession, to encourge and promote the good, to be crusders on occasion as well as recorders, cer holding to the journalistic faith."

Today a resolution demanding freedom the press in all nations of the world as adopted.

The constitution of the organization as amended to provide establishment of te World Press Council. This is a grely honorary body with Mr. Williams imed as president, Robert Bell of New Zaland, vice-president, and Wallace 'dell, Tarrytown (N. Y.) News, and rmer president of the National Edirial Association, secretary and treaser. The council is made up of an exutive committee of seven members, d a governing committee of 21, repreating important newspapers in many untries.

Following is the full text of President 'illiams' address:

The Press Congress of the World was ganized in San Francisco in 1915. The cond meeting, planned for 1918 in dney, Australia, but interfered with by te world war, was held in 1921 in Honolu, Hawaii. The third meeting is the esent one. The success of this meeting d the work done since the Honolulu sembly is in largest measure due to te unselfish, generous and far-sighted forts of the Secretary-Treasurer of the ngress, James Wright Brown, publher of Editor & Publisher, New ork. As president, I wish to bear rnest testimony to his invaluable servi to this Congress and to the profession journalism.

The object of the Congress is to "adnce by conference, discussion and ited effort the cause of journalism in ery honorable way." "Workers in every partment of journalism, in every countr," so reads the Congress constitution, ho are engaged in promoting the high- standards and largest welfare of the ess are eligible to membership." Fields d interests of the Congress, as fields and erests of journalism, are world-wide.

The Congress is an outgrowth of the reasing professional spirt among jourrlists, a growing desire for closer comrleship and for consideration of probns and principles common to journalin everywhere. Before its organization i 1915 the way had been pointed to ch an association by international confences and societies meeting in Switzerld, France, England, Germany, Holld, Belgium, Italy, the United States, d elsewhere. This Congress seeks to splement, not to supplant, other jourrlistic organizations which have similar ofessional purpose and to co-operate th them in every possible way. Though urnalism manifests itself in different ys in different lands, the fundamental nciples of journalism are the same in ery land. All who are members of the h profession are, because of that memrship, close akin. The common calling ould—does give to those engaged in an abiding sense of comradeship, and digation of brotherhood.

The Congress agenda, prepared under te direction of the Governing Committ, provides for reports of ad interim committees upon the Freedom of the ess, News Communications, Journalic Ethics and Standards of Practice, erchange of Journalists, Promotion of the Welfare of Journalists, Journalistic Education, and Journalistic Organizations, and discussion thereupon. Other discussions, as the Congress may wish, will of course be included.

I recommend that provisions be made to continue with ample authority these and other needful ad interim committees. To aid the work of the present meeting, I recommend the appointment of committees upon (a) Credentials, (b) Rules of Procedure, (c) Constitution, (d) Resolutions, (e) Nominations.

The effective organization of the Congress might be improved by having its membership composed of journalistic associations represented by delegates rather than, as at present, including also individual journalists. This suggestion, which comes to the President from several delegates, is referred to the appropriate committee.

Whether or not regional conferences should be held, whether the Congress should meet at stated times, and the adequate financing of the activities of the Congress are questions which also should have most careful consideration and decision.

Vital to the profession of journalism is freedom. Its very life depends upon liberty to speak the truth. Hard-fought have been the battles for this liberty, nor has freedom of the press been yet attained in full measure anywhere. No country is wholly free from offensive and unnecessary interference with press liberty. Not a new political doctrine is announced by reactionary dictators today but ancient tyranny in modern dress. Again and again has this right of the freeman to speak his thoughts been attacked and denied, disastrously always to the people and to the press. Slowly journalism is being freed—has been freed—from shackles of censorship and control, tyranny and bondage. Reaction comes and some gained ground is lost, but the battle renewed brings progress and victory. Freedom, essential to the press but more essential to the public, is more nearly realized. The principle of freedom for journalism, which includes responsibility for the wise exercise of the freedom, was stated by the great English law writer, Blackstone:

"The liberty of the press is indeed essential to the notion of a free state," said he. "But this consists in laying no previous restraints upon publication and not in freedom from censure for criminal matter when published.

"Every free man has an undoubted right to lay what sentiments he pleases before the public; to forbid this is to destroy the freedom of the press; but if he publishes what is improper, mischievous, or illegal, he must take the consequences of his own temerity.

"To subject the press to the restrictive power of a licensor is to subject all freedom of sentiment to the prejudices of one man and to make him the arbitrary and infallible judge of all controverted points in learning, religion, and government.

"No restraint is laid, or should be laid, upon freedom of thought and of inquiry. The dissemination or making public of bad sentiments destructive of the ends of society is a crime which society corrects."

And John Milton, world poet, in his noble plea for unlicensed printing, defended thus the freedom of the press:

"Give me the liberty to know, to utter and to argue freely according to conscience, above all liberties.

"And though all the winds of doctrine were let loose to play upon the earth, so Truth be in the field, we do injuriously, by licensing and prohibiting, to misdoubt her strength. Let her and Falsehood grapple; whoever knew Truth put to the worse in a free and open encounter?"

Thus with prophets in all lands.

"I wholly disapprove of what you say," declared Voltaire, "and will defend to the death your right to say it."

"This is the slave's lot," said Euripides, "to bear a bondman's tongue."

Freedom to speak the truth needs to be insisted upon, defended whenever attacked, and demanded whenever denied, hastened whenever delayed, and, whenever attained, accepted as an obligation that carries high responsibility.

"There is none ever fear the truth should be heard Save those whom the truth would indict."

Journalism should keep open house for every wholesome truth while the doors of its sheltering space are closed to the falsehoods, expressed or implied, which are destructive of domestic or world welfare and peace.

Let us seek the creation of a public opinion which will make possible genuine liberty for the press everywhere, while at the same time we hold ourselves and our pressmen responsible for the wise exercise of the tremendous power which such liberty gives.

I commend to you the adoption of a deliverance upon this vital question that will denounce denial of liberty and give

(Continued on page 47)

INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZED PRESS IS HOPE OF WORLD UNDERSTANDING

THE need for journalistic organization was the topic discussed by Casper S. Yost, editor of the editorial page, St. Louis Globe-Democrat, and past president, American Society of Newspaper Editors, at the Geneva-Lausanne meeting of the Press Congress of the World this week.

"Nothing in modern life is more fruitful of progress than organized action," he said. "And yet, curiously enough, that calling or profession which does more than all others to make public organization most effective, has been slowest to apply it to its own advancement.

"Perhaps the reason for this is that journalism is peculiarly an individualistic enterprise, and that it is so often in some sort of antagonism to others of its own kind. Journalism is constantly contending for something, or against something, and it therefore exists in an atmosphere of contention that is, or has been, a bar to professional co-operation. But in the last fifty years there has been developing, gradually and imperceptibly, a change in the form, the ideals, the principles and the spirit of journalism, that has been slowly altering the attitude of its practitioners toward one another, and toward their profession.

"This change is due in part to the growth of the business of journalism as a separate and distinct department. Whatever the rivalries of business it tends to the recognition of common interests of a national nature, and, in time, to the realization that these interests can often be best promoted by co-operation or organized action. Publishers, as such, being more directly and urgently concerned in the material welfare of their publications than are their editors, however much the editors may have that welfare at heart, have been quicker to perceive the advantages of the collective consideration of common problems, and to come together for this purpose. Perhaps the strongest influence to this end has been the labor unions of the printing crafts. Labor combinations have made employer combinations almost essential to the business conduct of the press. But this has been only one of many inducements to organization by newspaper publishers. Publishers, for these reasons, were organized, in America at least, long before editors, as distinguished from publishers, thought of organization as an aid to the profession of journalism.

"Another cause of the changes referred to has been the development of a broader conception of editorial responsibilities to the public. For the great part of the three centuries of its existence journalism had been almost wholly a personal or partisan agency, devoted solely to personal or partisan ends. But there has been developing within recent years, the conviction that whatever the personal or partisan interests involved the press is first and foremost an instrument of public service, and that its primary function is to supply dependable information and opinion to the public it serves. This conception not only enlarges the horizons of journalism, and not only places it upon broader and firmer foundations, but it necessitates a different ideal of public obligation and public duty. Moreover, it gives a higher dignity to the profession of journalism and places it upon a moral plan comparable with the best agencies of human service and teaching.

"Such a conception of the functions of journalism demands the creation of elevated standards of practice which can only be established by organized effort. And it is obvious that the profession of journalism, which is something distinct from the business of journalism, must be promoted by the profession itself, and not by the business. In America it had been noticed that the publishers, in their organization, concentrated their attention upon business affairs—the price of paper, the development of mechanical facilities, the rates of postage, the questions of labor—leaving the editorial or professional end to shift for itself. It became necessary, therefore, for the editors themselves to organize separately for the promotion and advancement of journalism as a profession; not in opposition to the publishers, but, on the contrary, to support their efforts to make better newspapers by the establishment of better principles, methods and standards of editorial administration. Out of this necessity was born the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

Mr. Yost then told the aims of the Society and read its Canons.

"Nothing can do so much to promote international understanding as an understanding press, and nothing can contribute so much to an understanding press as the contacts and associations of international meetings and organizations for the promotion of the press," he said in closing "The journalist who is most useful to his country is he who knows what he is talking about. And this is particularly true when he is discussing international affairs, wherein the knowledge of his readers is probably least, and their opinions most likely to err, unless they have accurate information and capable guidance from the press. I have no use for the journalist who does not regard the interests and welfare of his own country as paramount, and there must always, in the nature of things, be difference of interests and of policies that are conflicting. But it is nevertheless true that most of the international differences that often agitate the press and the public grow out of misunderstandings rather than out of actual conflict of interest, and it is the duty of good Journalism to endeavor to clear away these misunderstandings and reveal the truth without prejudice. Moreover, when there are real conflicts of interest the editor can do more for the promotion of sound public opinion and sound judgment if he can present the facts in the situation from his own knowledge. Therefore such a gathering as this, should contribute to a greater, and better journalism for advancement of human welfare and promotion of human peace."

MUST PRINT IN CITY TO BE LEGAL PAPER

Monrovia (Cal.) Post, Printed in Pasadena Post Plant, Not a Legal Newspaper, Supreme Court Rules In Deciding Appeal

A newspaper must be printed in the town in which it circulates to be considered a legal newspaper, the Supreme Court of California decided Sept 8, in deciding an appeal by the Monrovia Daily News from a lower court ruling that the Monrovia Evening Post was a legal paper.

The issue was raised in Monrovia when the Post lost a competitive bid for the city printing on the grounds that it was not a newspaper of general circulation. It filed its petition in the Superior Court of Los Angeles county asking that it be declared a newspaper of general circulation. The request was granted by the court.

C. C. Howard, owner and publisher of the News, appeared in the action through his attorneys, Walter F. Dunn and John A. H. Sturgeon, of Monrovia and Harland G. Palmer, and protested the entry of such an order.

The court stated that the uncontradicted testimony showed that the Monrovia Evening Post is a newspaper in which the literary part of the work is done in Monrovia, where an office is maintained, but that "all the mechanical portion of making-up and issuing the paper, however, including the stereotype plates, typesetting and press work are done in the city of Pasadena in the office and shop of the Pasadena Evening Post in conjunction with which paper, the Monrovia Evening Post is regularly issued and circulated."

After citing the state law in regard to publication of official notices, the decision said:

"The word 'published' as used in this section, shall mean and be construed to mean, that such a newspaper of general circulation shall have been issued from the place where it is printed.

"It is the clear intention of the legislature to require a newspaper of general circulation to be both printed and published in the city, town or county where it seeks the patronage of such legal notices.

"The last section specifically holds that it is 'printed' where the mechanical work of producing the paper, to wit, the operation of typesetting and impressing the types upon the paper, is performed.

"The Monrovia Evening Post is printed where the typesetting and mechanical part of the work is performed. The mechanical work is done in Pasadena and not at Monrovia. It necessarily follows that the Monrovia Evening Post is printed and published at Pasadena and not at Monrovia.

"It may have been a matter of excellent business economy to print and publish the Monrovia Evening Post in conjunction with the Pasadena Evening Post at its shops in Pasadena, but certainly according to the clear letter of the statute, it is neither printed nor published at Monrovia, and is, therefore, not a newspaper of general circulation within the city of Monrovia, nor qualified to print legal notices which are required to be published in a newspaper of general circulation circulated within that particular city."

REACHES CENTURY MARK

Morristown (N. J.) Jerseyman to Issue Centennial Number, Oct. 4

The Morristown (N. J.) Jerseyman will reach its 100th birthday on Oct. 4.

The event will be marked by publication of Centennial Edition, which will chronicle the history of the state, county and city. The general manager of the paper is Alva Lamberton.

The Jerseyman is the second oldest newspaper in New Jersey.

WILL ATTEND OXFORD

Two Members of Cincinnati Times-Star Staff to Study Abroad

Two members of the Cincinnati Times-Star editorial staff will attend Oxford University, England, this fall.

A. H. Berding

Joseph Sagmaster

Andrue H. Berding, who is editor of the Times-Star Saturday magazine, and also radio editor, will attend Brasenose College, Oxford, and Joseph Sagmaster, on the news staff, will attend Lincoln College. Sagmaster is Rhodes scholar from Ohio.

This will be Berding's first year at Oxford, and Sagmaster's second. Sagmaster has been working at the Times-Star during the summer. Berding will work for a Master of Arts degree, and Sagmaster for a Bachelor of Literature.

Both young men will leave on the Carmania, Oct. 2, from New York. Berding will write a weekly London column for the Times-Star editorial page while he is away.

ST. LOUIS STAR MARKS FORTIETH YEAR

Publishes 96-Page Issue Sept. 8 Carrying 560 Columns of Advertising—Thirteen Years Under Present Ownership

The St. Louis Star observed its fortieth anniversary on Wednesday, Sept. 8. by issuing a 96-page newspaper, claimed to be the largest daily issue ever published in St. Louis. The paper contained 560 columns of paid advertising. As an example of the Star's progress during the thirteen years since it passed into its present ownership, the Star stated that the advertising revenue of this single issue was approximately equal to the advertising revenue for the whole three-months' period from June 1 to September 1, 1913, which was immediately after the purchase of the newspaper by the late John C. Roberts.

The 96-page paper contained more than 3,000 advertisements.

The present ownership of the Star began on May 13,1913, when the paper was purchased by John C. Roberts, vice-president of the International Shoe Company, the outgrowth of the Roberts, Johnson & Rand Shoe Company, which he founded. The first president of the company formed when Mr. Roberts purchased the Star was Edward S. Lewis, who was succeeded by the former's son, Elzey Roberts, who has been president continually since, coming into the direction of the paper eleven years ago. The entire capital stock of the company is owned by Elzey Roberts, his brother, John C. Jr., and their mother, Mrs. Anna Roberts.

John C. Roberts died April 27, 1924, at his home in St. Louis County.

ANNIVERSARY IN JAMESTOWN

Morning Post Was 25 Years Old Sept. 1—Continuous Management

The Jamestown (N. Y.) Morning Post was 25 years old Sept. 2.

Cyrus E. Jones, Arthur C. Wade and Ralph Sheldon, of Jamestown; Robert K. Beach, then of Chicago, and Edward L. Allen, of Buffalo were the five original stockholders.

The executive management of the paper has been in the hands of Mr. Allen as editor, and Mr. Beach, as business manager, throughout the quarter of a century. Mr. Sheldon is the present president. Mr. Jones sold his interest to Mr. Sheldon in 1904. Mr. Wade died in 1914.

In the 25 years the population of Jamestown has doubled, and the circulation of the Morning Post has quadrupled, Mr. Sheldon stated.

FRIGIDAIRE COMPANY PLANS WINTER DRIVE

Makers of Electric Ice Box Will Continue Advertising Through Cold Season Using List of 1,850 Daily Newspapers

The Frigidaire Corporation plans to continue its present advertising campaign, which is being carried in 1,850 daily newspapers, well into the fall and winter, according to E. G. Biechler, president and general manager. This organization has been a continuous and heavy user of newspaper space for more than a year.

"Our business has been highly gratifying," said Mr. Biechler. "We have satisfied ourselves that the public will buy Frigidaire in the winter months as well as during the summer and there will be no slackening of sales and advertising effort on our part. We know that it is summer in the kitchen the whole year round and that food spoils in December the same as it does in June. That is why there will be no let-up in the Frigidaire advertising campaign."

This particular manufacturer of electric refrigerators claims to have sold more electric refrigerators than all of its two hundred-odd competitors combined. Mr. Biechler attributes a considerable degree of credit for the company's record to newspaper advertising.

"In August Frigidaire announced drastic price reductions affecting all models. The news of the price cut was carried in large space in all daily papers on the Frigidaire list with a dealer tie-up. The sales results were remarkable," Biechler said. "Sales offices the next day all over the country were thronged with interested visitors; many new prospects were obtained and more household Frigidaires were sold on that date than any previous day in the history of the business.

"Frigidaire advertising will be continued for the remainder of the year in most of the magazines, trade and class publications that have been used in the past, with perhaps a few additions where the market seems to justify their use.

"The Frigidaire Corporation is now in the midst of an expansion project to be completed by the end of the present year which will enable it to double its production. With its additional manufacturing facilities it will be in position to turn out 600,000 electric refrigerator units in 1927."

CHICAGO NEWS IN LIBEL SUIT

States Attorney and His Assistant Ask $50,000 Damages Each

Two suits for alleged libel each for $50,000, have been filed against the Chicago Daily News by Charles A. McDonald, special State's Attorney, and his assistant, James C. O'Brien.

McDonald and O'Brien are investigating vote frauds and the machine-gun slaying of William H. McSwiggin, young assistant State's Attorney.

The alleged libel concerns the McSwiggin slaying. McDonald had said, "we think we know who killed McSwiggin."

"Sure he knows, but what has he done about it?" Anthony McSwiggin, father of the slain prosecutor, was quoted by the Daily News.

DAILY REPRINTS FLOWER SERIES

The Milwaukee Journal has published in book form a series of articles on Wisconsin wild flowers which were printed daily on its editorial page. The author is Matt Clohisy, of the Journal staff.

APPEALS FOR DELAY I A.B.C. RATE DISPUTE

Williams, Newspaper Committee Secretary, Urges Clague to Postpone Final Action Until After October Meet

An appeal for delay of final action the Audit Bureau of Circulations on t question of newspapers supplying th advertising rates along with circulati figures was made last week by T. Williams, publisher of the Pittsbur Gazette Times and Pittsburgh Chroni Telegraph, and secretary of the bureau newspaper advisory committee.

In a letter addressed to Stanley Clagu bureau director, Mr. Williams declar it was the opinion of his committee th the whole affair should be "thorough threshed out in convention" before t proposal goes into effect, because, he sa there is a substantial difference of opini among newspaper members on the su ject.

The bureau's recommendation was have been effective with the next aud the closing date of which was Sept. It is entirely optional with the publishe whether or not they supply their adve tising rates. The A. B. C. convention to be held in Chicago, Oct. 21-22.

Mr. Clague informed Editor & Pu lisher by telegraph that the commu cation from Mr. Williams would be pr sented to the directorate on Sept. 17, c claring no comment could be made pr to that date.

Mr. Williams' letter to Mr. Clag follows:

"The members of the A. B. C. New paper Advisory Committee have giv careful consideration individually and correspondence to objections that ha arisen from the bureau's proposal to pu lish rate cards along with circulati reports.

"In view of the opposition among new paper publishers and also because of t substantial difference of opinion amo newspaper members on this subject, t members of the Newspaper Advisc Committee recommend to you and t board of directors that nothing be dc in this matter until after the whole qu tion has been thoroughly threshed out the annual convention.

"We believe that this course will b serve the present and future interests the bureau and afford an opportunity thoroughly iron out all differences opinion."

FRAUD AD RULING

Newspaper Advertising Covered Mail Laws, Judge Says

Newspaper advertising is covered the federal statute relating to mail frau Judge Xen Hicks has held in Unit States district court at Knoxville, Ten during the trial of S. R. Rambo on charge of using the mails to defra Counsel for the defense had sought directed verdict of acquittal and amo other contentions declared there is no ing in the statute covering the use newspapers.

"The statute provides that no pamphl writing, letter or advertisement be s through the mails to aid in a fraudul scheme," Judge Hicks explained in ov ruling the motion. "Newspaper advert ing, which is the cheapest way I know get publicity, is advertising. If the st ute did not cover the use of newspap it would throw a wide field open. The is nothing in the statute to show th proof must be introduced indicating th addresses of mail were defrauded. T statute is not limited to the defend placing something in the mails. If places or causes to be placed in the ma anything used to further a fraudul scheme he is covered by the statute. the whole, without expressing any opini in the case, I overrule the motion th the case be decided without going to jury."

NEWSPAPER WORD-ORGY PUFFS DEMPSEY BOUT

60,000 Words a Day Streaming from Camps of Two Pugs—Press Spending Half a Million to Garner Every Detail—600 News Men Will Cover Philadelphia Fight—"Important Event" Says Landis

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 15.—Newspapers are going plain loco over the Dempsey-Tunney heavyweight championship bout. They are scattering a trail of gold coin and golden adjectives that will end in a spending spree at the Sesquicentennial stadium in Philadelphia, Sept. 23, surpassed in ring and newspaper history only by the Reno fight of 16 years ago.

A half million dollars is a conservative estimate of the reportorial bill the press will pay to furnish fight fans with a bumper crop of information on the conditioning of two fighting giants and their final contest. An estimate of the total wordage at this time is impossible, but sports writers say they are sending about 60,000 words a day now from the training camps in Atlantic City and Stroudsburg, Pa.

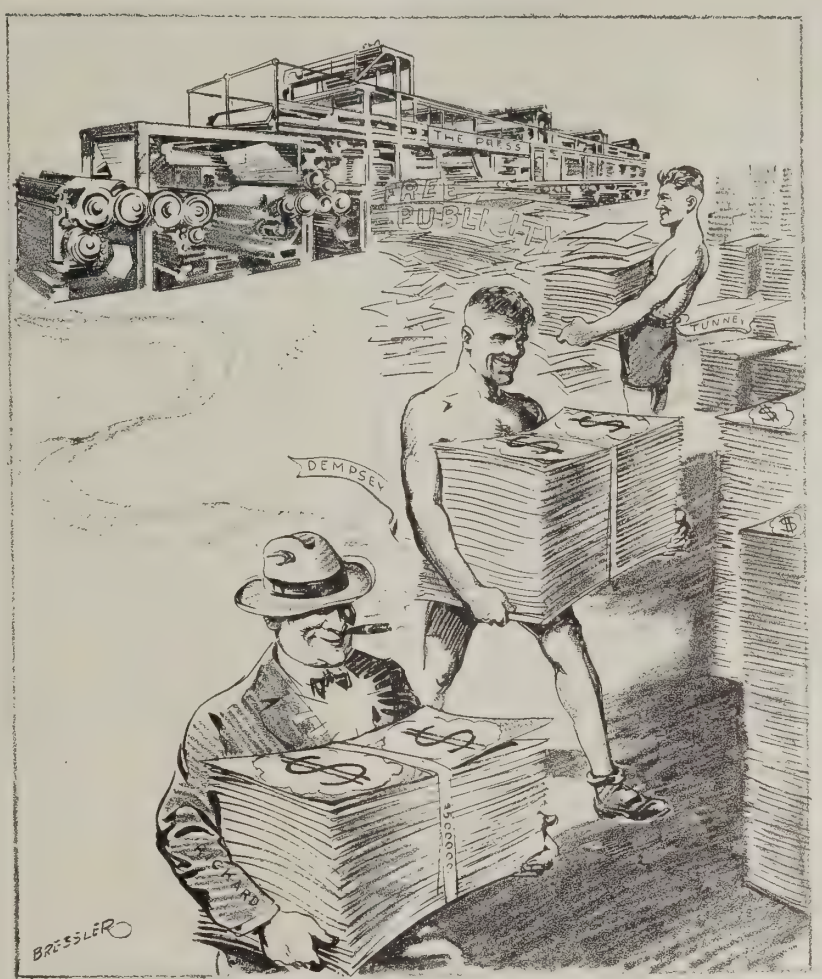
In response to this outpouring from newspaper cash drawers and the imaginative minds of boxing chroniclers, Frank E. Jones, assistant manager for Jack Dempsey, with whom I talked on Tuesday of this week, was able to say that already more than a million dollars had been paid in for seats by fans planning to come to Philadelphia from all over the country.

Some 100 newspaper men, including boxing writers from San Francisco and Los Angeles, are responsible for the 60,000 words which this week were being sent out daily by wire from Atlantic City, Stroudsburg, and Philadelphia on the fight. About half that number have covered the two camps throughout the entire training period of two months. There will be 600 newspaper men at the actual bout.

In addition to regular writers, the newspapers, through the syndicates, have engaged the services of experts in the sport to furnish them with daily yarns about everything and nothing the champion and his challenger do.

"Benny" Leonard, retired lightweight champion, and Jimmy DeForest, trainer, are putting their names over stories copyrighted by the New York World and the North American Newspaper Alliance. Leonard actually writes most of his copy himself, although it appears in the World as dictated to a member of the sporting staff. His stories are edited by Ned Brown, of the World, and a veteran fight reporter. This one expert fills two columns daily, and by Wednesday of this week he said he had sent out a total of 18 columns.

"Tommy" Gibbons, the prize fighter, visited the training camps Tuesday with his Boswell, who has started to furnish newspaper clients of the Bell Syndicate, New York, with "inside dope." King Features Syndicate, Inc., presents the bylines of the fight principles themselves. King claims a large list of papers taking this service.



Stories under the name of Jack Kearns, former manager of Jack Dempsey, who is handled by the Christy Walsh Syndicate, and by Gus Wilson, Dempsey's trainer and Lou Fink, Gene Tunney's trainer, add to the geyser of words. Other "big names" will report the fight.

With the exception of the aforementioned Reno engagement, newspapers never before have so extended themselves in covering a heavyweight championship and the uninitiated immediately asks the question:

What is it all about? Why is this commercial exhibit considered such an important date in the journalistic year?

"We are meeting a legitimate reader-demand," Tommy Laird, covering the business for six Scripps-Howard newspapers on the Pacific coast, said this week.

"Naturally a percentage of the fight fan crowd is created by newspaper ballyhoo. There are always some suckers who will fall for side show posters and the linguistic attainments of the barkers. But there is also a boxing public so great and so insistent it cannot be denied the space being given it in newspaper columns."

Pugilism's own Bureau of Engraving

Drawn for EDITOR & PUBLISHER by Harry Bressler

Benny Leonard, himself a figure of no little importance in the sporting world, pointed out that the fight game is so firmly planted in American life that it has survived all attempts to weed it out.

"Blue law hypocrites have tried harder to kill boxing than they ever tried to put prohibition across and boxing would not be downed," Leonard said to the writer this week.

Ned Brown of New York World has been reporting fights for 25 years.

"If this or any fight is over press-agented by the newspapers, the blame must be shared equally by the public and by the press," he said. "Keen competition among newspapers tends to cause over-play of a story of this kind. One paper will sign Dempsey for the use of his name over a fight feature. The opposition immediately becomes afraid it will lose out on circulation and signs up another prize fight expert to play against the billboard publicity being given Dempsey by the rival. And the public really wants it's fight news, whoever writes it."

Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, as "baseball czar," might well be jealous of the space which is cutting into the press support regularly given professional baseball and denounce the prize fight orgy. I happened to meet him on the train to Atlantic City this week, and he justified the play of the heavyweight championship instead of condemning it.

"Don't you think a great deal of space and money is being wasted by the newspapers in playing up this Dempsey-Tunney fight," I asked the Judge.

"I do not," Judge Landis thundered back, and he slapped fist against palm to emphasize his negative.

"A heavyweight championship is a great event in the affairs of this country and it is only being given its due by the press."

In general the sports writers maintain that this "important event in the affairs of this country" is on the level. Neither Dempsey nor Tunney were made fighters by the notice given them by newspapers, and according to trained boxing critics questioned they are the logical white contenders for the championship.

Meanwhile writers are discussing learnedly and lengthily every possible phase of the fight. There always has to be some hokum to feature in an affair of this kind, they say. Sixteen years ago Jim Jeffries was "the hope of the white race." Then it was Firpo, "the wild bull of the pampas." In this contest the ballyhoo is brain against brawn. Tunney reads Shakespeare and talks about his lucubrations. He creates publicity for himself easily. Dempsey, truly a giant, radiates physical power, and inspires the newspaper men to work overtime at their mills. Both fighters are also good showmen.

I called at Dempsey's headquarters at the Atlantic City dog track. He has quit his public work-outs now, but is still receiving the sports writers. At about 3.30 of an afternoon, Dempsey begins his public training, which lasts about three-quarters of an hour. He comes out from his headquarters followed by his conditioner, his manager, and his ten sparring partners. He punches the bag for a while. Then maybe he shadow boxes, and afterwards takes on some fighters for about 5 rounds.

All this was watched carefully by about 50 newspaper men Sept. 13, for example. They saw how Dempsey looked. Was he in good condition or poor? Did he hurt his partner? They sought answers to these questions.

After the three-quarters of an hour, the fifty newspaper correspondents left the dog track to write their stories. Joe Meyers, publicity man for Dempsey, has fixed up press headquarters at the Atlantic Hotel, which is near the telegraph office. From the training headquarters itself wire facilities are poor. There are not even telephones. At the Atlantic Hotel or the Ambassador Hotel, where most of the newspaper men are stopping, the writers filed their 1,200 or 1,600 words to their newspapers.

Every one of these boxing writers has his own way of getting copy. All are master space fillers. And the editors, particularly in New York and Philadelphia are letting the copy run.

It was nothing for Metropolitan newspapers to devote a full page to the fight, a week before the actual battle. There were "expert" stories full of wise guesses as to the result and often open tipping for the gambling fraternity. There were extravagant displays of feature stories and pictures galore. No newspaper attempted to conceal its zeal and excitement, with the possible exception of the New York Sun. This paper played down the story and ran after reports from the training camps the editorial advice in bold face type, "Don't bet on fights."

I didn't visit the Tunney camp. I was told, however, that the procedure there was very similar to the daily drill at the Atlantic City dog track, except that it was carried out in a different atmosphere. The Glenbrook Country Club is Tunney's training quarters. The distinction between dog track and country club is obvious.

Press association officials say virtually their entire circuits will be opened up to serve newspapers with round-by-round stories of the fight. Some 25 Associated Press members arranged for wire connections to broadcasting stations to report the fight over the air. A score of United Press clients also planned to broadcast.

A difficulty developed late this week when it was reported Tex Rickard had signed "exclusive" broadcasting rights, serving notice on newspapers that broadcasting from press association reports would be an infringement of his property rights. On Sept. 23 a United Press dispatch from Philadelphia said that any unauthorized broadcasting would be met with heavy damage suits. Broadcasting a fight represented tangible property, Rickard held, and declared he was taking steps to protect his interests.

This year the photographers, from New York at least, are being cared for more efficiently than usual. In the past it has been common practise to give the cameramen simply a blanket pass allowing them to rove about the stadium to take snaps from whatever vantage point the police, the ushers, or the fans permitted them. This year a committee of New York newspaper and syndicate photographers have arranged with Tex Richard for a special stand capable of holding 13, and the picture story of the fight will be prominently played everywhere.

Telephoto in its present stage of development will be used for the first time for fight coverage. The American Telephone and Telegraph Company has installed one of its wire picture sending machines in Philadelphia, and has agreed to serve the newspaper cameramen in order of their arrival at the A. T. & T. offices. The telephoto circuit can transmit pictures to New York, Chicago, and San Francisco.

An idea of the importance placed on the picture angle of this fight is the order issued by John H. Tennant, man-

(Continued on page 38)

JUDGE IS DEFEATED WHO JAILED EDITOR

Californian Denied Nomination on Contempt Issue and Fight to Free Humboldt Editor Is Hotly Resumed

EUREKA, Cal., Sept. 10.—Superior Judge Denver Sevier, who several months ago sentenced Alfred Lindsley, editor of the Humboldt News, to serve 1,000 days in the county jail or pay a fine of $2,000 on a charge of contempt of court, was nosed out for the nomination to the superior court bench in the recent election. Judge Sevier ran fifth in a field of seven candidates with four to be nominated.

S. F. Metzler, Lindsley's attorney, received a majority of more than 300 votes over three other candidates in the race for district attorney.

Eureka's "jailed editor" was the issue of the campaign. Now the fight has been resumed to secure freedom for Mr. Lindsley.

Judge Sevier now has under consideration arguments on a motion to modify judgment, submitted yesterday. If the point raised in favor of the editor wins, he will be released immediately, after having served about 200 days.

Lindsley edited his paper from his prison cell for a few weeks at first, but the battle for "freedom of the press" was too greatly handicapped under these circumstances and a group of interested fellow citizens took over the paper. T. P. Magilligan, former San Francisco newspaper man, was installed as editor and publisher to carry on the fight for Lindsley's liberty and the right "to comment on and criticize the acts of public officials."

Prohibition and enforcement constituted the bone of contention that led up to Lindsley's imprisonment and became the issue with Lindsley's case that resulted in the turning out of office of three of the officials involved in the editor's jail sentence.

In a series of articles attacking the alleged "czaristic" methods of prohibition enforcement, Lindsley criticized District Attorney A. W. Hill's employment of a large staff as a dry squad.

Judge Sevier, holding that the district attorney is an "officer of the court," construed Lindsley's criticism of that official as constructive contempt. Four editorials in the Humboldt News were adjudged in contempt and Lindsley was fined $500 on four counts of contempt.

Failing to pay the fine, he was sentenced to serve one day in jail for each $2 of the aggregate fine of $2,000.

With Lindsley's incarceration made an election issue and Lindsley's paper leading the fight in what is conceded was the hottest campaign ever waged in Humboldt county, the jailed editor's friends emerged victorious at the August primary.

Eighty per cent of the registered vote of the county cast ballots at the primary with the campaign cry of the News, "turn out the county courthouse clique."

TEXAS PUBLISHERS MEET

Labor, Newsprint and Freight Rates Chief Program Topics

GALVESTON, Tex., Sept. 14.—Labor conditions, newsprint supply and freight rates comprised the chief topics of discussion at the summer meeting here at Hotel Galvez for the past two days of the Texas Publishers' Association.

Commissioner G. J. Palmer of the Houston Chronicle, active business representative of the organization, presented a comprehensive report covering operations since the mid-winter meeting. Mr. Palmer has recently represented several members of the organization in making new labor contracts and adjusting scales. The purchase of newsprint from foreign mills with delivery through Gulf ports was recommended, although the domestic mills are to be considered as the principal source of supply.

Greetings from the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association were conveyed in an address by President John A. Park of the Raleigh (N. C.) Times. Mr. Park commended the fine work of the Texas association and offered the full co-operation of his organization.

At the conclusion of Mr. Park's remarks, Commissioner Palmer stated that he would recommend that every Texas daily newspaper which could qualify, should join the S. N. P. A. The campaign of advertising being conducted by the S. N. P. A. to "Sell the South Through Newspapers" was also commended by many of the Texas publishers, most of them supporting the fund for paid advertising in national publications.

Officers of the Texas Association are: Frank Huntress, San Antonio Express and News, president; W. C. Mayborn, Houston Press, vice president; A. E. Clarkson, secretary-treasurer and G. J. Palmer, special commissioner. Mr. Palmer handles the business activities of the group.

The next meeting will be held in February at some inland city.

PROXY FIGHT LOOMS AT A.B.C. MEET

Clague and New York Newspaper Members Asking Those Unable to Attend to Appoint Agents to Cast Votes in Chicago, Oct. 21

Considerable discussion of the advertising rate listing plan adopted by the directors will probably take place at the 13th annual convention of the Audit Bureau of Circulations at the Hotel La Salle, Chicago, Oct. 21-22, the official notice of which was issued by Stanley Clague, managing director, last week. Mr. Clague, however, did not mention the possibility of such discussion in his announcement.

Directors at a recent meeting decided to permit publishers to submit their advertising rates to the bureau to be issued with the regular A. B. C. reports, specifying the new service was optional. Shortly afterwards a resolution objecting to the action of the board was passed by the A. B. C. newspaper members in New York.

Headed by Fred A. Walker, managing director of the New York Evening Telegram, the New York members have sent out proxies, calling for votes of protest against the action of the board and for a stand for reduced rates to newspaper members for the A. B. C. auditing service.

A proxy form is also included in the announcement sent out by Mr. Clague, who wrote:

"Too much care cannot be exercised in the selection of proxies. Please bear in mind that no proxy can be recorded after the opening of the convention at 10 a. m. Oct. 21.

"To facilitate the work of recording proxies, it is most necessary to dispatch them in plenty of time to reach the office of the bureau before Oct. 20."

To meet the desire of some members to be represented by directors, Mr. Clague listed names of the senior board members in each division as follows:

F. R. Davis, advertiser; Walter Hine, advertising agent; Walter A. Strong, publisher, Chicago Daily News, newspaper; Stanley R. Latshaw, magazine; B. Kirk Rankin, farm paper; and E. R. Shaw, business publication.

The proxy forms of the New York members suggest as agents Mr. Walker, J. F. Bresnahan, business manager, New York World, and E. G. Martin, business manager, Brooklyn Eagle.

TO EDIT OHIO PAPER

Horace W. Karr, formerly of Los Angeles and Dayton, O., has been chosen editor of the Tribune, the new paper to be started at Pomeroy, O. The Tribune succeeds the Daily News which was taken over by the Meigs Publishing Company.

LEAVITT SCORES TAX ON ADVERTISING

Secretary of A.N.A. Suggests Billboard Taxation May Spread to Other Media and Urges United Attack at Springfield Meet

Attempts to tax advertising were scored by Robert K. Leavitt, secretary of the Association of National Advertisers, speaking before the Western Massachusetts Group of National Advertisers, which met in Springfield, Sept. 13. He pointed out that one state, Connecticut, had already succeeded in taxing billboard advertising, and suggested that should the principle of advertising taxation once gain any foothold, it might spread to newspapers, magazines and other media.

"Taxation of advertising is absolutely unsound," said Mr. Leavitt, "and establishment of the principle should be fought by representatives of all media.

"Advertising is the lubricant for the machine of distribution and to tax it is simply to throw grit into that machine. As advertising men all know, advertising decreases costs to the consumer, because it makes for large volume production and quantity distribution."

Connecticut has placed a tax of three cents a square foot on billboard advertising. One municipality, Mr. Leavitt said, had placed a tax of 10 cents a square foot on the same medium. High postal rates, the A. N. A. secretary asserted, were tantamount to taxation of direct mail advertising.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER CALENDAR

Sept. 20-23—Financial Advertisers Assn., annual convention, Detroit, Mich.
Sept. 20-23—Advertising Specialty Assn., annual convention, Hotel Sherman, Chicago.
Sept. 20-22—Georgia Press Assn., annual convention, Louisville, Ga.
Sept. 21-22—National Publishers' Assn., annual convention, Shawnee-on-the-Delaware, Pa.
Sept. 23-25—Missouri Press Assn., annual convention and boat trip, Cape Girardeau, Mo.
Sept. 23-25—Tri-State Editorial Assn., annual convention, Sioux City, Ia.
Sept. 30-Oct. 1—Illinois Press Assn., Champaign-Urbana, Ill.

"We do not support these two med over any other," he said, "but we belie there should be co-operation between a publishers, agency, and advertising me to attack the principle of advertising ta ation."

N. Y. BUSINESS BUREAU ACTIVE

The New York Better Business Bure has opened a new department to invest gate complaints and prepare cases f people who believe they have been vi tims of real estate frauds. The acti followed a series of articles on la sharks published by New York Wor

Circulation

THE average Daily and Sunday circulation of the Florida Times-Union for August, 1926 shows an increase of more than 15% over August, 1925.

The Florida Times-Union

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.

1045 COLUMNS

A new high record of advertising in a single issue of The New York Times

The New York Times last Sunday (September 12) printed 309,320 agate lines of advertising (1045 columns). The edition consisted of 240 pages and 13 sections. This was the greatest volume of advertising ever printed in any single regular issue of a New York newspaper.

The high quality of the advertising in this and in all editions of The Times is even more significant than the great volume. The strict censorship of The Times, excluding the fraudulent and questionable, has established the highest standards for its columns, and has gained the confidence of The Times great number of intelligent, substantial readers.

In eight months this year The Times published 19,178,154 agate lines of advertising, a gain of 1,844,100 lines over the corresponding period of last year and an excess of 7,113,648 lines over the second New York newspaper.

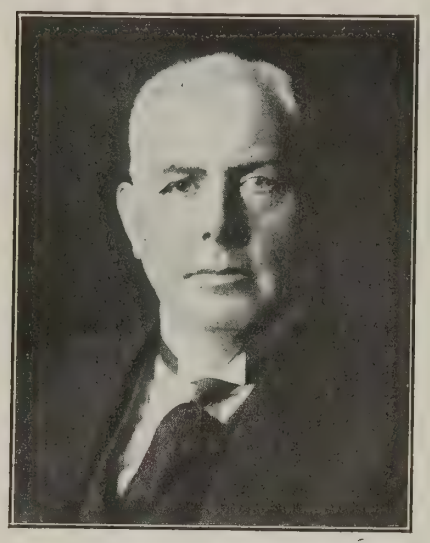
The average net paid daily and Sunday circulation of The New York Times exceeds 390,000 copies and is larger than that of any other standard sized New York morning newspaper. The Times circulation is more than 360,000 copies daily and over 600,000 on Sunday.

Today, after steadfastly rejecting all of the sensational expedients which make for rapid increases in circulation, The Times stands at the head of standard size New York morning dailies. . . It is probably the most stable and solid journalistic foundation in the United States.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

Every self-respecting newspaper in the United States has reason to congratulate The New York Times on the work of the past three decades in demonstrating that success need not depend on methods flippant, cynical or unworthy; that it may find its ultimate under the guidance of truth, of fairness and of good taste.

BROOKLYN DAILY EAGLE



On September 19 The New York Times commemorates its seventy-fifth anniversary by issuing a 64-page rotogravure tabloid section as a part of the Sunday edition. It will be illustrated and will constitute a vivid panorama of seventy-five eventful years of world progress.

The New York Times

LONDON DAILY MAIL EDITOR RESIGNS

T. M. Marlowe Had Served More Than 25 Years—Resignation Said to Hinge on Difference of Opinion with Rothermere on Anti-U. S. Policy

Thomas M. Marlowe this week resigned as editor of the London Daily Mail, Lord Rothermere's leading newspaper. He will retain the chairmanship of the Associated Newspapers, Ltd., publishers of the Daily Mail and allied papers.

T. M. Marlowe

The reasons for Mr. Marlowe's resignation are not given, but the London Times says it will inevitably be connected with the incident which occurred in August when Lord Rothermere in an article published in the Sunday Pictorial dissociated himself from the policy adopted by the Daily Mail in respect to allied debts and America.

Mr. Marlowe was only 31 when he was appointed editor of the Daily Mail and he filled the position for more than twenty-five years. The London Times pays a tribute to the "sturdy independence and remarkable common sense and sanity of judgment" he brought to his difficult task.

The Daily Mail published in July a series of violent attacks on the United States in connection with the war debt collection controversy.

For several days, it featured what it called "cold facts," the heading on one occasion being the word "Usury," with the letters US standing out in larger type than the rest. The paper also published a cartoon depicting Uncle Sam as "Uncle Shylock."

Another Rothermere paper, the Evening News, on July 20, commended editorially the Daily Mail for its stand.

Then on Aug. 8 Lord Rothermere in his Sunday Pictorial, another widely circulated paper, printed an article, which he also cabled to this country, in which he repudiated the Daily Mail campaign, saying: "The opinions are those of the editor and his staff; they are not mine."

Lord Rothermere's action created a sensation in British newspaper circles, where the resignation of Mr. Marlowe was regarded as an inevitable sequel.

MELLETT CAUSE JUST CARL MAGEE SAYS

"Fighting Editor" of New Mexico Makes Plea for Free Press in Chicago—Tells Results of His Crusade

Carl Magee, editor of the Albuquerque (N. M.) State-Tribune, this week made an impassioned plea for freedom of the press in a talk before a joint meeting of the Advertising Men's post of the American Legion and the advertising council of the Chicago Association of Commerce. Magee used as his text a sentence from Milton's "aeropagitica," for "Speech for the Liberty of Unlicensed Printing":

"Give me liberty to know, to utter and to argue freely according to my conscience, above all other liberties."

"If we editors are not free to tell of the official conduct of those in public life and if public sentiment will not support us, then how can people ever learn enough to correct the abuses of government?" Magee asked in the course of his talk.

He found cause for alarm in the death recently of Editor Don Mellett of the Canton (O.) Daily News, and in the contempt case against Editor George R. Dale of Muncie, Ind.

Of the Ohio editor he said: "Don Mellett was right in his charges of corruption. But he had to die in order that the people of the United States might know the corrupt alliances that are being made.

"Can we profit by Canton and by Indiana? We can if we support the liberty of the press in matters of public concern. I have no interest in private scandal.

"My belief in the very simple theory that men in public offices should be honest got me into all the trouble I have been in," he said.

Speaking before the Advertising Club of St. Louis on Sept. 8, Mr. Magee summed up the results of his fight in New Mexico as follows:

"Today Leahy is retired to private life. I met him in a hotel lobby and he attacked me, and in the melee an innocent bystander was killed, to my lasting regret.

"As I look back on it, Fall is disgraced at his ranch in Three Rivers, Leahy is in private life, and free speech is enthroned in New Mexico. It was a worthwhile fight. Don't be angered at newspapers when they differ with you. Don't take your advertising out in an attempt to do the same things Fall and Leahy tried to do by sending me to the penitentiary. Remember that newspapers are your bulwark."

RUSSIAN PRESS FREE WITHIN SOVIET ORDER

Can Criticize and Suggest Reforms, Journalism Instructor Reports After Month's Survey with Eddy Commission

The present Russian press system has no parallel in the world, Samuel Cahan, former newspaper man and instructor of journalism at Syracuse University declared this week upon his return from a month's tour of that country with the Sherwood Eddy Commission.

"It is a free press, but in an entirely different sense than we are accustomed to think of a free press," he said. "It is free within the social order, that is, it is a Soviet press, pledged to the Soviet idea but not limited in its activity within the party. The distinction is seen in comparing it with the Italian press under Mussolini. There the newspapers are ostensibly privately owned, but they dare not publish anything which the Dictator opposes, and they dare not criticise him. The Russian press is government owned, but is free to criticise officials of the party, and suggest reforms. As yet, however, it does make a difference who does the criticising.

"The Russian press is one of the strongest pillars of the Soviet government. Nearly every city has its daily paper, and there are many weeklies. Most of the news is informative; there are no 'features,' comic strips, or sensations. Of course local news is covered as it is covered here, but a great fire, a murder, or a scandal is not considered big news. Industrial, political and educational topics take first place.

"If Rudolph Valentino had died in Russia there would not have been the disgraceful spectacle of newspaper hysteria.

"The feuilleton is highly developed, and the dailies carry many of these personal essay-like articles by staff writers."

No advertising is carried by the Russian papers, Mr. Cahan said, theatrical notices are carried as news, since it is the opinion of the editors that the theatre is of educational benefit to the people.

The price for a Russian paper is five copecks, about two and one-half cents.

The most powerful newspaper in Russia, he declared, is Isvestia (The News) of Moscow. It is a morning paper having a circulation of about 350,000. Although the Russian papers have fewer pages than U. S. contemporaries, they equal them in news content because no space is devoted to advertising.

Mr. Cahan, who lived in Russia before the Revolution, made, at the request of the Eddy Commission, a special survey of the Russian press and its relation to the present social order. He is a newspaperman with five years experience on the Syracuse (N. Y.) Post-Standard. Last year he joined the journalism faculty at Syracuse University.

The Eddy commission, headed by Sherwood Eddy, writer and lecturer, was unofficial and composed of business men, educators, and writers. It reported Russia to be on a firm governmental basis and recommended U. S. recognition.

COLLINS PROMOTED

Milwaukee Journal's Promotion Chief Now Advertising Manager

Thomas P. Collins, for a number of years manager of the promotion and service department of the Milwaukee Journal, has been appointed advertising manager of the Journal. He assumed his new duties Sept. 15.

Before he entered the service of the Journal Mr. Collins had been advertising manager of the three large department stores of the Edward Schuster Company, in Milwaukee.

Mr. Collins is a native of Chicago and attended Loyola University in that city.

For some time he was advertising manager of the L. Klein department store of Chicago.

WESTERN DISTRIBUTING CENTER

One million people (over 200,000 prosperous families), twelve thousand dealers and more than one hundred and fifty wholesalers in the four states of Utah, Idaho, Wyoming and Nevada form the Inter-Mountain market of which Salt Lake City is the center.

A paved highway two hundred miles in length, interurban lines and two steam roads serving the territory from Idaho to one hundred miles south has wiped out distance and made the shopping trade area of Salt Lake City greater in extent than a mere suburban district.

The advertiser with adequate distribution finds but one paper necessary in his expansion plans—

The Salt Lake Tribune

The S. C. Beckwith Special Agency
—Sole Eastern Agents—
New York Chicago Detroit
St. Louis Kansas City Atlanta

M. C. Mogensen & Co., Inc.
Pacific Coast Representatives
San Francisco Los Angeles
Seattle

CERTIFIED DRY MATS CERTIFIED DRY MATS CERTIFIED DRY MATS

Scripps-Howard newspapers are good citizens of their communities. Scripps-Howard is the hall-mark of news accuracy, sane and constructive liberalism, editorial tolerance and political independence.

Represented by ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC., 250 Park Avenue, New York

TULSA WORLD STARTS EVENING EDITION

Morning Paper Now Seven Day Publication—Rand News Editor of P. M. Issue—$500,000 Plant Expansion Under Way

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

TULSA, Okla., Sept. 14.—The Tulsa Daily World today celebrated its 21st birthday by adding five evening editions to the six morning editions it already published, thus becoming an all-day newspaper, morning, evening and Sunday.

Addition of the evening editions marked another step in the expansion program undertaken last spring by Eugene Lorton, owner and publisher. A four-story addition to the paper's five-story building now is under construction and new mechanical equipment, including several new type setting machines and two octuple presses, is being installed. Various departments have been given new and larger quarters.

The news and display advertising departments are housed now on the third floor, the composing room and stereotyping department on the second, the circulation, accounting and classified advertising on the first, and the pressroom and paper storage in the basement. Nearly $500,000 are being expended in the expansion.

The executive personnel of the morning and evening editions of the World will remain virtually the same as it has been for the morning editions, with a number of additions.

Eugene Lorton heads the organization as publisher. Thomas A. Latta remains as editor of the morning paper and Otis Lorton, brother of the owner, takes the same position on the evening side. F. O. Larson, business manager; N. G. Henthorne, treasurer; B. A. Bridgewater, managing editor, L. W. McFetridge, circulation manager; and R. A. Justus, advertising manager, will serve both morning and evening editions. W. J. Rand, who has been city editor of the world, will act as news and city editor of the evening editions and Harold Davis assistant to Rand, will be promoted to city editor of the morning papers.

AD SOLICITOR ARRESTED

Earl J. Sanderson, was recently arrested in Kansas City and held under $12,000 bond on a charge of attempting to collect on an order for advertising in a program for an alleged annual convention of the Sheriffs' and Peace Officers' Association. The arrest was the outcome of an investigation by the local Better Business Bureau.

PRIZE CONTEST LIVELY

Washington Star Adds to Advertising Bureau's Prize Offer

A lively response was reported this week to the prize contest to advertise newspaper advertising announced in EDITOR & PUBLISHER last week by the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association. William A. Thomson, director of the bureau, on Thursday, said: "The responses during the first week have been unusually interesting. Newspapers everywhere have taken hold of the idea and are using their own individual plans to popularize it. The Washington (D. C.) Star has invited Washington advertising writers to participate and has announced that it will offer an additional prize of $100 to any writer in that city who wins one of the leading prizes. Newspapers in Boston and several of the other larger cities have sent special invitations to members of the local advertising club to participate.

"Some of the leading agency men have written in announcing that they have a desire to compete for the prizes and many newspapers have sent in for batches of 50 and 100 circulars giving details for distribution in their cities."

BOSTON HERALD AGREES

Believes President's Unofficial Spokesman Should Be Discarded

The following editorial appeared this week in the Boston Herald: "EDITOR & PUBLISHER addresses its leader this week to President Coolidge. It asks him on his return to Washington to put an end to the so-called 'unofficial spokesman,' or to the practice of saying things to newspaper representatives upon which he cannot himself be quoted, and on which his office evidently feels free to issue a denial in case the popular interpretation is not exactly as he intended it.

"This is good advice. The present situation is insincere. It is the President who says these things. He should either stand for them, or not say them. The latter course is the natural one.

"While the practice has grown out of Mr. Coolidge's desire to be helpful to the press, he is under no obligation to maintain it. Other Presidents have not been so agreeable to the visiting journalists. He has his official channels for communicating with the American people, in Congressional messages, in public speeches, even in radio talks. There is such a thing as saying too much. While Mr. Coolidge, of all men, seems the least liable to err on this score, there is an evident danger, growing out of the existing situation.

"While we are glad to print what he says in his capacity as unofficial spokesman, we think the general welfare would be served by a discontinuance of the practice, and by his limiting the expressions of his opinions to those not infrequent occasions on which he can clearly assume responsibility."

PAPERS TO AID U. S.

11 Dailies to Broadcast Department of Agriculture Features

Approximately 100 broadcasting stations, representing every section of the country, will lend their facilities regularly to the United States Department of Agriculture, starting Oct. 4. The broadcasting schedule of the Radio Service includes 20 special program features each week, covering the full range of interests reached by all bureaus of the department. The newspaper broadcasting stations follow:

WWJ—Detroit News.
KSL—Salt Lake City (Utah) Tribune.
WMAK—Buffalo (N. Y.) Times.
WSB—Atlanta (Ga.) Journal.
WMC—Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial Appeal.
KFOA—Seattle (Wash.) Daily Times.
WBAP—Fort Worth (Tex.) Star-Telegram.
WEBH—Chicago (Ill.) Herald & Examiner.
WHEC—Rochester (N. Y.) Journal-Post Express.
WSMB—New Orleans (La.) Item-Tribune.
KWCR—Cedar Rapids (Ia.) Republican.

America's Complete Newspaper
New York Herald Tribune

WEEKLIES WIN PRAISE FROM A.A.A.A. CHIEF

James O'Shaughnessy Calls Country Papers "Corner Stone" of American Journalism—Urges Them to Unite in Boston Address

Country weeklies were called "the cornerstone of American journalism" this week by James O'Shaughnessy, executive secretary of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, addressing the Massachusetts Press Association, Inc., meeting in Boston, Sept. 13. W. D. Allen, publisher of the Brookline (Mass.) Chronicle, and association president, presided.

JAMES O'SHAUGHNESSY

"The weekly in a small town talks to its readers more intimately and confidentially than any other medium," Mr. O'Shaughnessy said.

The agency association official urged weeklies in every state to join their state press associations, suggesting work that could be accomplished by them if they acted co-operatively.

"State associations made up of weeklies should issue lists to advertising agencies, giving the names, circulations, and advertising rates of their member newspapers," Mr. O'Shaughnessy continued. "At the present time, no man on earth can show me a complete list of weekly newspapers published in the United States.

"The state lists of weekly papers should carry a flat advertising rate that will yield a good net profit to the publishers. Agencies do not want a money losing rate, nor does the honest advertiser. The reason I suggest a flat rate is b cause it makes for easy bookkeeping. do not mean by a flat rate that you sho not charge more for preferred position for amusement and political advertisin

Mr. O'Shaughnessy advised publish of weeklies to have a fixed billing date increase the accounting efficiency in th offices.

WRITING "RADIO LETTERS"

Chicago Daily News Foreign Men R porting for Paper's Radio Station

"Behind the scenes" stories fro foreign capitals will be broadcast to Ch cagoans in a series of chatty letters fro members of the Chicago Daily Ne foreign staff.

Hal O'Flaherty, chief of the forei corps, introduced the series ov WMQA, the News radio station, Se 14. He sketched the plan of the seri called "Intimate Views of Foreign Cap tals," and read a letter from Jo Gunther in which the writer told so of the unusual bits of life he encou tered recently in the Near East. T letters will be broadcast each Tuesda evening.

Members of the foreign staff who w contribute to the series are: Pa Wright, now living on the Yangtse riv in China; Junius B. Wood, war corre pondent, who will write about his tr across Russia on a railroad untravel by an American for three years; Edg Ansel Mowrer, who will picture pos war Germany; Paul Scott Mowre Negley Farson, Hiram Kelly Moderwe and A. R. Decker.

CELEBRATES 66TH YEAR

The Fostoria (O.) Daily Review cel brated its 66th anniversary Aug. 2 T. T. Rosendale is president and Edmo M. Hopkins, editor.

If the police continue to investigate th Mellett murder case much longer, the will soon convert it into a hopelessly i soluable mystery.—Asheville Times.

Guessing About Buffalo is a Thing of the Past

Buyers of advertising had to guess in the days when Buffalo had six daily newspapers, with over-lapping and duplication that never could be figured with any certainty.

Now there is one big, strong morning newspaper. The Buffalo Courier-Express, alone in its field, giving a one-shot coverage that is definite and absolute, leaving nothing to conjecture or guesswork.

Also there is a metropolitan Sunday paper, The Buffalo Sunday Courier-Express, which will tell your story to the largest audience reached by any newspaper in New York State outside of New York City.

Courier BUFFALO EXPRESS
Buffalo's Two Newspapers

Lorenzen & Thompson, Incorporated
Publishers' Direct Representatives
Chicago New York San Francisco Seattle

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAP

LA NA

BUENO

The leading morning newspap with the Associated Press. For exa
Associated Press members in the mo

NEW YORK CITY	Population	5,62
CHICAGO	"	2,7
BUENOS AIRES	"	1,92
PHILADELPHIA .	"	1,82

LA NACION is the ONLY morn is a member of the Associated Press

Each day LA NACION receives
Press.

In addition, it has its own corres don, Paris, Rome, Madrid, Berlin.

Speaking of the 1200 Associat
American Congress of Journalists at
Mr. Frank B. Noyes, President of t

"LA NACION OF BUENOS AIRES
GLE ASSESSMENT IN OUR ORGA

LA NACION has the largest c
America and is the ONLY newspape and AUDITED circulation along the carried more display advertising, loc any other Argentine newspaper.

BRIEF, BUT WHAT A WALLOP!

AUTOMATIC oil burner manufacturers are gloating over the free space they are obtaining from newspapers. Witness the following item in a recent edition of the Nokol News, dealer organ of the American Nokol Company, Chicago:

"E. W. Carr, Inc., continues to hold the record for free publicity. When the big ads announcing the new Silent Nokol appeared in New Orleans, every paper agreed to use an article on this great advance in home heating comfort. One through error neglected to include this article.

"Mr. Carr gives the following report—brief, but what a wallop:

"'Reran 1500 line advertisement of May 31st on June 26th—No charge—account failure to run publicity with first advertisement.'"

NEW PAGE SIZE BEING TRIED IN NEWARK

Ledger, Under L. T. Russell, Now in 12-Em Six-Column Pages, 18½ Inches Deep—Publisher Claims Many Advantages

A new page size of 12-em six-column pages, 18½ inches deep, has been adopted by the Newark (N. J.) Ledger of which L. T. Russell is publisher. It is one-third larger than the usual tabloid, and one-third smaller than the standard newspaper.

L. T. Russell

Mechanical changes necessitated by the change were designed by D. J. Scott, president of the Walter Scott Printing Press Company. Plans submitted by Mr. Scott showed that by reducing the blanket slots in the printing cylinders, changing the angle of the clips and plate bevels, and using three-point column rules and dry mats, the Ledger could obtain a 12-em six-column page, with two such pages on one plate.

This left a very narrow margin plus the objectionable three-point column rule. A type face with a side shoulder because of its fatness, making the three-point rule look about as well as the point rule with lean body type, therefore added to the other mechan changes.

"We believe this to be a happy dium," Mr. Russell said. "It gives large advertisers ample space for display, and at the same time prov position for all advertisers, there b no advertisement in the Ledger in ex of a two-column width with any o advertisement above it.

"The mechanical difference is not only place where the new Ledger i variance with the other tabloids. news treatment in handling Associ Press, general local news and sports the same as in the standard size pap except that it is more abbreviated. first page is devoted to spot news tures, and the last page to spot s pictures, while two corresponding in pages are devoted to overflow pict of a general nature. The double t in the center given over to pictures the other tabloids is reserved for a partment store advertiser who has oc pied it since the first issue.

"The first ten to fourteen pages devoted to general A. P. and local ne with pages two and three each made in exactly the style of page one in standard papers, while the six back pa beginning with the sport picture p are devoted to sports. Ten to twe pages in the center of the paper filled with that character of reading m ter, illustrations, women's features, tion, cartoons, comics, overflow pictu etc., that comprise most of the reg tion tabloids.

"Our treatment of the Sunday Led follows that of the daily in a gene way, but in the matter of departme it is 'sectionized' along the lines of general Sunday newspaper. We have bitrarily split the Ledger into four s tions, the first and last pages of e section being devoted to layout pictu while the center double truck of e section is sold in a single advertisem giving us four double truck ads on S day, every one of which has been used from the first issue, with the dem double our possible supply."

NEW ST. LOUIS M. E.

William L. Bradley has been advan to managing editor of the St. Lo Times. He has been with the pa three years, coming from the Kan City Journal-Post. W. C. Guempel, f mer Associated Press man, is the n city editor. R. C. Schroeder rema head of the copy desk.

NEW ABERDEEN WORLD PLAN

Final plans for the erection of a t story building for the Aberdeen (Wash Daily World are completed and co struction is to be started this month.

Many newspaper publishers do not yet realize that the checking proof service we offer is complete to the last detail. They cannot understand how we can take a few complete copies each day and from them make an accurate and prompt distribution of checking proofs to their agencies and advertisers, at the same time relieving the publisher's office of all detail work and quite some expense. And yet, that is exactly the service we offer.

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.

538 So. Clark St.
CHICAGO

79 Madison Ave.
NEW YORK

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

6½ pt. Ionic No. 5

COMBINES WORD COUNT AND LEGIBILITY

WORD COUNT of 6 point

The British delegation of trade-union representatives, who came here on Tuesday at the invitation of "The London Daily Mail" to study reasons for the disparity between the high wages and prosperous living conditions of the American worker and their own lower wage standards, gained considerable light in a tour of several industrial establishments in Brooklyn yesterday.

They were curious to know how it was that the average wage of the American toiler virtually doubled that of his British brother, and how it was possible for industries here to offer such fat envelopes to their employees and at the same time compete successfully in world markets.

American More Productive

After a study of the Brooklyn Edison plant and the factory methods of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company in Brooklyn, the delegates remarked that one of the vital reasons for the disparity was that the American worker was capable of producing and actually did produce more than the British toiler in a given time.

This he was enabled to do, they learned, because of the high standards of efficiency obtaining here, mass-production methods, the utter perfection of organization for which the American industrialist seems always to be striving, and labor-saving devices evident on every hand.

The comments of the delegates were voiced by Sir Percival Phillips, special correspondent of "The Daily Mail"; Fenton MacPherson, of the same newspaper, and William Mosses, J. P., who had a prominent part in the British Labor Ministry during the war.

Mr. MacPherson also noted that the welfare facilities offered by the American plant were much more elaborate than in England and that equipment and quarters were more beneficial. This was evidently the result, he observed, of the frequent scrapping of plants here to make way for expansion and development. His countrymen are

6 Point No. 2 with Bold Face No. 1.
Set on 7 point slug

LEGIBILITY
6½ Point Ionic No. 5 with Bold Face No. 2.

The British delegation of trade-union representatives, who came here on Tuesday at the invitation of "The London Daily Mail" to study reasons for the disparity between the high wages and prosperous living conditions of the American worker and their own lower wage standards, gained considerable light in a tour of several industrial establishments in Brooklyn yesterday.

They were curious to know how it was that the average wage of the American toiler virtually doubled that of his British brother, and how it was possible for industries here to offer such fat envelopes to their employees and at the same time compete successfully in world markets.

American More Productive

After a study of the Brooklyn Edison plant and the factory methods of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company in Brooklyn, the delegates remarked that one of the vital reasons for the disparity was that the American worker was capable of producing and actually did produce more than the British toiler in a given time.

This he was enabled to do, they learned, because of the high standards of efficiency obtaining here, mass-production methods, the utter perfection of organization for which the American industrialist seems always to be striving, and labor-saving devices evident on every hand.

The comments of the delegates were voiced by Sir Percival Phillips, special correspondent of "The Daily Mail"; Fenton MacPherson, of the same newspaper, and William Mosses, J. P., who had a prominent part in the British Labor Ministry during the war.

Mr. MacPherson also noted that the welfare facilities offered by the American plant were much more elaborate than in England and that equipment and quarters were more beneficial. This was evidently the result, he observed, of the frequent scrapping of plants here to make way for expansion and development. His countrymen are loath, he said, to tear down a building that has served

6½ Point Ionic No. 5 with Bold Face No. 2.
Set on 7 point slug

LEGIBILITY
8 Point No. 2 with Bold Face No. 1.

The British delegation of trade-union representatives, who came here on Tuesday at the invitation of "The London Daily Mail" to study reasons for the disparity between the high wages and prosperous living conditions of the American worker and their own lower wage standards, gained considerable light in a tour of several industrial establishments in Brooklyn yesterday.

They were curious to know how it was that the average wage of the American toiler virtually doubled that of his British brother, and how it was possible for industries here to offer such fat envelopes to their employees and at the same time compete successfully in world markets.

American More Productive

After a study of the Brooklyn Edison plant and the factory methods of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company in Brooklyn, the delegates remarked that one of the vital reasons for the disparity was that the American worker was capable of producing and actually did produce more than the British toiler in a given time.

This he was enabled to do, they learned, because of the high standards of efficiency obtaining here, mass-production methods, the utter perfection of organization for which the American industrialist seems always to be striving, and labor-saving devices evident on every hand.

The comments of the delegates were voiced by Sir Percival Phillips, special correspondent of "The Daily Mail"; Fenton MacPherson, of the same newspaper, and William Mosses, J. P., who had a prominent part in the British Labor Ministry during the war.

Set solid

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY

Brooklyn, New York

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS

CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

Composed on the Linotype, display in Cloister Bold except for enlarged title line

930.26.6-P

HOWARD RETURNS FROM GENEVA MEETING

Roy Howard, chairman of the board of the Scripps-Howard Newspapers, photographed with his family on board the Majestic on his return from abroad this week. While in Europe he attended the sessions of Press Service Conference held under the auspices of the League of Nations at Geneva. In the picture are (l. to r.) Roy Howard, Jr., Mrs. Howard, Jane Howard and Mr. Howard

ARBITRATION PLAN HIT BY NEW TYPO CHIEF

President-Elect Howard of International Union Opposes Agreement Ratified by A. N. P. A.—Convention Opens

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER*)*

COLORADO SPRINGS, COL., Sept 16—President-elect Charles P. Howard of the International Typographical Union, now in convention here, in an invitation speech today before the conference opposed the proposed arbitration agreement, which was ratified last spring by the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

As Howard is not a delegate it was his only chance to air his views before the convention. Delegates are split over the arbitration agreement but it is expected to win by a small majority, when the final vote is taken probably tomorrow. Delegates have been in session since Monday. Howard wants arbitration made a local optional problem. He is leader of the progressive faction.

Howard, who takes office Nov. 1, pleaded with delegates to do nothing that would embarrass the incoming administration and indicated that he would abolish the policies of President James Lynch in the maintenance of the Bureau of Education, and statistical and publicity departments. The other four members of the executive council are Lynch supporters however, and claim Howard will not be given free hand.

A proposal to allow residents of the Printers' Home to vote was rejected, when Lynch in a powerful speech pleaded with the delegates not to allow the entrance of politics into the home.

There are 325 delegates and 2500 visitors attending the convention.

Bids for the 1927 International were placed before the convention by Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Charleston, S. C.

The need of using publicity to get before the public was urged by Walter W. Barrett, field delegate and representative of the Board of Governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Council. He pointed out that printer's ink was the chief sales argument of all big manufacturers, that the printers were needed to put this publicity before the public, and yet with this condition; the printers' union was among the last to realize the potency of the weapon in their hands, in furthering the interest of union labor and the printing crafts. He outlined his work which is prompting the use of the union label.

Restoration of 1920 postal rate on second class matter was urged by the Mailers Trade District Union, an affiliated branch of the I. T. U. in the adoption of a vigorous resolution which not only called for a return to the old regime on the ground that 300,000 members of the Allied Printing Trades are adversely affected by increased postal rates, but also took occasion to score the alleged villification methods of the so-called progressive branch.

The Mailers offered to withdraw if President-Elect Howard so desired, with equities in properties and funds of the I. T. U., but expressed hope they would be allowed to retain their membership. This action was taken just before the start of the big convention. Charles L. Smith, president of the Mailers is vice-president of the I. T. U.

Administration forces shut down on several proposals emanating from the progressives when the laws committee, which recommended unfavorable action, was upheld in the convention by a substantial majority, one vote being 183-117. Among suggestions voted down was one prohibiting union printers from working in a composing room who engage in active work in any other trade or profession from which they receive remuneration of any kind. Nor did the delegates like the idea of giving the foreman of newspaper composing rooms or assistant sole authority to dictate to employes therein as to styles of composition or makeup or faces of type to be used.

Another important step was vetoing of a suggestion to deprive members who joined the I. T. U, subsequent to Jan. 1, 1920, after having reached 50 years, of greater mortuary benefits than $75 and taking all benefits away from suspended members who die within 3 months after reinstatement.

It was also decided that foreign printers must continue to pay a registration fee of $10.

Notable features of the convention, included visits to the Union Printers' Home, and presentation of the bronze statute of the "Makeup Man," gift of J. David Stern, publisher of the Camden (N. J.) Courier and Morning Post. The presentation was made by Pierre De Rohan, assistant editor of these papers, President J. M. Lynch of the I. T. U. responding with a short speech of acceptance.

Alleged irregularity in election resulted in the unseating of Victor H. Manley of San Bernardino, Cal., after two roll calls.

SULPHUR, OKLA., MERGER

The Sulphur (Okla.) Times has bought out its only competitor, the Sulphur Democrat, and will consolidate the two publications.

POCOCK SUCCEEDS McGRATH

Harry E. Pocock, formerly assistant advertising manager, and director of foreign advertising, of the Buffalo Times, has been named advertising manager of the Evening and Sunday Times, succeeding Frank L. McGrath, who died recently.

CHANGES TO SEMI-WEEKLY

The Ridgewood (N. J.) Herald on Sept. 14, changed from a weekly published every Thursday to a semi-weekly appearing Tuesdays and Fridays.

REPORTER FINDS WITNESS

Gladys Calvert, reporter for the New York Mirror, discovered the witness whose testimony led to the indictment of Henry Stevens this week in the Hall-Mills murder story. The witness was Mrs. Mary Demarest.

CALIFORNIA FACTS
(The Statistical Magazine)
ALL ABOUT CALIFORNIA OPPORTUNITIES
AUTHORITIVE, unbiased "Facts Only" concerning INDUSTRIAL, Financial,
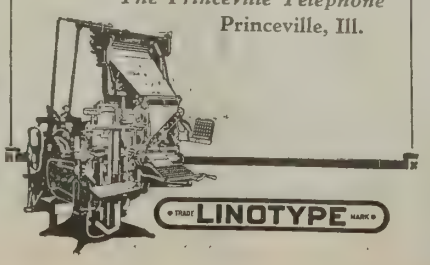
Commercial & Agricultural CALIFORNIA.
Get yours while they last. Mail name with 25c coin to "California Facts," P.O. Drawer H.1, Hollywood Station, Los Angeles, Calif.



From the Linotype Mailbag

Appreciates "Prompt Service"

We received the star wheel order this morning in the first mail, and in a short time had our machine running.

We appreciate the prompt service we received, and wish to thank you for your attention to the matter. Believe that such prompt delivery merits a "thank you."

The Princeville Telephone
Princeville, Ill.

FREE! FREE! FREE!

Old-Time Dodger of Testimonials about the New Book
(Now on the Press)

"TRAIL BLAZERS of ADVERTISING"

By CHALMERS LOWELL PANCOAST

Better than a Novel—Colorful Romance and Thrilling Adventure of Old-Time Advertising—A Book Everybody Will Read

Revised and Enlarged from Serial Which Appeared in EDITOR & PUBLISHER

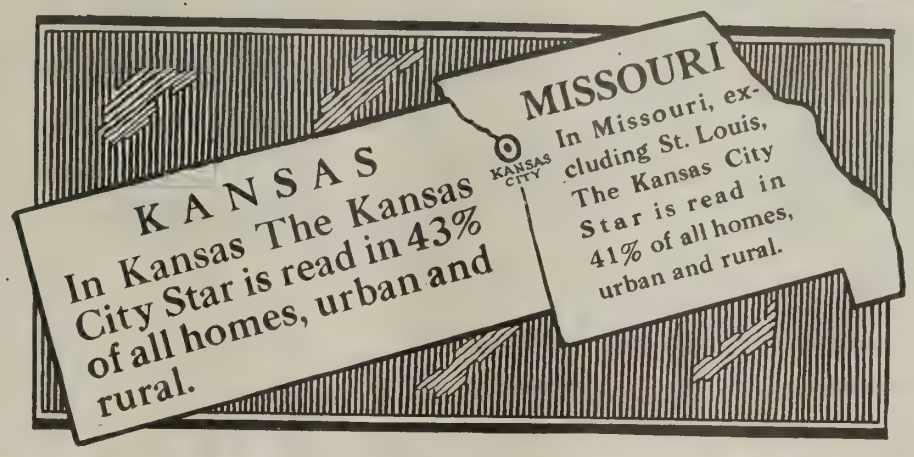
Send for Free Dodger—or ORDER YOUR COPY NOW—DIRECT FROM THE AUTHOR!



—Limited—
First Edition—
Autographed—
And Numbered
(A Book Worth $5.00)
at $2.50 per copy
(15c additional for postage)
This special price only on orders in Advance of Publication.

To Chalmers Lowell Pancoast,
614 W. 157th St.,
New York City.

Please send to the address below.....
.....copies of the Limited, First Edition of "Trail Blazers of Advertising," signed by the author (As soon as it is off press), for which I enclose $..... at the rate of $2.50 per copy. (Add 15c for postage.)

Name .....
(Print)
Street .....
City..... State.....

One Whale of a Buy

911,000 Circulation ~

$1.35 a Line

25% Discount

DAILY STAR AND WEEKLY STAR COMBINATION
911,000 Circulation

Open Rate, per line	$1.53¾
Quarter Pages (532 lines), per line	1.44⅜
Full Pages (2,128 lines), per line	1.35

SUNDAY STAR and WEEKLY STAR COMBINATION
700,000 Circulation

Open Rate, per line	$1.35¾
Quarter Pages, per line	1.26⅜
Full Pages, per line	1.17

THAT is the new discount rate for advertising in The Kansas City Star and The Weekly Kansas City Star. Five Hundred Thousand daily circulation and Four Hundred Thousand circulation in The Weekly Star. Total circulation more than 911,000—and headed straight for the million mark!

See the complete table of rates for the Daily and Weekly Star and Sunday and Weekly Star in column to the left.

Here is the lowest daily newspaper rate in the world combined with the lowest farm paper rate in the world—less a special discount of 25%!

Here is a territory which produces three thousand million dollars annually in basic wealth—from the soil—wheat, corn, cattle, hogs, sheep, oil, lead, zinc. The richest producing territory in the world! Three thousand million dollars' spending power every year!

The Kansas City Star—Daily and Weekly or Sunday and Weekly—reaches more than 42% of all the families both urban and rural in Kansas and Missouri, exclusive of St. Louis.

Here is the only city and trade territory between the Atlantic and Pacific where both the urban and rural market—the complete market—can be covered adequately at a low daily newspaper rate!

Would you like to know more about this three thousand million dollar market? Would you like to know how many dealers there are in every town and county who should sell your product?

Write today for The Kansas City Star's Market Survey. It will be sent free of charge and postpaid.

THE KANSAS CITY STAR

The Weekly Kansas City Star

New York Office, 15 East 40th Street Chicago Office, 1418 Century Bldg.

BOOSTING BEAUTY HAS ITS DRAWBACKS REPORTER FINDS AT ATLANTIC CITY

"I Have a Pain in My Neck—It Must Be You" Is Stock Rejoinder of Miss Petrograd to Perspiring Press Agent —And the Editor Said It Was a Vacation!

I HAVE been in a lot of trouble, and I don't want any more. Therefore I have urged the editor not to give me a by-line on this story, or, if he must have a by-line, to make it Anonymous or something like that.

I have just returned from Atlantic City. Got in on the 1:35 train, and it is about 2 o'clock now. My grief is fresh in my mind. I am in an ill humor —and who wouldn't be?

Because beauty and brains are not on speaking terms. I went to Atlantic City to press agent a beauty. She is beautiful. No mistake about that. She walked pretty, and everywhere she got a big hand.

Perhaps some of my readers know how it is. Somebody says:

"Well, well. Let's get up a beauty contest. It will go over big."

I am assigned to get it up.

I do get it up. I write forty, more or less, stories, all about the flood of entries, when there aren't any. I get the Rotary Club and the Kiwanis Club and the Hod Carriers' Union all hopped up. I write a story a day. Though I grow weary of the task, there is the possibility that I may get to go to Atlantic City with Miss Petrograd. (N. B. Petrograd is just a stall—anonymous, so to speak).

We get some entries. We get some more. We hire a hall and we have us a grand contest.

I fall out with everybody except the winner, and we drink a root beer and plot against the paper's management for ways and means for getting to Atlantic City.

We fling a big dance.

Success! Success! We are going to Atlantic City.

When I think about my young and callow enthusiasm over the prospect of going to Atlantic City to press agent Miss Petrograd, I am amazed at my own ingenuousness.

At Atlantic City everybody is grand to us—downright grand. But my beauty shows symptoms of becoming unruly. She is such a pretty little thing, I hate to hurt her feelings.

I say to her, "For Heaven's sake, Petrograd, come out of the Ostermoor. It's time to step out on the Old Herringbone and strut. Let somebody know you're here."

"What am I?" comes Petro's drowsy voice. "What am I that I should step out on the Boardwalk and strut? Am I a trained seal?"

"You may be a seal, my dear," I breathe through the keyhole, "but you're not trained much."

After everybody else has been putting the prettiest foot foremost for two or three hours, Pete gets up.

"Now listen," I tell her. "Don't overlook anything. The judges are laying for you. You can't help being beautiful, but try to be intelligent, too."

"There's a pain in my neck," Miss Pete rejoins. "It must be you caused it."

Once she wins a cup.

"Hooray," I ejaculated. "Now is the time to be intelligent."

De Wolf Hopper hands her the cup. He starts a conversation. What an opportunity!

"What are you going to put in it, my dear," he asks her.

"Tell him 'dreams' or something," I whisper out loud. I display agony. Miss Petrograd registers dumbness. She giggles.

Everywhere she goes she giggles.

I am fed up on giggles.

I slave; I work like a dog; I plead; I have corns on my knees from pleading.

I find everybody from the home town and gang them up to set up the demonstration when Miss Petrograd struts by. Does she know it? She does not.

She arrives late for everything. She passes up the chaperon and vanishes. She falls for the wise crackers from Jersey.

She has a wonderful time.

I work —— hard.

I burn the midnight electricity pounding the coffee mill to get the story back home. I fight to get it filed.

Tomorrow morning, I tell myself the while, I shall start hammering on Miss Petrograd's door, and the daily grind will be on again.

"Now listen, Sweetheart," I coo. "Try to be intelligent today. Don't high hat everybody. He might be a judge. Besides I have just sent in a story about how sweet everybody is to everybody else."

"My neck still pains me," Pete says. "And why should I be sweet to this gang of stenographers and switchboard experts? They don't have a thing on me. I've got a date. I think I shall pass up the roller chair parade."

Well, it's all over now. I'm back home now—back to covering the court house and the Kiwanis Club.

Those boys have no beauty to speak of, and I love them for that.

I am going to work on the good old job and rest up. The editor boys called my trip a vacation.

Wow!

BUYS KLAN PAPER'S PLANT

The Centerville (Ia.) Iowegian & Citizen recently purchased the plant of the Centerville Southern Iowa American at a mortgage foreclosure sale. The American was a Ku Klux Klan daily.

SCRANTON SUN LAUNCHED

New Evening Daily Starts with 28-Page Issue Sept. 14

The first edition of the Scranton (Pa.) Sun made its appearance on Sept. 14. It consisted of 28 pages well filled with local advertising. The Sun management announced that it was starting with between 15,000 and 18,000 circulation.

W. J. Pattison

It announced in the lead editorial that it will be Republican in politics, but that it will be under obligations to no faction in the party and that it will not hesitate to express itself whenever candidates deemed detrimental to the party are nominated.

Mark Edgar is editor of the Sun with W. J. Pattison business manager. Mrs. Mark Edgar is society editor. Hi Antrim is sporting editor and William Ives correspondent editor.

HAZELTON DAILIES MERGE

Both to Continue But One Plant W Be Scrapped

The Hazleton (Pa.) Plain Speak afternoon paper, published by John Dershuck and the Standard Sentin morning paper, Henry Walser, publish were merged this week and both a being published under one ownersh from the plant of the Standard Sentin

Each paper has retained its identit At an early date a Goss 48-page pre and other new equipment will be i stalled.

WOLFE JOINS WALES

William Wolfe, for the past three yea vice-president of the State Island A vance, has joined Franklin E. Wales, pu lishers' representative of Chicago, and t firm name has been changed to Wales Wolfe.

CORRECTION

The new evening edition of t Winston-Salem (N. C.) Journal, mor ing paper, launched two weeks ago, called the Evening Star instead of t Evening Journal as reported in Edit & Publisher Sept. 4. Owen Moon publisher of the two papers.

FOR PROMPT SERVICE

TYPE

BORDERS ~ ORNAMENTS ~ BRASS RULE

Printers' Supplies

KELLY PRESSES ~ KLYMAX FEEDERS ~ PAPER CUTTERS
HAMILTON WOOD AND STEEL EQUIPMENT, INCLUDING OUR AMERICAN CUT-COST EQUIPMENT

Carried in stock for prompt shipment at the following Selling Houses of the

American Type Founders Company

BOSTON	RICHMOND	DETROIT	MINNEAPOLIS	SAN FRANCISCO
NEW YORK	ATLANTA	CHICAGO	KANSAS CITY	PORTLAND
PHILADELPHIA	BUFFALO	CINCINNATI	DES MOINES	SPOKANE
BALTIMORE	PITTSBURGH	ST. LOUIS	DENVER	WINNIPEG
	CLEVELAND	MILWAUKEE	LOS ANGELES

Over 3,000 cities and towns have streets paved with portland cement concrete

Horse-and-Buggy Pavements Won't Do

Property owners in many towns and cities whose streets swarm with motor traffic are still wasting their money on horse-and-buggy "pavements" of bygone days.

These rough, bumpy streets are directly responsible for broken springs, cut tires, greater depreciation of cars, physical discomfort, loss of time, and many accidents involving loss of life or limb.

And the heavy expense of trying to keep worn-out, dangerous, horse-and-buggy streets in repair, added to their original cost, amounts to more than enough to pay for true, even, non-skid concrete pavement that has the maintenance built in.

So in the long run you are paying for concrete streets. Why not get them?

All of the facts are in our free booklet on "Concrete Streets." Ask for your copy

PORTLAND CEMENT ASSOCIATION

A National Organization to Improve and Extend the Uses of Concrete

Atlanta	Denver	Lincoln, Nebr.	Oklahoma City	Salt Lake City
Birmingham	Des Moines	Los Angeles	Parkersburg	San Francisco
Boston	Detroit	Milwaukee	Philadelphia	Seattle
Chicago	Indianapolis	Minneapolis	Pittsburgh	St. Louis
Columbus	Jacksonville	Nashville	Portland, Oreg.	Vancouver, B. C.
Dallas	Kansas City	New Orleans	Richmond, Va.	Washington, D. C.
		New York

Under the "Iowa plan," these 28 leading Iowa daily newspapers offer uniform merchandising help. Endorsed by the leading jobbers of the state.

Now you can cover all Iowa—with one order

Combined circulation of these dailies 571,151
Total number of families in Iowa 550,000

There is no argument about the desirability of this Iowa market. It is a well known fact that—year in and year out—it is one of the most responsive sales areas in the country.

High average wealth, high ideals, high living standards make it so. Iowa people are indeed preferred prospects for your goods.

And now it is made easier than ever for you to reach Iowa buyers. Through their favorite reading material—their own daily newspapers.

This association consists of 28 leading Iowa daily newspapers, with remarkably good coverage of the state. You may deal with them, if you wish, as with one publication. One order, one plate, one billing.

You will note that the combined circulation of this group outnumbers the families of the state. It reaches the cream of Iowa buyers, urban and rural.

Uniform marketing cooperation throughout the state, adapted to the particular needs of your merchandise.

More complete details upon request.

THE IOWA DAILY PRESS ASSOCIATION

DAVENPORT, IOWA

Ames Tribune
Boone News-Republican
Burlington Gazette
Burlington Hawk-Eye
Cedar Falls Record
Cedar Rapids Gazette
Centerville Iowegian & Citizen
Council Bluffs Nonpareil
Davenport Democrat
Davenport Times
Des Moines Capital
Des Moines Register and Tribune
Dubuque Telegraph-Herald
Dubuque Times-Journal
Fort Dodge Messenger
Fort Madison Democrat
Iowa City Press-Citizen
Keokuk Gate-City
Marshalltown Times Republican
Mason City Globe-Gazette
Muscatine Journal
Oelwein Register
Ottumwa Courier
Sioux City Journal
Sioux City Tribune
Washington Journal
Waterloo Evening Courier
Waterloo Tribune

IOWA—WHERE EVERY FAMILY READS A DAILY NEWSPAPER

HOW TO ENHANCE SPACE VALUES

Mears Gives Five Steps to Improve Advertising—Favorable Experience of Majority of Big Stores Cited at Annual Advertising Study

Twenty-seven business and advertising executives of daily newspapers attended the annual Newspaper Advertising Study conducted by Charles W. Mears in Cleveland on Sept. 7 and 8, and were guests at a Mid-day club luncheon of W. G. Chandler, president of the Scripps-Howard Central Group on Wednesday.

Amos Parrish, department store counselor, presented the advertising needs of retail merchants. Roy O. Eastman, research specialist, outlined what a survey of the market should cover and the benefits to merchants and newspapers of a survey that accurately portrays the conditions existing in any particular territory.

Mr. Mears presented a report covering the newspaper advertising activities of 200 of the largest department stores, together with a summary of store attitudes toward rate increases, returns per dollar of advertising expense, and newspaper relations in various particulars. Although the stores have experimented in many directions and are still experimenting, he said, they have never found a substitute for newspaper advertising, because the newspaper holds a unique place in our everyday life. Contrary to casual comment, less than one-fourth of the 200 big stores reported diminishing returns from newspaper advertising.

As steps toward making newspaper advertising more valuable to both merchants and newspapers, Mr. Mears suggested five steps. Most newspapers can improve their makeup. Newspapers and merchants together can improve the typographical composition of advertisements. Merchants need to learn the value of marginal white space left blank, of unity within each advertisement, and of pleasing proportions in the rectangles of less-than-page advertisements. "The form of a thing makes all the difference in the world," Mr. Mears said. "Just as there are human Venuses and human hogsheads, so there are inanimate forms that are variously beautiful, indifferent and positively ugly and simply cannot be otherwise. To know the formula by means of which every less-than-page advertisement can have the benefit of beautiful proportions is to have a key to increased advertising effectiveness. Today newspaper advertisers are using countless shapes and forms without a single definite guiding principle. That is now totally unnecessary."

Those present at the Study were: R. K. Aderhold, Columbus (O.) Citizen; W. E. Anderman, Advertising Manager, Detroit (Mich.) Times; Ray Arnold, Manager Local Advertising, Milwaukee (Wis.) Journal; Wm. E. Bryan, Promotion, Scripps Howard Central Group; W. G. Chandler, President, Scripps Howard Central Group; J. J. Connors, Advertising Manager, Albany (N. Y.) Knickerbocker Press; Chas. C. Curtis, Advertising Manager, Allentown (Pa.) Call; Ralph B. Cushing, Assistant Publisher and Advertising Manager, Wheeling (W. Va.) News and Wheeling Intelligencer; W. A. Frease, Assistant General Manager, Canton (O.) Repository; L. E. Herman, Business Manager, Akron (O.) Times-Press; E. C. Hillweg, Assistant to President, Minneapolis (Minn.) Tribune; L. B. Krob, Business Manager, Springfield (O.) Daily Sun; Robt. H. McAuliffe, National Advertising Manager, South Bend (Ind.) News-Times. E. H. Maloney, Advertising Manager, Daily Journal Co., Peoria; John C. Scott, Advertising Manager, Cleveland (O.) Times; Ward C. Mayborn, General Business Manager, Scripps Howard Southwestern Group; Wm. A. Mayborn, Business Manager, Indianapolis (Ind.) Times; Jos. F. Melia, Advertising Manager, Buffalo (N. Y.) Evening News; J. F. Pollock, Business Manager, Toledo (O.) News-Bee; Walter Rompel, Local Advertising Manager, Chicago (Ill.) American; Frank W. Rostock, Business Manager, Cincinnati (O.) Post; W. J. Sylvester, Local Advertising Manager, Cleveland (O.) Press; M. W. Thompson, Advertising Manager, St. Paul (Minn.) Daily News; M. R. Thomas, Advertising Manager, Columbus (O.) Citizen; G. C. Waldron, Columbus (O.) Citizen; John T. Watters, Business Manager, Youngstown (O.) Telegram, and E. A. Bathelmeh, business manager, Daily Reporter, Dover, Ohio.

BRAVED FLOOD FOR STORY

Kansas City Journal-Post Men Pushed Handcar Through Water

Newspaper enterprise was shown by the Kansas City Journal-Post Sept. 13 and 14 in handling news and pictures from the flood swept area of Southwest Kansas. Two full pages of photographs, the first in the city, obtained in the flood area by Pat Murphy, Journal-Post photographer, and sent 156 miles into Kansas City by airplane, appeared in the Journal Sept. 14.

Wayne Parker, Journal reporter, and the photographer, Murphy, left for the flood area by train at 8 o'clock the morning of Sept. 12, arriving in Ottawa at 1 o'clock. They found that the relief train, scheduled to go 40 miles into the flood area, would not attempt the trip. Parker and Murphy obtained a handcar from the Santa Fe and engaged three section hands to operate it. Because of the depth of the water in many places, the newspaper men had to get off the car and push it.

Arriving in Burlington, Kan., they found they had been protected on the story by C. P. Puffer, of the advertising staff of the Journal-Post staff and formerly a reporter. Harry Clough, Journal-Post regular correspondent in Burlington, also arrived on the scene. Puffer had engaged a commercial photographer. His pictures and those obtained by Murphy were placed in a plane piloted by Harry Crewsdon, commercial aviator. After two unsuccessful attempts, he finally pulled out of the mud and was on the way to Kansas City. Because of the low visibility he had to make the entire trip at 100 to 150 feet.

Crewsdon was met at the Flying Field in Kansas City and the plates were out in time for a large flood picture to appear in the Post the afternoon of Sept. 13.

The Journal-Post started a relief fund for flood victims with a donation of $500 by Walter S. Dickey, owner and editor.

GOLDEN NEW TEXAS CIRCULATORS' CHIEF

Galveston Tribune Man Named President at Fort Worth Meet —Bus Legislation Discussed

Walter Golden, circulation manager of the Galveston Tribune, was elected president and San Antonio was selected as the next convention city by the Texas Circulation Managers' Association, at the annual meeting held in Fort Worth, Monday. R. R. Russell, Wichita Falls Times, was chosen vice-president, and H. E. Murphree Houston Chronicle was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Several new members were enrolled. Golden presided in the absence of L. J. Hagood, who has just left the position of country circulation manager, Houston Post-Dispatch, to join the Indianapolis Times as circulation manager.

In discussing effect of a rotogravure section on Sunday circulation Harold Hough of the Fort Worth Star Telegram, said his paper which long ago abandoned rotogravure, found that increased circulation did not nearly justify its $130,000 annual cost. Murphree declared rotogravure had increased the Houston Chronicle's Sunday sales, but he was not prepared to recommend addition of the section. The Houston Post-Dispatch is just inaugurating Sunday rotogravure, according to C. W. S. Lenett, circulation manager.

Profitable use of boy promotion c- clusively, with no other solicitors, v- told by H. Noggle, Dallas Journal, n discussing "Cost of Obtaining Subscr- tions on an Evening Newspaper."

"Office Controlled City Carriers" v- Golden's topic. It was declared that e Galveston Tribune is perhaps the o- paper represented in the Association us- this method, under which collectors a- not the carrier boys collect from s- scribers.

In other discussions, it was brought it that, while giving premiums with s- scriptions is losing popularity, the pr- tice still is considered practical by sc- papers for editions seeking rural circu- tion.

After hearing Walter H. Beck, st- legislator-elect regarding a bill t- would make motor bus lines comm- carriers, subject to the same regulations s- railroads, the Association endorsed e measure, but later discussion develo- possible sources of dissatisfaction un- the proposed plan. It was declared t- under contracts with newspapers cert- bus lines now facilitate transportation n- newspapers, whereas if the proposed re- lations make buses handle packages, i- same as railroads do, express movem- of papers might be delayed when the n- departing bus is already loaded to c- pacity. Appointment of a committee w- authorized to confer with Beck and u- provision for movement of newspapers n- the first bus after the papers have b- laid down at the bus line.

Harold Hough, Ft. Worth Star-Te- gram, precided at a luncheon given t- the Fort Worth club by the Star-Te- gram and Record-Telegram. Hough w- host again at a beefsteak supper, a- which the circulators repaired to e- Texas hotel for an evening's inform- entertainment.

"U" PAPER ELECTED TO A. P.

The Norman (Okla.) Daily, publis- by students of Oklahoma University, s- been elected to membership in the As- ciated Press.

Managing Editors

How often have you complained, "Newspapers are becoming mere press association bulletins?"

"SIX-PLY COVERAGE" will help correct this. Covering all New York spot news of special interest in your territory it will outscore your opposition consistently.

At a cost as attractive to small papers as to large ones, it places an experienced reportorial staff at your disposal and makes available the five other types of service most in demand from us by 123 papers. Write or wire today for prices and details.

N. Y. Allied Press Bureau

Times Building, New York, N. Y.

An Important

Announcement

On Tuesday September 14th

The Tulsa World

OKLAHOMA'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

Began Publishing An All Day Newspaper

Morning — Evening — Sunday Morning

Heretofore the Tulsa World published only morning and Sunday morning editions. On September 14th new evening editions were added with entirely new make-up of news, editorials and features, making them entirely different from the morning editions.

By supplementing the Tulsa Morning World with complete evening editions the World is in a position to render a greater service to its advertisers and the people of Tulsa and its Magic Empire, the rich market unit of eastern Oklahoma.

TULSA DAILY WORLD

Advertising Representatives

BRYANT, GRIFFITH & BRUNSON
9 East 41st St., New York
201 Devonshire St., Boston
Walton Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

FORD-PARSONS COMPANY
306 Michigan Ave., Chicago
58 Sutter St., San Francisco

DAVIES & DILLON
707 Land Bank Bldg.
Kansas City, Mo.

NEWSPAPER MAKERS AT WORK

William D. Sullivan

WILLIAM D. SULLIVAN has just stepped into the important position as managing editor of the Boston Globe after serving 37 years as city editor of that paper. This is a record for Boston if not for the country. The promotion came along in the course of events following the policy of the late Gen. Charles H. Taylor, of advancing the men who built up the paper.

Mr. Sullivan has been on the Globe for 43 years. While at Harvard he had a yearning for newspaper work, and as a junior did some work for the Boston Star, long out of the picture. Then he became Globe correspondent in his senior year, and so well did he cover the job that when he got his degree in June, 1883, he hustled right over the Globe and that very day became a reporter.

In 1884 he took charge of the baseball department and shortly afterward became sporting editor. In those days John L. Sullivan, Ike Weir, the Belfast Spider, Jake Kilrain, George La Blanche, the Marine, Joe Goss, and some other pugilists well known at that time used to frequent the old sporting room at the rear of the fourth floor with some of their friends, and Mr. Sullivan had the job of seeing to it that they did not get obstreperous. It was a time when there was real fighting and Boston had the champions in most of the classes.

Mr. Sullivan naturally had an interest in Harvard athletics. And so he began writing articles on sporting activities in connection with the college under the pen name of "Featherweight." From that start it brought him intimately in touch with Crimson sports particularly rowing and football that never has been allowed to die out. He has known all the famous coaches of Harvard and Yale particularly well among them the Storrows, Haughton, Fisher, Camp, Cook and others. And the crew and football men for two generations have been his friends.

When there was a race at New London Mr. Sullivan used to go there and spend some days watching the practice. Then he would write his impressions of the crews before the race. When it was over his story told clearly just why the winner finished first and the loser trailed leaving others to give the descriptive high lights.

This sort of work, by the way, was outside of his regular job as city editor. His sporting editor job ended back in 1889 when the late Charles A. Montague, who astonished Bostonians by duplicating all the feats of Washington Irving Bishop famed as a mind reader, even to driving a coach and four horses blindfolded, became ill and died. There was no quibling as to his successor and Mr. Sullivan just moved a few doors away into the city room.

Under the direction of Mr. Fowle, just retired as managing editor, and Mr. Sullivan, there has been developed on the Globe a highly efficient group of news gathers. Mr. Sullivan taught his men that first of all they must not exaggerate. Also that they must be sure to try to get both sides of every story and give the under-dog a chance. George M. Dimond, for years assistant city editor, now advanced to the position of city editor, started doing minor news items and finally found himself assisting Mr. Sullivan. It proved a splendid combination and these two directed the work of unraveling many apparent mysterious crimes in New England. One of the outstanding of these was the identification of the man who threw the bomb in Russell Sage's office in New York. This man was a near neighbor of Mr. Sullivan at Somerville. On that occasion a New York reporter came to Boston with a clue, but Sullivan and his men beat the visitor to it.

On June 12, 1923 the Globe family had Mr. Sullivan as a guest of honor at Young's hotel to mark his 40 years on the editorial staff of the Boston Globe. At that time he heard many good things said about his regime and himself. His associates got out a special edition of the paper for the occasion and presented him with a special gift of silver.

In appearance Mr. Sullivan does not look unlike a minister. He has a soft soothing voice. He is not one of the explosive type on the heels of his men all the time. In fact, he does not have to be. He backs his men up to the limit and this accounts for the fact that in his 37 years as city editor there has not been half a dozen men dropped from the staff.

Away back some 40 years ago he was one of the founders of the Newspaper Club, an organization that is second in age only to the Gridiron Club of Washington. He served in all its executive positions and has helped guide it along through all the years as a representative group of newspaper men.

Probably no newspaper man in Boston, has a wider acquaintance with people in prominent positions. When they come to the Globe office they find the open door policy, and need no card to gain an interview with Mr. Sullivan.

COWLES SUCCEEDS LARGE

Son of Des Moines Register & Tribune Publisher Named News Editor

The Des Moines (Ia.) Register this week announced several changes in the personnel of its editorial department. Gardner Cowles, Jr., son of the publisher of the Register and the Evening Tribune will be news editor of the Register in direct charge of the staff of the paper.

He succeeds Rex Large, associate managing editor of the Register, who has resigned to enter the theatrical business in New York City. Cowles has been a member of the reporting staff of the Evening Tribune and was for six months city editor of the Register. Lately he has been in the business department of t Register and Tribune organization.

Wayne Weishaar, who first joined t Register and Tribune in 1912, will the new city editor. Weishaar beg newspaper work on the old Des Moin News. At the end of the war for fi years he was a reporter on the Eveni Tribune and for a year was with Asso ated Press in New York City.

Weishaar succeeds Oval Quist, wl becomes head of the telegraph and cab desk. James Hanrahan, former secreta to the late Senator A. B. Cummins, h joined the reporting staff of the Registe

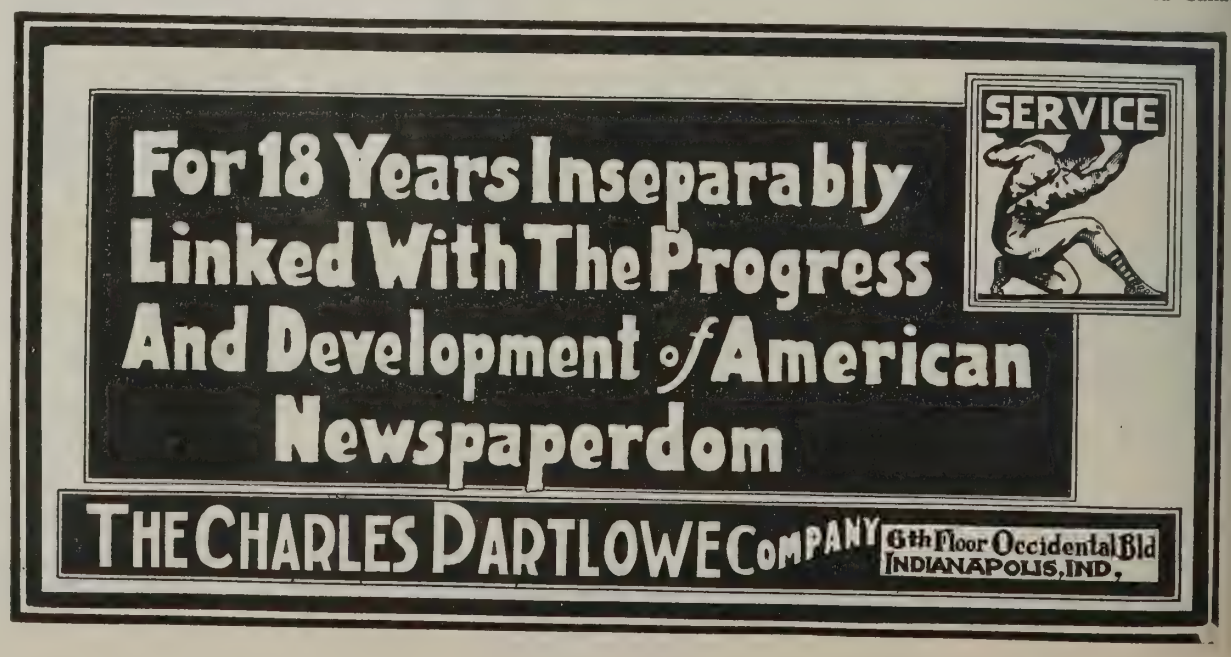
JAPAN PRESS DEMAND LOWER CABLE RATES

Greater Interchange of News Will Lea to Better Understanding Newspaper Association Holds at Annual Meet

Cheaper press tolls on cablegrams an radiograms from foreign countries wa the principal subject of discussion at th fourteenth annual convention of the Japa Newspaper Association, held recently a Sapporo. Every speaker took the oppor tunity to denounce the present high toll and urged that the rate be lowered so tha a greater amount of news may be ex changed between Japan and the rest o the world. All declared that this free in terchange of news and views will lea to a better understanding and help towar eradicating the false ideas which hav been engendered in the past.

Viscount Kiyoura, president of the as sociation, and representatives of the lead ing newspapers in Japan attended th meeting. The following resolution wa adopted unanimously:

"Foreign press telegraph rates in Japar are so high that it is vitally necessary t lower them and place them on a par wit those of foreign countries. The press rates in Japan's colonies should be low ered to the rate obtaining in Japar Proper."



NEWSPRINT FIRM EXPANDS

G. H. Mead Company, Inc., Building New Mill—N. Y. Office Opened

The G. H. Mead Company, Inc., newsprint distributors with headquarters in Dayton, O., has opened a New York office at 366 Madison avenue, with Thomas Coolidge Fowler in charge.

A new mill in which this firm is interested is under construction at Beaupre, 20 miles east of Quebec, Mr. Fowler said. This mill of the St. Anne Paper Company will be in production in April, 1927. with a daily newsprint capacity of 250 tons.

The Mead company now serves publishers with more than 1,600 tons of newsprint daily from five producing companies in the United States and Canada.

Growing Popularity Is Only Half The Story!

August, 1925 - - - 99,300 circulation
August, 1926 - - - 123,821 circulation

Five months' average, April to August, 1925..... 102,096
" " " " " " 1926..... 120,490

AN increase of 25% in average daily net paid circulation in a year's time is beyond a shadow of doubt, an indication of increasing popularity.

But that's only half the story!

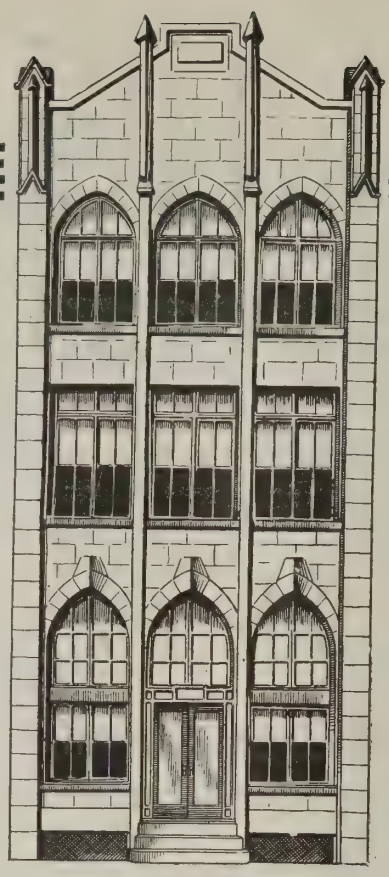
Even more significant is the increase of 111,638 agate lines of local advertising for June, July and August, 1926, over the same period a year ago. For the local advertiser is a canny fellow with his nose to the grindstone and his eye on just one thing —RESULTS!

(During the same period both the Daily and Sunday American showed substantial gains in both circulation and advertising lineage.)

THE BALTIMORE NEWS now covers considerably more than half the homes of Baltimore. You can buy this coverage with the Baltimore News alone without being forced to take a Morning paper of largely duplicating circulation. The Baltimore News in the evening covers more than half the city!

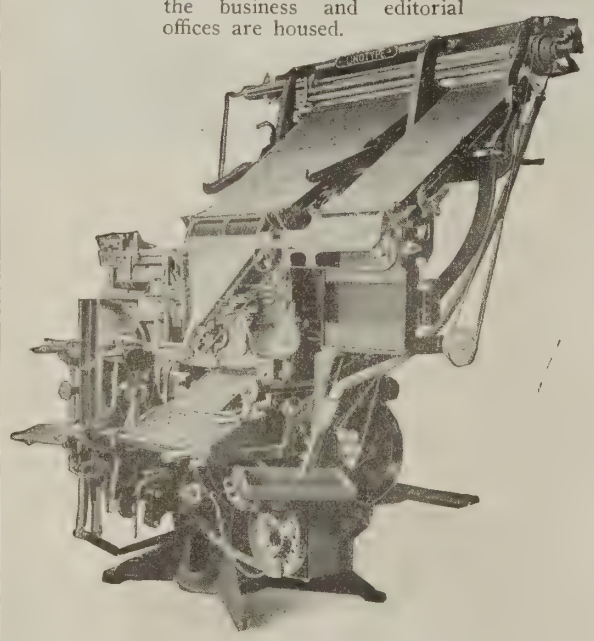
THE BALTIMORE NEWS

THE BALTIMORE AMERICAN THE SUNDAY AMERICAN



BALTIMORE, MD.

National Representatives



W. G. Hobson, 2 Columbus Circle, New York

P. E. Crawford, 913 Hearst Bldg., Chicago

Both under direction of James Dayton, New York Journal

The above illustration shows the front of the New Ledger home at 80 Bank Street, where the business and editorial offices are housed.

This illustration shows one of our new latest model multiple magazine linotypes, this being one of a battery of sixteen running double shift on the Ledger. Electric Heat.

The News
Presents New
A One Hundred Per
For Both Rea

SIX COLUMN

PAGE TWO THE NEWARK LEDGER, MONDAY, AUGUST 30, 1926.

POLA FAINTS AT "RUDY'S" BIER

CASKET OPENED FOR STAR AFTER 3,000-MILE TRIP

$3,500,000 Bank Merger Her

Cruelty to Canine Pets Is Decried

Pen Threatens

'Tiger' Says He May Write Again on Debt

LOVE OF FINERY BRINGS WOE TO HUMBLE HOME

In Merger

LATEST NEWARK DEAL LINKS 3 FINANCE FIRMS

Autos Cause Two Deaths Many Injured

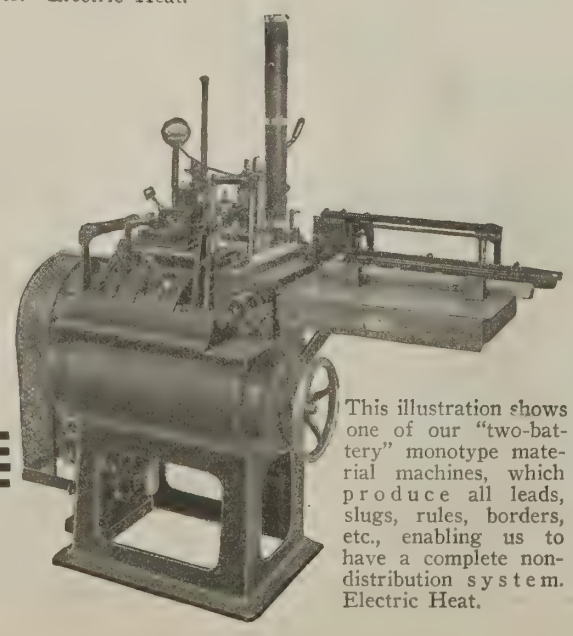
Doctor Orders Trudy to Bed She Collapses

Petition Asks Abolition of Conscription

Mellon Visit Spurs League Talk Abroad

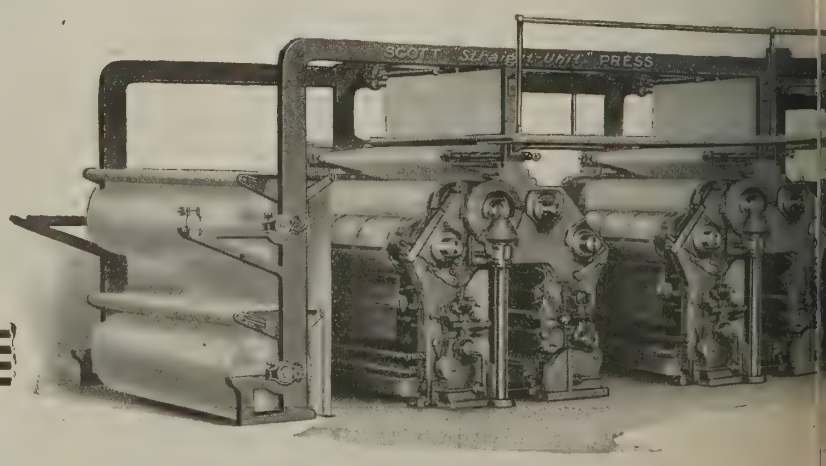
Jersey Man Found Dead; Police Probe

Fonck, Aide, Again Agree Not to Agree



Seek Author After Wife Leaps from Car

Adam, Eve, in Museum



Germany Turns From Beer and Coffee to Cocoa

Gambling Dens of Monte Carlo Show Huge Gain

This illustration shows the six-column 260-line deep Ledger page, which is one-third larger than the "baby tabloid" and one-third smaller than the standard size page.

This illustration shows one of our "two-battery" monotype material machines, which produce all leads, slugs, rules, borders, etc., enabling us to have a complete non-distribution system. Electric Heat.

The illustration shows The Scott Underfed Octuple Press, consisting of column Ledger pages at a speed of 48,000 per hour. This is the largest x Ledger

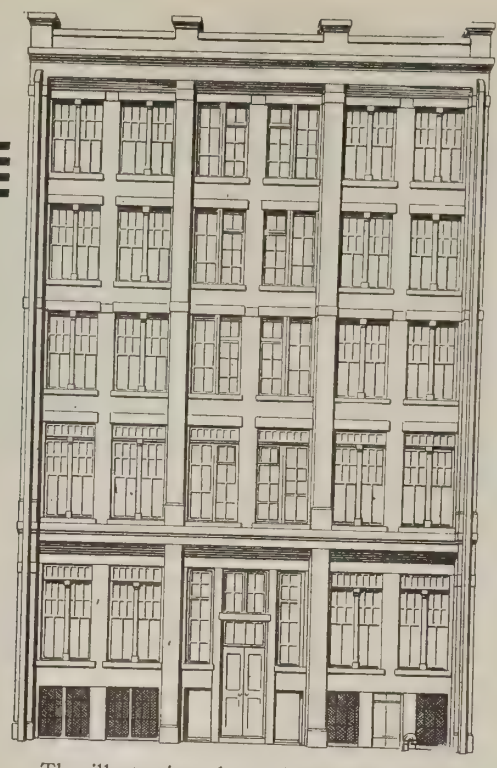
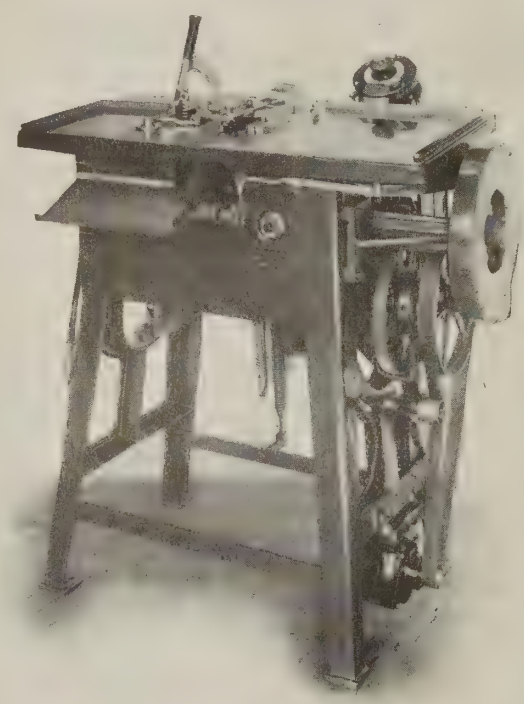
l Novel "SIX"
t Practical Tabloid
d Advertiser



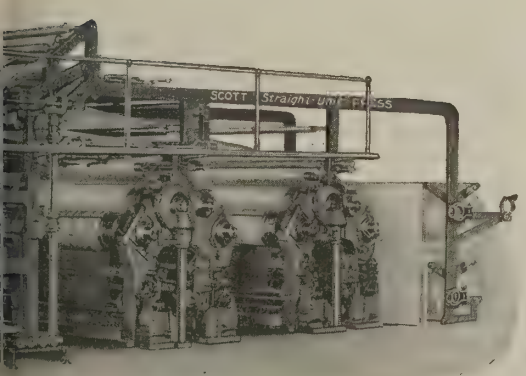
THE NEW Newark Ledger in 12-em six-column pages, 18½ inches deep, in our judgment, cures all the defects and eliminates all the handicaps of the "baby tabloid" on the one hand and the blanket sheet standard page on the other. This size page is the result of a long study and analysis of how to meet the present day reader demands in the face of numerous new competitions, and at the same time save the utility value of the standard size page for large display advertising.

The advertiser is trying to buy "reader-audience" and thereby establish a "customer-contact," and this cannot be done if numerous advertisements are packed upon top of one another running in a newspaper with numerous "sections" on weekdays—hence the magazine form of tabloid in the six-column size with the same picture make-up as the "baby tabloid."



The Ledger's news treatment of Associated Press, local and sport news is the same as in the standard size paper, except for greater brevity, and pages two and three are made up in the same style as page "one" in the standard size paper, while the first and last pages are devoted to pictures after the fashion of the small tabloid, but the center double truck is reserved and regularly used for large display advertisements.

The Ledger was changed over to a five-column 17½ inch depth page last April in advance of our new equipment in response to a pressure for a tabloid picture paper in Newark that appeared to make further delay unwise. This change, without any circulation promotion whatever, has already resulted in a circulation increase of nearly fifty per cent in six months. Elsewhere in this issue will be found the story of the Why and How for the unique six-column 260-line depth page.



MEMBER OF ASSOCIATED PRESS—A. B. C.—A. N. P. A.
L. T. RUSSELL, Publisher

The illustration above shows the Campbell Street frontage of the Ledger's new home, in which all the manufacturing, receiving, delivering, etc., is done. The building runs through from Campbell Street to Bank Street and has a floor space of 35,000 square feet. Heated throughout by Oil-O-Matic.

This is an illustration of one of our "two-battery" Ludlow typographs just installed, which, together with our special linotypes, produce all the display advertising in the Ledger. Electric Heat.

two Folders capable of producing 64 six-er unit in square inches in use in America.

This is an illustration of our new pony auto plate made by the Wood Newspaper Machine Corporation.

EDITORIAL

Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my redeemer.—Psalms; XIX, 14.

MARSHALL BALLARD'S ACTION

SOME newspaper men may not agree with the method, but none can gainsay the effectiveness of Marshall Ballard's "direct action" to prevent an inconvenient and expensive street car strike in New Orleans, a few weeks ago. The company and its men were deadlocked and a strike seemed inevitable. The editor of the Item-Tribune knew the situation and regarded it as absurd. A little horse-sense was all that was needed to effect a reconciliation of the warring elements. Mr. Ballard decided that he would take a hand and by telephone he assembled the leaders of the men, their employers and the city's Commission Council and left his office to appear before them. Those who know Marshall Ballard can easily picture him at this conference. He would tell a good story. His smile would put the rival elements in good humor. Then he would pour out common sense, tell both sides to the controversy what asses they were making of themselves, point the futility of a deadlock on a minor issue and thus genially knock their heads together. That is what this editor did. The labor war was settled, then and there, and later Marshall Ballard received from the carmen a resolution of thanks. It was a good job for the disputants, the city and the newspapers.

One half-baked magazine commentor, reviewing these circumstances, says: "Most big-city editors would have 'played' the street-car strike to sell papers." Sell papers, bare of advertising? Encourage a transportation strike to create a heavy loss for the newspapers and the merchants of the city? Mr. Ballard acted for the public interest, but if he or any other big-city editor would consider only the selfish motive the last object would be to "sell papers" on account of a street car strike.

No better proof of the fact that great newspapers are founded on great individual characters has ever been offered than in the narrative of Adolph S. Ochs' career on other pages of this issue of Editor & Publisher.

JUDGE ON CONTEMPT

"THE freedom of the press is the most essential element in American liberty, and I fear the tendency on the part of some representatives of the judiciary to assume a too autocratic policy, muzzling the press at every turn, is a menace to the God-given rights of the people."

What radical enemy of the sacred ermine said this, do you suppose? Hold your breath—Frederick W. Houser, judge of the Appellate Court of California.

Judge Houser, in a statement recently published in his state, told of 20 years on the bench during which he had found newspaper men "willing at all times to co-operate in the interests of law, order and justice," and to respect the authority of the court. In view of his personal experience he said: "Only where deliberate malice on the part of a newspaper editor is shown, or in an instance where a grave injustice is being done, should any judge invoke the contempt penalty."

Excellent, but as the judge on the bench decides what is malice and what is justice, with himself as complainant and the newspaper man as defendant, why is it not a good plan to remove the case to another jurisdiction of equal rank and procure a decision from a judge who has no personal interest? If a citizen has a right to demand impartial jury trial, through the well-established principle of change of venue, why should he be denied when the charge is contempt of court and the presiding judge is pressing the complaint? We agree that an essential element in American liberty is involved.

Judge Houser made his remarks during a campaign in Humboldt county which resulted in the defeat, on the contempt issue, of the judge who recently sentenced to jail the editor of the Humboldt News. The incident indicates how the people feel regarding an autocratic judiciary.

Oil burner promoter who compelled a newspaper to re-run his advertising because a free publicity puff was "left out" is efficient at his job but slightly indiscreet in publishing his gloat for the wondering world to read.

PUGILISM AND PRESS

IN every normal person there is an instinctive energy which asserts the individual's superior powers, real or imagined. Absence of this instinct creates a blighted sense of inferiority, sometimes with serious mental and physical results. Exaggeration of the power instinct in man may have equally abnormal and harmful effects, but it sometimes characterizes the genius.

Assertion of physical superiority is a primitive instinct which man shares with the beast. As humanity slowly evolves from the savage state the insistent demand for recognition of power takes higher forms and there are satisfying outlets for the urge in the creation of wealth, social dominance, artisanship, leadership of every description. Any position in life that permits man to strut among his fellows represents sublimation of the primitive instinct which causes dogs and cats and healthy boys to bite and scratch and punch each other as a means of claiming mastery.

That the mass of humanity has not sufficiently evolved from the savage state to have lost instinctive love of dominance through physical force, although it may be vicariously expressed through champions, is at present conspicuously demonstrated by absorbed public interest in a prize fight. The Niagara of publicity that the daily newspapers of the country are offering to this event is the evidence. With pages of words and illustrations, transmitted by the most modern means of communication, with no thought of expense in the enterprise, American editorship is giving the reading public opportunity for complete saturation of the most primitive power instinct, and to the mass it is apparently as enjoyable as a mid-Summer bath in the sea.

Moralists meanwhile challenge the right of the newspapers to cater to the "low taste" of the reading public. They regard it as a throw-back to savagery. The fight and the excited, exaggerated and in instances synthetic newspaper promotion that forces it upon public attention, is viewed by reformers and indeed a very large number of sincere and thoughtful people as one of the most degrading spectacles of modern times. Behind the gaudy curtains the reporters are describing a foxy coterie of promoters and thick-necked principals will, in a few hours, satisfy their power instinct by raking in fortunes that the average man in normal pursuits may vainly strive for during a life-time.

From the purely commercial aspect it is a doubtful enterprise for the newspapers. It yields only temporary circulation, at terrific expense. In no true sense can the newspaper be charged with interest in this fight for selfish gain. The truth of the matter is that the fight is exploited in the press in exaggerated form to satisfy an important public demand. It classes with "entertainment feature," rather than "news."

The power instinct in man is vicariously gratified by this fight. As they gather for their noon-day meal working men, clerks, professional men, students, groups representative of every walk of life, learnedly discuss the prowess of the respective champions and make wagers on the result of the combat. They all talk big. When they are on the winning side of the controversy they are the heroes of their groups. To the psychologist this boastful talk, this doubling up of arms to illustrate the champion's blows, this excited battle of words represents an outlet for repressed emotions present in some degree in every human being, surviving the gradual climb of man from the cave. Furthermore it is valuable leaven for the wearisome humdrum of life. It compensates an infinite variety of what the modern psycho-analyst calls inferiority complexes. It is a temporary relief from the fear that beset everyone. While the puny ribbon counter clerk is in the attitude of Dempsey in the ring, he fancies himself a giant and fear of losing his job on Saturday fades from his mind. There is relief from the tedium in the lives of the untold millions who do not personally encounter many thrills, but satisfy the natural combat and power instincts by newspaper reports of the adventures of pugilists, speeders, explorers and daredevils who stand out in heroic mold in the minds of the legions of dull plodders.

In the view of advanced people who idealize civilization the prize fight is a degrading spectacle and the newspaper that reflects it realistically is a harmful social influence. To the practical editor, who bases his calculations upon well-established knowledge of the instinctive cravings of the mass of society, it is an event which offers opportunity for entertainment which is no higher or lower than the mental level of the great mass that craves it. To the psychologist the fight interest is an index of social development and among the least of the evil influences of the day with some positive elements of public benefit.

If you can't write a headline for it, it isn't news.

A GALLANT FIGHT

FOR more than six months the New York Evening World has been carrying on a notable crusade against crooked lawyers who, for years, have swarmed around the courts of the metropolis, victimizing scared and ignorant blunderers who have run afoul of the law and preying on criminal life with an instinct for viciousness that exceeds that of the clients. It has taken courage to make the fight, but the Evening World has kept it up day after day with first page revelations that have shocked respectable members of the community.

The crusade has brought about a number of needed reforms. One result is that an infamous bonding system is being reformed. Teeth have been put in criminal laws. Age old political mischief in relation to paroling prisoners has been stopped and only recently a law has gone into effect which provides life sentence for the habitual criminal.

Grateful readers of the Evening World have contributed thousands of communications expressing appreciation of this wholesale raid upon predatory lawyers and incompetent, or worse, public officials, but we have seen no resolution of thanks from the American Bar Association or the New York Bar Association. This fact is interesting and amusing for of all the critics of the newspaper press none are so persistent as the legal profession. The Evening World has demonstrated to a nicety that no house in professional America so aches for a clean-sweeping broom as does the domicile of the law. To hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions, of citizens, the legal system in this country spells injustice. All honor to a newspaper that has the courage and patriotism to fight that monstrous evil.

When an employe begins to use a newspaper as a stepping stone to some outside job the time has come to take the step.

NAILING A FALSE REPORT

FOR more than a year advertising interests rival to the newspaper have been circulating an underground report that department store space is not "pulling" as it did some years ago. Charles Mears, at his interesting advertising study conducted at Cleveland last week, revealed an authoritative report on the experience of 200 big department stores with newspaper advertising, finding an overwhelming proportion satisfied with results. We do not know what the complaints of the dissatisfied minority were based on, but it is apparent that if the majority of department stores find true values in newspaper advertising those who do not get satisfactory results might well look into their advertising methods to discover the sources of relatively poor success. Mr. Mears' report is valuable as it nails a destructive false rumor.

The wise publisher listens to all critics and wiseacres and goes about his business.

PERSONAL

WILLIAM MAXWELL AITKEN, Lord Beaverbrook, prominent Brit-h publisher, recently visited Portland, [e., on his steam yacht Miramichi, com-g from Canada where he has been ijoying a vacation. Accompanying him e Lady Beaverbrook, and their daugh-r, the Honorable Janet Aitken.

James M. Cox, publisher of the News ague of Ohio papers and the Miami ily News, with Mrs. Cox, returned is week from a tour of Europe.

S. B. Williams, vice-president of the neva (N. Y.) Daily Times, has re-ned from a vacation spent in mountain mbing in Washington.

John D. Bogart, publisher and editor the Brockton (Mass.) Times, has re-ned from a two weeks' vacation.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

W. LAMONT, who has been con-nected with the national advertising partment of the St. Louis Post-Dis-ch in that city has been transferred the paper's Chicago office.

Walter H. Whitney, assistant business nager, Quincy (Mass.) Patriot Led-, is on his annual vacation.

Edward Gans, former general manager he Fall River (Mass.) Herald before Fall River Evening News was con-dated with the Herald, has left Fall er to become general manager of the aha (Neb.) News.

oseph Gesas has become assistant ertising manager of the Burbank l.) Review.

William Shields has been promoted to e manager of the Brockton (Mass.) erprise from superintendent of the posing room.

ohn A. Smith, for 20 years display rtising solicitor on the Dayton (O.) ald, has joined the Business Review of the Herald and Journal.

dward L. Hill, formerly assistant to president of the St. Louis Globe-ocrat and more recently with the son Company has been made general manager of the Kieselhorst Piano pany, St. Louis.

anklin D. Schurz, assistant to the dent of the South Bend Tribune, returned from a vacation at Lake waska, N. Y.

arles L. Fuller is the new treasurer he Brockton (Mass.) Enterprise, wing the death of his father and ler of the paper, A. H. Fuller.

W. Rich, brother of Endicott Rich, editor of the New York Herald ne, has joined the advertising staff e Herald Tribune.

N THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

PHEN DALTON, city editor of he Brockton (Mass.) Enterprise 18 and later managing editor of the n Telegram, has returned to the prise as assistant to Editor S. n Rich.

rold Goff, managing editor of the Lake City Deseret News, has been ted a member of the new Ameri-ution Committee of the Salt Lake Chamber of Commerce.

E. Calkins, formerly of the Chicago ne and Pacific and Atlantic Photos, returned to the Rockford (Ill) ng Star after spending a vacation old newspaper friends in the east. ncidently covering the New York ne to Mille Gade Corson, channel ner, for his paper.

lliam S. Allen, telegraph editor of tchburg (Mass.) Sentinel, is con-ng from a major operation.

h H. Soper, editor of the Owaton- Minn.) Journal-Chronicle, was grand cheminot of La Société des mmes et 8 Chevaux at the "grand nade" of the Minnesota "40 and 8" connection with the state Ameri-egion convention at Mankato.

k J. Williams, of Douglaston Park, L. I., special writer, attached to the financial office of the New York Evening Post, will leave Sept. 19, on a four weeks' trip to cover the American Bankers Association convention in Los Angeles and the Investment Bankers Association Convention in Quebec, Canada.

Capt. Thomas L. Haskell, veteran marine reporter of the Portland (Me.) Press-Herald, was slightly injured when he was knocked down by an auto truck recently.

Moulton Cobb, formerly of Cameron, Tex., has become city editor of the Bryan (Tex.) Eagle, succeeding F. D. Cuykendall, who has gone to Childress, Tex.

Larry Toole, who resigned from the San Francisco Examiner a month ago, is publishing "Game and Gossip" a resort paper at Del Monte, Cal.

Edwin Rose has succeeded Ben H. Stevenson as managing editor of the Klamath Falls (Ore.) News.

C. F. Lake, editor of the Coulee City (Wash.) Dispatch, is the new editor of the Republic News-Miner, succeeding Truman Brownlow.

Ellis O. Custer has succeeded Guy Stewart as editor of the Tuckahoe (N. Y.) Eastchester Citizen-Bulletin.

Prince M. Carlisle, former newspaperman in New Bedford, has joined the reportorial staff of the Brockton (Mass.) Enterprise as city hall reporter.

Lorin L. Arnold of the Brockton (Mass.) Enterprise staff and Mrs. Arnold have returned from a three weeks' vacation in Maine.

Lawrence Salter has joined the Sioux City (Ia.) Journal staff, succeeding Paul Weaver who has resumed his studies at the University of Iowa.

T. E. Brooks, formerly news editor of the Altoona (Pa.) Tribune, has been named managing editor of the Rome (Ga.) News-Tribune, succeeding R. H. Clagett resigned.

John Sweeney, city editor of the Paterson (N. J.) Morning Call, has returned after a three weeks' stay at Atlantic City.

Willard Keefe, formerly of the Brooklyn Times, is now doing "Night Clubs" for the New York Morning Telegraph.

Walter J. Fenton of the New York Times, and Mrs. Fenton are parents of a son born last week. Mrs. Fenton was Anne Dixon before her marriage, and a member of the New York World staff.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

JOHN J. CONLAN, from Hollywood (Cal.) Press-Post, to advertising staff, Hollywood Citizen.

Richard O. Gruver, from New York American, to staff, Hartsdale (N. Y.) Herald.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

TO James A. Robinson, member of the staff of the Durham (N. C.) Morning Herald, goes the distinction of being the oldest living member of the North Carolina Press Association, in point of membership, although not in age. He joined the association in 1874 and has served as president, vice-president, secretary, historian, poet and executive committeeman.

JAMES A. ROBINSON

Writing for the Morning Herald, Mr. Robinson is known as "Old Hurrygraph" and has created a large public for himself throughout the South.

At 15, he started in the business as printer's devil in the office of the Piedmont Virginian, receiving $10 a month as pay. Since then he has worked as journeyman printer for the Milton Chronicle, publisher of of the Oxford Torchlight, publisher of the Winston Leader and Goldsboro Argus, and editor of the Charlotte Daily Chronicle.

Mr. Robinson founded the Winston Leader in 1879 and also the Durham Daily Sun in 1888, which he published continuously for 23 years.

Daniel Hickey, from city hall reporter, Brockton (Mass.) Enterprise, to staff Shoe Retailer Magazine.

David McCord, from staff, Springfield (Ill.) State Register, to editorial staff, Fitchburg (Mass.) Sentinel.

George Davis, from managing editor, Guthrie (Okla.) Leader, to editor, Stillwater (Okla.) Democrat.

Sam Behler, from press foreman, Kansas City Star, to Chicago Herald-Examiner composing room.

John P. Brady, from Brockton (Mass.) Enterprise, to editorial staff, Bridgeport (Conn.) Telegram.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

ELMA (Wash.) CHRONICLE, has been purchased by Roy Rosenthal from Frank Jacobs. Mr. Rosenthal is also editor and publisher of the Montesano Vidette.

Palo Alto (Ia.) Reporter, has been leased by C. F. Mayne to Warner Bros., who took possession, Sept. 1.

Arlington (S. D.) Sun, has been acquired by H. A. Sturges, who a few months ago sold his Beresford (S. D.) Republic and planned to retire.

(Continued on page 30)

Four Out Of Five

new illustrated news mat and feature services offered during the past year have already withdrawn from the field, unable to stand the tremendous cost of the production of a daily news mat service.

Central Press

would have to go too were it not for the more than FOUR HUNDRED newspapers from coast to coast who recognize in Central Press the biggest value in the syndicate market today and by their loyal support make possible its continued growth and expansion.

Seventeen years old—and the fastest growing service in America, specializing in the achievement of its promises.

The Central Press Association

V. V. McNITT, President — Central Press Bldg., Cleveland — H. A. McNITT, Editor and Manager

THE ELLA CINDERS COLORED COMIC PAGE

Is Certainly Off to a Good Start

Starting with the first release of Sept. 19 the page has already been taken by papers on each coast, on the lakes, on the gulf and in between.

In page or strip (each independent, but each feeding into the other), ELLA IS A DEAD SURE WINNER.

ASK ANY USER

Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Maximilian Elser, Jr., General Manager — Earl J. Hadley, Associate

150 Nassau St., New York City

(Continued from page 29)

Jesus N. Jiminez, has leased from B. the Hoyos and become the managing editor of the Oxnard (Cal.) La Voz de la Colonia, the only Spanish language newspaper in Ventura county.

Mark E. Moe, for the past year connected with the Rainier (Ore.) Review, has purchased the Vernonia (Ore.) Eagle.

Mrs. Florence Canaday, has bought from Guy Hughes the Halfway (Ore.) Pine Valley Herald.

Lester Ingold of McPherson, has bought the interests of Marion Krehbiel and Aubrey Hale in the Hillsboro (Kan.) Star. He will be associated with Theodore Harms in publication of the paper.

O. A. Porter, who has just established the Jefferson County Standard, a weekly at Jefferson City, Tenn., has also purchased the Dandridge Star, another weekly.

H. G. Hull of Tyler, has leased the Forney (Tex.) Messenger from W. L. Rohde.

Ed Gaston, former editor of the Okemah (Okla.) Leader, has purchased the Weleetka (Okla.) American.

Don H. Philips, has bought from Mr. and Mrs. Sam Lewis the Calaveras (Cal.) Weekly Citizen.

J. M. McCune, has bought from the Greene estate the Colusa (Cal.) Sun.

Monterey Park (Cal.) Tribune, has been bought by C. C. Meginnes of San Gabriel and C. E. Sievers of Los Angeles. M. G. Watkins was the former owner.

F. J. Wheeler of Walla Walla, Wash., has bought from Twiford, Kingsford & Kingston the Millon (Ore.) Eagle.

Ben H. Lyle is the new owner and editor of the Ulysses (Kan.) Grant County Republican.

Walt Neibarger, formerly with the Eskridge (Kan.) Independent and the Manhattan (Kan.) Daily Mercury, has bought the Tonganoxie Mirror of B. C. Williams.

MARRIED

EMERSON G. SMITH, city editor of the Ponca City (Okla.) News, to Miss Lillian Bell, society editor of the News, in Salina, Kan., recently.

Carroll P. Streeter, farm editor of the Cedar Rapids (Ia.) Evening Gazette to Miss Beulah K. Swihart of Newton, Ia., Sept. 4.

Wilbur Walter Johnson, advertising manager of the Appleton (Wis.) Post-Crescent, to Miss Bonnie Cox of Champaign, Ill., at the home of the bride's parents, Sept. 7.

J. D. Gortatowsky, manager of King Features Syndicate, Inc., to Miss Sadye Overand, of Covington, Ky., in New York, Sept. 13. They have sailed for Europe where they will spend their honeymoon.

Richard Brooks Dolbeare, son of Harris M. Dolbeare, publisher of the Wakefield (Mass.) Daily Item, to Miss Alice Elizabeth Preston of Wakefield, in Wakefield, Sept. 1.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

GUATEMALA (Domingo) DIARIO DE GUATEMALA, special Progress edition of eight sections, Aug. 15.

Corpus Christi (Tex.) Caller, 114-page special edition commemorating the opening of the new port of Corpus Christi.

Ada (Okla.) Evening News, 56-page Fashion edition, Sept. 12.

Norristown (Pa.) Times Herald, 76-page Sesqui-Centennial edition, Sept. 14.

Port Angeles (Wash.) Evening News, 76-page Industrial edition, Sept. 7.

Los Angeles Evening Express, Welcome Home to the Fleet edition, Sept. 1.

New Bern (Ind.) Adams County Witness, 120-page magazine style Souvenir edition, Sept. 3.

Ketchikan, (Alaska) Chronicle, 48-page special Fisheries edition.

POSED AS TRAMP TO ENTER SOMERVILLE, N. J., JAIL

Unshorn and unkempt, Henry M. Paynter, reporter for the New York Daily Mirror, posed as a drunken tramp to gain entrance to the Somerville, N. J., jail, to discover whether Henry Carpender and Willie Stevens, held without bail in the Hall-Mills slaying, are being accorded any unusual privileges by authorities. After creating a disturbance on the street, he was sent to the jail for 10 days by a local judge. The photograph shows him in his tramp disguise.

Owatonna (Minn.) Journal-Chronicle, fourth annual Steele county fair and Southern Minnesota exposition section, Sept. 3.

WITH THE SPECIALS

BRIDGETON (N. J.) Evening News has appointed New Jersey Newspapers, Inc., Harvey C. Wood, president, as its national representatives.

M. C. Mogenson & Co. national newspaper advertising representatives, have just been appointed by E. B. Ault, publisher of the Seattle (Wash.) Union-Record to represent that newspaper nationally.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

E. A. AYERS, has been appointed Boston correspondent for the Associated Press to succeed F. E. Williamson, resigned. Mr. Ayers first joined the A. P. in 1920 at the New York office, later becoming the night editor. Since 1922 he has been in charge of the bureau at Harrisburg, Pa.

Don Q. Riddle, formerly with the United Press at New York and abroad, more recently in charge of Baylor University department of journalism, has joined the Country Club Estates, Houston, as advertising manager.

Clyde Knox has resigned as head of the Associated Press Bureau in Toledo to read copy on the Toledo Blade rim.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENT

DODGE CITY (Kan.) DAILY GLOBE, has moved into a new home.

Edmonton (Alta.) Journal is preparing for the erection of a five-unit Hoe balcony type press. Three units were shipped the last week in August.

Washougal (Wash.) Record has installed a new typesetting machine.

Toledo (Wash.) Observer, has a new linotype.

Taylor (Tex.) Daily Press, which soon will move into a new home, has also purchased new printing machinery.

Recent shipments from the New York plant of R. Hoe & Co., Inc., include a standard-pattern unit-type sextuple press to the Schnectady Union Star and a 16-page double width intaglio press with a double magazine type folder.

NEW PUBLICATIONS

N. E. PHILIPS is starting a new weekly at Live Oak, Cal., called the Reporter.

The Cleo Springs (Okla.) Review, has started publication, with Al Mathis editor and publisher.

J. E. Davies, has started the publication of the Tribune, a weekly, at Walport, Ore.

ASSOCIATIONS

DANVILLE (Ill.) ADVERTISING CLUB opened its fall season with George K. Logan, newly elected president, in charge of the meeting. Miss Phyllis E. Taylor, Chicago, production manager for the Standard Corporation, was speaker at the first luncheon meeting. Three such meetings will be held each month, with the monthly sessions the first Monday night of each month.

More than 300 members of CROSSCUP-PISHON POST, AMERICAN LEGION, composed of Boston advertising men, held their annual outing at Swampscott Sept. 11. Besides field sports and a golf tournament, a dinner followed by a ball comprised the entertainment.

Third annual convention of the WINDOW DISPLAY ADVERTISING ASSOCIATION will be held at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York, Oct. 5 to 7 inclusive.

DAVENPORT (Ia.) ADVERTISERS' CLUB has announced a church emphasis advertising campaign which will be financed by a $5,000 budget and conducted along lines adopted last year. The Rev. B. F. Martin, member of the club, announced the project this week and will again be in charge of the work.

A pictorial history of Tulsa will be one of the features of the special souvenir program for the Seventh District Advertising Clubs of the INTERNATIONAL ADVERTISING ASSOCIATION convention to be held in Tulsa Oct. 10-12. Clubs from Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas comprise the district.

Meetings of the WESTCHESTER COUNTY WEEKLIES, ASSOCIATED, will be resumed on Monday, Sept. 20, at White Swan Inn, White Plains, N. Y. President Thomas M. Kennett, of the Pelham Sun, will preside.

Fall convention of the UTAH STATE PRESS ASSOCIATION will be held at the Western Newspaper Union building in Salt Lake City, Oct. 8 and 9. Prizes for excellence in newspaper production will be awarded on the advice of a special committee. Four business meetings will be held.

Mid-winter meeting of the OZARK PRESS ASSOCIATION will be held in Joplin, Mo., the second week in March. The annual election of officers will be held then. F. L. Stufflebaum is president.

C. H. McNay, editor of the Butler (MO.) Republican Press and president of the CENTRAL MISSOURI PRESS ASSOCIATION announces the mid-winter meeting of that organization will be held in February. The time and place will be announced later.

SCHOOLS

FRANK O. MARTIN, formerly of Texas A. & M. College, has been appointed head of the department of journalism at Trinity University, Waxahachie, Tex. Martin has worked on the Dallas News and other papers.

The Missouri Student, a new publication of the school of journalism, University of Missouri, has made its appearance. It is an 8-page weekly financed by the board of curators of the university. Each student receives a free copy. Fred May, St. Joseph, is editor, Fletcher Hubbard, Columbia, son of S. Hubbard, executive secretary, Missouri Press Association, associate editor with Jean Bradshaw, chairman of the board of control and Franklin Boyer, St. Joseph, Sara Ann Wheeler, Columbia, John McCune, Bowling Green, and William Ziegler, Mississippi, members.

FLASHES

The schoolboy who wonders why he has to study decimal fractions gets the answer when figuring baseball percentages.—Indianapolis Star.

Advertising accorded a Philadelphia woman who held 13 spades in a bridge game led to seven offers of matrimony. They probably thought they could get her hand in marriage.—Little Rock, Arkansas Gazette.

"Maniac, refused loan, bombed Pittsburgh bank." Our banker will please take note.—Asheville Times.

Headline writing will become a joy in 1928 if Al and Cal are the opposing candidates.—John R. Wolf, in Milwaukee Journal.

Calling it a "world series" must impress the world as an example of typical American modesty.—Baltimore Sun.

One satisfied advertiser writes: "I had a gas stove to sell and sent an ad to the paper. The stove was sold several hours before the paper was printed."—New York American.

A Frenchman is attempting to prove that Adam was a Frenchman. Judging by the swiftness of his fall, he might have been their first Premier.—Punch.

And sometimes when a candidate is fairly itching for office the people accommodatingly scratch him.—Savannah News.

In Denver a man recently claimed to be Napoleon, but a clever report quickly proved that he was an imposter.—Florence (Ala.) Herald.

With twenty wives with him in his exile Abd-el-Krim hardly will miss the war in Morocco.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Girl in the Second Cabin

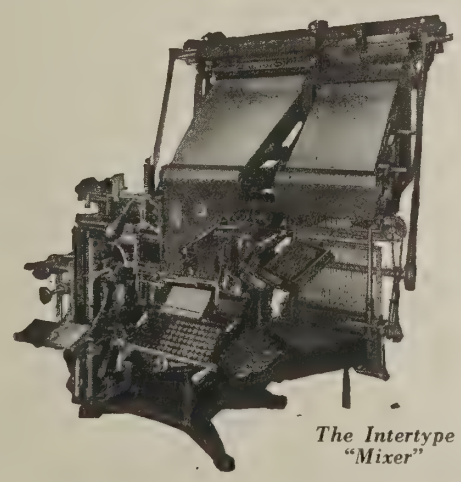
By E. J. RATH

New Serial in 30 Daily Installments

Sprightly Romance
By the Author of
"THE NERVOUS WRECK"

LEDGER SYNDICATE

INDEPENDENCE SQUARE PHILADELPHIA, P.



NO STANDARDIZED INTERTYPE HAS EVER BECOME OBSOLETE

4 Stops in 64 Hours

On a New Intertype "Mixer"

HERE'S another letter about the wonderful distributor mechanism on the Intertype "Mixer"—

> "For the eight regular eight-hour night shifts ending this morning (July 20), the 'Mixer' distributor stopped but four times, an average of once in sixteen hours. In two of these stops the natural friction of new matrices simply exceeded the belt pull, slipping it off, the mats dropping properly after replacing the belt. So really we have had only two matrices in eight days that stopped the distributor, and they were at channel entrances, no stops whatever occurring in the distributor box itself or in the shifting mechanism."—Decatur (Illinois) Herald.

The Intertype "Mixer"

Fewer distributor stops—time saved—more production! All due to a typical Intertype simplification of an important mechanism. In another mechanism—the escapement on the three-magazine Intertype—910 moving parts were eliminated. More time saved in the composing room!

There are more than thirty profit-making Intertype features.

Write for "Profit-Making Intertype Features" and other Intertype literature. If you wish to see our near-by sales representative, please so state.

Standardized
INTERTYPE
TRADE MARK

INTERTYPE CORPORATION, 1440-A BROADWAY, at 40th Street, NEW YORK

CHICAGO MEMPHIS SAN FRANCISCO BOSTON LOS ANGELES TORONTO

INTERTYPE LIMITED—LONDON, ENGLAND

BUILDING NEWSPAPER CIRCULATION

"No Money; No Paper" Policy of Washington (Pa.) Observer—Making Use of Students as They Return to School—German Paper Advertises for Circulation in English Dailies

"NO money; no paper" is the policy followed by the Washington (Pa.) Observer, which, according to W. P. Wilson, circulation manager, has enabled his paper to maintain a mail circulation of 8,000 on a 100 per cent cash in advance basis.

"Two weeks before a subscription expires the subscriber receives a circular calling his attention to his expiration date," Mr. Wilson explained. "If his cash and order to continue the paper are not in our office upon the day of expiration his paper is discontinued and the name taken from the mailing galley. No subscriber receives more than two papers after his paper expires and very often it is stopped on the exact date. We seldom receive a complaint because the paper was discontinued but we do get many letters commending our system of quitting the paper upon its expiration.

"In marking the mailing lists for expirations no attention is given the name, but the blue pencil falls heavily without fear or favor on the date that is no longer alive. These 'Expired' subscribers, however, are not forgotten and in order to get them back into the cash in advance list again a letter reaches them, and this followed by another if the first is not successful. If the letters fail a solicitor will call in due time and in this way but few are lost.

"A newspaper, to demand a clean cash in advance list, must be well balanced for the field in which it circulates. It must contain the world news as well as cover its local field."

The Rockford (Ill) Morning Star has hit upon a good-will builder and editorial aid in the form of a Junior Star Press Club consisting of high school boys interested in journalism who are called upon to aid the Star in editorial work, particularly in news of the schools, athletics and in boys' outside activities. By getting a certain number of inches of news printed in a specified time the boys are open to the privileges of the club which include a long motor bus trip through several states each year, camping trips, dramatic activities, singing groups and the like. The club has also proved a good source for future full-time editors.

Another instance of good school student cultivation is shown in the success of the Junior Pantagraph, established three months ago for readers of the Bloomington (Ill.) Pantagraph between the ages of 6 to 14. Interest has been so marked that announcement has been made of the organization of a new "newspaper," the High School Pantagraph, which made its initial appearance Sept. 13 for readers of 14 to 18 years of age. The Junior Newspaper has enrolled 3,500 grade school pupils with weekly registration increasing until 75 towns and cities in the Pantagraph area are now included. More than 1,000 youthful readers have won their club emblem. The High School Pantagraph will be organized along the same lines, for literary and artistic endeavor of Central Illinois high school pupils.

The Westliche Post, a German language daily newspaper in St. Louis, is now using 200-agate line copy in English language daily newspapers in Nebraska and Iowa, as a circulation builder and with excellent results. The purpose of the campaign of five insertions is to solicit the subscriptions of the German-reading public of those states who for years had been reading the Omaha Daily Tribune, which recently was converted into a thrice-weekly publication.

"Keep on Reading a German Daily Newspaper," stated the advertisements, adding that the Westliche Post is the only American daily and Sunday printed in the German language, west and southwest of Chicago. It pointed out that the Westliche Post carries full Associated Press news, and suggested that the readers of German should read the daily news in the language they understand best. A coupon requesting free sample copies appeared at the bottom of the advertisements.

It is believed that this is the first time that a German-language newspaper has ever advertised in an English language newspaper for subscriptions. The campaign is being handled by Nelson Chesman & Co., St. Louis, and the following papers are being used:

Nebraska: Grand Island Independent, Beatrice Sun, Columbus Telegraph, Fremont Tribune, Hastings Tribune, Lincoln State Journal, Kearney Hub, Nebraska City Press, Scott's Bluff Star Herald.

Iowa: Des Moines Register, Council Bluffs Non-Pareil.

Three hundred newsboys who serve the Atlantic City Daily Press, Sunday Press and Evening Union, got a thrill the other day when they met Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight boxing champion.

The occasion was a boxing tournament staged under the direction of Lloyd Lippincott, circulation manager for the Press-Union Company, in which all the boys participated. Victors in the various classes were awarded watches and Jack Dempsey was called upon to make the presentations. The champion had been amused by the newsy bouts which were staged on the grounds where he is training for his battle with Gene Tunney

---

The Salt Lake City Deseret News, oldest intermountain newspaper, is conducting a subscription contest in which 12 automobiles will be given away, ranging from Packards to Chevrolets, inclusive. Other prizes will include eight radio sets and cash. The contest began Sept. 7 and closes Nov. 20. No Salt Lake City newspaper has conducted a campaign of this kind for many years.

The Wallingford Hill Outlook, a small community newspaper in the Pacific northwest has community writers for as well as readers of its weekly edition. Red news boxes are placed in strategic locations and the public is urged to deposit news tips in them. The boxes plainly labelled and flashy in color are placed in drug stores, women's shops, grocery stores and other places of business.

Regular features which appear in the Chicago Daily News are being promoted through the medium of a novel contest, "The Parade of the Features," in which 556 cash prizes totaling $3,000 will be awarded. Twenty-four important features, selected as fairly representative of all the features appearing in the News, are being taken in turn from their usual positions and "paraded" on page 1. Large cash prizes are offered for the best letters commenting on the various features

---

L. A. Morris, circulation manager, of the Chattanooga Times, has just installed Read-Wyl-U-Ryd boxes in a street cars in Chattanooga. This has increased the street sales about 20 per cent, he states.

The Times is also using travel accident insurance policies in circulation promotion.

TO PROBE CIRCULATION

A newspaper circulation clinic is scheduled to form part of the program of the convention of the Association of National Advertisers to be held in Atlantic City, Nov. 8-9-10. Publishers will be called on to explain methods used in gaining readers, and to tell of the class of readers in their territoires. In previous conventions, the advertisers have discussed magazine and agricultural paper circulations.

"LADDIE BOY" AT SESQUI

The statue of "Laddie Boy" the late President Harding's Airdale, cast from 19,314 pennies contributed by newsboys in all parts of the country is now being exhibited at the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition.

OHIO WEEKLY NOW DAILY

The Pomeroy (O.) Tribune, formerly a weekly, began publishing as a daily with an Associated Press membership Sept. 13. Theodore Ebersbach is publisher.

The Advertisers' Weekly

in its issue of September 4, 1926 refers to "the interesting fact that in the ranks of distinctly class evening papers the Boston Transcript is practically the only survivor of its kind among the large cities of the country. . . .

"Nevertheless the Transcript has not only gone on in its unique career but has steadily increased in prominence and prosperity, a monument to the influence of Boston's discriminating public as well as to the high intelligence of the paper's management."

Bearing out this statement the Transcript's gain for the first eight months of 1926 was:

142,357 lines of Local Advertising
246,350 lines of National Advertising

A Quality Article Endures

Boston Evening Transcript

Established 1830

Highest Ratio of BUYERS to Readers

National Advertising Representatives

CHARLES H. EDDY CO.
Boston New York Chicago

R. J. BIDWELL CO.
San Francisco Los Angeles

A SIMPLE MATTER OF ARITHMETIC

A GOOD PRODUCT

plus — Sales Effort
plus — A Rich Market
plus — Thorough Coverage
plus — Intelligent Advertising

Equals—INCREASED BUSINESS for YOU!

Mr. Manufacturer:

You have the product and the ability to make the sales effort

WEST TEXAS is one of the richest PRIMARY MARKETS OF THE NATION

THE FORT WORTH STAR-TELEGRAM AND RECORD-TELEGRAM offers a thorough coverage of this market with net paid circulation

OVER 120,000 DAILY OR SUNDAY

reaching over 1,000 towns throughout West Texas, with more circulation in that area than any other three or four papers combined.

THE RESOURCES OF WEST TEXAS are more diversified than you will find in any other territory. The MAJOR industries include cotton, grain, livestock, feedstuffs, wool, oil, etc. The production of this market puts approximately A BILLION AND A HALF DOLLARS INTO CIRCULATION EACH YEAR.

Quoting
Salesmanagement,
July 10, 1926.

FT. WORTH, TEXAS

Best wheat and oat crops in years insure good late summer business in Ft. Worth section. Estimated value of the crops is $60,000,000, which will be in circulation by August 1. Building permits in Ft. Worth for first six months of 1926 exceed entire year of 1925. Oil developments described as "feverish," due to opening of new fields, demand for gasoline and high price of crude oil. W. E. Connell, president First National Bank, writes, "Taking it all around, I have not seen business conditions as good in this territory for several years as they are at this time." Sales managers should develop this territory intensively this summer and fall.

SOLVE THIS PROBLEM OF ARITHMETIC by planning your advertising and sales campaigns to include WEST TEXAS and of course, the

FORT WORTH STAR-TELEGRAM (EVENING)

Fort Worth Record-Telegram (MORNING)

FORT WORTH STAR-TELEGRAM

and Fort Worth Record

(SUNDAY)

Largest Circulation in the South

AMON G. CARTER
President and Publisher

Charter Member
AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS

A. L. SHUMAN
Vice-President and Adv. Director

WITH THE GENERAL ADVERTISERS

Ralph Starr Butler Named Advertising Manager of Postum Cereal Company, Inc.—Frigidaire Corporation Formed—"Kid Boots" Candy on Market

RALPH STARR BUTLER has been appointed advertising manager of the Postum Cereal Company, Inc., it was announced this week. He will join the organization Sept. 20, making his headquarters in the main office of the company, the Postum Building, 250 Park avenue, New York.

Mr. Butler has served as vice-president of the Association of National Advertisers. He was formerly associated with the United States Rubber Company and more recently was advertising manager of the Devoe & Raynolds Company, Inc., New York. At one time he was teacher of advertising and marketing in New York University.

Due to the consolidation of Igleheart Brothers, Inc., Evansville, Ind., with the Postum Cereal Company, Inc., the advertising activities are being combined under the direction of the advertising department of the Postum Cereal Company, New York.

Coincident with this new arrangement, the advertising agency of Young & Rubicam, New York City, will assume the placing of the Igleheart Brothers advertising.

All business placed prior to this date by the Mitchell-Faust Advertising Company, Chicago, for insertion in issues dated not later than March 31, 1927, will be handled by that agency and billing should be made to the Mitchell-Faust Advertising Company.

A new General Motors subsidiary, Frigidaire Corporation, has been incorporated under the laws of Delaware, to take over distribution and sale of electric refrigerators manufactured by the Delco-Light Company. This subsidiary has been created to segregate the electric refrigerator from the electric light plant business of the Delco-Light Company.

Permanent officers and directors of Frigidaire Corporation will be practically the same as those of the Delco-Light Company, which is headed by E. G. Biechler, president and general manager, with headquarters at Dayton.

"Tremendous growth of the electric refrigerator industry and encouraging prospects for the future of this business, makes separation of the two enterprises desirable," said A. P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors.

The Delco-Light Company will continue to manufacture and sell electric farm light and power plants and water pressure systems.

Frigidaire and Delco-Light manufacturing operations are to be completely separated under the plan announced. Delco-Light will be provided with new factory space, leaving Frigidaire the present plants with 53 acres of floor space in use and under construction. When new buildings are completed Frigidaire will have a capacity of 50,000 electric refrigerators a month.

Newspaper schedules will be released within the next few weeks by Edwards, Ewing & Jones, New York advertising agency, for "Kid Boots," a new candy bar manufactured by Minter Brothers.

The name of the F. Mayer Boot & Shoe Company has been changed to F. Mayer Shoe Company, effective as of September 1, 1926.

The change of name does not affect the company in any other way whatsoever. It will remain under the same management and conduct its affairs in the same manner as heretofore. Olson and Enzinger, Inc., of Milwaukee, will continue to handle the advertising.

Newspapers in eastern cities are being used by the Flako Products Corporation of New Brunswick, N. J., manufacturer of Flako pie crust and jiffy gems. The account is handled by Edwards, Ewing & Jones, New York.

The account of Ferranti, Inc., manufacturer of radio transformers, is now being handled by Evans Kip & Hackett, Inc., New York advertising agency.

The National Tea Company reports sales of $34,641,427 in the eight months ended Aug. 31, against $30,033,464 during the same period last year.

LIBRARIANS TO MEET

Movies of Public Ledger Library to Be Shown at Atlantic City

The Special Libraries Association will hold its eighteenth annual conference at Atlantic City, Oct. 4 to 7.

William Alcott, librarian of the Boston Globe and chairman of the Newspaper Group has arranged an unusually interesting program, one of the main features of which will be a motion picture showing the library of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, in action. Efficiency under high pressure in a newspaper library will be demonstrated. Joseph F. Kwapil, librarian of the Ledger, will be present to answer any questions that may be aske

The Advertising Group, of whi Frederick A. Mooney, librarian of t Dennison Manufacturing Company, chairman, also has arranged a progra of interest.

The conference of the Special Libr ries Association is being held jointly wi American Libraries Association whi joint conference has been linked with t Sesqui-Centennial Exposition. An e hibit at the Sesqui shows library pro ress and its influence during the pa 50 years in America.

Daniel N. Handy, librarian of the I surance Library Association, Bost Mass., is president of Special Librari Association.

A New and Distinctive Typeface

LUDLOW CAMEO

This beautiful new typeface was designed and the punches were cut in our own plant by our own type designers and punch cutters.

Among the striking features of Cameo are the following:

1. Its strength and character as a quality typeface.

2. Its unusual luminosity resulting from striking contrasts in weight of related elements.

3. It is strictly new. In general outline it is based on Ludlow Caslon, modified to meet the requirements of a shaded letter of this type. Its Caslon influence together with its other striking features combine in giving to Ludlow Cameo its attractiveness, distinctiveness and strength.

Ludlow Typograph Co.

2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago, Illinois

San Francisco: Hearst Building, 5 Third Street
Atlanta: Palmer Building, 41 Marietta Street

New York: World Building, 63 Park Row
Boston: Cummings Building, 261 Franklin Street

This Advertisement was set in the following Ludlow typefaces: 24 and 36 point Cameo, 6 and 14 point Caslon Light with Elrod rule borders.

"All The News That's Fit To Print"

The new home of The New York Times which has in the pressroom 60 Hoe 16-Page Press Units, the majority of them superspeed.

1851—1926

THE NEW YORK TIMES is celebrating its Seventy-Fifth Anniversary, seventy-five years of achievement that have made it one of the most dominant newspapers of the world.

It is fitting that a newspaper of such eminence should demand the best of machinery for the production of its daily output and in The Times pressroom there are sixty Hoe 16-Page Press Units, the majority of them of Superspeed design.

The Sunday Rotogravure Supplement of The Times is renowned the world over for its excellence as a work of intaglio printing as well as for its excellence as a newspaper supplement. This supplement is produced on twelve Hoe Intaglio Presses.

Hoe machines are printing today the great majority of the prominent daily newspapers and magazines throughout the world

R. HOE & CO., INC. NEW YORK & LONDON

NEW YORK LONDON DUNELLEN CHICAGO BOSTON

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

A.A.A.A. to Fete Publishers Attending Chicago Conventions in October—Seemeyer Made Production Manager of Fred M. Randall Company—Kiernan Adds to Radio Department

INVITATIONS will be issued shortly from offices of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, inviting publisher members of the Audit Bureau of Circulations to attend a luncheon to be given in Chicago, Oct. 21. Henry D. Sulcer, president of the Vanderhoof Company, Chicago, will preside at the luncheon, and Roy Durstine, of Barton, Durstine & Osborn, New York, and association president, will be one of the speakers.

Theodore Seemeyer, Jr., has been appointed assistant production manager of the Fred M. Randall Company, New York.

John K. Rich, formerly connected with Blackett & Sample, Inc., Chicago advertising agency, has recently joined Joseph Richards Company, Inc., advertising agency of New York. Mr. Rich at one time was advertising manager of Wilson Brothers, Chicago, haberdashery manufacturer.

Hugh M. Smith has been named head of the radio department of Frank Kiernan & Co., of New York. Mr. Smith during his 17 years in advertising and merchandising has specialized in the electrical and radio field.

He has directed the advertising campaigns for the Weston Instant-Change Radio Plug, manufactured by the Weston Electrical Instrument Company, Newark, N. J., and for "Amperite," manufactured by the Radiall Company of New York.

J. R. McKinney has joined the McLain-Simpers Organization, Philadelphia, as art director. He was formerly with Van Name & Hills, Inc., New York.

Francis Odone has been named copy chief of Bissell & Land, Inc., Pittsburgh advertising agency.

J. V. LaCaerra, has joined the Chicago staff of the H. E. Lesan Advertising Agency, Inc., as space buyer. For a number of years he was with the Charles F. W. Nichols Company.

Miss Josephine Newton, recently with the advertising department of the Brandeis Stores, Omaha, Neb., has joined the copy department of the Stanley H. Jack Company, Inc., Omaha advertising agency.

The Kenyon Company, Boston agency, announces the appointment of Kenneth Nixon as account executive. Mr. Nixon was for several years engaged in advertising work for the Hearst organization.

Harold Cabot, formerly production manager of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company, Boston, has joined the Smith Endicott Company, Boston advertising agency.

Louis Louchard, formerly one of the proprietors of the Godbold Advertising Agency, Dallas, has returned to that city as advertising manager of E. M. Kahn & Co., after five years spent in Los Angeles.

Francis W. Orchard, who has been a member of the western advertising department of the Butterick Publishing Company, has joined the St. Louis office of the Gardner Advertising Company.

Frank P. Gibbs of the Britt-Schiele Advertising Company spoke on "Romance in Business," at the meeting of the Junior Advertising Club of St. Louis on Sept. 14.

Miss Liberty Cahrman, formerly on the advertising staff of R. H. Macy & Co., New York, has joined the Hicks Advertising Agency, New York, as an account executive.

IMPORTANT NEWSPAPER SALES IN BRITAIN

Westminister Gazette Company Buys Brantford Group—Allied Newspapers, Inc., Adds to Holdings

Control of the Bradford and District Newspaper Company, proprietors of the Yorkshire (England) Observer, the Bradford Daily Telegraph, etc., has been acquired by the Westminster Press, London, of which Sir Charles Starmer is managing director, and which owns the Westminster Gazette and other newspapers.

The controlling shares of the company were transferred at a board meeting on Sept. 2, but it is stated that there will be little change in the personnel or policy of the papers.

Allied Newspapers Limited, which already own newspapers in London, Manchester, Sheffield, Newcastle-upon-Tyne and Glasgow have now completed the purchase of the North-Eastern Daily Gazette and its associated journals at Middlesbrough.

Sir William Berry and his co-directors on Allied (Northern) Newspapers, Limited, have paid £479,705, of which £279,705 is in cash and the balance of £200,000 in first mortgage debentures. There will probably be a public issue of preference shares.

AD TIPS

George Batten Company, Inc., 383 Madison avenue, New York. Placing account of the Sanka Coffee Corporation, New York.

Buchanan-Thomas Advertising Company, 412 South 19th street, Omaha, Nebr. Handling account for the McGraw Machine Company, Lincoln, Nebr., manufacturers "Lincoln" folding camp furniture.

Frank M. Comrie Company, 2104 Straus Building, Chicago. Now handling account for the Tuthill Spring Company, Chicago, manufacturer of springs.

Churchill-Hall, Inc., 50 Union Square, New York. Placing account of Wm. E. Wright & Sons Company, Orange, N. J., manufacturers of bias fold tape.

Evans, Kip & Hackett, Inc., 247 Park avenue, New York. Will place account for Ferranti, Inc., New York, makers of radio transformers.

Hicks Advertising Agency, 52 Vanderbilt avenue, New York. Has secured accounts of Coudurier, Fructus & Descher, silk manufacturers of Paris, Lyons and New York, and Levi & Seligman, Inc., knitted silk manufacturers.

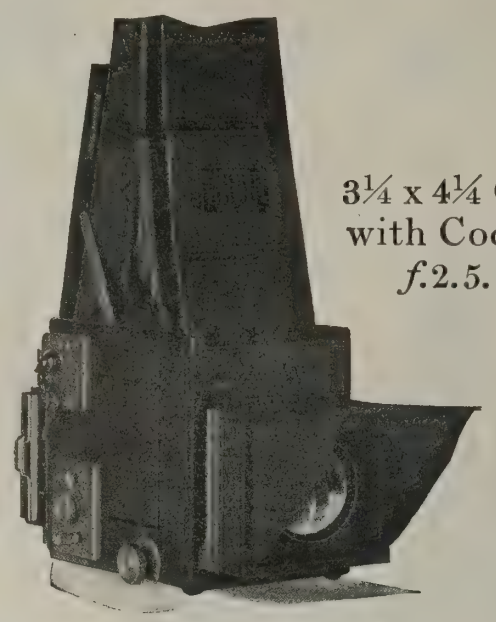
H. B. Humphrey Company, 331 Boylston street, Boston. Placing account of the Stedman Products Company, South Braintree, Massachusetts, manufacturers Stedman Naturized Flooring.

Lord & Thomas and Logan, Inc., 1151 So. Broadway, Los Angeles. Placing account of J. E. Espey Company, Pasadena, Cal., manufacturers "Espey's Fragrant" cream.

Lord & Thomas and Logan, Inc., 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Placing account of Robt. A. Johnston Company, Milwaukee, manufacturers Johnston's chocolates.

Manternach Company, Inc., 55 Allyn street, Hartford, Conn. Placing account for the Togatowel Company, Inc., Bethel, Conn., manufacturers Toga towels.

Martin-Gessner, Inc., Pere Marquette Building, New Orleans. Has secured account of the Dunbar-Dukate Company, New Orleans, packers of original Dunbar shrimp.



Victor H. Morgan Company, Union Trust Building, Cleveland. Placing special advertising for the Ohio Power Co. and the Ohio Public Service Co.

O'Connell-Ingalls Advertising Agency, 100 Boylston street, Boston. Placing account for Bird & Son, Inc., East Walpole, Massachusetts, manufacturers floor covering and roofing.

Joseph Richards Company, 247 Park avenue, New York, Placing account for the Burnee Corporation, manufacturers of Nedick's Orange Drink.

Suedhoff-Ross Company, Inc., Shoaff Building, Fort Wayne, Ind. Handling account for the Ovelmo Company, Fort Wayne, Manufacturers "Ovelmo," remedies.

BRIGHTEN THE PAGE WITH GRAFLEX PICTURES

3¼ x 4¼ Graflex, Series C, with Cooke Anastigmat f.2.5. Price $260.

Football games don't wait for good weather and now press photographers needn't.

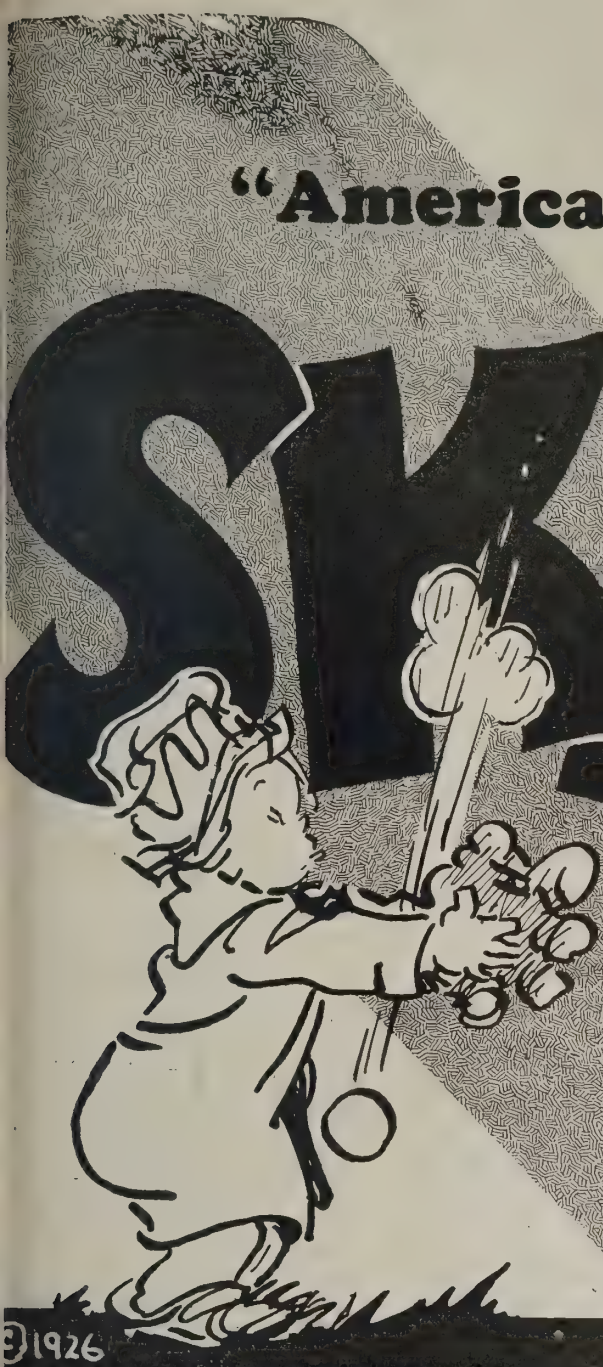
The new Graflex has three times the lens speed of the fastest previous model. Its big Cooke Anastigmat f.2.5 can pass enough light for action pictures on dull days, even in rain!

Exciting games and other important events often occur in bad weather. Nevertheless, the new Graflex can get clear, bold views that might add distinction—possibly circulation—to your paper.

Give your camera men the Graflex, Series C, and watch their picture output improve.

Graflex cameras are now made by



THE FOLMER GRAFLEX CORPORATION
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

For sale by

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

"America's Circulation Wow"

SKIPPY!

A New Sunday Comic Page in Colors by PERCY CROSBY

©1926
KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, Inc.

The most lovable kid comic page ever drawn

KING FEATURES SYNDICATE
M. KOENIGSBERG, PRESIDENT
241 West 58th Street New York City

CRIME NEWS FAILS TO HOLD CIRCULATION

Speakers at Interstate Meeting in Camden Cite Cases to Prove Contention—Hetrick of Altoona New Director

Sensational play of murder stories and crime news in general creates only temporary circulation, speakers declared addressing the fall meeting of the Interstate Circulation Managers Association held in Camden, N. J., Sept. 14.

Forty-five circulators attending elected F. M. Hetrick, Altoona (Pa.) Mirror, association director to fill the unexpired term of the late A. C. Finley, Atlantic City Press, and selected Williamsport, Pa., for the 10th annual convention to be held in March next year.

P. Rutherford, Wilmington (Del.) Every Evening, and association president, presided. J. H. Kuntz, Lancaster (Pa.) Intelligencer-News Journal, is secretary.

C. L. Stretch, of the Philadelphia Bulletin, stated that sales invariably increase during sensational murder trials, even though no special effort is made by the paper to play up the trials. He cited the Marshall murder case in Philadelphia. The day Marshall confessed to the murder the Bulletin sold about 56,000 extra copies, he said. Within three days, however, this additional sale had dropped to but 16,000 copies. Other interesting cases, he said, sold many extras, but the circulation was not permanent by any means. This subject was also discussed by Mr. Hetrick, W. M. Shipman, Passaic (N. J.) Herald; W. D. Miller, Washington (D. C.) Post, and Howard Lee, Philadelphia (Pa.) Inquirer.

Two New Jersey newsdealers gave talks on "What Will Induce Carriers and Dealers to Employ Efforts to Build Circulation with out waiting for the Office to Hand them the Business?" The newsdealers were K. F. Channon, Audubon, N. J., and J. J. Carr, Beverly, N. J. Mr. Channon represents the Camden Courier & Post exclusively in the town of Audubon, and Mr. Carr represents all papers in Beverly, N. J. Both men make it a point to approach all newcomers in the town and endeavor to get their subscriptions. Both dealers, however, favor the trained canvasser for a systematic house-to-house canvass. Mr. Channon pays his delivery boys on the sliding scale; adds a bonus for new serves, and docks for lost subscribers.

Joseph B. Taylor, West Chester (Pa.) Local News, spoke on the subject, "How Can Frequent Changes in Carrier Boys Be Prevented?" He favored and emphasized office efficiency, parental cooperation, personal contact with the boys, pep meetings, campaigns and cash bonuses. Howard Zimmerman, Pottsville (Pa.) Republican; Lloyd Lippincott and Samuel Brown, Atlantic City Press Union also spoke on the subject.

Mr. Hetrick presented the topic, "Cutting Circulation and Newsprint Waste." He stated that on the Mirror they use left-over copies for wrapping purposes, and that paper left on cores is cut up and padded, then sold for scratch pads; some is also sold in large sheets to housewives for home use. Harry W. Cullis, Chester (Pa.) Times, also told of using tear sheets for advertisers instead of giving them a copy of the paper.

"How Can a Subscription List Be Put on a Cash in Advance Basis?" was to have been presented by W. B. Wilson, Washington (Pa.) Observer and Reporter, but he was unable to attend, and sent a prepared paper which was read by C. H. Forrest, Harrisburg (Pa.) Telegraph. Mr. Wilson stated that the best way to put a subscription list on a cash in advance basis is to publish an interesting and attractive newspaper so that first of all the subscribers will not want to do without it. Next, simply announce that all subscriptions must be paid in advance by using a series of letters, and then cut off all those in arrears, following them later by personal solicitation. Others who spoke on the subject were F. A. Dittus, Baltimore (Md.) Sun; J. H. Kuntz, Lancaster (Pa.) Intelligencer-News Journal and W. D. Miller, Washington (D. C.) Post.

Immediately following the noon luncheon, Hon. John B. Kates, a member of the Delaware River Bridge commission, addressed the members on the present day tendency of newspapers to play up crime and sordid stories day after day.

The first topic of the afternoon session was presented by B. C. Still, Baltimore (Md.) Sun on "How Can a Road Man Be Trained to Represent the Policy of the Paper, Avoiding Extravagances Both in Statements and Expenditures?" Mr. Still stated that on his paper a new road man is given at least five weeks' training before he is assigned to his territory. Expense accounts are checked carefully, and false statements as to the policy of the newspaper jeopardizes the position of the road man.

"Delivery of Newspapers to Individual Customers by Automobile," presented by W. D. Miller, Washington Post, brought forth much discussion from those present. Any such delivery is very expensive, whether on rural routes or in cities, it was stated. Factors entering into any decision on such delivery are such as the type of people residing in that territory, condition of the roads, volume of advertising carried, weather conditions, collections and delivery reliability.

The concluding discussions were in the form of Round Table Talks. These talks were led by H. C. Lee, Philadelphia Inquirer on morning papers, and R. L. McLean, Philadelphia (Pa.) Bulletin on evening papers.

LIBEL VICTORY AFFIRMED

The Supreme Court of Oregon has ordered dismissed a libel suit for $60,000, brought against the Portland Telegram by O. W. Eastham. The Telegram had already won a judgment in the Multnomah County circuit court, and this finding was sustained by the higher tribunal. The Telegram had charged in a news story that Eastham had agreed, for a consideration, to suppress certain initiative petitions.

NEW TEXAS PLANT

Marshall (Tex.) News and Messenger have moved into a new home, three doors from the former location. A new press has been installed with two new linotypes.

PRESS GUSHES WORDS TO PROMOTE BIG FIGHT

(Continued from page 9)

aging editor of the New York Evening World, that he will use two complete pages of pictures the afternoon after the fight. With a standard size paper going so heavily into the pictorial side of the battle, imagination runs wild, conjecturing what the tabloids will do.

Among the 100 newspaper men who are at the camps doing the advance work, stirring up public interest in the fight, in addition to those already mentioned, are such well known sports page figures as Joe Williams, NEA Service, Inc.; Robert Edgren, Ed Van Every and Vincent Treanor, New York Evening World; Joe Gordan and Sam Hall, New York American; Sid Mercer and Frank O'Neil, New York Journal; Harry Newman and Marshall Hunt, New York Daily News; Murray Lewin, New York Mirror; "Scoop" Gleason, San Francisco Call; Charlie Dunkley, Chicago office of the Associated Press; Mark Kelly, Los Angeles Examiner; Harry Cross, New York Herald Tribune; James Dawson, New York Times; Jack Kofoed, New York Evening Post; Wilbur Wood, New York Sun; Sam Taub, New York Telegram; Frank Mencke, King Features Syndicate; Gordon MacKay, Philadelphia Inquirer; Lou Jaffe, Philadelphia Ledger; "Dick" Kane, Philadelphia Record; Robert Ripley, cartoonist for Associated Newspapers; Westbrook Pegler, Chicago Tribune, and Franklin Grant, Universal Service.

In Atlantic City there is a certain amount of entertaining for newspaper correspondents, but no favors are asked. Jack Dempsey on Sept. 7, gave a banquet to the writers at the Ambassador Hotel, as an example. It was worth while attending. At the conclusion, Dempsey made a pretty speech in which he asserted gravely:

"The pen is certainly mightier than the boxing glove."

PASTOR OWNS TWO PAPERS

Rev. W. L. Torbert, pastor of the E. church, Dexter, Kan., and a veter Kansas newspaperman, has purchased l second newspaper, the Arcadia Journ A year ago he bought the Dexter Tribu which he is now editing. Paul Torb is to be editor of the Journal.

AD MEN PLAY GOLF

Delmore Faber, of the Boston Sto Milwaukee, won low gross score in t Milwaukee Advertising Club's ann handicap tournament recently. The cl held its first fall meeting Sept. 9, at t Milwaukee Athletic Club. A. M. Cand of the National Enameling and Stam ing Company, was the speaker.

The more time we give to the questi of debt settlement, the more we lose i terest in Europe.—Savannah News.

The Los Angeles EVENING HERALD consistently carries more paid-- advertising than any daily newspaper in the west

Representatives

New York: Herb. W. Moloney, 604 Times Bldg. Chicago: John H. Lederer, 910 Hearst Bldg. San Francisco: A. J. Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg.

Do you know what percentage of errors are made in your Composing Room?

We suggest you go there and take fifty original proofs. Count up the number of lines and the number of errors. Get the percentage of errors to lines.

It takes twice as long to correct an error as it does to make it, so multiply this percentage by three.

Take this resultant percentage and apply it to your total Composing Room payroll for the year. See how much money errors are costing you.

When you find out what they cost you write and tell us the amount. We will show you a source of profit you have never heard of.

Matrix Contrast Corp.
33 W. 42nd St., New York City

IN some cities, the "leading" newspaper may have merely a few hundred more circulation than its competitor. The Press has 40,000 more net paid circulation in Pittsburgh than the other two evening newspapers combined—and 35,000 more net paid circulation in Pittsburgh than the other two Sunday newspapers combined.

THE PITTSBURGH PRESS

A Scripps-Howard Newspaper
Member of the A. B. C.

Do the Fall months just ahead promise big revenue for your classified medium? They do for our many clients!

THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, Inc.
International Classified Advertising Counsellors
Packard Building Philadelphia

The Normal Season in Miami

23%
MORE CIRCULATION

Herald July circulation figures this year as compared with the same period for 1925 show a net increase of 23%—substantiating the continued phenomenal growth of Miami and its market under normal conditions—at a time when nearly every reader is a bona fide resident.

No other market in America is in as healthy a state as the Miami market. No other market offers greater possibilities to the national advertiser.

The Miami Herald
"Florida's Most Important Newspaper"
Frank B. Shutts, Publisher.

1st in ALBANY N Y for Over 73 Years

The most potent sales force in the Albany N. Y. Area

The Times-Union
Albany's Leading Newspaper

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

New York Dailies Protect Readers from Fraudulent Advertising—William Metz Made Classified Manager of New York Evening Graphic—"Join Classified Group," Says Williams

WILLIAM METZ, formerly of the New York American, has been appointed classified advertising manager of the New York Evening Graphic, effective, Sept. 18.

WILLIAM METZ

On Sept. 14 a dinner was given him by members of the New York American staff, headed by W. E. Kernahan, manager of display classified advertising, at the Advertising Club of New York.

Mr. Metz has completed 31 years of continuous service in the classified department of the American. Fifteen of the "old timers" on the American gave Metz the surprise dinner and a gold watch to signify their esteem and friendship over a period of years as well as their good wishes for him in his new venture.

On the American Mr. Metz devoted many years to building up the resort and travel classifications.

Classified advertising managers of New York newspapers work fast in cleaning their columns of fraudulent advertising. Quick work was made of an attempt to victimize a New York Herald Tribune advertiser last week when detectives arrested Harry Comi, of Union City, N. J., on a charge of attempted grand larceny. The arrest grew out of a reply to a want ad inserted in the Herald Tribune by Robert Parsons, a gardener, of Brooklyn.

When Comi came to Parsons' home with an offer to get him a position as gardener in a Mount Kisco home if he would turn over $1,000 to him, Parsons grew suspicious and notified L. L. Heaton, manager of the Herald Tribune classified advertising department. Mr. Heaton informed the police and two detectives were assigned to go with Parsons to his rendezvous with Comi. Comi was arrested and found to have a police record.

Magistrate George W. Simpson this week praised the New York World for its systematic efforts to present fakers and swindlers from using its columns. In holding an alleged want-ad faker for the grand Jury, the Magistrate said:

"The World, a paper of high standing in this community, was founded by the late Joseph Pulitzer, whose policy was fair play to all still is being carried out. This newspaper has established a Bureau of Accuracy and Fair Play to protect its readers and others. The case before us is a splendid example of its good faith and its effort to protect the public in a fair and unbiased manner. I want to assure The World of my co-operation in its endeavors to keep its columns clear of fake advertisers."

Members of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association requesting Cranston Williams, manager, to suggest first steps for cleaning up their classified advertising columns and to help them with plans for building up their classifications are urged by him to join the Association of Newspaper Classified Managers Association.

Many of your worries will then be eliminated and the groundwork started for successful classified advertising departments," Williams wrote in the current association bulletin.

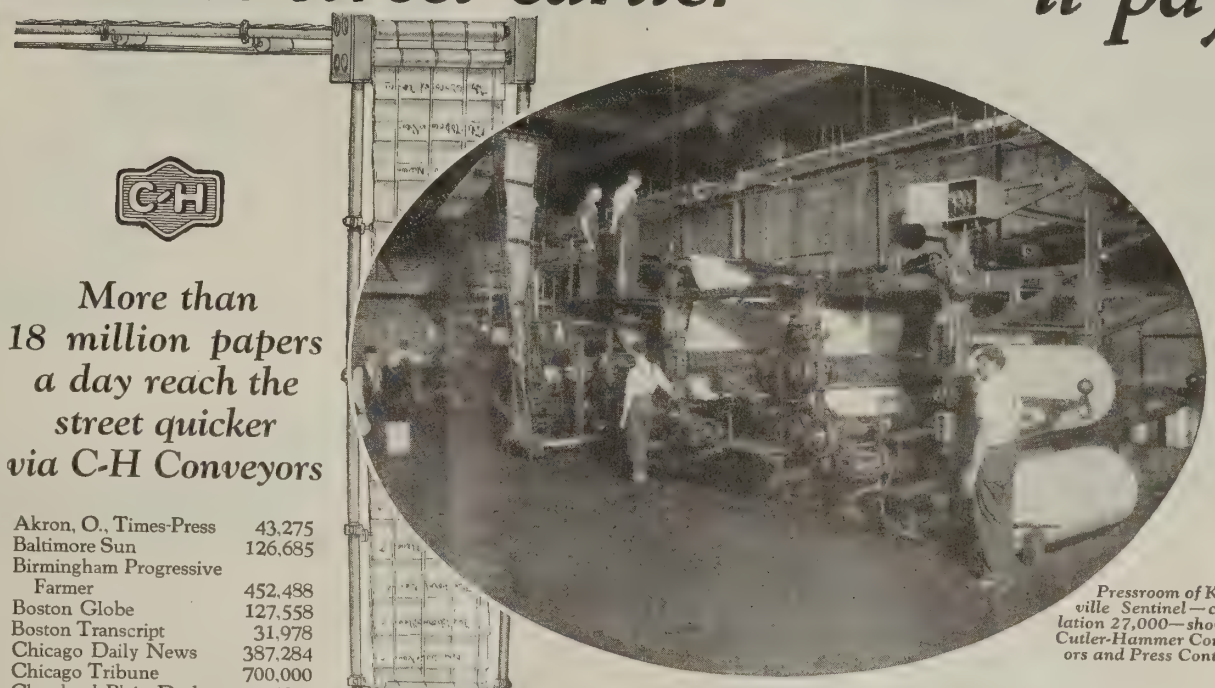
In view of the fact that many classified ads are old-timers and repeaters and rob the classified columns of some of their interest, a Northwest paper has made a column for newcomers among the classified ads. Fresh interest is therefore created in the classified ads under the heading "New To-day."

The Thursday Island (Australia) Daily Pilot, printed on 6x12 brown paper is said to be the smallest newspaper in the world.

JURY RAPS NEWSPAPERS

Baltimore Body Would Have Them Barred From Prisons

Newspapers in the hands of prison convicts are just so many "textbooks of crime," and penal institutions that permit them to circulate among prisoners are providing the equipment for potential "criminal laboratories," according to a report made Sept. 10, by the penitentiary committee of the May term grand jury for Baltimore.



The committeemen held that the effect on prisoners of the newspapers and their columns of crime news was to harden the inveterate law-breaker and teach new tricks to the novice behind the bars.

It was recommended that newspapers be barred from the Maryland Penitentiary "as a part of the punishment" meted out to violators of the law. The jury's report is viewed humorously by many people.

N. Y. GRAPHIC ADDS TO STAFF

J. Bain Thompson, for the past 15 years with the Benjamin & Kentnor Company, special representatives, and Edwin T. Burke, formerly with the New York Automotive Daily News, have joined the national advertising staff of the New York Evening Graphic. George T. Mainardy has been named to represent the staff in Philadelphia and the South.

Hit the street earlier — it pays

Pressroom of Knoxville Sentinel—circulation 27,000—showing Cutler-Hammer Conveyors and Press Control.

C-H

More than 18 million papers a day reach the street quicker via C-H Conveyors

Akron, O., Times-Press	43,275
Baltimore Sun	126,685
Birmingham Progressive Farmer	452,488
Boston Globe	127,558
Boston Transcript	31,978
Chicago Daily News	387,284
Chicago Tribune	700,000
Cleveland Plain Dealer	199,628
Columbus Dispatch	103,526
Danville, Ill., News	21,432
Charleston, W. Va. Mail	13,133
Kansas City Journal	145,778
Kenosha News	9,450
London, Eng., Daily Mail
Milwaukee Journal	132,813
Montreal Gazette	31,798
New York World	309,386
Palm Beach, Florida, Post	8,519
Philadelphia Bulletin	520,072
Philadelphia Inquirer	287,157
Philadelphia Public Ledger	128,594
Pittsburgh Post	141,962
St. Louis Globe-Democrat	226,579
San Francisco Examiner	172,293
Sioux City Journal	8,054
Sydney, Australia, Bulletin
Toronto Mail and Empire	114,767
Tokio, Japan, Asahi

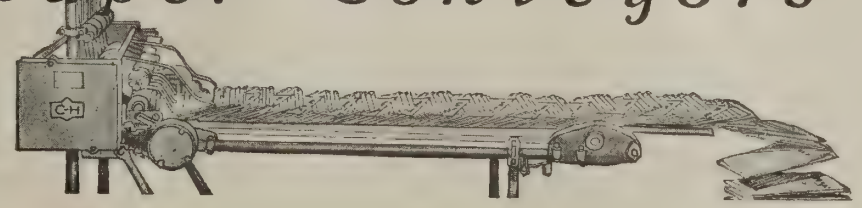
And hundreds of otners.

Circulation based on January, 1926, Standard Rate and Data.

A total of more than 18,000,000 papers are handled every day by C-H Conveyors

You can do it with C-H Conveyors

Not hours, or minutes, but seconds frequently make the difference between stale news and a "scoop"—especially where the story is "big" and the competition keen.



You can push the "dead line" ahead—yet your papers will reach the street earlier via C-H Conveyors. Carrying them in a steady stream, just as fast as the presses can deliver, C-H Conveyors take the papers up, overhead, around corners, through a ceiling or a wall and lay them down in counted piles, just where you want them—on the delivery or mailing tables.

C-H Conveyors eliminate the press-to-street "bottle neck" in newspaper production. They prevent waste, eliminate labor and SAVE TIME. Papers, large and small, from London to Tokio, are using them. Write for particulars today.

The CUTLER-HAMMER Mfg. Co.
Pioneer Manufacturers of Electric Control Apparatus
1203 St. Paul Avenue
MILWAUKEE, WIS.

CUTLER HAMMER

Newspaper Conveyors

Cutler-Hammer Automatic Control for newspaper presses, job presses of every description and for all motor-driven equipment of the printing plant, speeds production, saves time and labor and soon more than pays for itself in increased production. Write for descriptive literature today.

WOMEN IN ADVERTISING AND JOURNALISM

Josephine Van de Grift Thrilled by Balloon Race Assignment—Kansas Newspaper Made by Women—Miss Neal Elected to Texas Senate

THRILLS from a balloon ride she once had linger in the memory of Josephine Van de Grift, columnist and feature writer for the Akron (O.) Beacon Journal.

"My most thrilling assignment took place in Akron when I went on a balloon race with Ward Van Orman who this year won the international race," she said. "This race was only to Youngtown but I dare say after a certain height is reached details make very little difference. As luck would have it we came down just at dusk on the links of a country club where they were just serving dinner.

Josephine Van de Grift

"Another interesting assignment once took me up into the cranberry bog where Charles Garland had retired after refusing his inheritance of a million dollars. I spent a day and a night there, read some of Garland's very excellent poetry, had some discussions with him about the fourth dimension, spent the night in one-half of the made-over chicken coop, made a couple of warm friends whom I still have, and got the plot for a story as yet unwritten.

"Then I went down to Ormond Beach, Florida, to interview John D. Rockefeller on how rich men may guard the wealth which they hand on to their sons. I met Mr. Rockefeller coming home from church and his responses to my queries were that it was a nice day and he didn't care to be interviewed. He gave me a bright new dime and also gave one to my mother.

"I went into newspaper work because I didn't seem to be having much luck giving music lessons. I stayed in it through the indulgence of various managing editors. The first three years or so I spent with the Beacon Journal and then I went to New York to be with NEA Service, Inc. I spent a couple of years with them and then I returned to Akron where I have been more than happy.

"My ambitions are to get thin, write stories as good as Katherine Mansfield's and keep my small daughter as happy as possible."

The Salina (Kan.) Journal is almost a woman-made institution. Women virtually run the paper, occupying most of the executive and important positions in the city room and business department. What few men there are in the city room take orders from a woman city editor. Miss Dorethea Smith is the editor. She also is a news writer of ability. A star reporter is Miss Nellie Talkington, who covers one of the principal news runs and also the main business section of Salina.

Miss Mary Jean Bailey handles features and writes the stories that drift into the office in addition to assisting with proof during the rush.

The music and society editor is Miss Marion Steck. Although the Salina Journal is a Republican paper, Miss Steck is an active Democrat and won the party nomination for Recorder of Deeds in a recent primary contest.

In the business department a woman is in charge of the city carriers and supervises subscription collections. Another woman is in charge of the country mail, handles collections and checks the mailing list.

Of the ten linotype operators, four are women. During the last few years, two women advanced to the position of treasurer of the company, but left their positions when they resigned to marry. A man now handles the money sack.

Miss Margie Neal of Carthage, Texas' first woman state senator-elect, is one of the few of her sex to own and publish newspapers in Texas. Miss Neal's paper is the East Texas Register.

Miss Mary Louise Page, society editor of the South Bend Tribune, has returned from vacation.

The Kansas City Journal and Post has added to its business staff as manager of merchandising and promotion, Miss A. J. Lambkin of the Ferry-Hanly Advertising Company, Kansas City.

Twenty-four applications were received by the League of Advertising Women for the Advertising Memorial Scholarships to be awarded to two young women of the metropolitan area probably at the first dinner meeting of the season a week from Tuesday. Thirteen of the applications will be presented to the judges for consideration next week. Eleven failed to qualify in the preliminary examination.

The scholarships provide for a year's course in advertising at New York University.

COAST SCRIPPS GROUP BUYS UTAH PAPERS

Provo Daily Herald and Springville Herald, a Weekly, Added to String—New Corporation Organized to Take Control

(By Telegraph to Editor & Publisher)

Provo, Utah, Sept. 15.—W. H. Hornibrook, owner and publisher of the Provo Evening Herald, afternoon daily, and the Springville Herald, weekly newspaper of Springville, has sold both newspapers to the James G. Scripps newspaper interests, according to the announcement made last night by Mr. Hornibrook.

The Herald Corporation was organized to take over and publish the two papers. Stockholders will include Mrs. Josephine S. Scripps, of Miramar, Cal., B. H. Canfield, Los Angeles, Leroy Sanders, Seattle, J. W. Curtis, Oakland, H. B. R. Briggs, Los Angeles, E. C. Rodgers, San Luis Obispo, N. Gunnar Rasmussen, Provo, and other local persons.

The purchase price was not stated. Officers of the Herald Corporation announced there would be no change of policy, nor of management except that N. Gunnar Rasmussen would succeed Mr. Hornibrook as editor of the Evening Herald.

Indiana~

A Compact, Unified Market —of Great Wealth and Diversified Buying Power

No national advertiser can go wrong in selecting Indiana as one of his important markets.

Here you have a State 36,354 square miles in area inhabited by over 3,000,000 people, with a total estimated wealth of over $9,000,000,000.

Indiana possesses all the natural advantages of location—lying in the heart of the richest industrial and agricultural valley in the world, possessing an abundance of nature's mineral wealth from which some of the largest industries in the world send forth their manufactured products all over the world.

It is inhabited by a class of people who are highly intelligent, industrious, who live exceptionally well and spend their money freely.

Indiana is truly a compact unified market that every advertiser will find it worth while to cultivate. The newspapers listed below can give you valuable information on it. Write for it, there is no obligation.

	Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Columbus Republican (E)	4,912	.03
††Connersville News-Examiner (E)	4,681	.025
††Decatur Democrat (E)	3,215	.025
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette (M)	35,247	.08
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette (S)	28,468	.08
Fort Wayne News Sentinel (E)	43,365	.10
Gary Evening Post-Tribune (E)	15,514	.06
Huntington Press (M&S)	4,079	.025
††Indianapolis News (E)	128,341	.25
Lafayette Journal & Courier.. (M) 7,878 (E) 13.583	21,461	.06
††La Porte Herald-Argus (E)	6,726	.04
Marion Chronicle (E)	9,364	.04
†Shelbyville Democrat (E)	4,012	.025
South Bend News-Times.. (M) 9,751 (E) 16,603	26,354	.07
South Bend News-Times (S)	24,500	.07
South Bend Tribune..(S) 21,431....(E)	22,254	.06
††Terre Haute Tribune (E&S)	23,442	.06

A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, March 31, 1926.
†Government Statement, October 1, 1925.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1926.

All Advertising, Like All Gaul Is Divided Into Three Parts—

1. Market Visualization
2. Getting the facts to make the copy fit the market
3. The choice of media that most effectively cover the market.

In All National Newspaper Advertising

EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S

MARKET GUIDE

renders an absolutely essential service to national advertisers and advertising agencies with respect to all three of these vital functions of national campaigning. A service so complete, so authentic, so efficient, that hundreds upon hundreds of sales and advertising executives and agency space-buying controllers have written to us that they cannot think of a single respect in which the Market Guide can be improved upon. "Let it alone—it is perfect" is the burden of their cry.

In a word, this service consists of massing together from 50 to 500 facts and sets of figures which reveal the exact trading conditions in each of the 1400 American and Canadian cities where daily newspapers are published—fresh, first-hand, thoroughly dependable, laboriously gathered from original sources, checked and digested by trained experts.

The choice of media is as vital to a campaign's success as the choice of markets

Hence, to round out and complete its service to national advertisers, Editor & Publisher's Market Guide gives the publisher of each daily newspaper in the United States and Canada an opportunity to display, in close juxtaposition to the market survey of his own city, the story of his newspaper, in his own words.

Wideawake publishers everywhere are eagerly availing themselves—by mail and by wire—of this unequaled opportunity to show how thoroughly they cover their markets.

There is still time for YOU, Mr. Publisher, to get YOUR story into the 1926 Market Guide, which will appear early in November, and the forms of which will close very shortly. If you have not already reserved your space, attend to it at once. Full particulars, at no obligations to you, will be gladly furnished.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

A. B. C.
Charter Member

SUITE 1700 Times Building, New York

A. B. P.
Member

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

THE Amalgamated Press of England, as every reader of this department knows is something quite different from the American Associated Press. It is the organization which Alfred Harmsworth, Lord Northcliffe, brought forth to finance and to promote his numerous periodicals, other than those that might strictly be called newspapers. It began with his pioneer periodical, Answers to Correspondents, and now includes all the publishing enterprises which are discussed in "The Romance of the Amalgamated Press" (London, the Amalgamated Press Ltd.), compiled by George Dilnot.

Sir George A. Sutton, the present chairman of the Amalgamated Press, opens the volume with a personal tribute to the late Viscount Northcliffe. To the latter he gives credit for being "the first editor and proprietor to make generous payment to editorial assistants and contributors not merely an occasional whim but a settled policy." Such generous, open-handed treatment of associates, from chief leader-writer down to office boy, has, according to Sir Sutton, "immensely benefited all workers in Journalism."

The opening chapter develops more in detail the theme given in the foreword. In speaking of what has already appeared in print about Northcliffe, Mr. Dilnot says:

> In books, in magazines and newspaper articles, the Amalgamated Press and its founder have been painted many times. The colors have been splashed freely, but invariably in the wrong places and often the wrong colors. Even to many of those intimately associated with this great organization in its later stages the full details of the manner in which it won its way to swift and vast success are not fully realized.

In discussing the scope and influence of the hundred or more publications issued by the Amalgamated Press this comment is made:

> It gains its readers almost from the cradle, and they are held till they reach the grave. Consider that among the hundred or so publications that are issued by the Amalgamated Press an appeal is made to every taste and every age. From the child not yet able to read, but able to appreciate wholesome fun in pictures, to the scholar who consults the educational books issued in parts by the firm, there is no age or class that is missed.

One of the most interesting chapters in the book is that telling how Answers was founded in a tiny room on the first floor of 26, Paternoster Square, on June 2, 1888. This chapter shows how Answers has been the corner stone for the structure of the Amalgamated Press. Northcliffe's nose for news early showed itself in his management of Answers, as the following quotation will show:

> One day a young free lance—one Max Pemberton—was walking in Fleet Street when he was accosted by a friend. Pemberton answered the inevitable inquiry with a shrug of his shoulders. "Oh, I'm just off to the British Museum to dig out an article on ———." His friend laughed. "Is that it? You don't need to go to the museum for articles. Come with me and I'll show you where to get articles."
>
> That expressive Americanism, "live stuff," had probably not then reached this country. But Max Pemberton's friend knew what it was, all the same. He explained to Pemberton that the great mass of people were interested in things that were happening about them. There was romance in every phase of life. Why not write about things as they were, not as they had been?
>
> Mr. Max Pemberton's friend was Alfred Harmsworth, and indirectly out of that conversation was born "Mr. Answers." For some time later, when Pemberton was a member of the staff, he was told by the editor at one of the weekly conferences: "There are hundreds of things in life which are known, yet not known, to us. I should say if a smart journalist would give himself up and devote his energies to expeditions and to research, he might write us an entertaining series." The first article was, "A Day with a Hansom-Cab," in which the writer actually undertook every detail of a driver's work. Thereafter he was chased over London by detectives; he took a ride on one of the old underground engines; he spent a night in a haunted house; he acted as a "super" at Drury Lane; he slept on the Embankment at night; he made personal investigation of life and wrote of its queer aspects.

Religious journalism has not been successful—financially at least—in America. But in England Northcliffe made it pay cash dividends. The first religious group was the Sunday Companion which for two years waged an up-hill fight before the ledger showed the balance on the right side. Once the Sunday Companion was no longer carried in red ink there followed Sunday Stories and then the Sunday Circle "which was quickly seized upon by Christian and social workers as their own special organ." Of the religious group this point is made:

> While dealing with these definitely religious weeklies one point needs particular emphasis. They enjoy the lowest "returns" of any class of paper. People do not parade their religion or their more serious reading, and consequently papers like the Sunday Companion are not bought casually, but are ordered; they go straight from the news agent to the home, without any speculative pause on bookstall or counter.

What surprises one, as the pages of this volume are turned, is the large number of publications designed to appeal primarily to children. "There are now 13 of these annuals issued from The Fleetway House. All have wonderful sales." Of the children's periodicals possibly the best known is My Magazine. From this periodical came The Children's Newspaper, the first issue of which was a record in newspaper circulation. It is no child's play to put out this sheet. Proof of this may be found in the following:

> On the staff of the Children's Newspaper are some of the best-known writers and scientists of the day, men and women well versed in every lore and traveled in all lands. It picks up its news in every corner of the busy world, in the homes of the people, in laboratories, and country lanes. It has taken its place literally as a great educational factor, for teachers in almost all the schools are using it.

"The Romance of the Amalgamated Press" tells not only about the periodicals themselves, but also how they are edited and produced. It describes the various publishing plants, the paper mills, and the forest reserves controlled by the Amalgamated Press.

The volume is copiously illustrated with cuts of those who are behind the Amalgamated and with prints of homes and plants, etc. The book itself shows what can be produced by the Amalgamated Press—beautifully printed, well illustrated, and artistically bound. Facts and figures are dramatized so that even the lay reader can understand the immense amount of paper and ink that are consumed annually by the various periodicals of the Amalgamated Press.

* * *

H. F. HARRINGTON, director of the Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern University, chats in The Kiwanis Magazine for August about the education and preparation of a journalist. According to Professor Harrington, the American newspaper is no longer a town gossip engaged in peddling the news of the neighborhood. "It has become a great broadcasting station, receiving and sending out news of greater import which overleaps the petty boundaries of geography."

Professor Harrington quotes the remarks Whitelaw Reid once made at New York University on the subject of training for journalism. He then passes on to the dream that Joseph Pulitzer of the World had for his school to bear his name. He quotes this remark of Pulitzer by way of answer to critics of technical courses in journalism:

> Perhaps the critics can name some great editor, born full winged like Mercury, the messenger of the gods. I know none. The highest position that occurs to me which a man in a republic can fill by simple fact of birth is that of an idiot. Is there any other position for which a man does not demand and receive training—training in schools and colleges?

The rest of the article is more specific and deals with the work that is being done in the school that bears the name of the distinguished founder of the Chicago Tribune.

COLUMBIA'S AD COURSE

The winter session for evening classes in advertising, offered by the Extension Department of Columbia University, will open on September 22. Courses will be offered in the principles of advertising, copy art, psychology, merchandising, direct mail, layouts and mechanics.

If Quality

of circulation is your first consideration

The Evening Star

With Sunday Morning Edition

Washington, D. C.

will have your preference—same as it has the preference of practically everyone in the National Capital.

The Star's circulation is honest circulation—both quality and quantity—the kind that counts most with advertisers.

N. Y. Office—110 E. 42nd St.
Dan A. Carroll

Chicago Office—Tower Building
J. E. Lutz

Use the

COMBINATION RATE

OF

The Gazette Times

(Morning and Sunday)

AND

Chronicle Telegraph

(Evening)

in order to cover Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania thoroughly at the lowest cost.

Member A. B. C.

URBAN E. DICE, Nat. Adv. Mgr.
GAZETTE SQ., PITTSBURGH, PA.
National Representatives:
E. M. BURKE, Inc.
42nd and Broadway, N. Y.
120 S. Michigan Blvd., Chicago.
Constitution Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.
R. J. BIDWELL CO.
742 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.
Times Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

GROWING IN IMPORTANCE

The Inter-Mountain territory of Utah, Idaho, Western Wyoming and Eastern Nevada is rapidly developing and becoming more important to the advertiser whose merchandise has national distribution.

Don't overlook this rich section of the West.

The Salt Lake Tribune

THE S. C. BECKWITH SPECIAL AGENCY
—Sole Eastern Agents—
New York—Chicago—Detroit
St. Louis—Kansas City
Atlanta
M. C. MOGENSEN & CO., INC.
Pacific Coast Representatives
San Francisco—Los Angeles—Seattle

Still Gaining!

The net paid average daily circulation for THE BALTIMORE NEWS for April was 124,636—the highest under its present management.

The net paid average for the American was 57,503.

You need these papers to cover Baltimore, they reach more than half the City.

Sold separately or in combination.

THE BALTIMORE NEWS

and

Baltimore American

ANNOUNCEMENT

To National Advertisers and Advertising Agencies

The National Advertising Departments of
New York Evening Journal
Baltimore Evening News
Baltimore American
Washington Evening Times
Washington Herald
Atlanta Evening Georgian
Atlanta Sunday American
are combined with offices in New York—Chicago—Detroit

New York Office:
W. G. HOBSON, Eastern Manager
2 Columbus Circle
Telephone: Circle 5400

Chicago Office: F. E. CRAWFORD, Western Manager, 913 Hearst Bldg.
Detroit Office: FRANKLIN PAYNE, Representative, 1351 Book Bldg.

All under direction of:
JAMES C. DAYTON, Publisher
NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

DOMINANT!

in

Pinellas County, Florida

Daily News

ST. PETERSBURG'S PICTURE PAPER

Owned by Frank Fortune Pulver
Edited by Major Alfred Birdsall

America's Biggest Tabloid
Florida's Fastest Growing Newspaper

To be assured of Complete Coverage—
USE THE NEWS

Represented by

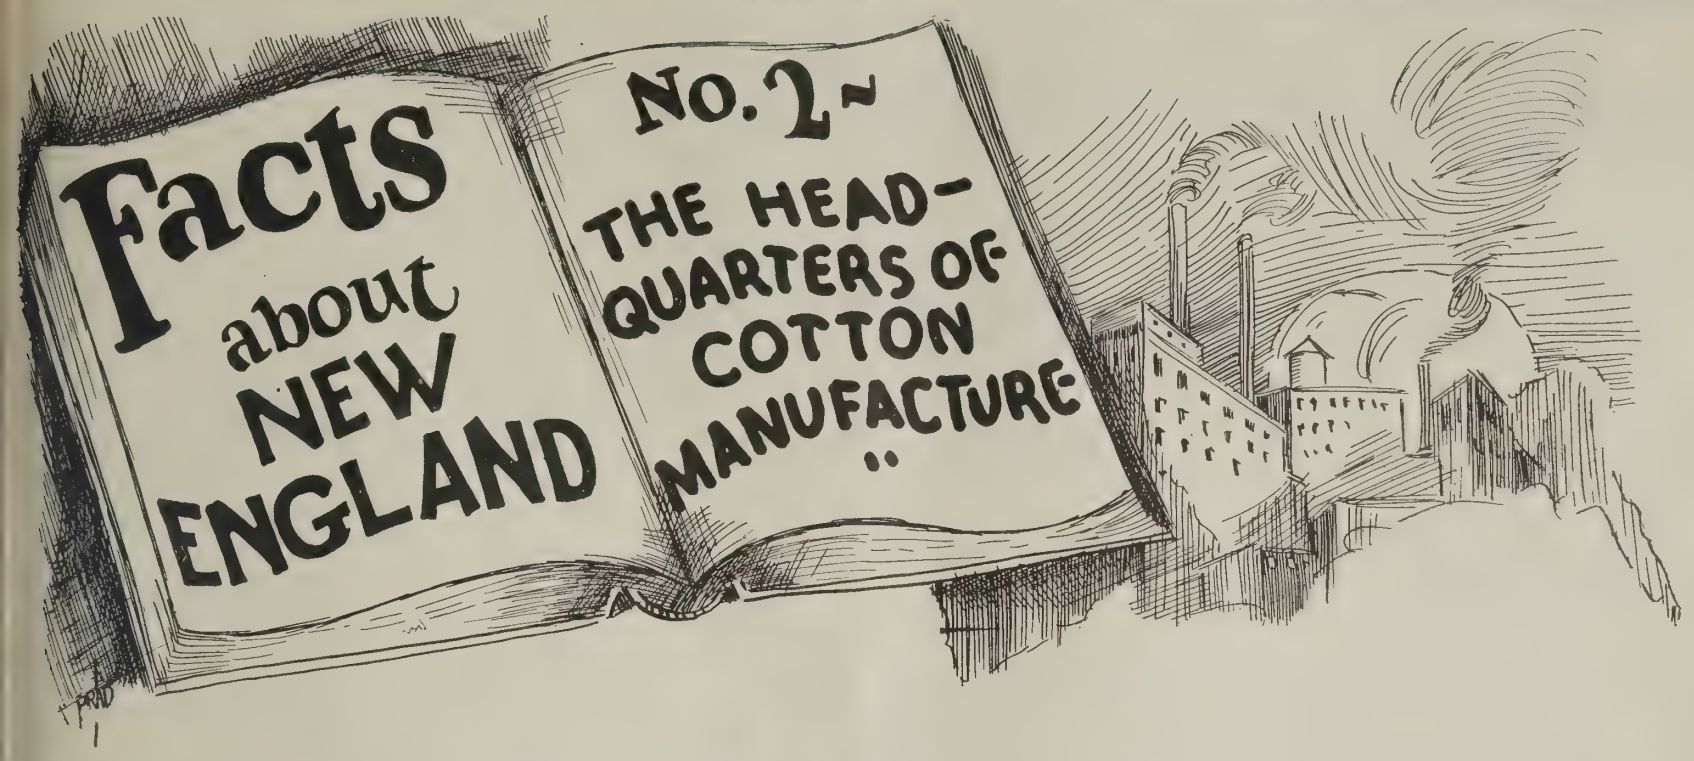
GEORGE B. DAVID COMPANY

NEW YORK: 110 East 42nd Street
CHICAGO: 1010 Hartford Building

in Detroit—

Free Press circulation reaches 31,000 more than the total number of families owning their own homes.

The "Free Press"



"Starts the day in Detroit"

With a stable, uninflated, liberal pursed circulation productive of greater advertising returns at lower cost.

LARGEST WEEKDAY CIRCULATION in the City

The Item Tribune

NEW ORLEANS

New England is still the great cotton manufacturing center of the country.

18,786,000 cotton spindles or one-half of the total of spindles in the United States are to be found in this concentrated area.

This industry employs a great army of workers all year round, whose earning power runs into the hundreds of millions. They alone as a class are great potential buyers—who look to the daily newspapers for their daily wants.

The New England Market can be covered quickly and economically. The papers listed below will tell you how.

MASSACHUSETTS—Population, 3,852,356

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Attleboro Sun .....(E)	5,845	.03	.03
Boston Globe .....(M&E)	287,590	.50	.50
Boston Globe .....(S)	332,282	.55	.55
Boston Transcript ....(E)	35,391	.20	.20
Boston Post .....(M)	377,443	.60	.60
Boston Post .....(S)	349,596	.55	.55
Fall River Herald-News (E)	22,000	.06	.06
Fitchburg Sentinel ....(E)	11,828	.06	.045
Haverhill Gazette ....(E)	16,187	.065	.05
††Lynn Item .....(E)	16,699	.065	.05
††Lowell Courier-Citizen and Evening Leader ..(M&E)	21,918	.07	.07
New Bedford Standard Mercury (M&E)	33,321	.10	.10
New Bedford Sunday Standard (S)	28,806	.10	.10
North Adams Transcript (E)	9,918	.0425	.035
††Pittsfield Eagle .....(E)	17,011	.05	.05
Salem News .....(E)	21,398	.09	.07
††Taunton Gazette .....(E)	9,279	.05	.04
Worcester Telegram-Gazette (M&E)	92,314	.28	.25
Worcester Sunday Telegram (S)	51,096	.21	.18

NEW HAMPSHIRE—Population, 443,683

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Concord Monitor-Patriot (E)	5,215	.0375	.025
††Keene Sentinel .....(E)	3,887	.036	.023
Manchester Union Leader (M&E)	29,368	.13	.10

RHODE ISLAND—Population, 604,397

††Newport Daily News...(E)	6,271	.0336	.0293
Pawtucket Times .....(E)	27,849	.07	.07
Providence Bulletin ...(E)	68,815	.18	(B).25
Providence Journal ...(M)	36,416	.11	(B).25
Providence Journal ...(S)	70,518	.18	.18
Providence News .....(E)	29,123	.08	.08
Providence Tribune ...(E)	21,961	.10	.09
Westerly Sun .....(E&S)	4,950	.025	.025
Woonsocket Call .....(E)	14,508	.05	.05

VERMONT—Population, 352,428

Barre Times .....(E)	7,112	.03	.025
††Bennington Banner ....(E)	3,144	.0125	.0125
Brattleboro Reformer..(E)	3,370	.03	.0175
Burlington Free Press (M)	13,071	.05	.05
Rutland Herald .....(M)	11,038	.04	.04
††St. Johnsbury Caledonian-Record (E)	4,055	.03	.0175

CONNECTICUT—Population, 1,380,631

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Bridgeport Post-Telegram (E&M)	42,743	.15	.15
Bridgeport Post .....(S)	21,162	.10	.10
Hartford Courant ....(M)	33,003	.08	.08
Hartford Courant .....(S)	56,274	.11	.11
Hartford Times .....(E)	53,121	.13	.13
Middletown Press ....(E)	8,359	.0325	.03
††New Haven Register (E&S)	46,218	.14	.13
New London Day.....(E)	12,054	.07	.045
††Norwich Bulletin .....(M)	12,724	.07	.05
Norwalk Hour .....(E)	6,107	.04	.04
††South Norwalk Sentinel (E)	5,043	.04	.025
Stamford Advocate ...(E)	10,329	.05	.04

A. B. C. Publisher's Statement, March 31, 1926.

††Government Statement, March 31, 1926.

(B) Combination rate Daily Journal and Eve. Bulletin.

HAYWARD, VETERAN CAPITAL MAN, DIES

Had Long Service at Washington and Was Authority on Supreme Court News—With I. N. S. Past Eight Years

A. C. ("Gus") Hayward, veteran Washington newspaper correspondent, died at his residence in Washington, Tuesday, Sept. 14, following a long illness. He was 56 years old. His wife and three children survive him.

Hayward, one of the older members of the National Press Club, was for years a familiar and popular figure about the Senate and House Press Galleries. He was on terms of close personal friendship with many Senate and House leaders of both parties and his newspaper colleagues invariably sought him out as a recognized "walking encyclopedia" of "inside information" regarding parliamentary procedure and the status of legislation.

For eight years preceding his death Hayward was a member of the Capital staff of the International News Service, for which he covered specially the United States Supreme Court. In the latter capacity he acquired a national reputation because of the accuracy of his interpretations of decisions so often cloaked by a maze of technical terms. When millions of dollars in corporation taxes hung upon the famous decision in 1921 involving the taxability of stock dividends Hayward flashed the news that the court held such dividends were not taxable as income. Hayward's dispatch was sent after the market fell with a crash following the report by other correspondents that the court held such dividends were taxable. When it was proven that Hayward was right the market recovered speedily and Hayward's dispatch received full meed of credit.

Hayward possessed an uncanny insight into national politics. He was long an intimate of the late Champ Clark and was prominently identified with the movement that nearly made Clark instead of Woodrow Wilson the Democratic nominee at Baltimore. He covered a number of national conventions and was on friendly terms with most of the "big fellows" of both parties. Of a retiring nature, he never indulged in "big talk" himself but his dispatches, often forecasting accurately political and other events in Congress, were eloquent of his worth as a faithful, truthful, careful reporter who never violated a confidence.

JOHN SNEED

Veteran Correspondent Who Served Dallas News 27 Years Dies

Funeral services were held Monday for John Sneed, 52, veteran newspaper correspondent and for 27 years member of the Dallas News editorial staff. Mr. Sneed died Saturday, Sept. 11, in a Dallas hospital following an operation. He had been ill since spring, having been stricken while accompanying a Dallas trade excursion.

Native of Sewanee, Tenn., Mr. Sneed came to Texas about 1897, settling at El Paso, where he served as city editor of the Times and also of the Herald. With associates he founded the El Paso News, later merged with another publication. While residing in El Paso he became local correspondent of the Dallas News, to which he later was called for full time services, and for several years managed the News' bureau at Fort Worth.

One of Mr. Sneed's most memorable assignments was as war correspondent for the Dallas News and New York Herald in Mexico during the troublous years between 1911 and 1917.

He was one of the few correspondents permitted to accompany Gen. John J. Pershing's punitive expedition in pursuit of Francisco Villa in 1916.

ALBERT R. GREER

Publisher Burbank, Cal., and Ashland, Ore., Papers Dies at 62

Albert R. Greer, 62, publisher of the Burbank (Cal.) Review and the Ashland (Ore.) Tidings, died at Oxnard, Cal., Sept. 6 following a long illness. Prior to coming to the Pacific Coast in 1911 the deceased was publisher of the Muskogee (Okla.) Times. He was associated with his son-in-law, Harvey R. Ling, in the publication of the Burbank Review.

Before branching out as a publisher Mr. Greer served an apprenticeship in the printing shop of the Wingfield (Kan.) Courier, owned by his brother. Later he worked on the staff of the old Chicago Herald and upon the organization of the Saturday Blade he became its first editor. Returning to his native state, Kansas, he soon left for the Indian lands of Oklahoma then being opened up, where he started the Perry Courier. His next step was the purchase of the Kansas City (Kan.) Tribune. After this he became publisher of the Muskogee (Okla.) Times. He assumed control of the Burbank Review in 1920, and at that time formed a partnership with his son-in-law.

NEW YORK PUBLISHER DIES

Frederick C. Bickers, 51, publisher of the Fredonia (N. Y.) Censor, died recently in Brooks Memorial hospital at Dunkirk, N. Y., following an operation for appendicitis. He was stricken while at his desk. Mr. Bickers formerly was with Collier's Weekly. He purchased the Censor in 1919.

BAY STATE EDITOR DEAD

L. P. Smith, 64, editor and founder of the Greenville (Mass.) Democrat-Times, died at his home in Greenville Sept. 9. He served 20 years in his State Legislature.

Obituary

CARL G. CARLTON, for the past 12 years editor of the Oakland (Neb.) Independent, died at his home, Sept. 10.

MISS MARGARET ALICE LEWIS, 21 former member of the editorial staff of the San Diego (Cal.) Union, died Sept. 3.

EX-REPRESIDENT JOHN J. CONWAY of Medford, Mass., a printer for more than 35 years and associated with the Boston American for more than 22 years, died at his home, Sept. 4. He was chairman of the Boston American Chapel of Local 13 for 15 years. He left the American five months ago.

CONSTANCE PLANTE, 3, and Cyrille Plante, Jr., children of Cyrill Plante, compositor on the Worcester (Mass.) Post, were killed when an automobile driven by their father crashed into the rear of a truck parked beside the road in Leicester, Mass., Aug. 26. Mr. Plante was blinded by approaching headlights and did not see the truck.

WILL N. ROGERS, 54, for 27 years publisher of the Hawkeye (Ia.) Beacon, died Sept. 5 in his home. Funeral services were held Wednesday. He had been associated with the printing business since he was 14 years old.

JOSEPH A. HARRIS, 78, one of the oldest newspaper men in the State, died in Hillsboro, N. C., Monday. Mr. Harris was a native of Raleigh, and served his apprenticeship as a printer under Maj. Seaton Gales, publisher of the Raleigh (N. C.) Sentinel. He was publisher of the Orange County Observer for more than 30 years.

ISAAC N. JONES, 77, veteran newspaperman, died at his home near Rochester, Pa., Sept. 12. Mr. Jones was employed by the Commercial Gazette, the Chronicle Telegram and the Dispatch as a proofreader and copycutter. In 1886 he went to Philadelphia, where he was employed by the Public Ledger. Mr. Jones was a past president of the Philadelphia Typographical Union.

GEORGE H. WRIGHT, 78, proofreader on the San Francisco Examiner, and for a long time on the Chicago Tribune, died in his sleep from a heart attack, Sept. 10.

M. F. COCHRANE, 54, stricken with apoplexy, died at his home in San Rafael, Cal., Sept. 10. For 25 years he had been editor and owner of the San Rafael Independent, was postmaster under President Wilson and two years ago was appointed on the State Harbor Commission by Governor Richardson.

FRANK M. LESTER

Frank M. Lester, 71, for 17 years a member of the staff of the Chicago Tribune under John Dickinson Sherman, at that time city editor, died here last week. Mr. Lester worked on the Tribune from 1889 to 1906 as a reporter and assistant financial editor. Later he became associated with the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, of which he was advertising manager.

The Better Business Commissions and Bureaus of the United States are answering 10,000 financial inquiries each month.

DAILY HONORS DOCTOR

Chicago Physician Awarded $1,0 Community Service Prize

The sum of $1,000 was awarded week by the Chicago Daily News to Herman N. Bundesen, health comm sioner of Chicago, in accordance an announcement made by it on Sep 1925, that, in memory of its late p lisher, Victor F. Lawson, it would sent that sum to the resident of Gre Chicago who, during the year, shoul judged by the Daily News to have " formed the most beautiful action or c the most beneficial thing for human

The work of Dr. Bundesen in serving the health of young chil and by writing instructive articles young mothers, were considered as titling him to the award.

One big union for both editorial mechanical staffs is now being advoc in Australia.

$10,000 Per Year

The largest weekly newspaper i North Carolina, in the point o circulation, is offered for sale b the owner. Circulation approxi mately 4,000 at $2. Only printin plant in county of 40,000 popula tion. Doing a gross busines greater than the price asked which is $30,000. Live man wil net from $10,000 up per year wit no limit on increase. Good equip ment including Model 14 Linotyp and Goss Comet press. Keep of unless you have the money an mean business.

Write

W. W. CASTEEL

CLINTON, N. C.

A paper with the people

The public decides the progress of a newspaper.

The continuous rising circulation of the New York Evening Graphic vividly demonstrates popular acceptance of this newspaper as a medium of unusual reader interest.

Advertisers daily realize the benefit of this power through achieved results from the advertising columns of the New York Evening Graphic.

With a constantly increasing circulation, plus a constant growth in advertising lineage, the New York Evening Graphic offers the advertiser an extremely profitable opportunity.

Published by BERNARR MACFADDEN

New York

EVENING GRAPHIC

H. A. AHERN, Advertising Mgr.
25 City Hall Place
New York City

The Place to Push Sales—

Kansas—made unusually prosperous this year by excellent crop yields—offers an attractive market to persistent advertisers.

The Topeka Daily Capital—thoroughly covers Topeka and its big trading radius. The only newspaper with a circulation throughout the state.

Included in primary distribution campaigns by leading national advertisers.

40,000 Guaranteed Circulation

Published by Arthur Capper
Topeka, Kansas

HALF A STATE COMPLETELY COVERED

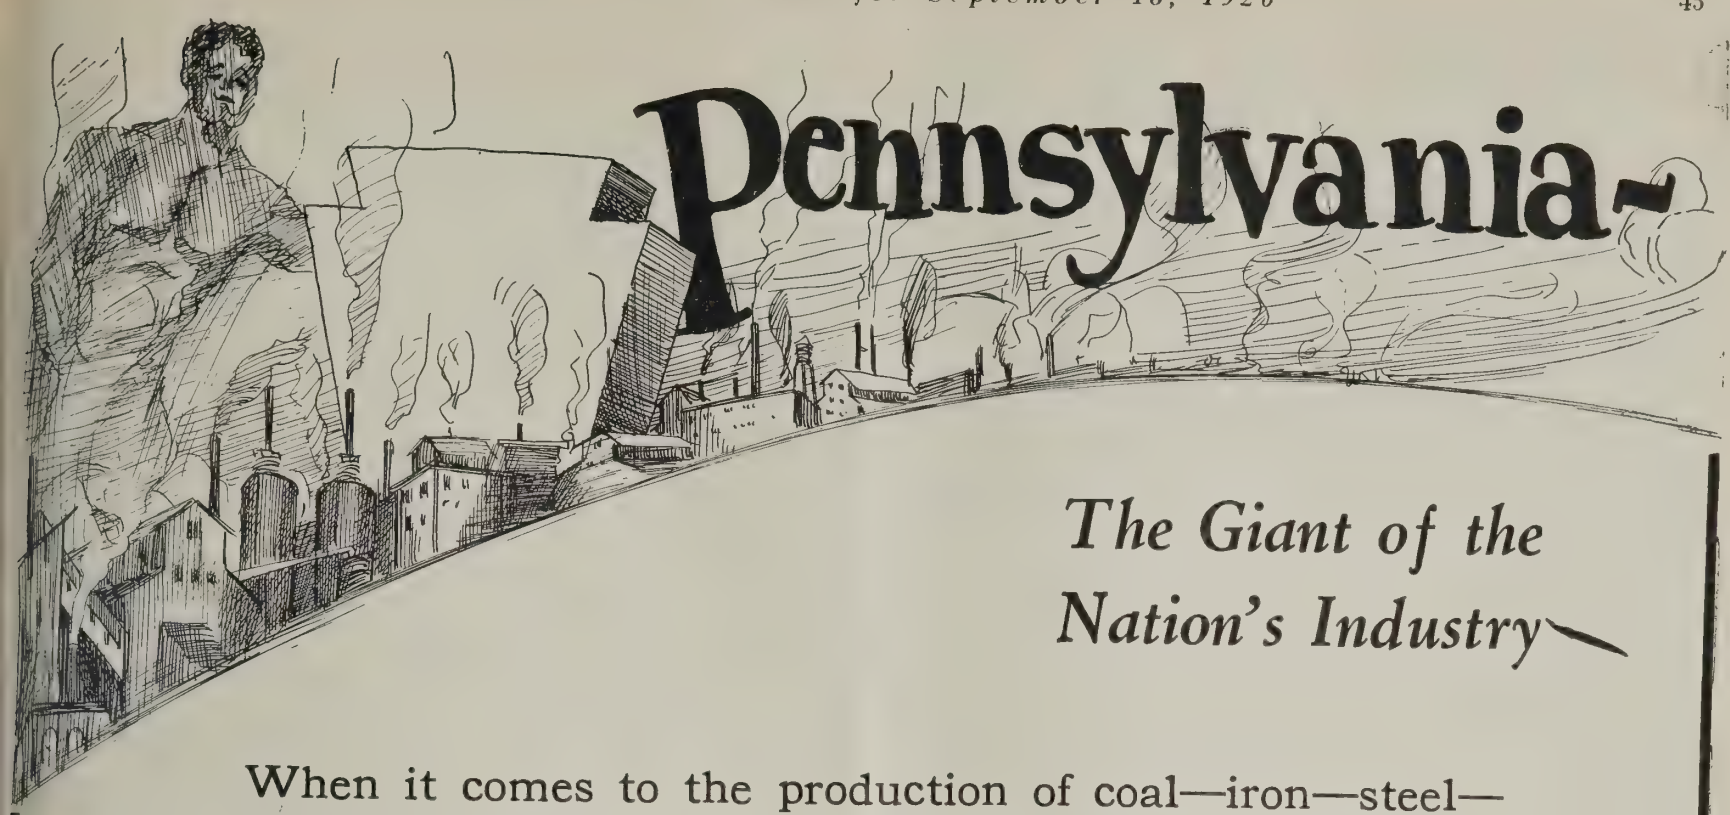
at one Combination Rate

EVENING COURIER MORNING POST

Two Great Newspapers—Published at Camden, N. J.

National Representatives

STORY, BROOKS & FINLEY



have you been following the remarkable growth of the Detroit Times

THE WELFARE COMMITTEE of the INTERNATIONAL CIRCULATION MANAGERS ASSOCIATION

Can supply you with competent circulation men of capacity and ability capable to take entire charge of your department or to fill important posts in the department.

Address the Secretary-Treasurer please, Mr. Clarence Eyster, care Star Building, Peoria, Ill.

Pennsylvania—

The Giant of the Nation's Industry

When it comes to the production of coal—iron—steel—oil—gas, and kindred products, Pennsylvania looms up as a giant in the quantity production of these products. More than 1,000,000 workers are employed in the factories of this rich territory whose annual pay roll runs over $1,000,000,000 with an annual production output of over $7,000,000,000. What other state can compare to Pennsylvania in industry?

You can reach the great mass of people who comprise this gigantic workshop through the daily papers listed below. Each paper will gladly tell you of its immediate market and how to cover it quickly and economically.

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Allentown Call .....(M)	31,400	.10	.10
Allentown Call .....(S)	22,349	.10	.10
††Beaver Falls Tribune .....(E)	6,553	.03	.03
††Bethlehem Globe Times.....(E)	13,272	.06	.06
††Bloomsburg Press .....(M)	7,673	.04	.04
Chester Times .....(E)	18,295	.06	.06
††Coatesville Record .....(E)	6,783	.035	.03
Connellsville Courier .....(E)	5,928	.02	.02
Easton Express .....(E) / Easton Free Press .....(E)	33,000	.10	.10
Erie Times .....(E)	28,596	.08	.08
††Greensburg Tribune Review...(EM)	14,883	.05	.05
††Hazleton Plain Speaker.....(E) / ††Hazleton Standard-Sentinel ..(M)	19,852	.07	.06
Mount Carmel Item.....(E)	4,307	.0285	.0285
Oil City Derrick .....(M)	8,588	.04	.04
Pottsville Republican and Morning Paper .....(EM)	15,346	.08	.07
Scranton Times .....(E)	43,230	.13	.12
Sharon Herald .....(E)	7,236	.0357	.0357
Sunbury Daily Item .....(E)	5,224	.03	.03
Washington Observer and Reporter .....(M&E)	17,589	.06	.06
††West Chester Local News .....(E)	11,860	.04	.04
Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader.....(E)	26,204	.06	.06
††Williamsport Sun and Gazette & Bulletin.....(ME)	28,000	.09	.09
††York Dispatch .....(E)	19,632	.05	.05

A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, March 31, 1926.

††Government Statement, March 31, 1926.

Consolidated Aug. 28, 1926.

OCHS' CAREER TOLD BY J. M. LEE

(Continued from page 6)

New York City—John H. Race. But the interview with Mr. Ochs printed in another place in this issue crowds the space for the material obtained elsewhere. But I cannot pass by this quotation from a letter received from Nora Crimmins, Librarian of the Chattanooga Public Library, about Mr. Ochs, "His was the first donation to the Chattanooga Public Library and it inspires the citizens and individuals to emulate his example."

Frankly I could give many other interesting facts about Mr. Ochs if I could use the information from several sources. But often such material has been tagged, "Not to be used without the approval of Mr. Ochs." In this little chat, however, I have felt that I should decide "what is fit to print."

In this respect I have been seriously embarrassed with accounts of donations by Mr. Ochs to educational and charitable institutions. He has given wisely and well. Possibly passing mention should be made of what might be called his "pet philanthropy"—the "One Hundred Neediest Cases" in New York City. In this philanthropy some have seen a campaign to advertise the Times. But those who are familiar with the origin of the movement, the difficulties encountered in obtaining the approval of the various charitable organizations, the rigidity of the rules under which funds are received, know that such is not the case. The purpose is a sincere desire to help the needy and unfortunate. The idea of the movement came solely from Mr. Ochs—possibly that accounts for his interest.

Mr. Ochs acts seldom as spokesman of the Times. That task he usually passes along to Rollo Ogden or to John H. Finley of the editorial department, or to Louis Wiley of the business department. But when the mood strikes Mr. Ochs, he can deliver an interesting address. One before the National Editorial Association in New York City and another before the Southern Publishers' Association at Asheville, N. C., will do by way of illustration. At times he does not hesitate to tell a good story at the expense of himself or his paper. In his younger days he once asked at the postoffice whether there was a letter for A. Ochs. The reply was, "No, nor for a cow, either." Two Sisters of Charity in calling on Mr. Ochs paid a very fine tribute to his paper. When asked why they liked the New York Times so much, they replied: "The Times has so few illustrations that it always looks well on our pantry shelves." Mr. Ochs was once speaking in Pine Hill, Kentucky. He had been extravagantly introduced as the publisher and owner of the great New York Times. A member of his audience turning to a mountaineer asked, "What is the New York Times?" The native shot back: "Stranger, I think it is about an hour ahead of our time."

But Mr. Ochs can tell other good stories when they illustrate a point he wants to make. Here is one from his random remarks before the Advertising Club of New York about the son of a very wealthy man who having ample funds pursued only his pleasures:

When his father died he left him a very large estate, and for the first time in his life this young man had some responsibility. There was the question of inheritance taxes, the question of benefactions and adjustments of business complications. It was the first time in his life that he was really up against a serious situation and a real job.

On one occasion, when a very important and complex question came up for final adjustment, he had an engagement to go to some great football match to which he had invited several young ladies. He was very anxious to keep the engagement, but his lawyer said to him, "You can't go; you have to stay here, for we must settle this question today. It is an important question and there is a great deal involved in it. You must forego your pleasure."

The young man shocked his attorney by replying, "Do you know, I have had so much trouble about this estate that I am almost sorry my father died."

If I were asked for an incident that would illustrate Adolph S. Ochs at his best I think I should select the following. Mr. Ochs, especially in recent years, is a trifle impatient when his lieutenants come to him with problems they should solve. But let one of these lieutenants, or any other employe for that matter, come with a personal problem, no matter how big may be the task before him he will give the matter careful attention.

Sitting beside me when Goldman's orchestra was playing, Mr. Ochs called my attention to the fact that Mr. Goldman had a different expression as he looked at each member of the orchestra. I wanted to tell Mr. Ochs at the time that he had a different expression according to the people to whom he was talking. But I did not, and so I will tell it now. I am just a good enough reporter to catch this change in expression, but I am not enough of a literary craftsman to describe it. But Mr. Ochs certainly has a different expression when he talks to William C. Frew, president of the Corn Exchange Bank, about bonds, from that when he talks to Otto H. Kahn about music or with Helen Gould Shepard about topics of the day. His somewhat changeable personality shows itself in his offices in the plant of the New York Times. He has a palatial private office furnished in mahogany where he receives visitors. He has another private office with oak furniture where he receives practical printers who come to him in shirt sleeves. He is in the latter office the more—for he has found his employes come to him more readily in the second place.

I was in one of the corridors of the Waldorf-Astoria as Mr. Ochs passed by to attend a social function. "Who is that distinguished individual?" someone asked. The reply was, "I don't know. But he looks as though he might be the Prime Minister of England." That was Mr. Ochs on what might be called dress parade.

Age has been extremely kind to Mr. Ochs. Its only imprint seems to be to deepen the character lines. In a way, his face, in spite of the white hair, has taken on something of the expression found in the portrait of the little boy who carried papers in Knoxville, Tenn.

A side trip from Knoxville to Louisville has been mentioned. A flying trip or two from New York to Philadelphia may need to be noted. In the latter place Mr. Ochs purchased, on May 7, 1901, the Philadelphia Times, which in physical equipment and condition was a close second to the New York Times at the time of his purchase. About 15 months later, July 21, 1902, to be exact, he purchased the Philadelphia Public Ledger and consolidated the two papers. For the Philadelphia Times he paid $100,000 in cash and assumed responsibility for something like $200,000 of bonded indebtedness. For the Public Ledger, including valuable real estate holdings, he paid $150,000 cash and assumed responsibility for an issue of $1,500,000 in four per cent bonds. Both transactions were financed by Mr. Ochs on his own credit, aided by collaterals. In spite of various rumors, no one "backed him" in either transaction. On Jan. 1, 1913, he sold the Public Ledger to Cyrus H. K. Curtis. The prices as given by Edward W. Bok in writing the biography of his father-in-law, Mr. Curtis, was $2,000,000. From these figures it will be seen that Mr. Ochs did not surrender his Philadelphia paper at a financial loss to himself.

Honestly I don't know whether I would want to be publisher of the New York Times or not. By mere coincidence I happened to have a seat across from Mr. Ochs in the Pullman car from New York to Albany. He was on his way to his summer home at Lake George. Because of my position I simply could not help overhearing what was said to him. Of the several people who spoke to him during the trip all save one had some favor they wanted to ask Mr. Ochs to do in the Times. I did have to admire the ease and grace with which he side stepped these requests—but it was no easy task. As the Times has increased in influence in New York City, requests for both editorial and news support have jumped in proportion. The trouble is that many of these requests are often in the interests of worthwhile causes. While Mr. Ochs is doubtless in sympathy with many of these philanthropic and educational movements, he never forgets that the "news that is fit to print" is that for which the reader is paying his two cents.

In Punch of London there once appeared a picture of a man reading the London Times. The caption underneath asked the question, "Why is the man like the paper he is reading?" The answer was, "Because each is behind the times." Even Lord Northcliffe, when he bought the London Times, remarked that those formerly in control must have thought that news, like wine, improved with age. I now come to what I regard best explains the secret of the success of Ochs and his paper. He sees the paper not of today, but of tomorrow. If there is one paper in America more than another that looks ahead to see what the morrow will probably bring forth it is the New York Times. It has a very watchfu eye on improvements in news-gather ing whether by its own enterprise o by the Associated Press. Of the lat ter organization, Mr. Ochs is both member of the Board of Directors and member of the Executive Committee. In deed, he was one of the incorporators o the Associated Press when it was re moved from Illinois to New York in 190 I know whereof I speak when I say tha Mr. Ochs is taking care of the paper sup ply of the Times of tomorrow. H watches every improvement of mechanica appliances appropriate for a well equippe printing plant. The various sections o the New York Times on Sunday sho how he has seized upon every improve ment for the mechanical make-up of newspaper. In the language of the stree he has had the hump to be a jump or tw ahead of the immediate needs of hi paper. In other words, Adolph S. Och has been both behind and also ahead o his Times.

CIRCULATION BUILDING SUPREMACY

We opened 1926 with the greatest newspaper campaign ever conducted, and secured over $300,000 in prepaid subscriptions for The Cleveland Plain Dealer. We can attain similar success for you!

THOUSANDS OF NEW, PREPAID, BONA-FIDE HOME-DELIVERED SUBSCRIBERS SECURED IN TEN WEEKS' TIME

HOLLISTER'S Circulation Organization

Wire or Write us at 717-718 Commercial Exchange Bldg. LOS ANGELES

Finger Tips in the news every day

How do you read them ?

A 3-stick daily feature

CURRENT NEWS FEATURES, INC.
EVENING STAR BUILDING
WASHINGTON, D. C.

First in Circulation

Leadership in news and prestige has won for

LA PRENSA
OF BUENOS AIRES
leadership in Circulation

Since 1869 the public of Argentina has reposed in La Prensa a degree of confidence that is enjoyed by only a few of the world's great newspapers.

JOSHUA B. POWERS
Exclusive Advertising Representative,
250 Park Avenue, New York
"South America's Greatest Newspaper"

Largest morning and Sunday circulation in the Greatest Market west of Chicago
170,000 Daily
390,000 Sunday
LOS ANGELES Examiner

Our Customers Write Our Ads

A. L. MILLER of the Battle Creek, Mich., ENQUIRER-NEWS, Says—

"We believe that the common judgment of the American newspaper publishers in the field of small and medium sized cities is that the DUPLEX TUBULAR press is the STANDARD PRESS."

DUPLEX PRESSES

FOR ALL NEWSPAPERS

Duplex Printing Press Co.
BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

Detroit

Fourth Largest City

Complete coverage with one paper.

The Detroit News

Offers advertisers unusual opportunities

PRESIDENT WILLIAMS MAKES PLEA FOR CRUSADING PRESS

(Continued from page 7)

encouragement to those who seek it everywhere. A permanent ad interim committee upon the Freedom of the Press might well represent the Congress. We need to renew our faith and strengthen the forces against those who under specious plea, or none at all, seek to suppress or destroy the liberty of the press.

It is not enough to be free to write the truth. Freedom to know the truth is essential to journalism. Lack of adequate and correct information makes impossible truthful interpretation and comment. It is useless to have liberty to publish and discuss facts unless there is unfettered opportunity to obtain these facts. The right solution of the complex and world-wide problem of news-assembling and news-distribution is of the deepest concern to a serious journalism.

It is difficult enough to obtain truthful news in and about domestic affairs in one's own nation from sometimes unwilling and reluctant sources and with limited financial means to gather such news. It is more difficult, of course, to obtain from distant lands the news that will be the truth. Open, unrestricted channels of news communications are of vital consequence. With the new developments in radio and wireless, the use of airplanes and other inventions of the present day, we are entering upon an epoch when the problems of news facilities are vastly different from those of a generation ago. The proper utilization of all methods available for news transmission merits the most careful study. The reduction of transmission rates is eminently desirable. Who may say that a wiser, more courageous and more far-visioned generation will not bring about a universal wire and wireless rate that will do for news transmission by electric currents what the Universal Postal Union does within its sphere? Certainly the present crowded, conflicting and costly news-transmission agencies need to be revised in the spirit of the times and with the view to serving the interests of free dissemination of the truth.

I recommend that the Congress take appropriate action to have called by the governments interested or by the League of Nations, or some other international association, or by this Congress, a world conference to consider this important subject.

Freedom to write the truth and freedom to obtain the truth necessitate government action. Laws, charters, treaties, have, in part at least, control. These may be amended, altered, abolished by the pressure of public opinion. It is the business of journalism to aid in the creation of public opinion which will effectuate the desired changes. Thus would the press serve not only to increase its service to the people—who are its clientele. The right to speak and know the truth is important to the press. It is vital to the life and progress of the individual, the nation and mankind.

With those who are to discover, disseminate and interpret the truth, the public as well as the press is concerned. The responsibility for journalism however rests upon the profession of journalism itself. Adequate preparation for the calling of journalism, broad, liberal, professional education is required to raise the profession to the plane of its highest potentialities. This education may well include technical studies, the technique of journalism. It should include a knowledge of history, geography, government, philosophy, the life story of mankind, past and contemporary. It must include the development in the individual journalist of a sympathetic understanding based upon this knowledge. Above all men, the journalist should learn through his studies and experience the lessons of patience and of tolerance. But these are not enough. Tolerance merely permits the existence of other men and other opinions. And patience bears with them. The journalist must be educated beyond patience and tolerance to have sympathetic understanding of other men and of other opinions.

Is it an impossible task? Not so. There have been—and are today—such journalists in every land. There will be many more if journalists themselves emphasize the dignity of their vocation and the power and the glory attaching to it.

"The pen is mightier than the sword," is still true. It is only true however when the whole saying of the poet is recalled:

> "In the hands of men entirely great
> The pen is mightier than the sword."

Journalism is confronted today with a world vastly different from the world which the great German, Gutenberg, "father of printing," knew. Within the space of the last third of a century discoveries and inventions have completely changed the facilities available for the obtaining of news and the publishing of newspapers. Emphasis has shifted from the editor's comment to the reporter's record. Financial interests find value in the ownership of great publishing enterprises. Political agencies, special and class interests, governmental and party organizations wish control of the press for the advancement of their ends. The individual journalist finds it no longer easy to broadcast his views. The independent journal has constant temptation to become a dependent journal. These conditions demand that those who believe as we do, that journalism is the most powerful profession for public service, as well as the most fascinating occupation for those engaged in it, should, with every proper means, seek to keep journalism to its high estate.

The world will always have and need journals of information and journals of opinion, journals whose primary or only object is financial or propagandist, journals of entertainment and of instruction, journals which combine two or more of these purposes. It is for the journalist who has faith in his profession to keep honest and accurate and sympathetic the press upon which and through which he labors. "Every man is debtor to his profession." Journalism is, in its last analysis, the journalist in print. The press is properly a private enterprise, but it is a private enterprise colored always by public interest.

If we have bad journalism, may it not be because we have bad journalists? If the world's press—or any part thereof—is cowardly, dishonest, intolerant, demagogic, chauvinistic, is it not because the individuals who produce the press may thus be characterized?

The tendency in the world's press, despite notable and conspicuous example to the contrary, is to a better journalism, more accurate, more honest, more sympathetic, better informed, with higher standards more courageously maintained. It is for the Press Congress of the World and other journalistic organizations and for individual journalists everywhere to denounce the evil and low and cowardly in their own profession, to encourage and promote the good, to be crusaders on occasion as well as recorders, ever holding to the journalistic faith.

Even in this noble city I make bold to say that a league of journalists, keeping open and free the channels of world communications and speaking just and fair and with sympathetic understanding, may do more good than any other human agency, league or association of nations.

Let us be worthy of the high mission of the new journalism.

Have I raised too high the standard of the new journalism? Is it impossible

TYPOS GRANTED RAISE IN NEW CHICAGO SCALE

(By Telegraph to Editor & Publisher)

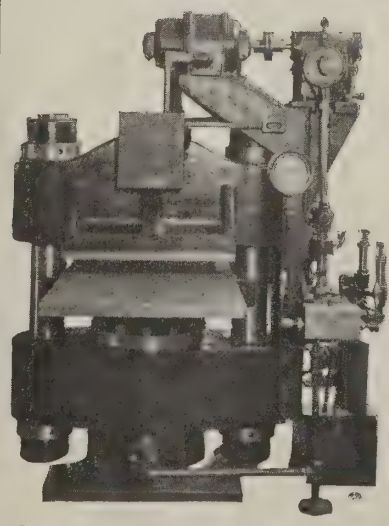
CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—A Wage scale for the next three years was agreed upon today between the Chicago Local American Newspaper Association, and the Chicago Typographical Union, Number 16, to become effective at once.

An increase of $3.00 a week was granted for the first year, $1.00 a week for each succeeding year. No change is made in the length of working hours, the former 45 hour week remaining.



Regional Advertising
at Regional Rates
in
The Christian Science Monitor
An International Daily Newspaper
Publishing SELECTED ADVERTISING
ATLANTIC, CENTRAL and PACIFIC Editions
Rates and Circulation Data Supplied on Request
ADVERTISING OFFICES
Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, New York, London, Paris, Florence, Kansas City, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, Portland
"Buy What You Can Use"

The World

These two newspapers offer the most powerful all-day service in New York available as a unit under a single contact. The 600,000 Daily World — Evening World readers constitute a highly concentrated force to be reckoned with in any campaign designed to effect distribution in Greater New York.

The Evening World
Pulitzer Building, New York
Tribune Tower, Chicago

CLINE SYSTEM
CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO. CHICAGO
Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control is used by
New York Times
New York, N. Y.
Ask them about it.
CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO.
Chicago: 111 West Washington Street
New York: 47 West 34th Street
San Francisco: First National Bank Building

BIROTADRUCK

HYDRAULIC MATRICE PRESS
Direct Pressure Under Complete Control. Fast, Positive, Non-Vibrating Hydraulic Operation. The first successful hydraulic matrice moulding press to be introduced into this country.
Birotadruck Presses are now in operation on the plants of The New York Times (3 presses), New York Herald-Tribune (2 presses), Boston Globe, Cleveland Press and Dallas News.
AMERICAN BIROTADRUCK CO., Inc.
120 West 42d St., New York City

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's
Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and New Rochelle and The Vicinity Towns
Are Covered Completely by
THE DAILY ARGUS
of
Mount Vernon
THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle
Both Members of A. B. C.
Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

Largest Evening Circulation in Largest Market
For 26 consecutive years the Evening Journal has had the largest evening circulation in America—concentrated in New York and suburbs. More than DOUBLE the circulation of any other New York evening paper.
NEW YORK JOURNAL
America's Largest Evening Circulation and at 3c a copy

first! in OHIO
14,882,648 Lines
Dispatch advertising record for the first eight months of 1926, exceeding other Columbus newspapers combined by 1,944,151 lines. The Dispatch led the second largest Ohio newspaper (first 6 mos.) by 2,047,726 lines.
NET PAID CIRCULATION
CITY 55,812
SUBURBAN 26,973
COUNTRY 23,666
Total Daily Circulation..106,451
Columbus Dispatch
OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

of realization? Nay, nothing is impossible to those who with clear vision and stout heart engage unselfishly and with consecration upon the profession of journalism—the world's most fascinating, most significant, most hopeful adventure.

James W. Brown, Secretary of the Congress, reported that an earnest effort had been made during the past five years to enlist the interest of journalists throughout the world in the Press Congress program. The regular mailing list includes 59 countries, including the United States and possessions, and contains names of editors, proprietors, business executives of newspapers and press associations and kindred interests, totaling more than 25,000 names. Some 300,000 pieces of mail material were distributed. The enrollment of delegates numbers 164, with 43 guests—representing 25 governments. Prior to the meeting in Honolulu the membership was on a purely complimentary and honorary basis.

At Honolulu the old plan was discarded for a financial plan as follows:

Individual members, representing workers in every department of journalism, paying annual dues of $5.

Corporate members, in which are included newspapers, magazines, class, trade and technical journals and allied interests, paying annual dues of $50.

Sustaining members, in which are included important news associations, leading daily newspapers throughout the world, and institutions in the supply and material field, paying $100 per year, or "sums acceptable to the Executive Committee."

Mr. Brown reviewed the work of the Congress in detail, citing conditions affecting journalists in Italy, Ecuador, Mexico, Guatemala. He also reviewed the work of the Pan-American Congress of Journalists at Washington and the recent conference of press associations at Geneva, under the auspices of the League of Nations.

RADIO AND THE PRESS

H. V. KALTENBORN, associate editor of Brooklyn Eagle, on Thursday addressed the members of the Press Congress of the World, on the subject "Radio and the Press," characterizing radio as the "fifth estate" and declaring that in the United States alone air broadcasting has a "listener circulation" of 25,000,000.

"Radio and the press touch one another at many points," said he. "Both publish news, information and entertainment. Both sell publicity. Both are organs of public opinion. They rival with one another at the same time that they cooperate. Radio provides newspapers with readers who seek radio news and radio programs. Radio deprives newspapers of readers who now give to the radio those hours of leisure that formerly went to newspaper reading.

"An enormous linage of advertising has come to newspapers from the makers and retailers of radio products. Some advertising has been lost to newspapers because general advertisers are spending on broadcasting money that formerly paid for newspaper copy.

"Paid publicity is changing the current and character of broadcasting as it has changed the newspaper. For both publishers and broadcasters advertising is the chief source of revenue. Three-fourths of all broadcasting stations in the United States are now selling advertising. On some of the most important stations the best hours of the day and evening are entirely occupied by the advertisers who broadcast free entertainment to develop good-will.

"Selling time on the air has become general since 1924. Before then the Company which controlled the patents on certain broadcasting devices sought to retain for itself the monopoly of paid broadcasting. Growing criticism of monopoly practice brought about a change. Today some 400 United States stations have established definite rates for broadcasting and most of them label paid material as advertising by announcing that the 'X Company has engaged the facilities of this station.'

"This practice has made many stations self-supporting without impairing their publicity value to the companies which own and operate them. It explains why radio stations, like newspapers, are often sold for far more than the intrinsic value of the physical property which they control.

"A department store in Newark, New Jersey, which was among the first to operate a broadcasting station estimates the return in publicity value as far more than $1,000,000, which is several times what it has cost to operate that particular station since it was first established. There is only one other department store station in the New York area but in Philadelphia four large stores went into broadcasting which naturally reduced the "good-will" return for each one.

"Newspapers are always among the first by whom the new is tried and it is natural to find them going into broadcasting very soon after this became general. In some cities the creation of rival broadcasting stations by rival newspapers added enormously to newspaper costs without adding much if anything to income. In Minneapolis, Minnesota, three newspapers operated three rival stations at ruinous expense and without any particular advantage to the listening public. Finally all three newspaper agreed to abandon the broadcasting field. In other cities rival newspapers have agreed to a consolidation of their broadcasting stations.

"Different newspapers have come to different conclusions with regard to the advantages of broadcasting. The Atlanta Constitution and the Chicago Tribune tried broadcasting, and then gave it up because of the expense. The Chicago News and the Detroit News came into the broadcasting field early, and have remained in it. Some newspapers report direct advertising, while others claim no other return than that expressed in the general term of good-will.

"No New York City newspaper has established a broadcasting station of its own, although practically every one has seriously considered doing so. The restraining factor there is the large number of excellent stations already established and the huge expense of operating a station that could compete with them for the favor of a jaded public which no longer considers broadcasting as a novelty.

"But most of the metropolitan papers make some contribution to radio programs. One publisher features a physical director who puts on morning exercises to the accompaniment of music. Another has a writer on sports discuss the events and personalities of the sporting world for a brief period each evening. The Brooklyn Daily Eagle has provided the radio audience with a weekly editorial summary of outstanding news events. This has been given for three years by the same speaker, and has won a regular weekly audience estimated at one million persons.

"Newspapers are naturally and properly concerned about the future of radio in relation to their own business. Here is a new element of competition. Radio stations give free the news bulletins, market prices, game scores, entertainment features and weather reports for which it was once necessary to depend upon newspapers. Many publishers have gone into some form of broadcasting with the idea that it is better to use and study this new way of reaching the public than to ignore it and perhaps suffer disastrous consequences. The Associated Press made a vain fight against permitting any of its news to be broadcast. Rival services profited by this attitude, and the Associated Press was compelled to abandon it. During the past season the Associated Press tried to make up for the lost time by broadcasting a weekly talk describing its methods of news gathering.

"Someone has remarked that newspapers will continue to have good sales so long as they publish radio programs, intimating that most of their other functions will be absorbed by the broadcasters. This is an exaggeration. At the same time, it must be confessed, that newspapers have already felt radio competition in the reduced interest in sporting and election extras.

"No direct advertising is supposed to go 'on the air.' Mr. Hoover says: 'The quickest way to kill radio would be to use it for direct advertising,' and his opinion is shared by most leaders in the radio world. This limitation excludes radio from a large field of advertising publicity. Most advertisers want a direct merchandising appeal, and unless and until radio can guarantee to transmit that to a definite number of listeners, the advertising columns of the newspapers will continue to play their part in the transaction of the world's business.

"There is one interesting difference between newspaper and radio advertising. In one the products seek to appeal, whereas in the other an established 'appeal' seeks a product. The broadcasting stations are always on the lookout for new talent. When they have developed and popularized a 'feature' they send out their advertising solicitors to 'get an account' for it. They cast about until they find an advertiser who will purchase time to put this feature on the station program at regular intervals. He enhances the popularity of his product by regular announcements between numbers that the delightful Red Label comedians are presented by the Red Label Products Manufacturing Corporation.

"Sometimes the president of the corporation, not averse to a little personal publicity, wants to present the Red Label comedian himself, but this injection of outside personalities is resented by the radio audience and discouraged by diplomatic studio managers. Radio advertising is extremely sentitive to hostile psychology. It is in the position of the billboard that spoils a lovely bit of wayside scenery. By a flick of the dial the advertiser is remov from the listener's consciousness. The ke competition between radio stations obliges eve station manager to insist that advertiser p sent only such features as appeal to a go proportion of the regular listeners.

"It is the indirect influence of radio on mus education, advertising and public thinking g erally that is most important. Direct attem at propaganda or persuasion can easily checked and controlled. But radio is tim Far more timid than the press. It fears give offense to any class or group. It he tates to encourage change. The best bro casting stations are owned by large corporatio which hesitate to offend the public authorit or any section of the public. Newspapers w permit readers to contradict their editoria and will publish these contradictions on t editorial page. They will sell advertising spa without discrimination to all those who me certain standards of honesty and good taste.

"Not so the radio station. It sets up bitrary rules, bars contradiction, and often p sents one side of an argument without givi the opposition a chance to use its facilitie All stations require speakers to submit man script in advance and feel free to censor wh they do not like. Whereas, the press influenc public opinion by what it prints; radio exercis its influence by what it excludes. The pre is much more generous in its treatment of u popular causes than radio."

Buffalo, The Wonder City of America

Buffalo—a Profitable Market for Advertisers

Sales in Buffalo are splendid for advertised goods. Employment conditions excellent, retail and other business thriving. One newspaper will put your story over to 83% of the people—that paper is the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS

Read in 4 out of 5 Buffalo Homes

Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives

Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y.	Tribune Tower Chicago, Ill.
Atlantic Bldg. Philadelphia	Waterman Bldg. Boston

The Tampa Morning Tribune
Tampa, Florida

LEADS

- In Local Advertising
- In National Advertising
- In Classified Advertising
- In City Circulation
- In Suburban Circulation
- In Total Circulation
- Substantial Proof of Superiority
- 200,000 Daily Readers
- 300,000 Sunday Readers

Represented Nationally by

The S. C. Beckwith Special Agency

MICHIGAN

is growing faster than any State in the Union.

Its increase in manufacturing products surpasses anything in the world.

BOOTH NEWSPAPERS

cover Michigan outside of Detroit—Eight principal cities with the only or leading Newspaper in its respective community.

The Grand Rapids Press
The Flint Daily Journal
The Saginaw News Courier
The Kalamazoo Gazette
The Jackson Citizen Patriot
The Bay City Times Tribune
The Muskegon Chronicle
The Ann Arbor Times News

National Advertising Representatives

I. A. KLEIN 50 East 42nd St. New York City	J. E. LUTZ Tower Building Chicago, Ill.

BUILDINGS
PLANT LAYOUTS
PRODUCTION
OPERATION

An organization specializing solely in newspaper building design, manufacturing and production problems.

S. P. WESTON

Newspaper Buildings
Plant Layouts
Production, Operation

120 West 42nd Street New York

creating Impression!

nearly half the 2013 national advertisers using the Cleveland Plain Dealer in 1925 used it exclusively.

The Plain Dealer
ONE Medium—ONE Cost ALONE Will sell it

J. B. Woodward 110 E. 42d St. New York	Woodward & Kelly 360 N. Mich. Ave. Chicago

Parkersburg, W. Va.
is growing rapidly

A new $5,000,000 rayon plant and other new industries are now being constructed there.

The city and suburban territory is covered by

The News
Morning and Sunday

with a circulation of 7,500 daily and 9,000 Sunday at only 3 cents a line.

Member A. B. C.

Represented nationally by the
DEVINE-MacQUOID CO., Inc.
New York Pittsburgh Chicago

GRAVURE SECTIONS PRINTED

SPECIAL AND REGULAR EDITIONS, MAGAZINE INSERTS AND COMMERCIAL WORK

Standard Gravure Corporation
LOUISVILLE KY

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

Zoe Beckley Sails to Return with Queen Marie of Roumania—Wile on Cross-Country Trip as Political Reporter—Towbridge Now with O'Dell Newspaper Service

ZOE BECKLEY, of the staff of Famous Features Syndicate, Inc., sailed Saturday, Sept. 18, on the S.S. Paris for Europe where she will meet Her Majesty Marie, Queen of Roumania, and return with her to this country in October. Miss Beckley will cover Her Majesty's voyage by cable and radio for American newspapers.

ZOE BECKLEY

Miss Beckley has been Queen Marie's guest in Roumania on several occasions. It was Miss Beckley who induced Her Majesty to become a newspaperwoman and write the daily series "Queen's Counsel" which is distributed by Famous Features Syndicate. According to present plans Miss Beckley will go on to Roumania where she will cover the preparations for the royal voyage. She will send a daily cable from Europe and a daily radio from the ship on which Queen Marie sails.

Frederic William Wile, Washington correspondent, has left for a cross-country political writing trip. In addition to representing his own chain of metropolitan papers, Mr. Wile's dispatches will go to the Editors' Feature Service, for which he acts at the National Capital.

H. C. Towbridge has joined the sales force of the O'Dell Newspaper Service, New York. Towbridge is the son of John W. Towbridge, who was art manager of the New York World and the New York Herald and later of the first organization. He has been syndicate manager of the Root Newspaper Service and personal representative of Carl White, George Walsh and William Fynum of the motion pictures. He was also the originator of the American Union Newspaper Syndicate and of the Daily Feature Newspaper Service.

Sterling Features Syndicate, New York, will soon offer the "Life Story of James Jeffries," composed by himself.

Superior Feature Service, Paterson, N. J., is offering a one-column art feature entitled "Today's Features in Sport History."

Arthur S. Rudd, formerly of Associated Editors, Chicago, has joined the editorial staff of the McNaught Syndicate, of New York.

"Skippy," comic by Percy L. Crosby, will be prepared in full page for distribution beginning Oct. 17, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., New York.

Robert V. McNitt, president of the McNaught Syndicate, Inc., has returned from Europe. Mr. McNitt, with Mrs. McNitt and their two sons, spent three months in England, Scotland, France and Italy.

Miss Allene Sumner, special writer for NEA Service, Inc., has returned from a three months' tour of Europe. While abroad, Miss Sumner wrote her column called "A Woman's Day Abroad," replacing her daily column, "The Woman's Day," which has been resumed since her return.

Charles V. McAdam, vice-president of the McNaught Syndicate, Inc., returned to New York last week from a summer's rustication at Ashtabula, O.

Editors' Feature Service, Inc., is planning to move some of its production units from New York to Cleveland, where it already has offices. New York offices will continue to be located at 1819 Broadway. William H. Johnson, president, will make Cleveland his headquarters.

"Your Child in School" is the title of a new feature being offered by the Standard Editorial Service, Washington, D. C. It is written by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of Washington schools.

Claire Pomeroy has written a new serial called "The Feast of Folly," for the National Newspaper Service, Chicago.

Burton Rascoe is now writing weekly book reviews for Editors' Feature Service, Inc., New York and Cleveland. Miss Lenore M. Lingan has been made librarian of this syndicate in its Cleveland office. She was formerly with the Cleveland Press.

R. V. Hardon, feature writer for the National Newspaper Service, Chicago, is now in Albuquerque, N. M., for his health.

C. T. Brainard, president of the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, returned to New York Friday from his Maine camp. Miss Mabel Dennison, whose serial "Myra" has just been released by this syndicate, is returning next week from her vacation in the middle west. George Janosik, treasurer and business manager, is shortly returning to New York from a long vacation in the Northwest.

PAPERS BACKING AIR MAIL

Newspapers are furnishing the largest volume of mail for the air mail in Kansas City, according to C. E. Fleming, Missouri and Kansas division manager for the National Air Transport, Inc. Second on the list are insurance companies and banks and other financial houses are third.

FLORIDA RICH FIELD FOR AD SALESMEN

Horace Stilwell, Ft. Lauderdale News, Says State Has Potential Appropriation of $50,000,000—Urges Press to Seek Its Share

Florida has a potential advertising appropriation of $50,000,000, according to Horace Stilwell, editor and publisher of the Fort Lauderdale Daily News, who addressed a luncheon meeting of New York newspaper advertising representatives at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, Sept. 16. He urged newspaper advertising salesmen to visit the state and tell communities contemplating campaigns the value of newspaper space. Businessmen of Florida, he said, are convinced that newspapers are propagandists against their state.

The "potential appropriation" is arrived at under the state law which provides that five mills out of every $100 of assessed valuation should be set aside for advertising purposes, Mr. Stilwell said.

The Fort Lauderdale publisher is himself chairman of the joint advertising committee of his city and Hollywood, Fla., which has raised $100,000 to be spent exclusively in northern newspapers.

"Join our program of helping Florida in its advertising plans," he urged the representatives. "We don't want free publicity or propaganda, we want our paid message to appear on the newspaper page."

William H. Rankin, president of the advertising agency that bears his name, presided at the luncheon. Other speakers were Gil Hodges, Munsey Publications; St. John Richards, president of the Six Point League, Thomas Moore, associate director of the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association; and Benjamin Butterworth, advertising manager of the New York Times. More than 50 persons were present.

COVERS "BEAT" BY PLANE

Lt. McKenzie J. Sullivan, of the military intelligence section of the U. S. Army, and editor of the Army and Navy Courier, Wichita, will cover his "beat" via airplane. Lieut. Sullivan has purchased a plane and will use it in covering the various army and naval posts through the south to obtain news for the Courier.

POLITICAL RIVALS MERGE

The Bloomfield (Mo.) Vindicator and the Stoddard Tribune, has been consolidated and will be printed from the same plant. The Vindicator, Democratic, will be issued on Friday and the Tribune, Republican, on Tuesday.

MERCHANT & EVANS CO.
PHILADELPHIA
Producers of . .
SPARTAN TYPE METAL
Since 1866
LINO • MONO • STERO
INTERTYPE COMBINATION
Stocks in Principal Cities

The Great Empire of The Southwest
is literally spending millions of dollars.
The thoughts, actions and habits of Southwesterners are influenced by their Weekly Newspapers
Our organization represents 325 weekly newspapers in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico, and we can furnish complete market information on this territory.
A letter to our Dallas office will bring you some very interesting figures.
The H. L. Grable Co.
"National Advertising Representatives of Weekly Newspapers"
TEXAS—OKLAHOMA—NEW MEXICO
NEW YORK, 25 East 26th St., Phone Ashland 9127
PHILADELPHIA, Widener Bldg., Phone Rittenhouse 9698
CHICAGO, 123 West Madison, Phone Central 3021
DALLAS, TEXAS, 606 Mercantile Bank Building

E. F. S.
Editors' Feature Service
Over 70 independent newspapers throughout the country subscribe to this fine daily service as a protection against rising feature costs.
Six Pages Daily
Illustrations in Mat Form
Write or wire for samples, price and territory.
Editors' Feature Service, Inc.
1819 Broadway, New York
Allied with Johnson Features, Inc.

AUTOMOBILE PRIZE CAMPAIGNS
Get the Circulation
Get the Money For It
Get It Quickly
Get It Right
Conducted on THE KENDALL PLAN
Contracts for
FALL and WINTER
CIRCULATION DRIVES
are being made
— NOW —
WIRE OR WRITE FOR DETAILS, REFERENCES OR SPECIMEN CONTRACT.
W. S. Kendall Company
104 NORTH BAILEY AVE.
LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY

AGAIN
A Great Roosevelt Series
Weekly Release
Most Americans remember the late Colonel Roosevelt's vivid account of his adventures in Africa and South America. They have followed with lively interest the expedition which his sons, Theodore and Kermit, made to the remote Himalayas last summer. The latter have written an enthralling story of what befell them, and the Cosmos Syndicate is happy to offer the first newspaper rights. These articles will be fully illustrated.
COSMOS NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE INC
Covering the World
NINE EAST THIRTY-SEVENTH STREET NEW YORK CITY
Herbert S. Houston, President and Editor-in-Chief
Myles F. Lasker, Vice-President and General Manager

2 Football Training Talks
A daily series by Bud Hoban, running seven weeks, beginning September 6th.
Baltimore Evening Sun
heads our order list.
The International Syndicate
Baltimore, Md.

PRESIDENT LISTS FIVE OBJECTS OF I.A.A.

Woodbridge Urges Closer Co-Ordination of Departments and Development of Advertising Clubs—Pleased with Support

C. King Woodbridge, president of the International Advertising Association, this week listed five objects he hoped to see the association accomplish during the coming year. They are:

1. A closer co-ordination of the work of the various departments in the Advertising Commission and the use of the educational programs of the departments in the educational work of the local clubs.
2. The use of the machinery of the organization in broadcasting the story of advertising to the public at large so that the public will have a better understanding of its uses and of the part it is playing in the general plan of distribution.
3. Co-ordinating the teaching of advertising in schools, colleges and universities throughout the country, and fostering the introduction of such courses in other educational institutions both here and abroad.
4. Assisting in the development of stronger Advertising Clubs, and creating new clubs.
5. Building a program for our convention at Denver that will go a step further in making advertising better understood both within the membership and without.

Mr. Woodbridge reported he was gratified by the response for sustaining memberships that is coming daily as a result of the campaign for $50,000.

"Within the past month nearly $7,000 in new subscriptions has been received from individuals, associations and concerns in all parts of the country who believe in the value of the work the Association is doing and are anxious to see it further developed without the handicap of a shortage of finances," he said.

"We need a budget of $100,000 to carry on the work that has been planned for this year and in proportion to the immense amount of work the Association would like to do this is a very modest budget. We are reasonably sure of $50,000 in the form of dues from the local Advertising Clubs and the various departments in the Advertising Commission and the registrations at our annual convention. We need, therefore, to raise $50,000 this year in the form of sustaining memberships."

TRI-STATE MEET SEPT. 23-25

300 Editors and Publishers to Attend Sioux City Convention

Some 300 editors and publishers from three states Iowa, South Dakota and Nebraska will meet in Sioux City, Sept. 23, 24 and 25, for the annual Tri-State Editorial convention.

The three-day program for the convention includes a full schedule of interesting addresses and entertainment. Among the principal speakers will be Wright A. Patterson, editor-in-chief of the Western Newspaper Union; Herman Roe, of Northfield, Minn., president of the National Editorial Association and officials of the press associations of three states, W. A. Brown of Friend, Neb., president of the Nebraska Press Association; E. B. Oddy, of Woonsocket, S. D., president of the South Dakota Press Association, and E. F. Tucker of Ames, Ia., managing director of the Iowa Press Association.

Election of new officers of the association will be Saturday morning, Sept. 25. Present officers are: Clarence Johnson of Danbury, Ia., president; Deloss Hall of Tyndall, S. D., vice-president; Katherine James Hunt, Sioux City, treasurer, and J. P. O'Furey, Hartington, Neb., secretary.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER classified ads sell the odds and ends.

LAUREL (MISS.) DAILY LEADER COMPLETES NEW PUBLISHING PLANT

THE Laurel (Miss.) Daily Leader is now domiciled in its own commodious new home with every modern publishing facility. The Daily Leader was an outgrowth of two former daily papers. Col. Mott Ayres, of Fulton, Ky., bought in the two plants and consolidated the papers in July, 1914. On his death Edgar G. Harris became owner and publisher and he disposed of the property one year ago to a stock company headed by James S. Skewes, editor and publisher of the Meridian (Miss.) Star.

The new building pictured herewith was erected especially for the newspaper and provides every modern convenience for the publishers and employes. Thomas M. Gibbons, former local banker, is g[e]neral manager of the Daily Lea[der] Ernest E. Hoffman, who started w[ith] Col. Ayres as city news reporter, is n[ow] managing editor. R. C. Jones has cha[rge] of the advertising.

FOREIGN STAFF CHANGES

Several Shifts Made by New Y[ork] Herald Tribune

Several changes in the New Y[ork] Herald Tribune's foreign service w[ere] announced this week. Roy Benn[ett], managing editor of the Manila Bulle[tin], has been appointed permanent cor[re]spondent in Manila. Thomas Steep, w[ho] went to Manila with the Carmi Thon[p]son expedition, left Manila on Sept. [4] for Shanghai. He will remain there [as] long as the present disturbance c[on]tinues and then go to Peking as perm[a]nent correspondent in the Far East.

John Elliott, who has been attach[ed] to the London bureau, has been tra[ns]ferred to Berlin, where he is temporar[ily] in charge. Harold E. Scarborough, h[ead] of the London bureau, will go to Bu[ch]arest a week before Queen Mar[y's] departure and accompany her to [her] country.

Frederick Hollowell has gone to Ro[me] where he will arrive about Oct. 1, [to] take up his work as permanent cor[re]spondent for the Herald Tribune in Ro[me].

Supplies — Equipment

Don't "Pig" Metal
It Wastes Money

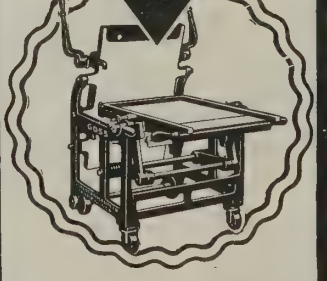
Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.

MONOMELT SLUG FEEDER

Eliminates the Metal Furnace

The Monomelt Co.
4509-19 Ravenswood Ave.
Chicago Illinois
World Bldg., New York City

Modern
Composing Room Furniture



as made by us will speed up production and reduce costs—a real saving in your Pay Roll. Are you interested? If so, consult your regular dealer in printers' supplies or write us direct.

Do it now!

HAMILTON MFG. CO.
TWO RIVERS, WIS.

Rebuilt
GOSS & HOE
PRESS
BARGAINS
ALL TYPES
SEND for LIST
THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO.
CHICAGO - NEW YORK - LONDON

GOSS STEREOTYPING MACHINERY
Carried in Stock

Fastest, most easily operated, most accurate and durable flat casting box you can buy. Perfectly balanced. New design lock-up bar allows for quick change when regulating thickness of casts. Positive quick lock-up at four points on box with one lever movement. Write for complete catalog of Goss Stereotyping Machinery.

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

Classified

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Classified Advertising Information

TRANSIENT RATES

SITUATIONS (Cash with Order)
1 Time — .40 per line
3 Times — .30 per line

ALL OTHER CLASSIFICATIONS
(Cash with Order)
1 Time — .60 per line
4 Times — .55 per line

White space charge at same rate per line [per] insertion as earned by frequency of inser[tion]. Special rates quoted for 13, 26 and 52 insert[ions]. The Editor & Publisher reserves the right [to] classify, edit or reject any advertisement.

COUNT SIX WORDS TO LINE

ADVERTISING

General Promotion

Advertising Promotion—If you want [more] business, communicate with the Internati[onal] Publications Service, Incorporated, Suite [1841] 1841 Broadway, New York City.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITI[ES]

Brokers

For Sale Desirable Morning Newspapers—[One] in Arizona; one in Florida; one in Kan[sas]; one in Oregon, and one in Pennsylvania; [all] occupy exclusive morning field; have mod[ern] adequate plants, and earning good divide[nds]. J. B. Shale, Times Bldg., New York.

The Only Paper (weekly) in Mississippi co[unty] seat town. Not a better field in the st[ate]. Nets nearly 20 per cent on investment [and] employed management. A $25,000 prop[erty] and worth more. Write at once for particu[lars]. Prop. 1459x. The H. F. Henrichs Age[ncy], Litchfield, Ill.

Newspapers Wanted

Experienced Young Man wants to buy, a[lso] part interest in small southern daily. Mus[t be] in progressive town. Box A-934, Edito[r &] Publisher.

Newspapers For Sale

Best small city Daily on Florida East C[oast] can be bought October 1st. $25,000 cash [to] handle. Grossed $90,000 fiscal year ending [Oc]tober 1. Long time lease $35,000. New Eq[uip]ment. Fine future for city and paper. Se[ri]ous stringers and curious save time, proof of [ab]ility to buy required. Box A-937, Edito[r &] Publisher.

Employment—Equipment—Services

CIRCULATION

Promotion

Circulation—When quick, additional circulation coverage becomes necessary, remember that our twenty years in this one line of endeavor is your proof against experimenting. Write or wire Pacific Coast Circulation Service, Bell Block, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Circulation Builders—Blair & Austin, 1504 Centre Ave., Reading, Penn. Originators of Salesmanship Club Campaigns.

Build Circulation—Try our "Opportunity Club" Plan. Sherman & Eckert, 353 Northampton Street, Easton, Penna.

Premiums

Publishers-Circulation Managers. We offer a special new dinner set that can be used at a price that will attract circulation, yet pay all promotion cost. The Albright China Co., Palmyra, N. J.

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

Advertising Salesman to handle weekly feature pages and develop new accounts, salary basis, in leading newspaper in Central New York State, city of 100,000 population; also young energetic classified solicitor wanted. State age, experience, salary expected and full details first letter. Send photo if possible. Box A-931, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Solicitor and Copy Writer wanted by daily in city of 18,000 in central New York. Want capable, reliable man, steady habits, experienced in business, good personality, initiative, energy. Pay $40.00 week and bonus. References required, full statement of experience. If possible send photograph. A-918, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation: Want to get in touch with young man with some experience in circulation work, preferably both in office and on country circulation, but who does not assume to know all about it, but is anxious to work up. Paper about 20,000 circulation in north central State. Address A-907, Editor & Publisher, stating age, experience and starting salary required.

Circulation Campaign Field Men wanted. Our organization, handling the largest and most successful circulation campaigns in the United States, now enlarging present personnel, has openings for high-class men with circulation or contest experience. Must have excellent references. No floaters or boozers considered. Write or wire care Hollister Circulation Organization, Ohio State Journal, Columbus, Ohio.

City Editor wanted by morning newspaper with over 11,000 circulation. Must be young, willing to settle in progressive mid-west city of 25,000; have reportorial and executive ability; push enough to organize and get the best out of his staff; and be able to adapt the latest and best in modern newspaper making to local conditions. Salary $55, starting at $40. Write A-919, Editor & Publisher.

Local Display Sales Manager Wanted—One of the leading evening newspapers wants to get in touch with a man capable of handling the local display advertising department. He must have demonstrated his ability and be capable of developing business along new lines, taking up the loss caused by intense local competition. Address Box A-941, Editor & Publisher, who will put you in touch with the paper interested.

Needed: Old established daily in Indiana city of 22,000, desires advertising salesman who will go out and really sell new business in this growing city. Territory is one of the best of the state, but has never been developed. Want man who has exceptional selling ability, and who can also take entire charge of advertising. Will pay excellent salary. Daily Telephone, Bloomington, Ind.

News Paper Editor wanted; one who understands all branches of work. Reply, stating experience and salary expected. A-925, Editor & Publisher.

EMPLOYMENT

Situations Wanted

Advertising Manager with record of accomplishments and unusual constructive and creative experience on morning and evening newspapers published in cities of 50,000 to 500,000, population, seeks the advertising management of newspaper in need of the services he is competent to render. Is willing to buy an interest. Has $10,000 cash. For particulars address A-917, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager—12 years' newspaper experience; 6 years executive, both local and national, large cities, evening and Sunday papers. Have established several unusual records for lineage gains against strong competition. Hard worker, clear thinker, thorough organizer and understand how to create and develop advertising. Particularly capable in developing staff and co-ordinating departments. New sales plans, promotion and newest ideas used. Familiar with operation mechanical, editorial and circulation departments and get close co-operation. Trained under three of the most successful publishers in the country. Clean record, age 32, married. Prefer city of 400,000 or over, but will locate where real opportunity exists. Available immediately. Address Box A-932, care Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Salesman—Special Page and Special Edition experience. Desires connection, temporary or permanent, preferably near New York. Interview anytime. Box A-933, Editor & Publisher.

Business Manager or assistant to Publisher. Accountant, College education. An analyst who believes in maximum results with minimum expense. Knows costs and can find the leaks. Thorough knowledge in circulation, promotion, advertising and credits. A-921, Editor & Publisher.

Cartoonist, young, desires connection with fast growing paper, with the object of obtaining editorial or advertising experience. Reference furnished. A-923, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation position where hard work and knowledge qualifies for advancement. College graduate with five years' experience in all phases of circulation work, including A. B. C. Best references. Box A-935, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Builder—Newsdealers, newsboys and home delivery expert wants position on established evening newspaper in town over 100,000 population. At present employed, but can make myself available in thirty days. A-900, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation and Promotion Manager. Fast, clean promotion manager, specialty home delivery installation and building. Well versed circulation executive. Trained in Hearst and Scripps Howard organizations; excellent references. Salary $5,720. Located Atlantic Seaboard. Conference and go anywhere in U. S. Address Circulator, Box 203, Palmyra, N. J.

Circulation Manager—Fifteen years' experience from carrier to Circulation Director on large dailies. Morning and afternoon experience. Know how to manage boys to get results. Know how to manage agents, canvassers and solicitors; also mail order campaigns. Am good organizer. Know A. B. C. and office detail. Solicit interview at my expense. A-936, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager—Young man with seven years' experience, now holding responsible position on one of southwest's outstanding newspapers, desires to connect, as circulation manager, on smaller daily. Good, clean organizer and producer. Thoroughly acquainted with every branch of your department. Unquestionable references. A-926, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager, with 6 years' experience in management of full department in newspaper of 40,000 circulation, in city of 200,000 population; can show record of steady, permanent growth of volume and can prove my ability to promote increased classified patronage for any good newspaper. Familiar with Smith system and acquainted with sound methods of promoting business that sticks; can manage detail and bookkeeping. If your newspaper needs a live, hard-working classified executive to build up that department don't fail to write me now. A-910, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager, 33 years old. 11 years' experience. An enviable record as a producer. Now employed. Wants to make change. Desire to connect with publisher who wants business and is willing to give good working conditions in return. Best of references furnished. Address Box A-939, Editor & Publisher.

Composing Room Foreman or Mechanical Superintendent—Eastern man, touring California with family, wishes to connect with good daily; 41 years of age, 20 years executive; efficiency expert, keen executive and harmonizer; maximum production with minimum cost guaranteed; Union; will go anywhere remuneration warrants. Address "H. B.," 1604 Castro street, Martinez, Calif.

EMPLOYMENT

Situations Wanted

Desk Man—Seeks position on daily. Reporting and rewrite also. Available at once. Box A-940, Editor & Publisher.

Editor—Now completing 15 years' engagement as researcher, writer and editor for I. N. Phelps-Stokes' Iconography of Manhattan Island, desires responsible new position in New York City as editor of magazine, encyclopedia, or book of local history or biography. Skilled organizer and executive; American, Christian, university graduate. Address Thomas W. Hotchkiss, Box 342, Peekskill, N. Y.

Editor or Managing Editor—Experienced and successful editor seeks position on smaller paper from three to eleven thousand circulation. West preferred. Married. Eight years editorial experience since completing college. References. A-780, Editor & Publisher.

Editor-Reporter seeks position in South. Seven years' experience. Large and small dailies. Box A-929, Editor & Publisher.

Editor, Reporter, 28, small city and metropolitan experience, open for desk or beat on P. M. daily in city above 75,000. Box A-928, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Writer, Foreign Editor or Managing Editor, 30, University Graduate, Wilsonian Democrat. Best references. A-787, Editor & Publisher.

Experienced Interviewer and Feature Writer; Woman, ambition, youth, college education. Position as reporter in any part of the country. A-890, Editor & Publisher.

Mechanical Superintendent or foreman of newspaper composing room. Capable, energetic executive desires change. A-1 references as to ability and character. At present superintendent in charge of one of the largest newspapers in East. Only permanent situation wanted. Address Box A-927, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Executive, experienced in all branches, now advertising and business manager prominent paper, seeks connection with owner or publisher. Excellent references, recommended as a producer. What do you need? Address Box A-938, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Woman, experienced in reportorial, editorial, feature and column writing, now employed, would like to connect with paper in South or Middle West. Can furnish clippings. Address A-924, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter-Desk-Sports editor: Want midwestern city up to 25,000. University graduate. Now employed. Moderate salary to start. A-778, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter or Editor—Seven years as reporter, feature writer, city and telegraph editor on large and small dailies. Experienced in make-up. College education. Best references; aged 29; single. Now employed as city editor in city of 35,000. Box A-930, Editor & Publisher.

Where is the Publisher who wants an Editor with the zest of youth but with the sanity of experience?

I am twenty-six, eight years a New York daily reporter and editor, and now employed. I have college training and experience covering news fields ranging from the criminal courts to real estate and from sports to politics. Or what have you? A-782, Editor & Publisher.

MECHANICAL

Equipment for Sale

Complete Newspaper Plant for sale. Two tubular duplex presses with stereotype equipment; seven intertype machines; photographic and photo engraving departments located San Francisco; Wesel saw and planer and photo engraving plant, Miami, Florida. Whole or in part as is, where is. Address John W. Brodix, receiver. Vanderbilt Newspapers, Inc., 56 Twelfth street, San Francisco, Calif.

For Sale—Direct Current, 220 volt, 50 hp. Press Drive and control at a great bargain for delivery about Oct. 1. All in perfect condition and with an extra new armature which alone cost $550. For price and terms write The Zanesville Publishing Company, Zanesville, O.

Job Presses, Paper Cutters, Wire Stitchers, etc.—A complete line. Overhauled and guaranteed machines at bargain prices. Easy terms. Hoffmann Type & Engraving Co., 114 E. 13th St., N. Y. City.

Presses—Goss Comet Press and Duplex 8 page press. First class condition. Immediate delivery. Griffiths Publishers Exchange, 154 Nassau Street, New York City.

Printers', Bookbinders' Outfitters—Modern cut-cost equipment, also rebuilt machinery. Conner, Fendler Branch, A. T. F. Co., New York City.

MECHANICAL

Equipment for Sale

Photo-Engraving plant for sale. Ideal for one or two men. Miles Machinery Co., 409 W. 26th St., New York.

Used Goss Matt Roller for wet mats only, for sale cheap. The Goss Printing Press Co., 1535 So. Paulina St., Chicago, Ill.

Equipment Wanted

All Kinds of Photo-Engraving, electrotyping and stereotyping equipment wanted. We pay cash. Miles Machinery Co., 409 W. 26th St., New York.

LEGAL

INTERNATIONAL PAPER COMPANY

New York, August 31, 1926.

The Board of Directors have declared a regular quarterly dividend of one and three-quarters per cent (1¾%) on the Cumulative 7% Preferred Stock of this Company, and a regular quarterly dividend of one and one-half per cent (1½%) on the Cumulative 6% Preferred Stock of this Company, for the current quarter, payable October 15th, 1926, to holders of record at the close of business October 1st, 1926. Checks will be mailed. Transfer books will not close.

OWEN SHEPHERD, Treasurer.

We offer

New York State Daily

Exclusive in its field

City population close to 20,000
County population close to 100,000
Only daily in city
and county now paying handsome investment
on price asked. Inquiries considered from investors with

$75,000 cash

Palmer, Dewitt & Palmer
350 Madison Ave., N. Y. City

CONSOLIDATION

The merging of newspaper interests is a subject that has received special study and investigation by this firm for nearly 17 years. It is a big subject and requires considerable technical knowledge, both as to valuation and operating methods. When properly organized, the results are never disappointing.

We have been factors in many important consolidations, sales and appraisals.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

We Have Moved

Into new and larger offices in Springfield's finest office building. Please note our new address:

509-511 Security Bldg.,
44 Vernon Street

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC
SECURITY BLDG. SPRINGFIELD, MASS

PUBLISHERS:

We have listed several high-class Circulation Managers, also Advertising Men, Editors, Reporters and Pressmen.

Tell us your particular need and we will put you in touch with a man who we believe will meet your particular requirements.

Address Classified Department
Editor & Publisher

DOLLAR $ $ $ $ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

ONE of the Scranton, Pa., newspapers is carrying a page ad each week from the various incurrance agents in the region. The ads are arranged in such a way that the center of the page is left for reading matter. In this space the insurance men preach against the buying of policies that have loopholes in and dealing with companies not thoroughly reliable. The idea has worked out so well that some of the smaller agents have purchased space on the page. It is understood the ads have all been placed on a yearly basis.—T. J. B.

During the fall and winter, many card parties are held. Some stationery stores or department stores should easily be induced to advertise varieties of cards, tables, favors and such.—Wilbur Polson, Geneseo, Ill.

As many people did not have funds to complete the vacation of their dreams this year, it is well to start them saving towards their ideal vacation next year. Get the local banks to advertise the starting of vacation funds at this time.—C. M. L., Seattle, Wash.

A series of "Telephone Talks" will get good revenue from a source that is usually difficult to reach. Prepare a few good will telephone ads and submit them to the company serving your community. —Davis O. Vandivier, Franklin, Ind.

An opportunity to help fill up the advertising forms on Monday or Tuesday is offered by clothes cleaning establishments which should be urged to run their advertisements. The cleaners could also use this space to help increase their generally slack business at the beginning of the week.—F. D. H., Rockford, Ill.

With cooler nights and less static, people will return to their firesides during the evenings now and tune in to some distant stations. Those that have sets may need new batteries, more accessories or even new sets. Those that haven't purchased radios yet may feel the desire to hear what there neighbors are hearing. The radio dealers and hardware stores selling such outfits should increase their space at the return of the "real radio season."—Wilbur Polson, Geneseo, Ill.

The Waco Times-Herald afternoon paper, has started a plan that has increased the advertising linage about one fourth by having Friday's paper contain more than half of the grocery stores advertising in the city. The paper in return, delivers a paper to every home in Waco, whether the occupant is a subscriber or not. This plan not only gets more advertising but it helps the growth of the circulation of the paper.—Ray Jones.

How about a page spread about football prospects at the colleges in your vicinity? The new men coming on from the freshmen teams? Interpretations of new rules for this season? Pictures of oldtime stars at those colleges? Short bits of interest to fans? This layout surrounded by advertisements of sporting goods dealers, sweater concerns, and all manufacturers of football goods?—Mont Hurst, Dallas.

Under the caption: "This Was the Old Wreck," the Long Beach (Cal.) Morning Sun recently carried a full page of ads of various automotive concerns engaged in the business of furnishing replacements, tires, batteries, fender repairing and top-upholstering, car polishing, engine repairing, etc. In the center of the page appeared a large reproduction of the re-made wreck. Ads immediately adjoining this cut had arrows pointing to the car, which indicated what part of the car they were responsible for.—Harold J. Ashe, Long Beach, Cal.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

OLD menus of 50 and 75 years ago make excellent reading. Get a few of these from some of the older restaurauteurs, hoteliers, clubhouses, or other well-established sources in your city, and write a story around them.—C. M. L.

An inch box asking who owned the oldest umbrella in town led to a most interesting series of articles supplied by readers of the Daily Sun at Attleboro, Mass., and there were umbrellas and parasols 100 and even 150 years old dug out. The series ended with a display of the antiques in a local store window and an unusual amount of interest was shown. —Eldon G. Berthold, Attleboro, Mass.

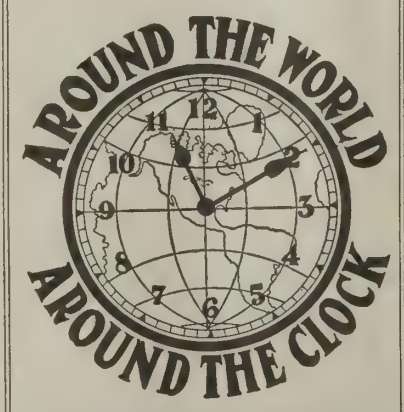
What is your city or state doing to preserve its historic shrines? The Providence (R. I.) Evening Bulletin has been printing weekly features, illustrated by photographs, of neglected historic spots and buildings throughout Rhode Island in an effort to arouse interest on the part of public-spirited citizens to save them for posterity. It might be the birthplace of a painter, the grave of a pioneer, a crumbling ferry boat, but it's surely something that the old folks know about or the young ones are willing to learn.—H. M. H., Providence, R. I.

Are the jokes about brides' cooking and ordering of groceries true in your town? The grocers can tell you a lot of things about brides as cooks. You may find out that they know more about the things to order and the grades and qualities than their mothers did when they started to housekeeping. Then, again, you may get some new jokes about "boners" that brides have pulled in giving their grocery orders.—Yandell C. Cline, Columbus (Ind.) Republican.

Married women and girls who are unable to go out to work are continually wanting to know ways and means of making money at home. It is usually hard to suggest specific methods for each particular one, but if a letter is inserted in a column with the head, "How Can She Make Money at Home?" and have women make the suggestions themselves, printing their letters in the column in answer thereto, their answers will be most beneficial and suggestive to other women because of the actual experience and "tryout" of the method outlined.—R. H.

A good story can be made by taking the number of marriage licenses issued in June of the current year and then getting the number issued in the same month for several years past. Combine these figures with the total number of licenses issued for the present six months' period and the total divorces granted during the same period. These can be made into a good feature story by a reporter who will play up June as the love month, using Cupid as a nucleus around which to build the story. I've used the idea but subordinated the figures making them only incidental to the rest of the story, at the same time drawing an interesting comparison by giving a mark for every divorce, ending up with Cupid laughing to himself at the futile efforts of the antonym of marriage to destroy HIS efforts in the magic month.—James E. Coulter, Everett (Wash.) News.

The Asheville Chamber of Commerce is conducting an intensive "Know Asheville campaign. To assist in this movement to better acquaint local people with local opportunities The Asheville Times is publishing each day in a front page box one outstanding fact about Asheville under the heading "Know Asheville. — W. Adams, 285 Montford avenue, Asheville, N. C.



COMPLETE WIRE REPORTS FOR EVENING AND SUNDAY PAPERS

International News Service

"Get It FIRST but First Get It RIGHT"

63 Park Row
NEW YORK CITY

BY UNITED PRESS

UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS
World Building New York

Local Advertising Appropriations
Are You Getting Your Share ?

Every publisher has to contend with the problem of lining up local firms who do no newspaper advertising at all.

Our plan has met with universal success all over the country in turning these dead prospects into active, weekly or semi-weekly accounts.

The Briggs plan will get you your share of these local appropriations without any cost.

WRITE for full particulars.

THOS. W. BRIGGS CO.
Columbian Mutual Tower
MEMPHIS, TENN.

Kerney's Story of Wilson

for the first time released for

NEWSPAPERS

is being bought by editors from coast to coast

Territory closing rapidly

The McClure Newspaper Syndicate
373 Fourth Avenue New York

NEA

Nothing Else To Buy When You Have Our Full Service

NEA Service, Inc.,
1200 West Third Street
CLEVELAND, OHIO

NS

The Psychology of Crime
Ten Weekly Articles
By DAVID SEABURY
Author of "Unmasking Our Minds"

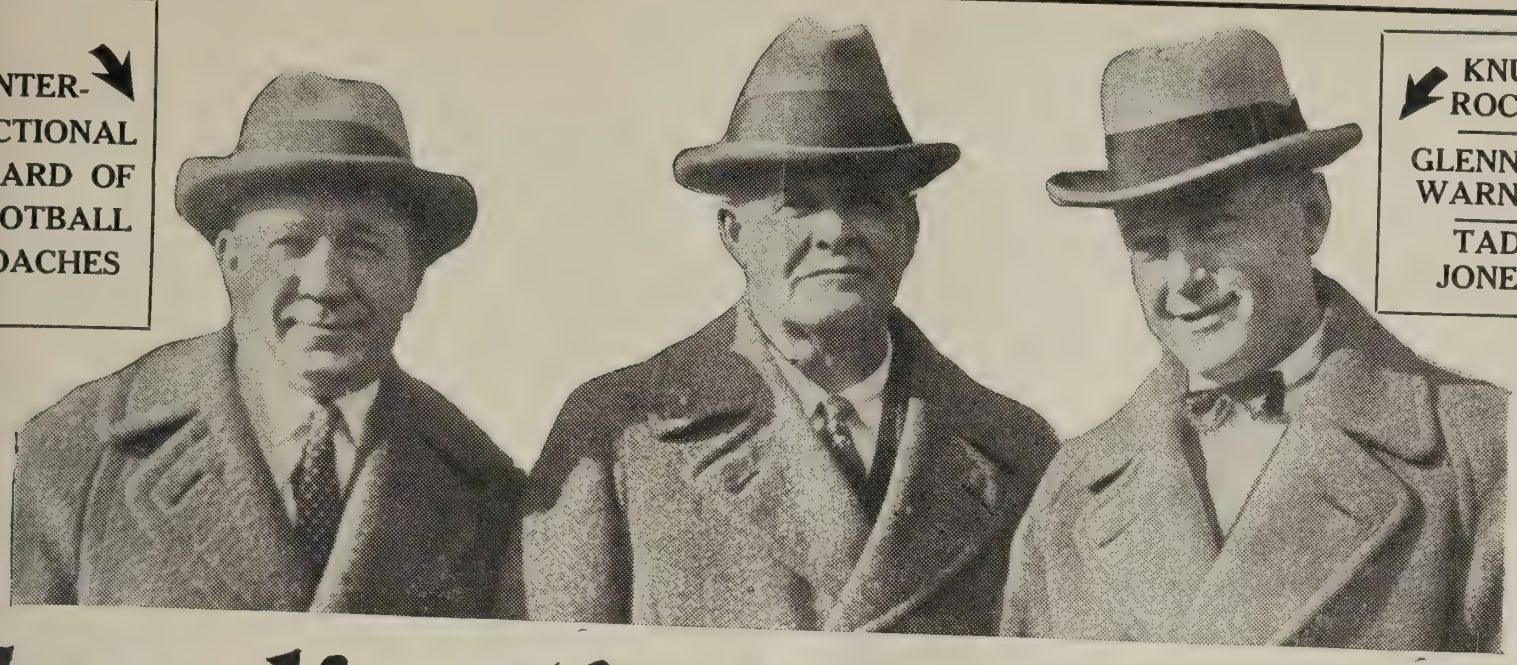
FIRST ORDERS RECEIVED
New York World
Detroit Free Press
Milwaukee Journal

The O'Dell Newspaper Service
Fifty-Five Fifth Avenue New York City

DO YOU NEED A TRAINED MAN?

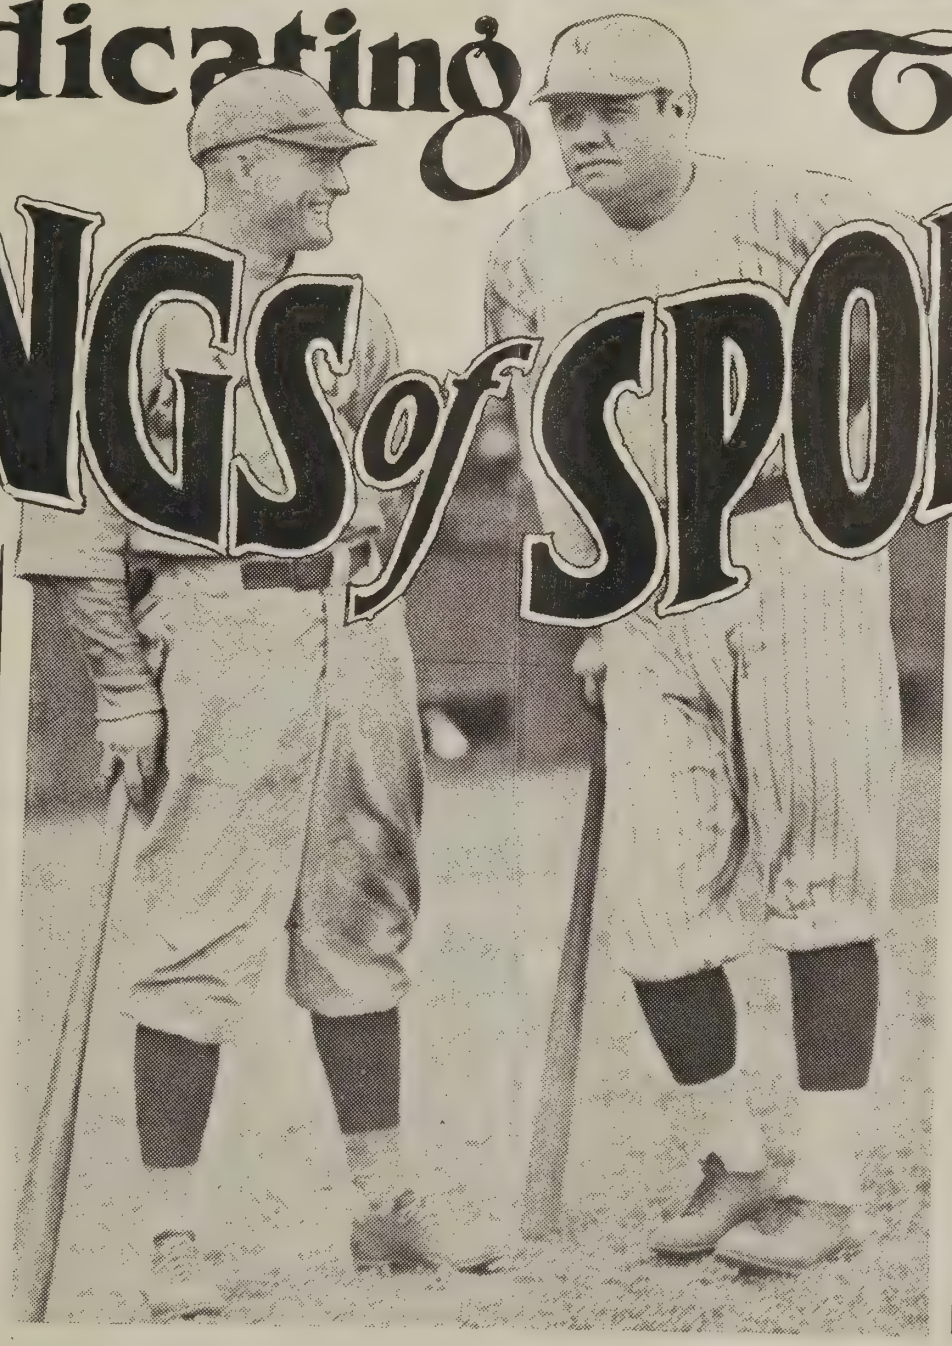
The Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, an organization of college trained newspaper, magazine and advertising men, wants to help you find him. The Bureau puts you in touch with experienced, energetic men —it saves you time by recommending only those who meet your requirements.

If you expect a vacancy, please write Robert B. Tarr, Director, Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, P. O. Box 115, Pontiac, Michigan.



NO CHARGE TO EMPLOYERS

INTER-SECTIONAL BOARD OF FOOTBALL COACHES



KNUTE ROCKNE

GLENN S. WARNER

TAD JONES

Syndicating The KINGS of SPORTS

ROGERS HORNSBY BABE RUTH

WORLD SERIES

Regardless of what teams win the pennant JOHN McGRAW and BABE RUTH will cover the World Series for their newspapers.

NICK ALTROCK will do likewise with a funny story after every game.

FREDERICK LIEB will write a series of advance "dope" articles and analyze each game during Series.

The following will cover the World Series conditionally—

Manager MILLER HUGGINS
if Yankees win
Manager McKECHNIE
if
Pittsburgh wins
Manager HORNSBY
if
St. Louis wins
Manager HENDRICKS
if
Cincinnati wins
HANS WAGNER
if Pittsburgh wins

FOOTBALL

"Famous Football Coaches" a series of small personality cartoons featuring 36 famous football coaches by PETE KEENAN. No text matter.

KNUTE ROCKNE

Writes 15 weekly stories on MIDDLE WEST football news and selects All Star Team of that section. Reports Notre Dame's four big games and Army-Navy game at Chicago.

GLENN S. WARNER

Writes 15 weekly stories on WESTERN and general football and selects All Star Team of Pacific Coast. Reports Stanford's four big games and Army vs. Navy at Chicago.

TAD JONES

Writes 15 weekly stories on football in the EAST and selects All Star Team of the East. Reports Yale's three big games and Army-Navy game at Chicago.

Rockne, Warner and Jones —at Los Angeles—will report Notre Dame-U. S. C. game and select ALL AMERICA TEAM for 1926.

The CHRISTY WALSH SYNDICATE

570 SEVENTH AVE., NEW YORK

The Most Productive Medium for

RADIO ADVERTISING

in the

WORLD'S GREATEST MARKET

THE greatest single factor in developing the unparalleled opportunities which exist in New York for Radio advertisers is The New York Sun.

For years manufacturers and dealers of radio sets and parts have used far more space in The Sun than in any other New York newspaper, six-day evening as well as seven-day morning.

Radio Advertising New York Newspapers First Eight Months of 1926

	Agate Lines	Percentage of Total
The SUN	617,294	40.7
2nd Paper	260,876	17.2
3rd Paper	196,952	13.0
4th Paper	156,094	10.3
5th Paper	83,782	5.5
6th Paper	81,154	5.4
7th Paper	57,644	3.8
8th Paper	50,016	3.3
9th Paper	11,622	0.8
Total	1,515,434	100.0

THE Sun's Radio section, issued on Saturdays, is a live, interesting magazine. It contains more editorial features of interest to the Radio Public than the corresponding section of any other New York newspaper. Radio advertisers whose announcements appear in it receive the attention of the most responsive radio audience in New York.

The censorship maintained by The Sun on all Radio advertisements inspires the confidence of its readers.

The Sun is first in Radio Advertising because it is first in its ability to produce results.

The Sun

280 BROADWAY NEW YORK

THIS ISSUE: SEMI-ANNUAL TABULATION OF LINAGE RECORDS

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1926

MEMBER A.B.C.

SUITE 1700 TIMES BUILDING, NEW YORK
42ND STREET AND BROADWAY.

MEMBER A.B.P.

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; Newspaperdom, March, 1892; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Advertising, February 7, 1925; Revised entry, Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916, at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Vol. 59. No. 18 | NEW YORK, SEPTEMBER 25, 1926 | By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A. $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign | 10c Per Copy

JOURNALISM LIBRARY
Not to be taken from this room

Chicago Tribune FEATURES

DAILY AND SUNDAY
Comic Strips

The Gumps by Sidney Smith
Gasoline Alley by Frank King
Harold Teen by Carl Ed
Winnie Winkle by Branner
Moon Mullins by Frank Willard
Smitty by Walter Berndt
Little Orphan Annie by Harold Gray
Texas Slim by Ferd Johnson
Jinglets by Al Rosen
The above strips in black and white or 8-page color comic section either tabloid or full size.

W. E. HILL
page of comics

DAILY AND SUNDAY
CARTOONS
John T. McCutcheon —Carey Orr—Gaar Williams

BLUE RIBBON FICTION
Daily serial story—Weekly short story and serial.

TRUE LIFE STORIES WEEKLY
Woman's Special Page
Embroidery Page
Sport Page—Science Page

DAILY AND SUNDAY
Doris Blake Articles
Antoinette Donnelly Beauty Articles
Men's Fashions
Women's Fashions

SUNDAY
Paris Fashions

DAILY AND SUNDAY
Dr. W. A. Evans Health Articles

WEEKLY
Burns Mantle Theatrical Letter (New York)
Mencken Literary Review
Movie Letter
N. Y. Society Letter
"About Broadway" by Mark Hellinger

DAILY AND SUNDAY
Woods and Waters by Bob Becker
Walter Eckersall's Football Articles
In Motordom by J. L. Jenkins
Line o' Type by R. H. L.

DAILY
Wake of the News by Harvey T. Woodruff

SUNDAY
The Nickeldicks—Children's Story
The Sporting Goods by Westbrook Pegler

DAILY AND SUNDAY
What's Wrong Here?
Cookery Articles by Jane Eddington
Farm and Garden by Frank Ridgeway

SUNDAY
Practical and Fancy Needlework
Home Harmonious
Club Ethics by Maude Evans

DAILY
The Goops by Gelett Burgess
Sentence Sermons by Rev. Roy L. Smith

WEEKLY
Book Reviews by Fanny Butcher
Confessions of Authors
Justice Series

PACIFIC AND ATLANTIC PHOTOS
Organized by The Chicago Tribune and the New York Daily News 25 Park Place, New York

CHICAGO TRIBUNE PRESS SERVICE
Foreign—National—Local

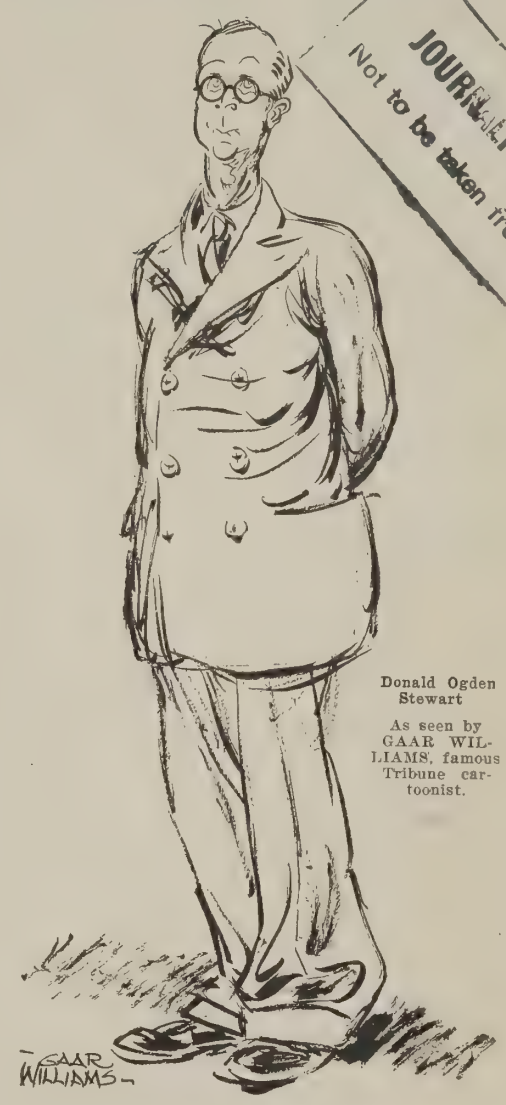
Donald Ogden Stewart

Leading American Humorist

Now Writing for

The Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate

His articles will be illustrated



BY

GAAR WILLIAMS

Gaar Williams
A caricature by Frank King, creator of "Walt" and "Skeezix"

HERE'S where every one gets a laughing jag every week. Donald Ogden Stewart, the funniest writer in America, is writing a series of sidesplitters under the title "The Other Day." Stewart is young, Yale, and newly married. He is the author of five of the funniest books ever written—"A Parody Outline of History," "Perfect Behavior," "Aunt Polly's Story of Mankind," "The Crazy Fool," and "Mr. and Mrs. Haddock Abroad." He has written scores of magazine articles, a movie or two, and he's now collaborating on a stage play. In these new articles Stewart surpasses all his previous laughing successes. His spontaneous hilarity has full play under the general title of "The Other Day." Messenger boys with cutaway coats and engraved gold teeth receive his grave consideration, and wedding guests with tattooed backs are not beneath his notice. His genial satire pierces the shell of sophistication. And here's more good news! Gaar Williams, the famous Tribune cartoonist, is illustrating Stewart's articles. His drawings will put the finishing touch on one of the best features the Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate has ever offered. Wire for rates and proofs.

Donald Ogden Stewart
As seen by GAAR WILLIAMS, famous Tribune cartoonist.

Newspapers in these territories have already bought this new feature.

New York	Kansas City, Mo.
Chicago	Seattle, Wash.
Philadelphia	Portland, Ore.
Winnipeg, Man., Canada	Buffalo, N. Y.
Detroit, Mich.	Dallas, Tex.
Cleveland, Ohio	Denver, Col.
Baltimore, Md.	Salt Lake City, Utah
Boston, Mass.	Charleston, S. C.
Los Angeles, Cal.	Sacramento, Cal.
Pittsburgh, Pa.	San Diego, Cal.
San Francisco, Cal.	Oakland, Cal.
Washington, D. C.	Wichita Falls, Tex.
New Orleans, La.	Providence, R. I.
Oklahoma City, Okla.	Omaha, Nebr.
Syracuse, N. Y.	Boise, Idaho
Tulsa, Okla.	Minneapolis, Minn.
Worcester, Mass.	Toronto, Ont., Can.

Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate

Tribune Tower -:- -:- -:- Chicago

first!

in Percentage of Advertising Gains

During the first six months of 1926 The Detroit Free Press printed 9,037,224 lines of advertising or a gain over the corresponding period for 1925 of 817,446 lines or 9.5%. The gain of the two other Detroit newspapers was 7.5% and 6.5% respectively, placing The Free Press first in the percentage of gain made.

In national advertising The Free Press carried a total of 2,358,076 lines or a gain of 26% compared to 21.5% and 18% respectively for the two other Detroit newspapers.

In local advertising The Free Press was also first in percentages of gain made, showing 9.5% as compared to 5% and 1% respectively for the two other Detroit newspapers.

The lineage carried by The Free Press during the first six months of 1926 is the equivalent of 3,765 solid pages of paid copy.

The DETROIT FREE PRESS

"Starts The Day In Detroit."

VERREE & CONKLIN, INC., National Representatives

New York Chicago Detroit San Francisco

New!

32 page SUNDAY MAGAZINE Section

The first Issue Containing:

HERBERT HOOVER, "Water Power and the Pork Barrel"

JOHN ERSKINE
"Youth"

FAIRFAX DOWNEY
"The Private Life of John Erskine"

Colonel ARTHUR WOODS
"The Truth About Dope"

BRUCE BARTON
"Quitting a Paying Job"

Dr. FRANCIS CARTER WOOD
"Cancer—A Message of Hope"

SENATOR WADSWORTH
A Study by Nunnally Johnson

SCRIBBLING
A study of the random marks you make

ANGELO PATRI
"Little Fibbers"

MARK SULLIVAN
"Does America Hate New York"

FISH STORIES OF FAMOUS PEOPLE

TROTSKY A Study by Elias Tobenkin

HIRAM BLAUVELT
"An Answer to H. G. Wells"

DOROTHY DUCAS "Shackleton's Mother"

THE HERALD TRIBUNE INSTITUTE

FASHIONS by Ruth Stuyvesant

with the

NEW YORK
Herald Tribune

Sunday, September 26

The Evening Bulletin

NIGHT EXTRA

80TH YEAR, NO. 49 (MAY CIRCULATION: 535,500 COPIES DAILY.) PHILADELPHIA, MONDAY, JUNE 7, 1926 (COPYRIGHT 1926 BY BULLETIN COMPANY) TWO CENTS

IOWA PRIMARIES STIR WASHINGTON

Cummins-Brookhart Vote Seen as Western Attitude on Coolidge and Farm Relief

WET-DRY ISSUE INJECTED

(By Associated Press.)

Washington, June 7.—Washington looked questionably toward Iowa today, waiting impatiently for the answer to a riddle that has played on the personal emotions and the political sensibilities of many in high places in the Capital.

In the eyes of both Republican and Democratic politicians, unusual considerations have lifted into exceptional prominence the Republican Senatorial contest between Count Albert B. Cummins and former Senator Smith W. Brookhart. The outcome is expected to decide which of two old requintances of Washington officialdom is to carry the Republican standard in a State usually counted as Republican, and may also throw a ray of light on political questions of near concern to Congress and the Administration.

During his comparatively brief tenure in the Senate Brookhart more than once was a thorn in the side of the Republican organization, and after his aid to the LaFollette independent campaign in 1924 he was formally read out of the party by the Republican caucus. The possibility of his return is looked upon with manifest apprehension by the Old Guard leaders, not only for its immediate effect in enlarging the numerical strength of the insurgent group in the Senate, but because of its possible moral effect on the standing of the Coolidge Administration in the West.

By the same token, a Brookhart victory would be hailed as a vindication by the insurgent group, five of whom have openly appealed to the Republican voters of Iowa to send the former Senator back to Congress.

Although himself an insurgent during the earlier period of his long service here, the veteran Cummins has been looked upon and counted upon for years as a Republican stalwart. On many fighting issues he has been found supporting the Administration, but the organization leaders do not agree that a defeat for him would be in any direct sense a defeat for the Administration.

On farm relief, one of the outstanding talking points of the Iowa campaign, Cummins has disagreed with Secretary of Agriculture Jardine and gone counter to what has been tacitly accepted as the policy of the White House. He has supported the equalization fee, more than once condemned by those close to President Coolidge, and has participated in conferences at the Capitol which were called for the avowed purpose of forcing farm aid on the Republican organization.

It also is emphasized here that the President himself has not uttered a single word to the voters of Iowa in support of Cummins. In all of the primary campaigns of 1920, he has publicly taken a hands-off attitude, and even the defeat of McKinley in Illinois and Pepper in Pennsylvania, have failed to elicit any authorized expression of regret from the White House. Mr. Coolidge's friends say he does not feel that he can afford to campaign for any candidate for a Senatorial nomination.

(Continued on Page Two, Column Five.)

BENEDICKS LONGEST LIVED

Chicago Official Shows Their Advantage Over Divorced and Single Men

(By Associated Press.)

Chicago, June 7.—The wag who asked "why do married men live longer than single ones" and then answered "they don't, it only seems longer," was wrong in only one respect, they do.

Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, city health commissioner, made public records of the health department for 1925 showing that for each age period, married men have lower death rates than single widowed or divorced men.

Out of every 1,000 men from twenty-five to thirty-four, those who die include fifteen who are divorced, five who are single and only four who are married.

Above sixty-five, Dr. Bundesen asserted, the ratio is even more favorable to the espoused group.

BRINGS CANNIBALISM TALE

Trading Ship Captain Tells of Starvation Along Siberia Coast

(By Associated Press.)

Nome, Alaska, June 7.—Bringing a tale of cannibalism and starvation among the natives of Indian Point Siberia across Bering Strait from Alaska, Captain Ira Rank, of the motorship Trader, has just returned from a trading cruise to islands along the Siberian coast.

Three hundred natives died of starvation last winter, Captain Rank said. Those who survived had lived on a diet of their comrades, relatives and dogs. Many of the natives killed their wives and children with knives and then ended their own lives rather than resort to cannibalism.

These natives, Captain Rank said, had depended entirely on guns to provide their food and necessities of life. The Soviet authorities took away their ammunition and guns to prevent any possibility of an uprising and also refused to permit trading with foreigners.

MEYER LONDON KI

New York Socialist ... tim of Automob...

(By Associated Press.)

New York, ... the first So... Eastern State ... 12th Distric... 1921 to De... night of ... day. A ... covered ... lding ... Mr. Lon... five ... the ... through ... he led ... a success ... Congress ... ing on ... council of ... World W... vigorously ... Regular Army ...

THE WORLD ...

Brazil and Spain ... opening session of ... Council at Geneva ...

Brookhart says vote will ... unsparing and Cummins ... landslide for himself, as low ... torial primary begins, daughter ... William Jennings Bryan is Democratic candidate in Florida primaries.

Turkey signs Mosul agreement with Britain, acquiescing in protested League of Nations decision.

CHURCH COUNCIL OPPOSES SCHOOL MILITARY TRAINING

Extension of Compulsory Program Held Inappropriate for Youths

(By Associated Press.)

Washington, June 7.—Recommendations against compulsory military training in schools and colleges, which was declared to be foreign to the ideals of the educational system, were made public last night by the Administrative Committee of the Federal Council of Churches.

Coincident with the Committee's appeal was publication of a War Department statement reviewing the growth of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, showing applications of nineteen universities and colleges and of thirty-five high schools for R. O. T. C. units were on file but could not be approved because of lack of funds.

The Committee's appeal asked church people throughout the Nation to study the whole question of militarism in education and expressed special dissatisfaction with the extension of the program of military training of an elaborate and technical character, even into the public schools.

Believing the matter ... with a knowledge of fa... ment and the Commi... the Federal Council ... International Justice ... publish a pamphlet ... of the question of ... The arguments for ... by Major General ... Commanding ... of the United States ...

SENATE CO... UPHOLDS ...

Declares Preside... Entirely With... in Issuin...

CITES COOL...

(By ... Washington, ... lidge, in issuing ... employment ... bition enforcement ... ly within his rig... infraction of the ... law, either express or ... majority report of a Ju... mittee submitted today ... committee.

In studying the ... mittee acted under a ... of which Senator King, ... was the author. That ... of the sub-committee's ... minority views holding ... was unauthorized and ...

The sub-committee ... what the President ... "order," but a ... policy. ... states ... the order ... since the Attor... ternal Revenue ... thority to make ... fore the order ...

Refraining from ... ton as to the wisdo... so employing State of... mittee majority said ...

"Nothing said here ... strued as an expres... proval or disapproval ... evidenced by the notic... President which has b... discussion.

"The committee has ... stricted in the ... under which ... sole question ... acted in the ... in violation ... of its provisi...

On the ... Court decisi... similar lines ... Dent Coolidge ... conclusion of the ... Theodore Roosevelt ... in 1907 authorizing ... accept appointment ... Services of the ... Wilson issued two ... ing officers of th... to accept position ... wardens, and th... Treasury officers t... to State, county or ... defense ...

WILKINS BACK ...

May Postpone ...

Detroit, June ... foggy weather, failu... to-end flight of the airplane ... soon properly and the ... Thomas G. Lanphier, was being kept ... too long from his post as commandant ... of Selfridge Field, are reasons advanced today by the board of control of the Detroit Aviation Exposition for the interruption of the Arctic exploration program.

"Owing to the persistent foggy weather" a statement by the board said, "it is considered advisable to have Captain George H. Wilkins, Major Lanphier and Sergeant Charles Wisely return to Fairbanks, Alaska, from Point Barrow for a complete overhauling of ... equipment and to hold a ... to determine the ... practicability ... flight. ... Application has been made to the ... Department of Control ... con ... that ...

ASKS FRANCE SPARE AMERICAN MUTINEER

Washington Instructs Paris Envoy to Intercede in Legionnaire's Case

FACES DEATH IN SYRIA

(By Associated Press.)

Washington, June 7.—Myron T. Herrick, American Ambassador at Paris, was instructed by Secretary of State Kellogg today to intercede with the French Government in behalf of Benuel J. Doty, also known as Gilbert Clare, a private in the French Foreign Legion.

He is facing trial and death on charges of attempted desertion.

Both the French Embassy and the State Department were ... Senators Tyson and ... Democrats, of Tennessee, the home State of Doty, to use their good offices.

Senator Tyson ... personal visit ... for a confe...

MAYOR ADDRESSING S. A. R. AT LIBERTY'S SHRINE

CHURCHILL IN MOTOR ...

British Chancellor's Car Wrecked in Collision With Van

(By Associated Press.)

Westerham, England, June 7.—Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, had a narrow escape this afternoon when his motor collided with a motor van.

Both machines were badly smashed. The Chancellor was unhurt, but the van driver suffered a broken rib and other injuries.

NIBBLES AT THE NEWS

Berlin—Styles and food, two ... failing sources of interest. Here ... dampers have blossomed out with ... feathered parasols dyed in ... doors. A huge red rose covers ... entire parasol top is the most ...

Moscow—American styles in ... particularly American shoes ... lar in Russia, where wom... smallest feet in the world ... ese and Japanese. More ... pairs of American shoes ... ed to Russia, are unsa... of their large size, narro... and extremely high heel... will be sent to Finland, w... expected to fit.

...—Taking up food, do ... hat "outlook" is. It appears ... of fare of all restaurants in ... morning and evening. The ... plugging it to be the English ... steak but it covers all shades o...

Athens—When you go aboard ... summer take along an extra five ... lars. The Greek Government is ch... ling that sum to tourists desiring to ... the famous Parthenon. Sixty per cent ... of the visitors are Americans.

About 1025 Help and Situation Want Ads In Today's Bulletin

HELEN WILLS IMPROVES

American T... Participate in Forest Hill... nis Contest

(By Associated Press.)

Paris, June 7.—Miss Helen Wills, American tennis champion, who underwent an operation for appendicitis Friday night, will leave the American Hospital Sunday, her mother said today.

Miss Wills had a comfortable night ... and her condition was satisfactory this ...

The love story of a sweet girl is told by Eda Wister Haines in The Bulletin's new serial entitled "Mysterious Neighbors," beginning tomorrow, Tuesday June 8th.—Advertisement

REVOLUTION SONS HEAR DRY APPEAL

Society's Head Urges Members to Support Prohibition and Immigration Bill

37TH CONVENTION OPENS

A rallying call to the support of the 18th Amendment and the Johnson Immigration Bill of May, 1924, was sounded today in Independence Hall at the opening session of the 37th Annual Congress of the Sons of the American Revolution.

The plea was made by Harvey E. Remington, president general of the society and a former municipal judge at Rochester, N. Y., speaking from the bench of the Supreme Court room in the State House. Today is the anniversary of the introduction by Richard Henry Lee, of Virginia, before the First Continental Congress, of a resolution ... declaring the colonies ... free and of right ... by ... [illegible]

WOMEN FUGITIVES CAUGHT

Two Who Fled Reformatory, Dressed as Men, Arrested in Station

Masquerading as men, two fugitives from the Vermont State Reformatory for Women, at Rutland, Vt., who were serving Federal sentences there, were arrested in Broad Street Station last night by McDevitt and McInerney, Department of Justice agents.

The prisoners, who fled the Vermont institution May 29 by sliding down an improvised rope of sheets and climbing a large front gate, are Helen Kenby, eighteen, known as the "Texas Queen of automobile thieves" and "Billie" Wolsin, forty-eight, Nashville, Tenn. Both are married. Mrs. Kenby's husband, it is said, is serving a term in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary for conspiracy with his wife to transport stolen automobiles between States. The older woman was serving a three-year term for peddling "dope."

"We didn't like the joint because we didn't get enough to eat," they told Federal authorities here today. "Why, we got more meals at City Hall here than we got at Rutland all the time we were there."

The ... ners, after spending the ... Hall, were taken to the ... ding. They will get a ... Friday.

JUSTICE TAFT ILL

...ttending Today's ... Supreme Court

June 7.—Chief Justice ... present on account of illness from at... ...'s session of the Supreme ...

... to his room, the sixty-eight... of Justice and former Pres... ...conceded to the ad... ...sician not to attempt to ... the session, which is the ... will hold until October. ...ousness of the attack was ...ely disclosed. For several ... he been intermittently suf... ailments brought on by the ... and by depletions remit... ...ective life he has led in a ... of public offices.

...S

... CROSSING

... killed and three other ...sylvania Railroad train ... here. The dead are: ...ghman, and Miss Ella ...oley Parsons, of Herrin, ... twenty-four, and Thais ...tively of Mrs. Drye, re...

...ICY CAKES

...porting Alaskan black ... ice and then bringing ... being investigated by ...,000 Shedd aquarium ... the fish, principal ...ritality, and are lively ...

... KILLS ONE

... one probably fatally ... when a freight train ...rolled near here when ...g the casualties.

...HILLS CITY ...TH MERCURY 62

...s Only Intermittently ... Cloudy Weather ... Hangs On

...E LAST YEAR

...test fall we're having this ... the weather comment on ... stretch today. ... ...om behind the ...noon and ap... brief periods ... time today. The ... sixty-two, about ...rmal. ...ed badly this month, ...only two days when ... respectable showing ... the phase of June's trail... June 2, there was sub... per cent. of the time and ...86 per cent. But the score ...4 was a zero.

Including yesterday, the month has been forty-five per cent. sunshine, and that's a poor record in the season ailed only seven over to flowers, weddings and other penny stand-bys. And the forty-five per cent. is based on the "possible"—that is, it is figured only on the day time hours during which the sun is expected to do its stuff.

Along with the sunshine shortage there has been a deficiency in the amount of heat. Thus, including yesterday, Philadelphia is just thirty degrees ahead of the normal figure thus far ...

SAYS GAMING HOUSE IS WITHIN 2 BLOCKS OF POLICE STATION

Magistrate Beaton, at Raid Hearing, Hints Gambling Evidence is Being 'Covered Up'—'Liar,' Replies Captain Wagner, Demanding Names and Addresses—Assert Girl, Fifteen, Acted as Lookout

TWO OF 17 HELD IN BAIL; WILL TRY GILCHRIST FRIDAY

Magistrate William F. Beaton, presiding at a gambling hearing today in the 10th and Buttonwood sts. station, started a fireworks display by declaring there was "a big game going on" within two blocks of the station house.

Two defendants out of seventeen arraigned before the magistrate were held for court in $400 bail.

They were arrested Saturday in a raid on a restaurant at 863 N. Marshall st.

Captain George Wagner, commander of the district, a red-headed, square-jawed man, was leaning against the rail in front of the magistrate's desk when Beaton made his charge near the end of the hearing.

The captain's face took on the hue of his hair. He straightened up startly.

"Why don't you tell us where it is?" he inquired loudly.

"Oh, you know where it is," answered the magistrate.

"There's no place running near here," snapped the police captain. "The only place running was knocked off." Presumably he referred to the Mutual Republican Club, 711 Spring Garden st., which was raided May 20.

Magistrate Beaton wanted to know if "this little restaurant is the only gambling joint in this district."

When Captain Wagner told him "we are going after the others," the Magistrate indulged in a short, cynical laugh.

"That's a good one," he said. Wagner insisted police are trying to put down the lid.

"You can get them if you want them," said the magistrate, and he added something about "covering up."

Captain Wagner straightened up and gave his trousers a hitch. He walked away from the desk.

"If anybody says I have covered up anything in this district," said the Captain loudly, "he is a liar."

While the Magistrate was making his charges, announcement came from the District Attorney's office that Dr. Thomas Gilchrist, known in gambling circles as "English Tommy," who was held as proprietor of the Mutual Republican Club gambling room would be tried Friday in room 686 City Hall. Since his arrest Gilchrist, who lives at the Coronado, 22d and Chestnut sts., has several times threatened to "tell the whole truth" about gambling.

The two held for court by Magistrate Beaton are Samuel Lees, proprietor of the restaurant and alleged gambling house which was raided Saturday by Captain Wagner and his men, and Philip Sabolski, Marshall st., near Poplar, who is charged with being a frequenter of the place.

Charles L. Gordon, Assistant District Attorney, appeared to prosecute the case and brought out the fact that Lees' restaurant had been "carried on the rolls" of the 10th and Buttonwood sts. station as a gambling house and had been raided once before on April 10.

After the hearing the magistrate promised to supply Captain Wagner with the name of the gambling house he had in mind.

"Ever since I have been a magistrate I have stood ready to aid the police in their drive against vice in this district," said Beaton.

"Whatever information I have against lawlessness of vice I will give Captain Wagner. The police further know that any time during the day or night that they want warrants signed I am ready to accommodate them.

"During the time Director Butler was here I heard more cases than most

(Continued on Page Two, Column Six.)

305,000 HAVE VISITED SESQUI

Rain and Postponement of Tank Drill Cut Today's Total

More than 305,000 persons have visited the Sesqui-Centennial since it opened a week ago. It was announced today by E. L. Austin, director-in-chief.

The light rain and generally inclement weather which necessitated the postponement of the whippet tank drill by the army in the Stadium kept many away and by noon today only a few had passed through the gates.

On Saturday there were 10,000 persons at the grounds. Of these 5,000 were paid admissions, many which were free on that date, and the other 5,000 visited on passes.

RAIN STOPS PHILS AGAIN

Will Play St. Louis Cardinals One Game Tomorrow

... the second time in the series ...llies and St. Louis Cardinals ...lined out when the shower of ... the grounds unplayable. ...eams will play only one ...ow, and the postponed ...made up as part of a ...ter in the season.

...ATHER FORECAST

...unsettled and slight... ...ght, Tuesday fair. ...winds.

... Three, Column One

... THERMOMETER ...day. P.M. ... 1 2 3 4 5 6 ... 68; low, 51; hum., 45. ... Night. A.M. ... 1 2 3 4 5 6 ... 55 55 56 54 53 54 55

... AND FOUND

... haired boy terrier with black ... tail; loves A. white head ... leather collar bearing owner's ... ...ding. Reward. Phone 3697 L001.

... ...ray leather; on Three Mile ... ...ver protective gloves & Shriner ... ...ward. Phone Crescent 2050-W.

... ...Camco pin, vicinity of 12th and Berks ... ...ernities. Reward. Blayer Drug Store, ...of Berks sts.

... ...Small boy coat (jewels & compass). Aiken ... ...ss 61. Phone 70. Reward. This Office.

LOST—Pin, gold filigree, amethyst stone. Ref... Reward. Allen Townsend 2088 Cherry st.

OTHER LOST & FOUND PAGE 37

"That the people of Philadelphia, Camden and vicinity appreciate the efforts of The Bulletin to give them all the news of the day as fairly, as exactly and impartially as it can be laid before them, is attested not only by the fact that the name of The Bulletin has become as a household word among them, but that its circulation reaches far beyond the highest point ever attained by a Philadelphia newspaper."

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

Dominate Philadelphia

Create maximum impression at one cost by concentrating in the newspaper "nearly everybody" reads—

The Evening Bulletin

Net paid circulation for six months ending March 31, 1926 533,169 copies a day

The circulation of The Evening Bulletin is larger than that of any other Philadelphia newspaper and is the third largest in the United States.

New York—247 Park Avenue (Park-Lexington Building)
Chicago—Verree & Conklin, Inc., 28 East Jackson Boulevard

(Copyright 1926—Bulletin Company)

Detroit—C. L. Weaver, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 321 Lafayette Boulevard
San Francisco—Thomas L. Emory, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 681 Market Street

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication by The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor; Suite 1700 Times Building, 42nd St., at Broadway, New York. Telephone, Bryant 3052-3053-3054-3055-3056. Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations. Member Associated Business Papers, Inc.

Vol. 59 — NEW YORK, SEPTEMBER 25, 1926 — No. 18

Big Bulge of National Advertising Swells Half-Year Record Linage Totals

Year's Investment in Newspaper Space Indicated as $850,000,000, a Gain of About 15 Per Cent Over Last Year—How the Leaders Stand

By ARTHUR ROBB

A NEW torrent of national advertising, backed by steadily rising waters in the channel of local display and classified, has engulfed the readers of American daily and Sunday newspapers.

According to linage records gathered for EDITOR & PUBLISHER's regular semi-annual tabulation from more than 1,000 newspapers in all parts of the country, the total investment by all advertisers in newspaper space for the current year will exceed $800,000,000. It will probably approximate $850,000,000.

National advertising, last year estimated by the Bureau of Advertising of the A. N. P. A. at $220,000,000, will in all likelihood increase that total in 1926 by almost $100,000,000. The increase in volume of national business has far outstanced the gains in the other two principal divisions.

Linage figures presented on this and subsequent pages were received from newspapers in 620 cities of the United States, having a total population of approximately 47,000,000 people. The newspapers included 226 morning papers, 648 evening papers and 271 Sunday issues, a total of 1,145 newspaper advertising units.

Morning newspapers printed a total of 1,727,635 agate lines, of which the following principal divisions were made:

National—197,484,487 lines.
Local Display—522,224,201 lines.
Classified—161,977,339 lines.

Evening newspapers published during the six months the unprecedented total of 1,850,408,305 agate lines, apportioned as follows:

National—359,602,561 lines.
Local Display—1,179,380,471 lines.
Classified—247,355,032 lines.

No separate tabulation can be made for Sunday newspapers, due to the practice of many publishers who do not segregate Sunday business from that in the daily issues. Sunday linage is therefore included in the above totals.

Aside from the tremendous gain which the general totals reflect—it is apparently well up 15 per cent. above the figures collected from practically the same group of newspapers by EDITOR & PUBLISHER a year ago—the most striking element in the preceding summary is the disproportionate advance in the national total.

In morning newspapers a year ago, national advertising occupied 16 per cent. of the total advertising space. For the first six months of 1925, the use of national advertising was 20.7 per cent. of the total morning paper advertising space.

In the evening field a year ago, national advertising occupied 14.5 per cent. of the total advertising space.

In evening paper figures for this year, national advertising has pre-empted 19.4 per cent. of the total paid area.

Local advertising in morning newspapers last year ran 57 per cent. of the total space.

Local advertising in morning newspapers for the first six months of this year was 54.8 per cent. of the total space.

In the evening field for the first six months of last year, local display space was 64.5 per cent. of the total. For the first six months of this year, local display space in evening papers was 63.8 per cent. of the total space.

Classified advertising in morning papers for the first six months of last year totalled 17 per cent. of all advertising. For the first six months of this year, this division of advertising in morning papers occupied exactly the same proportion of the total.

In evening papers, classified advertising took 12 per cent. of the total space of the first six months of last year. For the first six months of 1926, classified advertising in evening newspapers held 13.3 per cent. of the total.

The differences between the sum of the above percentages and 100 in both the morning and the evening classifications is due to incomplete figures furnished by some publishers and to the omission from some totals of legal, reader, office advertising and other miscellaneous groups. This circumstance lessens the values of the comparative percentage figures, but it does not detract at all from the statement that the growth in national advertising reflected has been nothing short of phenomenal.

Much of the increase in the national field comes under half a dozen headings —automotive, building materials, tobacco, book publishers, railways, steamships and resorts.

The great activity in real estate throughout the country is reflected in the realty advertising, much of which in many large cities, has come under the head of national business in recent months.

Apparently, however, the great proportionate increases in national advertising have been registered in the cities smaller than the metropolitan centers. The latter have had a considerable influx of new national business, too, such figures as are available indicating that either gain in this classification is between 12 and 15 per cent. The smaller cities have therefore carried 25 per cent or more advertising in the first six months of 1926 than they did in the same period of 1925, according to the indicated increase of 20 per cent or more in national volume.

Automotive advertising in many cities is running far ahead of 1925 totals, sometimes as much as 50 per cent, according to a recent Detroit dispatch in EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

In New York City, where complete analyses of newspaper linage are made by the New York Evening Post Statistical Department, the volume of morning and Sunday paper automotive advertising increased from 2,083,144 lines to 2,970,880 lines, 42.6 per cent. These figures cover the period Jan. 1—June 30, 1926-1925.

Evening and Sunday newspaper advertising of automobiles in New York papers increased in the same period from 2,298,740 lines to 3,101,708 lines, or 35 per cent. These figures include automotive classified, and if this is omitted from consideration, the increase in display space —from 1,610,744 lines to 2,313,258 lines —is 43 per cent.

Tobacco advertising in New York morning newspapers increased from 624,456 lines to 873,544 lines, or 24 per cent. In evening papers, the tobacco linage increased from 506,510 to 858,180 lines, or 67.5 per cent.

Building material advertising in New York morning newspapers increased from 193,200 lines to 328,606 lines, or 70 per cent.

In evening papers, copy for building materials increased from 124,698 lines to 211,860 lines, or 70.3 per cent.

Real estate display advertising in morning and Sunday New York papers increased from 2,581,144 lines to 3,781,498 lines, or 46 per cent.

Real estate display advertising in New York evening and Sunday papers increased from 790,814 lines to 1,420,912 lines, or 79 per cent.

No key is available as to the amount of this realty business that is national, but a considerable proportion of it has come from land promotions in Florida, North Carolina, and Long Island. Other sections of the country to a lesser extent have shared in this advertising.

Financial advertising, a large part of which is national, has maintained a some-

EDITOR & PUBLISHER SEMI-ANNUAL LINAGE TABLE

Copyright 1926, by EDITOR & PUBLISHER Co.

NEWSPAPERS IN CITIES OF MORE THAN 1,000,000 POPULATION

	Paper	Published	Total Linage	National	Local	Classified
Brooklyn	Eagle	(e)	6,216,180	1,179,144	2,639,156	2,397,880
	Sunday ed	(s)	3,142,944	832,222	1,496,866	813,856
	Total	(es)	9,359,124	2,011,366	4,136,022	3,211,736
Brooklyn,	Times	(es)	3,792,330	784,170	2,146,846	421,410
Chicago	American	(e)	6,896,632	1,260,191	4,737,980	898,461
Chicago	Herald & Examiner	(m)	3,624,747	763,816	1,807,937	1,033,776
	Sunday ed	(s)	3,086,019	589,840	2,103,114	317,652
	Total	(ms)	6,710,766	1,353,656	3,911,051	1,351,428
Chicago	Daily Journal	(e)	2,785,044	496,488	1,739,253	549,303
Chicago	Daily News	(e)	11,274,931	1,616,189	7,260,217	2,398,615
Chicago	Post	(e)	3,127,244	580,645	2,278,591	268,008
Chicago	Tribune	(m)	10,534,341	2,119,464	5,246,688	3,168,189
	Sunday ed	(s)	6,295,920	997,512	3,709,983	1,588,425
	Total	(ms)	16,830,261	3,116,976	8,956,671	4,756,614
Cleveland, Ohio.	News	(e)	4,648,958	1,058,063	3,590,895	.....
	Sunday ed	(s)	1,192,487	467,537	724,950	.....
	Total	(es)	5,841,545	1,525,600	4,315,845	.....
Cleveland, Ohio.	Plain Dealer	(m)	6,668,466	1,460,070	2,592,010	1,814,002
	Sunday ed	(s)	3,545,623	1,109,119	1,586,634	849,281
	Total	(ms)	10,214,089	2,569,189	4,178,644	2,663,283
Cleveland, Ohio.	Press	(e)	7,640,317	1,471,569	4,418,741	1,741,370
Detroit, Mich.	Free Press	(m)	5,311,138	1,422,624	2,328,410	1,560,104
	Sunday ed	(s)	3,726,086	935,452	1,870,274	920,360
	Total	(ms)	9,037,224	2,358,076	4,198,684	2,480,464
Detroit, Mich.	News	(e)	12,628,168	1,684,704	8,375,500	2,567,964
	Sunday ed	(s)	4,799,158	1,036,714	2,278,220	1,484,224
	Total	(es)	17,427,326	2,721,418	10,653,720	4,052,188
Detroit	Times	(e)	3,827,249	893,421	2,933,828	.....
	Sunday ed	(s)	1,504,694	618,463	886,231	.....
	Total	(es)	5,331,943	1,511,884	3,820,059	.....
Los Angeles	Examiner	(m)	6,698,614	875,518	2,813,706	3,009,390
	Sunday ed	(s)	5,047,958	548,176	3,426,234	1,073,548
	Total	(ms)	11,746,572	1,423,694	6,239,940	4,082,938
Los Angeles.	Express	(e)	4,702,712	980,644	3,214,498	507,570
Los Angeles.	Herald	(e)	9,130,212	1,407,840	5,617,360	1,813,266
Los Angeles, Cal.	Record	(e)	2,578,086	219,590	2,165,030	193,446
Los Angeles.	Times	(m)	8,274,700	1,263,094	3,690,498	3,321,108
	Sunday ed	(s)	5,333,384	1,013,502	2,933,438	1,326,444
	Total	(ms)	13,608,084	2,276,596	6,683,936	4,647,552

(Continued on page 22)

what slower pace in the competition for the public's dollar through newspaper advertising.

In New York morning and Sunday papers, financial advertising increased from 2,809,844 lines to 3,173,310 lines, or 12.9 per cent.

In New York evening papers financial advertising increased from 1,760,046 lines to 2,096,168 lines, or 19 per cent.

Radio advertising in New York papers, as had been expected, declined from the high marks of 1925 during the first six months. This business holds most of its turnover within the four months preceding Christmas and its advertising reaches its peak during the holiday season.

July radio and electrical linage, according to figures issued by the U. S. Department of Commerce, shot sharply upward, the gain noted being 134 per cent. Another interesting indication in the government figures concerns the July advertising in the musical instrument field, its increase of 118 per cent over the linage of July, 1925, apparently indicating that the talking-machine and piano manufacturers are beginning in earnest the fight to regain the market they lost to the radio.

Classified advertising also maintained its rate of increase. In morning newspapers, it held the same proportion of space to the total as it did a year ago and in evening newspapers, it increased its ratio.

Local display linage increased, but at a slower pace than the other group totals.

Government figures, covering about 125 large city newspapers, indicate that the percentage of increase in newspaper linage is 5 per cent. The statistics of the New York Evening Post bureau and the present listing of Editor & Publisher indicate that this percentage is by no means high enough. The Evening Post figures covering 130 newspapers in 30 cities show a 7 per cent increase for the first six months of this year and the present Editor & Publisher tabulation, covering 1,100 newspapers in more than 600 cities indicates that the rate of increase is more than 10 per cent.

The latter estimate is borne out by the figures of newsprint paper produced and available for consumption. United States and Canadian mills have produced about 14 per cent more newsprint tonnage in 1926 to date than in the same period of 1925 and all of it has been absorbed. In fact, mill reserve stocks have been severely drained by demands for tonnage above that produced. Circulation increases, it is believed will not account for as much as five per cent of the higher paper consumption.

Listed newspapers which led in volume of total linage included:

Detroit News (es)	17,427,326
Miami Herald (ms)	17,162,698
Chicago Tribune (ms)	16,830,261
New York Times (ms)	15,303,788
Washington Star (es)	14,381,594
St. Petersburg Times (ms)	14,065,898
Los Angeles Times (ms)	13,608,084
Pittsburgh Press (es)	12,921,958
St. Louis Post-Dispatch (es)	12,689,880
Los Angeles Examiner (ms)	11,746,572
Columbus Dispatch (es)	11,492,383
Chicago News (e)	11,274,931
Philadelphia Inquirer (ms)	11,231,200
Philadelphia Bulletin (e)	11,093,397
Newark News (e)	10,772,033
Cleveland Plain Dealer (ms)	10,214,089
Tampa Tribune (ms)	10,039,372
San Francisco Examiner (ms)	9,917,451
New Orleans Times-Picayune (ms)	9,733,431
Oakland Tribune (es)	9,729,412
New York Herald Tribune (ms)	9,665,724
Milwaukee Journal (es)	9,518,087
Brooklyn Eagle (es)	9,359,124
Jacksonville Times-Union (ms)	9,227,988
Birmingham News (es)	9,227,540
New York World (ms)	9,173,772
Baltimore Sun (e)	9,133,210
Los Angeles Herald (e)	9,130,212
Indianapolis News (e)	9,096,141
Baltimore Sun (ms)	9,089,197
Detroit Free Press (ms)	9,037,224
New York Sun (e)	8,937,650
Rochester Democrat & Chronicle (ms)	8,786,211
Kansas City Star (ms)	8,517,479
Akron Beacon-Journal (e)	8,470,246
Dayton News (es)	8,459,472
San Diego Union (ms)	8,444,142
Dallas Times-Herald (es)	8,385,455
Boston Globe (ms)	8,342,312
Philadelphia Public Ledger (ms)	8,327,918
Seattle Times (es)	8,244,557
Boston Herald (ms)	8,098,649
Philadelphia Public Ledger (e)	8,046,226
Memphis Commercial Appeal (ms)	8,045,844
Buffalo News (e)	8,028,451
Minneapolis Journal (es)	8,011,319
Toledo Blade (e)	7,971,011
Grand Rapids Press (e)	7,955,626
St. Petersburg Independent (e)	7,908,426
Canton Repository (es)	7,803,448
Minneapolis Tribune (ms)	7,801,794
Houston Chronicle (es)	7,777,919
Hartford Times (e)	7,729,803
Toronto Star (es)	7,729,210
Denver Post (es)	7,728,448
New York Journal (e)	7,725,458
Cleveland Press (e)	7,640,317
Portland Oregonian (ms)	7,590,022
Cincinnati Times-Star (e)	7,579,677
Tampa Times (e)	7,464,394
Atlanta Journal (es)	7,398,587
St. Louis Globe-Democrat (ms)	7,336,102
Louisville Courier-Journal (ms)	7,330,238
Flint Journal (es)	7,200,780
Providence Bulletin (e)	7,171,362
Toronto (Ont.) Telegram (e)	7,093,884
Rochester Times-Union (e)	7,009,997
Atlantic City Press (ms)	6,999,845
Camden Courier (e)	6,970,979
Dallas News (ms)	6,965,676
Chicago American (e)	6,896,632
Vancouver Province (es)	6,868,118
New York American (ms)	6,851,764
Asheville Citizen (ms)	6,804,378
Scranton Times (e)	6,781,908
Indianapolis Star (ms)	6,738,300
Chicago Herald Examiner (ms)	6,710,766
San Jose Mercury Herald (ms)	6,688,850
New Haven Register (es)	6,662,836
Wilkes-Barre Record (m)	6,602,183
Montreal Star (e)	6,546,860
Omaha World-Herald (ms)	6,405,448
Boston Traveler (e)	6,376,674
Elizabeth Journal (e)	6,366,528
Portland Oregon Journal (es)	6,298,964
Kansas City Star (e)	6,273,275
Syracuse Herald (es)	6,245,001
Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph (e)	6,220,634
Richmond News-Leader (e)	6,220,284
Evansville Courier (ms)	6,213,908
Pasadena Star-News (e)	6,207,026
Utica Observer - Dispatch (es)	6,164,662
San Antonio Light (es)	6,149,234
Long Beach Press-Telegram (es)	6,126,020
Altoona Mirror (e)	6,094,983
Buffalo Times (es)	6,069,644
Reading Eagle (es)	6,043.254
Johnstown Tribune (e)	6,027,644
Boston Post (ms)	6,026,382
Houston Post - Dispatch (ms)	6,005,888

LEADERS IN NATIONAL
Morning and Sunday

New York Times	3,744,232
Jacksonville Times-Union	3,119,662
Chicago Tribune	3,116,976
Boston Herald	2,924,724
New York Herald Tribune	2,914,620
Cleveland Plain Dealer	2,569,189
Philadelphia Public Ledger	2,547,076
St. Louis Globe-Democrat	2,425,567
Detroit Free Press	2,358,076
Los Angeles Times	2,276,596
Miami Herald	1,988,722
Portland Oregonian	1,868,874

LEADERS IN NATIONAL LINAGE
Evening and Sunday

Detroit News	2,721,418
St. Louis Post-Dispatch	2,480,240
Milwaukee Journal	2,465,142
Brooklyn Eagle	2,011,366
Seattle Times	1,888,264
Minneapolis Journal	1,804,064
Washington Star	1,742,824
Denver Post	1,708,056
Birmingham News	1,675,856
Columbus Dispatch	1,654,993
Atlanta Journal	1,566,138
Pittsburgh Press	1,562,708

LEADERS IN NATIONAL LINAGE
Evening Six Day

Newark News	2,608,280
Philadelphia Bulletin	2,513,286
Boston Traveler	2,195,464
Indianapolis News	2,095,666
New York Sun	2,089,958
Philadelphia Evening Ledger	2,089,646
Buffalo News	1,857,840
Detroit News	1,684,704
Milwaukee Journal	1,634,339
Chicago News	1,616,189
New York Journal	1,587,944
St. Louis Post-Dispatch	1,582,560

LEADERS IN LOCAL
Morning and Sunday

Miami Herald	11,447,528
St. Petersburg Times	10,055,360
Chicago Tribune	8,956,671
New York Times	8,277,240
Los Angeles Times	6,683,936
Los Angeles Examiner	6,239,940
Tampa Tribune	6,194,440
New York Herald Tribune	5,789,984
Philadelphia Inquirer	5,764,800
New Orleans Times-Picayune	5,155,002
San Francisco Examiner	5,039,041
*Wilkes-Barre Record	4,909,282

* No Sunday edition.

LEADERS IN LOCAL
Evening and Sunday

Detroit News	10,653,720
Washington Star	9,726,499
Pittsburgh Press	8,476,636
Columbus Dispatch	7,690,555
St. Louis Post-Dispatch	7,677,040
Birmingham News	6,478,976
Dallas Times-Herald	6,128,470
Dayton News	5,552,010
Flint (Mich.) Journal	5,513,788
Buffalo Times	5,141,276
Milwaukee Journal	5,112,710
Oakland Tribune	5,019,686

LEADERS IN LOCAL LINAGE
Evening Six Day

Detroit News	8,375,500
Chicago News	7,260,217
Washington Star	7,068,407
St. Petersburg Independent	6,492,144
Philadelphia Bulletin	6,387,525
Pittsburgh Press	6,269,536
New York Sun	6,201,586
New York Journal	6,122,966
St. Louis Post-Dispatch	5,575,080
Baltimore Evening Sun	5,618,056
Los Angeles Herald	5,617,360
Newark News	5,448,463

LEADERS IN CLASSIFIED LINAGE
Morning and Sunday

Chicago Tribune	4,756,614
Los Angeles Times	4,647,552
Los Angeles Examiner	4,042,938
New York World	3,856,350
Miami Herald	3,702,740
Philadelphia Inquirer	3,686,400
New York Times	3,230,404
Rochester Democrat & Chronicle	3,228,537
San Francisco Examiner	3,135,162
Baltimore Sun	3,131,134
Cleveland Plain Dealer	2,663,283
Detroit Free Press	2,480,464

LEADERS IN CLASSIFIED LINAGE
Evening and Sunday

Detroit News	4,052,938
Brooklyn Eagle	3,211,736
Washington Star	2,912,271
Oakland Tribune	2,845,094
Pittsburgh Press	2,601,746
St. Louis Post-Dispatch	2,532,600
Columbus Dispatch	2,109,160
Seattle Times	1,992,993
Milwaukee Journal	1,940,235
Houston Chronicle	1,840,202
Dayton News	1,557,010
Denver Post	1,338,288

LEADERS IN CLASSIFIED LINAGE
Evening—Six Day

Newark News	2,715,290
Detroit News	2,567,964
Chicago News	2,398,615
Brooklyn Eagle	2,397,880
Washington Star	2,262,673
Philadelphia Bulletin	2,192,297
Baltimore Sun	2,040,612
Buffalo News	1,987,242
Los Angeles Herald	1,813,266
Cleveland Press	1,741,370
Indianapolis News	1,710,828
Kansas City Star	1,498,566

SPOKESMAN'S END SEEN IN BARTON TALK

White House Correspondents Write Protest to President After A. P. Carried Quoted Interview by Ad Agent

By BART CAMPBELL

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 23.—A number of Washington newspaper cor respondents who cover the white hous regularly joined today in a written pro test to President Coolidge because o his having granted an extended inter view in which he permitted quotatio marks to be used freely to Bruce Barto a magazine editor, writing a series c copyrighted articles for the Associate Press.

The letter was signed by George Dur no, as acting President of the Whit House Correspondents Association, an others not connected with the associate press. Durno represents the Internatior al News Service.

The letter expressed surprise that th President had permitted an "outsic writer" to furnish to a single news ser ice a series of exclusive statements b himself, in the face of the fixed rules c silence imposed upon Washington co respondents by the "official spokesmar himself.

This means the end of the "offici spokesman," predicted David Lawrenc noted Washington correspondent, wl joined in the protest.

The President once rebuked Mr. Lav rence for taking stenographic notes at o of the conferences with the "offici spokesman" at the White House, and t President then declared emphatically h did not desire to be quoted directly.

Protesting correspondents compla that during the long weeks at Pa Smith's, they were unable to quote t President, and yet Mr. Barton, an "ou sider," was able to step in upon the e of the President's return to Washingt and quote Mr. Coolidge to the extent many thousand of words revealing t most intimate details of the Presiden career and private life as well as of t President's personal opinions.

ARTHUR T. WILSON

Arthur T. Wilson, 71, who died r cently at his home in Dallas, was t first advertising manager for the Dall News. Mr. Wilson was associated w the A. H. Belo & Co. organization f more than 16 years, entering their serv in 1885 as manager of the Houston bure of the Galveston and Dallas News.

STORM STRIKES FLORIDA PRESS HEAVY BLOW

But, With Property Damaged, Dailies Carry On—Kennedy, Miami Herald M. E., Says Newspaper Situation Now Normal—City Prepares for Winter Trade

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 22.—Damage to Florida newspaper plants in the wake of the West Indian hurricane was estimated today at hundreds of thousands of dollars, but the "business as usual" signs were already hanging over the wrecked and dismantled doors.

One newspaper man, Alton Bush Little of the Miami Beach Beacon was killed.

"Miami is smiling through," was the comment of O. W. Kennedy, managing editor of the Miami Herald, in a statement to EDITOR & PUBLISHER today reporting the newspaper situation practically normal.

The Herald's plant and that of the Miami Daily News are intact. The greatest loss to these two papers lies in the destruction of stored print paper exposed to the torrential rain, which accompanied the hurricane.

Water swept through broken windows of the Herald building. All linotypes must be taken apart for cleaning and a great quantity of paper was destroyed.

Reports that the Miami News tower was leaning at a 20 degree angle are untrue. The building bore the brunt of the storm well.

The plant of the Miami Tribune was unroofed and the building flooded. The monetary loss has not yet been figured, but it is certain that much of the mechanical equipment will have to be repaired.

The sumptous plant of the Hollywood News was wrecked. Loss of the Miami Daily News was put at $20,000. The plant of the Miami Riviera was demolished as was that of the Miami Post, and the Miami Beach Beacon, all weeklies.

The Jacksonville (Fla.) Times Union loaned the Herald three cars of newsprint to help out in the emergency.

One Miami newspaper, the Daily News, failed to miss an edition during the progress of the hurricane. The Daily News' editions of Saturday and Sunday consisted of one sheet, printed on a proof press from advertising type and distributed as bulletins to be posted in store windows and strategic points in suburbs and neighboring towns. The first of these editions announced a $5,000 contribution to head a relief fund.

The Herald printed a four-page paper on Saturday, but none Sunday. On Monday all papers in the city were published. The Herald of that date was printed on the Palm Beach Post, the Tribune by the Palm Beach Times and the News issued a four-page newspaper at the plant of the Herald, which was first to receive power. The Herald also printed editions for the Tribune pending extensive repairs.

Little, of the Palm Beach Beacon who was killed, sought shelter with Kent Watson, publisher of that paper, in the lobby of the Offord Hotel. Little was crushed by a falling beam. Watson was hurt in the same crash.

During a lull in the storm Saturday morning many members of newspaper staffs made efforts to reach their offices but were forced to seek shelter when the hurricane began its second attack on the stricken community.

By Wednesday the papers all were nearing normal conditions. The four and six page paper of the first days of the week had given place to eight, 10 and 12 pages, all devoted to local news.

On Wednesday the first Associated Press wire leaped into life and the full report began coming through without interruption shortly after noon. On that day The News resumed publication of its pink sporting extra, with baseball results. Its own presses were in use Wednesday.

Immediately after the wind had begun to die down on Saturday an emergency restaurant for relief workers was established at the News Tower with Mrs. Ross A. Reeder, wife of the publisher, in charge. Here many were fed during the early hours of rescue and rehabilitation.

The greatest difficulty was experienced in compiling authentic lists of the dead. Many of the bodies remained unidentified four days. After the storm had blown itself out reporters stationed at the various undertaking establishments worked night and day in the effort to name the victims of the wind.

Yachts and other water craft were piled almost in the front door of the Miami Daily News plant. The tall building withstood the terrific gale, suffering but minor damage despite first reports that the huge tower was twisted and in danger of crashing. The tower is of steel and terra cotta.

Staffs of all the papers were on constant duty at the publication offices during the three days following the storm. Taking up their quarters at the scene of operations and sleeping, when infrequent opportunities for sleep would come, on desks in the offices.

One of the most amazing incidents of the recovery from storm was the circulation rumors every few hours calculated to frighten the suffering population with the warning that the storm was about to return or that a tidal wave was bearing down on the stricken district. The newspapers succeeded in allaying these fears when they reassured their readers with statements from the local weather office.

Mr. Kennedy's reassuring message to northern publishers and advertisers follows:

"Miami is smiling through. She had waited 30 years for a hurricane and when it came she dared it to do its worst. For eight hours the storm did its 'darndest' to wreck us. When it was over we found Miami had veritably lifted its hat in the form of 20,000 roofs in bidding it a grim farewell. Then Miami donned its bathing suits and tropical attire and climbed on top the buildings with hammers that have since been clicking their music to cheerful workers who smile and say, 'we mustn't let our winter visitors see Miami partially unclothed.'

"Already half the marks of the storm are gone. True, there was loss of life and many injured, but the number is comparatively small when one remembers eight hours of hurling and swirling of the fiercest hurricane ever known in America.

"It will take twenty or thirty million dollars to rebuild and repair, but the money that the outside world sends for that purpose will be considered as a loan and will be repaid.

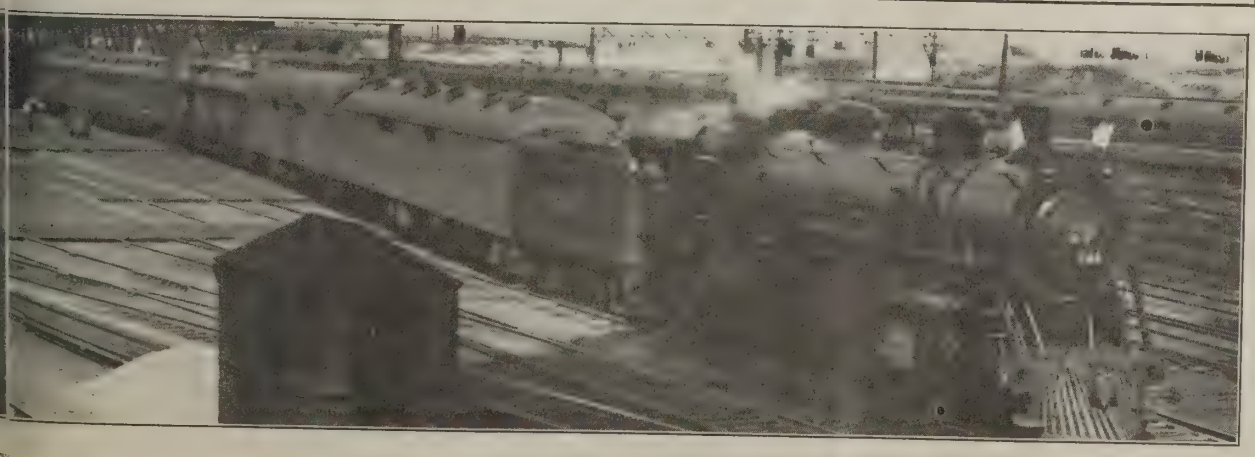
"Tuesday found the newspaper situation practically normal except that no Press Association news was then being received. The nearest wires are at West Palm Beach, 70 miles north.

"'What are the big leagues doing and how about Dempsey and Tunney?' was the most sought after information.

"It should be known that Miami did not suffer a single moment for food, which was to be had at normal prices or gratis. Many signs were up saying 'Pay if you can, but if you can't take what you need.'

"This was perhaps the only disaster in history unaccompanied by agony. There were no tears except for the dead and injured. The Miami spirit had been dominant throughout. Banks opened Monday and more money was deposited than was taken out. In fact the entire spirit of recovery has been that of haste, in order not to let our incoming winter crowd see runs in our stockings or rips in our trousers.

"Someone called out the militia in the night after the storm. When the people got out on the streets Sunday morning they were a little surprised to see the soldier boys with their big guns. The soldiers likewise were nonplussed by the cheerfulness of the populace. There were no looters to shoot nor excitable people to control. By the time the streets were filled with girls in bathing suits and Sunday frocks, the soldier boys experienced their greatest difficulty in warding off shots from flirtatious feminine eyes.



"Above is the same warm sun, out to the east is the same old Atlantic ocean, and from it is wafting in the gentle trade wind that has made Miami famous. Thirty years was a long time to wait for the predicted hurricane, but it was a real one when it came. The thousands who lived through it wouldn't have missed it for all it cost, but none would wish for another at no cost at all.

"It would do the world good to see how Miami is smiling through."

W. A. Payne, general manager of the Palm Beach Post, who was in New York this week on business, communicated immediately with his paper and learned that only slight damage was done to the plant by the storm. Sunday's edition was held up by the crippling of the city's power service, but a small paper was printed in the plant of the Lake Worth Herald and Leader.

"We were prepared, in a sense, for the emergency, by experience gained in the July storm," he said. "At that time we were unable to use our plant and made publication arrangements with the Herald and Leader. Our chief loss in the present storm was newsprint damaged by water."

CHICAGO DAILY SENDS RELIEF TRAIN TO FLORIDA

photograph shows the special relief train chartered by th Chicago Herald and Examiner leaving the Chicago terminal carrying doctors, nurses and supplies for the relief of stricken residents of the Florida hurricane zone.

AUTO SALES MANAGER BLAMES EDITORS FOR FLOOD OF FREE PUBLICITY

G. F. Lord, Star Car Division, Durant Motors, Inc., Claims Puffs Are Created to Satisfy Newspapers' Demand—Dailies Should Dump Them, He Says

ENTIRE blame for the economic waste involved in the printing of useless automotive free puffery, was laid on the desks of the nation's newspaper editors this week by G. F. Lord, general sales manager, Star Car Division, Durant Motors, Inc.

He wanted, he said, to clarify the position of his company on the important subject of free publicity, and therefore he wrote a statement shifting responsibility for the mess from his shoulders to the men supposed to select copy for their newspapers on a basis of news value alone.

"An automobile," he declared, "is not entitled to any more news support than any other commodity, and a properly conducted newspaper will not give it.

Yet, he insisted, newspapers demand auto puffs to such an extent that the publicity bureau of his concern is frequently forced to issue items of little news value, simply to furnish sufficient supply.

In conclusion Mr. Lord emphatically asserted that puff publication had no influence whatsoever over paid space advertising plans.

Mr. Lord's statement follows in full:

"We do not think there should be any relation whatever between legitimate news of the automobile industry and advertising.

"If the material furnished by an automobile manufacturer has any news value, the newspaper should be glad to receive it because there is no other subject in which the American public is more interested than in the automobile. If the item has no news value, it should not be published, no matter how much advertising of the manufacturer's product may be running in the newspaper.

"We realize that this is a somewhat idealistic position. We are aware that many papers charge a higher rate for automobile advertising on the theory that considerable space in their news columns is expected by the advertiser in connection with his advertising. This rate attitude on the part of the newspapers is not correct according to our viewpoint.

"An automobile is not entitled to any more news support than any other commodity, and a properly conducted newspaper will not give it. The question of how much space is devoted to information about automobiles should be based entirely on the news value of the items.

"We, as the manufacturer, are constantly receiving requests from newspapers for items of interest regarding our business and newspapers are constantly requesting of our dealers publicity items regarding the car they handle and which they advertise in the local newspapers.

"As it is utterly impossible to furnish live news items to the extent that our dealers demand to meet the requests of local newspapers, we frequently authorize the issuance of an item which in our opinion has very little news value but which seems to meet the requirements of the dealers and of the local newspapers, and which, in our opinion, the editor of the newspaper should refuse to publish unless he desires to do a favor to the local advertiser by giving him some free advertising support or he desires to justify the high rate he charges for automobile advertising.

"In short, we will continue to furnish publicity items as such and as much real news as possible, leaving the newspapers entirely free to use or refuse as they see fit.

"We do not consider ourselves under any obligation whatsoever to spend money in advertising in a newspaper because it publishes either legitimate news items or pure publicity regarding our product, nor would we withhold advertising from a newspaper because they did not publish these. If a newspaper publisher feels that the publication of a large amount of publicity matter and news regarding the automobile industry tends to build up his advertising patronage, that is obviously a matter of business judgment on his part.

"We consider that this company, as a whole, is endeavoring to work very closely along the line of good editorial practice in the quality of items we have sent out, and have always been very glad to work very closely with automobile editors, but we have also tried to make it very clear to everybody concerned that our use of space as a manufacturer, or our dealers' use of space locally as a local advertiser is and should be entirely independent of the use or refusal of publicity items sent out by us."

NEWSPAPERS PRAISED FOR FIGHTING FRAUDS

Better Business Bureau Managers Meeting in Detroit Commend Press for Co-operation in Informing Public

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 22.—The growing interest of newspapers in serving and protecting their readers and their advertisers from various types of fraud and misrepresentation received continuous and outspoken appreciation from many of the managers of Better Business Bureaus who are attending the annual national conference of the National Better Business Bureau Commission, at Detroit. In many of the 42 cities where these Bureaus are operated, advertising departments have not only applied intelligent and effective self-censorship to their columns but have donated valuable display space for the education of investors and consumers through Better Business Bureau advertisements.

News departments, too, said Bureau managers, fight fraud by exploiting the news angles of "Before You Invest, Investigate," and by interpreting to the public the standards of business practice worked out with industries by the Better Business Bureaus. Such newspaper co-operation was repeatedly rated as a tremendous aid in promoting satisfactory relations between buyer and seller and between investors and those who offer legitimate investment.

Fifty-one Bureau executives participated in the conference. Among speakers were Kenneth Barnard, Detroit, on "Printers Ink Statute"; Harry Riehl, St. Louis, "Fabric Tests"; George Husser, Kansas City, "Protection of Rural Districts"; Ferris Miller, Los Angeles, "Mattress Inspection"; Elmer Hertel, Oakland, "Media Service"; George W. Chamberlain, Jr., New York, "Accuracy"; Hazel Britton, Seattle, "Advertising Ordinances"; E. W. Gallagher and George Langland, of Dayton and Boston, "Comparative Prices"; and Dale Brown, of Cleveland, R. W. Test, of Baltimore, Hugh Smith, of Philadelphia, Flint Grinnell, of Chicago, on "Publicity."

Members attending the conference were guests of the Financial Advertisers Association Tuesday at Luncheon. Characteristic of cordial relations between newspapers and Better Business Bureaus was the entertainment of the entire conference by the three newspapers of Detroit at dinner and the theater on Wednesday evening. Speeches were barred, but Kenneth Barnard told the managers how their Detroit newspaper hosts had steadfastly barred from their columns certain vending machine promotions which had attempted in vain to reach the Detroit public by proposed full-page spreads, terms cash in advance.

"The public seldom hears of this type of newspaper service," said Barnard. E. L. Greene, managing director of the National Better Business Bureau, also evaded the cloture rule long enough to state that any Better Business Bureau which enjoys such newspaper co-operation is thrice armed.

NEW TABLOID PLANNED FOR BUFFALO

Publishing Corporation Formed with C. A. Finnegan Former Post Publisher Among Directors—Balch General Manager

Publication of a new daily and Sunday tabloid at Buffalo will begin on or about Oct. 4. The newspaper, which will probably be known as the Press, is to be published in the plant of the Buffalo Evening Post, which suspended nearly a year ago. C. A. Finnegan, publisher of the Post, will be identified with the new corporation.

Incorporation papers of the new publishing company, to be known as the Buffalo Tabloid Publishing corporation, were filed Monday at Buffalo, showing capital of $275,000. The directors named are Mr. Finnegan, Frank C. Balch, E. J. Stratton, J. C. Bush and Nathan Bertelkamp.

The new daily will sell for two cents and the Sunday edition for five cents, according to present plans. Many features now appearing in the New York Graphic will be used. Mr. Balch, former telegraph editor of the Buffalo Star, will be general manager, it is understood, and will assemble a staff including former employes of the Buffalo Courier and Express who have been without positions since the merger of these newspapers was completed.

Buffalo now has but three dailies, the Post and the Star having suspended within the past year and the Express having been merged with the Courier. The city has had no tabloid since the Star's suspension.

IOWA WEEKLIES ORGANIZE

Will Open Office to Solicit National Advertising

Forty publishers, representing weekly newspapers from all over the state, attended the organization meeting of the United Newspapers of Iowa in Des Moines last week and elected W. C. Jarnigan, Storm Lake Pilot-Tribune, president; Justin Barry, Cherokee Times, vice-president; S. W. Needham, Eldora Ledger, secretary; and Paul C. Woods, Sheldon Mail, treasurer. The executive committee includes these officers with M. L. Curtis, Knoxville Journal, Charles K. Needham, Grinnell Register and R. P. Conner, Denison Review.

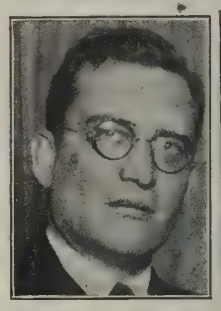
The first activity of the new society will be the establishment of an office in Des Moines in charge of an executive who will undertake a campaign for national advertising in the member-papers.

FIRST GOLDFIELD PAPER

Mine Workers in Northern Ontario Print from Mimeograph

The first newspaper in the Rouyn goldfields in Northern Ontario appeared Sept. 15, published by four young men who worked in the Horne mine during the day and prepared the news and advertisements at night. It was printed on a mimeograph machine.

Paper for the edition was carried from Chemins to Rouyn, a distance of 30 miles by one of the proprietors, the bundle weighing approximately 80 pounds.



DAILY HOLDS OPEN HOUSE

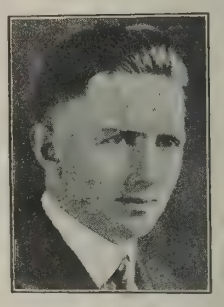
Readers of the Rockford (Ill.) Daily Register-Gazette were invited to an open house held by the newspaper Sept. 14 and 15, in honor of its 35th anniversary. A special edition was issued by the Register-Gazette Sept. 13, describing the methods of newspaper making.

3 NEW AD COMMISSION MEMBERS NAMED

Strong, Swartz and Burnett New I. A A. Executives—Reorganized Commission to Hold First Meet Nov. 15-16

C. K. Woodbridge, president of th International advertising Association, thi week announced his appointment of th

WALTER A. STRONG



H. R. SWARTZ

three representatives who will serve the Advertising Commission of the I. A. A. representing the sustaining member

They are: Walter A. Strong, publisher, Chicago Daily News; H. R. Swartz, president of R. Hoe & Co., New York, and Verne Burnett, secretary of the advertising committee of the General Motors Corporation, Detroit.

Mr. Woodbridge has made these a pointments in co formity with t newly amend constitution of t A s s o c i a t i o adopted at Phil delphia in Ju which has add 34 new membe to the Advertisi Commission. T Commission , i cludes in its me bership also re resentatives of organized I. A. departments, cluding both t buyers and sellers of advertising, rep sentatives from the National Better Bu ness Bureau, from the Federation Women's Advertising Clubs, and eighteen club district organizations in t and thirteen other countries.

VERNE BURNETT

Announcement was also made this we by E. H. Kittredge of Hornblower Weeks of Boston, secretary of the Adv tising Commission, that the Commiss would hold its fall metting in Chicago Monday and Tuesday, Nov. 15 and It will be the first meeting of the Co mission since the changes were made the constitution which added to its me bership.

The chairman of the Commission is Frank McClure, of Chicago, vice-presid of Albert Frank & Co. Heads of various trade groups represented in Advertising Commission have just b announced. They include men promin in every advertising field. Among th are:

Advertising art and graphic arts, W ter D. Teague; agricultural publishe Henry Morgenthau, Jr.; car cards, Me B. Bates; directories, G. Prather Kna lithographers, C. G. Munro; market and distribution, H. D. Crippen; mot pictures, Arthur Dunn; newspaper p lishers' representatives, Harold Stret outdoor advertising, H. E. Mitch public utilities, M. S. Sloan; radio adv tising, G. C. Furness; specialties, Ed A. Shank; business papers, Karl Ma church advertising, Charles Stel country newspapers, Emmet Finley; rect mail, B. Lichtenberg; financial adv tising, L. A. Mershon; international b ness, Burton C. Budd; magazine, A. Carev; metropolitan, E. S. Friendly; tional advertising, Allan Brown; resea J. George Frederick; technical adver ing, A. W. Schrage; window disp Lee H. Bristol.

HOW HURRICANE NEWS WAS TOLD TO NATION

Press Association Reporters Fought Gale to Reach Wires—Airplanes Rushed Pictures North—Community Advertisers to Carry On—Relief Fostered by Press

AMERICA'S gigantic news machine concentrated all its power in spreading information by word and picture of Florida's disaster this week.

And as quickly as the bad news was in headlines, the nation's press galvanized relief measures into action.

Reporters fought the elements to reach wire's with their messages of ruin. While the hurricane whipped and stung, they improvised radio sets to transmit their big assignment. Airplanes bucked head winds to be first in the North with pictures.

Those papers in the devastated area were not stilled. With plants damaged they carried on, preventing panic by publishing handbills to take the place of their regular editions.

Advertising programs planned by community promoters, such as Horace Stilwell, publisher of the Hollywood News, will be carried through in northern newspapers despite the havoc of the storm, advertising agencies directing the accounts reported.

News of the disaster broke dramatically in the New York office of the United Press, which claims first news direct from Miami. Those in charge were about ready to give "thirty" on the Saturday night wire. All knew of the hurricane but wire communication with Miami was cut off. Then by radio via the S.S. Siboney and the Independent Wireless Company, came the following message from Alfred P. Reck of the Miami Tribune and United Press correspondent in the "Magic City":

"Miami in ruins after worst hurricane in history of country. Seventy-five known dead. Property damage $100,000,000. More than 2,000 injured. Help needed badly. Hurricane hit first about two o'clock Saturday from northwest then changed and blew from south until three o'clock in afternoon. Barge with 5 on board sunk in harbor. Huge freighter driven high and dry in Royal Palm Park. Huge 20 story Myer Kaiser Bank Building wrecked. Miami Tribune wrecked. City docks completely destroyed. All boats in harbor sunk including Nohab formerly owned by Experman Kaiser. Food, medical supplies, and troops needed

(Signed) Reck."

While the storm was in progress, Reck had managed to get in touch with a small radio transmitting station which relayed the news to the steamer, then passing Miami.

After filing this first dispatch, Reck, with the aid of four men, cut his way through the storm-wrecked area to West Palm Beach where he telephoned an eyewitness story to the U. P. Atlanta bureau. When the full force of the storm had broken over Miami, Reck sought immediately every means of getting the news out to the United Press. Finding all wires down and train service stopped, he realized that the radio was the only means left through which he could communicate with the press association. And it was through a make-shift radio sending set put together by the Tropical Radio station's staff at Hialeah after their wireless towers had been flattened by the hurricane, that the news of the disaster in Miami was transmitted to the world.

Preceding this message, it was necessary to fix up some sort of sending set that might communicate with points outside the devastated area. Led by Mr. Bourne, superintendent of the Hialeah station, four men of the Tropical Radio staff there, carrying repair equipment, wended their way through the worst part of the gale to the power house, six miles away. All of the connecting links were down. The hurricane whipped and stung with an angry lash.

At one time the gale lifted Mr. Bourne from his feet and hurled him into the everglades, 20 feet away. When the men reached the power plant, only one out of the five huge towers was standing. The men lay flat on the ground and watched the remaining tower swing and sway while the hurricane played a death tune through the girders. Then it snapped, breaking off about five feet from the ground.

The power plant, using oil engines, was found to be slightly flooded but otherwise all right. The radio men, determined that the communication would be established if humanly possible, rigged up an aerial by stringing wires from the stump of the tower to a palm tree. In the meantime, Mr. Bourne and an assistant were in the power house assembling a makeshift sending apparatus.

The receiving set was working and the operators could hear ships talking and carrying messages of the hurricane and wondering how Miami had fared. None of the ships knew. More equipment was needed to complete the sending apparatus and so Mr. Bourne again battled the hurricane, walked, crawled and fought his way back over the six miles of flooded and wind-swept glade land. Finally he returned with the needed material. The sending set was erected on a short wave length basis, 600 meters. It was practically impossible to reach a definite station with Reck's message, so the operator sent the message broadcast with the request that it be relayed to the United Press at Washington or New York.

Starting here, Raymond D. Hutchins, of Chicago, wireless operator on the Ward liner Siboney, tells of how he received the despatch. When he was abreat of Miami, he says he picked up an extremely faint call. He tuned in with his sensitive receiver and heard:

"Can you take care of messages to New York?"

Hutchins replied that he could. Then for more than two hours the little station at Hialeah repeated the message Reck had written. Finally it was complete and was transmitted to the Independent Wireless station at East Hampton, Long Island, whence it was 'phoned in to the United Press at 1:45 A. M., Eastern Standard time.

Arthur Degreve, Jack Cuddy and L. B. Mickle were in charge of the bureau of the United Press and United News in Atlanta, through which all storm news was cleared.

Barry Faris, associate editor of International News Service, this week was unable to tell the newspaper story behind the story, he said. A tragedy blocked one effort made by this news association to cover the catastrophe. One of many wires sent out by I. N. S. in New York to Florida to get the news was addressed to Kent Watson, a former member of the staff, now publisher of the Miami Beach Beacon. Watson telegraphed in reply:

"My secretary Alton Little killed and I too badly injured to cover. Atlanta Georgian crew taking care of you. Death list will exceed 150 and property damage conservative at $70,000,000."

R. P. Mitchell, Miami correspondent of the Associated Press, and Reese Amis, telegraph editor of the Miami Daily News, were two newspaper heroes of the disaster. They were among the first to get the news to the outside world.

Torn and tangled communication lines, roads strewn with wreckage and debris, and blinding rain confronted the men, when, after taking a hasty check of the toll of life and property, they began their tortuous journey to a telegraph office at West Palm Beach, Fla. There Mitchell filed his A.P. report, and Amis sold a "special" to the New York Times.

They had walked eight miles from Miami to Coral Gables for an automobile to bring them to West Palm Beach. Finding their automobile wrecked they commandeered a delivery truck from the Miami Daily News and began their journey at 4:15 P.M. Saturday.

In the face of blinding rain they picked their way through woods, swamps and over railroad tracks, often encountering water so deep that it rose above the floor boards of their truck.

All along the sixty mile route they found towns wrecked, telephone poles and wires blocking the roads with a tangled mass of wreckage, and were forced many times to climb to the top of the truck and clear off broken limbs of trees.

Six miles south of Fort Lauderdale, their truck became mired in a muddy bank. They walked the railroad track to Fort Lauderdale, and slept Saturday night in the Women's Club there with 50 refugees. Water was doled out in half glass portions.

Sunday morning they borrowed a small automobile and continued their journey to West Palm Beach where on their arrival at 11:30 A.M., they sent out the first meager despatches of the loss of life and property in the hurricane.

Mitchell is 24 years old. He had performed heroic service last July on the occasion of the hurricane that lashed the Bahamas, taking a toll of 150 lives and causing $8,000,000 property damage. This story was told in the Aug. 14 issue of EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

A graduate of Vanderbilt University, Mitchell has worked for the Savannah (Ga.) Morning News and the Nashville (Tenn.) Banner. He joined the A.P. in October, 1925, and within a few weeks was transferred to Miami.

R. S. Pickens and M. B. Alexander, A.P. staff men, who were dispatched to the storm area by airplane, brought news direct from Miami, Sept. 20.

They started from Atlanta Sunday in a plane piloted by Beeler Blevins of Candler Field. Stopping at Tiffin, Ga., and Palatka, Fla., for refueling. Nothing more was heard from them until Monday, when their story came through from Miami. The airplane had to buck head winds and storms en route.

Getting pictures out of Florida was a thrilling neck and neck race, with claims and counter-claims of beats filling the air. Acme Newspictures, International Newsreel, and Pacific & Atlantic Photos, got pictures into New York within a few hours of each other on Sept. 21. Both Acme and International admit P. & A. was first into New York with Florida pictures. These first pictures came from St. Petersburg, Fla. Rushed by train to Columbia, S. C., they were carried from there by plane in night flight to New York via Washington. International had first Miami pictures with Acme and P. & A. close second and third respectively.

Philip London, Miami business man, brought International's films to Manhattan. He had taken pictures of the storm with Roy Pack, Miami cameraman.

P. & A. had a total of five airplanes working on the picture story. Telephoto was also used with good effect. All together 15 pictures were sent over the telephone wires to Chicago on Sept. 21 by this one firm, while eight went through to the Pacific Coast. P. & A.'s Miami pictures came up by train, arriving on Tuesday on the Havana Special.

Acme met the Florida train at Washington and brought its pictures to New York Tuesday afternoon. Service to Southern newspapers was speeded up by this syndicate, which distributed from Jacksonville.

Peter Macgregor, Acme cameraman, left New York at noon Sunday, Sept. 19, to fly to Miami for pictures, and was badly shaken up when his plane crashed in a Florida swamp.

With Charles M. McLean, of the reportorial staff of the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, aboard as a passenger-mechanic one of the first relief ships for the hurricane stricken zone of Florida, piloted by Lieut. Clayton Bissell, took

(Continued on page 61)

NEWS MAN TELLS OF AIRPLANE DASH TO FLORIDA WHICH ENDED IN SWAMP

J. B. PHILLIPS, New York Herald Tribune staff reporter, with Arthur Caperton, pilot, and Peter McGregor, Acme Newspictures photographer, left New York on Sunday afternoon for Florida in an airplane.

On Monday evening, the following message was received from Phillips by the Herald-Tribune:

"MELBOURNE, Fla., Sept. 20.—Our plane fell in a Florida swamp at 5:30 this afternoon, and was put out of commission. None was hurt. The motor quit without warning when we were 1,000 feet up, and Arthur Caperton, the pilot, banked over woods into the only clear space, a desolate swamp filled with stumps. All of us knew we were going to nose over. McGregor and I were in the cockpit ahead of the pilot.

"Caperton came down slowly, nose up, and nose and axle cleared stump in the path. Tail hit and the plane nosed over. McGregor rolled out, wrenched his arm. My feet were under the cargo but I slipped out head first. Caperton who had on a safety belt did not fall out. He skinned his nose, McGregor wrenched his right arm, and I have a stiff neck and knee.

"The hurricane had covered the country with three and four feet of water and a house nearby appeared to be deserted. We thought ourselves lost in the swamp, 100 miles from Daytona Beach, our last stop, and 100 miles northwest of Palm Beach. Edward Hunter, eleven, appeared on horseback with a pack of hounds and led us through the swamp to his father's car.

"A rain and wind forced us down in Daytona Beach at 3:50 where we stayed an hour. Reports said another storm was coming tomorrow and also that Miami was without food and water. We loaded two big jugs of water, a parcel of food, which with cameras were piled on McGregor's feet and mine.

"The plane, a Curtiss Oriole, was working faultlessly until the motors quit suddenly. Caperton thinks the camshaft bearing was at fault. There was no good landing place for miles as we were over heavy woods and when he shouted to us to 'sit tight' we saw he was heading for the swamp. He knew we couldn't miss stumps so he put the nose up to reduce the speed.

"We left Richmond at 7 o'clock this morning and had been averaging between 90 and 100 miles an hour against adverse winds, stopping only at Camp Bragg and Savannah. Reports along the route indicated that conditions at Miami were growing worse because of lack of food, water and sanitation. We are the first New York newspapermen to get this far. We were just entering the storm struck territory when the plane fell somewhere in the heart of Brevard County. Fuselage of plane ripped open by stump and will be long job to get it out of swamp. We waded mile or so through water to knees.

"Left Richmond ahead of plane bringing antitoxin, but not seen it since and heard no report of contagion.

"There was nothing serious in mishap, pilot did his stuff so well nobody even scarred badly."

DAILIES PREPARE FOR HALL-MILLS TRIAL

New York American Rents House to Accommodate Staff of 12—200 Expected to Attend Somerville Court for Press

Elaborate preparations are being made to cover the Hall-Mills murder trial, which New York editors unanimously agree will be one of the greatest newspaper stories of the decade. It is expected some 200 reporters from press associations and metropolitan newspapers will be in Somerville, N. J., late next month or early in November, when the trial opens, and rooms in the sleepy New Jersey village are at a premium.

The New York American, in consequence, has rented a house at 36 North Bridge street, which will be fitted up to take care of its correspondents. Direct telephone and telegraph wires are to be installed and rooms will be available for 12 reporters. The American's address on Bridge street is only about 500 feet from the court house.

The American headquarters, it is planned, will be a newspaper man's utopia as far as hotel service is concerned. A housekeeper with a staff of servants is to be engaged, with orders to be ready at a moment's notice to serve meals. Thus a reporter coming in at 3 A.M. may order a five course dinner, and, if he wishes to sleep until 3 the next afternoon, he can get up then to a regular breakfast.

Vincent Byers, city editor of the New York Evening Post, said his paper was planning to engage several rooms in a Somerville boarding house to be fitted up as a branch news office with wire and telephone connections. The same procedure is planned by the New York Times. The New York Herald Tribune, according to Endicott Rich, city editor, will retain the rooms it now has in the Somerset Hotel, but as yet has not completed plans relative to wire facilities.

The New York Sun will only have a small staff in Somerville, Edmund Bartnett, city editor, said. James W. Barrett, city editor, would not discuss the plans being made by the New York World.

The tabloids are more secretive regarding their plans than the standard dailies. George Macdonald, city editor of the New York Daily Mirror, said he expected about eight camera men and six reporters would be assigned to the story. The city editor of the New York News refused to talk, and the New York Evening Graphic was also silent.

A party was given by newspaper men and women in a hired farmhouse on the outskirts of Somerville on Sept. 14, the fourth anniversary of the crime. The party started at 10.20 in the evening, the hour which theorists set as the time when the murder was committed. Some 100 reporters attended. The party continued until 7 o'clock the following morning, the day Sen. Simpson, special prosecutor, brought witnesses before the grand jury and obtained the four indictments. Crabapples were given out as favors.

House rented by New York American for murder trial headquarters.

The American has engaged Theodore Dreiser, novelist and author of "An American Tragedy," and Mary Roberts Rinehart, novelist, to cover the trial. Dreiser's latest book was based on the Gillette murder case, and contains a courtroom scene, declared by critics to be a marvel of reporting.

"Billy" Sunday will be a special writer on the same story for the New York Journal.

Charlotte Mills, daughter of the slain woman, has signed up with Famous Features Syndicate, Inc., New York, to cover the trial next month. Miss Mills will write her impressions of the trial daily, sketching her own reactions against the background of her personal interest and intimate knowledge of the case.

INTERNATIONAL BUILDS MILLS

Project Started in New Brunswick, Canada, by Paper Company

A program of expansion, which includes erection of newsprint mills and harnessing of the St. John River for production of electricity has been started by the International Paper Company in New Brunswick, Canada.

International Paper for more than ten years has had a two-thirds interest in the company that controlled perhaps one of the largest undeveloped water power sites in North America. Arrangements for developing and financing the project will be similar to that governing the Gatineau River project in Quebec, which through the formation of a subsidiary, the St. John River Power Company, has been organized. All common stock is owned by International Paper.

It is probable that later financing will be done to provide for construction of a hydro-electric plant and a dam.

INDIANAPOLIS WINS 1927 I. T. U. MEETING

Progressive Delegates Defeated in Vote on Laws Report and Two Amendments to Pension Statutes

Indianapolis was awarded the 1927 convention of the International Typographical Union at the close of the annual convention in Colorado Springs last week.

The unfavorable report of the committee on laws on the proposal submitted by the progressive delegates was concurred in by a vote of 156 to 131.

After several hours of spirited debate, the administration forces won 56 to 45 on the proposal to submit the proposals of Delegates King and Hermann to a biartisan commission of four men, two to be named by the president-elect and two by the secretary treasurer. These proposals include two amendments to the pension laws by Mr. Hermann.

The old age pension laws will be amended by the commission and the pension reserve fund strengthened.

GIVES FUND FOR RESEARCH

McGraw-Hill Company Donates $5,000 a Year to Harvard

The McGraw-Hill Publishing Company has recently established a fund of $5,000 a year to be known as the James H. McGraw Fund to Aid in Improving Practices of Industrial Marketing. The fund, which is given in honor of James H. McGraw, is being established at the Harvard Business School for the collection of cases in industrial marketing and advertising. It is the first fund to be established for the purpose of obtaining case material in the field of industrial marketing, providing an opportunity for the school to investigate the problems of scientific marketing practices.

FOUND IMPORTANT WITNESS

ABOVE is pictured Miss Gladys Calvert, of the New York Daily Mirro staff who found Mrs. Mary Demarest the woman witness in the Halls-Mill case at New Brunswick who was credited with having brought about the indictment of Henry Stevens.

The finding of this witness was deeme so important by the State that Miss Calvert was congratulated by Senator Alexander Simpson, special deputy attorne general and by Commissioner John J Beggans, of Jersey City, who sent Cap John Torpey, one of his skilled detective to go with Miss Calvert on her secon visit to Mrs. Demarest.

This visit was made the morning tha the Somerset County Grand jury indicte Mrs. F. S. Hall and three relatives Running down clues in the Hall-Mills case in Somerville, Jersey, is occupying the attention of many newspaper men and women these days. In the group shown above on the steps of the Somerville jail are: First row: (Left to right) Floyd Acuff, New York Daily News; Will Weiner, New York Evening Journal; Frank, Roth, New York Evening World; Mazie Clemens, New York World; Bruce Rae, New York Times. Second row: "Bill" Capelli, Philadelphia Bulletin; Ray Krimm, Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger; Edward O'Toole, New York World; Norman Klein, New York Evening Post. Third row: F. Raymond Daniell, New York Evening Post; Franklin Ritchie, Standard News Association; Robert Conway, New York American; Wilbur Rogers, Brooklyn Eagle. Top row: George Kenny, New Brunswick Home News; James Major, jail warden; and his assistant. Names of the cameramen on the right of the picture were not supplied when it was taken exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week.

ATTORNEY ATTACKS CRIME OF LESE MAJESTE

Leon R. Yankwich in Address Before Los Angeles Bar Association Charges Some U. S. Public Officers Are Drunk with Power—Denounces Them as Un-American Upholding Free Press

A CHARGE that some American legislators and public officials have "become drunk with the power given to them during the war" is contained in a learned address on the doctrine of privileg made by Leon R. Yankwitch, Los Angeles lawyer, before the bar association of his city.

Mr. Yankwich, who is professor of law at St. Vincent School of Law, Loyola College, strongly attacked the crime of lese majeste, upholding the liberal American system of freedom of the press, which he sees menaced by those who have "forgotten the lessons of history."

Although Mr. Yankwich did not mention the case of George R. Dale, Muncie, Ind., editor, his opinions and research on the subject of a newspaper's privilege of fair comment and criticism based on truth are particularly significant at this time, since it illuminates various phases of law bound to come up when Dale's contempt case reaches the United States Supreme Court Sept. 27.

The section of Mr. Yankwich's address dealing with the defense of privilege is therefore herewith presented in full:

Search would disclose the fact that every attempt to extend the right of free discussion among English-speaking peoples has been denounced as subversive of public good; and dire disaster predicted to follow it.

So it was, no doubt, when John Milton, thundering against the proposed licensing of printing by the Long Parliament (order of June 14, 1643), appealed for liberty "to know, to utter and to argue freely according to conscience, above all liberties";—when the aged Andrew Hamilton, defending John P. Zenger, in colonial New York (in 1734), taking up the challenge of the chief justice ("You cannot be admitted to give the truth of the libel in evidence"), turned to the jury before whom Zenger was being tried on a charge of criminal libel for his attacks on the colonial governor, William Crosby, and defiantly said:

"Then we appeal to you for witnesses of the fact. The jury have the right to determine both the law and the facts, and they ought to do so";—and when the more liberal rule of criticism was enunciated in England and in the states, the decisions of which our court has followed.

But Milton's noble appeal continued to inspire and mould the political life of the people of Great Britain, long after the evil done by the Long Parliament had been forgotten; the Zenger verdict is considered a mighty stepping-stone in the colonies' fight for the rights of free men; and the American states which follow the liberal rule continue to exercise governmental functions, through officials elected or appointed.

"The villainous way of printing stabs me to the heart," wrote the Duke of Marlborough, great soldier though he was.

Moral cowards have ever feared "the villainous way of printing," and the only ones who might fear the consequences of the doctrine of privilege declared by our Supreme Court are the moral cowards in our public life.

The morally courageous will say, with Milton:

"And though all the winds of doctrine were let loose, to play upon the earth, so Truth be in the field, we do injuriously, by licensing and prohibiting, misdoubt her strength. Let her and falsehood grapple; whoever knew Truth put to the worse in a free and open encounter?" (Areopagitica).

"For my part," said Goldsmith, while he was discussing with Dr. Johnson whether Martinelli should continue his History of England to their time, "I'd tell the truth and shame the devil."

And the Doctor replied, "Yes, sir; but the devil will be angry. I wish to shame the devil as much as you do, but I should choose to be out of the reach of his claws."

To which Goldsmith's rejoinder was: "His claws can do you no harm when you have the shield of truth." (Boswell's Life of Johnson.)

And if the liberalization of the rule of privilege by our Supreme Courts should have the effect of driving the moral cowards from our public life, we, as citizens, will owe a debt of gratitude to the members of that court.

In the words of the Supreme Court of Kansas:

"The liberal rule offers no protection to the unscrupulous defamer and traducer of private character. The fulminations in many of the decisions about a Telemonian shield of privilege from beneath which scurrilous newspapers may hurl the javelins of false and malicious slander against private character with impunity are beside the question. Good faith and bad faith are as easily proved in a libel case as in other branches of the law, and it is an everyday issue in all of them. The history of all liberty, religious, political and economic, teaches that undue restrictions merely excite and inflame, and that social progress is best facilitated, the social welfare is best preserved, and social justice is best promoted in presence of the least necessary restraint. Aside from other reasons for adhering to it, the court is of the opinion that the rule in Balch's Case accords with the best practical results obtainable through the law of libel under existing conditions, that it holds the balance fair between public need and private right, and that it is well adapted to subserve all the high interests at stake—those of the individual, the press, and the public."

It is well to add that recently the absolute privilege of a newspaper to criticize and attack a government without liability for civil libel was recognized by the highest court of one of our largest states, a court noted for its conservatism—the only American court which has ever declared a law limiting the hours of labor of women to be unconstitutional—the court which only the other day outlawed peaceful picketing.

Before calling attention to this decision of the Supreme Court of Illinois, let me advert to certain facts which will make its import clearer.

Repression follows in the wake of every war.

This is so because, as President Coolidge said some time ago "one of the most natural reactions during the war was intolerance . . . The slow and difficult advance which tolerance and liberalism have made through long periods of development are dissipated almost in a night."

Drunk with the power given them during the war,—and the immunity which the curtailment of free discussion (neccessary to a certain extent in war time) afforded them, some of our legislators and public officials have tried to entrench themselves behind peace time sedition acts, which would have restored a crime—long ago abandoned among free peoples, the crime of lese majeste.

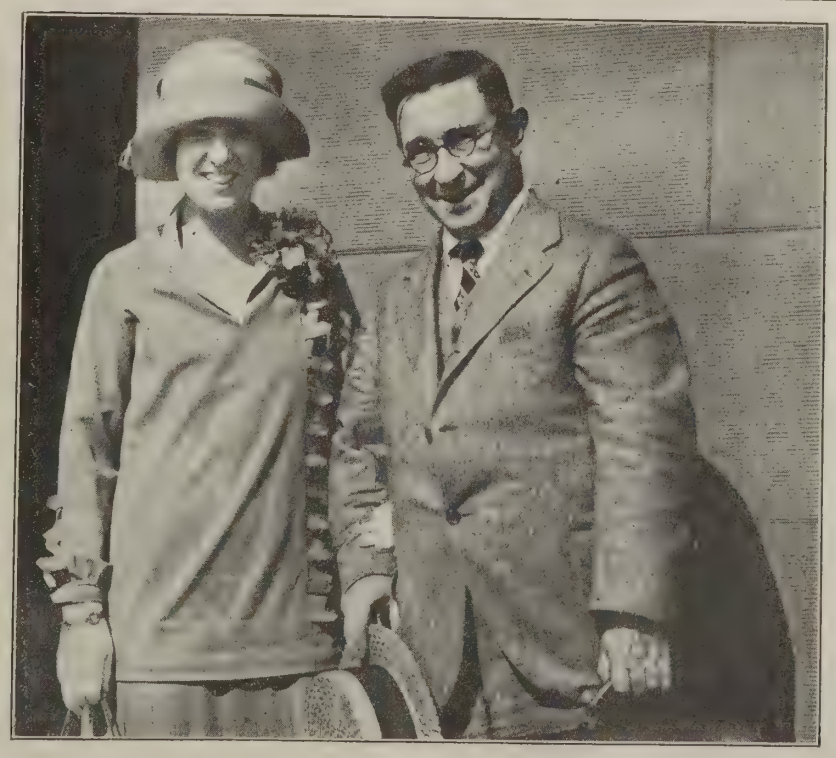
In this, they have forgotten (or perhaps they never learned) the lessons of history and the warning of one of our greatest judges and constitutional lawyers:

"No one can doubt the importance in a free government of the right to canvass the acts of public men and the tendency of public measures—to censure boldly the conduct of rulers and to scrutinize the policy and plans of government. This is the great security of a free government."

It is fortunate that our courts have not forgotten the old-fashioned constitutionalism of Judge Story.

And so when the City of Chicago endeavored to make the law of civil libel an instrument for the repression of the freedom of the press, by suing a Chicago newspaper for damages to the municipality alleged to have been caused by libelous publications directed at its government, the Supreme Court of Illinois upheld the right of free men to attack (without fear of prosecution for civil or criminal libel) governmental agencies in the following ringing words which I deem a fitting conclusion to this discussion:

"The fundamental right of freedom of speech is involved in this litigation, and not merely the right of liberty of the press. If this action can be maintained against a newspaper, it can be maintained against every private citizen who ventures to criticize the ministers who are temporarily conducting the affairs of his government. Where any person by speech or writing seeks to persuade others to violate existing law or to overthrow by force or other unlawful means the existing government, he may be punished, (People vs. Lloyd, 304 Ill. 23; Gilbert v. Minnesota, 254 U. S. 325, 41 Sup. Ct. 125) but all other utterances or publications against the government must be considered absolutely privileged. . . .



"It follows, therefore, that every citizen has a right to criticize an inefficient or corrupt government without fear of civil as well as criminal prosecution. This absolute privilege is founded on the principle that it is advantageous for the public interest that the citizen should not be in any way fettered in his statements, and where the public service or due administration of justice is involved, he shall have the right to speak his mind freely."

The court added:

"We do not pass upon the truth or falsity of the publications nor the merits of the political controversy between the parties. We consider the question solely from the standpoint of public policy and fundamental principles of government. For the same reason that members of the legislature, judges of the courts and other persons engaged in certain fields of the public service or in the administration of justice are absolutely immune from actions, civil or criminal, for libel for words published in the discharge of public duties, the individual citizen must be given a like privilege when he is acting in his sovereign capacity. This action is out of tune with the spirit and has no place in American jurisprudence."

These words should be a warning to those who, in this enlightened day, would make it a crime "to speak on any subject, religious, philosophical or political, what is contrary to the received opinions of the government, or the institutions of the country, however laudable may be the design, and however virtuous may be the motive," and who would introduce the un-American system which Italy's dictator, Mussolini, called some time ago, "discipline from above."

B. C. FORBES LEAVES FOR HONOLULU

B. C. Forbes, financial writer for the Hearst newspapers and editor of Forbes Magazine, and Mrs. Forbes photographed in San Francisco last week, where they spent several days before sailing for Honolulu.

ROBBINS BUYS KENTUCKY WEEKLY

Augustus Robbins has resigned as manager of the New Haven bureau of the United Press, to become editor and publisher of the Hickman (Ky.) Courier, which he has purchased. Mr. Robbins assumes control of his property Oct. 10.

ARGENTINA AS A MARKET

Possibilities of Argentina as a market for American products are told in a booklet published by Buenos Aires La Prensa, and being distributed this week by Joshua B. Powers, New York advertising representative.

RADIO ADS IN DAILIES EQUAL TO LAST YEAR

New York Representatives Report Smaller Number of Manufacturers Buying Bigger Space in Fall and Winter Schedules

While the number of radio manufacturers has decreased over last year, those advertising are using bigger display copy, equalizing the linage, New York newspaper advertising representatives told EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week.

There may be considerable gain, and, if so, it will be found in copy placed by local dealers with co-operation from the factories, they said.

Atwater Kent, handled through Barton, Durstine & Osborn, is using a list of newspapers with a total of 18,000,000 circulation, together with 51 magazines, and 4,358 billboards in and around 199 cities. This same firm has an advertising financing plan, whereby the cost of advertisements placed by local dealers is met equally by the factory, dealer and district jobber, each paying a third.

Radio Corporation of America is also going into newspapers heavily this year, as is the Federal Telephone & Telegraph Company. Copy for the latter is being placed by Lord & Thomas.

Other radio and accessory manufacturers with newspapers scheduled include the Reichmann Company, Amplion Company, Day-Fan Electric Company, Teletone Corporation of America, Philadelphia Storage Battery Company, A. C. Electrical Company, Swan Haverstick, Inc., National Carbon Company, American Bosch Magneto Corporation, Crosley Radio Corporation, Charles Freshman Company, Inc., and F. A. D. Andrea.

Newspaper merchandising departments, making surveys, continue to report dealer preference for space in the home-town daily.

The Detroit Free Press announced results of a survey of all Michigan dealers. Questionnaires were answered by 91.4 per cent. of the total number. Of this percentage 89.1 favored newspaper advertising.

CHAIN STORES INCREASE SPACE

25 Per Cent Linage Gain Reported By Chicago Dailies

Chain stores are proving to be an increasingly fertile field of advertising for Chicago newspapers, which report about a 25 per cent increase in chain store advertising so far this year over last year. The greatest increases in space for 1926 were made by the chain drug and grocery stores.

Simultaneously with this optimistic report from Chicago's newspapers comes the announcement from the main offices of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company in Jersey City that the company's advertising appropriation for the current year will show an increase of $500,000. A. & P. is a large and consistent user of newspaper advertising space, and the bulk of the advertising increase this year is being devoted to newspapers for the furtherance of local retail business wherever A. & P. is established. The company also plans to inaugurate a magazine campaign.

BUYS PARTNERS' INTEREST

Frank P. Briggs, editor of the Macon, (Mo.) Chronicle-Herald, has purchased the interests of Congressman M. A. Romjue, Ed S. McCarnes and Charles H. Weisenborn in that daily. Mr. McCarnes was president of the publishing company and Mr. Weisenborn, business manager. Mr. Briggs has been with the paper as editor since January 1, 1924.

NEW SUNDAY PAPER LAUNCHED IN N. Y.

Griffin, Formerly With A. P. A. Is Publisher—Plans to Make Paper a Daily in Time—MacGrath Editor

The New York Enquirer began publication as an evening Sunday paper, Sept. 19, with William Griffin, publisher, and J. F. MacGrath, editor. Mr. Griffin was formerly vice-president of the American Press Association. Mr. MacGrath has had 17 years' experience with Hearst newspapers. It is the plan of the publishing company, now capitalized at $100,000, eventually to enter the daily field.

At present publication is being handled by a small staff with editorial offices at 174 Nassau street, and publishing plant at 444 Pearl St. Associate editors are: Edgar Mels, formerly with Hearst newspapers, and Milton Malakoff, recently with the Waterbury (Conn.) Republican and American.

Alexander Sullivan is sporting editor; Charles F. Seidell, financial editor; Julius Cohen, dramatic editor. Fenton Dowling, for several years circulation manager of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, and prior to that with the New York American, is circulation manager.

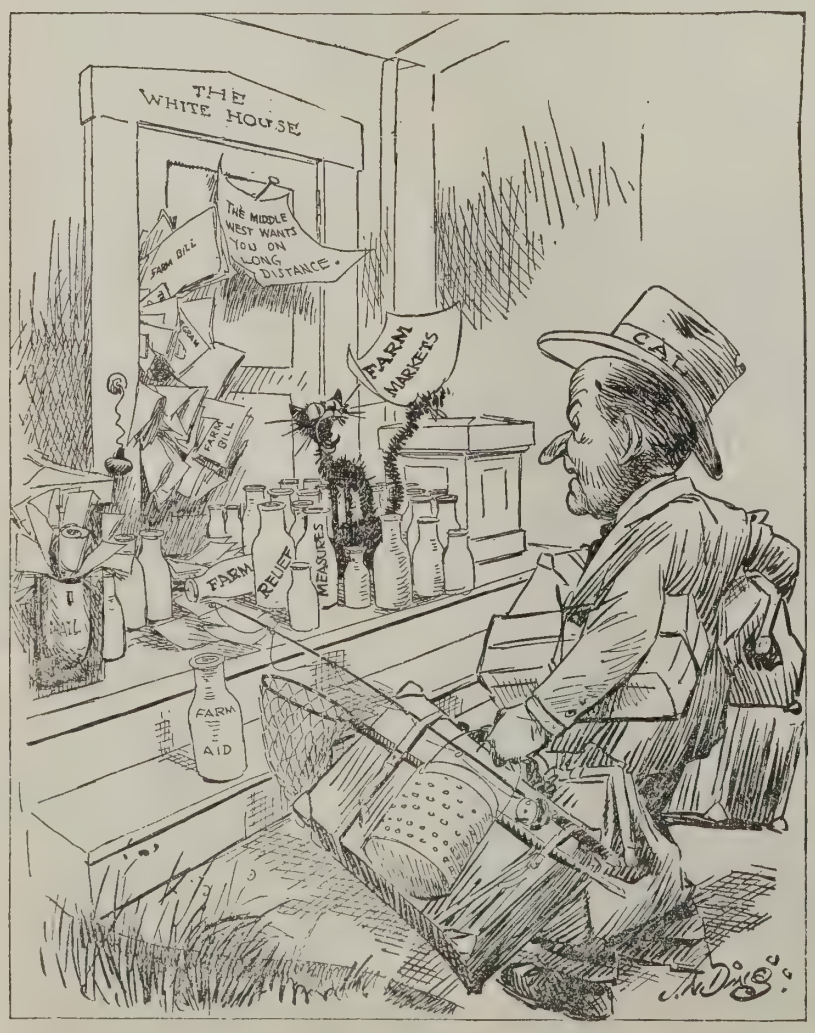
The initial editorial announcement said the Enquirer would be Democratic and non-sectarian, and added:

"The Enquirer is neither owned, controlled nor subsidized by any party, interest or group having political, religious, financial or other special interests to serve."

Mr. MacGrath told EDITOR & PUBLISHER the first number had sufficient advertising to pay for itself. No stock in the paper was to be sold, he said.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER CALENDAR

Sept. 30-Oct. 1—Illinois Press Assn., annual convention, Champaign-Urbana, Ill.
Oct. 4-5—New Jersey Press Assn., Newspaper Institute, Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N. J.
Oct. 4-7—Newspaper Librarians, 4th annual conference, Hotel Chelsea, Atlantic City, N. J.
Oct. 5-7—Window Display Advertising Assn., annual convention, Pennsylvania Hotel, New York.
Oct. 11-15—Associated Merchandising Assn., annual meeting, St. Louis, Mo.
Oct. 16-20—United Typothetæ Assn., annual convention, Cadillac Hotel, Chicago.
Oct. 17-20—Graphic Arts Assn., annual convention, Detroit, Mich.
Oct. 18-20—Insurance Advertising Conference, fall convention, Detroit, Mich.
Oct. 19-22—Inland Daily Press Assn., October meeting, Sherman Hotel, Chicago.
Oct. 19-22—Outdoor Advertising Assn., annual convention, Biltmore Hotel, Atlanta.
Oct. 20-22—Direct Mail Advertising Assn., annual convention, Detroit, Mich.
Oct. 21-22—Audit Bureau of Circulations, annual convention, Hotel LaSalle, Chicago.



DISTRIBUTION BOOKLET

The Wilkes-Barre (Pa.) Times Leader is distributing a descriptive promotion brochure entitled "A Permanent Newspaper."

PRESIDENTIAL WOES INSPIRE SIMILAR CARTOONS BY "DING" AND TALBURT

THERE'S ALWAYS SOME BLAMED THING WHEN YOU RETURN FROM YOUR VACATION

Copyright, 1926, New York Tribune Inc.

Yep, It's Been Stacking Up Ever Since You Went Away, Calvin

Another striking cartoon coincidence came to light Saturday, Sept. 18, with the appearance of the above cartoons by J. N. Darling "Ding" of the New York Herald Tribune Syndicate, and H. M. Talburt, of the Scripps-Howard Alliance in the papers served by these organizations. Both men used the same idea to picture the troubles awaiting President Coolidge on his return from his summer vacation. Both cartoons went out in advance in mat form for release at the time of the President's return. In the Aug. 21 issue, EDITOR & PUBLISHER reprinted cartoons of striking similarity by Lustig of the San Francisco Examiner, and Bronskup of the San Francisco Chronicle.

INSURANCE MEN DISCUSS NEWSPAPER SPACE

National Association to Recommend General Co-operative Drive to Company Presidents—Delegates Tell of Success Using Local Dailies at Atlantic City Meeting

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 23.—For the first time in its history of more than 30 years, advertising formed an important topic for discussion at the annual convention of the National Association of Insurance Agents in session here this week.

Nearly 500 agents, representing many different companies in cities all over the United States, are attending the meetings which are scheduled to close tomorrow with election of new offices and possible passage of a resolution recommending a national co-operative newspaper advertising campaign to insurance company presidents.

A draft of the proposed resolution was drawn up today at a special meeting of the association's executive committee, of which Frank L. Gardner, a Poughkeepsie, N. Y. agent, is chairman. This meeting was called after general discussion favoring newspaper advertising had followed the address made yesterday by Charles H. Holland, president of the Independent Indemnity Company and the Independent Fire Insurance Company of Philadelphia, who declared there was an urgent need for insurance advertising and upheld newspapers as the best possible media.

As drafted and presented to the committee on resolutions which will report tomorrow the resolution expresses the belief of the agents that a national campaign of newspaper advertising in behalf of stock, fire and casualty insurance companies would prove of great assistance to local agents in writing policies and promises support of the association membership in the event the companies decide upon such a move.

Cliff C. Jones, of Kansas City, Mo., the present president will be succeeded in office by the successful candidate in elections to be held tomorrow.

In itself, the discussion of newspaper advertising by delegates who took the floor to talk on local experiences following Mr. Holland's address proved very enlightening to many members attending who have long neglected investments in advertising as a means to increase their premium incomes.

Several delegates had newspaper advertising success stories to tell. Notable among them were agents from Syracuse, N. Y., Scranton, Pa., and Huntington, W. Va. Sentiment of the convention in general favored a co-operative educational insurance drive in newspapers, backed by local space placed by the agents themselves.

In Syracuse, the convention was told, 24 out of 27 local fire and casualty agents first came together in 1919 to form a local insurance board for the purpose of purchasing advertising space in the Syracuse newspapers. Since that date newspaper advertising campaigns have been conducted with increasing success. During the last year the group has been particularly aggressive.

It was pointed out that the advertising expense divided equally among the 24 board members proved ridiculously low. Copy is now appearing six times a month in quarter-page size, which the agents have determined best suits their purposes.

This newspaper advertising campaign, was declared, had "dignified the insurance business in Syracuse." Various timely and newsy subjects are taken up in the advertising copy placed by the group. For instance, when the city passed a no-parking ordinance recently, the agents endorsed the measure in their copy, tying it up with educational matter on casualty insurance. A problem successfully met by advertising in the same city was the "cut-rate agent evil." An advertisement on this subject which created widespread comment was headed: "There are two kinds of bootleggers—Some sell liquor and some sell insurance."

In Scranton an intensive insurance advertising campaign in the local newspapers has been in progress now for 23 weeks, with 38 agents paying the bill. Unexpected success has accompanied this endeavor, the convention was informed.

Mr. Holland in his speech went into detail in explaining the need of advertising to straighten the public mind in regard to the "generally misunderstood" insurance business. His speech follows in part:

"National advertising as a theory is not entirely new in insurance circles. It has been discussed in a more or less informal way among company executives; and three months ago I reintroduced it before the Insurance Advertising Conference in Philadelphia, laying particular emphasis upon the possible relation of newspaper publicity to the interests of insurance.

"May I remind you of the peculiar fact that, notwithstanding its almost unrivalled importance to practically every member of the community, the insurance business is conspicuous only by its absence from the news columns and from the advertising columns of the newspapers of the country.

"Is there ever a session of any State Legislature before which one or more bills are not introduced which would have the effect of undermining the security and protection which insurance alone can give, and without which the business of the nation would to a greater or smaller degree be weakened? And when these attacks come, do we find that the public, our public, our policyholders raise their voices in protest; or do the mouthpieces of the public—the daily and weekly press—urge caution before permitting the tampering with a mechanism so vital as insurance? And if the answer is, as it must be, in the negative, are they—the public and the press—blamable for their apathy or for their occasional inclination to temporize with a new and loudly expounded expedient as a substitute for one which has maintained around itself for generations a profound cloak of mystery, and to which they have nevertheless felt compelled to contribute their premiums—albeit they have done so, many of them, with a feeling akin to resentment. The blame is upon us, not upon them for our lack of effort to popularize the 'idea' of insurance and for our attitude of silence upon what I think I may properly call the 'virtues' of our business.

"And so, a national advertising campaign is suggested as a means, and the only practical means, of 'selling the idea of insurance.' It is suggested as a means of making a multitude of ardent friends of insurance from among the millions of policyholders who now regard themselves as nothing more than compulsory contributors to gigantic reserve funds. While many forms of activity would be involved in such a campaign, I think you will agree that the columns of the newspapers would be the most potent and the most far-reaching media. May I quote from a previous address:

"Newspapers also are one of the wonders of the modern world. More than any other single instrumentality they guide the minds of the multitude to a common viewpoint; they assemble for all of us a mass of world facts, the knowledge of which nationalizes and internationalizes our thought and so broadens our sympathies and—let us hope—our tolerance and generous impulses. With their tens of millions of daily circulation they wield an influence that is immeasurable; their commendation of any principle or proposal or person is of incalculable value to that which they commend, while their condemnation of any such is a tragedy for that which they condemn."

"But, it will be urged, a national campaign of newspaper advertising would be prohibitive in cost. Indeed it would be, for a single company. But this plan is not proposed for any single company or for any small group of companies; it is proposed as a stimulant for the 'idea' of insurance, and more particularly for the 'idea' of stock insurance. It is to help us all rather than one or two of us; and it will be possible only when a large group of far-sighted and broadminded company managers are willing to make such a joint investment.

"The cost of carrying an advertisement of substantial size at least once a week in every daily newspaper in the United States would be less than one-fifteenth of one per cent of the premium revenues of the stock companies engaged in the fields of fire, casualty and surety business. Less than seven cents out of each one-hundred dollars of premium. An inconceivably small cost for such far-reaching and important results as would assuredly be achieved.

"And there is another aspect of this subject to which I would draw your thoughts. Such a campaign would be followed as naturally as day follows night by an impressive stimulation in the insurance business. As a popularizer of insurance it would inevitably 'sell' more insurance. By its exposition of insurance methods and insurance ideals it would attract new purchasers. It would enlarge the field for your activities while it cemented to you and to the institution of which you are a part those who already are your clients.

"I have stated that such a campaign would require your active participation. You would find that your local newspapers hitherto neutral on insurance topics because of your seeming fear of publicity would discover your existence, would seek—very properly and legitimately—to interest you in their means of increasing your business by the use of their advertising columns. And could you conceive of anything more fitting or more profitable than when one of the large institutional advertisements appears naming neither company nor agent but explaining the advantage and method of operating some particular form of insurance (the institutional advertisements being paid for by the companies alone), your individual advertisement appearing, perhaps in smaller space, stating that you sell the kind of insurance that is thus advertised.

"By these means, the institutional advertisement and the local advertisements, there would rapidly be built up for the newspaper an entirely new corps of advertisers, and this would in many instances be followed by the inauguration of an insurance column or an insurance page, wherein the real news, the truth of insurance would readily be printed because the newspaper would know that such news was available to it from and of vital interest to its own supporters and advertisers. Thus the newspapers would sense a growing importance in the news of this vast business, so intimately related to every other form of activity, and inevitably the agent as an insurance authority would be asked to express his views on many subjects. In addition to the legitimate increase in his earning power he could hardly fail to find his prestige enlarged, his business more highly thought of—because better understood—and his position in the community decidedly enhanced."

ART O' THE MART

The Commercial Artist

By JAMES EDWARD HUNGERFORD

I'm one of the lads
Who draws for "Ads,"
That "run" in the daily news;
The big page-"spreads,"
With the flaring heads,
That thousanzds of folks peruse;
My "art" I etch
Into ev'ry sketch—
In "practical" terms I think,
And ev'ry morn
To the world are born
My "pictures"—in printer's ink!

In my little "den"
In the world of men—
And yet "in a world apart,"
I plan and dream,
And I work and scheme,
To give 'em a work of ART!

Each sketch of mine
Is a "heart" design,
That out of my pen doth flow,
And the joy I feel
Is a joy that's real,
In making my "pictures" grow!

I don't win fame
In my humble game,
Like the "genius" fellows do;
I work alone,
And my name's "unknown,"
Except to a chosen few;
But thousands see
What I sketch—and gee!
It gives me a thrill to think
My "pictures" SELL,
And they "hit-the-bell"—
And are making the dollars CLINK!

RADIO WRITERS ELECT

Harry La Mertha of St. Louis Globe-Democrat Named President

"Wildcat publicity and news matter detrimental to the best interest of the general public and the radio industry will soon be a thing of the past," declared Harry LaMertha, of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, who was re-elected president of the National Association of Radio Writers at the annual meeting held in Madison Square Garden in New York. The association went on record as opposing misleading news and feature stories relating to radio subjects.

Captain Stephen L. Coles, of the New York Herald-Tribune, was re-elected vice-president; Stuart Mahanay, Country Gentleman, Philadelphia, treasurer; Arthur Sinsheimer, Dry Goods Economist Group, executive secretary; and Walter A. Schilling, Radio Dealer, general secretary.

The board of directors includes Robert D. Heinl, Heinl Radio News Syndicate, Washington, D. C., chairman; Orrin Dunlap, Jr., New York Times; William E. Hedges, Chicago Daily News; Arthur T. Halloran, Radio, San Francisco; Lambdin Kay, Atlanta Journal; Lloyd Jacquet, Brooklyn Daily Eagle, New York; Everett M. Boyd, Cincinnati Enquirer; Frank Rosen, Philadelphia Inquirer; Kenneth Warner, QST, New Haven; Carl Butman, Washington Radio News Service, Washington; Frank G. Hinman, Chicago Tribune; Willis K. Wing, Radio Broadcast, New York; E. L. Bragdon, New York Sun; Ralph Wurden, Cleveland News; Jacques Cartier, La Presse, Montreal; H. F. Wooley, New York American; Dave Casem, New York Telegram; Capt. Robert S. Wood, New York World; H. F. Sohn, Newark News; Miss Julia Shawell, New York Graphic; I. J. Fitch, Radio News, New York. The next meeting of the Association will be Oct. 14, in the Congress Hotel, during the Chicago Radio Exposition.

I. C. S. USING 93 NEWSPAPERS TO TELL OF ITS 35TH ANNIVERSARY

Liberal Space Being Taken to Talk to Former Students Over Shoulders of Prospects—Advertising Has Built Its Success

By HAMMOND EDWARD FRANKLIN

BUSINESS birthdays roll around, but only a few companies with imagination and the "nerve" to do things differently realize how they may be used to get more business.

RALPH E. WEEKS

Within the last few days, 93 newspapers with a total of over 9,000,000 circulation have carried the novel announcement of an extraordinary business "birthday party" to be held by the International Correspondence Schools of Scranton, Pa, which demonstrates how a firm's milestone may be turned to more than ordinary account.

This institution, now the largest correspondence school in the world, started by accident on Oct. 16, 1891, with simply an elementary course in coal mining. Up to that time most all textbooks on coal mining were for advanced students only and were written with British, rather than American conditions in view, and so the texts were not adapted to American mine-workers.

Thomas J. Foster, editor of the Colliery Engineer, a technical mine magazine, had a "Queries and Answers" department which led him to think there might be a field for a course of practical help to ambitious miners. The course was established, his office began to be flooded by mail, and by May, 1892, the little school had more than 1,000 pupils. There came a demand for other courses. Mechanics, electrical engineering, and mathematics were added, then plumbing, agriculture, etc., until today there are some 300 courses offered by mail.

Some 168,345 special letters of instruction were written last year and 1,253,490 lessons were corrected. About $3,000,000 I. C. S. textbooks are estimated in use. More than 200,000 enrollments from the United Kingdom alone have been made. The U. S. Navy and Merchant Marine have 20,000 men taking courses.

The out-of-the-ordinary advertising in connection with the birthday is in effect a talk with former students over the shoulders of present prospects. It addresses graduates as successful leaders in business and asks them to write to Scranton. A drawing of a man in an easy chair reading an I. C. S. textbook appears above a line drawing of the schools' huge plant. In a box is the simple announcement, "October 16th of this year is the 35th anniversary of the founding of the International Correspondence Schools," with below the picture the institutional heading, "For thirty-five years this great school has been helping men to succeed in business and in life—the merit of its instruction and a sincere desire to serve have made possible the enrollment of 3,400,000 students."

The text of the copy is interesting in that it suggests points which may be capitalized in a birthday appeal:

"Thirty-five years ago this October, the International Correspondence Schools were founded at Scranton. That was the birth of the idea of correspondence instruction. That was the beginning of a new method of training that has since become an indispensable part of the educational program of the nation.

"Any institution that survives the storm and stress of thirty years and shows increasing vitality with the passing of each milestone must have in it the chief essential of success in any enterprise or individual . . . merit!

"Back of this remarkable record of achievement, there looms a sturdy and heroic figure—the successful I. C. S. student. He abounds in every city, town, village and hamlet in the whole land. He is the finished product of the 'University of the Night' and the real reason for its survival and increasing success. At the head of industrial establishments, in the field, in the office, on the firing line, and on the staff, each at his task intent, he is unconsciously the mainspring, the accelerator, the motive power to the progress of the I. C. S.

"Half of all the students enrolled by the International Correspondence Schools every day, every month, and every year are guided to our doors by his experience and helpful hand, while the other half are inspired to enter our portals by the sheer force of his example.

"To these men and women, who are among the leaders of business and industry today, we dedicate this 35th anniversary of their alma mater. To these men and women, we extend a cordial invitation to take part in the Anniversary Campaign now being carried on in every section of the country as part of the 35th birthday celebration of the International Correspondence Schools."

OCTOBER 16TH OF THIS YEAR IS THE 35TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE FOUNDING OF THE INTERNATIONAL CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOLS

For Thirty-Five Years This Great School Has Been Helping Men to Succeed in Business and in Life

The merit of its instruction and a sincere desire to serve have made possible the enrolment of 3,400,000 students

THIRTY-FIVE years ago this October, the International Correspondence Schools were founded at Scranton. That was the birth of the idea of correspondence instruction. That was the beginning of a new method of training that has since become an indispensable part of the educational program of the nation.

Any institution that survives the storm and stress of thirty-five years and shows increasing vitality with the passing of each milestone must have in it the chief essential of success in any enterprise or individual . . . merit!

Back of this remarkable record of achievement, there looms a sturdy and heroic figure—the successful I. C. S. student. He abounds in every city, town, village and hamlet in the whole land. He is the finished product of the "University of the Night" and the real reason for its survival and increasing success. At the head of industrial establishments, in the field, in the office, on the firing line, and on the staff, each at his task intent, he is unconsciously the mainspring, the accelerator, the motive power to the progress of the I. C. S.

Half of all the students enrolled by the International Correspondence Schools every day, every month, and every year are guided to our doors by his experience and helpful hand, while the other half are inspired to enter our portals by the sheer force of his example.

To these men and women, who are among the leaders in business and industry today, we dedicate this 35th anniversary of their alma mater. To these men and women, we extend a cordial invitation to take part in the Anniversary Campaign now being carried on in every section of the country as part of the 35th birthday celebration of the International Correspondence Schools

INTERNATIONAL CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOLS
Scranton, Penna.

35th Anniversary Committee
International Correspondence Schools, Scranton, Pa.

As a former student of the International Correspondence Schools I should like to know more about the 35 h Anniversary Program mentioned above. Please send me full particulars

Name . . . .

Address . . . .

Large I. C. S. newspaper copy

An unkeyed coupon for former students addressed to the 35th Anniversary Committee, care of the Schools, appears in a scroll at the bottom.

It is the purpose of Ralph E. Weeks, the president of the Schools, to make this a record year in enrollments. Not only are salesmen in the branch offices being stimulated to close more sales, alumni being appealed to for loyal co-operation and present students being enlisted to make the year memorable, but the Schools are making a distinct talking point of it in approaching prospects.

A distribution of $4,000 in cash prizes as well as many thousands of dollars in merchandise awards has been announced. There will be 80 prizes of $50 each. To enter the student or prospective student is asked to mail a special blank and name of student he thinks he can enroll. This automatically puts a man's name on the special list of those competing for awards and makes it possible for the local I. C. S. salesman to get in touch to help close the sale.

The I. C. S. birthday advertising has just appeared this month in the list of 93 newspapers. Paul V. Barrett, director of advertising for the Schools, and N. W. Ayer & Son, Philadelphia, prepared the copy.

GOVERNOR IS BEST MAN

Governor Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia, acted as best man at the marriage of Harold C. March, a member of the staff of his newspaper, the Winchester (Va.) Star, and Miss Ruth Manuel recently.

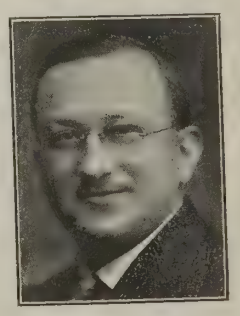
DRASTIC WAR PLANNED AGAINST FAKE ADS

Federal Trade Commission Preparing Campaign Against Newspapers And Periodicals Printing Fraudulent Advertisements, Says Humphreys

A drastic campaign is being prepared by the Federal Trade Commission against newspapers and periodicals that print fraudulent advertising, Commissioner William E. Humphreys declared, addressing the annual convention of the National Petroleum Institute at the Hotel Traymore, Atlantic City, Sept. 17. Mr. Humphreys' speech confirmed exclusive interviews with him previously published by EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

According to Mr. Humphreys the people of the United States are annually robbed of hundreds of millions of dollars through fake advertisements, most of which are plainly false and known to be so by those who accept money for their publication. He declares that the only way to eradicate the evil was to proceed directly against the publishers.

At the same time he emphasized that the majority of newspapers and magazines were free from such advertising, and exercised great care in the selection of their advertising. They had done more perhaps than any other agency in bringing about the truth in advertising, for which they deserved great credit, he said.



"Such newspapers and magazines, so far as is known," the speaker declared, "have purged their columns of the class of advertising referred to, voluntarily inspired by only the highest motives and with any pressure from public authorities.

"There still remains, unfortunately, a small per cent of publications, whose number in the aggregate is great, that will publish any advertisement for money, regardless of truth or decency. Against this class of publications I have persuaded the Federal Trade Commission to begin war. If I have my way about it, it will be a war of extermination."

REORGANIZATION IN LEBANON

John K. R. Schropp Elected President and Business Manager of News

John K. R. Schropp was elected president and business manager of the Lebanon (Pa.) News at a special reorganization meeting of the directorate held at Mt. Gretna, Pa., Sept. 16, where Mr. Schropp is confined to his cottage with a broken femur of the right leg.

J. K. R. SCHROPP

The meeting was necessitated to fill vacancies caused by the death of A. B. Schropp, who was president and treasurer.

Dr. R. J. Schropp, Lebanon dentist, was named treasurer, one of the offices held by his late father. Henry L. Wilder remains as secretary of the publishing company and managing editor of the daily.

PRESENTS FILES TO CITY

Ewing Herbert, editor and publisher of the Hiawatha (Kan.) Daily World, has presented to the Hiawatha library the bound files of every newspaper published in this city. The files cover a period of more than 65 years.

DEMURRER FILED IN K. C. STAR SUIT

Attorney General Declares Dickey Has No Legal Right to Institute Suit Aside Sale of Star—Demurrer in Libel Suit

North T. Gentry, Attorney General of Missouri, filed a demurrer Sept. 14, to the petition of W. S. Dickey, publisher of the Kansas City Journal-Post, in which Mr. Dickey seeks to have the sale of the Kansas City Star set aside. The Attorney General is one of the defendants in the suit.

Mr. Gentry stated in his demurrer that it appeared on the face of the petition that Mr. Dickey had no capacity to institute his suit. The Attorney General asked that Mr. Dickey's amended petition be adjudged insufficient and that the Attorney General be discharged as a defendant from the suit.

Briefs in reply to Mr. Dickey's amended petition were to be filed in a few days by the other defendants, the trustees of the William R. Nelson Trust and the Star group.

The position Attorney General Gentry took in his demurrer conformed with his views expressed in a letter which he sent to Mr. Dickey's attorneys July 27, three days before Mr. Dickel filed his action. Mr. Dickey's attorney had sought to have the Attorney General lend the state's name to the suit to set aside the sale of the Star. In his letter replying to Mr. Dickey's counsel, Mr. Gentry declined to bring the suit in the name of the state. It was on July 31 Mr. Dickey filed his suit and named the Attorney General as one of the defendants.

Two legal moves by defendants in the $3,000,000 libel and slander suit brought by Walter S. Dickey, owner and publisher of the Kansas City Journal-Post, against executives of the Kansas City Star and Arthur M. Hyde, former governor of Missouri, have been filed in circuit court, Kansas City, against Mr. Dickey by attorneys for the defendants. Both Mr. Hyde and the Star executives filed demurrers to the motions of Mr. Dickey.

The Dickey suit was filed before the close of the August primaries. It was the outcome of the report of a speech made by Mr. Hyde, in the Times, morning edition of the Star. In his address, according to the newspaper reports, Mr. Hyde attacked the motives of Mr. Dickey's interest in the primary campaign then under way.

Mr. Hyde's motion to dismiss the suit against him asserted that the Dickey petition does not state facts showing that the plaintiff has joint cause of action against the defendants. The motion also contends that "there is no authority in this court to issue the summons and send it to Grundy county and have the same served on the defendants, and that such pretended service made in Grundy county on this defendant gives this court no jurisdiction over this defendant in said action."

Executives of the Star in their motion set forth the following causes and grounds for dismissal of the suit against them:

That there is a misjoinder of causes of action.

That there is a misjoinder of parties defendant.

That the petition does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action against these defendants.

That the petition on its face shows that the publication complained of is not libelous per se and there is no allegation of special damages, and for that reason the petition is wholly insufficient.

The five Star executives named in the suit are: Irwin R. Kirkwood, August F. Seested, Ralph E. Stout, George B. Longan and Henry T. Haskell.

The filing of the motions to dismiss followed extensive arguments before Judge O. A. Lucas some weeks ago.

$250,000 TO ADVERTISE DAILY

The Chicago Daily News has appropriated $250,000 for advertising through Kling-Gibson Company, 310 South Michigan boulevard, Chicago.

'WO MILLION WORDS FILED FROM RING-SIDE BY 600 FIGHT REPORTERS

low-by-Blow Reports Broadcast by 50 Newspapers, Though National Advertiser Claimed All Radio Rights— Picture Services Show Speed

ESQUICENTENNIAL STADIUM, Sept. 23.—A new variety of gusher ıs brought in tonight, when Tunney of reenwich Village defeated Dempsey in e heavyweight championship bout.

Nearly 2,000,000 words, the new sher, were filed by newspaper corre-ondents from the ringside at this Sta-um.

C. W. Samuels, division traffic super-endent for Western Union, announced was the greatest number of words filed one night on any sporting event. A al of 1,750,000 words were filed on the mpsey-Carpentier fight.

Rolling up the impressive total were ut 600 reporters—some of them re-ters just for the night—representing tually every city of the United States. dominating among those near the ring re correspondents and feature writers New York and Philadelphia news-ers, although representatives from cago, St. Louis, San Francisco, Bos-, Dallas, Montreal and London, also seats within "working distance."

o great was the demand for press s, that John L ("Ike") Dorgan, press resentative for Tex Rickard, had re-ed to a weeding out process in assign-"Annie Oakleys." He gave repre-atives of papers with the largest cir-tions places closest to the ring and tered the reporters from smaller ies all over the stadium.

he Western Union and Postal Tele-h Companies had installed 190 wires the working newspaper men. Most hese wires were located at the ring-. Others were further away.

adio broadcasting direct from the ring furnished by a national advertiser, the al Typewriter Company. News-ers, however, maintained their right e air as an extension of the bulletin d by broadcasting blow-by-blow ac-ts received from press associations. e than 25 Associated Press members the A. P. report in this fashion, almost as many clients of the United s.

orge Ed Smith, president of the al Typewriter Company, was reported ave paid Rickard $20,000 for the dcasting privilege. J. Andrew White, an sports announcer of Station and Graham McNamee, of WEAF, nated at the microphone. Between nd 70 stations were hooked up for vent.

. Smith's return for the expenditure mention of his firm's name by the an-cer as providing the radio entertain-

EDITOR & PUBLISHER asked the type-ir president what he considered the tising value of his enterprise was ou're asking a very hard question," plied. "It may not be worth a nickel. know is that I wanted to hear the over the radio, and I thought many s probably felt the same way. Be-for two years now the Royal Type-Company has been broadcasting ainment every Thursday. The fight breaking in on our usual time, and decided we ought to broadcast the er before in history was the pic-ngle so heavily played as it was ts occasion. Special platforms were ucted for photographers. One, specially for New York newspapers. modated 13 men. Flashlights d almost continually, and there nany races to the telephone office in ter of Philadelphia to transmit pic-by telephoto to Chicago and San sco.

rprise of Acme Newspictures might d as typical. This syndicate alone $10,000, Fred Ferguson, president, covering the picture story.

pecial train was engaged and sta-tioned in yards as near as possible to the Sesqui grounds. Its baggage car was equipped as a regulation dark room. While the fight was still in progress, plates were rushed there and were developed on the way to New York. The New York Herald Tribune had an artist on board the train to retouch the prints and make them ready for the engraver during the trip.

Acme also had a dark room at the navy flying field in Philadelphia where two airplanes, hired by Mr. Ferguson, waited to carry prints in night flights to Cleveland and New York. The New York bound plane was scheduled to stop at New Brunswick, there to thansfer pictures to the air mail plane to Cleveland as a check on the direct flight.

Airplanes were also engaged to fly with pictures and mats from Cleveland to Toledo, from Cleveland to Pittsburgh, and from Chicago to St. Louis.

Mat-making headquarters were established at New York, Cleveland, Chicago, San Francisco and Camden. A dark room was equipped in Philadelphia proper to develop plates for transmission to Chicago and San Francisco by telephoto.

Airplanes and special railway arrangements were also used by other picture services to deliver copy to clients in cities all over the country. Morning papers in the Far West showed telephoto views of critical moments of the battle and of the 130,000 spectators and reporters in the immense stadium.

Four rows of seats all around the ring took care of the "big names" among sport and special writers covering the match.

Here were to be seen "trained boxing critics" such as Hype Igoe of the New York World, and Grantland Rice of the New York Herald Tribune with critics not so well trained, such as Mayor James Walker of New York, who contributed a story for the New York Evening Post. The Evening Journal and the Evening Graphic also advertised Mayor Walker as belonging to their ringside reportorial staffs.

Heywood Broun, former sports writer, descended from his column on the World, to describe the blows of the "Manassa Mauler" and the "Fighting Marine." Norman Hapgood was here to write a story for clients of United Features Syndicate.

From London came C. J. Ketchum, a star of the London Daily Express staff. He had been assigned to this country to report the Canadian elections, and stayed over to write of fisticuffs.

Gene Fowler, once sports editor of the New York Mirror, later managing editor of the New York American, and at present promotion manager for King Features Syndicate, returned to the field of sports to sit by Jack Lait, editor of International Feature Service, and write a human interest story on the fight.

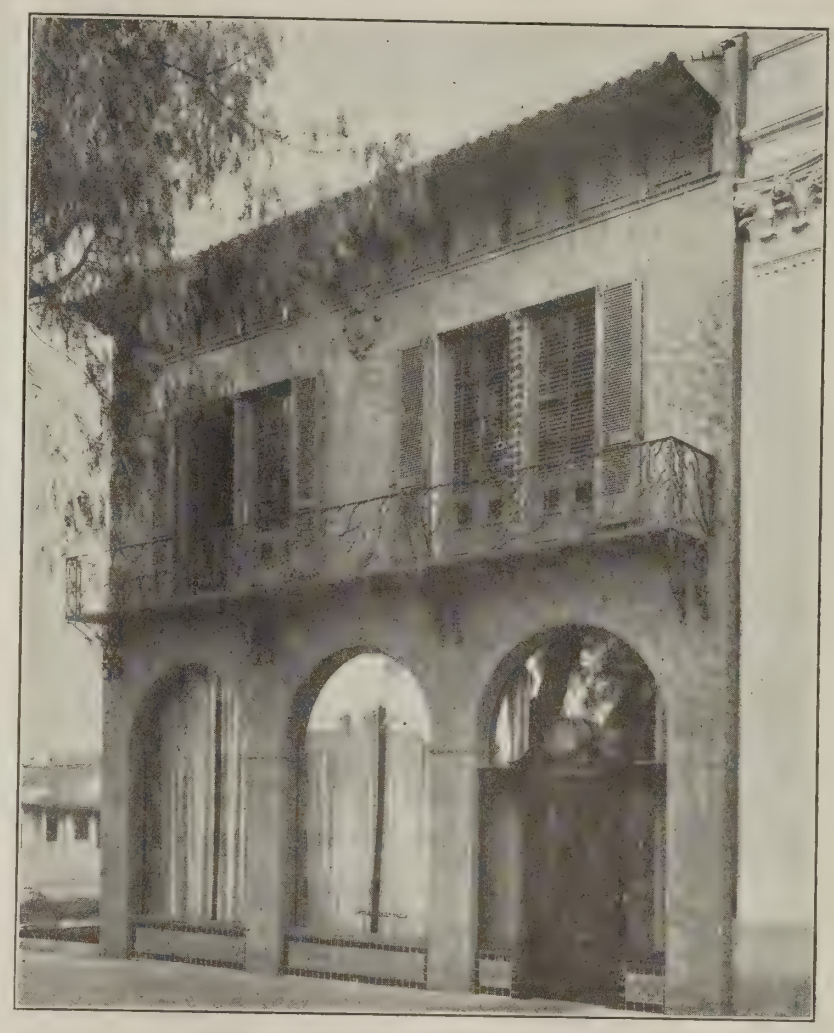
Louella Parsons arrived from her Hollywood (Cal.) bungalow to describe the show "from a woman's angle" for Universal Service.

Jack McAuliffe, undefeated lightweight champion, was the expert engaged to write on the fight for United News. James Tully did the same work for United Press. Frank Getty and Henry Farrell covered sport news for United News and United Press respectively.

Furnishing "blow-by-blow" reports and descriptive stories for International News Service were Damon Runyon, Frank G. Menke, and Davis J. Walsh.

James J. Corbett, once heavyweight champion himself, wired his own report of the fight to many newspapers through King Features Syndicate. The same syndicate wired signed statements from winner and loser after the fight.

Alan J. Gould, sports editor, headed the Associated Press reportorial line-up at the ring side. With him were Brian Bell, Charles Dunkley, of the Chicago bureau, and C. S. Brandebury.



In addition to Mayor Walker and Tom Gibbons, veteran heavyweight who had fought both men, and was reporting for Bell Syndicate, the New York Evening Post had Walter Trumbull, Paul Neumann, sports editor, Jack Kofoed, James Keven McGuinness, and William Morris on the story.

BIG GASTONIA EDITION

The Gastonia (N. C.) Daily Gazette published a 64-page Gaston County Industrial edition Sept. 10. The combed yarn industry is especially featured, the county being called the "Combed Yarn Center of the South." James W. Atkins is managing editor of the Gazette. The edition sold for 10c a copy.

RIVERSIDE (CAL.) PRESS BEAUTIFIES ITS PLANT AT COST OF $20,000

By HAROLD J. ASHE

THE remodeling of the Riverside (Cal.) Press building was recently completed and the structure formally opened to the public. The modernized plant is now one of the finest in the small-city class in the West.

E. P. Clarke

Remodeling of the Press building involved an expenditure of about $20,000. The building was originally erected in 1902 and later remodeled from a one-story structure to two stories. Recent work carried on was more in the nature of modernization than expansion.

The old Italian style of architecture has been incorporated in the building. An ornamental wrought iron balcony extending the entire width of the front of the building lends a note of distinction to the structure. Practically the entire front of the building, on the main floor is occupied with window or door openings, giving ample light to the interior.

A mahogany counter with tiled base divides the business office from the public. Behind this counter are located the business, bookkeeping, advertising and circulation staffs, all provided with ample working space. A beamed ceiling with panels finished in a style suggestive of the Italian architecture is employed throughout, and all finished in light tones.

Leading from the main office is a stairway. Immediately off this stairway on the mezzanine floor is the private office of the business manager. A balcony is immediately at the head of the stairs. Behind a counter on which are files of the Press dating back to 1878, are the editorial rooms.

The editor's office is located on the second floor and has access to the balcony. A fireplace is one of the features of this room. The proofreaders' room is located back of the editorial rooms.

Further back is found the composing room, where is also located the printer-telegraph machines. Light has been made a prime requisite in the composing room. An electrical ventilating system has been installed. In the rear of the building is the stereotyping department. The matrices are carried to the main floor by a chute.

The first issue of the Riverside Press was published June 20, 1878.

A part interest in the Press was bought in 1894 by E. P. Clarke and his brother A. F. Clarke. In 1897 all interests in the paper were transfered to a corporation consisting of E. P. Clarke, A. F. Clarke, A. A. Piddington, H. H. Monroe and J. P. Baumgartner, now publisher of the Santa Ana (Cal.) Register. H. W. Hammond became a member of the corporation upon the retirement of Monroe and Baumgartner.

E. P. Clarke is editor of the Press; Harry Hammond, business manager; Harry Ross, advertising manager; John L. Wagner, circulation manager; and A. A. Piddington, city editor.

AUGUST LINAGE IN 35 CITIES TOPS 1925 RECORD BY 7 PER CENT

AUGUST newspaper advertising in 150 newspapers published in 35 larger cities totalled 121,356,711 lines, 7 percent more than in August, 1925. The figures are supplied by the New York Evening Post Statistical Department, Inc., except those for Atlanta, Kansas City, Memphis, Pittsburgh and Portland, which publishers supplied direct. The summaries follow:

SUMMARY OF ADVERTISING BY CITIES

35 cities listed	30 show gain	0 show loss
150 papers listed	121 show gain	24 show loss
	5 no comparison

	1926	1925
†New York	11,977,976	11,060,332	917,644 Gain
Chicago	6,459,081	6,036,603	422,478 Gain
Philadelphia	5,477,088	5,308,487	168,601 Gain
Detroit	4,997,258	4,596,410	400,848 Gain
Cleveland	3,522,975	3,415,125	107,850 Gain
St. Louis	3,838,820	3,612,220	226,600 Gain
Boston	5,365,587	4,858,382	507,205 Gain
Baltimore	3,727,688	3,487,251	240,437 Gain
†Los Angeles	6,505,892	6,208,240	297,652 Gain
‡Pittsburgh	.....	.....	.....
†Buffalo	2,915,894	2,856,336	59,568 Gain
†San Francisco	4,794,285	4,523,178	271,107 Gain
Milwaukee	2,487,618	2,395,631	91,987 Gain
‡Kansas City	2,977,472	2,755,483	221,989 Gain
Washington	4,050,532	3,682,626	367,906 Gain
Cincinnati	2,959,500	2,755,800	203,700 Gain
New Orleans	3,554,919	3,181,852	373,067 Gain
Minneapolis	2,810,162	2,656,249	153,913 Gain
Seattle	2,725,220	2,469,236	255,984 Gain
Indianapolis	2,712,798	2,644,281	68,517 Gain
Denver	2,073,848	2,051,224	22,624 Gain
Providence	2,335,357	2,244,063	91,294 Gain
Columbus	3,305,867	2,883,165	422,702 Gain
Louisville	2,861,764	2,582,895	278,869 Gain
St. Paul	2,484,944	2,248,456	236,488 Gain
‡Atlanta	.....	.....	.....
‡Portland, Ore.	2,994,474	2,954,748	37,726 Gain
‡Memphis	2,241,323	1,978,389	263,124 Gain
†Oakland	2,301,964	2,231,586	70,378 Gain
Omaha	1,630,419	1,500,737	129,682 Gain
Birmingham	2,615,788	2,374,078	241,710 Gain
Richmond	1,974,742	1,830,920	143,822 Gain
Dayton	2,522,506	2,395,190	127,316 Gain
Houston	2,337,030	2,158,114	178,916 Gain
†Des Moines	1,687,054	1,645,597	41,457 Gain
Totals	121,356,711	113,224,268	8,132,443 Gain

†Note references under individual newspaper linage of these cities. ‡Figures supplied by individual publishers.

NEW YORK

	1926	1925
American	1,041,230	1,055,788	14,558 Loss
Herald Tribune	1,280,106	1,095,800	184,306 Gain
Times	2,086,772	1,989,826	96,946 Gain
World	1,405,264	1,339,012	66,252 Gain
*Mirror (T.)	235,184	273,258	38,074 Loss
News (Tab.)	534,280	424,926	109,354 Gain
*Evening Graphic	234,186	†194,828	39,358 Gain
*Evening Journal	822,924	763,820	59,104 Gain
*Evening Post	297,548	306,224	8,676 Loss
*Evening World	567,618	485,876	81,742 Gain
*Sun	945,770	826,146	119,624 Gain
*Telegram	374,520	409,074	34,554 Loss
Brooklyn Eagle	1,286,708	1,143,064	143,644 Gain
Brooklyn Times	473,120	345,446	127,674 Gain
Standard Union	392,746	407,244	14,498 Loss
Totals	11,977,976	11,060,332	917,644 Gain

†Sunday Graphic discontinued September 1, 1925; 79,526 lines in 5 Sunday issues included.

CHICAGO

	1926	1925
Herald Examiner	954,921	874,320	80,601 Gain
Tribune	2,423,253	2,316,237	107,016 Gain
*American	888,189	817,020	71,169 Gain
*Daily News	1,436,739	1,363,845	72,894 Gain
*Journal	333,159	284,682	48,477 Gain
*Post	422,820	380,499	42,321 Gain
Totals	6,459,081	6,036,603	422,478 Gain

PHILADELPHIA

	1926	1925
Inquirer	1,561,200	1,515,000	46,200 Gain
Ledger	1,065,226	1,001,273	63,953 Gain
Record	609,300	612,300	3,000 Loss
*Bulletin	1,356,600	1,311,600	45,000 Gain
*Evening Ledger	884,762	868,314	16,448 Gain
Totals	5,477,088	5,308,487	168,601 Gain

DETROIT

	1926	1925
Free Press	1,359,484	1,237,194	122,290 Gain
News	2,609,670	2,457,378	152,292 Gain
Times	1,028,104	901,838	126,266 Gain
Totals	4,997,258	4,596,410	400,848 Gain

CLEVELAND

	1926	1925
News-Leader	1,015,500	965,175	50,325 Gain
Plain Dealer	1,404,000	1,409,175	5,175 Loss
*Press	1,103,475	1,040,775	62,700 Gain
Totals	3,522,975	3,415,125	107,850 Gain

BOSTON

	1926	1925
Advertiser	483,081	379,237	103,844 Gain
Globe	1,218,587	1,093,731	124,856 Gain
Herald	1,033,432	913,303	120,129 Gain
Post	813,471	762,056	51,415 Gain
*American	370,132	305,844	64,288 Gain
*Telegram	194,453	212,993	18,540 Loss
*Transcript	465,321	491,530	26,209 Loss
*Traveler	787,110	699,688	87,422 Gain
Totals	5,365,587	4,858,382	507,205 Gain

*No Sunday edition.
Complete figures not available at press-time.

ST. LOUIS

	1926	1925
Globe-Democrat	1,064,100	1,044,900	19,200 Gain
Post-Dispatch	1,956,920	1,802,920	154,000 Gain
*Times	322,800	269,700	53,100 Gain
*Star	495,000	494,700	300 Gain
Totals	3,838,820	3,612,220	226,600 Gain

BALTIMORE

	1926	1925
American	487,521	453,754	33,767 Gain
Sun	1,389,500	1,322,196	67,304 Gain
Evening Sun	1,058,958	1,040,021	18,937 Gain
*News	504,798	464,040	40,758 Gain
*Post	286,911	207,240	79,671 Gain
Totals	3,727,688	3,487,251	240,437 Gain

LOS ANGELES

	1926	1925
Examiner	1,877,856	1,851,300	26,556 Gain
*News	175,616	‡222,922	47,306 Loss
Times	2,128,182	2,004,170	124,012 Gain
*Express	686,560	623,812	62,748 Gain
*Herald	1,262,688	1,174,082	88,606 Gain
*Record	374,990	331,954	43,036 Gain
Totals	6,505,892	6,208,240	297,252 Gain

‡News Sunday edition suspended publication May 2, 1926.

BUFFALO

	1926	1925
Courier	812,542	542,531	270,011 Gain
Express	.....	402,557	.....
Post	.....	91,985	.....
Times	1,017,516	842,764	174,752 Gain
*News	1,085,836	893,636	192,200 Gain
*Star	.....	82,863	.....
Totals	2,915,894	2,856,336	59,558 Gain

Post discontinued February, 1926. Express and Star combined with Courier June 19, 1926.

SAN FRANCISCO

	1926	1925
*Bulletin	574,126	578,046	3,920 Loss
Chronicle	990,556	946,848	43,708 Gain
Examiner	1,672,005	1,626,620	45,385 Gain
*Call	877,982	704,956	173,026 Gain
*Herald	.....	111,090	.....
*News	679,616	555,618	123,998 Gain
Totals	4,794,285	4,523,178	271,107 Gain

Herald discontinued May 5, 1926.

MILWAUKEE

	1926	1925
Journal	1,329,101	1,205,093	124,008 Gain
S. T. & A. Sentinel	536,085	557,477	21,392 Loss
*Leader	176,313	181,141	4,828 Loss
*Wisconsin News	446,119	451,920	5,801 Loss
Totals	2,487,618	2,395,631	91,987 Gain

WASHINGTON

	1926	1925
Herald	501,798	385,073	116,725 Gain
Post	860,355	789,471	70,884 Gain
Star	2,018,845	1,847,892	170,953 Gain
*Evening News	173,169	126,874	46,295 Gain
*Evening Times	496,365	533,316	36,951 Loss
Totals	4,050,532	3,682,626	367,906 Gain

CINCINNATI

	1926	1925
Enquirer	1,068,300	1,024,500	43,800 Gain
Tribune	276,000	239,100	36,900 Gain
*Post	651,300	591,600	59,700 Gain
*Times-Star	965,900	900,600	63,300 Gain
Totals	2,959,500	2,755,800	203,700 Gain

NEW ORLEANS

	1926	1925
Item	858,640	729,784	128,856 Gain
States	693,721	561,810	131,911 Gain
Times-Picayune	1,574,603	1,435,059	139,544 Gain
*Tribune	427,955	455,199	27,244 Loss
Totals	3,554,919	3,181,852	373,067 Gain

MINNEAPOLIS

	1926	1925
Journal	1,193,081	1,118,476	74,605 Gain
Tribune	1,222,656	1,178,134	44,522 Gain
*Star	394,425	359,639	34,786 Gain
Totals	2,810,162	2,656,249	153,913 Gain

SEATTLE

	1926	1925
Post-Intelligencer	883,358	712,432	170,926 Gain
Times	1,241,058	1,168,034	73,024 Gain
*Star	505,890	503,188	2,702 Gain
*Union-Record	94,914	85,582	9,332 Gain
Totals	2,725,220	2,469,236	255,984 Gain

INDIANAPOLIS

	1926	1925
Star	1,058,244	1,033,587	24,657 Gain
*News	1,267,428	1,214,613	52,815 Gain
*Times	387,126	396,081	8,955 Loss
Totals	2,712,798	2,644,281	68,517 Gain

DENVER

	1926	1925
News	519,904	590,212	70,308 Loss
Post	1,217,860	1,102,500	115,360 Gain
*Times	336,084	358,512	22,428 Loss
Totals	2,073,848	2,051,224	22,624 Gain

PROVIDENCE

	1926	1925
Journal	775,023	746,430	28,593 Gain
Tribune	334,717	325,578	9,139 Gain
*Bulletin	931,370	873,061	58,309 G
*News	294,247	298,994	4,747 L
Totals	2,335,357	2,244,063	91,294 G

COLUMBUS

	1926	1925
Dispatch	1,756,558	1,555,446	201,112 G
Journal	632,768	588,141	44,627 G
*Citizen	916,541	739,578	176,963 G
Totals	3,305,867	2,883,165	422,702 G

LOUISVILLE

	1926	1925
Courier-Journal	1,063,696	1,037,931	25,765 G
Herald-Post	601,141	570,995	30,146 G
*Post	410,917	285,548	125,369 G
*Times	786,010	688,421	97,589 G
Totals	2,861,764	2,582,895	278,869 G

ST. PAUL

	1926	1925
News	777,644	683,592	94,052 G
Pioneer Press	940,898	854,154	86,744 G
*Dispatch	766,402	710,710	55,692 G
Totals	2,484,944	2,248,456	236,488 G

OAKLAND

	1926	1925
Tribune	1,529,906	1,481,438	48,468 G
*Post-Enquirer	772,058	655,410	116,648 G
*Record	.....	94,738	.....
Totals	2,301,964	2,231,586	70,378 G

Record discontinued October 24, 1925.

OMAHA

	1926	1925
Bee	418,558	365,211	53,347 G
News	350,154	348,614	1,540 G
World-Herald	861,707	786,912	74,795 G
Totals	1,630,419	1,500,737	129,682 G

BIRMINGHAM

	1926	1925
Age-Herald	721,980	703,822	18,158 G
News	1,405,152	1,308,090	97,062 G
*Post	488,656	362,166	126,490 G
Totals	2,615,788	2,374,078	241,710 G

RICHMOND

	1926	1925
Times-Dispatch	909,594	948,136	38,542 L
*News-Leader	1,065,148	882,784	182,364 G
Totals	1,974,742	1,830,920	143,822 G

DAYTON

	1926	1925
Journal	605,164	605,794	630 L
News	1,205,316	1,140,034	65,282 G
*Herald	712,026	649,362	62,664 G
Totals	2,522,506	2,395,190	127,316 G

HOUSTON

	1926	1925
Chronicle	1,078,742	1,012,382	66,360 G
Post-Dispatch	838,152	752,136	86,016 G
*Press	420,136	393,596	26,540 G
Totals	2,337,030	2,158,114	178,916 G

DES MOINES

	1926	1925
Capital	395,214	‡480,007	84,793 L
Register	650,606	580,920	69,686 G
*Tribune	641,234	584,670	56,564 G
Totals	1,687,054	1,645,597	41,457 G

‡Sunday Capital discontinued with issue of February 21, 19
44,753 lines Sunday issue, included.

ATLANTA

	1926	1925
Constitution	.....	.....	.....
Journal	.....	.....	.....
Totals	.....	.....	.....

KANSAS CITY

	1926	1925
Journal	256,552	238,748	17,804 G
*Post	336,536	309,277	27,259 G
Sunday Journal-Post	209,688	153,804	55,884
Star	1,461,040	1,351,267	109,773 G
*Times	713,656	702,387	11,269 G
Totals	2,977,472	2,755,483	221,989 G

MEMPHIS

	1926	1925
Commercial Appeal	1,251,152	1,173,690	77,472 G
*News-Scimitar	510,916	390,236	120,680 G
*Press	479,255	414,463	64,972 G
Totals	2,241,323	1,978,389	263,124 G

PITTSBURGH

	1926	1925
*Chronicle-Telegraph	760,564	700,546	60,018 G
Gazette-Times	770,896	660,814	110,082 G
Post	766,864	672,812	94,052 G
Press	1,830,542	1,607,242	223,300 G
*Sun	.....	.....	.....
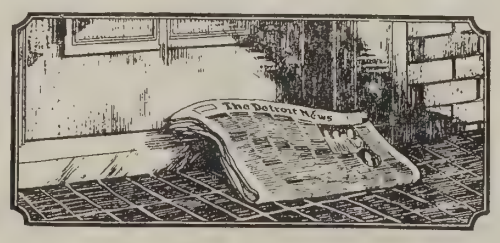
Totals	4,128,866	3,641,384	487,482



PORTLAND

	1926	1925
*News	413,896	396,396	17,500 G
Oregonian	1,185,450	1,150,736	34,714 G
Oregon Journal	985,376	904,036	81,340 G
*Telegram	409,752	503,580	95,828 L
Totals	2,994,474	2,954,748	37,726 G

Why The Detroit Market Is Favored

Because The Detroit News with the greatest circulation in Michigan, weekday or Sunday, covers the homes of its trading territory so thoroughly.

Detroit News circulation leadership maintained upwards of half a century is significant of the appeal of The News to the stable home dwelling population of its territory. And this leadership has not been merely a nominal one. Today with 335,000 total Sunday and 310,000 total weekday circulation The News has a lead exceeding 20% over the second paper in the city of Detroit, alone. Translate the 45,000 weekday lead into terms of the total circulation of many of America's most important dailies and you will grasp the importance of The Detroit News' singular dominance of its field. In fact, no other newspaper in any city of Detroit's size or larger so thoroughly covers its field.

The Detroit News

The HOME Newspaper

CARL SANDBURG, POET, FINDS PLEASURE WRITING NEWSPAPER MOVIE REVIEWS

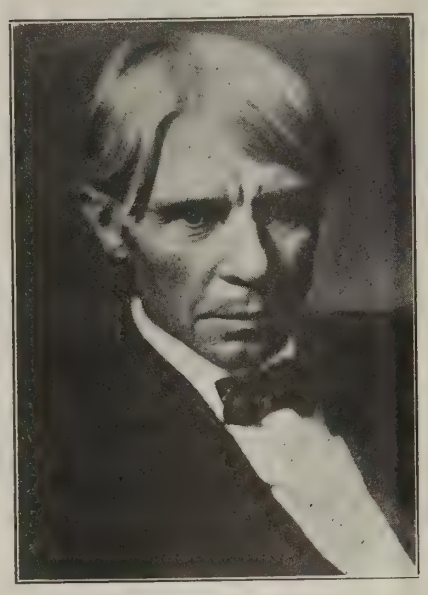
Chicago Daily News Motion Picture Editor Sees a Similarity Between Movies and Newspapers—Took Present Job in 1921

By LUCILE BRIAN GILMORE

CARL SANDBURG, poet and author of "Abraham Lincoln, the Prairie Years," acclaimed by many critics as one of the best biographies of Lincoln sees nothing incongruous in his writing a movie review daily as required in his position of motion picture editor of the Chicago Daily News. He has studied every angle of motion picture production in the large producing centers, from the selection of scenarios to the public screening, and has a high regard for motion pictures and those who make them.

Sandburg has been motion picture editor of the Daily News since 1921. He was with the paper as reporter and editorial writer, and when William K. Hollander, the movie critic, went on his vacation five years ago Sandburg asked to fill his place during his absence. His first criticisms, he admits quite frankly, were terrible with many technical mistakes in them. He was given the position permanently when Hollander, on his return accepted a position with Balaban and Katz, motion picture theater magnates.

Newspapers and motion pictures have much in common, Sandburg believes. For one thing, they have deadlines to observe—called release dates in the motion picture field—and the deadlines in producing movies cramp the producers for time worse than deadlines hinder news writers. And continuing his analogy, a six-reel picture, he declares is worse than a poor 1 column story.



Sandburg has been in newspaper work about 20 years in various capacities and he says his present position is the only one in which he has been able to get plenty of sleep.

Sandburg believes people who read newspapers should first have at least a six-months term of training in the local room of a newspaper. After that, he says, they would be eligible for a license to buy or read newspapers. Most men have no notion of how news is gathered or written, know nothing of the problems confronting newspaper-makers, and are therefore in no position to read newspapers sympathetically and with understanding, he says.

Unlike so many of his contemporaries, Sandburg does not need a poetical environment for the production of his poetry. He has jotted down some of his finest work while waiting at the Criminal Court building for the verdict in some murder case or robbery trial. In the press room of the Criminal Court building, which is anything but conducive to poetry, he has written of flowers and fields and skies, impervious to the raucous or even profane noises around him.

News reels, Sandburg says, are always fresh and therefore the best in the movies. Each week brings fresh material which he thinks should appeal to the intelligent classes. The Daily News has thought so for years, and its emphasis on the importance of the news reel is partly responsible for the local screen service which the paper is now developing by which it films local events for local consumption, he says.

Sandburg was born in Galesburg, Ill., in 1878, and received his education at Lombard College there. He was associate editor of System Magazine in 1913, and later a member of the editorial board of the National Labor Defense Council. In 1914 he was awarded Levinson's poetry prize through Poetry Magazine, and in 1919 shared the prize offered by the Poetry Society of America with Margaret Widdemer, for his volume of verse, "Cornhuskers." Until the publication of his book on Lincoln he was best known for his "Rootabaga Stories," some of which have been translated into French. The stories by the way, will soon be read over WGN, the Chicago Tribune's radio station.

Carl Sandburg

NEWSPAPER INSTITUTE PROGRAM

Speakers Named for Annual Gathering at New Brunswick, N. J., Oct. 4-5

Many angles of newspaper editing and publishing will be discussed at the fifth annual Newspaper Institute, to be held under the auspices of the New Jersey Press Association, at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N. J., Oct. 4-5. Speakers and their subjects, announced this week, will include:

Frederick L. Crane, Elizabeth Journal, and association president; Prof. Hubert Ede, Newark Evening News, "The Changing Newspaper"; Prof. Allen S. Will, Rutgers, "President Status and Future Plans for Instruction in Journalism at Rutgers"; Wilson Fairbanks, New York Times, "The Pursuit of Truth"; Prof. Bristow Adams, "Training the Local Correspondent"; Julian S. Mason, editor-in-chief, New York Evening Post, "Modern Newspaper Making"; Frank McCabe, New York World, "Value of Classified Advertising"; and David Stern Camden Courier, "Building a Newspaper."

Addressing the annual banquet Oct. 4, will be David Lawrence, president of the Consolidated Press Association, and Karl Bickel, president, United Press Associations.

DAILY TEACHES CITY HISTORY

Local history is being taught by the Columbus (O.) Citizen through a feature called "Do You Know Columbus?" now being published on its front page daily. Five questions are asked each day and the answers are printed on the editorial page.

FINLEY WINS "MEDAL"

Dr. John H. Finley, associate editor of the New York Times, was recently awarded the right to wear a "medal on a red ribbon" by the captain of the S.S. Conte Biancamano "for performing the noteworthy feat of walking heel and toe 100 land miles at sea on the deck of the Conte Biancamano." Among witnesses to the "letters patent" awarding the medal were Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks.

DAILIES REFUSE PUBLICITY TO COMPETING RADIO

BRIDGEPORT, CONN., newspapers have allied to bar the local radio station WCWS from all publicity.

The station "sells" musical numbers, broadcasting the name of the dealer that "buys" the number, something about his line of goods, and the announcement that he has "contributed the following selection."

The newspapers claim that the station is becoming a competitor and therefore must pay for all program announcements at regular advertising rates.

NEIGHBORHOOD ADVERTISING

Community advertising has been subdivided into neighborhood advertising in San Francisco. The Parkside-Sunset district of that city has subscribed a fund of $50,000 to be spent in local newspapers for advertising built around the slogan "Keep San Franciscans in San Francisco."

COAST DAILY EXPANDS

The Hoquiam (Wash.) Daily Washingtonian, oldest newspaper of southwest Washington, moved into a new modern plant recently. The front part of the building, formerly occupied by a business firm, was completely remodeled and an addition to the plant built.

NEW PRINTERS' SCHOO HOME FOR SOUTH

Southern School of Printing Erecti Building in Nashville to Be Completed Dec. 1 This Year— $20,000 Fund on Hand

A building for the Southern School f Printing, Inc., Nashville, Tenn., will completed by Dec. 1, according to contract recently awarded.

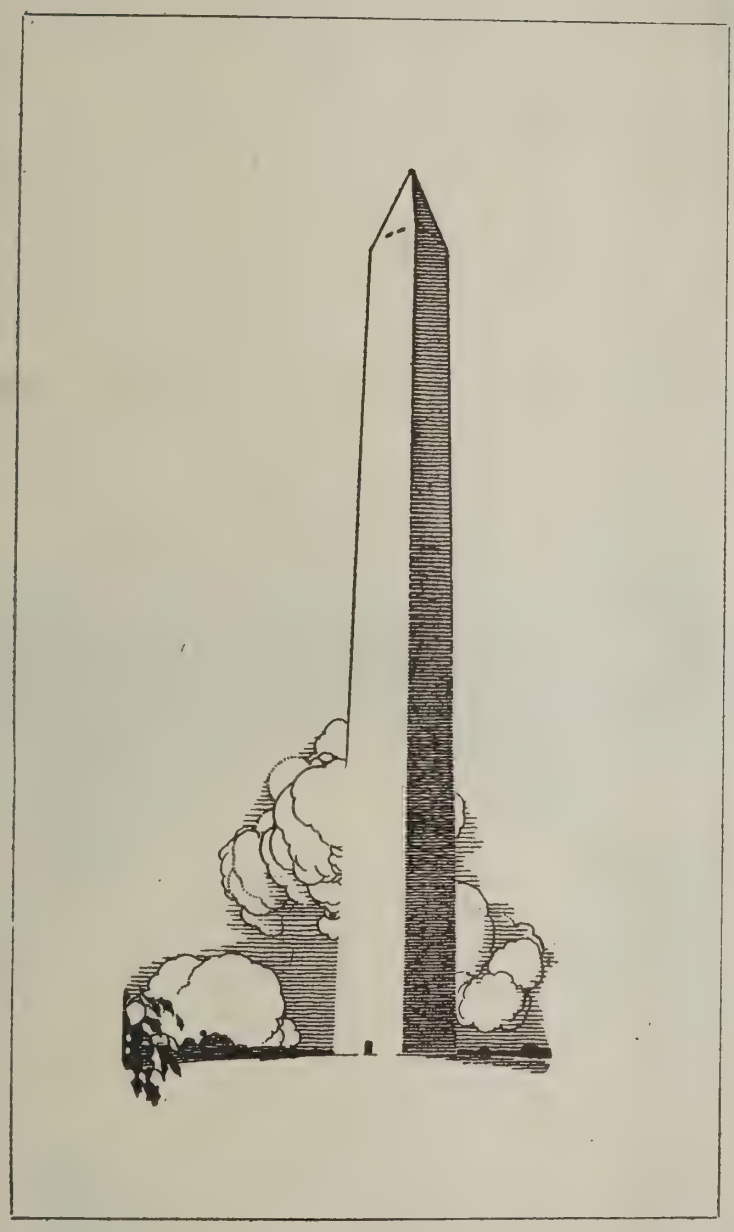
The new building will have a fronta of 117 feet on South Street and will e tend back 70 feet. This will leave am room for additions to the building, the lot is 205 feet deep. The buildi will be composed of face brick and stone, one story; concrete floor. T building will also house the gene offices of the Southern Master Printe Federation.

Funds for this building have been p cured by donations and subscriptions second mortgage bonds. A campa for this fund has been under way for past four months. This fund has alre reached approximately $20,000.

This school, it is claimed, will be first of its kind in the United Sta built, maintained and operated by print and publishers for the sole purpose f training men and women in the vari trades of the printing industry.

ROOS JOINS N. Y. SPECIAL

Raymond Roos, formerly sales mana for the Solar Sturgis Company this w joined the staff of the Allen-Klapp C pany, special representatives, New Yo



Lineage

During the first 8 months of 1926 the Florida Times-Union carried 11,367,488 agate lines of advertising; an increase of more than 1,000,000 agate lines in the same period of 1925.

The Florida Times-Union

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.

FORTY PER CENT

of the readers of standard sized newspapers in Washington, D. C., read the WASHINGTON TIMES and THE WASHINGTON HERALD—108,312 net paid circulation daily! 121,978 net paid circulation Sunday!

FORTY Per Cent of your Washington prospects read Hearst newspapers. They buy advertised goods. Sell your product to them by advertising in the

WASHINGTON TIMES
THE NATIONAL DAILY

and

The Washington Herald
CHARACTER QUALITY AMERICA FIRST ACCURACY ENTERPRISE
FOR AMERICANISM FOR THE AMERICAN PEOPLE

NATIONAL REPRESENTATIVES

W. G. Hobson, 2 Columbus Circle, New York City

F. E. Crawford, 913 Hearst Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Franklin Payne, General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

Under Direction James C. Dayton

NEWSPAPER MAKERS AT WORK

By GEORGE L. MOORE

WILLIS ABBOT, editor of the Christian Science Monitor, Boston, offers one example of how the vagaries of chance and circumstance will connive with subtle tendencies and heritage and all the rest of that great uncharted sea which ebbs and flows under every personality, and land a man in newspaper work in confutation of the best-laid schemes of mice and men.

In 1884 he was graduated from the University of Michigan law school, ready for a life career amid briefs, torts and corpuses delicti. The final examinations had taken toll of his strength and his family advised him to take a good, long rest in New Orleans.

On the street one day he met a friend who was on the staff of the Times-Democrat, subsequently absorbed into the Times-Picayune.

"What is the young lawyer doing in New Orleans?" The friend asked. Willis Abbot told about the rest cure.

In the manner of youth of the 80's, as well as of any decade whatever its chromatic variations, the friend hooted the idea of anyone needing a rest. "Even if you are resting," he declared, "you don't need to loaf all the time. Come on and be a reporter on my paper."

Since Abbot had been finding the rest rather tedious going, he took up his friend, and they went off together to break the news to the editor. Contrary to conventional editorial psychology, the latter rather welcomed the idea. New Orleans was entertaining an international exposition. There was an abundance of copy to be written and not too many people to write it, and so the cub was packed off to see what he could pick up. With such readiness did he allow the journalistic virus to infect his blood that within a few days Willis Abbot shed the tender epidermis of the cub and became a full-blown feature man, doing his stuff with little let or hindrance.

Possibly the reason why the ordinary apprenticeship was abridged in his case was the fact that Abbots (and Abbotts, as some members of the family use the final "t") have had ink in the blood for generations. Jacob Abbott, John Stevens Cabot Abbott and Lyman Abbott are among the family scribes.

"Yes, our family has spoiled a great many reams of good white paper," admits Willis Abbot. "There are scores of books bearing the Abbott name, and we have turned out column upon column of newspaper writing and page after page of magazine copy."

Bowdoin College devotes a room to the Abbott literary productions. Jacob Abbott wrote an extensive series of biographies of the makers of history. He also committed the Rollo books. J. S. C. Abbott, a class-mate in Bowdoin of Longfellow and Franklin Pierce, produced among many other books, a biography of Napoleon which has been one of the most widely read of the multitude of volumes dealing with that hardy perennial. The Napoleon family conferred a large and expensive medal on him for doing it.

In view of such literary linage, the wonder is not great that Willis Abbot took to copy paper like a duck to water. His desk-mate in the Times-Democrat office was Lafcadio Hearn who then was just beginning to make the reputation which has gained him a secure place as one of the star contributions of journalism to permanent literature.

"He was a queer looking chap," recalls Mr. Abbot. "You forgot his looks though when he talked; he was an artist in conversation as well as in his writing. He had only one good eye, and it was fixed in its socket, so that he had to move whatever he was reading back and forth across the field of vision. I will never forget the picture he made as he read and reread all his proofs, holding the sheets close to his face and passing them nervously back and forth in front of the good eye."

Willis J. Abbot

From New Orleans Willis Abbot went to New York and got a job on the Tribune. Whitelaw Reid was editor. "But I never saw him," says Mr. Abbot," for in New York, not knowing the town, I was a cub reporter.

"The papers went to press then much later than they do now," he recalls. "Don Seitz says they go to press now before anything happens.

"About one-thirty in the morning, in those days, after the papers were out, the reporters would gather at Perry's drug store. We got all the morning papers and read them over, picking out easily the men who had written certain stories, by the style and touch. There was room then in a newspaper, and reporters were allowed wide latitude for their individual brilliance and color. I doubt if a man with the most intimate knowledge of the New York newspaper personnel could sit down with the papers today and, outside of the signed articles, tell who had written a single one of the news stories. The blue pencil was not the awesome weapon in those days that it is now."

That reportorial period furnished Willis Abbot with the material which later proved useful in writing Philip Derby, Reporter. Mr. Abbot's idea was to carry Philip Derby through all the stages of newspaper work—city editor, special writer, editorial writer, Washington correspondent, but his writing of books took other shape. This book production began early. He wrote the first one—Blue Jackets of '61—when only a year or so out of college, and in the scanty spare time allowed a reporter, for, according to Mr. Abbot, reporters in those days really worked. The idea for that first book was suggested by an uncle who believed there was a big field for juvenile histories. The first of the now famous Blue Jacket series met with instant success. Others followed. Their sales have totalled hundreds of thousands of copies. Possibly the first one was not Willis Abbot's idea. The volume, Panama and the Canal, is proof, however, that he could furnish not only the copy but the idea. He believed that a book dealing with Panama could be put over on a big scale. It was at the time of great popular interest in the big ditch. To get a low selling price the publishers printed 300,000 copies, and the book was put out through the newspapers, being sold to readers. The sales reached 900,000 copies.

In spite of success in authorship, Willis Abbot stuck to the newspaper last. From New York he went to Kansas City to try his hand at the ownership of a paper. The venture failed. He lost his money. Back into harness he went, this time to the managing editorship of the Chicago Times. Always interested in politics, Abbot began to take part in the shaping of political opinion. He has been called the original Bryan man.

"I don't know just what that means," Mr. Abbot said to me. "I knew Bryan very well. Just before the convention of 1896 he told me that if he could make a speech which he had all ready for the convention, he would be nominated. I told him he was too young, and that people would call him the boy orator and let it go at that. What happened when Bryan who was then thirty-five and just within the age limit for presidential nominees, made the speech is one of the really memorable and dramatic events in our political history. It was the Cross of Gold appeal.

"But he later was called The Boy Orator—of the Platte."

As writing editor of the New York Journal, Willis Abbot wrote many political editorials in support of Bryan. He also served high in the councils of the Democratic party. While directing the Christian Science Monitor during the last presidential campaign he published the news of all three parties in parallel columns, giving equal emphasis to all.

Although Mr. Abbot knows intimately every department of a newspaper, his special field has been editorial writing. Among other posts, he has held the position of chief editorial writer of the New York Journal, of the New York American, of the Chicago American, and has been writing editor of the New York Sun (old style). Hewrites editorials daily for the Monitor which are followed closely on both sides of the Atlantic.

He advocated a peace plan in a powerful Monitor editorial Nov. 15, 1923. It appeared at the time of the Bok Peace Plan Award and proposed, in brief, to take the profit out of war and preparation for war, thereby enlisting the profit-producing interests of the world in behalf of peace, and making preparedness as nearly 100 per cent as possible by the immediate enactment of legislation which, in the event of future war, would mobilize property as well as the persons of citizens. Both Coolidge and Davis endorsed the plan, and approbation of its fundamental principles was worldwide.

Willis Abbot's influence has become worldwide. The London Times chose him as one of the most astute observers in America to write on American affairs for its columns, especially during political campaigns.

As one of the outstanding American newspaper editors, Mr. Abbot's views on what sort of equipment a young man should bring to newspaper work are of particular interest. With the widely current modern idea of education as being measurable only in terms of its units of earning power, Willis Abbot seems to have scant sympathy.

"I think there is much to be said for James Russell Lowell's remark that colleges, for example, should teach nothing useful.

"Education can never make the same or equal contributions to all men. I know two Rhodes scholars working in the same newspaper office. One is valuable. The other is of little use.

"When a man is able to get hold of certain information which he needs; is stimulated to a keener appreciation of literature and of life, I think he is in a good way to become ready for a newspaper career.

"It is impossible, of course, to make rules as to the educational, or other equipment, for journalism. A man certainly should have a clear comprehension of current rather than ancient affairs. It's what happens today and what may happen tomorrow that matters rather than what happened two thousand years ago.

"Of course, a good newspaper man should be able to express himself clearly. He also needs to know where to find things—information, facts."

In his years of active newspaper life, Mr. Abbot has amassed considerable of those things so that often he has no need of searching. Few fakes or hoaxes get by him for he can check them against the merciless foot-rule of exact information.

Pittsburgh Linage

The following is a compilation made by DeLisser Bros., Incorporated, Accountants and Auditors for the period from January 1, 1926, to June 30, 1926

DAILY	Local Display	Foreign Display	Classified	Total
Pittsburgh Press	6,074,015	1,478,988	1,368,933	8,921,936
Chronicle Telegraph	4,595,848	1,188,862	421,810	6,206,520
Sun	3,768,747	545,998	290,728	4,605,473
Gazette Times	1,739,400	789,892	480,666	3,009,958
Post	1,842,455	797,078	437,212	3,076,745
SUNDAY
Pittsburgh Press	1,836,031	835,422	1,108,041	3,779,494
Gazette Times	1,322,945	594,674	451,367	2,368,986
Post	1,305,552	585,647	394,151	2,285,350
DAILY AND SUNDAY
Pittsburgh Press	7,910,046	2,314,410	2,476,974	12,701,430
Gazette Times	3,062,345	1,384,566	932,033	5,378,944
Post	3,148,007	1,382,725	831,363	5,362,095

THE PITTSBURGH PRESS

A Scripps-Howard Newspaper

Represented by ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC., 250 Park Avenue, New York

FINANCIAL AD GROUP MEETS IN DETROIT

Power of Advertising Basis for Present Prosperity, Speaker Declares—C. H. Henderson Named President

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 22.—"The power of advertising is one of the fundamental reasons for our present prosperity, yet other nations, grouping for the reason for American financial development, do not recognize it," declared John G. Jones, director of sales and advertising for the Alexander Hamilton Institute, New York, in an address before the more than 500 members attending the eleventh annual convention of the Financial Advertisers Association here this week.

"By advertising" continued Mr. Jones, "I mean all phases of publicity. Long before automobile builders began to advertise the daily press was giving full attention to this new method of transportation. Any one thinking back when the first telephone was installed will remember the columns of publicity that were given this new means of personal and business contact."

A warning against over-development of the time payment system of buying was sounded by Jones, who called attention to the fact that such great numbers of manufacturers have learned that they can sell more of their goods by advertising easy credit terms.

A. F. Young, vice-president of the Guardian Trust Company, Cleveland, discussing advertising in relation to the trust officer said that prudery and false modesty have enormously delayed human welfare with respect to critical situations where trust services come into play. This delay being largely due to a lack of advertising on the part of the trust companies, whose business methods were so little known by the average person.

"Literally millions of persons are in need of the trust company services and surely there is only one way to get our message to the multitude and that one way is through one language, and powerful public press," he declared.

"The trouble with the great bulk of trust advertising is that it is created, or at least dominated, by men who are too close to the service to be able to tell the story from the consumer's viewpoint," said Mr. Young. "We shall enter upon a new era of trust advertising only when we have been able to persuade our trust officers to give way in large measure as the final judges of what constitutes proper trust advertising, and to let you show your originality, imagination and news sense and to go the limit of their cautious legalistic temperament in letting you do something different, or even daring."

"There is only one kind of advertising that I feel our department can afford," Mr. Young concluded, "the best that we can buy—created by the imagination of our outside counsel, approved by our own trust officers, executed by our own efficient advertising manager, maintained year in and year out and intensively utilized by our sales force."

An active source of competition that keeps down savings in financial institutions is the deferred payment plan in the belief of C. E. Auracher, advertising manager of the Cedar Rapids, Ia., Savings Bank and Trust Company.

"It is not only more difficult to get the attention of prospective depositors, but it is growing harder to get their money into saving accounts," he said, adding that one of the greatest advertising problems confronting financial institutions today is to drive home the advantage of prospective buyers saving their money and then buying for cash at lower terms than on credit.

C. H. Henderson, publicity director, Union Trust Company, Cleveland, was elected President of the Association late Wednesday. H. D. Hodapp of the National City Bank, New York, was re-elected first vice-president and Kline L. Roberts of the Citizens Trust and Savings Bank, Columbus, O., was made second vice-president. C. H. Wetterau of the American National Bank, Nashville, Tenn., was elected third vice-president, and E. A. Hentz of the Peoples Trust and Savings Bank, Chicago, was re-elected treasurer. Clinton F. Berry, assistant vice-president, Union Trust Company, Detroit, was made a member of the Advertising Commission representing the Financial Association in the International Advertising Association.

Edgar A. Guest, staff poet of the Detroit Free Press, was honor guest and principal speaker at a luncheon at the Hotel Statler, Tuesday. Complimentary autographed copies of Guest's latest book, "The Light of Faith" were presented by the Free Press to the bankers attending the luncheon.

The Women's Advertising Club of Detroit was host Tuesday at a luncheon at the Book-Cadillac Hotel for the women attending the meeting. Miss Edna Lynn, president of the club, presided. Various other social activities were provided by local organizations. The convention closed Thursday with a tour of Detroit. More than 200 panels of selected samples of financial advertising were on display during the convention, as well as exhibits by 15 advertising agencies who handle only financial advertising.

"SEND-OFF" FOR CONNER

Friends Give Banquet for N. Y. Journal of Commerce Man

Owen A. Conner, late night editor of the New York Journal of Commerce, was the honor guest at a complimentary "send-off" dinner given to him by the members of the editorial, executive and mechanical departments at the Hotel Brevoort, Sept. 11. Mr. Conner has joined the Philadelphia Public Ledger as business editor.

Ellis L. Howland, market editor, was toastmaster and presiding officer and at the guests' table besides Mr. Conner, were V. Gilmore Iden, managing editor; E. E. Pidgeon, dramatic editor and W. S. Crawford, insurance editor.

Mr. Conner was presented with a heavy silver-mounted snakewood walking stick.

Among those present beside those already mentioned, were: P. McEvoy, Nathan Shaviro, Fred McAllister, Marshall M. Jacobson, W. E. Piaget, William L. McNulty, Charles A. Donnelly, F. W. Ross, William J. Russell, H. G. Leonard, H. H. Shatel, Louis J. Schwartz, John J. Manning, T. Odgers, J. Duffy, H. C. Hayden, B. Liebenstein, Richard Griffin, Frank Webb, Percy Wotton, B. Corper, George Hanson, M. W. Sweeney, Allan M. Gordon, N. Stabler, E. G. Connelly, H. Murfin, C. Shuman, Charles M. Eagan, A. Jonatowski.

HE KNOWS PICTURES

His years of experience in handling news photographs fully equips him for position as assistant to busy editor of rotogravure and daily picture pages. Knows picture sources, values, reproduction, layouts, etc. Thirty-five years old, now employed, but seeks better opportunity. Salary secondary. Box A-946, c/o Editor & Publisher.

Largest morning and Sunday circulation in the Greatest Market west of Chicago

170,000 Daily

390,000 Sunday

LOS ANGELES Examiner

N. Y. "SPECIALS" PLAN ACTIVE SEASON

Six Point League Arranging for Three Big Meetings from Oct. 1 to May 1—F. P. Motz, Chairman of Program Committee

Members of the executive committee of the Six Point League, New York organization of special newspaper advertising representatives, met at the Advertising Club of New York, Sept. 19, to arrange for the league's 1926-27 season. F. St. John Richards, representative of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, and league president, presided.

F. P. Motz, of the John M. Branham Company, was named chairman of a committee to arrange for three big meetings of the entire membership to be held from Oct. 1 to May 1. A departure from usual procedure is announced for this year, in that outside prominent speakers will be called upon to address the meetings.

Mr. Motz plans to call upon a prominent advertiser, an advertising agency man, and a newspaper publisher to address the league.

Members of the executive committee are: George A. Riley, American Press Association; W. D. Ward, T. E. Conklin, Veree & Conklin; J. H. Finley, Story, Brooks & Finley; H. G. Halsteld, Paul Block, Inc.; J. P. McKinney, J. P. McKinney & Co.; W. H. Lawrence, Williams, Lawrence & Cresmer Company; M. P. Linn, S. C. Beckwith Company; M. D. Bryant, Bryant, Griffith & Brunson, Inc.; Mr. Motz; John O'Mara, O'Mara & Ormsbee; and David Randal D. J. Randall & Co.

CONWAY AND WEST PROMOTED

John H. Conway has been appointe director of advertising, and Frederic West advertising manager of the Chicago Journal of Commerce. Mr. Conway has been in charge of automobil advertising on the Journal of Commerc since the founding of the paper in 192(Before that he was connected with General Motors and was identified with th sales of passenger cars and trucks.

CIRCULATION CAMPAIGNS

Get Big Quick Results

The largest and most successful circulation campaigns on the leading newspapers in U.S.A. have been for years conducted by our organization.

WIRE OR WRITE, Care
OHIO STATE JOURNAL
COLUMBUS, OHIO

Now conducting our second campaign on above paper.

HOLLISTER'S
Circulation Organization
717-718 Commercial Exchange Bldg.
Los Angeles, Cal.

One sure way to reach Brooklyn people is to use Brooklyn newspapers; and one sure way to get a good "run for your money" is to buy the 80,000 net sales of the Standard Union.

R. J. R. Thurlman
President

LARGEST DAILY CIRCULATION IN BROOKLYN OF ANY BROOKLYN NEWSPAPER

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE, the famous editor and writer of Emporia, Kansas, says:

"Decent goods are truthfully advertised" in The New York Times

Read what William Allen White says of the power of newspaper advertising

THE AMERICAN NEWSPAPER seems to me to function socially and politically more through its economic phases than through the formal social and political side. Put in plain language, that means this: The advertising columns of a newspaper affect the American people more directly and powerfully than the news columns and editorials of the American newspaper. Through the advertising columns the standard of living in America is raised every year. The newspaper is an Archimedean lever which is lifting the living standards in America higher than any other living standards in the world. Delete advertising in America and an economic and social revolution would occur. People, no longer stimulated by advertising to desire material goods, would stop buying and the jolt to American business would precipitate a political reaction that might be catastrophic.

It makes little difference what the newspapers preach in their editorial columns about the distribution of wealth. It makes no vast difference how they policy the news; so long as the advertising columns continue to create an insatiable hunger on the part of their readers for better things than their fathers had or than even the readers themselves had the day before the paper was printed.

The New York Times is a great newspaper because it prints the news in detail, which its readers desire, and because its editorial comment on the news is intelligent and as fair as newspaper comment can be under the handicaps of haste and restricted space. But the real value of The New York Times to America is that its advertising columns are as clean and free and fair as its news columns. It stimulates the desire for honest goods. It whets the appetite of the average reader by showing him day after day and year after year what useful and lovely things he can buy with his money, what profitable savings he can make in his income, how he can get ahead materially or spiritually by patronizing the advertisers in its columns. Books, food, music, furniture, pictures, houses, clothing, cults, creeds, investments, all are displayed in the vast bazaar that is The New York Times, through which as the year rolls around the millions pass in review.

The changes that come out of the advertising columns of the American newspaper like The Times, where decent goods are truthfully advertised, are dynamic changes. Every year the old world is torn up and a new world established, not by the news, not by the editorials, but by the advertising columns of the American newspapers.

The New York Times

EDITOR & PUBLISHER SEMI-ANNUAL LINAGE TABLE

(Continued from page 3)

City	Paper	Published	Total Linage	National	Local	Classified
New York	American	(m)	2,522,062	581,078	1,211,862	729,122
	Sunday ed	(s)	4,329,702	1,112,570	2,965,414	251,718
	Total	(ms)	6,851,764	1,693,648	4,177,276	980,840
New York	Herald Tribune	(m)	5,914,338	1,752,930	3,560,788	577,714
	Sunday ed	(s)	3,751,386	1,161,690	2,229,196	360,500
	Total	(ms)	9,665,724	2,914,620	5,789,984	938,214
New York	News	(m)	2,496,114	821,078	1,675,036	.....
	Sunday ed	(s)	1,336,338	227,420	1,108,918	.....
	Total	(ms)	3,832,452	1,048,498	2,783,954	.....
New York	Journal	(e)	7,725,458	1,587,944	6,122,966	14,548
New York	Post	(e)	2,754,324	776,202	1,654,488	187,612
New York	Sun	(e)	8,937,650	2,089,958	6,201,586	110,586
New York	Telegram	(e)	3,055,086	480,890	1,068,828	1,505,368
New York	Times	(m)	9,050,776	1,935,874	5,200,766	1,862,224
	Sunday ed	(s)	6,253,012	1,808,358	3,076,474	1,368,180
	Total	(ms)	15,303,788	3,744,232	8,277,240	3,230,404
New York	Wall Street News	(m)	237,577	.....	.....	.....
New York	World	(e)	5,165,330	927,094	4,224,154	14,082
New York	World	(m)	5,133,276	841,978	1,473,530	2,817,768
	Sunday ed	(s)	4,040,496	766,794	2,235,110	1,038,592
	Total	(ms)	9,173,772	1,608,772	3,708,640	3,856,350
Philadelphia	Bulletin	(e)	11,093,397	2,513,286	6,387,525	2,192,297
Philadelphia, Pa.	News	(e)	1,438,241	82,250	1,063,544	126,262
Philadelphia	Inquirer	(m)	6,839,700	1,057,200	3,635,400	2,109,300
	Sunday ed	(s)	4,391,530	684,900	2,129,400	1,577,100
	Total	(ms)	11,231,200	1,742,100	5,764,800	3,686,400
Philadelphia	Public Ledger	(ms)	8,327,918	2,547,076	3,677,239	2,103,603
	Evening ed	(e)	8,046,226	2,089,646	4,460,717	1,495,863
Philadelphia	Record	(ms)	4,490,330	719,965	2,595,910	1,174,455
Philadelphia	Sunday Star	(s)	513,915	56,819	246,976	81,210

NEWSPAPERS IN CITIES OF 750,000 TO 999,999 POPULATION

Baltimore	American	(m)	1,676,116	239,880	625,523	754,071
	Sunday ed	(s)	1,442,453	84,298	1,090,707	266,116
	Total	(ms)	3,118,569	324,178	1,716,230	1,020,187
Baltimore	Evening Sun	(e)	9,133,210	1,474,542	5,618,056	2,040,612
Baltimore	Post	(e)	2,131,153	321,450	1,454,068	355,635
Baltimore	News	(e)	4,016,518	767,203	2,395,660	757,512
Baltimore	Sun	(m)	4,744,922	1,465,350	1,077,649	2,201,923
	Sunday ed	(s)	4,344,275	469,879	2,945,185	929,211
	Total	(ms)	9,089,197	1,935,229	4,022,834	3,131,134
St. Louis	Globe-Democrat	(m)	5,658,634	1,639,730	2,221,430	868,566
	Sunday ed	(s)	1,677,468	785,837	1,011,637	808,902
	Total	(ms)	7,336,102	2,425,567	3,233,067	1,677,468
St. Louis	Post-Dispatch	(e)	8,288,280	1,582,560	5,575,080	1,130,640
	Sunday ed	(s)	4,401,600	897,680	2,101,960	1,401,960
	Total	(es)	12,689,880	2,480,240	7,677,040	2,532,600
St. Louis	Times	(e)	2,203,418	306,311	1,659,833	222,363
Pittsburgh	Chronicle-Telegraph	(e)	6,220,634	1,195,894	4,504,556	520,184
Pittsburgh	Gazette-Times	(m)	2,961,784	827,652	1,483,384	650,748
	Sunday ed	(s)	2,394,672	611,492	1,316,266	466,914
	Total	(ms)	5,356,456	1,439,154	2,799,650	1,117,662
Pittsburgh	Post	(m)	3,073,462	836,962	1,618,456	618,044
	Sunday ed	(s)	2,300,228	614,824	1,277,528	407,876
	Total	(ms)	5,373,690	1,451,786	2,895,984	1,025,920
Pittsburgh	Press	(e)	9,096,080	1,185,716	6,269,536	1,465,870
	Sunday ed	(s)	3,825,878	376,992	2,207,100	1,135,876
	Total	(es)	12,921,958	1,562,708	8,476,636	2,601,746
Pittsburgh	Sun	(e)	4,603,242	545,832	3,692,780	364,630

16 INTERTYPES

are being used by

No Standardized Intertype has ever become obsolete

NEWSPAPERS IN CITIES OF 500,000 TO 749,999 POPULATION

City	Paper	Published	Total Linage	National	Local	Classifi
Boston	Advertiser	(m)	1,023,616	177,283	594,048	240,5
Boston	American	(e)	2,171,885	572,229	1,292,997	261,5
Boston	Sunday Advertiser	(s)	1,548,418	564,881	652,283	331,2
Boston	Christian Science Monitor	(e)	3,383,658	.....	.....	....
Boston	Globe	(me)	4,765,763	1,286,671	2,482,654	996,3
	Sunday ed	(s)	3,576,549	664,137	1,581,035	1,331,3
	Total	(mes)	8,342,312	1,950,808	4,063,689	2,327,7
Boston	Herald	(m)	5,561,552	2,106,422	2,366,948	1,088,1
	Sunday ed	(s)	2,537,097	818,302	885,629	833,1
	Total	(ms)	8,098,649	2,924,724	3,252,577	1,921,3
Boston	Post	(m)	4,455,559	1,628,660	2,826,899	....
	Sunday ed	(s)	1,570,823	754,481	816,342	....
	Total	(ms)	6,026,382	2,383,141	3,643,241	....
Boston, Mass.	Transcript	(e)	3,942,387	1,333,031	1,191,388	1,372,1
Boston	Traveler	(e)	6,376,674	2,195,464	3,203,706	977,5
Buffalo, N. Y.	Courier-Express	(m)	2,068,998	545,623	1,104,885	418,4
	Sunday ed	(s)	1,960,766	596,498	1,181,892	182,3
	Total	(ms)	4,029,764	1,142,121	2,296,777	600,8
Buffalo, N. Y.	News	(e)	8,028,451	1,857,840	4,167,609	1,987,2
Buffalo, N. Y.	Times	(es)	6,069,644	928,368	5,141,276	....
Cincinnati, Ohio.	Post	(e)	4,869,592	.....	.....	.....
Cincinnati, Ohio.	Times-Star	(e)	7,579,677	1,440,194	5,121,025	1,018,4
Milwaukee	Journal	(e)	6,948,765	1,634,339	4,041,286	1,273,1
	Sunday ed	(s)	2,569,322	830,803	1,071,424	667,0
	Total	(es)	9,518,087	2,465,142	5,112,710	1,940,2
Newark, N. J.	Evening News	(e)	10,772,033	2,608,280	5,448,463	2,715,2
Newark, N. J.	Sunday Call	(s)	3,309,415	2,936,460*	.....	284,3
	(*National and local combined)
San Francisco	Bulletin	(e)	3,401,305	608,275	1,959,337	255,1
San Francisco	Call	(e)	5,211,888	1,071,435	3,552,000	588,4
San Francisco	Chronicle	(m)	3,533,852	849,142	1,802,528	882,1
	Sunday ed	(s)	2,050,622	813,008	862,372	375,2
	Total	(ms)	5,584,474	1,662,150	2,664,900	1,257,4
San Francisco	Examiner	(ms)	9,917,451	1,743,248	5,039,041	3,135,1
San Francisco	News	(e)	3,744,310	488,747	2,609,901	645,6

NEWSPAPERS IN CITIES OF 400,000 TO 499,999 POPULATION

Kansas City	Journal	(m)	1,919,506	519,181	602,647	797,67
	Journal Post	(s)	1,111,793	295,970	582,365	233,45
	Total	(ms)	3,030,299	815,151	1,185,012	1,031,13
Kansas City	Post	(e)	2,605,810	680,718	1,127,414	797,67

(Continued on page 24)

We Haven't Sported Chin Whiskers for 20 Years

The Coming of the Automobile and Hard Roads Have Changed Buying Habits Until Today

Central Illinois is Just One Big City

The traditional "Hayseed" is found only on metropolitan stages these days, being extinct in the Corn Belt of Illinois.

The farmer and small town residents are just a few minutes removed from the Bloomington market. They wear the same stylish clothes, ride in the same fine cars, crave the same food delicacies, insist upon the same home conveniences enjoyed by the city dweller.

And what's more they BUY all these necessities from the advertising in The Daily Pantagraph, a paper they, their fathers and grandfathers have read and believed in for over 80 years.

Circulation 19,003—97% Home Delivered in the Richest Spot in Illinois

The Daily Pantagraph.

Published Every Morning Except Sunday at Bloomington, Ill.

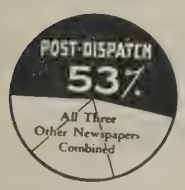
REPRESENTATIVES—

CHAS. H. EDDY CO., 247 Park Ave., New York City; 294 Washington St., Boston. J. H. GRIFFIN, Room 1501, 140 S. Dearborn St., Chicago. P. A. FOLSOM, Chemical Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

Member A. B. C., A. N. P. A., Associated Press.

Concentration in The BILLIONAREA —the Greater St. Louis Market

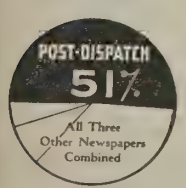
Total Paid Advertising



Home Merchants' Advertising

Classified Advertising

Rotogravure Advertising



Department Store Advertising

Automobile Advertising

Jewelry Store Advertising

Shoe Store Advertising

CONCENTRATION OF ADVERTISING

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch completely out-classes all other St. Louis newspapers in volume of advertising. For that reason, comparisons are not made with the second newspaper alone, but with ALL THREE OTHERS COMBINED.

This supremacy is built upon the solid foundation of consistently superior results to advertisers. It is tremendously significant to national advertisers that the Post-Dispatch has, for many years, carried by far the greatest volume of Home Merchants' advertising.

For years this one newspaper, alone, has exceeded the second and third newspapers combined in volume of Home Merchants' advertising. In the first six months of 1926, these merchants actually used more space in the Post-Dispatch alone than in ALL THREE OTHER NEWSPAPERS COMBINED. The circles show how retailers and general advertisers bought space in all St. Louis newspapers during the first six months of 1926.

CONCENTRATION OF RETAIL OUTLETS

Within The Billionarea—the Greater St. Louis Market—retail outlets are concentrated. Salesmen measure the distance between their calls in minutes and feet—not in hours and miles. This reduces distribution costs.

CONCENTRATION OF PEOPLE

Within The Billionarea, people are concentrated. Here are 3,000 to 4,000 families per square mile as compared with 10 or 15 families per square mile in the small towns and rural communities OUTSIDE The Billionarea.

CONCENTRATION OF DOLLARS

Within The Billionarea, the average purchasing power per family—one of the highest of all metropolitan cities in America—is three and one-half times greater than the average of the small town and rural communities OUTSIDE The Billionarea.

CONCENTRATION OF CIRCULATION

The Post-Dispatch reaches seventy-five per cent of all the families in the entire Billionarea. In the better residential sections it covers 90% to 100%. This is complete coverage of every family of purchasing consequence at one low advertising cost.

GET THESE TWO BOOKS FREE

The Post-Dispatch has published two books—The P+D+C Manual, which shows how advertisers can measure the value of both market and mediums, and Information About St. Louis—The Billionarea.

MERCHANDISING AND RESEARCH BUREAU

The Post-Dispatch Merchandising and Research Bureau has compiled valuable market information on various lines of merchandise. Write for surveys which have direct bearing on your selling problems.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

The Highest Ranking P + D + C Newspaper of The Billionarea—the Greater St. Louis Market

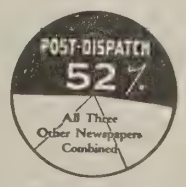
NEW YORK 285 Madison Ave. | CHICAGO Tribune Tower | DETROIT Book Bldg. | KANSAS CITY Coca-Cola Bldg.
SAN FRANCISCO 564 Market St. | LOS ANGELES Title Insurance Bldg. | SEATTLE 212 Madison St.

Women's Store Advertising

Furniture Store Advertising

Men's Store Advertising

Grocery Store Advertising



Drug Store Advertising

Radio Store Advertising

Music Store Advertising

Electrical Store Advertising

EDITOR & PUBLISHER SEMI-ANNUAL LINAGE TABLE

(Continued from page 22)

City	Paper	Published	Total Linage	National	Local	Classified
Kansas City, Mo.	Star	(m)	5,108,195	1,044,774	2,591,472	1,471,949
	Sunday ed	(s)	3,409,284	375,143	2,227,572	806,569
	Total	(ms)	8,517,479	1,419,917	4,819,044	2,178,518
Kansas City, Mo.	Star	(e)	6,273,275	1,049,000	3,725,709	1,498,566
Minneapolis, Minn.	Journal	(e)	6,193,556	1,307,779	4,111,353	774,424
	Sunday ed	(s)	1,817,763	496,285	878,505	442,973
	Total	(es)	8,011,319	1,804,064	4,989,858	1,217,397
Minneapolis, Minn.	Star	(e)	2,866,425	415,453	2,224,598	226,374
Minneapolis, Minn.	Tribune	(me)	5,630,593	1,159,470	3,353,547	1,109,979
	Sunday ed	(s)	2,171,201	653,833	981,538	535,830
	Total	(ms)	7,801,794	1,813,303	4,335,085	1,645,809
New Orleans, La.	States	(e)	3,534,073	464,855	2,644,966	424,252
	Sunday ed	(s)	1,357,725	148,685	958,536	250,504
	Total	(es)	4,891,798	613,540	3,603,502	674,756
New Orleans	Times-Picayune	(m)	6,261,173	1,168,051	3,553,799	1,539,323
	Sunday	(s)	3,472,258	591,727	1,601,203	1,279,328
	Total	(ms)	9,733,431	1,759,778	5,155,002	2,818,651
Washington	Herald	(m)	2,292,821	444,726	1,346,368	501,727
	Sunday ed	(s)	798,878	191,064	476,256	131,558
	Total	(ms)	3,091,699	635,790	1,822,624	633,285
Washington, D. C.	News	(e)	1,308,062	182,630	891,702	233,730
Washington	Post	(m)	2,006,994	608,184	1,864,500	537,410
	Sunday ed	(s)	2,673,416	312,199	2,191,122	170,095
	Total	(ms)	4,680,410	920,383	4,055,622	707,505
Washington	Star	(e)	10,640,590	1,309,610	7,068,407	2,262,573
	Sunday ed	(s)	3,741,004	433,214	2,658,092	649,698
	Total	(es)	14,381,594	1,742,824	9,726,499	2,912,271
Washington	Times	(e)	4,010,583	770,052	2,800,005	440,526

NEWSPAPERS IN CITIES OF 300,000 TO 399,999 POPULATION

Indianapolis, Ind	News	(e)	9,096,141	2,095,666	5,289,657	1,710,828
Indianapolis, Ind	Star	(m)	3,687,633	777,993	1,848,408	1,061,232
	Sunday	(s)	3,060,667	778,200	1,743,042	529,425
	Total	(ms)	6,738,300	1,556,193	3,591,450	1,590,657
Indianapolis, Ind	Times	(e)	3,081,093	373,083	2,332,688	339,108
Oakland, Cal.	Post-Enquirer	(e)	5,134,388	255,542	3,329,144	805,924
Oakland, Cal.	Tribune	(es)	9,729,412	1,120,868	5,019,686	2,845,094
Providence, R. I.	Bulletin	(e)	7,171,362	1,274,238	4,679,213	1,217,911
Providence, R. I.	Journal	(m)	3,122,268	612,022	1,301,976	1,208,270
	Sunday Journal	(s)	2,153,185	603,547	1,256,758	292,880
	Total	(ms)	5,275,453	1,215,569	2,558,734	1,501,150
Providence, R. I.	News	(e)	2,485,776	568,270	1,695,740	221,766
Providence, R. I.	Tribune	(e)	2,416,910	299,888	1,997,304	119,718
	Sunday ed	(s)	555,491	92,165	439,036	24,290
	Total	(es)	2,972,401	392,053	2,436,340	144,008
Rochester, N. Y.	Democrat & Chronicle	(m)	6,157,778	666,527	3,192,015	2,299,236
	Sunday ed	(s)	2,535,049	402,519	1,203,229	929,301
	Total	(ms)	8,786,211	1,069,046	4,395,244	3,228,537
Rochester, N. Y.	Journal-Post Express	(e)	2,828,306	342,267	1,951,631	534,408
	Sunday American	(s)	1,412,200	70,357	1,173,749	168,094
	Total	(es)	4,240,506	412,624	3,125,380	702,502
Rochester, N. Y.	Times-Union	(e)	7,009,997	1,315,375	4,939,675	717,868
Seattle, Wash.	Journal of Commerce	(m)	1,177,600	15,000	835,000	.....
Seattle, Wash.	Post-Intelligencer	(m)	3,250,528	775,950	1,736,350	718
	Sunday ed	(s)	1,779,862	856,996	509,306	413
	Total	(ms)	5,030,390	1,632,946	2,245,656	1,131
Seattle, Wash.	Star	(e)	3,468,105	895,980	2,018,481	551
Seattle, Wash.	Times	(e)	5,707,260	1,308,458	3,268,259	1,130
	Sunday ed	(s)	2,537,297	579,806	1,095,101	862
	Total	(es)	8,244,557	1,888,264	4,363,360	1,992
Seattle, Wash.	Union-Record	(e)	840,208	47,296	711,702	101

NEWSPAPERS IN CITIES OF 250,000 TO 299,999 POPULATION

Atlanta, Ga.	Journal	(e)	5,413,478	1,088,668	3,564,778	754
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,985,109	477,470	1,103,004	404
	Total	(es)	7,398,587	1,566,138	4,667,782	1,159
Birmingham Ala.	News	(e)	6,251,630	1,199,716	4,422,628	629
	Sunday ed	(s)	2,975,910	476,140	2,056,348	443
	Total	(es)	9,227,540	1,675,856	6,478,976	1,072
Birmingham, Ala.	Post	(e)	2,924,460	354,802	2,267,202	273
Columbus, Ohio.	Dispatch	(e)	8,315,116	1,266,626	5,627,790	1,386
	Sunday ed.	(s)	3,177,267	388,367	2,062,765	722
	Total	(es)	11,492,383	1,654,993	7,690,555	2,109
Columbus, Ohio.	State Journal	(ms)	3,935,900	400,750	2,771,050	764
Denver, Colo.	Express	(e)	1,461,885	140,224	1,014,860	169
Denver, Colo.	Post	(e)	5,301,968	1,133,860	3,496,304	658
	Sunday	(s)	2,426,480	574,196	1,171,996	679
	Total	(es)	7,728,448	1,708,056	4,668,300	1,338
Denver	Rocky Mt. News	(m)	1,957,368	447,384	1,066,716	420
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,309,700	287,028	737,912	281
	Total	(ms)	3,267,068	734,412	1,804,638	701
Denver	Times	(e)	2,566,480	517,552	737,912	281
Jersey City, N. J.	Jersey Journal	(e)	3,982,882	1,089,383	2,208,974	684

(Continued on page 26)

Women read it—

That's why

Food advertisers

Are increasing their Lineage in the Superior, Wisconsin

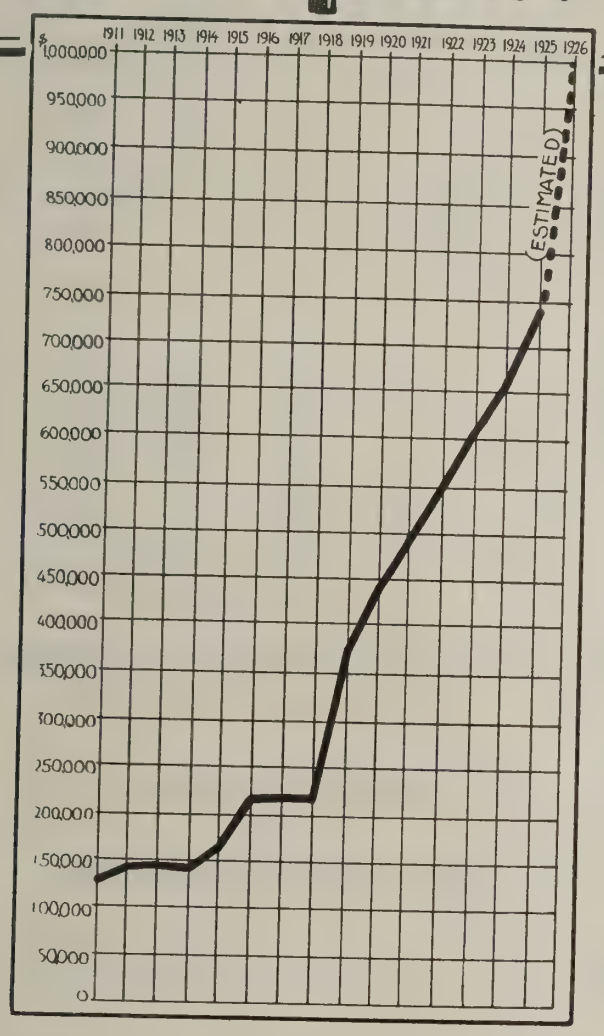
EVENING TELEGRAM

46,087 Lines of Food Advertising in August, 1925

68,989 Lines of Food Advertising in August, 1926



A gain of more than 33 1/3 %

Representatives:

Weaver, Stewart Company
Metropolitan Tower
New York City

Weaver, Stewart Company
612 N. Michigan Avenue
Chicago, Illinois

St. Paul Dispatch
St. Paul Pioneer Press

$1,000,000

In round figures this is the sum which National Advertisers will invest in space in the St. Paul Dispatch & Pioneer Press and Sunday Pioneer Press during the present year. . . . NEARLY TEN TIMES the sum that was invested in 1911.

So great an increase in fifteen years is worthy of note.

It is also to be noted that nearly all of the successful and leading National advertisers are "among those present."

The rapid growth and substantial volume of national advertising in the St. Paul Dispatch & Pioneer Press and Sunday Pioneer Press is definite proof that advertising space in these fine, metropolitan newspapers is INCREASINGLY PROFITABLE to the advertiser.

General Representative

O'MARA and ORMSBEE Inc.

New York
Chicago
Detroit
San Francisco

Average net paid circulation for the three-months period ending March 31, 1926.

	Combined Daily	Sunday
City home delivered	97,384	48,647
Total City	105,710	55,685
Total city and sub'n	114,598	60,530
Total net paid	164,109	150,512

EDITOR & PUBLISHER SEMI-ANNUAL LINAGE TABLE

(Continued from page 24)

City	Paper	Published	Total Linage	National	Local	Classified
Louisville, Ky.	Courier-Journal	(m)	3,947,971	1,072,926	1,848,019	1,018,058
	Sunday ed.	(s)	3,382,267	518,745	2,458,154	403,981
	Total	(ms)	7,330,238	1,591,671	4,306,173	1,421,039
Louisville Ky.	Times	(e)	6,254,201	1,141,210	4,078,820	1,017,814
Portland, Ore.	Journal	(e)	4,783,324	810,978	3,011,554	960,792
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,515,640	284,900	777,532	453,208
	Total	(es)	6,298,964	1,095,878	3,789,086	1,414,000
Portland, Ore.	News	(e)	2,863,302	543,746	2,028,502	280,756
Portland, Ore.	Oregonian	(m)	4,906,902	1,209,978	2,167,830	1,529,094
	Sunday ed.	(s)	2,683,120	658,896	1,187,998	836,226
	Total	(ms)	7,590,022	1,868,874	3,355,828	2,365,320
Portland, Ore.	Telegram	(e)	3,196,914	569,100	2,191,994	389,228
Toledo, Ohio	Blade	(e)	7,971,011	1,529,776	5,306,465	1,134,770
Toledo, Ohio	News-Bee	(e)	5,083,886	610,778	3,264,625	1,068,907
St. Paul, Minn.	Dispatch	(e)	5,042,828	1,318,996	2,974,916	742,434
St. Paul, Minn.	News	(e)	3,653,650	637,462	2,640,554	375,634
	Sunday ed.	(s)	838,656	110,796	565,978	161,882
	Total	(es)	4,492,306	748,258	3,206,532	537,516
St. Paul, Minn.	Pioneer Press	(m)	3,668,322	1,317,638	1,544,200	745,094
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,566,362	517,062	694,834	354,228
	Total	(ms)	5,234,684	1,834,700	2,239,034	1,099,322

NEWSPAPERS IN CITIES OF 200,000 TO 249,999 POPULATION

Dallas, Tex.	Dispatch	(e)	2,690,492	287,392	2,042,838	360,262
Dallas, Tex.	Journal	(e)	3,730,591	421,401	2,311,328	997,862
Dallas, Tex.	News	(m)	4,196,087	964,881	2,238,344	992,862
	Sunday ed.	(s)	2,769,589	378,910	1,806,288	584,391
	Total	(ms)	6,965,676	1,343,791	4,044,632	1,577,253
Dallas, Tex.	Times-Herald	(es)	8,385,455	1,120,006	6,128,470	1,136,979
Houston, Tex.	Chronicle	(e)	5,200,810	1,032,500	2,684,276	1,368,892
	Sunday ed.	(s)	2,577,109	414,988	1,677,872	471,310
	Total	(es)	7,777,919	1,447,488	4,362,148	1,840,202
Houston, Tex.	Post-Dispatch	(m)	4,157,048	742,560	2,373,322	1,041,166
	Sunday ed.	(e)	1,848,840	201,376	1,348,088	299,376
	Total	(me)	6,005,888	943,936	3,721,410	1,340,542
Houston, Tex.	Press	(e)	3,012,926	367,682	2,234,091	348,810
Memphis, Tenn.	Commercial-Appeal	(m)	5,258,582	1,254,162	3,064,460	897,526
	Sunday ed.	(s)	2,787,302	505,897	1,770,727	480,536
	Total	(ms)	8,045,884	1,760,059	4,835,187	1,378,062
Memphis, Tenn.	News Scimitar	(e)	3,470,586	556,752	2,540,902	372,932
Memphis, Tenn.	Press	(e)	3,359,160	416,598	2,466,044	476,518
New Haven	Journal-Courier	(m)	1,364,206	278,282	836,571	201,568
New Haven	Register	(e)	4,792,078	1,146,304	2,723,249	861,151
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,870,758	375,380	1,292,275	193,758
	Total	(es)	6,662,836	1,521,684	4,015,524	1,054,909
Norfolk, Va.	Ledger-Dispatch	(e)	4,814,684	995,330	3,336,214	483,140
Norfolk, Va.	Virginian-Pilot	(m)	413,182	51,716	139,608	221,858
	Sunday ed.	(s)	2,005,528	289,002	1,583,414	133,112
	Total	(ms)	2,418,710	340,718	1,723,022	354,970
Omaha, Nebr.	Bee	(mes)	3,160,948	773,395	1,852,970	312,228
Omaha, Nebr.	World-Herald	(me)	4,314,506	980,343	2,448,614	885,549
	Sunday ed.	(s)	2,090,942	495,964	1,004,640	590,338
	Total	(mes)	6,405,448	1,476,307	3,453,254	1,475,887
San Antonio	Express	(m)	3,672,037	772,086	1,820,831	1,079,120
	Sunday ed.	(s)	2,116,363	526,117	907,228	683,018
	Total	(ms)	5,788,400	1,298,203	2,728,059	1,762,138
San Antonio	Light	(e)	3,824,632	603,540	2,509,276	711,816
	Sunday ed.	(s)	2,324,602	179,284	1,436,834	468,090
	Total	(es)	6,149,234	782,824	3,946,110	1,179,906
San Antonio	News	(e)	3,829,422	700,855	1,997,354	1,118,516

NEWSPAPERS IN CITIES OF 150,000 TO 199,999 POPULATION

Akron, Ohio	Beacon-Journal	(e)	8,470,246	1,310,704	5,462,152	1,475,299
Bridgeport	Post	(e)	3,661,393	995,703	2,271,368	394,322
	Sunday ed.	(s)	768,857	170,236	501,215	89,406
	Total	(es)	4,430,250	1,165,939	2,772,583	483,728
Bridgeport	Telegram	(m)	3,643,696	993,707	2,239,693	410,296
Dayton, Ohio	Herald	(e)	5,166,420	491,204	3,960,922	704,704
Dayton, Ohio	Journal	(m)	2,113,524	309,274	1,142,330	502,348
	Sunday ed.	(s)	2,153,732	213,542	1,642,844	297,346
	Total	(ms)	4,267,256	522,816	2,785,174	799,694
Dayton, Ohio	News	(e)	6,455,190	1,065,204	4,160,898	1,162,084
	Sunday ed.	(s)	2,004,282	237,160	1,372,112	394,926
	Total	(es)	8,459,472	1,302,364	5,553,010	1,557,010
Fort Worth	Star-Telegram	(e)	3,365,172	1,083,152	1,711,604	570,416
Fort Worth	Record-Telegram	(m)	2,324,476	868,154	879,270	577,052
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,918,554	431,620	1,235,074	251,860
	Total	(ms)	4,243,030	1,299,774	2,114,344	828,912
Fort Worth	Press	(e)	2,698,654	284,004	1,932,014	482,636
Grand Rapids	Press	(e)	7,955,626	1,368,542	5,480,636	1,106,448
Hartford, Conn.	Times	(e)	7,729,803	1,267,803	5,930,071	531,450
Richmond, Va.	Times-Dispatch	(m)	3,013,220	492,604	1,825,698	694,918
	Sunday ed.	(s)	2,173,290	237,776	1,479,282	456,232
	Total	(ms)	5,186,510	730,380	3,304,980	1,151,150
Richmond, Va.	News-Leader	(e)	6,220,284	1,091,692	4,226,894	901,698
Syracuse, N. Y.	Post-Standard	(m)	2,822,088	604,651	1,525,697	620,788
	Sunday ed.	(s)	868,607	136,424	536,475	197,456
	Total	(ms)	3,690,695	741,075	2,062,172	818,244
Syracuse, N. Y.	Journal	(e)	3,101,224	665,098	1,844,542	493,220
	Sunday ed.	(s)	494,228	95,214	252,868	145,796
	Total	(es)	3,595,452	760,312	2,097,410	638,016
Syracuse, N. Y.	Herald	(e)	4,687,197	694,498	3,350,589	606,710
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,557,814	266,609	1,073,037	238,168
	Total	(es)	6,245,011	961,107	4,423,626	844,879
Worcester, Mass.	Post	(e)	2,953,604	480,970	2,026,920	392,324
Worcester, Mass.	Telegram-Gazette	(me)	8,493,569	2,376,105	4,844,653	1,185,284
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,440,321	374,431	775,817	288,860
	Total	(mes)	9,933,890	2,750,536	5,620,470	1,474,144
Youngstown, O.	Vindicator	(e)	5,518,783	802,354	3,796,804	919,625
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,274,091	352,507	682,532	239,052
	Total	(es)	6,792,874	1,154,861	4,479,336	1,158,677
Youngstown, O.	Telegram	(e..)	5,646,503	945,994	3,780,154	888,455

NEWSPAPERS IN CITIES OF 100,000 TO 150,000 POPULATION

Albany, N. Y.	News & Knicker-bocker Press	(mes)	8,745,426	1,462,146	5,597,844	1,422,436
Albany, N. Y.	Times-Union	(e)	4,854,881	1,186,450	2,899,084	555,681
Camden, N. J.	Post	(m)	3,295,920	299,967	2,252,789	660,552
	Courier	(e)	6,970,979	802,931	5,359,415	713,573
Canton, Ohio	News	(es)	5,239,668	389,088	3,795,232	970,592
Canton, Ohio	Repository	(e)	6,110,613	894,044	4,140,758	1,075,811
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,692,835	302,765	1,104,418	285,652
	Total	(es)	7,803,448	1,196,809	5,245,176	1,361,463
Des Moines	Capital	(e)	2,898,635	672,560	1,944,913	253,012
Des Moines	Register	(m)	2,361,428	1,119,364	533,301	697,453
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,720,624	607,624	752,610	359,450
	Total	(ms)	4,082,052	1,727,088	1,285,911	1,056,635
	Tribune	(e)	4,850,088	1,264,396	2,867,854	695,738

(Continued on page 30)

Character

The Indispensable Foundation

NOW we maintain that newspaper advertising is something more than a degree of pressure applied to an area of paper.

We maintain that the value of a newspaper's advertising space is in direct ratio to the value of its other printed matter.

That if its reading-columns are cheaply filled its reader-value and resultfulness are lowered; but if the high character of its contents is earnestly and jealously upheld its advertisers reap redoubled harvests.

That to be a great effective advertising medium means, first of all, to be a great newspaper.

And so The News builds, from deep foundations upward, a publication that shall stand the tests of strength, integrity and completeness; surpassing all others in its field in the substance of its offerings to its readers; accepting every opportunity to attain a still broader and richer usefulness.

The Dallas Morning News

Texas Old Distinguished Newspaper

76%

Seventy-Six per cent of all the advertising published by the Des Moines newspapers the first eight months of 1926 appeared in The Register and Tribune.

Compared with the corresponding period of a year ago The Register and Tribune showed

A Gain of 1,483,514 lines

The evening edition of The Register and Tribune gained 828,444 lines, the Sunday edition gained 215,015 lines and the morning edition 440,055 lines—a total gain of 1,483,514 lines. The other Des Moines newspaper lost 886,210 lines.

Reflects Circulation Supremacy

The Register and Tribune has a larger daily circulation than the combined circulations of the second Des Moines newspaper and the sixteen other daily newspapers published within a one hundred mile radius of Des Moines. Practically every family in Des Moines and every third family in the state of Iowa reads The Register and Tribune.

The Des Moines Register and Tribune

175,000 Daily, 150,000 Sunday—99% in Iowa

First News from Miam

RADIOGRAM

Via Independent

INDEPENDENT WIRELESS TELEGRAPH CO., Inc.
67 WALL STREET
NEW YORK, N.Y.

Time Filed
No. of Words
Charges
Ship
Coast
Landline
Total

RECEIVED AT 67 WALL STREET

BOWLING GREEN

1 WZ DW 108 PRESS COLLECT

MIAMI FLORIDA VIA SS SIBONEY AND EASTHAMPTON L.I. NY NFT 18TH

UNITED PRESS

NEWYORK OR WASHINGTONDC

MIAMI IN RUINS AFTER WORST HURRICANE IN HISTORY OF COUNTRY SEVENTY FIVE KNOWN DEAD PROPERTY DAMAGE ONE HUNDRED MILLION DOLLARS MORE THAN TWO THOUSAND INJURED HELP NEEDED BADLY HURRICANE HIT FIRST ABOUT TWO OCLOCK SATURDAY FROM NORTH WEST THEN CHANGED AND BLEW FROM SOUTH UNTIL THREE OCLOCK IN AFTERNOON BARGE WITH THIRTY FIVE ON BOARD SUNK IN HARBOR HUGE FREIGHTER DRIVEN HIGH AND DRY IN ROYAL PALM PARK HUGE TWENTY STORY MYER KAISER BANK BUILDING WRECKED MIAMI TRIBUNE WRECKED CITY DOCKS COMPLETELY DESTROYED ALL BOATS IN HARBOR SUNK INCLUDING NOHAB FORMERLY OWNED BY EX GERMAN KAISER FOOD MEDICAL SUPPLIES AND TROOPS NEEDED

RECK

CONFIRMATION

Phoned at 1.45A. to Mr. Louis

RADIOGRAM

Via Independent

INDEPENDENT WIRELESS TELEGRAPH CO., Inc.
67 WALL STREET
NEW YORK, N.Y.

Time Filed
No. of Words
Charges
Ship
Coast
Landline
Total

4 WZ DW 24 COLLECT

SS SIBONEY VIA EASTHAMPTON LI NY SEPT 19TH

UNITED PRESS

NEWYORK

KNOW NOTHING FURTHER THAN THAT YOU ALREADY HAVE THE ONLY REPORT I HAVE IS THAT RECEIVED VIA RADIO

CAPTAIN MILLER COMMANDER SIBONEY

CONFIRMATION

Phoned at 5.35A. to Mr Louis

At Left—The first news dispatch received from Miami after the hurricane, flashed to United Press clients before 2 A. M. (standard) Sunday, Sept. 19th.

Below — Confirmation from Captain Miller received nearly four hours later that Reck's bulletin was still his only word from Miami.

BY UNITED PRESS

THE first news out of Miami after the devastating hurricane of September 18 was flashed to newspapers receiving the Saturday night services of the United Press and United News before 2 a. m. (Eastern standard time) on Sunday.

Alfred P. Reck, United Press correspondent at Miami, and the courageous staff of the Tropical Radio's Hialeah station made possible this historic news beat. And Reck's unfaltering courage in making his way through 67 miles of storm-bound highway to West Palm Beach later gave United Press-United News client newspapers publishing Sunday evening, Monday morning and Monday afternoon the first eye-witness descriptions of the storm's havoc in the stricken cities.

With telephone and telegraph wires down, radio stations demolished, and railroads and highways blocked, four radio men battled through the storm to Hialeah, six miles from Miami, carrying repair equipment to set up a means of communicating with the outside world. Late Saturday night, with an aerial strung from the stump of a fallen wireless tower to a storm-stripped palm tree, the Hialeah station established communication with the Ward Line steamer Siboney, off the coast of Florida. Despite the weakness of the sending signals, Reck's message to the United Press was finally transmitted to the Siboney, whose radio operator, Raymond D. Hutchins, relayed it via the Independent Wireless to the United Press in New York. Thence it was flashed to newspapers throughout the world.

After sending his radio dispatch, Reck, with four assistants equipped with axes, started northward to find the edge of the storm area and to get more complete news out to the United Press. By automobile, motor truck and afoot, clearing away debris at many points in order to get through; sometimes abandoning one vehicle and trusting to luck to find another farther on, Reck and his companions reached West Palm Beach Sunday afternoon and found telephone lines working.

From West Palm Beach, Reck telephoned to the United Press bureau at Atlanta a complete story of the destruction at Miami and other cities in the path of the storm. This story was carried on United Press Sunday afternoon wires and on United News wires of Sunday night.

The United Press then organized a staff at West Palm Beach with Reck in charge and with motorcycle couriers to carry the news back to a wire-head. Through this staff United Press and United News gave their client newspapers thorough and accurate coverage of the entire storm-swept peninsula, Monday and thereafter.

ME WIRED COMMENTS FROM EDITORS

WAUKEE (WIS.) JOURNAL
"ongratulations on great scoop scored on Miami storm Sunday ning. We had it in our home edi- and left the opposition cold."

ANDO (FLA.) REPORTER
TR
"lease accept our congratulations the manner in which you put igh the Miami storm news. Your itive enabled us to give the le of Central Florida the first ntic information regarding the i storm situation we were four s ahead of anyone else."

RLOTTE (N. C.) NEWS
"eartiest congratulations on your plete and most excellent story day night of the Florida catas- e. The News carried in its ar Sunday morning issue every tial detail used by the opposition blishing an extra edition twelve later."

HINGTON (D. C.) NEWS
"ews went extra papers sold like akes. Congratulations excellent e which enabled us to give ington first real story of disaster."

SAS CITY (KANS.) KANSAN
"ne service Saturday night on la storm."

TIMORE (MD.) POST
"rvice wonderful. Congratula- n"

HANGE TELEGRAPH CO. DON)
"uch appreciate excellent service ane."

TLAND (ORE.) JOURNAL
"ngratulations on splendid cover- lorida hurricane disaster. Satur- ight bulletins arrived here short- er 11 p.m., in plenty of time tstanding display in city edition. irst report reaching Portland."

OTHER RECENT U. P. ACCOMPLISHMENTS

Gertrude Ederle's channel swim: 30 minutes ahead.

Death of Rudolph Valentino: 10 minutes ahead.

Premier Baldwin's sensational statement on English coal situation: an exclusive U. P. Story.

Mrs. Corson's channel swim: 6 minutes ahead.

Ernst Vierkotter's channel swim: 2 hours ahead.

Azores earthquake: first eyewitness details from Fayal after the disaster.

Interview with Chief Justice Taft on courts and crime: an exclusive U. P. story.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER SEMI-ANNUAL LINAGE TABLE

(Continued from page 26)

City	Paper	Published	Total Linage	National	Local	Classified
Duluth, Minn.	News-Tribune	(ms)	3,590,982	515,830	2,301,250	596,844
Elizabeth, N. J.	Journal	(e)	6,366,528	822,514	4,542,454	1,001,560
El Paso, Tex.	Herald	(e)	2,950,879	972,241	1,521,139	457,499
El Paso, Tex.	Post	(e)	1,464,698	201,658	1,065,253	197,787
El Paso, Tex.	Times	(m)	1,343,094	507,406	512,698	322,990
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,023,269	259,057	648,262	115,950
	Total	(ms)	2,366,363	766,463	1,160,960	438,940
Erie, Pa.	Dispatch-Herald	(e)	4,051,831	614,649	2,738,196	588,463
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,196,530	255,540	771,827	169,019
	Total	(es)	5,248,361	870,189	3,510,023	757,482
Erie, Pa.	Times	(e)	4,640,156	829,598	3,078,695	731,863
Flint, Mich.	Journal	(es)	7,200,780	1,024,142	5,513,788	662,850
Jacksonville, Fla.	Journal	(e)	4,866,624	511,644	3,211,782	879,032
Jacksonville, Fla.	Times-Union	(ms)	9,227,988	3,119,662	4,271,054	1,718,325
Kansas City	Kansan	(es)	2,930,494	663,950	1,558,221	666,897
Knoxville, Tenn.	Journal	(ms)	4,095,938	582,204	3,061,520	452,214
Knoxville, Tenn.	News	(e)	2,464,729	229,394	1,883,466	345,457
Long Beach Cal.	Press-Telegram	(e)	4,804,263	794,817	2,952,520	1,056,926
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,321,757	279,749	787,870	254,138
	Total	(es)	6,126,020	1,074,566	3,740,390	1,311,064
Long Beach Cal.	Sun	(ms)	1,818,428	58,600	1,093,622	335,218
Lowell, Mass.	Courier-Citizen	(me)	2,969,896	565,472	2,122,544	281,880
Lowell, Mass.	Sunday Telegram	(s)	51,689	3,900	46,119	970
Lynn, Mass.	Telegram-News	(e)	3,095,816	464,440	2,120,030	490,098
	Sunday ed.	(s)	579,852	119,546	291,606	168,700
	Total	(es)	3,675,668	587,986	2,411,636	658,798
New Bedford, Mass.	Standard & Mercury	(me)	3,149,524	767,214	2,154,320	227,990
	Sunday ed.	(s)	867,846	212,296	591,164	64,386
	Total	(mes)	4,017,370	979,510	2,745,484	292,376
New Bedford, Mass.	Times	(e)	1,985,186	180,376	1,551,620	185,416
Oklahoma City, Okla.	News	(e)	2,874,876	486,888	1,998,286	389,572
Oklahoma City Okla.	Oklahoman	(m)	3,490,830	977,494	1,602,454	877,450
	Times	(e)	4,124,750	1,090,796	2,118,844	871,808
	Oklahoman	(s)	1,697,052	490,952	775,012	374,864
Passaic, N. J.	Herald	(e)	3,775,427	652,890	2,672,060	383,873
Passaic, N. J.	News	(e)	3,847,233	758,968	2,661,706	426,559
Paterson, N. J.	Call	(m)	4,765,115	641,675	3,434,822	688,618
Paterson, N. J.	Evening News	(e)	4,988,787	451,034	3,906,692	577,052
Paterson, N. J.	Press-Guardian	(e)	4,603,778	626,746	3,223,364	704,086
	Sunday Chronicle	(s)	897,382	217,338	542,936	133,701
	Total	(es)	5,501,160	844,084	3,766,300	837,787
Reading, Pa.	Eagle	(es)	6,043,254	1,425,228	3,629,220	988,806
Salt Lake City, Utah	Telegram	(e)	2,532,054	292,796	1,811,236	366,128
	Sunday ed.	(s)	508,816	80,710	315,224	102,340
	Total	(es)	3,040,870	373,506	2,026,460	468,468
Salt Lake City, Utah	Tribune	(m)	3,622,934	879,452	1,721,496	948,[illegible]
	Sunday ed.	(s)	2,050,048	452,424	1,273,314	311,[illegible]
	Total	(ms)	5,672,982	1,331,876	2,994,810	1,259,[illegible]
San Diego, Cal.	Sun	(e)	5,569,466	625,772	3,974,180	969,[illegible]
San Diego, Cal.	Union	(ms)	8,444,142	1,349,586	4,732,042	2,362,[illegible]
	Tribune	(e)	5,970,566	1,242,122	4,728,444	1,043,[illegible]
Scranton, Pa.	Times	(e)	6,781,908	1,045,499	5,215,252	471,[illegible]
South Bend, Ind.	News-Times	(mes)	5,399,126	743,680	3,696,196	878,[illegible]
South Bend, Ind.	Tribune	(e)	4,546,658	807,893	3,034,632	625,[illegible]
	Sunday	(s)	1,017,207	212,710	650,915	153,[illegible]
	Total	(es)	5,563,865	1,020,603	3,685,547	778,[illegible]
Spokane, Wash.	Chronicle	(e)	5,202,784	884,648	3,455,382	862,[illegible]
Spokane, Wash.	Spokesman-Review	(m)	2,819,768	748,070	1,169,740	901,[illegible]
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,718,509	527,500	911,025	279,[illegible]
	Total	(ms)	4,537,277	1,275,570	2,080,765	1,181,[illegible]
Tacoma, Wash.	Ledger	(ms)	3,113,110	578,858	1,710,058	824,[illegible]
Tacoma, Wash.	News-Tribune	(e)	5,000,338	1,086,470	2,837,898	1,075,[illegible]
Tacoma, Wash.	Times	(e)	2,697,828	515,438	1,635,718	546,[illegible]
Tampa, Fla.	Times	(e)	7,464,394	660,646	5,393,626	1,221,[illegible]
Tampa, Fla.	Tribune	(m)	6,914,782	1,161,062	3,987,956	1,643,[illegible]
	Sunday ed.	(s)	3,124,590	446,026	2,206,484	465,[illegible]
	Total	(ms)	10,039,372	1,607,088	6,194,440	2,109,[illegible]
Tulsa, Okla.	Tribune	(e)	4,047,778	625,058	2,615,676	635,[illegible]
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,223,922	207,060	825,790	183,[illegible]
	Total	(es)	5,271,700	832,118	3,441,466	818,[illegible]
Tulsa, Okla.	World	(ms)	5,855,808	1,302,980	3,478,034	1,053,[illegible]
Utica, N. Y.	Observer-Dispatch	(e)	5,400,598	996,492	3,687,138	683,[illegible]
	Sunday ed.	(s)	764,218	65,170	581,574	117,[illegible]
	Total	(es)	6,164,662	1,061,662	4,268,712	801,[illegible]
Utica, N. Y.	Press	(m)	5,227,070	522,791	4,060,767	643,[illegible]

(Continued on page 32)

The complete checking proof service that we offer newspaper publishers is without question the final solution to his problem. Our service is nothing more than the checking department of the publisher's office, conveniently located in New York and Chicago, and operating under a strong cooperative policy of rendering the greatest possible service to agencies and advertisers—in the interests of our subscribers.

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.

538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO — 79 Madison Ave. NEW YORK

New England's Second Largest Market

Providence has Telephone for Every 4.8 Persons

A recent national survey shows Providence to be high up on the list of cities having large numbers of telephones in proportion to their populations.

There are 21.3 telephones for each 100 persons—a pretty high average when you find New York City with 21.7.

The Providence Journal

and

The Evening Bulletin

give you excellent coverage in this prosperous market.

Circulation 105,221 Net Paid

Providence Journal Company

Providence, R. I.

Representatives

CHAS. H. EDDY CO., Boston New York Chicago

R. J. BIDWELL CO., San Francisco Los Angeles Seattle

HERE IS LEADERSHIP IN THE ROCHESTER, N. Y., TRADING AREA

FIRST in Circulation Total Lineage Proven Results

Net Paid Circulation, Week of September 18th, Exceeded

80,707 COPIES DAILY

85,557 COPIES SUNDAY

ONE COMPLETE EDITION

1,125,784 LINES GAINED

FIRST EIGHT MONTHS 1926

Sell the Prosperous Western New York Market
With the

Democrat and Chronicle

ROCHESTER HERALD

"THE LEADER IN ITS FIELD"

Paul Block, Inc., NATIONAL REPRESENTATIVE, New York, N. Y.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER SEMI-ANNUAL LINAGE TABLE

(Continued from page 30)

City	Paper	Published	Total Linage	National	Local	Classified
Waterbury, Conn.	Republican	(m)	3,559,941	747,040	2,341,305	471,596
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,124,100	213,941	777,425	132,734
	Total	(ms)	4,684,041	960,991	3,118,730	604,330
Waterbury, Conn.	American	(e)	4,385,664	917,793	2,952,748	515,123
Waterbury, Conn.	Democrat	(e)	3,221,549	266,813	2,607,681	347,055
Yonkers, N. Y.	Herald	(e)	2,548,532	452,936	1,486,267	511,665

NEWSPAPERS IN CITIES OF 75,000 TO 99,999 POPULATION

Allentown, Pa.	Chronicle & News	(e)	4,046,784	267,316	3,330,404	383,068
Allentown, Pa.	Call	(m)	5,013,198	997,248	3,271,618	606,740
	Sunday ed.	(s)	737,828	132,706	486,122	115,444
	Total	(ms)	5,751,026	1,129,954	3,757,740	722,184
Chattanooga, Tenn.	News	(e)	3,895,272	770,126	2,648,754	470,372
East St. Louis, Ill.	Journal	(es)	2,994,949	386,278	2,054,725	553,946
Evansville, Ind.	Courier	(m)	3,531,040	625,240	2,492,310	413,490
	Sunday ed.	(s)	2,682,868	171,262	1,358,854	152,712
	Total	(ms)	6,213,908	795,502	3,851,164	566,202
Evansville, Ind.	Journal	(e)	2,169,846	490,546	1,259,594	419,706
Evansville, Ind.	Press	(e)	4,136,244	553,490	3,127,866	443,310
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,110,144	30,590	944,608	134,890
	Total	(es)	5,246,388	584,080	4,072,474	578,200
Fort Wayne, Ind.	News-Sentinel	(e)	5,891,844	3,962,462	3,962,462	765,786
Gary, Ind.	Post-Tribune	(e)	5,049,869	596,691	3,753,069	700,109
Harrisburg, Pa.	Record	(e)	2,916,277	688,555	1,873,816	353,906
Hollywood, Cal.	Citizen	(es)	2,380,169	90,454	1,948,179	336,196
Lansing, Mich.	State Journal	(e)	5,634,615	951,524	3,950,730	705,901
Lansing, Mich.	Capital News	(e)	2,550,926	196,714	2,057,916	274,274
Lawrence, Mass.	Tribune	(e)	3,123,944	706,564	1,911,725	505,655
Little Rock, Ark.	Democrat	(e)	2,845,696	373,002	2,059,302	332,584
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,001,868	144,410	757,946	96,026
	Total	(es)	3,847,564	517,412	2,817,248	428,610
Little Rock, Ark.	Gazette	(m)	3,526,586	953,274	1,953,050	503,986
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,637,552	519,428	896,686	179,984
	Total	(ms)	5,164,138	1,472,702	2,849,736	683,970
(Classified includes display only; 110,630 counted classified ads not included in classified)
Manchester, N. H.	Union	(m)	2,703,288	834,799	1,582,322	286,167
	Leader	(e)	2,687,272	836,059	1,569,904	281,309
Pawtucket, R. I.	Times	(e)	5,144,572	797,394	3,890,844	405,189
Peoria, Ill.	Star	(e)	4,266,799	869,132	2,733,044	664,623
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,151,793	200,648	784,952	166,193
	Total	(es)	5,418,592	1,069,780	3,517,996	830,816
Rockford, Ill.	Register-Gazette	(e)	4,177,124	846,902	2,434,656	824,824
Sacramento, Cal.	Union	(ms)	2,669,912	138,516	1,991,360	432,698
Schenectady, N. Y.	Gazette	(m)	5,250,315	865,592	3,632,881	694,246
Schenectady, N. Y.	Union-Star	(e)	4,089,187	629,848	2,843,820	389,217
Sioux City, Ia.	Journal	(mes)	3,165,344	1,045,786	1,704,094	381,220
(250,754 lines automotive display included in national)
Sioux City, Ia.	Tribune	(e)	2,843,282	809,760	1,722,126	311,395
(169,778 lines automotive included in local and national)
St. Joseph, Mo.	Gazette	(m)	1,438,337	274,694	905,049	106,330
	Sunday ed.	(s)	979,102	124,152	766,498	73,976
	Total	(ms)	2,417,439	398,846	1,671,547	180,306
St. Joseph, Mo.	News-Press	(e)	3,477,292	1,045,688	2,042,250	389,354
Troy, N. Y.	Record	(me)	3,485,907	824,374	2,328,370	33,163
Wichita, Kan.	Beacon	(e)	3,100,046	466,198	2,019,707	548,075
	Sunday ed.	(s)	984,860	83,152	718,004	178,739
	Total	(es)	4,084,906	549,350	2,737,711	726,814
Wichita, Kan.	Eagle	(ms)	4,731,517	996,807	2,477,503	1,257,207
Wilkes-Barre, Pa.	News	(e)	3,357,480	465,302	2,735,450	165,728
Wilkes-Barre, Pa.	Times-Leader	(e)	5,951,180	674,931	4,963,751	312,498
Wilkes-Barre, Pa.	Record	(m)	6,602,183	592,494	4,909,282	908,271
Winston-Salem, N. C.	Twin-City Sentinel	(e)	4,313,652	887,810	2,855,720	69,580

NEWSPAPERS IN CITIES OF 50,000 TO 74,999 POPULATION

Altoona, Pa.	Mirror	(e)	6,094,893	720,538	4,708,389	665,966
Altoona, Pa.	Tribune	(m)	2,842,542	263,624	2,106,062	472,856
Atlantic City, N. J.	Press-Union	(me)	5,425,268	828,433	3,319,649	1,202,944
	Sunday Press	(s)	1,574,577	67,648	1,048,976	421,585
	Total	(mes)	6,999,845	896,081	4,404,625	1,624,529
Augusta, Ga.	Chronicle	(m)	1,282,506	268,486	889,938	124
	Sunday ed.	(s)	897,378	107,722	720,314	69
	Total	(ms)	2,179,884	376,208	1,610,252	193
Bay City, Mich.	Times-Tribune	(es)	4,149,992	732,578	3,135,482	281
Beaumont, Tex.	Enterprise & Journal	(mes)	6,757,058	1,656,634	4,152,529	912
Berkeley, Cal.	Gazette	(e)	2,840,124	177,520	1,769,404	864
Bethlehem, Pa.	Globe-Times	(e)	4,200,910	740,348	3,064,810	305
Binghamton, N. Y.	Press-Leader	(e)	5,450,450	1,043,855	3,606,974	799
Brockton, Mass.	Enterprise	(e)	2,619,484	663,572	1,470,868	448
Columbia, S. C.	State	(m)	1,764,994	665,756	938,896	160
	Sunday ed.	(s)	997,290	342,314	538,104	116
	Total	(ms)	2,762,284	1,008,070	1,477,000	277
Cedar Rapids, Ia.	Republican	(e)	1,254,351	276,244	877,509	100
	Sunday ed.	(s)	626,736	107,137	471,727	47
	Total	(es)	1,881,087	383,481	1,349,236	148
Cedar Rapids, Ia.	Gazette	(e)	3,563,218	884,100	2,358,636	257
Charleston, W. Va.	Gazette	(m)	2,834,978	619,982	1,789,389	364
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,157,520	201,810	861,903	89
	Total	(ms)	3,992,498	821,702	2,651,292	454
Charleston, S. C.	Post	(e)	2,987,250	817,248	2,169,902	...
Charlotte, N. C.	Observer	(m)	4,003,594	799,288	2,757,622	446
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,827,434	355,642	1,257,984	213
	Total	(ms)	5,831,028	1,154,930	4,015,606	660
Charlotte, N. C.	News	(e)	4,043,722	360,562	3,141,511	400
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,133,133	99,174	909,866	121
	Total	(es)	5,176,855	459,736	4,051,377	522
Chester, Pa.	Times	(e)	3,111,774	606,017	2,215,531	290
Columbia, Ga.	Ledger	(e)	2,744,322	426,328	1,134,118	162
Covington, Ky.	Post	(e)	1,288,798	58,380	979,608	226
	Sunday ed.	(s)	344,078	37,184	230,188	76
	Total	(es)	1,632,876	95,564	1,209,796	303
Covington, Ky.	Times-Star	(e)	908,040	29,232	780,584	53
Davenport, Ia.	Democrat	(e)	2,592,234	335,076	2,082,794	174
	Sunday ed.	(s)	896,994	143,584	655,466	97
	Total	(es)	3,489,228	478,660	2,738,260	272
Davenport, Ia.	Times	(e)	4,740,502	930,682	3,367,420	442

(Continued on page 50)

When the Ludlow Goes Into a Composing Room Many Wastes Go Out!

WHEREVER the Ludlow goes into a composing room many wastes go out. Open frames with their dust covered cases give way to dust-proof matrix cabinets that save space and contain compact Ludlow matrix cases.

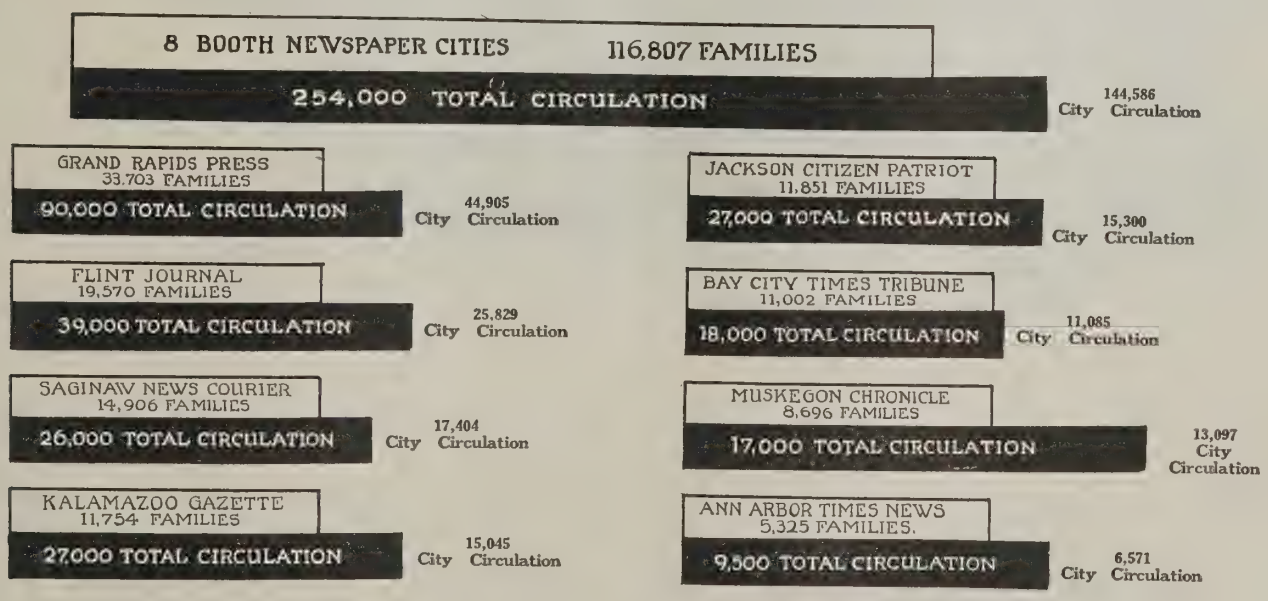
Big runs of ads and last-minute copy are readily handled with the Ludlow, as it meets peak loads with an unlimited supply of typefaces. The old bugaboo of hunting for sorts vanishes in the face of an endless supply of bright, new Ludlow sluglines that print clear and sharp. Distribution of used forms becomes a thing of the past.

Give your compositor clean, durable Ludlow matrices to set, instead of dusty, mussy, rapidly wearing type. Save his time and your money by installing the Ludlow, with which he can cast all sizes of faces, six to sixty-point, condensed, medium-width and extended, with one mold. Make your pages sparkle with Ludlow quality. Get more productive hours and reduce page costs. How you can profit through these and many other Ludlow advantages will be gladly explained in greater detail upon request.

Ludlow Typograph Company
2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago

San Francisco: 5 Third Street
Atlanta: 41 Marietta Street
New York: 63 Park Row
Boston: 261 Franklin Street

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION



The 8 Booth Newspapers in Michigan's Market—Offer Concentrated Circulation

THE eight Booth Newspapers of Michigan are all evening papers and every one offers a highly concentrated coverage. The charts on this page show a comparison of the city circulations of these newspapers as compared with the number of families in each city. These Booth Newspapers carry no waste circulation. They cover their shopping radius in a most complete way, distributing practically their entire circulation within this territory.

The eight Booth Newspapers in Michigan are read daily by more than a million people.

The eight Booth Newspapers have actually more paid circulation in each city than there are families, as shown on the chart below.

Michigan is dynamic in industry and offers in comparison with population the best market in the United States

THE BOOTH PUBLISHING CO.

I. A. KLEIN, Eastern Representative
50 East 42nd Street, New York

J. E. LUTZ, Western Representative
Tower Building, Chicago

In the heat and hurry of getting out a holiday rush—have you ever wished double the output of your equipment? T will gratify this wish. It is actually "two machines in mechanism capable of finishing and delivering all casts

TWIN PONY AUT

It may be worked by one man, the same as the re men with double the output of a regular Pony Autopla

The Twin Por truly efficient becau without doubling floor space.

Price
f. o. b. P

Machines may

R. HOE & COMPANY, INC.

GOSS PRINTING PRESS COMPANY
THE GEORGE RUSSELL REED

WOOD NEWSPAPER MACHINERY CORP

a heavy edition or a special during the re possible to wave a magic wand and

)PLATE MACHINE

–two complete casting mechanisms and one finishing
, cold and dry ready for press.

Pony Autoplate Machine; or it may be worked by two chine.

oplate Machine is doubles production
ment or doubling

750
ed, N.J.

red of us or of

LTER SCOTT & COMPANY
IANY of San Francisco, California

DUPLEX PRINTING PRESS COMPANY

TION, 501 Fifth Avenue, New York City

EDITORIAL

A PROSPEROUS PRESS

AUGUST advertising statistics, showing on page fourteen of this issue, demonstrate better than any other index known to the business world the economic situation in the leading cities of the nation. The 35 cities listed show increased advertising in every instance, meaning increased trading activity. This bright sign spells n-a-t-i-o-n-a-l p-r-o-s-p-e-r-i-t-y at the opening of the fall and winter trading season.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER also presents in this issue its regular linage tabulation for the first six months of the year. The totals are astounding. All high records of the past were beaten. The August figures demonstrate that the linage sweep is continuing, promising a volume for 1926, if nothing happens to rock the boat, exceeding the record of any year in newspaper history.

Favorable commercial conditions, plus the important fact that the trading public has at last discovered the power of the newspaper to sell merchandise and service, account for these huge totals. In no sense is it an advertising "boom." The record shows a steady seven-year climb. The people of the principal trading centers of the United States and Canada are at work and possess tangible rewards of industry and thrift. The people indulge the spending spirit as never before. Human comfort is a ruling passion. The newspaper has become a part of the average citizen's daily regimen, even as food, clothing and shelter. Advertising is the modern substitute for the public market. The people read commercial announcements for "spot" interest. Advertising is trusted.

Those engaged in newspaper making, advertising and selling, may catch from the figures showing on our pages this week fresh inspiration, new courage, a firmer determination. There has never been anything in newspaper history to equal this economic triumph. A man who cannot make a success of a newspaper of established quality in this golden age may well doubt his own professional ability and look within for cause.

The formula of success in the newspaper business of this day is simple. Make a good newspaper. Do not compromise with the devil on any score and thus deserve the full confidence of the people. See to it that every person who desires your paper gets it. Sell advertising space to legitimate advertisers and refuse it to fakers who mean only to exploit human weakness or ignorance. Know costs and operate at a fair margin of profit. Promote your business by the same means that your advertisers use. Reserve a part of your time and interest for service to the craft through established organizations. Lend your paper to good citizenship and practice what you preach.

To get a sharp-angle perspective on the beneficence of our successful journalism, look backward 20 years! Or look overseas to great nations that now depend for news on a press that exists by token of political or industrial subsidy, or to other nations whose press is the football of self-appointed dictators.

When an English editor disagrees with his publisher on a major matter of policy he resigns and is honored for his act. When an American editor disagrees and resigns other newspaper men seem to look upon him as queer.

FLORIDA REBUILDING

THE sympathy of the nation goes out to Florida, stricken by a force that could not have been anticipated and may never recur. A wonderful people had suddenly developed in a land of alluring tropical beauty one of the most splendid communities in the world. This state building was something like the discovery of a new national resource. It was accomplished by unstinted industry, magnificent use of modern scientific means and lavish and courageous investment.

The nation learns with gratification that first reports of the extent of the disaster were overdrawn and that the sturdy builders have become rebuilders. We predict that the structural scars left by the storm will have been wiped out before the Winter visitors reach the sunny beaches. To hundreds of thousands of Americans who enjoy warm weather in Winter much more than a three-day tropical hurricane is required to blow out the light that shines in Florida.

Woe unto them that are wise in their own eyes, and prudent in their own sight.—Isaiah; V, 21.

STORY WITH TWO MORALS

FOLLOWING the death of Lord Northcliffe a party of English and American authors and newspaper men met at a London hotel and discussed incidents in the life of the great publisher that seemed to reveal his character and amazing constructive power.

Hall Caine told the story of his first meeting with Harmsworth. Caine at that time was fairly established as a novelist. Harmsworth had just started to publish his first periodical, Answers.

"I happened to pass through a residential street in a certain quarter of London," Caine said, "and saw a man in hot pursuit of a boy. The latter was a small boy and the man was tall and rather heavy, with a stern face and threatening attitude. The lad escaped and the man, turning, met me, a total stranger. 'There's a young rascal for you,' he exclaimed. 'I employed him to distribute sample papers to these houses and instructed him to leave but one paper on each doorstep. I have been paying him for each hundred so distributed, but I now find that he has been leaving three or more papers at each door. That is waste of my material and that boy is a cheat.' Finally Harmsworth talked about his business and it was several years later that I made his acquaintance as a successful publisher."

The story is well worth repeating for the EDITOR & PUBLISHER audience. To the ambitious climber no detail involving success can be ignored. Waste of good material is sufficient cause for indignation among sincere people.

Now that President Coolidge has departed from the ancient rule and permitted Bruce Barton to quote him we see no good reason why the favor should not be extended to the Washington correspondents' corps, all in the interest of good journalism and a high degree of democracy.

THE LEAKY BARREL

A LETTER comes from the Warner Company, of Detroit, indignantly protesting that the space advertisements which that concern has been offering to newspapers to promote the oil burner and electric refrigeration industries were not paid for by those industries but were offered as syndicate material for which publishers were to pay. This novel syndicated "promotion" is based on the reciprocal tickle theory. If a newspaper consents to give away great gobs of its advertising space to create reader interest in oil as a substitute for coal and power as a substitute for ice the manufacturers of branded oil burners and refrigerators may look with favor on such newspapers and give them business when, and if, they seek to trade in its community.

When EDITOR & PUBLISHER mentioned the activities of the Warner Company in the issue of September 11, it expressed doubt as to the concern's source of revenue from the enterprise. The stuff looked like free publicity in space advertising form and any newspaper using it would surely richly endow the oil burner and electric refrigerator industries. Behold! The Warner Company now says it received nothing from the advertised industries but proposes to sell the advertising copy to publishers in the name of "promotion."

As the disposition to give away valuable newspaper advertising space now amounts to a passion among some newspaper men, the Warner Company's scheme will meet favor in some offices. The Detroit Free Press promotion department is committed to this form of promotion and we know of other papers that occasionally practice it or are inclined to fall in line.

It is the view of EDITOR & PUBLISHER that when newspapers promote consumer demand for certain commodities by publishing free advertising they encourage a very doubtful quality of "advertiser good will" and positively toss away an element in advertising which should be paid for by the favored industry. How, for instance, can industrial co-operative advertising be encouraged, as it should be, if newspapers set this give-away precedent? A newspaper that publishes free space advertisements setting forth the virtues of oil burners over other forms of heating becomes an advocate in a trade controversy. If old established advertisers dealing in coal, gas and electricity should enter a complaint of favoritism they would be well within their rights. Indeed, resistance might reasonably be expected from the piano, radio, automobile, knit-goods, steel filing cabinet, clothing and fruit industries, to mention only a few, in such terms as: "Why don't you boost our industries—we are old patrons and deserve as much consideration as the new-comer." Free industrial space advertising, analyzed accurately, means rate-cutting, or rebating, or whatever you may wish to call such discrimination.

As we see the scheme it is but a new twist to the old free publicity traffic, the newspaper publisher in this instance absurdly taking the initiative. The advertising barrel is even now leaky enough.

What is worth-while local opinion concerning your newspaper's handling of the fight?

BEGINNING TO GAG

HERE is some newspaper idealism from an advertising man: "If the material furnished by an automobile manufacturer has any news value, the newspaper should be glad to receive it because there is no other subject in which the American public is more interested than in the automobile. If the item has no news value, it should not be published, no matter how much advertising of the manufacturers' product may be running in the newspaper."

The author of this sentiment is G. F. Lord, general sales manager, Star Car Division, Durant Motors, Inc. That is a fair statement, because Mr. Lord plainly means that the editor of the newspaper shall be judge of what is news.

In Mr. Lord's statement an assertion is made which, we submit to our readers, is one of the most remarkable revelations that has come out during the discussion of the free publicity evil. It supports our view that the prime fault lies with the newspapers, not the advertisers. Mr. Lord says that it is "utterly impossible" to furnish live news items to the extent that dealers demand "to meet the requests of local newspapers" and that the company often issues stuff of "little news value" which, in this advertising man's opinion, an editor should refuse to print unless he is seeking to gratify a local dealer by printing free advertising.

This lays the free publicity scandal of the American press raw and bleeding at the door of journalism. When even the advertiser begins to gag at the twaddle that newspapers print as "news" to flatter local dealers the limit, it would seem, has been reached. We have said before, and we believe it now, that the free publicity evil will be cleaned up finally from without, rather than from within the house of journalism. Sensible advertisers know, for instance, that the silly automobile tripe that is being dished up as "news" is casting discredit on the business, breaking the confidence of the public in automobile information, both news and advertising, and that many newspapers are so deeply committed to print free advertising for various industries that they are utterly helpless to start a reform.

Only the sense of humor of President Smith of the Royal Typewriter Company saved newspapers from giving radio broadcast accounts of the fight with credit to the typewriter. Mr. Rickard was willing that the newspapers that had promoted his big show should be barred from broadcasting the result, except when willing to advertise the typewriter.

PERSONAL

KEATS SPEED, managing editor of the New York Sun, returned to New York this week from his summer vacation.

A. G. Bigsbee, assistant publisher of the Seattle Times, left New York Sept. 20 for Seattle, following several weeks visit in New York.

John H. Fahey, publisher of the Worcester (Mass.) Evening Post, was one of the speakers at the 13th annual national business conference at Babson Park, Wellesley, Mass., last Saturday.

William Allen White, editor of the Emporia (Kan.) Gazette, was host to more than 60 Kansas newspapermen at a recent dinner given in honor of William M. Jardine, secretary of agriculture.

M. C. Meigs, publisher of the Chicago Herald and Examiner has returned to Chicago from a short visit in New York.

S. Heath Rich, editor of the Brockton (Mass.) Enterprise, is recovering from an operation.

J. Sherman McDowell, editor of the Alameda (Cal.) Times-Star has been appointed to the California Harbor Commission by Governor Richardson. McDowell succeeds M. J. Cochrane, deceased.

Mr. and Mrs. P. S. McGlynn have returned from their usual summer vacation at Bay View, Mich. Mr. McGlynn is the publisher of the Moline (Ill.) Dispatch.

J. C. Denious, editor and publisher of the Dodge City, (Kan.) Daily Globe, has been made secretary of the Kansas Republican State Committee.

J. M. Stephenson, publisher of the South Bend (Ind.) News-Times with Paul G. Hoffman, vice-president in charge of sales of the Studebaker Corporation, Howard Welch, foreign sales manager, and Ralph DePalma, the race driver, will sail on the Mauretania for the Paris Auto Show, Sept. 29.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

A. M. DRAKE, formerly advertising manager of the radio department of the Chicago Evening Post, has resigned to become a member of the soliciting staff of the Chain Store Age, Chicago.

Victor Kinson, formerly with the Milwaukee (Wis.) Sentinel, has joined the local advertising staff of the Chicago Herald and Examiner.

Eugene Flitcraft of the Chicago Herald and Examiner, who has been handling the financial advertising in New York for Tom Lowery, has returned to Chicago and has joined the local advertising staff.

Ed. Riggins who recently sold the San Mateo (Cal.) News-Leader has been named business manager of the Fresno Bee.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

ARMAND DE MASI has resigned from the sporting department of the New York World.

Ira Bird, formerly with the New York World, has joined the cable re-write staff of the New York Times.

Marshall R. Hall, formerly of the Cleveland Times, has joined the staff of the Columbus (O.) Ohio State Journal.

Jack Hawkins, who has been on the sports staff of the New York Morning Telegraph for several months is now sports editor of the Waco (Tex.) Times-Herald.

Carl Kesler is back on the copy desk of the Chicago Daily News after touring Europe during the summer months with his wife.

Max A. Weston, associate editor of the Daily Illini, student newspaper at the University of Illinois, last year, is now telegraph editor of the Kewanee (Ill.) Daily Star-Courier.

Charles Laue, has resigned from the copy desk of the New York World.

Everett Houser, of Shelby, N. C., has joined the staff of the Cleveland (N. C.) News.

John Edward Croak, for many years county editor of the Worcester (Mass.) Gazette, has been made county agent for both the Gazette and Telegram.

Joseph J. Coakley, has left the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram to enter Syracuse University.

Robert Emmett Golden, of the copy desk, Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, has been made assistant managing editor of the Billboard, Cincinnati, O.

Martin D. Moore, a graduate of Indiana University, 1926, has joined the reportorial staff of the Louisville (Ky.) Times.

Francis P. Horgan, former star high school athlete, has joined the city staff of the Worcester (Mass.) Gazette.

Harold Morgan has resigned from the staff of the Salt Lake City Deseret News to become editor of the Utah Political Bulletin.

Floyd L. Bell, formerly of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch staff and later publicity director for the Frisco Lines railroad, is now managing editor of the Sarasota (Fla.) Morning Herald. Bell was for several years state capitol man for the Minneapolis Tribune and later sports editor of the St. Joseph (Mo.) News Press before going to St. Louis in 1917.

John A. Toomey, reporter for the Worcester (Mass.) Gazette, has resigned to become secretary of the Industrial Affairs Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce.

Finley Tynes has been made city editor of the Sarasota (Fla.) Herald. Tynes has been with the paper as a reporter since its founding a year ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Pat Keefe are the parents of a girl born, Sept. 8. Mr. Keefe is a member of the Duluth (Minn.) News Tribune editorial staff.

Paul Sanders has returned to Knox college, Galesburg, Ill., after a period of service on the editorial staff of the Duluth (Minn.) News Tribune.

Robert S. Larkin, for five years sporting editor of the Elgin (Ill.) Courier-News has resigned to continue school work and will specialize in journalism. James M. Ryan has succeeded him at the sport desk.

John J. Cantwell has left the city staff of the Worcester (Mass.) Post to become a physical instructor at a Worcester high school.

Philip B. Ronayne, city hall reporter, Worcester (Mass.) Gazette, has returned from a leave of absence of several months, made necessary because of ill health.

Joseph P. Watkins, state news editor of the Charlotte (N. C.) Observer, has been named Sunday editor of that newspaper.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

ON Friday, Sept. 17, the directors of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce elected as president of the organization, Junius P. Fishburn, president of the Times-World Corporation of Roanoke, which publishes the two Roanoke papers, the Roanoke Times and World-News. Mr. Fishburn succeeds Dr. Joseph H. Smith of Petersburg, who resigned because of pressure of his business affairs.

JUNIUS P. FISHBURN

Mr. Fishburn has been with the Roanoke papers since he was graduated from Princeton University in 1919, first as vice-president and for the last three years as president. He has been editor of the World-News since 1920. Mr. Fishburn is nearing his thirty-first birthday, and is one of the youngest publishers in the State. He holds a master's degree from Columbia, and is a member of the Phi Betta Kappa scholarship fraternity.

For the past two years, he has been president of the Virginia Historic Highway Association, and has always been prominent in working for better highways in the State. He was recently appointed by Governor Harry Flood Byrd as one of seven members of the State Commission on Conservation and Development. The duties of this commission include that of handling the funds raised in Virginia for the establishment of the Shenandoah National Park.

Mr. Fishburn is at the present time a director of the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association, and a member of the Executive Committee of the Virginia Press Association. He is vice-president of the First National Exchange Bank of Roanoke, vice-president of the Roanoke Chamber of Commerce and vice-president of the Roanoke Rotary Club.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

FRED G. McGUINNIS, Associated Press operator for the Fall River (Mass.) Herald News and the Fall River Globe, is spending a two weeks' vacation in New York state.

David Lidman, of the local staff, Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, is now day state editor of the Associated Press at Richmond.

(Continued on page 38)

A National Organization

The Central Press Association had another birthday on September 1. It is now in its seventeenth year.

During the past sixteen years it has seen the birth and death of a number of news matrix services. The competition in this special field has always set a hard pace, as margins are narrow.

The past two years have been our best, and have established the permanence of the institution. We have increased our client list by nearly 100 new papers each year.

The consideration of newspaper editors and publishers is invited by this dependable organization.

The Central Press Association

V. V. McNITT, President — Central Press Bldg., Cleveland — H. A. McNITT, Editor and Manager

Now Ready

DANGER AHEAD!

By Mildred Barbour

A Serial of Love and the Love of Money

With 72 Dramatic Line Illustrations by J. Norman Lynd

DANGER AHEAD, like other Mildred Barbour serials, runs 12 weeks, six installments weekly.

Print DANGER AHEAD and you will know why so many other editors use Mildred Barbour regularly.

Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Maximilian Elser, Jr., General Manager — Earl J. Hadley, Associate

150 Nassau St., New York City

(Continued from page 37)

E. M. Henderson, Birmingham correspondent of the Associated Press, has been made head of the department of journalism, Birmingham-Southern College. Mr. Henderson has taught in the school for the past three years.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

WHITNEY L. CARY, from sports editor, Sarasota (Fla.) Herald, to sports staff, New York Daily News.

William Roche, from copy desk, Worcester (Mass.) Gazette, to county editor of the same paper.

Marshal Taylor, from city editor, Buffalo Star, to copy desk, Buffalo Times.

Judson A. Evans, Jr., from reporter, Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, to rewrite man, Baltimore Sun.

Herbert Kelly, from East St. Louis (Ill.) Journal, to copy desk, Chicago Herald and Examiner.

WITH THE SPECIALS

WOODWARD AND KELLY, newspaper representatives, Chicago, have been named to represent the Philadelphia Enquirer. This paper formerly maintained an office in the Harris Trust and Savings Bank Building with Jesse Spencer in charge. Mr. Spencer has joined the forces of Woodward and Kelly.

Lindenstein-Kimball, Inc., special representatives, New York, have opened a new branch office in Pittsburgh at 604 Chamber of Commerce Building. Grover W. Boyd is in charge.

C. B. Peterson, formerly space buyer and secretary of the Stack Advertising Agency, Heyworth Building, Chicago, has resigned to become a solicitor for the S. C. Beckwith Agency, special representatives.

Victor Cavers has been added to the selling force of the Chas. H. Eddy Company, New York office. Mr. Cavers has for some years been a member of the advertising staff of the Ottawa Journal.

Allen Klapp Company, special representatives, New York, have been named to represent the Vincennes, (Ind.) Sun in the national field.

The Devine-MacQuoid Company, Inc., New York, Pittsburgh and Chicago, has been appointed national advertising representative of the Selma (Ala.) Times-Journal and Covington (O.) Valley News.

Hamilton-DeLisser, Inc., Newspaper Special Agency, will move its New York offices on Oct. 6 to the Murray Hill Building, 285 Madison Avenue.

J. W. Cooper, manager of the Chicago office of the S. C. Beckwith Company, has recovered from two months' illness and resumed his duties. Clarence B. Peterson, for several years an executive with the Stack Advertising Company, Chicago, has joined the Chicago sales staff of this concern.

MARRIED

JOHN H. SYMONDS, editor and publisher of the Carthage (Ill.) Gazette to Miss Marjorie Gertrude Kraft, in Seattle, Wash., Sept. 16. They will be at home in Carthage after Oct. 15.

James R. Rhodes, publisher and editor of the Newton (Ia.) News to Mrs. Helen A. Smith of Des Moines, Ia., in Minneapolis, Sept. 11. They are on a trip through the Canadian northwest and will be at home Oct. 15 in Newton.

Chester L. Jacoby, managing editor of the Dodge City (Kan.) Daily Globe to Miss Annabel Gross, of Kingsdown, Kan.

Harry Ross of the editorial department, Chicago Herald and Examiner to Mrs. Hazel White McClelland.

Fred E. Winsor, former secretary of the Advertising Club of St. Louis now sales manager for the St. Louis office of the General Outdoor Advertising Corporation to Miss Minerva Evelyn Schergen, recently.

Hargrove Smith, of the advertising staff, Corpus Christi (Tex.) Caller, to Miss Edith Wayne of El Paso, Tex., on Sept. 11.

Miss Mildred Swinehart of the local display department, Chicago Herald and Examiner, to Harvey G. Weiss, Sept. 18.

Ralph Burton Whittum, classified advertising manager, Lewiston (Me.) Sun-Journal, to Miss Winifred Robertson at the United Baptist Church, Lewiston, Sept. 11.

Robert M. Deputy, graduate of the University of Illinois '25, and now advertising manager of the Montrose (Col.) Daily Press to Miss Ruth M. Vose in Montrose, Sept. 4.

George Hilton Chase of Boston, Mass., to Miss Eloise Florence Lord of the editorial staff of the Lewiston (Me.) Journal in Lewiston, Sept. 11.

Earl Salley, of the firm of Swennerton & Salley, printers, New York, to Miss Elizabeth Burggerman, Saturday, Sept. 11. Mr. Salley is a member of the Advertising Post of the American Legion, New York.

William Corr Keavy, of New Bedford, Mass., to Miss Mary Barbara Sullivan of the New Bedford (Mass.) Times editorial staff in New Bedford, Sept. 15.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENT

DULUTH (Minn.) NEWS TRIBUNE has installed a new intertype.

Elma (Wash.) Chronicle has installed a new Babcock Reliance cylinder press.

South Bend (Wash.) Journal has added a new model 8 Linotype to its equipment.

Pampa (Tex.) News has recently installed a new Linotype. The paper plans to issue a semi-weekly paper instead of the present weekly.

Wall Street Journal is now having a Hoe sextuple press erected in its press-room.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

BELLAIRE (O.) DAILY LEADER, Belmont County Fair edition, Sept. 13.

Lewiston (Me.) Journal, special Fashion Section, Sept 13.

Morning Sun (Ia.) News-Herald, special edition commemorating the 40th anniversary of the paper and the editorship of J. Kirk Latta, Sept. 9.

Seattle Union Record's Labor day edition was the second largest ever published by the Record.

Amarillo (Tex.) News-Globe, 96-page annual Tri-State Fair edition, Sept. 19.

Staten Island (N. Y.) Advance, 70-page Bridge edition, Sept. 15.

Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, 22 page radio section Sunday, Sept. 19, in connection with the second annual Richmond Radio Show.

Edmonton (Alta.) Bulletin, Good Roads Association convention number, Sept. 18.

245,990

was the average net paid daily circulation of The Baltimore Sun (morning and evening issues) for the month of

August, 1926

The average net paid circulation of THE SUNDAY SUN per Sunday for the month of August, 1926, was 189,419.

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around THE SUN

Morning Evening Sunday

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

CHARLES ROSENBERG, formerly in the advertising departments of the Harrisburg (Pa.) Telegraph, Patriot, and Evening News, and the Newark Ledger, with his two brothers has purchased the Egg Harbor (N. J.) Pilot-Tribune, weekly.

Hal Smith, well known Puget Sound newspaperman, has purchased the La Conner (Wash.) Puget Sound Mail from Josephine M. Alexander.

Miss Lottoe Byers, who bought the Geneseo (Kan.) Journal from the Zene Surrier estate, has sold the paper to E. J. Allen, an employe. Mr. and Mrs. Allen will manage the paper.

Herman W. Haislet, owner of the St. James (Minn.) Independent for the past 25 years, has sold his paper.

Col. C. M. Harrison, owner and editor of the Booneville (Mo.) Central Missourian for the past six and a half years, has sold the paper to P. T. Grimes, Bloomfield, Ia., publisher.

W. Chapin Collins, now on the staff of the Seattle Post Intelligencer, has purchased a half interest in the Elma (Wash.) Chronicle and will assume editorship of that paper Oct. 1.

ON THE MECHANICAL SIDE

JOHN J. McNEARY, once foreman of the New York American composing room, also of other Hearst newspapers and for years with the San Francisco Examiner, has resigned from the Hearst service. F. G. McCoy for the past eight months on the Oakland Post-Enquirer and for 18 years on the Los Angeles Herald and Examiner becomes superintendent of the Examiner composing room.

SCHOOLS

THE stone lantern presented to the school of journalism, University of Missouri, by the America-Japan Society of Tokio, will be dedicated by the Japanese ambassador to the United States, Nov. 9.

NEW WACO M. E.

Richard C. Bush, telegraph editor of the Waco (Tex.) Times-Herald for several years, has been made managing editor of that newspaper, succeeding J. J. Hutchison, resigned. Bush has worked on a number of Texas newspapers, including the Austin American, and the Forth Worth Record.

Over 3,000 cities and towns have streets paved with portland cement concrete

Horse-and-Buggy Pavements Won't Do

Property owners in many towns and cities whose streets swarm with motor traffic are still wasting their money on horse-and-buggy "pavements" of bygone days.

These rough, bumpy streets are directly responsible for broken springs, cut tires, greater depreciation of cars, physical discomfort, loss of time, and many accidents involving loss of life or limb.

And the heavy expense of trying to keep worn-out, dangerous, horse-and-buggy streets in repair, added to their original cost, amounts to more than enough to pay for true, even, non-skid concrete pavement that has the maintenance built in.

So in the long run you are paying for concrete streets. Why not get them?

All of the facts are in our free booklet on "Concrete Streets." Ask for your copy

PORTLAND CEMENT ASSOCIATION

A National Organization to Improve and Extend the Uses of Concrete

Atlanta, Birmingham, Boston, Chicago, Columbus, Dallas, Denver, Des Moines, Detroit, Indianapolis, Jacksonville, Kansas City, Lincoln, Nebr., Los Angeles, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Nashville, New Orleans, New York, Oklahoma City, Parkersburg, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Portland, Oreg., Richmond, Va., Salt Lake City, San Francisco, Seattle, St. Louis, Vancouver, B. C., Washington, D. C.

During the first eight months of this year, The Washington Daily News, a Scripps-Howard newspaper, gained more than 600,000 lines of paid advertising, the equivalent of more than five hundred and thirty pages.

Represented by ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC., 250 Park Avenue, New York

ADVERTISING ECLIPSES NEWS POWER—WHITE

Noted Editor of Emporia, Kan., Says Delete Advertisements in America and Economic and Social Revolt Would Follow

Advertising columns were held more powerful than the news columns of a newspaper by William Allen White, editor of the Emporia (Kan.) Gazette in a letter published in the New York Times Sept. 18, on the occasion of the latter newspaper's 75th anniversary. Mr. White's letter follows in full:

"The American newspaper seems to me to function socially and politically more through its economic phases than through the formal social and political side. Put in plain language, that means this: The advertising columns of a newspaper affect the American people more directly and powerfully than the news columns and editorials of the American newspaper. Through the advertising columns the standard of living in America is raised every year. The newspaper is an Archimedean lever which is lifting the living standards in America higher than any other living standards in the world. Delete advertising in America and an economic and social revolution would occur. People no longer stimulated by advertising to desire material goods would stop buying and the jolt to American business would precipitate a political reaction that might be catastrophic.

"It makes little difference what the newspapers preach in their editorial columns about the distribution of wealth. It makes no vast difference how they policy the news, so long as the advertising columns continue to create an insatiable hunger on the part of their readers for better things than their fathers had or than even the readers themselves had the day before the paper was printed.

"The New York Times is a great newspaper because it prints the news in detail, which its readers desire, and because its editorial comment on the news is intelligent and as fair as newspaper comment can be under the handicaps of haste and restricted space. But the real value of the New York Times to America is that its advertising columns are as clean and free and fair as its news columns. It stimulates the desire for honest goods. It whets the appetites of the average reader by showing him day after day and year after year what useful and lovely things he can buy with his money, what profitable savings he can make in his income, how he can get ahead materially or spiritually by patronizing the advertisers in its columns. Books, food, music, furniture, pictures, houses, clothing, cults, creeds, investments, all are displayed in the vast bazaar that is the New York Times, through which as the year rolls around the millions pass in review.

"The changes that come out of the advertising columns of the American newspaper like the Times, where decent goods are truthfully advertised, are dynamic changes. Every year the old world is blown up and a new world established, not by the news, not by the editorials, but by the advertising columns of the American newspapers."

LOWRANCE TO TOUR N. C.

W. A. Lowrance, former manager of the Charlotte branch of the Western Newspaper Union, now field secretary for the North Carolina Publishers' Association, a newly created position, will leave shortly for his first official tour of the newspapers in the state.

OLDEST WOMAN COMPOSITOR ILL

Mrs. Tillie Hodge, aged 84 years, the oldest woman compositor in the United States, is ill at her home in Tiskilwa, Ill., following a stroke of apoplexy and will never again set type. She had worked at the Tiskilwa Chief composing room until three weeks ago.

FLASHES

By the time a man's fixed for life he's worried himself to death.—Flint Daily Journal.

This earth will probably always be able to feed its inhabitants, but the supply of privacy is rapidly giving out.—Miami Tribune.

Our rule for success in life is not to know when we're beaten, but we often can't help having our suspicions.—Columbus (Ohio) State Journal.

As a rule the husband's face sinks when he gets the bill for having his wife's face lifted. — Westport (Conn.) Westporter Herald.

Some rich men collect art, others primaries.—James J. Montague in New York Herald Tribune.

The time to remember that silence is golden is just before you indulge in a wise crack.—Fort Worth Record-Telegram.

Those airplane sleepers built for the flight between Berlin and London may be all right, but most persons would prefer lower berths.—Seattle Daily Times.

The modern politician's wife should pledge herself to love, cherish and vindicate.—Florence (Ala.) Herald.

If Spain breaks up, perhaps we can get out of prison that industrious chap who has written so many "treasure" letters to our people.—J. R. Wolf in Milwaukee Journal.

"Czechs Adopting American Drink," a headline says. Another case of race suicide.—H. R. Farmer in Edmonton Bulletin.

Secret service agent says women make poor detectives. Married men know better.—New York American.

It is declared that "every dining-car meal is served at a loss to the railroads." Dining-car patrons will perhaps be glad to know this.—Florence (Ala.) Herald.

Several small islands off the Alaska shore have disappeared. Those Japanese again!—Boston Herald.

We suppose that Mussolini's edicts will be carried out until, some fatal day, Mussolini is.—Weston (Ore.) Leader.

ASSOCIATIONS

FIRST meeting of the ADVERTISING CLUB of LOS ANGELES for the year 1926-7 was held in the ballroom of the Biltmore Hotel, Sept. 14, at which time the new officers for the year were installed. They are: Harold J. Stonier, president; Carl A. Bundy, first vice-president; J. G. Jeffery, second vice-president; Arthur Lee, secretary-treasurer; Ray Nimmo, club counsel; Donald K. Thomas, executive secretary. The directors are: E. M. Armstrong, E. J. LaFon, Irving R. Smith, Fred T. Hagelberg, Emery E. Olson, Thomas J. Van de Kamp and Ross Welch.

Ward H. Marsh, of the advertising firm of McKinney, Marsh & Cushing, has been appointed chairman of the publicity committee of the Adcraft Club of Detroit which is sponsoring the ninth annual convention of the DIRECT MAIL ADVERTISING ASSOCIATION to be held in Detroit, Oct. 20, 21 and 22.

Annual meeting of the ADVERTISING CLUB of ST. LOUIS will be held on October 12 in the Palm Room of Hotel Chase.

A special de-luxe train bearing 200 members of the GEORGIA PRESS ASSOCIATION will leave on a tour of Western North Carolina about Sept. 27.

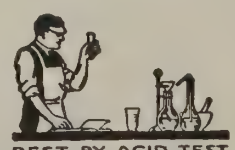
Imperial METAL

Keep Your Eye on the Melting Pot!

WATCH carefully what goes into it. For that which goes into the pot is going to determine whether or not you will have a smooth running shop or a lot of metal and machine grief. It's up to you.

Here's the way that thousands of publishers watch their melting pot. They see to it that their new metal supply is Imperial Type Metal. After that they make it a hard and fast rule that nothing goes into that pot but Imperial Plus metals and that they are added according to the simple, efficient Plus Plan.

There are two mighty good reasons for sticking to the Plus Plan. First, the Plus Plan keeps the supply uniform in quantity and quality at all times—that eliminates any chances of run-down metal and minimizes trouble. Second, the Plus Plan gives many years of additional life to the original supply, thereby cutting metal costs.



Using the Plus Plan is the best way we know of keeping your eye on the melting pot. Try it.

IMPERIAL TYPE METAL CO.

Manufacturing the following metals:

LINOTYPE MONOTYPE INTERTYPE STEREOTYPE
ELROD LUDLOW LINOGRAPH THOMPSON

Philadelphia Cleveland New York Chicago

BEST BY ACID TEST
TRADE MARK REG.

Buffalo the Wonder City of America

GROWTH!

1920—93,341
1921—101,918
1922—106,061
1923—113,748
1924—123,039
1925—128,502
August 1926—146,653

Average daily circulation—All except August, 1926, are A. B. C. Audit figures

The average daily circulation of the Buffalo Evening News is the largest in New York State outside of Manhattan.

Cover the Buffalo Market with the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS

EDWARD H. BUTLER, Editor and Publisher

National Representatives

KELLY-SMITH COMPANY

Marbridge Building, New York City
Waterman Building, Boston, Mass.
Atlantic Building, Philadelphia, Pa.
Tribune Tower, Chicago, Ill.
J. C. HARRIS, Jr., Atlanta

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

A Strange Little Ad in St. Paul—"Holiday Greetings" Is New Classification On Kansas City Star—New York Managers Hold Meeting—Selling News Clippings

WANTED—Donor for 1 pint of blood. Call Northwest Institute of Medical Technology, 159 W. Third. Ask for Mr. J. King Ross.

STRANGE things creep into the columns of the classified pages, but possibly nothing more intensely human, personal or vital than the one which recently appeared in the St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press and reprinted above.

Bert L. Brown, known well by every Twin City newspaper man as an excellent photographer of news and feature subjects, was critically ill in a St. Paul hospital when the call went out for one pint of blood for transfusion purposes. Exactly 50 persons responded to the request with the result that one was chosen and with the happy ending that Bert L. is on the road to recovery.

The classified department was quick to weave some publicity matter around this queer little ad, pointing out how the classified columns were daily gaining as a medium that fits nice and snug into human life.

The Kansas City Star last week began a classified advertisement column, headed, "Holiday Greetings." It contained many greetings from Jewish families to friends and relatives in connection with the recent Jewish holidays. The column will be continued for the benefit of those who care to remember others on special occasions.

The Classified Advertising Managers Association of New York held its regular meeting Sept. 21. Some progress was reported concerning efforts to protect the classified advertising columns of New York City newspapers against alleged fraudulent furniture advertising. T. P. Seymour of the American Newspaper Publishers Association and F. W. Brock of the Better Business Bureau were guests of the Association at luncheon.

E. W. Cobb, Okmulgee, Okla., carries a classified ad in various publications signed Lock Box 959 in which he offers "Work for ladies at home," says there will be no canvassing and that no experience is required. If he can get replies he asks them to put up $1.00 for a plan of clipping newspapers and sending out postal cards, telling that they can earn from $25 to $50 per week.

This is the old scheme that has been worked in various parts of the country whereby the publisher is sent a postal card asking for a sample copy of his publication. The party securing the paper then clips out various items, no matter how trivial, and writes the party mentioned therein saying: "We have a very interesting newspaper clipping which we will mail you on receipt of 25 cents."

L. L. Heaton, classified advertising manager of the New York Herald Tribune will address the Binghamton (N. Y.) Real Estate Board, Sept. 27 on "Classified Real Estate Advertising."

Wilbur E. McCauley has been transferred from the classified department to the local staff of the Chicago Herald and Examiner.

Bernard Charles Connolly has left the classified advertising department of the Worcester (Mass.) Post to join the staff of a Boston firm as traveling salesman.

TIMES AD MEN HONORED

A luncheon was given by the New York Time, Monday, Sept. 20, in honor of the members of the advertising staff instrumental in obtaining more than 27,000 agate lines of advertising for the 75th Anniversary Supplement issued with the Sunday edition of Sept. 19. There were 50 guests present. Louis Wiley, business manager, presided. Incidents of the career of the newspaper were recounted.

MAKING NEWSPAPER SURVEY

The Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association, John A. Park, Raleigh (N. C.) Times, president, is making a cost-finding survey of the business of each association member for the first six months of this year. The survey is being cleared through the office of Cranston Williams, association manager, at Chattanooga.

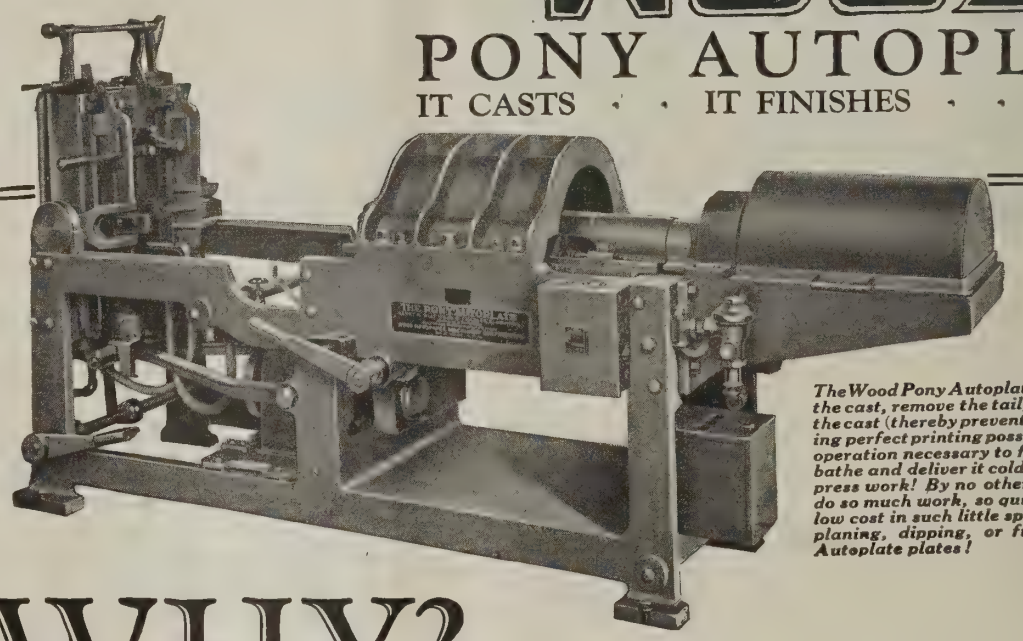
C. A. ROGERS DEAD

C. A. Rogers, 72, of the Wood Newspaper Machinery Corporation, died Sept. 19 at his home in Plainfield, N. J. He was for many years employed by the Hotter Printing Press Co.

Make Your Title A Mark of Pride with

Hardened Steel Newspaper Heads

—they last forever



::

A. J. SOSSNER
361 West Broadway
New York

WOOD

PONY AUTOPLATE

IT CASTS · · IT FINISHES · · IT COOLS

The Wood Pony Autoplate enables one man to make the cast, remove the tail, perfectly shape and shave the cast (thereby preventing paper breaks and making perfect printing possible), perform every tooling operation necessary to finish the plate and finally bathe and deliver it cold and dry, ready for perfect press work! By no other means can a stereotyper do so much work, so quickly, so easily and at such low cost in such little space. No routing, chiseling, planing, dipping, or filing required with Pony Autoplate plates!

WHY?

¶ Why cast your plates in a hand box — and lift them out?

¶ Why cut off their tails on a hand worked tail cutter — and lift them out?

¶ Why shave them out in a hand worked shaving machine — and lift them out?

¶ Why finish your plates on a hand trimming block — and lift them out?

¶ Why cool them in a hand dipping tub — and lift them out?

¶ Why dry their faces by hand with a rag? —

WHEN a Pony Autoplate does these things better—faster—cheaper! Saves room, walking, lifting. Makes possible a better printed paper. Permits paper to be on the street earlier. Enables one man to finish "a plate a minute"—three times as fast! Rapidly pays for itself through the time and money it saves in the foundry, the pressroom and the delivery-room. Write Goss for full particulars—mechanical data, prices, terms

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO.
1535 South Paulina Street • Chicago
The Goss Printing Press Company of England, Ltd., London
SELLING AGENTS

GOSS STRAIGHT LINE

You can deal with these 28 leading Iowa daily newspapers as with one publication, if you wish. Uniform marketing help over the entire state.

A space buyer wrote this ad about Iowa

I've been asked what is the most interesting thing—to a space buyer—about this "Iowa plan."

Passing over the advantages of Iowa as a market—for her general prosperity and responsiveness are well known—the big thing to me is this fact:

By using this group of Iowa daily newspapers, I can get a circulation exceeding the number of families in the state—and with one order, one plate, one billing.

For the combined circulation of these newspapers is 571,151. And the number of families in Iowa is 550,000!

Then this group plan is found most convenient—especially for any new venture into Iowa—because of the excellent merchandising help of these 28 newspapers.

They pledge uniform co-operation in making best jobber and dealer connections and in many other helps.

Whenever I need any information about this market, I write to the association headquarters—given below—and they load me down.

Better try it if you're interested.

THE IOWA DAILY PRESS ASSOCIATION

DAVENPORT, IOWA

Ames Tribune
Boone News-Republican
Burlington Gazette
Burlington Hawk-Eye
Cedar Falls Record
Cedar Rapids Gazette
Centerville Iowegian & Citizen
Council Bluffs Nonpareil
Davenport Democrat
Davenport Times
Des Moines Capital
Des Moines Register and Tribune
Dubuque Telegraph-Herald
Dubuque Times-Journal
Fort Dodge Messenger
Fort Madison Democrat
Iowa City Press-Citizen
Keokuk Gate-City
Marshalltown Times Republican
Mason City Globe-Gazette
Muscatine Journal
Oelwein Register
Ottumwa Courier
Sioux City Journal
Sioux City Tribune
Washington Journal
Waterloo Evening Courier
Waterloo Tribune

IOWA—WHERE EVERY FAMILY READS A DAILY NEWSPAPER

BUILDING NEWSPAPER CIRCULATION

What Price a Subscriber?—Health Talk Boosts Sales—Pennsylvania Association Collects Old Accounts—"Know Tennessee Contest" in Knoxville

Left to right, Bruce I. Susong, editor Covington Kentucky Post; Mrs. Josie Geiger, Bueford Stanley, Ruth Geiger, President Coolidge, Mrs. Bessie E. Stanley and Senator R. P. Ernst of Kentucky

RUTH GEIGER, 14, a fatherless Covington, Ky., girl and Bueford Stanley, 12, also of Covington, who in a contest staged by the Covington Kentucky Post, a Scripps-Howard newspaper, polled 18,000,000 and 25,000,000 votes respectively, felt amply rewarded when they posed with President Coolidge for a picture, and also for the movies.

The reward in the newspaper contest for the boy and girl of northern Kentucky who proved their popularity in gathering coupons from the Post and in getting newspaper subscriptions was a trip to Washington for themselves and their mothers.

United States Senator R. P. Ernst made an engagement with the President for them, and dropped his campaign for re-election for a day in order that he might be in Washington to receive the guests from his home town.

The picture shows the President, Senator Ernst, the contest winners and their mothers, and Bruce I. Susong, editor of the Kentucky Post, which conducted the contest.

President Coolidge was extremely cordial to the youngsters, and made them feel at home. Later he sent an escort with them from his office, to show them through the White House proper and to explain all points of interest.

What price newspaper subscribers? When it costs 50 cents or 60 cents to get a subscriber to a 35-cent-a-month paper it is bad business, in the opinion of Harold Nogle, circulation manager of the Dallas Journal. Other newspapers may use high salaried salesmen to boost the list, but not Nogle.

"We have obtained many subscribers for as low as eight cents," he told EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week. "Our average runs arounds 17 cents.

"We have not used any solicitors for six years. Instead we employ grade and high school boys to carry the Journal. These boys know they must hold the number of subscribers. It is explained that we permit them to use our property, the route, for a business. Should they improve our property they make more money, whereas if they damage it by losing subscribers, they must get off.

"Journal carrier circulation has been built by carriers exclusively. Once we offered prizes to the boys and girls of the city, but the cost was prohibitive. Each subscriber cost more than $1.

"Of course we use all kinds of contests for our carriers. That however, is a different story, and far less costly."

As an additional service to members, Albert W. Fell, manager of the Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers' Association, has created a department for collecting discontinued subscription accounts. This new departure was announced in the weekly bulletin sent out from the association office in Williamsport, Pa., Sept. 11.

The association office has been experimenting on collections for several members for the past few months. Its work along this line has been successful, and, now that the system has been simplified and perfected, the service is being offered to all members both daily and weekly, Mr. Fell said. The association makes no additional charge for this service beyond actual expenditures for postage and stationery. A large number of applications for listing blanks have already been received from members.

A "Know Tennessee" contest is now being conducted by the Knoxville Sentinel, H. L. Baker, circulation manager. Fifty pictures representing towns in the state are being published daily, with $300 in cash prizes promised to 20 successful contestants.

The Fresno (Cal.) Republican is giving away a harmonica to each boy and girl who turns in a new three-month subscription.

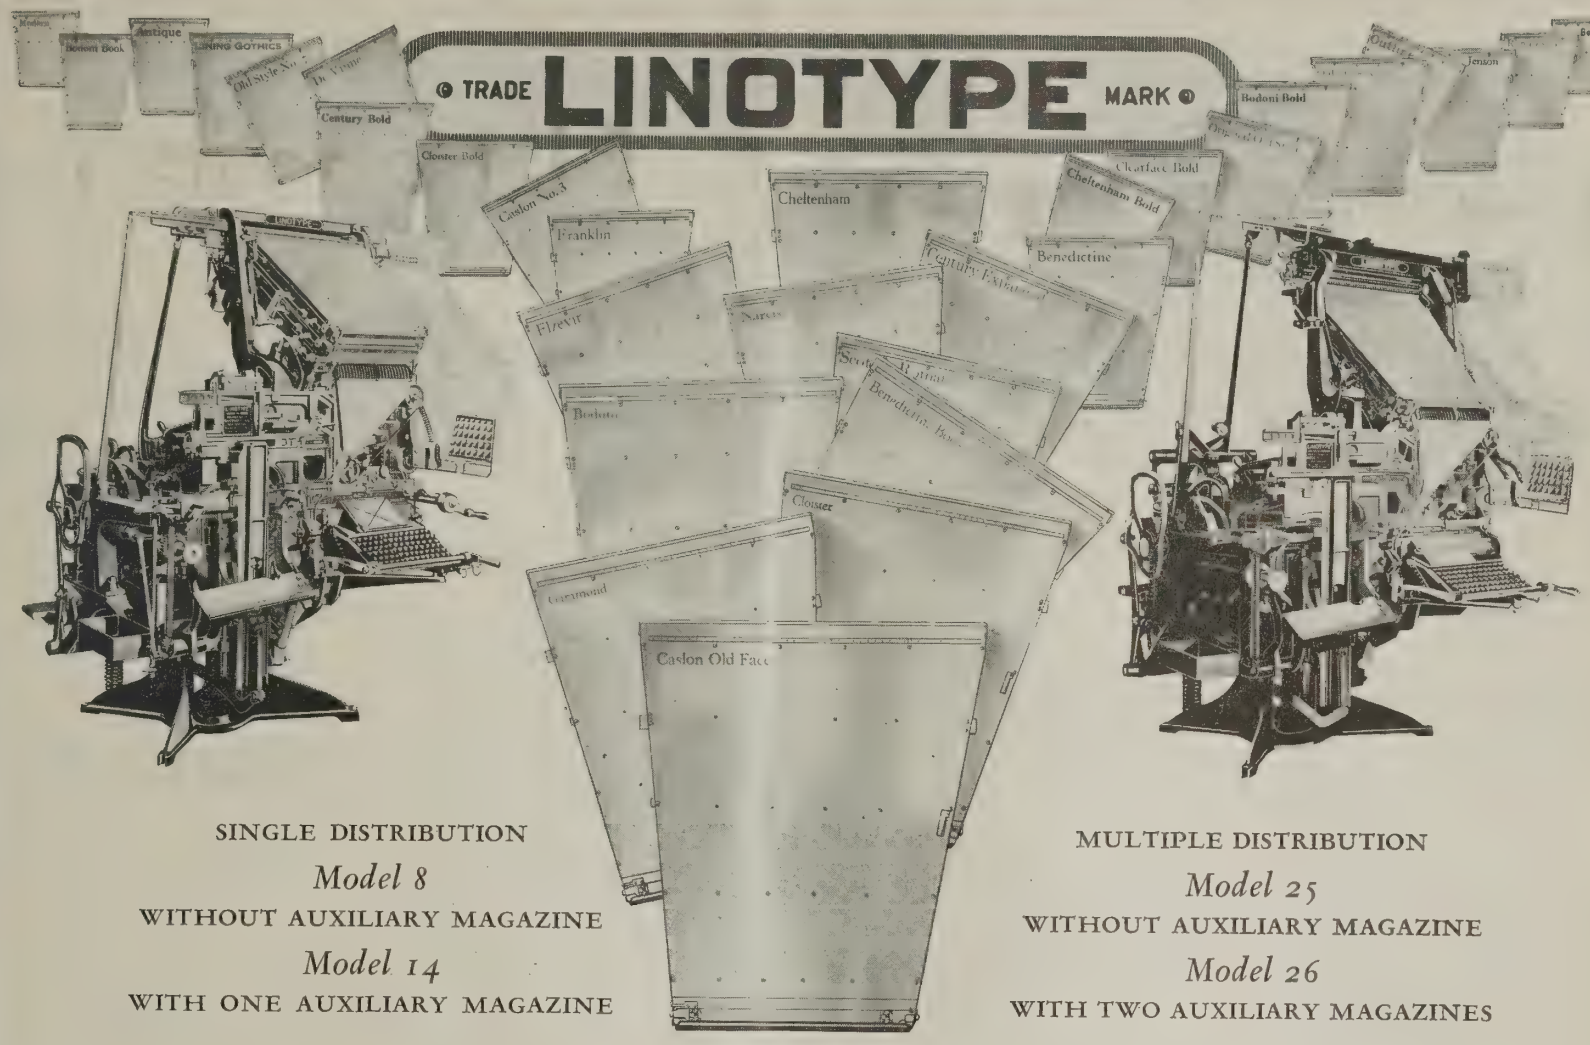
L. J. Hagood, who has been country circulator of the Houston Post-Dispatch for the past several months and prior to that time was country circulator of the Forth Worth Star-Telegram for seven years, is leaving the Post-Dispatch to become circulation manager of the Indianapolis Times effective October 1.

The Columbus Ohio State Journal has increased its price from two to three cents a copy and has put on a campaign for new subscription offering houses and lots and automobiles as prizes.

A. K. Kilgore recently resigned as assistant circulation manager for the Oklahoma Publishing Company of Oklahoma City, publishers of the Daily Oklahoman and Times to become circulation promotion manager for the A. H. Belo Corporation, Dallas, Tex., publishers of the Dallas News, Dallas Journal and the Semi-Weekly Farm News.

Metropolitan Dry Mats

are now being used for all work by



The Chicago Daily News
The Philadelphia Bulletin
The Boston American
The Philadelphia Inquirer
The Cleveland News
The Baltimore Sun

For the small or large newspaper plant the METROPOLITAN DRY MAT is the most satisfactory and dependable. It stands the gaff and eliminates all troubles had with other dry mats.

While its price is a little higher at the mill, its savings actually make it the cheapest dry mat on the market.

Installations may now be arranged for.

WOOD FLONG CORPORATION
501 Fifth Avenue, New York City

SINGLE DISTRIBUTION

Model 8

WITHOUT AUXILIARY MAGAZINE

Model 14

WITH ONE AUXILIARY MAGAZINE

MULTIPLE DISTRIBUTION

Model 25

WITHOUT AUXILIARY MAGAZINE

Model 26

WITH TWO AUXILIARY MAGAZINES

INTERCHANGEABLE MAGAZINES

By storing your typographic equipment in convenient, interchangeable Linotype magazines you have the faces instantly available for use on either of these two styles of Linotype machines for Single Distribution or Multiple Distribution

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY

BROOKLYN, NEW YORK

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS

CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

530 26 9-F

LINOTYPED IN GARAMOND AND NARCISS

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

Eleanor Gunn Sails to Report Paris Fashions Oct. 2—Aimee McPherson Writing for Editors Feature Service—New Writer in London for N. A. N .A.

ELEANOR GUNN, fashion writer, and member of the staff of Metropolitan Newspaper Service, will sail from New York for Paris, Oct. 2, to observe and write on winter fashions abroad from the point of view of the American woman. Miss Gunn is the grand-daughter of the late John W. Oliver, founder of the Yonkers (N. Y.) Statesman, and nationally known humorist.

Aimee McPherson, Los Angeles evangelist, is writing "The Story of My Life" for Editors Feature Service, New York and Cleveland.

Howard White, vice consul in the Azores Islands, has resigned to become London correspondent for the North American Newspaper Alliance. Mr. White formerly worked on the Columbus (O.) Dispatch, and will be assisted in his work by his wife, who also was a member of the Dispatch staff.

A new series of daily health talks is being distributed to newspapers by the McCoy Health Service, Los Angeles.

Comic strips, drawn especially for weekly newspapers, are one of the latest products of King Features Syndicate, New York. They are in double strip form, 14 inches wide and 4¾ inches deep.

"Can a woman be wife, mother and professional worker and do justice to all three?" is the question answered by a series of seven Sunday articles being prepared by the O'Dell Newspaper Service, New York.

Felix Orman has opened an office as European newspaper correspondent at 26 Hanover Square, London. He offers a weekly mail feature captioned "Gaieties of European Capitals."

Sidney A. Silberman, president of National News Service, Philadelphia, has returned to his office after a ten weeks' business trip through the west.

R. S. Grable, president of the World Color Printing Company, St. Louis, announces the appointment of Natt S. Getlin as sales and promotion manager. Getlin was formerly associated with the Cincinnati (O.) Enquirer and the St. Louis Star.

JOINS U. S. DAILY

Kloeber Assistant to President of Washington National Publication

Charles E. Kloeber, whose long connection with the Associated Press as chief of the news department and in other executive positions has made him widely known in newspaper circles, has joined the staff of The United States Daily as assistant to the president.

Mr. Kloeber has had wide experience in both the home and foreign fields of news production as well as the business office. He was in charge of the Associated Press service on the western front during the World War, and after the Peace Conference covered the reconstruction period in the Balkan States with headquarters in Vienna. He was recalled from Constantinople after the evacuation of the Allies in 1924 and sent to Japan, returning last summer because of ill health.

In addition to his Associated Press career Mr. Kloeber has been managing editor of several papers, and was at one time assistant to the late E. T. Earl in the publication of the Los Angeles (Cal.) Express and the Los Angeles (Cal.) Tribune.

10-PAGE AD SECTION

A 10-page advertising section of the Cramer & Norton store, which was printed in the Danville (Ill.) Commercial-News Sept. 15, set a record for advertising in that city. It was a souvenir section and was more than double in size any previous advertisement used in a local paper, the Commercial-News stated.

LEGISLATORS HONOR SNEED

Pay Tribute to Texas Political Writer in Statement

The special session of the Texas House of Representatives the other day paused to pay tribute to the memory of John Sneed, who, as staff correspondent of the Dallas News, for many years was associated with the legislative and political history of Texas. Sneed died Sept. 11. The memorial said in part:

"He was a writer of rare charm and outstanding ability; his integrity was unquestionable; he never prostituted his brilliant talents to any unworthy end; his judgment of men and public affairs was well-nigh unerring.

"He was a gentleman by birth, breeding and education. He had imbibed all the splendid social and political tradition of his native South and his devotion to the lofty ideals of the land of his birth were reflected in his daily life."

MANY GROUPS TO MEET DURING A. B. C. WEEK

Chicago To Be Mecca For Publishers, Advertisers and Agents Oct. 19 to 22—A. B. C. Sessions At La Salle Hotel

Newspaper and advertising interests from every part of the country will be represented at what is expected to be the greatest gathering ever held of publishers, advertising and circulation men, in Chicago, Oct. 19, 20, 21 and 22.

The Inland Daily Press Association will be in session Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 19 and 20, at the Hotel Sherman; the Audit Bureau of Circulations will meet Thursday and Friday, Oct. 21 and 22, at the Hotel La Salle; the Agricultural Publishers Association will gather Thursday, Oct. 21, at the Hotel La Salle for their annual convention, and the Western Council of the American Association of Advertising Agencies will hold a luncheon on the same day in honor of the publishers of newspapers and magazines, and the agricultural editors.

The Audit Bureau of Circulations will hold departmental meetings Thursday afternoon, after the luncheon, and a general convention Friday, at which Stanley Clague, secretary, will preside. On Friday evening the annual A. B. C. banquet will be held in the Hotel La Salle.

Victor F. Haydon, executive secretary, and Horace Klein, St. Paul, president, will be in charge of the meeting of the Agricultural Publishers Association.

H. C. Sulcer, president of Vanderhoof & Co., Chicago, and secretary of the Western Council of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, will preside at the council's luncheon. Among the speakers will be Roy S. Durstine, of Barton, Durstine & Osborn, New York; James O'Shaughnessy, of New York, executive secretary of the Four A's; Walter A. Strong, publisher of the Chicago Daily News; O. C. Harn, president of the National Lead Company of New York, and Kent Cooper, of New York, general manager of the Associated Press.

FISH SUCCEEDS MARLOWE

New Chief of London Daily Mail Was Formerly News Editor

Walter G. Fish, for several years news editor of the London Daily Mail, has been named editor, succeeding Thomas Marlowe, who resigned.

Mr. Marlowe's resignation followed repudiation of a war debt editorial.

SPECIAL AD CLUB EDITION

The Washington (D. C.) Daily News published a special Advertising Club Edition, Sept. 16, announcing that Carl C. Magee, fighting editor of the Albuquerque (N. M.) State Tribune, would be the speaker at the club's opening meeting of the season to be held Sept. 28.

Largest Newspaper West of Chicago

500,000

Copies DAILY

The KANSAS CITY STAR

First in Circulation

Leadership in news and prestige has won for

LA PRENSA
OF BUENOS AIRES
leadership in Circulation

Since 1869 the public of Argentina has reposed in La Prensa a degree of confidence that is enjoyed by only a few of the world's great newspapers.

JOSHUA B. POWERS
Exclusive Advertising Representative,
250 Park Avenue, New York
"South America's Greatest Newspaper"

Our Customers Write Our Ads

LEON SHAW, Publisher of THE GAZETTE BILLINGS, MONTANA, Says—

"In my opinion the DUPLEX TUBULAR PRESS IS ONE OF THE MOST DEPENDABLE AND SATISFACTORY PIECES OF MACHINERY THAT HAS EVER BEEN PLACED ON THE MARKET, and I cannot refrain from voicing my high praise for it."

DUPLEX PRESSES

FOR ALL NEWSPAPERS

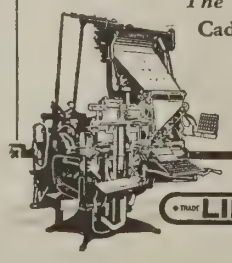
Duplex Printing Press Co.
BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

Mr. Managing Editor

"SIX-PLY COVERAGE" in New York gives you:

1. All news of special interest to you.
2. Theatrical reviews and critics' consensus.
3. Daily list of persons from your city registered at local hotels.
4. Interviews with persons from your territory arriving from abroad.
5. A complete clipping service.
6. "Following the Crowd in New York," a popular feature of quality.

The rock-bottom price of this service renders it available to any paper.



N. Y. Allied Press Bureau
Times Bldg.—New York City

From the Linotype Mailbag

More 24-Hour Service

We are sure more than pleased with your quick service in getting the part ordered out to us. We were just in the midst of a heavy run of work in getting out a Market Day edition, when this little part of the machine gave out. This occurred at 11:00 o'clock Monday morning, and at 8:00 o'clock Tuesday morning we had the part and were ready to go.

The Cadott Sentinel
Cadott, Wis.

LINOTYPE

A paper with the people

The public decides the progress of a newspaper.

The continuous rising circulation of the New York Evening Graphic vividly demonstrates popular acceptance of this newspaper as a medium of unusual reader interest.

Advertisers daily realize the benefit of this power through achieved results from the advertising columns of the New York Evening Graphic.

With a constantly increasing circulation, plus a constant growth in advertising lineage, the New York Evening Graphic offers the advertiser an extremely profitable opportunity.

Published by BERNARR MACFADDEN
NEW YORK
EVENING GRAPHIC

H. A. AHERN, Advertising Mgr.
25 City Hall Place
New York City

CLINE SYSTEM
CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO. CHICAGO

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control is used by

San Francisco Herald
San Francisco, Calif.

Ask them about it.

CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO.
Chicago: 111 West Washington Street
New York: 47 West 34th Street
San Francisco: First National Bank Building

CHARLOTTE MILLS

daughter of the murdered woman,* will cover

HALL-MILLS MURDER TRIAL

Let CHARLOTTE MILLS cover the trial for your paper.
Wire for Territory Now or Telephone
Columbus 2428 New York, and reverse charges.

Don't phone or wire if you are in these cities: San Francisco, New York, Cleveland, Rochester, Atlanta, Camden, Buffalo, Washington, Detroit, Worcester, Toledo, Syracuse, New Britain, Chicago, Albany, Baltimore, Boston, Philadelphia.

Every section of the country will run this story.

The service consists of advance material by mail, and a daily wire based on the highlights of the spot news developments. 1,000 to 1,500 words a day, but with toll charges on only 300 to 500, because the general story will be covered in the advance material which will be straight adds on the wire story. Release on advance matter will be indicated in the daily wire.

Separate services for morning and afternoon papers, but only one paper will be sold in a city. The story will always be fresh for your paper.

Don't hesitate if you are running a small paper. Here is something that will make it bigger.

PLAY CHARLOTTE MILLS BIG!

It's a sure circulation getter. PROMOTE IT! We'll send some promotion suggestions, but work out your own ideas, too. You can't go wrong by playing it BIG!

The most famous trial in twenty years, covered by the most interested and interesting character in the tragedy. Don't confuse this story with the regular wire service which every paper will get.

This story by CHARLOTTE MILLS will be the most unique feature of the

HALL-MILLS MURDER TRIAL

FAMOUS FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

1819 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

Harrison Cowan Opens Own Agency in New York—Heller Becomes Copy-Writer for Rudolph Guenther-Russell Law—Adamars Company, St. Louis, Adds to Staff

PRESIDENT H. T. EWALD of the Campbell-Ewald Company, who returned from an extended business trip in Europe this week after the establishment of a branch of that agency in Paris, necessitated by the expansion of the export business of its various American clients. E. V. Salisbury has been named European manager.

E. V. Salisbury

Mr. Salisbury recently has been a representative of the Willys-Overland company in Paris. He is now in the Detroit office of the agency studying the organization and methods.

He is an American citizen and after service as a volunteer with the French army during the World War was associated with the du Pont Old Hickory plant at Nashville, Tenn.

Harrison J. Cowan has opened a general advertising agency with offices in the Heckscher Building, Fifth Avenue at 57th street, New York. Cowan was for a number of years associated with Hoyt's Service, Inc. (Charles W. Hoyt Co., Inc.), New York, as department head, account executive and member of the plan board; was vice-president of the John Clark Sims Company, advertising agency, Philadelphia; account executive for the Wales Advertising Company, New York, and for the past two years was general sales manager for the Nestler Rubber Fusing Company of New York.

The Rudolph Guenther-Russel Law advertising agency has added to its copy-writing staff George Heller, formerly assistant to the president, and manager of advertising and publicity, of the Florida Trust Company of Miami. Mr. Heller will assist S. P. Harman, who recently became associated with the firm in charge of the copy department.

The Adamars Company, St. Louis, announces the following additions to its staff: Harry F. Herman, who formerly conducted his own agency, production manager; Rudolph Singer, for the last four years with the D'Arcy Advertising Company, and William T. Campbell, formerly advertising manager of the Auto Parts Company.

W. M. Stedman has left the Torchiana Advertising Agency, New York, to become New York representative of George Harrison Phelps, Inc., Detroit. The Phelps agency has obtained the account of the Sohmer Piano Company, New York.

Darwin J. Adams has resigned from the staff of Olmstead, Perrin & Leffingwell, Inc., New York, to become eastern manager of the Hotel Bulletin.

Doremus & Co., New York, has been appointed to handle the advertising for the Brooklyn Exposition, to be held at the Grand Central Palace, New York, Sept. 25-Oct. 9.

Rigal, winner of the Grand Prix at the Exhibition Arts Decoratifs in Paris, has joined the staff of the Ethridge Company, advertising art service, New York.

Sam H. Harris, New York theatrical producer, has acquired a play by Owen B. Winters and Leonard Cline, tentatively called "Pay Daisy." Mr. Winter is a partner in Erwin, Wasey & Co. and in charge of their New York Office. Mr. Cline is the author of "God Head" and "Listen Moon," two novels which have been published within the past two years. Both Mr. Winters and Mr. Cline were classmates at the University of Michigan.

H. F. Anderson has joined the Crossley & Failing, Inc., advertising agency of Portland, Ore. He will have charge of sales promotion, merchandising and contact work with clients of the agency. For many years he was national sales representative of Foster and Kleiser.

BACK TO SCHOOL DRIVE PLANNED FOR S. N. P. A.

President Park Will Call Departmental Meetings in Each State to Study Best Newspapers Methods

Building better newspapers during the next twelve months' period is the dominant note sounded by John A. Park, publisher of the Raleigh Times and president of the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association, in announcing the program of activities that organization will follow.

Mr. Park has just returned from a 4,000-mile trip through S. N. P. A. territory covering all the 14 states except Florida, which he visited last spring. After conferences with more than a hundred members, committeemen and directors during the flying trip, Mr. Park says that the outlook for Southern papers is the most gratifying.

A "back to school" movement with an unusual slant is started by President Park in presenting the eleven points in his program. With the approval of his entire board, Mr. Park will hold a series of departmental meetings in every state simultaneously at which heads of all newspaper departments will "talk shop" with others engaged in the same work.

This is an innovation that S. N. P. A. officials think will fill a long recognized desire of the association. Convention programs have become so crowded that insufficient time is left for discussion of technical topics. The new plan provides for two days of "schooling," three group meetings morning and afternoon of the first day and three more group meetings the second day, requiring only one day's attendance for any employe. The six study groups will embrace Advertising, News, Circulation, Mechanical Operations, Business Details and Executive Matters. Publishers will be expected to attend the last mentioned group while subordinate officials and department heads are to attend the five other divisions.

State directors will help arrange the programs and select the meeting places. Cities will be designated that are easily accessible to members in the respective states, requiring the minimum time in traveling.

During the month of September attention has been given to membership work in each state and by the first of October Manager Cranston Williams expects to see the group well above the present standing of 200.

Committees are actively handling postage and freight rates and during the month of October the association will be ready to defend the suit instituted by the Federal Trade Commission demanding net rates direct to advertisers.

The tenth year of an intensive drive to "sell the South" to the nation was launched Sept. 13 in metropolitan newspapers and trade publications, the same copy in page size running in each member newspaper at the same time. Funds for this campaign were voluntary contributions from members.

An Important Market for Autos and Accessories

There is one motor vehicle to every six of the resident population of Florida. In addition, many thousands of cars are coming into Florida every year from all parts of the country. During the past winter it was estimated that automobiles entered the state at the average rate of 4,000 a week.

Florida is making provision for the greater motor traffic that is certain to come. It is building one of the finest highway systems in the land. During 1925 alone it spent $30,000,000 on paved roads.

Florida needs more cars to meet the demands of its rapidly increasing population. It needs trucks and tractors for use in its commercial, industrial and agricultural development. And it needs all the supplies and accessories that go with them.

Here is a growing market which should be developed. It can be reached by advertising in the Associated Dailies of Florida—a co-operating group of leading newspapers that cover the state completely at low cost.

ASSOCIATED DAILIES of Florida

510 Clark Building Jacksonville, Florida

Bradenton News	Miami Tribune
Clearwater Sun	New Smyrna News
Daytona Beach Journal	Ocala Central Florida Times
Daytona Beach News	Orlando Morning Sentinel
Deland Daily News	Orlando Reporter-Star
Eustis Lake Region	Palatka News
Ft. Myers Press	Palm Beach Daily News
Ft. Myers Tropical News	Palm Beach Post
Ft. Pierce News-Tribune	Palm Beach Times
Ft. Pierce Record	Pensacola Journal
Gainesville News	Pensacola News
Gainesville Sun	Plant City Courier
Jacksonville Florida Times-Union	St. Augustine Record
Jacksonville Journal	St. Petersburg Independent
Key West Citizen	St. Petersburg News
Kissimmee Gazette	St. Petersburg Times
Lakeland Ledger	Sanford Herald
Lakeland Star-Telegram	Sarasota Herald
Lake Worth Leader	Sarasota Times
Melbourne Journal	Stuart Daily News
Miami Daily News	Tampa Times
Miami Herald	Tampa Tribune
	Winter Haven Chief

Does this Common Sense Health Article Appeal to You?

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK McCOY
Author of
"The Fast Way to Health"

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Dr. McCoy, who can be addressed in care of this paper.

THE LESSON OF A COLD

EVERY unpleasant experience is a lesson for us if we will but search to understand its meaning. A cold is not necessarily dangerous in itself, but is exceedingly distressing while it lasts, although it cures itself without much assistance. If you will stop and consider the conditions attendant upon a cold it is not difficult to understand what its causes are. If you have a cold now you will remember that you became unusually tired a day or two before the sneezing started. Perhaps you worked too hard at mental work or were up too late at a party. Or maybe you spent hours doing needless shopping and thus wasted your valuable energy. In every case enervation or nerve depletion must precede a cold as it cannot develop in any other condition of the body.

Sudden exposure to the elements or changeable atmospheric temperatures may be listed as contributing factors, but are never the fundamental causes. If your strength is kept up to the normal you need never fear the "attack" of either a nose or throat cold. It is also true that those who have enervated themselves the most usually feel that they have earned a large meal, and in this tired, exhausted state they eat more food than they generally do instead of going to bed without a meal and resting. If you are really tired you need rest and possibly sleep, but never at this time should "heavy" food be taken into an exhausted body. Only more enervation will be produced from the increased toxemia of your broken-down cells and the poisoning from food you cannot assimilate.

Always remember that the chief lesson of a cold is that you have tired yourself out too much. Therefore, do not repeat the same mistake again. Everyone has the privilege of making mistakes, but it should not be necessary to abuse that privilege. After you have resolved never to make the same mistakes again it is proper that you should turn your attention to eliminating your distressing symptoms. Stop all regular meals and force upon yourself the drinking of large quantities of water, either hot or cold, as desired. Better yet, instead of quinine pills, drink a glass every half hour of the following mixture:

Cut up several grapefruits into small pieces, using the skins and all of the fruit. Place in a glass or earthen vessel and pour over the cut-up grapefruit a suitable quantity of boiling hot water, about one quart to each grapefruit. Let stand for a few minutes and then start a regime of drinking a glassful of this grapefruit tea every half hour. Take an enema of a quart of warm water and go to bed between woollen blankets. Stay in bed for as many extra hours during the day as possible in addition to retiring early and arising late. A day or two of this will "knock out" the ordinary cold and keep it from developing into a more serious disorder. Do not resume regular meals until the mucus has been materially lessened. Then don't forget to live so that you never again become tired enough to develop a cold.

A FEW OF THE DAILY SUBJECTS DISCUSSED BY DR. McCOY:—

Constipation, a cure for constipation. That tired feeling in the morning. How to cure Asthma. Seeking Health. Breath control. Gland Rejuvenation. Children's diseases are unnecessary. How to use potatoes. Tonsilitis. Fasting and milk diet for chickens. A good curative; diet; prolapsus of abnormal organs; coated tongues; tuberculosis; that healthy look; the cause and cure of hemorrhoids, etc.

IF this health article appeals to you, it and other Daily Health articles by Dr. Frank McCoy will appeal to the readers of your paper. Read the following extract from a letter written by the Circulation Manager of the Vancouver (Canada) Sun:—

"There are 300,000 people in Greater Vancouver and two evening newspapers with about equal circulation. After running and promoting the McCoy health articles for the past six months, it is a conservative estimate to say that two-thirds of the people of Vancouver are today reading, discussing and talking about Dr. McCoy.

"Neighbors drop in for an evening and the discussion of real and fancied sickness is bound to come up and Dr. McCoy's health advice is passed on, in a great many cases to readers of the competitive paper. The result has been hundreds of phoned subscriptions from people who become permanent subscribers that the other paper cannot take away from us.

"In my experience as a newspaper Circulation Manager, it is the greatest service I have ever seen a newspaper give to its readers."

¶ The vehicle of health is in every home. Let Dr. McCoy tell your readers in his own inimitable, interesting manner the A.B.C. of food chemistry and physical mechanics. Once read this invaluable knowledge enables the reader to avoid mistakes and consequent ills—a distinct service to humanity.

¶ Health questions and answers are a part of this service.

¶ Attractive, convincing promotion material furnished to all newspapers using the service.

¶ In his line, McCoy is in a class by himself. There is only one Luther Burbank. There is only one Dr. Frank McCoy.

Dr. Frank McCoy's Daily Health and Diet Advice in the columns of your paper will create and anchor circulation and goodwill as no other feature will.

CINCH THIS SERVICE FOR YOUR COMMUNITY!

Write or Wire Today

McCOY HEALTH SERVICE

Brack Shops Bldg. Los Angeles, Calif.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER SEMI-ANNUAL LINAGE TABLE

(Continued from page 32)

City	Paper	Published	Total Linage	National	Local	Classified
Decatur, Ill.	Herald	(ms)	3,765,888	560,224	2,644,390	531,706
Decatur, Ill.	Review	(e)	3,080,994	580,104	2,044,882	428,862
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,044,302	104,412	837,830	100,352
	Total	(es)	4,125,296	684,516	2,882,712	529,214
Easton, Pa.	Express	(e)	4,624,242	855,904	3,289,524	374,682
Easton, Pa.	Free Press	(e)	3,120,530	356,314	2,342,270	421,946
Evanston, Ill.	News-Index	(e)	3,008,430	100,446	2,560,415	347,569
Fresno, Cal.	Bee	(e)	3,096,422	672,210	1,803,368	610,610
Fresno, Cal.	Republican	(ms)	4,023,236	1,082,802	2,152,374	78,078
Galveston, Tex.	News	(m)	1,945,844	506,350	905,843	533,651
	Sunday ed.	(s)	891,010	204,870	553,812	132,328
	Total	(ms)	2,836,854	711,220	1,459,655	665,979
Honolulu, Hawaii	Advertiser	(ms)	2,910,421	551,974	1,900,311	343,728
Honolulu, Hawaii	Star-Bulletin	(e)	2,627,870	620,606	1,655,094	244,748
Huntington, W. Va.	Advertiser	(es)	4,234,512	530,026	2,977,982	619,626
Huntington, W. Va.	Herald-Dispatch	(ms)	4,124,048	639,646	2,835,770	545,748
Jackson, Mich.	Citizen-Patriot	(e)	3,842,733	668,983	2,754,178	419,562
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,185,662	140,434	914,097	131,131
	Total	(es)	5,028,395	809,417	3,668,275	550,693
Johnstown, Pa.	Tribune	(e)	6,027,644	751,940	4,832,282	443,422
Kalamazoo, Mich.	Gazette	(e)	4,165,678	778,617	2,936,698	450,363
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,030,708	156,044	709,800	164,864
	Total	(es)	5,196,386	934,661	3,646,498	615,227
Lancaster, Pa.	Intelligencer News-Journal	(me)	3,303,146	726,662	2,029,986	530,247
	Sunday ed.	(s)	467,206	62,789	294,410	109,499
	Total	(mes)	3,770,352	789,451	2,324,396	639,746
Lincoln, Nebr.	Star	(e)	2,504,702	724,227	1,462,986	314,244
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,161,828	175,865	829,500	157,346
	Total	(es)	3,666,530	900,092	2,292,486	471,590
Long Island City, N. Y.	Star	(e)	2,489,058	219,129	1,668,346	542,139
Macon, Ga.	Telegraph	(m)	2,422,014	600,150	1,410,953	334,251
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,088,437	218,041	766,533	101,458
	Total	(ms)	3,512,451	818,191	2,177,486	435,709
Miami, Fla.	Herald	(m)	12,871,208	1,428,266	8,089,830	2,947,644
	Sunday ed.	(s)	4,291,490	470,456	3,057,698	755,370
	Total	(ms)	17,162,698	1,988,722	11,447,528	3,702,740
Montgomery, Ala.	Advertiser	(ms)	2,906,680	894,166	1,759,282	253,232
Mt. Vernon, N. Y.	Argus	(e)	4,875,372	478,574	4,060,644	336,154
New Britain, Conn.	Record	(e)	2,228,678	256,758	1,790,570	168,808
Niagara Falls, N. Y.	Gazette	(e)	4,401,831	649,839	3,344,110	407,128
Portland, Me.	Press-Herald	(m)	3,757,591	909,548	2,496,493	351,550
	Express	(e)	3,497,901	938,832	2,217,383	341,686
	Telegram	(s)	1,361,843	279,832	931,615	150,246
Pasadena, Cal.	Star-News	(e)	6,207,026	406,014	4,153,260	1,371,066
Pasadena, Cal.	Post	(e)	2,602,976	187,300	1,937,310	463,652
Racine, Wis.	Journal-News	(e)	3,370,388	671,384	2,337,230	361,774
Roanoke, Va.	Times	(m)	2,005,262	622,734	1,295,000	87,528
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,233,106	166,600	974,862	91,644
	Total	(ms)	3,238,368	789,334	2,269,862	179,172
Roanoke, Va.	World-News	(e)	3,423,854	696,052	2,448,384	279,454
Rock Island, Ill.	Argus	(e)	3,747,016	612,752	2,814,308	319,956
Springfield, O.	News	(e)	3,783,528	702,240	2,786,420	238,644
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,067,442	135,730	846,090	85,020
	Total	(es)	4,850,970	837,970	3,632,510	323,664
Shreveport, La.	Journal	(e)	3,139,076	409,388	2,347,068	382,620
Shreveport, La.	Times	(m)	3,189,705	838,252	1,949,462	401,991
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,537,516	302,878	1,030,729	203,909
	Total	(ms)	4,727,221	1,141,130	2,980,191	605,900
Saginaw, Mich.	News-Courier	(es)	5,896,465	939,330	4,382,014	575,120
Springfield, Mo.	Leader	(es)	3,922,198	847,602	2,461,718	515,200
Springfield, Ill.	State-Journal	(ms)	4,514,580	898,520	2,951,592	600,782
Terre Haute, Ind.	Star	(ms)	4,012,061	757,829	2,757,827	441,718
Terre Haute, Ind.	Tribune	(es)	4,737,992	761,124	3,502,576	474,292
Topeka, Kans.	Capital	(m)	2,654,687	696,199	1,318,030	558,642
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,275,407	231,266	784,308	241,353
	Total	(ms)	3,930,094	927,465	2,102,338	799,995
Union City, N. J.	Hudson Dispatch	(m)	2,556,094	304,466	1,784,545	360,538
Waco, Tex.	News-Tribune	(ms)	2,369,348	783,048	1,226,780	359,520
Waco, Tex.	Times-Herald	(e)	1,748,408	289,974	1,104,454	353,980
	Sunday ed.	(s)	806,924	55,410	662,221	89,293
	Total	(es)	2,555,332	345,384	1,766,675	443,273
Wheeling, W. Va.	Intelligencer	(m)	2,593,514	540,805	1,981,319	71,390
Wheeling, W. Va.	Register	(m)	2,287,800	238,042	1,888,054	126,504
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,608,320	45,934	1,517,978	41,650
	Total	(ms)	3,896,120	283,973	3,406,032	168,154
Wheeling, W. Va.	News	(e)	3,491,139	703,999	2,578,239	208,901
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,733,258	201,565	1,456,396	75,297
	Total	(es)	5,224,397	905,564	4,034,635	284,198
Wichita Falls, Tex.	Times	(es)	4,740,526	795,186	3,062,626	882,714

NEWSPAPERS IN CITIES OF 25,000 TO 49,999 POPULATION

City	Paper	Published	Total Linage	National	Local	Classified
Alameda, Cal.	Times-Star	(e)	1,786,246	224,182	1,270,178	155,778
Amsterdam, N.Y.	Recorder	(e)	2,494,263	488,978	1,811,788	151,298
Anderson, Ind.	Herald	(m)	3,652,000	500,000	2,900,000	252,000
Anderson, Ind.	Bulletin	(e)	2,417,002	409,794	1,859,494	71,834
Ann Arbor, Mich.	Times-News	(e)	3,395,021	508,858	2,480,254	351,274
Asheville, N. C.	Citizen	(ms)	6,804,378	796,908	4,871,482	1,135,988
Ashtabula, Ohio	Star-Beacon	(e)	2,992,247	450,306	2,408,504	90,009
Auburn, N. Y.	Citizen	(e)	2,053,184	462,392	1,450,722	96,950
Aurora, Ill.	Beacon-News	(es)	5,070,950	754,656	3,465,714	644,294
Austin, Tex.	American	(m)	1,588,562	630,738	655,760	302,064
	Sunday ed.	(s)	960,540	159,698	654,976	145,866
	Total	(ms)	2,549,102	790,436	1,310,736	447,930
Austin, Tex.	Statesman	(e)	1,395,176	431,382	654,290	309,054
Baton Rouge, La.	Advocate	(m)	2,394,374	360,010	1,851,024	183,340
Baton Rouge, La.	State-Times	(e)	3,095,222	467,754	2,156,784	184,338
Battle Creek, Mich.	Enquirer & News	(e)	3,672,536	609,226	2,349,158	714,112
	Sunday	(s)	699,118	81,494	432,418	185,206
	Total	(es)	4,371,645	690,760	2,781,576	899,318
Battle Creek, Mich.	Moon-Journal	(e)	3,590,472	359,216	2,558,814	486,094
Belleville, Ill.	Advocate	(e)	1,926,162	267,309	1,475,215	106,988
Bellingham, Wash.	American	(e)	992,600	.....	.....	.....
Bellingham, Wash.	Herald	(e)	2,803,332	767,522	1,719,466	285,334
Bellingham, Wash.	Reveille	(ms)	849,366	301,574	497,056	30,380
Bloomington, Ill.	Bulletin	(es)	2,149,785	253,449	1,689,117	163,539
Bloomington, Ill.	Pantagraph	(m)	3,872,514	741,587	2,866,792	264,135
Boise, Idaho	Statesman	(ms)	2,291,660	732,130	1,215,172	306,768
Burlington, Ia.	Gazette	(e)	2,150,442	546,469	1,424,857	179,116
Burlington, Ia.	Hawk-Eye	(m)	1,991,767	508,998	1,319,361	163,408
Burlington, Vt.	Free Press	(m)	2,903,912	696,376	1,972,560	234,976
Butler, Pa.	Eagle	(e)	2,847,536	635,362	1,985,794	172,480
Butte, Mont.	Daily Post	(e)	1,867,782	454,188	1,126,762	270,032
Casper, Wyo.	Herald-Tribune	(mes)	2,971,868	511,612	1,179,458	135,926
Champaign, Ill.	News-Gazette	(e)	2,489,393	356,108	1,793,207	282,590
	Sunday ed.	(s)	806,280	118,702	597,769	70,647
	Total	(es)	3,295,673	474,810	2,390,976	353,237
Clarksburg, W. Va.	Exponent	(ms)	2,059,736	351,736	1,428,882	203,028
Clinton, Iowa	Advertiser	(e)	2,263,800	487,242	1,660,057	116,501
Cumberland, Md.	Times	(e)	3,517,788	482,182	2,936,962	98,644
Danville, Ill.	Commercial-News	(e)	3,642,482	718,438	2,379,734	437,705
Danville, Ill.	Press	(m)	2,244,874	209,664	1,639,932	371,856
Danville, Va.	Bee	(e)	1,969,120	499,640	1,347,316	99,792
Danville, Va.	Register	(m)	1,849,058	508,476	1,234,392	99,386
	Sunday ed.	(s)	721,644	58,506	633,990	28,518
	Total	(ms)	2,570,702	566,982	1,868,382	127,904
Dubuque, Ia.	Telegraph-Herald	(m)	2,869,048	750,645	1,854,676	236,250
Dubuque, Ia.	Times-Journal	(m)	1,984,844	388,447	1,421,352	175,045
Durham, N. C.	Herald	(ms)	3,672,458	628,126	2,966,208	78,124
Elgin, Ill.	Courier-News	(e)	3,309,544	610,540	2,239,622	448,462
Elkhart, Ind.	Truth	(e)	2,651,950	510,664	1,733,466	407,820
Elyria, Ohio	Chronicle-Telegraph	(e)	2,833,978	401,604	2,205,308	159,068
Everett, Wash.	Herald	(e)	3,248,986	732,578	2,204,544	274,869
	(Total includes 36,995 lines-legal)
Fitchburg, Mass.	Sentinel	(e)	2,903,040	483,770	2,271,486	147,784

(Continued on page 52)

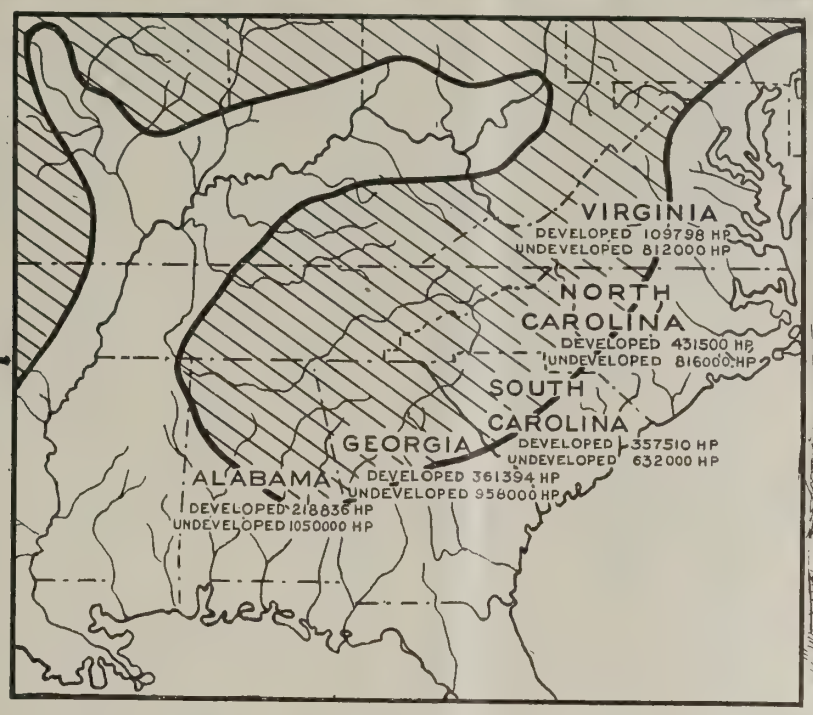
FOR PROMPT SERVICE

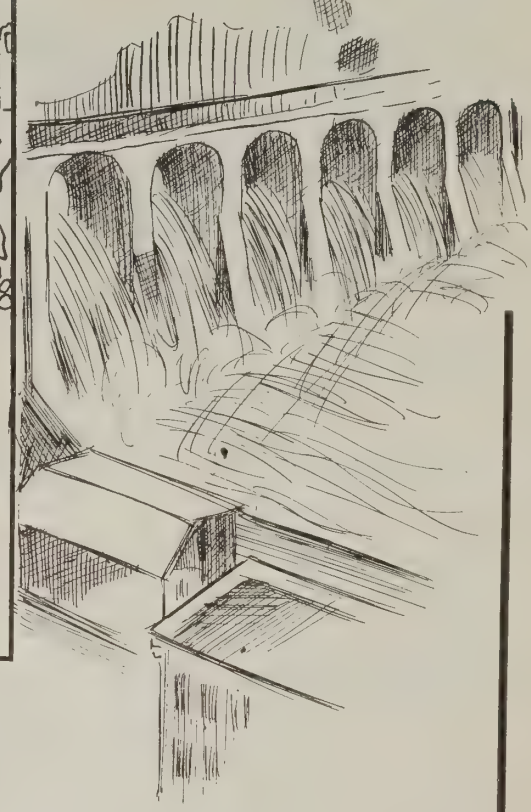
TYPE

BORDERS ~ ORNAMENTS ~ BRASS RULE

Printers' Supplies



KELLY PRESSES ~ KLYMAX FEEDERS ~ PAPER CUTTERS
HAMILTON WOOD AND STEEL EQUIPMENT, INCLUDING OUR AMERICAN CUT-COST EQUIPMENT



Carried in stock for prompt shipment at the following Selling Houses of the

American Type Founders Company

BOSTON, NEW YORK, PHILADELPHIA, BALTIMORE, RICHMOND, ATLANTA, BUFFALO, PITTSBURGH, CLEVELAND, DETROIT, CHICAGO, CINCINNATI, ST. LOUIS, MILWAUKEE, MINNEAPOLIS, KANSAS CITY, DES MOINES, DENVER, LOS ANGELES, SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND, SPOKANE, WINNIPEG

Why the South's Prosperity

Second- POWER

Hydro-Electric Power has been a tremendous influence upon the awakened South. The energy transmitted in this high tension system has transformed the lives of the entire people. So great has been its development that the rate of increase in the use of electric energy in 10 years has been 212.7 per cent, while for the remainder of the country it was only 148 per cent.

The development of the South's great power resources has created large industries employing hundreds upon hundreds of thousands of workers whose tastes for the finer and better things in life are developing at the same time.

Just think what a newspaper campaign in this market means for your product. The newspapers listed below will show you how to reach this most prosperous market today—Let them tell you.

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
ALABAMA
*Birmingham Age-Herald (M)	34,994	.09	.09
*Birmingham Age-Herald (S)	50,699	.11	.11
*Mobile News-Item (E)	11,993	.05	.05
*Mobile Register (M)	20,427	.08	.08
*Mobile Register (S)	32,096	.10	.10
FLORIDA
*Daytona Beach News (ES)	6,302	.04	.04
*Florida Times-Union (M) 49,903 (S)	59,239	.12(S.15)	.12(S.15)
*Lakeland Ledger (E)	5,173	.03	.03
*Miami Herald (M)	48,108	.11	.11
*Miami Herald (S)	60,006	.12	.12
*Orlando Reporter-Star (E)	8,502	.06	.06
*Orlando Sentinel (M&S)	10,655	.06	.06
*Pensacola News and Journal (E&M)	9,805	.07	.07
†St. Augustine Record (E&S)	3,382	.04	.04
†St. Petersburg Independent (E)	11,917	.055	.055
*Tampa Times (E)	23,325	.08	.08
†Tampa Tribune (M) 34,841 (S)	53,762	.10(.14S)	.10(.14S)
*West Palm Beach Post (M)	12,243	.06	.06
GEORGIA
*Augusta Herald (E)	14,246	.05	.05
*Augusta Herald (S)	14,547	.05	.05
*Macon Telegraph (M)	24,035	.08	.08
*Macon Telegraph (S)	24,439	.08	.08
*Savannah Morning News (M), 21,220. (S)	22,161	.06(.07S)	.06(.07S)
KENTUCKY
*The Lexington Leader (E)	19,640	.06	.06
*The Lexington Leader (S)	19,531	.06	.06
*Peducah Sun (E)	9,266	.04	.04

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
NORTH CAROLINA
†Greensboro Daily News (M)	27,485	.08	.07
†Greensboro Daily News (S)	31,505	.09	.08
*Salisbury Post (E)	7,188	.04	.04
†Winston-Salem Journal (M)	13,702	.05	.05
†Winston-Salem Journal (S)	13,720	.05	.05
*Winston-Salem Sentinel (E)	18,259	.07	.07
SOUTH CAROLINA
*Columbia State (M)	23,186	.07	.07
*Columbia State (S)	24,870	.07	.07
*Greenville News (M)	21,648	.075	.07
*Spartanburg Journal (E)	4,613	.05	.05
*Spartanburg Herald (M) 6,860 (S)	9,856
TENNESSEE
*Chattanooga Times (M)	29,184	.10	.10
*Chattanooga Times (S)	28,942	.10	.10
*Memphis Commercial Appeal (M)	100,934	.18	.18
*Memphis Commercial Appeal (S)	129,219	.21	.21
*Nashville Banner (E)	54,519	.11	.11
*Nashville Banner (S)	56,007	.12	.12
VIRGINIA
*Danville Register and Bee (M&E)	14,313	.06	.06
*Danville Bee and Register (E&S)	9,065	.09	.07
*Newport News Times-Herald (E)	7,968	.05	.05
*Newport News Daily Press (S&M)	5,413
*Roanoke Times & World News (M&E)	25,772	.08	.08
*Roanoke Times (S)	16,076	.07	.07
*Staunton News-Leader (M), Leader (E)	6,855	.035	.035

* A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1926.
† Government Statement, March 31, 1926.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER SEMI-ANNUAL LINAGE TABLE

(Continued from page 50)

City	Paper	Published	Total Linage	National	Local	Classified
Fond Du Lac, Wis.	Commonwealth	(e)	1,997,326	380,198	1,522,418	94,710
Fond Du Lac, Wis.	Reporter	(e)	2,094,537	432,537	1,417,054	211,642
Galesburg, Ill.	Mail	(e)	2,148,566	396,872	1,506,890	193,536
Gloucester, Mass.	Times	(e)	1,396,724	.....	.....	.....
Green Bay, Wis.	Press-Gazette	(e)	4,125,184	710,724	3,048,920	305,564
Greensboro, N.C.	News	(m)	3,242,120	772,184	2,261,126	208,810
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,425,116	252,854	1,087,450	84,812
	Total	(ms)	4,667,236	1,025,036	3,348,576	293,622
Greensville, S.C.	News	(m)	2,551,612	649,610	1,673,212	228,690
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,218,854	354,452	734,370	130,032
	Total	(ms)	3,770,466	1,004,062	2,407,582	358,722
Hagerstown, Md.	Morning Herald	(m)	2,265,634	577,444	1,362,998	325,192
	Daily Mail	(e)	2,269,820	578,032	1,433,390	258,398
Hamilton, Ohio	Journal	(e)	2,202,172	546,504	1,446,900	208,768
High Point, N. C.	Enterprise	(e)	2,135,084	314,860	1,683,066	137,158
	Sunday ed.	(s)	623,532	55,468	538,874	29,190
	Total	(es)	2,758,616	370,328	2,221,940	166,348
Hutchinson, Kan.	News	(ms)	1,799,532	569,170	837,340	393,022
	Herald	(e)	2,737,462	584,108	1,756,818	396,536
Jamestown, N.Y.	Journal	(e)	4,166,148	380,898	3,209,528	458,444
Joliet, Ill.	Herald-News	(es)	5,413,334	666,217	3,930,038	745,682
Joplin, Mo.	Globe	(m)	1,808,565	544,022	1,009,239	227,825
Joplin, Mo.	News-Herald	(e)	2,224,138	704,263	1,171,516	337,130
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,018,682	159,568	694,984	158,371
	Total	(es)	3,242,820	863,831	1,866,500	495,501
Kenosha, Wis.	News	(e)	4,051,974	644,728	2,686,134	*721,112
Kingston, N. Y.	Freeman	(e)	2,556,120	442,610	1,786,148	175,070
La Crosse, Wis.	Tribune & Leader-Press	(e)	2,045,536	571,336	1,341,004	133,196
	Sunday ed.	(s)	548,674	77,588	439,348	31,738
	Total	(es)	2,594,210	648,924	1,780,352	164,934
Lafayette, Ind.	Journal-Courier	(e)	2,891,734	617,876	1,929,102	324,756
Lexington, Ky.	Herald	(e)	2,089,136	283,794	1,593,900	211,442
	Sunday ed.	(s)	977,676	130,144	767,998	79,534
	Total	(es)	3,066,812	413,938	2,361,898	290,976
Lexington, Ky.	Leader	(e)	2,696,582	528,976	1,931,328	202,496
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,121,092	112,644	928,690	76,146
	Total	(es)	3,817,674	641,620	2,860,018	278,642
Lewiston, Me.	Sun	(m)	2,161,618	630,140	1,414,592	116,886
	Journal	(e)	1,759,268	482,944	1,175,342	100,982
Lima, Ohio	News	(m)	4,327,984	735,994	2,847,376	704,872
Lockport, N. Y.	Union Sun & Journal	(e)	2,261,924	313,614	1,595,524	168,504
Lorain, Ohio	Times-Herald	(e)	2,975,056	317,744	2,316,468	340,844
Madison, Wis.	Capital-Times	(e)	2,818,249	449,463	1,999,123	369,663
Madison, Wis.	State-Journal	(es)	4,259,668	775,568	2,715,384	644,574
Mansfield, Ohio	Journal	(e)	2,617,444	170,787	2,137,408	269,398
	Sunday ed.	(s)	856,013	54,698	665,662	127,484
	Total	(es)	3,473,457	225,485	2,803,070	396,882
Marion, Ind.	Chronicle	(e)	2,519,730	526,956	1,750,045	206,507
Marion, Ind.	Leader-Tribune	(e)	1,757,849	206,202	1,344,668	171,608
	Sunday ed.	(s)	584,527	118,296	410,753	50,015
	Total	(es)	2,342,378	324,499	1,755,421	221,623
Middletown, O.	Journal	(es)	2,078,268	351,246	1,448,720	253,354
Middletown, O.	News-Signal	(e)	1,814,862	236,810	1,328,754	222,446
Moline, Ill.	Dispatch	(e)	3,990,066	597,870	2,993,952	294,952
Morgantown, W. Va.	Post	(e)	1,825,764	243,488	1,382,822	146,828
Muncie, Ind.	Press	(e)	2,146,472	186,935	1,616,939	322,203
Newark, Ohio	Advocate	(e)	2,486,694	411,258	2,075,436	.....
Newburgh, N.Y.	News-Journal	(e)	2,836,106	567,714	1,979,040	253,134
New Brunswick, N. J.	Home News & Times	(e)	3,725,134	471,226	2,724,974	405,538
	Sunday ed.	(s)	946,876	36,862	831,222	72,996
	Total	(es)	4,672,010	508,088	3,556,196	478,534
New London, Conn.	Day	(e)	2,499,084	686,854	1,486,968	325,262
Norristown, Pa.	Register	(e)	1,385,994	84,688	1,099,190	136,338
Norristown, Pa.	Times-Herald	(e)	2,653,187	404,399	1,931,276	317,512
Orlando, Fla.	Sentinel	(ms)	7,373,824	1,777,118	4,429,362	999,558
Ottumwa, Ia.	Courier	(e)	2,731,064	518,350	2,013,662	199,052
Paducah, Ky.	News-Democrat	(m)	1,363,978	230,230	1,002,218	118,104
	Sunday ed.	(s)	811,510	83,412	693,126	34,972
	Total	(ms)	2,175,510	313,642	1,695,344	153,076
Paducah, Ky.	Sun	(e)	2,816,546	444,675	2,116,387	207,221
Pensacola, Fla.	News-Journal	(m)	1,959,076	503,258	1,072,176	323,105
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,268,568	409,598	581,812	168,952
	Total	(ms)	3,227,644	912,856	1,653,988	492,058
Perth Amboy, N. J.	News	(e)	3,207,837	732,721	2,122,907	318,125
Phoenix, Ariz.	Arizona Republican	(m)	3,286,780	612,262	1,725,038	814,394
	Sunday	(s)	1,105,146	261,730	602,840	225,190
	Total	(ms)	4,391,926	873,992	2,327,878	1,039,584
Pittsfield, Mass.	Berkshire Evening Eagle	(e)	4,573,184	686,532	.....	*3,886,652
Plainfield, N. J.	Courier	(e)	4,086,222	1,094,548	2,568,874	422
Pomona, Cal.	Bulletin	(m)	1,863,596	266,000	1,280,034	309
Port Huron, Mich.	Times-Herald	(e)	3,324,930	586,922	2,542,967	195
Portsmouth, O.	Sun	(m)	1,645,824	525,980	791,572	328
	Times	(e)	3,495,157	537,922	2,614,962	342
	Sun-Times	(s)	1,077,132	133,714	853,244	90
Pueblo, Colo.	Chieftain	(m)	1,621,158	229,096	1,064,098	316
	Sunday ed.	(s)	706,370	139,076	420,728	145
	Total	(ms)	2,327,528	368,172	1,484,826	461
Pueblo, Colo.	Star-Journal	(e)	3,102,498	588,938	1,975,442	538
Raleigh, N. C.	News & Observer	(ms)	4,082,232	1,011,696	2,779,336	291
Raleigh, N. C.	Times	(e)	3,064,810	295,680	2,552,690	174
Richmond, Ind.	Item	(ms)	1,882,986	343,868	1,237,796	268
Richmond, Ind.	Palladium	(e)	2,230,802	516,932	1,395,626	241
Riverside, Cal.	Press	(e)	3,028,398	687,948	1,821,008	519
Rome, N. Y.	Sentinel	(e)	1,588,612	336,265	1,024,410	199
St. Petersburg, Fla.	Independent	(e)	7,908,426	433,034	6,492,144	983
St. Petersburg, Fla.	News	(e)	3,865,959	140,462	3,094,363	602
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,287,977	29,673	1,105,795	152
	Total	(es)	5,153,936	170,135	4,200,058	754
St. Petersburg, Fla.	Times	(m)	10,380,643	730,548	7,174,678	2,386
	Sunday ed.	(s)	3,685,255	257,908	2,880,682	544
	Total	(ms)	14,065,898	988,456	10,055,360	2,931
Salem, Mass.	Evening News	(e)	2,833,561	1,932,115	593,138	308
San Jose, Cal.	Mercury-Herald	(ms)	6,688,850	946,848	4,737,782	905
Santa Ana, Cal.	Register	(e)	4,105,934	684,264	2,541,518	725
Santa Barbara, Cal.	Press	(ms)	2,807,916	358,932	1,650,726	624
Santa Monica, Cal.	Outlook	(e)	2,673,202	264,054	1,779,050	531
	Sunday ed.	(s)	547,610	32,130	404,040	107
	Total	(es)	3,220,812	296,184	2,183,090	639
Sheboyan, Wis.	Press	(e)	2,861,094	664,482	1,904,078	177
Sioux Falls, S.D.	Press	(m)	736,274	188,174	461,364	40
	Sunday ed.	(s)	573,440	48,038	475,408	49
	Total	(ms)	1,309,714	236,212	936,772	90
Sioux Falls, S.D.	Argus-Leader	(e)	2,887,125	774,945	1,829,282	258
So. Norwalk, Conn.	Sentinel	(e)	1,699,810	208,836	1,460,218	198
Spartanburg, S. C.	Herald	(m)	1,792,840	617,036	916,986	120
	Sunday ed.	(s)	833,334	272,230	482,410	51
	Total	(ms)	2,626,174	889,266	1,389,396	172

(Continued on page 53)

PEJEPSCOT PAPER COMPANY

Manufacturers for Over Fifty Years of

NEWSPRINT

Combining the Three Essentials of Quality

Strength • Cleanliness • Color

Colored Newsprint a Specialty

Daily Capacity

160 TONS

MILLS IN THE STATE OF MAINE, U. S. A.

Sales Office: • 42 Broadway • New York, N. Y.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER SEMI-ANNUAL LINAGE TABLE

(Continued from page 52)

City	Paper	Published	Total Linage	National	Local	Classified
Spartanburg, S. C.	Journal	(e)	2,381,170	904,968	1,224,552	140,350
Springfield, Mo.	Republican	(me)	2,046,224	240,618	1,362,534	321,272
Stamford, Conn.	Advocate	(e)	3,679,714	574,826	2,551,052	518,010
Steubenville, O.	Herald Star	(e)	4,531,592	.....	.....	.....
Stockton, Cal.	Independent	(ms)	2,025,828	281,610	1,308,972	105,364
Stockton, Cal.	Record	(e)	4,159,736	845,012	2,713,144	485,240
Superior, Wis.	Telegram	(e)	2,998,338	759,851	1,852,597	323,785
Taunton, Mass.	Gazette	(e)	2,401,231	625,266	1,663,075	112,890
Tucson, Ariz.	Citizen	(e)	1,982,652	497,966	1,080,940	341,502
Tucson, Ariz.	Star	(ms)	2,028,992	443,800	1,117,774	373,128
Washington, Pa.	Observer & Reporter	(me)	5,122,516	920,738	4,201,778	.....
Waterloo, Ia.	Courier	(e)	3,184,160	819,476	2,021,712	342,972
Waterloo, Ia.	Tribune	(m)	2,303,910	1,738,296	310,408	154,206
Watertown, N. Y.	Times	(e)	1,962,891	484,113	1,256,213	196,343
Waukegan, Ill.	News	(e)	1,894,536	1,751,904		43,596
Waukegan, Ill.	Sun	(e)	2,149,994	416,444	1,472,506	261,044
White Plains, N. Y.	Reporter	(e)	4,045,498	334,376	3,184,020	536,102
Williamsport, Pa.	Gazette & Bulletin	(m)	1,804,418	218,974	1,585,444	.....
	Sun	(e)	3,544,744	683,522	2,861,222	.....
Wilmington, N.C.	News-Despatch	(e)	967,566	132,286	777,196	58,084
Woonsocket, R.I.	Call	(e)	2,690,436	486,318	2,050,370	153,748
York, Pa.	Gazette & Daily	(m)	3,270,176	269,976	2,675,050	325,150
York, Pa.	Dispatch	(e)	5,329,492	608,664	3,327,200	*556,946
Zanesville, Ohio.	Times-Recorder	(m)	3,229,366	675,374	2,177,966	376,026
	Signal	(e)	3,229,366	675,374	2,177,966	376,026

NEWSPAPERS IN CITIES OF 20,000 TO 24,999 POPULATION

Amarillo, Tex.	Globe-News	(ms)	3,414,390	552,314	2,321,872	540,204
	Evening ed.	(e)	1,892,464	380,030	1,097,894	414,540
Appleton, Wis.	Post-Crescent	(e)	3,056,682	493,388	2,359,224	204,070
Athens, Ga.	Banner-Herald	(e)	848,414	315,112	440,300	93,002
	Sunday ed.	(s)	274,694	47,544	198,156	28,994
	Total	(es)	1,123,108	362,656	638,456	121,996
Bakersfield, Cal.	Californian	(e)	2,703,018	777,794	1,464,092	325,710
Bakersfield, Cal.	Echo	(m)	1,090,488	867,644		144,508
	Sunday ed.	(s)	323,300	286,202		28,588
	Total	(ms)	1,413,788	1,153,866		173,096
Beloit, Wis.	News	(e)	2,738,967	511,182	1,933,057	294,728
Biloxi and Gulfport, Miss.	Herald	(e)	1,821,568	351,932	1,281,490	188,146
Concord, N. H.	Monitor-Patriot	(e)	1,882,636	.....	.....	.....
Concord, N. H.	Telegram	(e)	430,411	319,517	68,806	31,408
Corning, N. Y.	Leader	(e)	1,769,887	375,200	1,336,857	41,370
Danbury, Conn.	News	(e)	4,193,857	813,663	3,108,577	271,617
East Liverpool, O.	Review-Tribune	(e)	2,843,820	536,508	2,117,276	158,634
Eau Claire, Wis.	Leader-Telegram	(me)	2,160,570	595,568	1,419,026	144,976
Fairmont, W. Va.	Times	(m)	1,604,512	223,706	1,292,707	87,099
	Sunday ed.	(s)	538,972	104,232	407,891	26,849
	Total	(mes)	2,143,484	328,938	1,700,598	113,948
Flushing, N. Y.	Journal	(e)	2,610,410	1,501,610	1,108,800
Freeport, Ill.	Journal-Standard	(e)	2,207,422	402,570	1,598,492	206,360
Gloversville, N. Y.	Herald	(m)	1,881,572	181,216	1,700,356	.....
Gloversville	Leader & Republican	(e)	2,193,898	439,838	1,416,632	286,678
(Total includes 51,086 lines-legal, 11,466 lines-radio not in total)
Great Falls, Mont.	Leader	(e)	1,166,060	203,056	867,076	95,928
Great Falls, Mont.	Tribune	(m)	2,208,472	511,392	1,531,488	144,578
	Sunday ed.	(s)	852,628	243,418	557,704	48,398
	Total	(ms)	3,061,100	754,810	2,089,192	192,976
Greensburg, Pa.	Review-Tribune	(m)	2,852,542	2,519,384		333,158
	Evening ed.	(e)	2,823,072	2,489,914		333,158
Hackensack, Pa.	Bergen Record	(e)	3,866,324	396,928	2,981,076	388,262
Janesville, Wis.	Gazette	(e)	2,948,400	536,312	2,069,928	300,874
La Salle, Ill.	Tribune	(e)	1,587,194	264,992	1,253,406	68,796
Lebanon, Pa.	News & Leader	(e)	2,102,128	538,972	1,333,972	167,986
Mason City, Ia.	Globe-Gazette	(e)	3,059,568	603,232	2,233,862	155,904
Meridian, Miss.	Star	(es)	2,666,339	693,224	1,846,012	82,390
Middletown, Conn.	Press	(e)	2,733,490	450,639	2,068,448	214,403
Middletown, N. Y.	Times-Press	(e)	1,957,900	533,638	1,083,096	276,640
Oil City, Pa.	Blizzard	(e)	1,818,138	.....	.....	.....

(Continued on page 54)

Far in the Lead

The SYRACUSE N. Y. HERALD

had phenomenal lineage leads over its competitors.
For the First Eight Months of 1926

Local

Herald	Journal	Post-Standard	Herald leads Journal	Herald leads Post-Standard
5,670,878	3,033,892	3,096,924	2,636,986	2,573,954
National
1,040,574	810,564	953,348	230,010	87,226
Automotive
878,154	588,621	751,911	289,533	126,243
Total
7,589,606	4,433,077	4,802,183	3,156,529	2,787,423
Department Stores
1,607,724	78,614	819,654	1,529,110	588,070
Food
423,562	317,171	198,833	106,391	224,729
Women's Wear
613,895	328,111	200,736	285,784	413,159
Men's Wear
419,671	373,549	237,940	46,122	181,731
Radio
105,487	42,082	63,953	63,405	41,534

The HERALD carried over 45% of all display advertising that appeared in the Syracuse papers

Here are the Reasons:

HERALD'S Concentrated Circulation —Class of appeal—Reader's responsiveness —Tested and provenselling power for local as well as national advertisers.

National Representative

PRUDDEN, KING & PRUDDEN, Inc.

270 Madison Avenue, New York — 507 Montgomery St., San Francisco, California
Globe Building, Boston — Leary Building, Seattle, Washington
Steger Building, Chicago — Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Los Angeles, California

EDITOR & PUBLISHER SEMI-ANNUAL LINAGE TABLE

(Continued on page 53)

City	Paper	Published	Total Linage	National	Local	Classified
Oil City, Pa.	Derrick	(m)	3,002,654	679,348	2,201,539	121,767
Olean, N. Y.	Times	(e)	2,471,336	372,890	1,821,218	277,228
Oneonta, N. Y.	Star	(m)	1,394,897	345,695	851,410	117,726
Orlando, Fla.	Reporter-Star	(e)	5,886,712	415,316	4,960,718	380,464
Oswego, N. Y.	Palladium-Times	(e)	1,683,334	351,512	1,218,884	82,670
Owensboro, Ky.	Messenger	(ms)	2,066,316	490,238	1,474,508	62,629
Parkersburg, W. Va.	News	(m)	1,578,728	150,822	1,117,530	185,290
	Sunday ed.	(s)	822,248	117,600	650,902	47,096
	Total	(ms)	2,400,976	268,422	1,825,432	232,386
Parkersburg, W. Va.	Sentinel	(e)	2,514,510	328,121	2,064,701	121,688
Phoenix, Ariz.	Gazette	(e)	2,673,892	608,496	1,585,094	415,576
Portsmouth, Ohio	Sun	(m)	1,645,824	525,980	791,572	328,272
	Times	(e)	3,495,157	537,922	2,614,962	342,273
	Sun-Times	(s)	1,077,132	133,714	853,244	90,174
Pottsville, Pa.	Morning Paper	(m)	1,412,082	452,536	872,830	86,716
Pottsville, Pa.	Republican	(e)	3,708,348	433,552	1,695,022	167,692
Salem, Ore.	Capital Journal	(e)	2,095,310	501,396	1,260,616	266,490
Sandusky, O.	Star-Journal	(e)	2,253,896	431,754	1,534,439	215,409
Sharon, Pa.	Herald	(e)	3,353,586	494,354	2,448,950	373,242
Sharon, Pa.	News-Telegraph	(e)	3,055,472	254,242	2,195,438	487,004
Wausau, Wis.	Record-Herald	(e)	2,541,084	437,178	1,873,494	191,744

NEWSPAPERS IN CITIES OF 15,000 TO 19,999 POPULATION

Aberdeen, Wash.	World	(e)	2,771,328	542,668	1,892,616	336,044
Alexandria, Va.	Gazette	(m)	1,499,288	185,556	1,146,334	89,782
Alexandria, La.	Town Talk	(e)	2,164,988	457,044	1,550,248	106,946
Albuquerque, N. M.	Journal	(me)	2,454,382	340,662	1,432,900	610,218
	Sunday ed.	(s)	641,074	148,904	419,958	69,720
	Total	(mes)	3,095,456	489,566	1,852,858	679,938
Anniston, Ala.	Star	(e)	1,619,254	363,398	1,181,124	137,732
Augusta, Me.	Kennebec Journal	(m)	1,619,576	542,108	918,064	159,404
Biddeford, Me.	Journal	(e)	965,596	391,734	512,806	61,056
Billings, Mont.	Gazette	(me)	1,366,823	546,713	820,110	.....
	Sunday ed.	(s)	341,704	136,678	205,026	.....
	Total	(mes)	2,068,967	683,391	1,025,136	360,440
Blackwell, Okla.	Tribune & News	(me)	1,083,306	188,720	770,574	93,800
	Sunday ed.	(s)	418,312	74,914	319,186	21,860
	Total	(mes)	1,501,618	363,634	1,089,760	115,660
Bartlesville, Okla.	Examiner	(ms)	1,851,668	224,560	1,431,164	195,902
Bowling Green, Ky.	Times-Journal	(e)	895,828	419,328	440,160	21,840
Bowling Green, Ky.	Park City News	(e)	1,519,000	379,750	1,009,050	130,200
Bradford, Pa.	Era	(m)	2,287,600	.....	.....	.....
Carbondale, Pa.	Leader	(e)	1,619,500	277,544	1,341,956	.....
Cairo, Ill.	Citizen	(e)	1,153,166	384,566	691,236	46,326
Cape Girardeau Mo.	Southeast Missourian	(e)	1,461,030	385,750	856,254	219,026
Carlisle, Pa.	Sentinel	(e)	1,079,708	.....	.....	.....
Connellsville, Pa.	Courier	(e)	2,115,624	401,142	1,584,002	64,372
Daytona Beach Fla.	News	(e)	4,524,506	946,218	2,894,920	602,070
Enid, Okla.	Eagle & News	(me)	4,134,065	841,291	2,533,580	699,401
	Sunday ed.	(s)	37,615	4,847	28,070	4,407
	Total	(mes)	4,171,680	846,138	2,561,650	703,808
Eugene, Ore.	Guard	(e)	2,418,542	515,074	1,514,338	389,542
Eureka, Cal.	Humboldt Times	(m)	1,700,480	375,648	856,506	468,326
	Sunday ed	(s)	633,650	135,768	394,478	103,404
	Total	(ms)	2,334,130	511,416	1,251,084	571,720
Ft. Collins, Colo.	Express-Courier	(e)	1,096,048	182,048	758,642	101,738
	Sunday ed.	(s)	435,316	100,436	293,874	31,710
	Total	(es)	1,531,364	282,484	1,052,516	133,448
Ft. Madison, Ia.	Democrat	(e)	1,532,235	309,372	1,146,398	50,578
Gadsden, Ala.	Times	(m)	1,568,169	295,251	1,139,754	81,606
	(Total includes 51,448 lines auto adv.)
Gardner, Mass.	News	(e)	1,716,204	264,922	1,299,718	151,564
Geneva, N. Y.	Times	(e)	1,491,378	293,230	1,019,130	150,864
Glendale, Cal.	News	(e)	3,167,647	211,080	2,169,433	663,985
Hannibal, Mo.	Courier-Post	(e)	1,640,912	380,842	1,108,716	127,344
Huntington Ind.	Press	(ms)	1,770,524	211,750	1,411,214	120,006
Hornell, N. Y.	Tribune-Times	(e)	1,525,347	379,675	1,016,631	63,717
Ironwood, Mich.	Globe	(e)	1,668,604	323,036	1,277,430	68,138
Ithaca, N. Y.	Journal-News	(e)	2,596,616	1,840,202	449,044	275,142
Keokuk, Ia.	Daily Gate City	(e)	1,536,766	377,076	1,059,506	56,588
Key West, Fla.	Citizen	(e)	1,048,659	350,005	584,150	42,000
Knoxville, Tenn.	Sentinel	(es)	4,292,484	781,368	2,777,922	733,194
Lakeland, Fla.	Ledger	(e)	3,641,918	202,258	2,867,088	522,914
	Sunday ed.	(s)	1,243,004	13,678	1,102,010	119,630
	Total	(es)	4,884,922	215,936	3,969,098	642,544
Lakeland, Fla.	Star-Telegram	(ms)	4,216,658	913,276	2,029,655	241,919
Laurel, Miss.	Leader	(e)	1,227,366	296,674	865,688	65,688
McKeesport Pa.	News	(ms)	1,377,308	.....	.....	.....
Mankato, Minn.	Free Press	(e)	2,369,150	430,304	1,831,032	107,814
Marietta, Ohio	Times	(e)	1,368,341	355,565	805,633	167,828
	Sunday ed.	(s)	294,220	69,443	195,867	28,910
	Total	(es)	1,662,561	425,008	1,001,500	196,738
Massillon, Ohio	Independent	(e)	3,937,188	418,054	2,698,598	224,598
Meadville, Pa.	Tribune-Republican	(me)	2,421,388	439,824	1,874,628	59,496
Modesto, Cal.	News-Herald	(e)	2,413,180	410,984	1,457,442	441,056
Modesto, Cal.	News-Herald	(ms)	2,413,180	410,984	1,457,442	441,056
Monroe, La.	News-Star	(e)	2,117,780	466,620	1,243,522	238,938
Mt. Carmel, Pa.	Item	(e)	916,096	282,615	595,231	38,250
Muscatine, Ia.	Journal & News-Tribune	(e)	1,646,596	403,326	1,146,726	96,544
Newburyport, Mass.	News	(e)	1,392,550	278,510	1,114,040	.....
New Philadelphia, Ohio	Times	(e)	1,771,724	292,782	1,358,164	120,778
Newcastle, Ind.	Courier	(e)	1,778,000	.....	.....	.....
Okmulgee, Okla.	Democrat	(e)	1,045,450	337,722	531,776	129,248
Okmulgee, Okla.	Times	(m)	1,116,220	368,102	612,528	132,566
	Times-Democrat	(s)	981,302	206,808	653,478	117,712
	Total	(ms)	2,097,522	574,910	1,266,006	250,278
Parsons, Kan.	Sun	(e)	1,728,398	352,044	1,239,238	98,112
Peekskill, N. Y.	Star	(e)	1,367,037	91,169	1,113,643	131,297
Pittsburgh, Kans.	Sun	(ms)	1,526,644	125,622	1,294,860	101,262
Pocatello, Idaho	Tribune	(e)	1,523,018	356,734	897,050	208,236
	Sunday	(s)	470,848	63,266	356,734	42,966
	Total	(es)	1,993,866	419,426	1,253,784	251,202
Rutland, Vt.	Herald	(m)	2,182,746	551,785	1,499,921	131,040
St. Cloud, Minn.	Journal-Press	(e)	1,100,025	200,326	752,248	108,878
St. Cloud, Minn.	Times	(e)	1,176,148	316,884	738,444	120,820
Salina, Kans.	Journal	(e)	2,619,162	566,734	1,898,974	153,454
Salisbury, N. C.	Post	(e)	1,511,895	418,537	834,953	258,405
	Sunday ed.	(s)	444,150	69,797	333,795	40,558
	Total	(es)	1,956,045	488,334	1,168,748	298,963
Sunbury, Pa.	Daily	(e)	1,432,964	342,832	963,032	85,680
Sunbury, Pa.	Item	(e)	1,325,100	320,642	927,892	76,566
Sherman, Tex.	Democrat	(es)	2,004,548	414,708	1,589,840	.....
Uniontown, Pa.	Herald & Genius	(me)	6,300,840	.....	.....	.....
Vincennes, Ind.	Commercial	(m)	1,724,127	367,216	1,080,747	240,562
Walla Walla, Wash.	Bulletin	(e)	1,833,524	499,086	1,158,486	175,952
	Sunday ed.	(s)	531,720	131,278	362,796	37,646
	Total	(es)	2,365,244	630,364	1,521,282	213,598
West Frankfort, Ill	American	(e)	1,159,571	139,998	898,613	120,960
Yakima, Wash.	Republic	(e)	2,761,052	600,502	1,745,030	301,070

(Continued on page 55)

Advertising in New Orleans

National Advertisers

Must you pay a tax to sell just New Orleans? Yes—if you use a medium with a great part of its circulation widely scattered over outside territory. NO—if you choose the concentrated city circulation of the New Orleans STATES.

Concentrated circulation, least waste, greatest value and highest efficiency makes the STATES the most effective advertising medium in New Orleans. John M. Branham Company, representatives.

New Orleans States

EDITOR & PUBLISHER SEMI-ANNUAL LINAGE TABLE

(Continued on page 54)

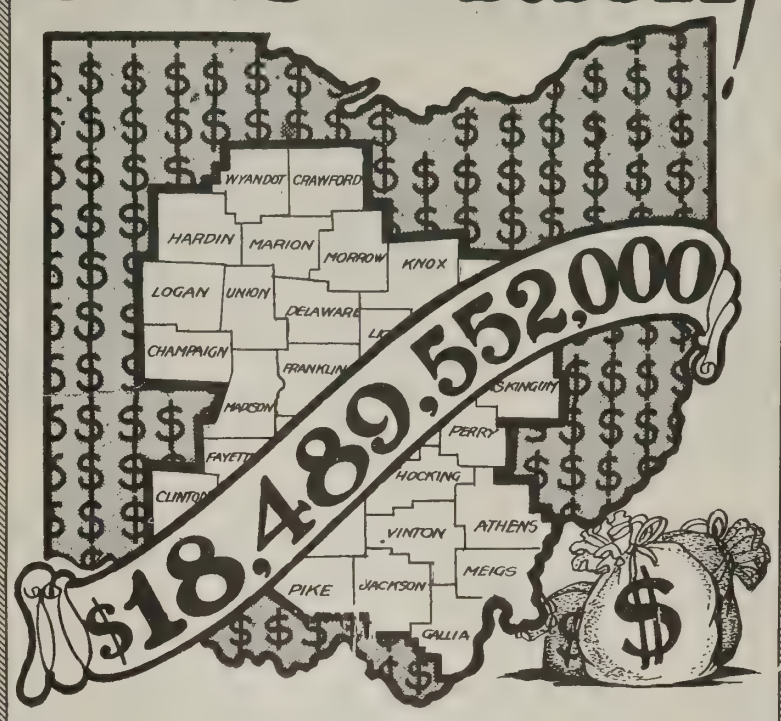
City	Paper	Published	Linage Total	National	Local	Classified
Yakima, Wash.	Herald	(m)	1,744,820	298,788	1,044,610	187,138
	Sunday ed.	(s)	855,260	236,096	506,096	99,274
	Total	(ms)	2,600,080	534,884	1,550,710	286,412



NEWSPAPERS IN CITIES OF 10,000 TO 14,999 POPULATION

Abilene, Tex.	Reporter	(e)	1,694,938	352,800	1,100,932	241,206
	Sunday ed.	(s)	989,632	123,998	800,240	65,394
	Total	(es)	2,684,570	476,798	1,901,172	306,600
Adrian, Mich.	Telegram	(e)	2,129,932	463,022	1,666,910	281,890
Albany, Ga.	Herald	(e)	2,090,690	470,568	1,410,164	209,958
Alpena, Mich.	News	(e)	1,567,216	251,454	1,156,246	*159,516
Astoria, Ore.	Astorian	(m)	1,449,421	269,094	1,011,066	152,895
Astoria, Ore.	Budget	(e)	1,527,820	331,870	1,057,434	112,504
Ardmore, Okla.	Ardmoreite	(e)	1,647,532	298,662	1,213,268	133,602
Ardmore, Okla.	Press	(ms)	1,123,773	209,412	809,578	87,164
Arkansas City, Kan.	Traveler	(e)	1,628,222	268,198	1,249,802	90,412
Ashland, Ky.	Independent	(es)	2,752,644	461,658	1,739,346	364,924
Ashland, Wisc.	Press	(e)	1,111,026	275,128	780,920	54,978
Austin, Minn.	Herald	(e)	1,812,442	476,959	1,049,309	190,783
Batavia, N. Y.	News	(e)	2,191,000	371,000	1,722,000	.....
Blytheville, Ark.	Courier-News	(e)	1,272,499	312,010	959,480	1,009
Boone, Ia.	Republican	(e)	1,161,272	265,708	803,222	45,458
Burbank, Cal.	Review	(e)	732,004	59,976	534,520	104,910
Cambridge, Ohio	Jeffersonian	(e)	1,773,109	295,473	1,270,167	164,885
Canton, Ill.	Ledger	(e)	935,662	305,634	572,054	57,974
Carthage, Mo.	Press	(e)	1,317,134	.....	.....	.....
Centralia, Ill.	Sentinel	(e)	1,517,460	351,806	1,066,968	86,604
Cheyenne, Wyo.	Wyoming State Tribune-Leader	(e)	1,040,536	356,608	593,628	90,300
	Sunday ed.	(s)	347,060	131,236	192,304	23,520
	Total	(es)	1,387,596	487,844	785,932	113,820
Clearwater, Fla.	Herald	(ms)	3,373,776	36,400	2,887,976	218,400
Clearwater, Fla.	Sun	(e)	3,539,414	457,856	2,810,500	217,812
Clinton, Ind.	Clintonian	(e)	793,244	205,008	503,818	68,480
Coatesville, Pa.	Record	(e)	1,631,378	.....	.....	.....
Coffeyville, Kan.	Journal	(e)	1,634,808	350,392	1,130,164	146,608
Cortland, N. Y.	Standard	(e)	1,725,794	403,725	1,097,928	179,928
Coshocton, Ohio.	Tribune & Times Age	(e)	1,657,138	364,182	1,065,610	204,134
Dover, Ohio.	Reporter	(e)	1,555,400	257,586	1,206,842	73,150
Emporia, Kan.	Gazette	(e)	2,203,142	335,530	1,867,612	.....
Escanaba, Mich.	Press	(e)	1,727,544	.....	.....	.....
Fort Myers, Fla.	Press	(e)	1,398,348	.....	.....	.....
Fort Myers, Fla.	Tropical News	(m)	1,570,737	254,499	1,073,352	202,041
	Sunday	(s)	711,410	119,707	537,523	50,981
	Total	(ms)	2,282,147	374,206	1,610,875	253,022
Fremont, Ohio.	Messenger	(e)	279,355	88,772	109,116	.....
Freeport, N. Y.	Review	(e)	2,110,078	323,078	1,049,454	737,546
Fullerton, Cal.	News-Tribune	(e)	1,646,404	381,052	891,212	354,414
Goshen, Ind.	News-Times	(e)	1,905,921	412,342	1,310,326	167,153
Grand Island.	Independent	(e)	2,100,714	458,024	1,642,690	.....
Guthrie, Okla.	Press	(e)	704,802	102,464	506,674	88,784
	Sunday ed.	(s)	182,444	20,830	139,412	22,196
	Total	(es)	887,246	123,300	646,086	110,980
Helena, Mont.	Independent	(m)	622,088	92,204	425,672	45,836
	Sunday ed.	(s)	291,018	62,986	211,820	13,384
	Total	(ms)	913,106	155,190	637,492	59,220
Helena, Mont.	Record-Herald	(e)	707,210	32,914	569,548	48,664
Hoquiam, Wash.	Washingtonian	(ms)	1,365,966	289,226	934,682	118,916
Hudson, N. Y.	Star	(m)	1,168,552	211,218	800,716	114,324
Huntington, Ind.	Herald	(e)	1,390,346	280,168	987,028	98,294
Huron, S. D.	Huronite	(e)	1,457,114	321,585	962,720	88,746
Independence, Mo.	Independence Examiner	(e)	1,427,076	252,742	1,015,182	159,152
Iowa City	Daily Iowan	(ms)	969,890	197,006	670,222	102,662
Jeffersonville	News	(e)	570,010	162,918	288,946	34,776
Keene, N. H.	Sentinel	(e)	2,201,444	400,778	1,702,708	97,958
Kinston, N. C.	Free Press	(e)	1,235,612	221,984	979,174	34,454
Lawrence, Kan.	Journal-World	(e)	1,914,766	399,266	1,515,500	.....
Little Falls, N. Y.	Times	(e)	1,396,172	212,781	1,055,150	45,865
Longview, Wash.	News	(e)	1,333,272	243,600	900,792	174,096
McAlester, Okla.	News-Capital	(e)	1,386,569	264,306	1,007,132	81,711
Marquette, Mich.	Mining Journal	(m)	2,078,762	372,470	1,583,246	123,046
Marinette, Wis.	Eagle-Star	(e)	1,200,266	298,158	833,784	29,334
Mattoon, Ill.	Journal & Commercial-Star	(e)	1,306,088	351,848	761,850	122,390
Moberly, Mo.	Monitor-Index & Democrat	(e)	1,125,670	354,116	638,204	100,786
Morristown, N. J.	Jerseyman	(e)	2,077,719	208,796	1,761,130	89,369

(Continued on page 56)

The Columbus Dispatch

OHIO is RICH!

Rich to the Extent of $18,489,552,000

Divide this approximately eighteen and a half billion dollars by Ohio's six million population and it shows a per capita wealth of $3081.69.

Are You Getting Your Share of Business From This Resourceful and Fertile Territory?

Geographically—Economically, THE COLUMBUS DISPATCH, "OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY," is situated to give most for your advertising dollar in a trading area embracing 29 counties that make up the great central Ohio market. THE DISPATCH DOMINATES IN READER INTEREST, IN CIRCULATION AND IN ADVERTISING.

During the first eight months of 1926 THE DISPATCH carried a total of 14,882,648 lines of paid advertising—a gain of 1,331,089 lines of the corresponding period of 1925. In this same period THE DISPATCH exceeded all other Columbus newspapers combined by 1,944,151 lines.

NET PAID CIRCULATION

City	55,812
Suburban	26,973
Country	23,666
TOTAL	106,451

The Largest Circulation in Central Ohio

Columbus Dispatch

OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

O'Mara and Ormsbee, Inc., Dispatch Representatives

New York, Chicago, Detroit, San Francisco.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER SEMI-ANNUAL LINAGE TABLE

(Continued from page 55)

City	Paper	Published	Total Linage	National	Local	Classified
Morristown, N. J.	Record	(e)	2,096,458	396,046	1,530,788	141,456
Murphysboro, Ill.	Independent	(e)	1,083,964	231,420	753,144	51,268
New Bern, N. C.	New Bernian	(ms)	701,979	282,887	519,092	.....
	Sun-Journal	(e)	1,429,938	925,854	504,084	.....
Norfolk, Nebr.	News	(e)	1,338,370	785,960	382,956	157,850
Olympia, Wash.	Olympian	(m)	808,682	188,314	516,740	53,648
Olympia, Wash.	Recorder	(e)	1,168,608	313,978	756,868	94,654
Ottawa, Kan.	Herald	(e)	1,691,536	304,570	1,386,966	.....
Owosso, Mich.	Argus-Press	(e)	2,304,806	417,312	1,782,842	104,552
Palo Alto, Cal.	Times	(e)	2,346,947	264,481	1,687,105	44,961
Peru, Ind.	Tribune	(e)	1,621,936	240,800	1,261,200	119,936
Ponca City, Okla.	News	(es)	1,699,596	233,950	1,274,420	191,226
Port Chester, N. Y.	Item	(e)	2,547,006	353,208	1,817,854	339,756
Port Jervis, N. Y.	Union-Gazette	(e)	1,067,080	182,578	*884,502	.....
Portsmouth, N. H.	Herald	(e)	308,520	84,000	189,800	29,120
Reno, Nev.	Gazette	(e)	1,885,506	567,378	1,149,876	168,252
Reno, Nev.	Nevada State Journal	(ms)	1,501,752	330,876	898,016	185,402
Rome, Ga.	News-Tribune	(es)	1,424,598	353,080	916,244	116,760
Royal Oak, Mich.	Tribune	(e)	1,102,474	87,179	805,693	100,786
Santa Cruz, Cal.	News	(e)	443,350	69,616	179,293	114,592
Santa Cruz, Cal.	Sentinel	(m)	1,439,746	141,456	1,182,622	115,668
Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.	News	(e)	1,660,691	331,954	869,785	458,952
Sheridan, Wyo.	Post-Enquirer	(e)	623,280	222,418	400,862	*28,968
	Sunday ed.	(s)	437,318	60,984	376,334	.....
	Total	(es)	1,060,598	283,402	777,196	*28,968
	*(28,968 count lines classified and 639,609 count lines—legal not included in total)
Staunton, Va.	News-Leader	(ms)	1,365,916	334,200	935,200	96,516
Sterling, Ill.	Gazette	(e)	2,015,083	275,079	1,632,265	84,777
Stevens Point, Wis.	Journal	(e)	1,321,670	304,170	980,545	21,844
Tamaqua, Pa.	Courier	(e)	165,094	21,102	88,192	55,800
Tarrytown, N. Y.	News	(e)	2,144,472	287,154	1,760,988	67,830
Tiffin, Ohio	Advertiser	(e)	1,001,322	298,998	702,324	.....
Tiffin, Ohio	Tribune	(e)	869,526	189,280	680,246	.....
Traverse City, Mich.	Record-Eagle	(e)	1,206,617	304,954	901,672	.....
Tuscaloosa, Ala.	News & Times-Gazette	(e)	1,494,430	314,454	1,179,976	.....
Urbana, Ill.	Courier	(e)	1,248,780	108,836	1,015,022	85,988
Vancouver, Wash.	Columbian	(e)	1,135,953	285,157	720,118	122,270
Warren, Pa.	Times-Mirror	(me)	3,941,784	.....	.....	.....
Waukesha, Wis.	Freeman	(e)	927,384	232,344	523,880	171,360
Webster, Mass.	Times	(e)	945,992	189,028	708,358	42,686
Westchester, Pa.	Local News	(e)	1,873,946	446,030	936,303	491,613
Ypsilanti, Mich.	Ypsilantian Press	(e)	1,493,526	264,998	1,097,488	131,040

NEWSPAPERS IN CITIES OF 5,000 TO 9,989 POPULATION

City	Paper	Published	Total Linage	National	Local	Classified
Abilene, Kans.	Reflector	(e)	686,915	37,100	582,120	43,680
Albany, Ore.	Democrat-Herald	(e)	1,047,000	303,324	643,454	37,618
Albion, Mich.	Recorder	(e)	1,259,468	224,210	965,888	35,504
Alexandria, Ind.	Times-Tribune	(e)	831,600	202,300	503,300	126,000
Annapolis, Md.	Capital	(e)	688,800	182,000	378,000	44,800
Antigo, Wis.	Journal	(e)	1,158,556	232,820	804,664	46,158
Athens, Ohio.	Messenger	(es)	1,799,585	321,768	1,150,385	291,032
Atlantic, Iowa.	News-Telegraph	(e)	612,892	178,380	382,844	15,200
Baker, Ore.	Herald	(e)	922,362	242,312	598,626	41,608
Bend, Ore.	Bulletin	(e)	1,220,954	248,430	859,922	70,224
Bend, Ore.	Central Oregon Press	(m)	688,789	118,804	515,368	36,472
Belvidere, Ill.	Republican	(e)	1,306,598	189,356	1,009,680	54,054
Bemidji, Minn.	Pioneer	(e)	1,013,223	195,261	741,522	76,440
Big Rapids, Mich.	Pioneer	(e)	683,146	181,720	441,980	6,200
Bismarck, N. D.	Tribune	(e)	1,305,228	357,602	753,158	86,954
Bradenton, Fla.	Herald	(e)	3,169,306	773,486	2,298,590	97,230
Brattleboro Vt.	Reformer	(e)	1,691,070	405,398	1,285,676	.....
Brawley, Cal.	News	(e)	1,870,752	.....	.....	.....
Brownsville, Pa.	Telegraph	(e)	1,909,768	213,682	1,570,325	88,354
Brenham, Tex.	Banner-Press	(e)	621,712	.....	616,611	.....
Bozeman, Mont.	Chronicle	(m)	840,294	170,562	609,238	60,494
	Sunday ed.	(s)	286,964	53,038	218,862	15,064
	Total	(ms)	1,127,258	223,600	828,100	76,013
Centralia, Wash.	Chronicle	(e)	1,616,405	457,006	1,159,399	.....
Centerville, Ia.	Iowegian & Citizen	(e)	1,219,564	328,468	770,262	75,530
Chico, Cal.	Record	(m)	1,095,516	236,300	623,112	136,560
Chillicothe, Mo.	Constitution	(e)	1,033,236	308,463	667,592	50,800
Claremont, N. H.	Eagle	(e)	1,116,721	165,805	815,032	135,884
Clarksville, Tenn.	Leaf-Chronicle	(e)	975,694	117,547	797,520	60,627
Clarksdale, Miss.	Register	(e)	1,267,170	268,856	936,560	32,550
Clearfield, Pa.	Progress	(e)	1,438,304	1,310,540*		*127,764
Clifton Forge, Va.	Review	(e)	659,360	150,010	479,738	29,612
Coeur d'Alene, Idaho	Press	(e)	999,655	170,527	750,757	42,314
Columbia City, Ind.	Commercial-Mail	(e)	357,400	210,000	140,000	7,000
Columbus, Nebr.	Telegram	(e)	822,520	203,070	535,710	43,120
Concord, N. C.	Tribune	(e)	1,375,472	.....	.....	.....
Conneaut, Ohio.	News-Herald	(e)	1,263,402	169,834	902,874	176,652
Cordele, Ga.	Dispatch	(e)	1,199,240	211,400	940,800	33,600
	Sunday ed.	(s)	197,400	44,800	144,200	8,400
	Total	(es)	1,396,640	256,200	1,085,000	42,000
Corvallis, Ore.	Gazette-Times	(e)	1,092,686	247,030	704,354	*141,302
Crookston, Minn.	Times	(e)	777,896	215,824	458,360	21,700
Danville, Ky.	Messenger	(e)	485,720	228,400	231,280	21,840
Dansville, N. Y.	Breeze	(e)	676,191	635,446*		29,669
Deland, Fla.	News	(e)	2,492,520	606,750	1,802,047	18,203
Denton, Tex.	Record-Chronicle	(e)	1,870,316	211,120	1,520,624	138,572
Devils Lake, N. Dak.	Journal	(e)	790,233	199,752	560,000	17,401

(Continued on page 57)

BETTER THAN GLASSES
for your readers

Isn't it about time to give your subscribers a dress of type they can read easily and comfortably and save their eyesight?

The new Linotype 6½ Point Ionic No. 5 is a face especially designed to meet modern newspaper printing conditions. Its strong lines and sturdy serifs always reproduce clearly; its round, open counters will not clog up with ink. It gives the word count of 6 point with the legibility of 8 point.

Mergenthaler Linotype Company

Brooklyn, New York

San Francisco Chicago New Orleans

Canadian Linotype Limited, Toronto

Representatives in the Principal Cities of the World

Linotyped in the Cloister Family

EDITOR & PUBLISHER SEMI-ANNUAL LINAGE TABLE

(Continued from page 56)

ity	Paper	Published	Total Linage	National	Local	Classified
Dlge City, an.	Globe	(e)	1,111,393	224,955	639,968	224,210
abeth City, C.	Advance	(e)	875,742	200,494	622,188	*53,060
field, Ia.	Ledger	(e)	775,000	200,000	500,000	50,000
emont, Nebr.	Tribune	(e)	1,484,544	237,321	1,088,071	125,034
on, Mo.	Gazette	(e)	527,814	77,770	450,044	.....
esville, Fla.	Sun	(m)	2,682,960	1,071,000	1,161,440	218,960
	Sunday ed.	(s)	647,410	322,336	256,480	47,600
	Total	(ms)	3,330,370	1,393,336	1,417,920	266,560
ipolis, Ohio.	Tribune	(e)	3,147,760	206,976	2,845,920	51,774
fton, W. Va.	Sentinel	(e)	1,003,543	264,840	663,516	44,772
ensbury, Ind.	News	(e)	1,816,405	163,300	1,512,000	110,000
enville, ich.	Independent News	(e)	784,056	586,572	163,520	25,214
risburg, Ill.	Register	(e)	964,600	228,540	724,854	5,954
risonburg, a.	News-Record	(m)	1,441,006	339,304	1,024,758	76,944
tford, Ind.	News	(e)	909,446	149,618	709,044	31,724
re, Mont.	News-Promoter	(e)	783,441	187,765	508,228	23,650
sdale, Mich.	News	(e)	1,335,628	288,820	751,744	211,932
, Kan.	Register	(e)	1,156,953	267,813	754,936	134,204
a, Mich.	Sentinel-Standard	(e)	1,050,406	240,184	752,836	40,040
Mt., Mich.	News	(e)	2,185,106	351,750	1,736,434	74,592
dallville, d.	News-Sun	(e)	874,582	205,884	580,552	88,146
ville, Mo.	Express & News	(es)	803,334	198,800	462,126	129,360
anning, Pa.	Simpson's Leader-Times	(e)	1,410,122	.....	.....	.....
nath Falls, re.	Herald	(e)	1,283,072	271,488	565,624	297,084
nath Falls, re.	News	(m)	1,188,050	213,221	898,965	75,864
Grande, Ore.	Observer	(e)	1,541,679	318,544	1,183,868	20,878
renceville,	Record	(e)	976,582	226,518	656,544	65,520
anon, Ind.	Reporter	(e)	2,626,483	468,456	2,049,848	96,256
istown, ont.	Democrat-News	(ms)	3,001,762	1,030,048	1,596,978	374,736
istown, Pa.	Sentinel	(e)	2,557,480	389,256	2,020,984	125,388
hfield, Ill.	News-Herald	(e)	531,073	164,258	324,927	35,738
ington, Mich.	News	(e)	758,604	202,720	407,134	81,396
	Sunday ed.	(s)	262,360	60,634	181,188	20,538
	Total	(es)	1,020,964	263,354	588,322	101,934
Vernon, Ind.	Democrat	(e)	665,200	220,000	379,200	*66,000
Vernon, Ill.	Register-News	(e)	1,791,734	370,538	1,289,162	122,584
lison, Ind.	Courier	(e)	856,018	281,232	555,632	19,154
lisonville, y.	Messenger	(e)	575,948	181,272	317,144	57,876
istee, Mich.	News-Advocate	(e)	1,369,340	248,262	1,078,238	24,654
ion, Ill.	Post	(e)	847,564	207,137	621,411	17,472
ion, Ill.	Republican	(e)	1,036,168	280,042	664,146	31,010
ysville, Cal.	Democrat	(e)	1,243,242	308,588	934,654	.....
ico, Mo.	Ledger	(e)	1,187,346	193,508	481,838	421,000
mi, Okla.	News-Record	(es)	1,301,762	455,616	715,974	130,172
dlesboro, y.	News	(e)	502,036	147,559	328,222	18,821
hell, S. D.	Republican	(e)	1,804,404	413,812	905,044	443,772
mouth, Ill.	Review-Atlas	(e)	1,027,714	230,790	670,235	95,451
ongahela, a.	Republican	(e)	914,582	216,384	625,842	53,274
roe, Wis.	Times	(e)	956,676	198,562	730,247	27,867
terey, Cal.	Peninsula Herald	(e)	1,404,672	287,952	655,200	305,760
nt Vernon, ash.	Herald	(e)	1,166,200	219,800	798,000	84,000
ton, Ia.	News	(e)	1,642,352	188,776	1,340,232	63,392
ton, Kan.	Kansan-Republican	(e)	1,350,343	184,128	1,084,356	46,445
wich, N. Y.	Sun	(e)	814,613	239,376	530,992	18,441
la, Fla.	Star	(e)	954,002	267,470	513,604	91,588
gon City, re.	Enterprise	(m)	959,994	156,968	628,908	174,118
gould, Ark.	Press	(e)	558,880	117,520	319,760	39,200
y, Ia.	Chief	(e)	667,478	114,170	498,232	55,076
skey, Mich.	News	(e)	1,007,188	300,196	600,392	60,800
tiac, Ill.	Leader	(e)	1,059,408	.....	.....	.....
t Angeles, ash.	News	(e)	1,359,764	214,326	983,402	29,474
tland, Ind.	Commercial-Review	(e)	903,652	251,522	589,256	43,120
terville, Cal.	Recorder	(e)	1,183,512	243,264	807,800	63,224
tt, Kan.	Tribune	(e)	563,764	104,216	419,384	28,040
scott, Ariz.	Courier	(e)	1,045,244	185,304	545,118	57,284
nceton, Ind.	Democrat	(e)	2,420,227	662,260	1,537,027	221,540
id City, D.	Journal	(e)	926,776	284,358	499,094	88,074
ding, Cal.	Searchlight	(ms)	1,181,840	.....	.....	.....

(Continued on page 58)

The Syracuse Newspaper Situation

Syracuse, with a population of over 185,000, and with a population in its trading territory of 450,000, is known and recognized by national advertisers as one of the most responsive and most productive markets in the country.

The people of Syracuse and its tributary territory are served by one morning and two evening newspapers.

Where once Syracuse presented something of a problem to the advertising agency space buyer, by reason of the slight difference between each newspaper in circulation, it is now indeed simple to analyze in view of the changes in the Syracuse newspaper situation which have occurred during the past year.

The SYRACUSE EVENING JOURNAL has achieved a lead in total net paid circulation over each of the other Syracuse newspapers by such a wide margin that its superiority as a newspaper and as an advertising medium as well is entirely obvious.

The most recent circulation statement gives the SYRACUSE EVENING JOURNAL an average net paid daily circulation of 65,303, the second paper 55,034 and the third paper 47,884.

The JOURNAL leads the second paper (morning) by 10,292 daily.
The JOURNAL leads the third paper (evening) by 17,442 daily.

In strictly city circulation, the JOURNAL leads the second paper (morning) by over 12,000 daily.

In strictly city circulation, the JOURNAL leads the third paper (evening) by over 6,000 daily.

The lead of the SYRACUSE EVENING JOURNAL in net paid daily circulation is due to but one fact, it is the best daily newspaper published in Syracuse, and its greater circulation expresses the positive preference for it by its readers over the other Syracuse newspapers.

Therefore, the greatest possible service the national advertiser can secure, the g r e a t e s t sales power he can employ in Syracuse is the SYRACUSE EVENING JOURNAL.

It requires neither study, analysis nor discrimination to select the best advertising medium in Syracuse—it is the EVENING JOURNAL by a large margin—and with exceptional reader confidence to back up its largest circulation.

The SYRACUSE SUNDAY AMERICAN, with 78,000 Sunday, enjoys the largest circulation of any Syracuse Sunday newspaper

THE JOHN BUDD COMPANY

National Advertising Representatives

New York Chicago St. Louis Atlanta
San Francisco Los Angeles

EDITOR & PUBLISHER SEMI-ANNUAL LINAGE TABLE

(Continued from page 57)

City	Paper	Published	Total Linage	National	Local	Classified
Red Wing, Minn.	Republican	(me)	866,740	239,624	503,076	91,728
Rhinelander, Wis.	News	(e)	892,281	223,802	642,089	26,390
Rock Hill, S. C.	Herald	(e)	1,161,482	200,242	914,648	37,856
Roswell, N. M.	Record	(e)	1,402,590	224,420	1,037,918	84,154
Rushville, Ind.	Republican	(e)	1,274,868	178,024	1,091,664	5,180
St. Johnsburg, Vt.	Caledonian-Record	(e)	1,551,086	418,081	1,080,114	48,209
St. Joseph, Mich.	Herald-Press	(e)	1,761,816	301,289	1,315,969	112,294
Santa Rosa, Cal.	Press-Democrat	(ms)	2,469,068	480,284	1,489,726	369,138
Seymour, Ind.	Tribune	(e)	940,562	202,146	691,810	46,606
Shelbyville, Ind.	Democrat	(e)	2,409,350	295,169	2,050,961	63,220
Shenandoah, Ia.	Sentinel	(e)	935,380	194,138	598,010	43,232
South St. Paul, Minn.	Reporter	(e)	471,296	75,600	329,924	24,780
Sturgis, Mich.	Journal	(e)	1,116,414	214,690	873,834	21,702
Taft, Cal.	Midway Driller	(e)	1,060,048	370,720	580,048	98,360
Texarkana, Ark.-Tex.	Gazette	(m)	1,453,478	376,712	957,444	93,478
(Figures quoted for period of March 6, 1926-June 30, 1926)
The Dalles, Ore.	Chronicle	(e)	1,180,746	271,096	731,388	145,474
Three Rivers, Mich.	Commercial	(e)	996,324	200,802	706,538	54,866
Trenton, Mo.	Republican-Tribune	(e)	845,326	146,538	474,782	195,724
Trenton, Mo.	Times	(m)	846,174	206,640	593,978	20,888
Visalia, Cal.	Delta	(m)	1,177,344	214,984	831,614	71,302
Warsaw, Ind.	Times	(e)	727,520	280,300	320,630	80,870
Warsaw, Ind.	Union	(e)	520,800	125,020	330,680	43,400
Washington C. H., Ohio	Herald	(me)	1,091,608	282,436	749,770	59,402
Waterville, Me.	Sentinel	(m)	1,384,292	455,336	801,038	127,918
Watsonville, Cal.	Register	(m)	1,802,038	283,346	1,115,198	295,148
Waynesboro, Pa.	Record-Herald	(e)	1,116,755	199,080	778,930	95,214
Webster City, Ia.	Freeman-Journal	(e)	1,106,266	192,822	913,444	.....
Whittier, Cal.	News	(e)	2,238,069	250,072	1,735,626	193,970
Winchester, Va.	Star	(e)	299,286	1,244,446	10,948	.....
Wisconsin Rapids, Wis.	Tribune	(e)	1,436,325	1,000,000	364,000	31,000
Wooster, Ohio	Record	(e)	1,656,158	310,702	1,329,188	16,268
Yoakum, Tex.	Herald	(e)	2,690,100	274,100	1,750,000	51,300

NEWSPAPERS IN CITIES OF LESS THAN 5,000 POPULATION

Ballston Spa, N. Y.	Journal	(e)	398,160	78,540	315,490	4,130
Beaver, Pa.	Times	(e)	1,864,044	167,972	1,477,420	142,576
Burlington, Kan.	Republican	(e)	894,184	116,373	652,507	46,813
Clay Center, Kan.	Dispatch-Republican	(m)	377,664	65,142	208,540	86,716
Concordia, Kan.	Blade-Empire	(e)	693,063	.....	.....	.....
Edenton, N. C.	News	(e)	601,426	243,054	292,545	20,254
Fairmont, Minn.	Independent	(e)	256,704	14,112	273,040	64,512
Geneva, Ohio	Free Press	(e)	780,232	61,978	691,208	27,046
Gettysburg, Pa.	Times	(e)	1,408,692	227,738	1,104,598	76,356
Haines City, Fla.	Herald	(e)	622,538	.....	.....	.....
Hanford, Cal.	Sentinel	(ms)	1,034,380	105,592*	607,516*	71,792
Healdsburg, Cal.	Tribune	(e)	411,376	.....	.....	.....
Marshall, Mich.	Chronicle	(e)	1,302,784	332,094	834,080	90,945
Marshfield, Ore.	Coos Bay Times	(e)	1,521,144	261,380	1,121,554	80,948
Marshfield, Ore.	Southwestern Oregon News	(e)	1,300,096	198,870	947,170	123,242
Morris, Ill.	Herald	(e)	1,244,724	349,440	529,352	87,360
Oroville, Cal.	Register	(es)	871,381	244,472	538,944	55,522
Placerville, Cal.	Republican	(e)	592,430	144,900	344,050	69,300
Perry, Okla.	Journal	(e)	346,549	.....	.....	.....
Redwood City, Cal.	Tribune	(e)	824,814	40,233	383,782	350,427
Salinas, Cal.	Index	(e)	901,347	199,335	594,132	65,520
Santa Maria, Cal.	Times	(e)	927,236	47,196	836,962	43,078
Stuart, Fla.	News	(e)	1,543,648	76,791	1,368,626	37,880
Welch, W. Va.	News	(e)	996,550	287,301	628,824	34,372
Wilmington, Cal.	Journal	(e)	449,658	130,872	277,200	37,750
Vero Beach, Fla.	Press	(e)	2,335,669	147,513	1,107,959	35,254
Vinton, Ia.	Times	(e)	940,800	490,000	240,800	126,000

NEWSPAPERS OF THE DOMINION OF CANADA

City	Paper	Published	Total Linage	National	Local	Classifi
Brandon, Man.	Sun	(e)	2,052,418	810,450	1,132,768	109,2
Calgary, Alta.	Herald	(e)	4,543,835	1,348,429	2,267,832	900,9
(26,651 lines legal included in total.)
Charlottetown, P. E. I.	Guardian	(m)	2,823,542	1,085,064	1,667,582	62,4
(Total includes 8,400 lines-legal; 1,848 lines-radio not in total
Chatham, Ont.	News	(e)	2,203,488	785,946	1,291,808	86,7
(Total includes 38,962 lines-legal.)
Edmonton, Alta.	Bulletin	(e)	2,326,520	313,236	1,614,732	371,0
(Total includes 27,524 lines-legal.)
Edmonton, Alta.	Journal	(e)	4,679,311	1,313,656	2,667,755	697,9
Ft. William, Ont.	Times-Journal	(e)	2,216,396	658,994	1,395,632	161,7
Glace Bay, N. S.	Gazette	(e)	2,658,815	1,126,814	1,052,012	321,0
(Total includes 63,214 lines-legal)
Hamilton, Ont.	Spectator	(e)	4,937,605	1,644,915	2,695,540	597,1
Kingston, Ont.	British Whig	(e)	2,037,262	571,329	1,316,847	149,0
Kingston, Ont.	Standard	(e)	2,331,053	601,454	1,417,131	207,0
(100,735 lines automobile advertising included in total)
Kitchener, Ont.	Record	(e)	2,423,470	626,934	1,569,176	227,3
Lethbridge, Alta.	Herald	(e)	1,903,473	565,242	1,183,216	130,7
(Total includes 24,248 lines-legal.)
London, Ont.	Advertiser	(me)	1,929,730	712,660	986,170	230,9
London, Ont.	Free Press	(me)	3,880,773	1,816,275	1,542,450	522,0
Montreal, P. Q.	Gazette	(m)	3,785,250	1,486,537	2,145,466	153,2
Montreal, Que.	La Patrie	(e)	2,680,876	940,378	1,278,780	411,7
(Total includes 50,000 lines-legal)
Montreal, Que.	Star	(e)	6,546,860	1,906,168	3,383,021	1,257,6
(68,635 lines-radio not in total.)
Moose Jaw, Sask.	Times-Herald	(me)	1,746,956	702,254	674,730	159,1
(Total includes 210,792 lines-legal.)
Nelson, B. C.	News	(m)	1,137,192	447,860	575,190	107,4
(Total includes 6,678 lines-legal.)
Ottawa, Ont.	Citizen	(me)	3,382,768	974,605	1,902,095	506,0
Ottawa, Ont.	Journal Dailies	(me)	3,457,942	1,293,989	1,937,095	226,8
Owen Sound, Ont.	Sun-Times	(e)	1,558,940	588,770	914,788	48,4
(Total includes 6,922 lines-legal.)
Peterboro, Ont.	Examiner	(e)	1,903,930	632,618	1,148,210	123,1
Prince Albert, Sask.	Herald	(e)	1,001,717	436,345	482,924	82,4
Port Arthur, Ont.	News-Chronicle	(e)	1,555,964	533,526	835,391	175,37
Portage La Prairie, Man.	Graphic	(e)	961,156	159,362	801,794	.....
(Classified, legal and radio included in local linage.)
Quebec, Que.	Chronicle - Telegraph	(e)	1,574,823	702,128	740,681	132,01
Quebec, Que.	L'Evenement	(m)	1,939,504	532,149	1,168,915	247,4
Regina, Sask.	Leader-Post	(me)	3,108,550	1,216,402	1,349,366	542,7
St. Catherines, Ont.	Standard	(e)	2,560,475	846,086	1,543,785	170,6
St. Thomas, Ont.	Times-Journal	(e)	1,981,348	1,123,424	703,724	154,2
Saskatoon, Sask.	Star-Phoenix	(me)	2,923,337	1,190,838	1,179,785	552,71
Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.	Star	(e)	3,567,196	40,474	68,800	.....
(Classified-legal-radio included in national and local.)
Stratford, Ont.	Beacon-Herald	(e)	1,664,932	638,703	935,634	116,93
Sydney, N. S.	Post	(me)	1,256,299	454,105	802,194	.....
Toronto, Ont.	Mail & Empire City	(m)	3,008,128	1,159,470	1,437,119	354,39
Toronto, Ont.	Star	(e)	6,746,110	1,382,800	4,112,265	1,202,46
	Sunday ed	(s)	983,100	583,455	334,125	65,52
	Total	(es)	7,729,210	1,996,255	4,446,390	1,267,98
(Total includes 48,585 lines-legal)
Toronto, Ont.	Telegram	(e)	7,093,884	978,013	3,921,903	2,193,96
Truro, N. S.	News	(e)	953,316	186,032	700,826	66,45
Victoria, B. C.	Colonist	(e)	3,528,322	916,538	1,891,470	720,31
Victoria, B. C.	Times	(e)	2,593,962	634,914	1,664,068	294,98
Vancouver, B. C.	Province	(e)	5,540,350	1,439,331	2,720,242	1,346,77
	Sunday	(s)	1,327,768	220,830	839,802	258,95
	Total	(es)	6,868,118	1,660,161	3,560,044	1,605,72
(Total includes 42,190 lines-legal)
Vancouver, B. C.	Sun	(e)	3,837,554	896,504	2,233,924	670,74
	Sunday ed	(s)*	142,000	27,552	88,522	25,38
	Total	(es)	3,979,554	924,056	2,322,446	696,12
(Total includes 36,932 lines-legal; *Sunday edition discontinued Jan. 31, 1926.)
Winnipeg, Man.	Free Press	(me)	5,960,989	1,609,373	2,857,010	1,494,60
Winnipeg, Man.	Tribune	(e)	4,549,271	1,144,347	2,726,406	645,75
(Total includes 32,543 lines-legal)

ELLETT'S UNIVERSITY TO HONOR HIM

esident of Indiana School Suggests a lemorial Tablet Be Placed in Union Building—Praises Editor's Courage

ndiana University, Bloomington, where n Mellett, slain editor of the Canton (.) Daily News, went to school, plans have placed in a proposed $1,000,000 ion Building a memorial tablet in his nor. On it will be an inscription ivalent to that written by President field—"Slain for the Republic"—which President wrote as he lay in the ite House after he had been shot by iteau.

he suggestion to honor Don Mellett s, came from the president of the uni- sity, Dr. William Lowe Bryan, in an cle by him appearing last week in the iana Daily Student, the university spaper on which Don Mellett worked is college days as staff man and edin referring to the Garfield inscription, ain for the Republic," Dr. Bryan said: ith not less right might it be placed n the tomb of Don Mellett, assassin- l on his own ground in Canton, O., by who came up from the underworld to him. He was fighting that underworld ough the newspaper of which he was or. His detectives were hunting the y wolves in their lairs. He was bring- deadly evidence to the governor of o. He was becoming more and more gerous to the organized army of gamb- , thieves, bootleggers, gunmen and as- ated politicians of Canton. He was ned but he would not keep still or . No soldier charging machine guns ever in greater danger than he. None e brave. He went to his death a sol- fighting for the republic, fighting to e the republic and the world safe for anity."

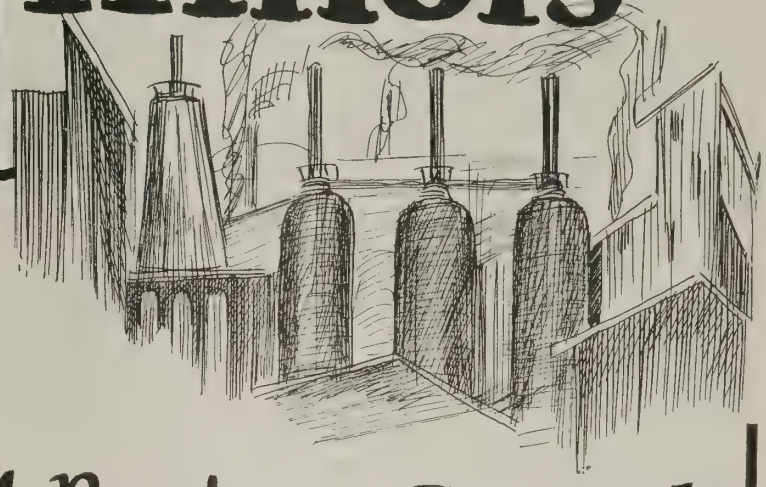
r. Bryan said he would like to see the newspaper men of the country take some recognition of Don Mellett, but that Indiana University in a simple way would pay homage to him. The Union Building where the memorial will be placed is to be erected soon, and will serve as a memorial to the men and women of Indiana University who served in the World war. The money is part of a fund subscribed by students, alumni and friends of the university in a memorial campaign within the last four years.

JOURNALISM AT SEA

Henry J. Allen, Wichita Beacon, Teaching Students on "University Afloat"

Journalism is being taught on the high seas, under the direction of ex-Gov. Henry J. Allen, publisher of the Wichita (Kan.) Beacon, who sailed Sept. 18, on a cruise around the world on the S. S. Ryndam, called the "University Afloat."

Mr. Allen is dean of the school of journalism on board and editor of the daily paper, the Binnacle, to be published by the students. Before sailing, he described the trip as "the most significant movement in modern education." The Ryndam, he said, was to be a "student ship and not a sightseeing tour." Willis J. Abbot, editor of the Christian Science Monitor, also spoke at a farewell dinner held before the steamer left port.



Dr. Charles F. Thwing, president emeritus of Western Reserve University, heads the faculty of 40. There are 500 students on board.

MATS FOR WALL DECORATION

The Tokio Asahi Shimbun, one of Japan's leading newspapers, is decorating the inside walls of its new building with matrices of leading newspapers in various countries. Many newspapers have received a request from the Japanese daily to send five matrices each for this purpose.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER classified ads connect the man with the job.

Illinois—

A Dominant Factor in the Iron and Steel Industry—

The steel industry of Illinois is growing so rapidly that as a steel center it is far surpassing any other district in the world. Of all the open hearth furnaces built during 1924, 62% were constructed in the Illinois district. Of the 402 by-product ovens under construction in 1924, 250 or 62.2% were built in the Illinois district. The drift of the steel industry has become decidedly westward. This great expansion in the steel industry has brought added wealth to the already prosperous State of Illinois whose great riches are obtained from its numerous industries kept humming day after day all the year 'round.

Illinois is a profitable State for you to advertise in. Let the daily papers carry the message of your products to its progressive citizens.

	Circulation	Rates for 2,500 Lines	Rates for 10,000 Lines
Aurora Beacon-News .....(E)	18,694	.06	.06
†Chicago Herald & Examiner....(M)	385,276	.55	.55
†Chicago Herald & Examiner.....(S)	1,153,360	1.10	1.10
†Chicago Daily Journal.....(E)	123,771	.26	.24
Evanston News Index.....(E)	6,729	.04	.04
Freeport Journal-Standard .....(E)	9,613	.045	.045
Joliet Herald News.....(E)	19,591	.06	.06
††Mattoon Journal Gazette.....(E)	5,712	.03	.03
Moline Dispatch .....(E)	11,556	.045	.045
Monmouth Daily Review Atlas..(E)	5,416	.035	.035
Peoria Star .....(S) 22,497..(E)	29,874	.085	.07
Rock Island Argus .....(E)	11,248	.045	.045
Waukegan Daily Sun.....(E)	5,213	.03	.03

A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1926
†Government Statement, March 31, 1926
††Government Statement, September 30, 1925

CHALMERS LOWELL PANCOAST

"Makes a Hole in One" with

TRAIL BLAZERS of ADVERTISING

(New Edition Now On Press)

The outstanding Advertising Book of the Season—About the Romance and Adventure of the olden times in the publicity world.

These Testimonials Prove It:—

"Heartiest congratulations on 'Trail Blazers of Advertising.' I predict a wide reading of this book, and desire to compliment you on the breeziness of your style." James W. Brown, Publisher of Editor & Publisher.

"The book is intensely interesting and informative. I have read it with a great deal of pleasure and not a little advantage to my understanding of advertising and merchandising." James True, Washington Correspondent, Printers' Ink Publications.

"Your articles on 'Trail Blazers of Advertising' have been so interesting I can't resist the temptation of writing you and telling you how much I enjoyed them." Fred A. Robbins, Chicago.

"It is well worth reading even from its fiction standpoint; and furnishes a splendid background in the building of the case of the history of Advertising." Frederic W. Hume, Public Relations, New York City.

Notice—Only a limited number of the "Autographed By the Author" and Numbered, First Edition, will be issued at $2.50 per copy (add 15c for postage). Send your order at once to—

CHALMERS L. PANCOAST, 614 West 157th Street. New York City.

THIS SPECIAL PRICE ONLY ON ORDERS IN ADVANCE OF PUBLICATION

ANDREWS, LOS ANGELES TIMES M. E., DIES

Brilliant Figure in Coast Journalism Succumbs After Long Illness—Began Newspaper Career in Maine

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 22.—Harry E. Andrews, 65, managing editor of the Los Angeles Times since 1905, died Monday morning at ten o'clock at his home. An aneurism near the heart was the immediate cause of his death. He had been ill for five years. His wife and daughter, Gertrude Andrews, were with him when the end came.

Widely known for his scholarly and resourceful mind, Mr. Andrews was one of the outstanding figures in Western journalism during the last decade.

Mr. Andrews was born at Pittsfield (now Randolph), Me., Dec. 22, 1861. He received his education in the public schools and early took an active interest in newspaper work. He acted as a correspondent for Maine papers at the age of 16, and a year later joined the Lewiston (Me.) Journal, where he remained for 20 years.

The late Congressman Nelson Dingley and his brother Frank, were publishing the Journal when the Pittsfield correspondent came to their staff. Soon they were taking a keen interest in him. Mr. Andrews was graduated from reporter to city editor, later becoming managing editor, at which time he assumed a part interest in the Journal.

In the issue of the Times announcing Mr. Andrews' death appears a story by Arthur G. Staples, editor of the Lewiston Journal, who was associated with Mr. Andrews for many years during the latter's regime as managing editor of that paper.

Says this story in part:

"Harry E. Andrews always filled my eyes as a hero and a pattern. He rose to great journalistic heights. He became successful, powerful, renowned, but alas, he has fallen, as so many a newspaper man falls, victim to the unceasing toil, the fret of days and nights, the nervous strain of that will-o'-the-wisp called 'news'—the nervous drag, the frazz and the friction of the great mill in which he toiled for more than 40 years."

Mr. Andrews was almost indefatigable, working at his desk twelve hours a day, always having the faculty of doing just a little more himself than he expected those under him to do. He always radiated health and vitality until about six years ago, when he had a breakdown, from which he only partially recovered. His health continued to fail him and he was forced to abandon all thought of active interest in the Times. However, he retained his title of managing editor of the Times and director of the Times-Mirror Company.

A newspaper's duty is always to uphold the interests of the public rather than private interests, was Mr. Andrews' personal opinion as well as one which he introduced into his newspapers. It was indicated by the stand repeatedly taken by the Times on public questions during Mr. Andrews' management.

Mr. Andrews' first connection with the Times was handling special advertising in Pasadena, later acquiring the Pasadena routes of the Times which he continued to hold for 15 years.

Mr. Andrews first met the late General Otis upon the latter's return from the Philippines. A friendship sprung up between the two, and on March 1, 1900, General Otis called Mr. Andrews in from Pasadena and made him city editor. He served at this desk for five years. In 1905 he was appointed managing editor and received the appointment in the form of a military commission.

Although he retired from active newspaper work in 1921, he kept in close touch with the affairs of the Times up till the time of his death.

Funeral services were held Wednesday. Active pallbearers were Harry Chandler, publisher of the Times; Frank X. Pfaffinger, treasurer of the Times-Mirror Company; Dr. L. M. Moore, Ralph W. Trueblood, executive editor of the Times; S. A. Bertrand, and S. W. Crabill. Many of the city's leading citizens served as honorary pallbearers.

HERBERT J. FOWLER

Herbert J. Fowler, 50, general manager of the Binghamton (N. Y.) Sun, died in a hospital in that city after a year's illness. Mr. Fowler was a former publisher of the Geneva (N. Y.) Times and had been publisher and editor of the Auburn (N. Y.) Advertiser-Journal. He also had been associated with newspapers in Ithaca, Rochester, Syracuse and Utica. He served as a member of a district draft board during the war. The widow and two children survive.

MARTIN J. CASEY DEAD; ABLE REPORTER

Beloved Writer Had Served 28 Years in Newspaper Work, Chiefly in Manhattan—Famous for "Kid" Stories

Martin J. Casey, 44, beloved New York newspaper man, died Sept. 22, at his death he was a member of the New York American's staff, but he belonged to the entire journalistic fraternity of Manhattan.

His reputation as a brilliant writer was made by his writing of "kid" stories on the old Sun. He became famous for his "Micky Splaney" stories in that paper in 1906, 1907 and 1908.

While still at school he began writing short articles for Brooklyn papers and in 1898 started as a cub reporter with the City News Association.

He left the City News in 1900 to join the old Daily News. He soon became city editor and remained with that paper until it was discontinued by Frank Munsey, who had bought it.

He was at heart a reporter. On many other occasions after leaving the News he held executive positions for short periods, and was offered and refused others.

Then followed a period of itinerant newspaper work. For about five years "Marty" travelled throughout the country, working on prominent papers in large cities.

Returning to New York he again joined the City News Association, where in a short time he was made night city editor.

In a short time he was called to the Sun. After about three years he resigned and made his first connection with the New York American. He stayed only a short time, then went to Boston.

In Boston he again attracted wide attention by his series of police court stories, "Before His Honor."

Returning to New York City he joined the staff of the World. His next staff position was with the Brooklyn Eagle. When on the Eagle he covered the Mexican border troubles in 1915.

Shortly after his return from the border he went to the Evening Journal. It was on this paper that he gave a most striking demonstration of his newspaper worth. He was "doing rewrite" at the time.

He had a five-year-old daughter named Virginia, but whom he always called "Micky." A department man called up to give the story of a little girl being killed by a heavy automobile truck, when playing in front of her home.

"Marty" was assigned to take and write the story. It was of his little "Micky." Silently he listened. Silently he wrote the story, took it to the city editor's desk, laid it down and collapsed. He had done his duty.

From the shock of this death he never fully recovered.

In the World War he temporarily left newspaper work to become a member of the Military Intelligence Bureau.

The war over, he became a member of the re-write staff of the Evening Telegram, leaving there to rejoin the American.

MISSOURI VETERAN DIES

Col. R. M. White of Mexico (Mo.) Ledger Was Widely Known Publisher

Col. R. M. White, 71, editor of the Mexico (Mo.) Ledger for the past half century, died at his home Sept. 20. He died the day before the 50th anniversary of his purchase of the weekly Ledger, Sept. 21, 1876.

Mr. White, better known as "Bob" White, was a past president of the Missouri Press Association, past secretary of the National Editorial Association, and former vice-president of the Western Federation of Editors.

Ten years after his purchase of the weekly Ledger, he established the Daily Ledger in 1886.

KNOXVILLE EDITOR DEAD

James H. Moore of Sentinel Began Newspaper Work As a Printer

James H. Moore, 69, for 12 years editor of the Knoxville (Tenn.) Sentinel, died Monday, Sept. 20. He was well known for his forceful, fearless editorials.

Mr. Moore was a native of Charlotte, N. C. He entered upon the printer's trade in early years, learning to set type by hand. It was while working as a printer that he became ambitious to be a newspaper writer. After his apprenticeship as a reporter, he took up editorial writing, serving on the Macon News, Augusta Chronicle, Charleston Evening Post, and Columbia Record. He reported the Democratic national convention in 1924 for the Sentinel.

PRESTON F. GASS

Preston F. Gass, 38 political editor of the Chicago Daily Journal, died Sept. 20, from blood poisoning which developed from a slight scratch. He was a graduate of the University of Chicago, and did his first newspaper work on the Chicago Evening Post.

Obituary

J. P. SAILOR, formerly editor of Chillicothe (Mo.) Daily Tribune, at his home following an illness of months. His widow and two daugh survive.

HENRY S. HUDSPETH, 57, veteran ne paperman who learned the printing tr on the old Bandera (Tex.) Enterpris the '80s, died recently in Jena, La.

FRANK R. VAN VALKENBERG, 61, charter member of the Port Hu (Mich.) Typographical Union, died week after an illness of two years.

WADE HIBBS, 22, linotype operator the Herrington (Kan.) Times died cently from acute appendicitis at Herri ton.

JOHN M. BECKWITH, former editor the Imperial (Cal.) Valley Press and Calexico (Cal.) Chronicle, died in Diego, Cal., Sept. 8.

ED E. LEAKE, 76, publisher of Woodland (Cal.) Democrat and for m years prominent in the political field, at Woodland, Sept. 16.

GERALD RUTLEDGE, 35, editor of Northwest Independent, a weekly ne paper of Park Ridge, Ill., was found d in his home with gas flowing from th jets on a gas range. Mr. Rutledge prominent in civic affairs of Park Ri and was the chief sponsor of that to pageant of progress this year. He is vived by a widow and one child.

MRS. HELEN SOHERER CARTER, wife John Archer Carter, of the Richm (Va.) News-Leader editorial staff, Saturday afternoon, Sept. 18 and buried Monday, Sept. 20. A brother Mrs. Carter is J. Hamilton Scherer, mer member of the Richmond (V News-Leader sports staff and now n state editor of the A. P. at Richm

A. MANVILLE WAPLES, head of the department, Massengale Advertis Agency, Atlanta, died Sunday, Sept. after a brief illness.

Market Facts

— VERSUS —

Linage Gains

What is the outstanding factor that influences the national advertiser to consider new markets for a campaign.

Is it gains in linage, or facts about the desirability of the market?

Will mere linage alone show him that your paper can pave the way to volume sales and intensive distribution?

Why not give him information that is really helpful in determining the value of your market, and demonstrate how your paper co-operates in solving his problems in distribution.

We prepare copy and layout campaigns pictorially portraying the value of your market to the advertiser.

Tie Up Your Market With Your Newspaper!

PUBLISHERS SPACE SELLING SERVICE

49 West 45th St. New York City.

Copy ~ Layout ~ Art ~ Typography ~

HOW HURRICANE NEWS WAS TOLD NATION

(Continued from page 7)

ff from the aviation landing field at the 'irginia State Fair Grounds, just out- de of Richmond, at dawn Monday morn- ıg. McLean carried with him 464,000 nits of tetanus antitoxin, sent by the ichmond chapter of the American Red 'ross, in co-operation with the Richmond ewspaper for the hundreds of injured ı the devastated area.

An Associated Press bulletin stated ıat the plane was held up at Camp John- on Monday afternoon by a broken pro- eller blade. Lieut. Bissell immediately ılled Atlanta for a new propeller and ıis was dispatched on a train leaving at ıidnight. McLean wired his paper om Jacksonville that he and Lieut. Bis- ell expected to repair the damage and e in Miami by 10 o'clock Tuesday morn- ıg. McLean was instructed by his paper) "file" dispatches having to do with ichmond people and relatives of Rich- ıond people with all possible speed.

Several Florida publishers were in the ast when first news of the disaster was ublished.

Joseph W. Young, founder of Holly- ood, and publisher of the Hollywood ews, who was spending his vacation in iew York with Mrs. Young and their wo sons at the Roosevelt Hotel, char- ered a special train for Hollywood and ft on Sept. 20.

Mr. Young stated that his job was rst to relieve the suffering families and ıen plan to rebuild that part of Holly- ood damaged by the storm. He was in irect communication with his son Jack oung just before he left and he learned ıat about 25 people were killed and many omes were roofless. The six hotels of Iollywood were only slightly damaged.

Mayor Ed C. Rompf of Miami, Frank . Schutts, publisher of the Miami Her- ld, G. M. Allison of Miami Beach, ac- mpanied Mr. Young on the special train.

Horace C. Stilwell, publisher of the t. Lauderdale News, who has been at ıe Waldorf-Astoria during the past eek, had a telegram from his brother homas Stilwell at Ft. Lauderdale stat- ıg many business buildings and homes ere wrecked at Ft. Lauderdale but no ves lost. The home of Thomas Stilwell s well as the $300,000 plant of the News ere both wrecked.

Mr. Stilwell left for Ft. Lauderdale im- ıediately. He said:

"Of course these newspaper stories may e exaggerated but I know the citizens f Ft. Lauderdale will repair the damage ıd rebuild the city. Our people have ıo much of the pioneer spirit to allow ven a hurricane to impede their prog- ess."

Mr. Stilwell's mission to New York as to plan a newspaper advertising cam- aign for Ft. Lauderdale and Hollywood ıd on last Thursday he gave a luncheon) 54 newspaper men.

"Of course it is too early to say hether or not our newspaper advertising lans will materialize," he stated, "but I o know the Ft. Lauderdale-Hollywood arbor will be built and as the purpose of ıe advertising is intended to let the eople of the North know of the ad- antages of this harbor, I believe the itizens of both Ft. Lauderdale and Holly- ood will wish to inaugurate this adver- sing campaign as soon as possible.

"Thank our newspaper friends for all ıey are doing to help our people in ıne of need."

N. W. Ayer & Son, advertising agency, 0 Fifth Avenue, gave out the following legram received from John F. Graydon, ıeir resident representative in the Miami strict:

"Coral Gables well organized for re- ef here and all surrounding area bring- g refugees to Biltmore, Tallman Hos- tal and other relief centres, because oral Gables is comparatively well off. ype of construction required in Coral ables limited damage mainly to things easily repaired. Coral Gables in much better shape than other places."

Governor James M. Cox, publisher of the Miami Daily News and the News League of Ohio dailies, at the request of the Associated Press, gave out the following statement:

"We have had some communication with our representatives at Miami, leading us to believe that first reports are exaggerated. Our publisher wires that the News tower, said to be the highest building anywhere in the tropics, is but slightly impaired. The new Flagler structure facing Royal Palm Park, and in a state of incompletion, was scarcely touched. These two circumstances would indicate that the modern steel construction has met the hurricane test.

"Direct reports are that the Boulevar Hotel on Miami Beach has been turned over for relief purposes. This lies in an open and exposed area and its survival justifies the hope that the property loss will be less than now estimated.

"Following the disastrous floods of 1913 every Ohio city affected broke all records for business that year. Miami and Florida will come through the effects of this disaster with a courage and resiliency characteristic of the stout-hearted people who have transformed it into one of the world's great empires."

Newspapers in various sections of the north and west immediately started relief funds. The Chicago Herald and Examiner dispatched a relief train, with Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, Chicago health commissioner, in charge.

The Chicago Herald and Examiner also started a relief fund through its radio station, WEBH, and raised $10,000 for the storm sufferers by this means on the first day.

The Chicago Daily News also put its radio station, WMAQ, to work for the destitute in Florida, and in the first evening raised $15,000 from its listeners who phoned in and told what numbers they wanted played on the "request program," and what they would contribute to hear them played. The entire radio staff of WMAQ was on hand for the program, which lasted from 8 o'clock in the evening until 3 the next morning.

The Chicago Evening American and the Chicago Daily Journal also raised large sums for the sufferers through appeals to their readers.

The American also established a special bureau, consisting of a corps of men possessed of the latest and most complete list of dead and injured, to help Chicagoans to learn the fate of friends and relatives in the stricken area.

In New York a number of newspaper men were on committees announced by Mayor Walker to organize relief measures. Victor Watson, managing editor of the New York American, was named a member of the Emergency Relief Committee. John J. Leary, New York World, and George D. Morris, New York Telegram, were members of a larger assisting relief committee.

The Chattanooga (Tenn.) News started off a local Florida storm relief fund with $500 and the morning paper, the Chattanooga Times followed with a like amount. The papers printed lists of Chattanoogans in Florida. Reporters met all trains coming to city from storm area to get interviews from passengers.

FOND DU LAC DAILIES TO MERGE OCT. 1

Reporter Purchases Commonwealth and Will Issue Combined Paper From Its Plant—$200,000 in Bonds Issued

The Fond du Lac (Wis.) Reporter this week announced that it had purchased the Fond du Lac Commonwealth and will merge that daily with the Reporter on Oct. 1, the combined paper to be known as the Commonwealth-Reporter. It will be the only daily newspaper in the city.

The purchase was the culmination of negotiations covering several months. It was financed by an issue of $200,000 6 per cent gold bonds maturing in 10 years.

The Reporter was established by the late Louis A. Lange in 1883, succeeding the Saturday Reporter, a weekly. The Reporter Company, organized in 1903, took over the publication and control of the daily. A. H. Lange, president and general manager, C. F. Coffman, vice-president and editor, and Emery Martin, secretary and treasurer, have been officers of the concern for more than 20 years.

The Commonwealth, founded in 1870 as a daily to succeed a weekly, was bought by the Commonwealth Printing Company, of which P. B. Haber was manager. This organization in 1889 was merged with the P. B. Haber Printing Co. with Mr. Haber as its president.

In addition to taking over the Commonwealth, the Reporter Printing Company acquires the building, commercial printing plant and other assets of the Haber company.

STARTING AGRICULTURAL PAGE

E. E. Schroeder has been named rural and agricultural editor of the Wisconsin Rapids (Wis.) Daily Tribune and will have charge of a new agricultural department being started by that paper.

Still Gaining!

The net paid average daily circulation for THE BALTIMORE NEWS for April was 124,636—the highest under its present management.

The net paid average for the American was 57,503.

You need these papers to cover Baltimore, they reach more than half the City.

Sold separately or in combination.

THE BALTIMORE NEWS

and

Baltimore American

ANNOUNCEMENT

To National Advertisers and Advertising Agencies

The National Advertising Departments of

New York Evening Journal
Baltimore Evening News
Baltimore American
Washington Evening Times
Washington Herald
Atlanta Evening Georgian
Atlanta Sunday American

are combined with offices in New York—Chicago—Detroit

New York Office:
W. G. HOBSON, Eastern Manager
2 Columbus Circle
Telephone: Circle 5400

Chicago Office:
F. E. CRAWFORD
Western Manager
913 Hearst Bldg.

Detroit Office:
FRANKLIN PAYNE
Representative
1351 Book Bldg.

All under direction of:
JAMES C. DAYTON, Publisher
NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

NOOZIE SAYS:

Courtesy The International Syndicate, Baltimore.

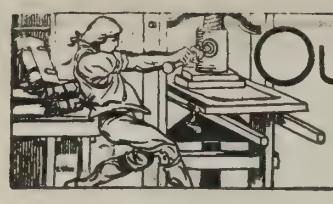
The International Syndicate of Baltimore, sponsors for "Noozie" and many other popular features, have been in business since 1899. They are justly proud of their record, epitomized in their slogan, "26 years without a contract."

They depend upon the quality of their features and the character of the service they render, to win and hold their clientele. Of course they are constantly on the lookout for improvements that will enable them to render even better service.

For 25 years International used wet mats only. With the advent of the Certified Dry Mats, it did not take them very long to realize that here was a medium that would enhance their services.

And so quite naturally Certifieds are going regularly to the four corners of the United States—yes, of the world—as carriers of International features.

The International has found that "Certified" on a dry mat stands for simplicity, facility, and economy. Other leading newspaper feature services have found it so, too, and several hundred newspaper publishers have found it equally true in their own plants.



Certifieds will appeal to you just as much and for the same reasons.

Those who compare almost invariably use Certifieds. That is why we repeat—COMPARE!

CERTIFIED DRY MAT CORPORATION
340 Madison Avenue
New York, N.Y.

For wet mat printing with DRY MAT facility — use Certifieds

Made in the U. S. A.

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

SUPERLATIVES are dangerous in any copy. In spite of that fact I am going to say that the best article about newspapers that I have read in some time may be found in the current issue of The Yale Review. It is from the facile pen of Don Marquis and is entitled "Men Who Make the Newspapers." It deals not with publishers and editors but with reporters —the contributors of the unsigned stuff.

Mr. Marquis has no doubt that the back bone of the newspaper business is and always must be the competent reporter. He is speaking of reporters when he says:

> The men who get the news, who write it, and edit it, who determine its relative importance, who point out the relationship of particular events and tendencies to human life as a whole, are the men who are the most valuable to a newspaper in the long run; it is they who really determine the character of a paper. And it is they—or the executives among them—who hire and fire the special writers who appear before the public with their names and labels upon them, and who in a general way influence and control the tone and trend of what these special writers utter. They are really responsible for the impression you get from any newspaper when you pick it up, for the kind of shock communicated to your nerves and sensibilities.

The really competent reporter, as Mr. Marquis sees him, is one who can both get the news and write it. The reporter is in class A—an ace if you will—if he has the faculty of knowing where to go for news without being sent—"the faculty of knowing where news is going to be before it has yet appeared."

Mr. Marquis has not side-stepped the matter of suppression of the news. He frankly confesses that every newspaper withholds facts frequently when it is not advisable to print everything known about a certain story. By way of illustration he gives this concrete case:

> Years ago when I was working in Washington, a fellow reporter consulted me with regard to a case involving some irregularities in a government department. He had been working on the story for a long time, and he had finally got all his facts, and he had been able to verify them, and he had them all straight. The manner in which the story finally became public was through a three-cornered row among several politicians, and back of this row there was a hidden motive—an element of personal animosity entered in. The question was whether to print the facts and expose the irregularities that had existed and bring about, if possible, the punishment or dismissal of the offending officials, or whether to go deeper into the thing and make public all the underlying and outlying and contributory factors of the personal animosity between the politicians who had made the facts accessible. The case was taken to the managing editor of the paper, who decided to publish merely that part of the story which affected the general welfare and the public interest. This was done, with the result that eventually two officials were removed from office and retired to private life.

Mr. Marquis stresses the matter of accuracy on the part of both reporters and their managing editors, "their only protection if there should be a comeback of any sort." Inaccuracies frequently creep into print because reporters and editors have been misled by some more or less interested party whom they have trusted. The following comment is made about these slips in the press:

> The reader would be surprised to know how many lies are handed to reporters and editors in the course of the day's work and how much trouble they take to arrive at the truth behind these false stories. I have observed that it is the very people who give out to reporters tales that do not square with the facts who are always saying, "You can't believe anything you see in the papers nowadays." If they had their way about it, you really couldn't believe anything you saw in the papers; but for the most part, both reporters and editors, it has been my observation and experience, are trying to do the best they can.

In replying to the attack made upon the American press by Upton Sinclair in his "Brass Check," Mr. Marquis speaks as follows, after he has admitted that there are crooked newspaper men just as there are crooked physicians, crooked preachers, crooked lawyers, and crooked merchants:

> There was a book published a few years ago by Mr. Upton Sinclair called "The Brass Check." I did not read it, but I read enough about it and heard enough about it to understand that it was a wholesale accusation against American journalism to the effect that all of us newspaper men are merely a bunch of prostitutes. I do not know what particular experience Mr. Sinclair has had in dealing with newspaper men, but I do know that it must have been far different from my own, and I have worked for newspapers for twenty-five years. I do not remember once ever having been asked by an editor or a proprietor to deliberately falsify the facts in any story of any consequence. I conducted a column for thirteen years on the New York Evening Sun and the New York Tribune, and during that time I was allowed to say just about what I pleased. That is, no editor or proprietor ever said to me, "I want you to write a criticism of so and so, or such and such and say thus and so, whether you believe it or not." It is possible that Mr. Sinclair might think I am being corrupt, for I never wrote anything advocating the assassination of a chief magistrate or the destruction in a holocaust of flame and frizzle of the great masses of organized society, or anything of that sort. Something told me that such a course would not be policy either with the chief magistrate, or with the masses of the people, or with my employers. But within the limits of sanity and the limits of decency, I was allowed to go as far as I liked.

A fine tribute is paid to James Richard Grey of the Atlanta Journal for his independence. Mr. Marquis at the time was working for that newspaper which had undertaken a political fight in the interests of the public. Certain special interests had been able to induce the largest department store in the city to threaten to withdraw its advertising if the Journal persisted in continuing the fight. Grey told the department store head where they could go with their advertising. In discussing this case Mr. Marquis adds:

> I have known other instances of a similar nature, but for the most part this "Brass Check" business is all bunk. There are knaves in every profession and in every business, of course, but there is as high a level of integrity in the newspaper business as in any other profession in the world.

To Mr. Marquis when he was still a young reporter a veteran newspaper man gave this information about the rewards of journalism:

> "The only satisfaction there is in this business is to be able to know where a story is going to break and go and get that story and get it right, to write it the way it should be written, to see it in the paper the way you wrote it and then to hear one of the other boys say, 'That is a pretty good job, Bill.'"

Mr. Marquis concludes his chat about the men who make newspapers with a discussion of the relation between journalism and literature. In response to the question, often asked by cub reporters, whether a few years in a newspaper office is a good preparation for writing the following answer is given:

> A reporter naturally stirs around a good deal and meets a great many different people and has many swift glimpses of various sorts of existence, and I think perhaps this is valuable to some men who intend to devote themselves seriously to creative work. On the other hand, there are men who have some native gift for writing fiction and plays who really are hampered by the habits which they acquire in journalistic work. I am obliged to be personal once more. One can only judge from his own experience, and cannot really estimate what the effects of circumstance might be upon another temperament or nature.

Of the soundness of the views expressed there can be no debate. Some day the reporter is going to come back into his own.

* * *

JOSEPH REMENYI, who conducts a Hungarian newspaper in Cleveland and is the author of several novels written in the Hungarian language, tells in McNaught's Monthly for October how the immigrant looks at literature.

This issue of McNaught's opens with an editorial appreciation of Stuart Sherman, late literary editor of the New York Herald Tribune. Of him this editorial tribute says:

> In these days of fast presses and quick turnovers there are few enough writers who will take the pains to learn all about their subject matter before getting into print. There are fewer still who will rewrite and repolish a literary production, be it small or great, until they can achieve no closer approximation of perfection. The more, then, the need for men like Dr. Sherman. He was one of the few modern scholars imbued with the old-time doctrine that nothing but a man's best is worthy of him.

* * *

THE Pulitzer School of Journalism is well represented in the Century Magazine for October. The issue opens with "Our Moral Anarchy" by Walter B. Pitkin, who according to an editorial note has been "professor of Journalism since the founding of the Pulitzer School." His article gives the results of a survey in which attempts were made to grade the ten commandments. Another professor of the Pulitzer School who is a contributor to this issue is Allen Sinclair Will, who sets forth an issue for the Democratic party. The only dangers to the nation, according to Professor Will, may be found in demagoguery and partisanship. At one time he was on the staff of the Baltimore Sun and still later was connected with the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

DOMINANT!
in
Pinellas County, Florida
Daily News
ST. PETERSBURG'S PICTURE PAPER
Owned by Frank Fortune Pulver
Edited by Major Alfred Birdsall
America's Biggest Tabloid
Florida's Fastest
Growing Newspaper
To be assured of Complete Coverage—
USE THE NEWS
Represented by
GEORGE B. DAVID COMPANY
NEW YORK: 110 East 42nd Street
CHICAGO: 1900 Wrigley Building

GROWING IN IMPORTANCE
The Inter-Mountain territory of Utah, Idaho, Western Wyoming and Eastern Nevada is rapidly developing and becoming more important to the advertiser whose merchandise has national distribution.
Don't overlook this rich section of the West.
The Salt Lake Tribune
THE S. C. BECKWITH SPECIAL AGENCY
—Sole Eastern Agents—
New York—Chicago—Detroit
St. Louis—Kansas City
Atlanta
M. C. MOGENSEN & CO., INC.
Pacific Coast Representatives
San Francisco—Los Angeles—Seattle

Use the COMBINATION RATE
OF
The Gazette Times
(Morning and Sunday)
AND
Chronicle Telegraph
(Evening)
in order to cover Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania thoroughly at the lowest cost.
Member A. B. C.
URBAN E. DICE, Nat. Adv. Mgr.
GAZETTE SQ., PITTSBURGH, PA.
National Representatives:
E. M. BURKE, Inc.
42nd and Broadway, N. Y.
122 S. Michigan Blvd., Chicago.
Constitution Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.
R. J. BIDWELL CO.
742 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.
Times Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

SERVICE
THE CHARLES PARTLOWE COMPANY
America's Largest Circulation Building Organization
-RESULTS COUNT-
6th Floor Occidental Blg.
INDIANAPOLIS-IND.

HALF A STATE COMPLETELY COVERED
at one Combination Rate
EVENING COURIER MORNING POST
Two Great Newspapers—Published at Camden, N. J.
National Representatives
STORY, BROOKS & FINLEY

Do the Fall months just ahead promise big revenue for your classified medium? They do for our many clients!
THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, Inc.
International Classified Advertising Counsellors
Packard Building Philadelphia

if you have something to SELL—
—and it's good.
—and you want other folk to know it's good.
—thrifty folk who have money and the habit of spending.
—people who live in the prosperous Cleveland market then—
you must tell them about it through
The Cleveland News
Ohio's Greatest Newspaper
DAILY and SUNDAY
Represented by Geo. A. McDevitt Co.
250 Park Ave., New York
914 People's Gas Bldg., Chicago

WOMEN IN ADVERTISING AND JOURNALISM

Hettie Cattell Played "Beauty Doctor" for a Newspaper Story—Mrs. O'Neill Edits Coast Weekly—Lucile Duffy Leaves Spokane Chronicle to Join Women's Publication

HETTIE FITHIAN CATTELL, feature writer for the New York Daily Mirror, undertook the beautification of a group of women for a newspaper story a short time ago, and the experience, she believes, was her most interesting assignment. She chose several women willing to undergo the treatments and obtained an excellent story with "before and after taking" pictures.

Hettie Fithian Cattell

"A plastic surgeon and I cut the women up, and the paper didn't have a damage suit," Miss Cattell said this week. "They were greatly improved in appearance, and they are all my friends to this day, very grateful for what the paper did for them.

"A newspaper contest editor on the Rocky Mountain Times in Denver once awarded me a writing prize. That made a newspaper reporter of me.

"That prize sent me from Denver to the Pacific Coast, from there to Texas, on to Chicago, and then to New York City. And according to the advice of the railroad advertising men, I 'saw America first,' and I might add, thoroughly. I learned about the United States, and I learned newspaper work. In fact, I am now at home everywhere in a newspaper office, except at a typesetting machine. And I suppose I shall find myself there some day.

"I was a managing editor of a weekly at one time. My society editor used to upbraid me because I occasionally printed news which she had been saving for her column. But she was 70 years old, and had never been in a newspaper office before, and so I remained silent when she scolded me, and continued to print any news my other reporters could get, even if it interfered with the old lady's economizing. I had a great battle with my chiefs in Chicago who would not let me put news into the paper after Thursday night though the papers went to the subscribers Saturday mornings. I resigned this position, firmly believing that I was not meant to be a managing editor.

"When in Texas I was ostracized by a few society women because I liked to ride on the front seat of the new auto police patrol. But if a woman is to be a police reporter, the police patrol is the place for her."

Miss Cattell's married name is Parker, and she is pictured with her 9-year-old daughter Nancy Parker—or is it Nancy Cattell? Page the Lucy Stone League!

Mrs. Eleanor O'Neill has assumed the position of editor and manager of her paper, the Prescott (Wash.) Spectator. James O'Neill, her son, is now on the staff of the Colfax (Wash.) Gazette. Mrs. O'Neill is the fourth O'Neill to manage the Spectator.

Miss Lucile Duffy, formerly with the Spokane Chronicle, has joined the circulation department of the Spokane Woman.

WORCESTER POST EXPANDS

Departments Rearranged and Much New Equipment Installed

Last Saturday was moving day for the Worcester (Mass.) Post.

The editorial rooms were moved from the third to the sixth floor. Installation of a 10,000 pound Hoe electrical melting pot, the only one of its kind in New England outside of Waterbury, was completed with special engineering to make its presence on the sixth floor without danger. A new Hoe casting machine, capable of finishing six plates per minute, was part of the new machinery. A new automatic electric elevator was built to connect the sixth floor stereotyping room with the composing room on the seventh floor. A new conveyor for the Goss press was added to the plant's equipment.

Three new linotype machines have been installed, and all machines are to be equipped shortly with electric melting pots to replace the old type gas.

Floor space in the plant was increased 4,500 square feet.

NEW TEXAS GROUP

H. F. Mayes of Brownwood Heads Mid-State Press Organization

H. F. Mayes, general manager of the Brownwood (Tex.) Bulletin, was elected president of the new Mid-Texas Press Association, organization of which was perfected at a meeting in Brownwood Sept. 17. R. L. Scott, DeLeon Free Press, was chosen first vice-president; R. E. Bradbury, Lometa Reporter, second vice-president; H. M. Jones, Brownwood News, secretary and treasurer.

On an executive committee President Mayes appointed H. H. Jackson, Coleman Democrat-Voice; J. C. White, Brownwood Bulletin, and M. S. Sellers, Rising Star Record. Program committee, Mr. Jones, H. F. Schwenker, Brady Standard, and Mr. Scott.

The executive committee will select time and place of next meeting, for which the other committee will prepare a program.

The association adopted a resolution offered by W. T. Curtis, Brownwood, urging re-establishment of the University of Texas school of journalism and recommending that Will H. Mayes be returned as dean of the school. Another resolution expressed grief at the death of John Sneed, Dallas News correspondent.

NEW PRESIDENT NAMED BY MONTANA EDITORS

Leipheimer, M. E. of Anaconda Standard, Succeeds Woare, Chester Reporter—Dean Stone Honored By Group

E. G. Leipheimer, managing editor of the Anaconda (Mont.) Standard, was elected president of the Montana Press Association at the annual convention which ended in Billings, Mont., Sept. 15.

Marten J. Hutchins of the Missoula Daily Missoulian, who was unable to attend the convention because of illness, was honored by election as honorary vice-president of the organization. The other officers elected were Joe Gehrett of the Laurel Outlook, first vice-president; R. G. Linebarger, Havre Promoter, second vice-president; Charles Draper, Red Lodge Picket-Journal, third vice-president, and S. E. Peterson of Great Falls, secretary-treasurer.

Dean A. L. Stone of the Montana School of Journalism was elected a life member of the association.

NEW CABLE TO GERMANY

The laying of the new high-speed submarine cable, which is to connect Emden, Germany, with the Azores, will be completed about Sept. 25, according to the Commercial Cable Company. This new cable will connect at the Azores with a cable already laid which runs directly into New York, and will thus re-establish direct communication between Germany and the United States for the first time since the former German cables were cut at the outbreak of the World War in August, 1914, the Company stated.

BUCKENDAHL PROMOTED

Harry H. Buckendahl, for the past eight years a member of the Chicago staff of Gilman, Nicoll & Ruthman, publishers' representatives, has been named manager of the San Francisco office effective Oct. 15. C. H. Heydon, formerly with the Kansas City Star joined the Chicago staff of Gilman, Nicoll & Ruthman on Sept. 10.

If Quality

of circulation is your first consideration

The Evening Star

With Sunday Morning Editions

Washington, D. C.

will have your preference—same as it has the preference of practically everyone in the National Capital.

The Star's circulation is home circulation—both quality and quantity—the kind that counts most with advertisers.

N. Y. Office—110 E. 42nd St.
Dan A. Carroll

Chicago Office—Tower Building
J. E. Lutz

Regional Advertising
at Regional Rates
in
The Christian Science Monitor

An International Daily Newspaper
Publishing SELECTED ADVERTISING
ATLANTIC, CENTRAL and PACIFIC Editions
Rates and Circulation Data Supplied on Request

ADVERTISING OFFICES

Boston	New York	Kansas City
Philadelphia	London	San Francisco
Chicago	Paris	Los Angeles
Cleveland	Florence	Seattle
Detroit		Portland

"Buy What You Can Use"

have you been following the remarkable growth of the Detroit Times

Parkersburg, W. Va.
is growing rapidly

A new $5,000,000 rayon plant and other new industries are now being constructed there.

The city and suburban territory is covered by

The News
Morning and Sunday

with a circulation of 7,500 daily and 9,000 Sunday at only 3 cents a line.

Member A. B. C.

Represented nationally by the
DEVINE-MacQUOID CO., Inc.
New York Pittsburgh Chicago

The Los Angeles Evening Herald consistently carries more paid-advertising than any daily newspaper in the west

Representatives

New York	Chicago	San Francisco
Herb. W. Moloney	John H. Lederer	A. J. Norris Hill
604 Times Bldg.	910 Hearst Bldg.	710 Hearst Bldg.

creating Impression!

nearly half the 2013 national advertisers using the Cleveland Plain Dealer in 1925 used it exclusively.

The Plain Dealer
ONE Medium—ONE Cost ALONE Will sell it

J. B. Woodward, 110 E. 42d St., New York
Woodward & Kelly, 360 N. Mich. Ave., Chicago

GRAVURE SECTIONS PRINTED

SPECIAL AND REGULAR EDITIONS, MAGAZINE INSERTS AND COMMERCIAL WORK

Standard Gravure Corporation
LOUISVILLE KY

WITH THE GENERAL ADVERTISERS

National Retailers Propose Co-operative Campaign—Bakers Plan to Spend $500,000—Gillette Razor Celebrates 25th Anniversary

HERBERT SONNEBORN, of Wheeling, W. Va., and president of the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers, requested unified direction of present advertising and the launching of a great co-operative advertising campaign, in his address before the association in convention in Philadelphia this week. He also urged creation of a "Style Council" of manufacturers and retailers to determine "what is correct in masculine fashions."

"The possibilities of such a plan," he pointed out, "are startling, not only in the probability of increased consumption of wearing apparel but in its adaptability to more style, quality and institutional advertising copy being used, and consequently less exaggerated sales advertising.

"It would have the further effect, too, of prompting more frequent turnover by both manufacturer and retailer when there is thorough co-ordination between this plan and the proposed Style Council."

When the American Bakers' Association met in Atlantic City this week, plans were set in motion for a $500,000 advertising campaign, to explain to the public the nutritive value of bread. L. J. Schumaker, president, has endorsed the proposal.

The Gillette Safety Razor Company will celebrate its 25th anniversary Sept. 28. In honor of the occasion, the Gillette Blade, the company's house organ, has issued a 142-page jubilee edition. Twenty-five years of advertising in newspapers and magazines, this edition says, has played an important part in making the Gillette safety razor among the best articles of quick selling merchandise in retail stores.

Plans for a national educational advertising campaign, involving a probable investment of $465,000 in the next three years, were approved by the United States Fisheries Association in annual convention at Philadelphia last week. E. H. Cooley, New York, was reappointed manager of the association, to have direct supervision of the campaign, and Dana F. Ward of Whitman, Ward & Lee Company, Boston, was elected president.

A committee to supervise the expenditure of publicity funds—$90,000 of which has already been pledged toward the first year's campaign—will be named shortly. The campaign will probably start about Jan. 1. Although media have not yet been selected, it is expected that most of the investment will be made in newspapers. An advertising agency has not yet been chosen.

The object of the campaign is to present the nutritive value of fish as an all-week food and not merely as a Friday substitute for meat.

Hugh E. Agnew, professor of advertising, New York University, and Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business, Washington, were prominent among the speakers who advocated the advertising program.

Advertising and sales promotion will be prominent among topics to be discussed by the 5000 delegates who are expected to attend the convention of the American Gas Association at Atlantic City, October 11-15.

FINDS TREASURE CHESTS

Wichita Beacon Digs Up Unclaimed Warrants for Citizens

Three "treasure chests," amounting to thousands of dollars, were uncovered by S. A. Coleman, managing editor of the Wichita Beacon, and made available to the owners. Publication of the list of owners of the money was a feature that brought considerable comment.

Mr. Coleman discovered that warrants, amounting to several thousand dollars, were unclaimed in the office of the county clerk. These warrants, some of them 10 and 11 years old, ranged from 75 cents to $120, and were mostly for unclaimed witness fees.

At the city hall Mr. Coleman discovered that hundreds of dollars, mostly in refunds on street assessments and taxes, had been there for years. One man was advised that a check for $140 was at the city treasurer's office for him.

A fourth "chest" also was discovered at the American State Bank, where checks for dividends in a defunct bank had been held for months.

AD TIPS

N. W. Ayer & Son. 308 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Reported to have secured account of J. E. Caldwell & Co., jewelry, Philadelphia.

Benson and Gamble, 7 South Dearborn street, Chicago. Preparing list of newspapers on Pfanstiel Products Company, North Chicago, Ill.

Buchanan-Thomas, 412 South 19th street, Omaha, Neb. Giving copy to a few Middle West towns on Farraday Cigar.

Burnet-Kuhn Company, 605 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Preparing schedules on the Chicago Tribune.

Carter Advertising Agency, 285 Madison avenue, New York. Placing orders with newspapers in various sections for the Liberty Electric Corporation "Full Wave" radio battery charger, Stamford, Conn.

John H. Dunham Company, 431 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Preparing list on nut butter margarine, a product of John F. Jelke Company, Chicago.

Edwards, Ewing & Jones, 328 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Now handling account for Minter Bros., "Kid Boots" candy bar, New York. Also placing account for the Flako Products Corporation "Flako Pie Crust," New Brunswick, N. J.

Charles Daniel Frey Company, 30 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Preparing list on Simmons Company.

Fuller & Smith, Bulkley Building, Cleveland. Placing account for the Seiberling Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio, manufacturers "Seiberling" tires.

Walter F. Haehnle Company, Cincinnati. Has secured account of Bosworth Electric Company, radio.

Hanff-Metzger, Inc., 95 Madison avenue, New York. Placing orders with newspapers in various sections for the Columbia Phonograph Company, New York.

Hicks Advertising Agency, 52 Vanderbilt avenue, New York. Now handling account of Coudurier, Fructus & Descher, New York, silk manufacturers.

Huber Hoge, Inc., 415 Lexington avenue, New York. Placing account for the Model Brassiere Co., Inc., New York.

Ralph H. Jones Company, Schmidt Building, Cincinnati. Now handling account of the Estate Stove Company, Hamilton, Ohio, manufacturers "Estate Heatrola."

Kenyon Company, 131 Clarendon street, Boston. Placing orders with newspapers in various sections for the Raytheon Mfg. Company, radio tubes, Cambridge, Mass.

John S. King Company, Carnegie Hall, Cleveland. Now handling account for the White Sewing Machine Company, Cleveland.

Lord & Thomas and Logan, Inc., 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Placing account for Gets-It, Inc., Chicago, manufacturers "Gets-It" corn cure. Sending 900 line copy to large city newspapers on Hertz-Drive-It-Yourself Company, Chicago. Have issued generally to newspapers schedules on Pepsodent Company, both black and white and roto, for daily and Sunday insertions.

W. D. McAdams Company, 360 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Preparing schedules on Mothers Oats, Quaker Oats Company, Chicago.

Robert M. McMullen Company, 522 Fifth avenue, New York. Again placing orders with newspapers generally for the American Cranberry Exchange "Eat Mor" cranberries, New York.

Victor H Morgan Co., Union Trust Bldg., Cleveland. Preparing schedules for the Ohio Bell Telephone Co.

J. H. Newmark, Inc., 250 West 57th street, New York. Has secured the account of the Industrial Alcohol Manufacturers Association.

Porter-Eastman-Byrne, 22 West Monroe street, Chicago. Preparing list on Grigsby-Grunow-Hinds Company, Chicago.

Potts-Turnbull Company, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Will place Boncilla Co., Indianapolis, Ind., effective October 1.

Fred M. Randall Company, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Has secured account of the Minnesota and Ontario Paper Company, Minneapolis, Minn. (Insulite).

Fred M. Randall Company, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Issuing orders to a small list of newspapers on Critchlow Company (mail order).

William H. Rankin Company, People's Bank Building, Akron, O. Preparing a list of newspapers on B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co., Akron (Zipper Boots).

Roberts & MacAvinche, 30 North Dearborn street, Chicago. Issuing contracts to newspapers on Earl & Wilson, Troy, N. Y.

Ruthrauff & Ryan, Inc., 225 North Michigan Boulevard, Chicago. Placing orders with some newspapers in various sections for the Air Stove Mfg. Co, Des Moines, Iowa.

Shuman-Haws Company, 820 Tower court, Chicago. Issuing schedules to a small list of newspapers on Flossy Dental Company, Evanston, Ill.

Specton & Goldensky, City Centre Building, Philadelphia. Has secured account of the Douglass Hotel, Philadelphia.

Touzalin Advertising Agency, 7 South Dearborn street, Chicago. Has issued ten insertions to a list of newspapers for the advertising of Vesta Battery, Vesta Battery Company, Chicago.

Frank B. White Company, 33 S. Clark street, Chicago, has been appointed Sales and Advertising Counselor for The Sterilac Company, North Chicago, Ill.

Williams & Saylor, Inc., 450 Fourth avenue, New York. Placing orders with some New York city newspapers for the Hotchkiss Sale Company, "Hotchkiss" paper fastening machine and staples, Norwalk, Conn.

C. C. Winningham, General Motors Building, Detroit. Placing account for the Crittall Casement Window Company, Detroit, manufacturer steel casement windows.

BUILDINGS
PLANT LAYOUTS
PRODUCTION
OPERATION

An organization specializing solely in newspaper building design, manufacturing and production problems.

S. P. WESTON

Newspaper Buildings
Plant Layouts
Production, Operation

120 West 42nd Street New York

Largest Evening Circulation in Largest Market

For 26 consecutive years the Evening Journal has had the largest evening circulation in America—concentrated in New York and suburbs. More than DOUBLE the circulation of any other New York evening paper.

NEW YORK JOURNAL

America's Largest Evening Circulation and at 3c a copy

MERCHANT & EVANS CO.
PHILADELPHIA

Producers of

SPARTAN TYPE METAL

Since 1866

LINO • MONO • STERO
INTERTYPE
COMBINATION

Stocks in Principal Cities

Do you know what percentage of errors are made in your Composing Room?

We suggest you go there and take fifty original proofs. Count up the number of lines and the number of errors. Get the percentage of errors to lines.

It takes twice as long to correct an error as it does to make it, so multiply this percentage by three.

Take this resultant percentage and apply it to your total Composing Room payroll for the year. See how much money errors are costing you.

When you find out what they cost you write and tell us the amount. We will show you a source of profit you have never heard of.

Matrix Contrast Corp.
33 W. 42nd St., New York City

NEW YORK STATE

Westchester County's

Fastest Growing Cities

Mount Vernon and New Rochelle and The Vicinity Towns

Are Covered Completely by

THE DAILY ARGUS
of
Mount Vernon
THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle

Both Members of A. B. C.

Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

Normal Miami
"Hitting on All Six"

The motor vehicles of Florida in July, 1926, burned 22,176,238 gallons of gasoline. This is an INCREASE of 6,000,000 GALLONS over the consumption of gasoline for the same month last year. Today, over 60,000 pleasure cars are registered in Dade County, of which MIAMI is the county seat. These things denote PROGRESS—genuine activity!

The Herald is growing with Miami and offers the National Advertiser GREATER HOME COVERAGE than any other Miami newspaper!

The Miami Herald

"Florida's Most Important Newspaper"

Frank B. Shutts, Publisher.

Peoria
The Try-Out City
THE PEORIA
JOURNAL
Transcript
Puts Tryouts Over!
CHAS. H. EDDY CO.
New York - Chicago - Boston

175 PAPERS QUIT CASH DISCOUNTS

N. A. Advises Member Advertisers to Scan Rate Cards Carefully For Allowance When Making Up Their Lists

Approximately 175 daily newspapers ive abandoned payment of cash discounts advertisers, according to a survey com-ted by the newspaper committee of the ssociation of National Advertisers, it as announced this week from the asso-ation's New York headquarters. Verne irnett, secretary of the advertising com-ittee of the General Motors Company, etroit, is chairman of the committee.

Following completion of the survey, the .N.A. through its weekly news bulletin ivised member advertisers when making their lists to pay particular attention to wspaper rate cards to see whether or t any discount is allowed for cash be-re figuring space costs.

It is the opinion of the A.N.A. news-per committee, according to R. K. avitt, association secretary, that if any otest is made to the newspapers it ould be made by the advertisers indi-dually, rather than by the association as body.

The same committee is making a study advertising typography as it relates to wspaper space. The experience of wspapers which have put in force strict les governing advertising make-up is ing investigated in an effort to show at clean advertising copy pays the pub-hers as well as the advertisers. While it admitted that all national copy is not rfect, the committee believes the great-t trouble is now being caused by local tailers, who use screaming borders and avy black type.

It is felt that national advertisers will generally ready to co-operate to the llest possible extent with newspapers hich institute standards of typographical ake-up.

RETAILERS TO MEET

embers of Sales Promotion Division, N.R.D.G.A. in Chicago, Sept. 28-30

Members of the sales promotion ivision of the National Retail Dry Goods ssociation will hold their second annual all meeting in Chicago at the Hotel herman, Sept. 28-30.

Speakers and topics follow:

"A Symposium on Style in Stores"; "The ources of Fashion Information," Miss Lucy ark, Harper's Bazaar; "How Manufacturers o-operate with Retailers in Fashion Promo-on," Paul Thomas, advertising manager, Che-ey Brothers, New York; "How to Put Fashion nformation to Work in Stores," Miss Fanny rms, Halle Brothers Company, Cleveland, O.; Sales Promotion by Stunts," Frances Hooper, hicago; "What an Advertiser Should Know bout Merchandising," J. R. Ozanne, adver-sing manager, Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., holesale, Chicago; "How Much It Costs Write an Ad," L. S. McMeekin, the Boston tore, Milwaukee; "Community Advertising," rent Sickles, secretary, Retail Merchants As-ociation, Chamber of Commerce, Columbus, O.; How the Data Book Helps Me," Evan Leslie llis, Mandel Brothers, Chicago; "Question ox," conducted by W. T. White, chairman, les promotion division; "The Store Wide ale—A Benefit or a Detriment," a debate; Training Advertising Personnel," "Advertis-g to the Stores Personnel," "The Woman Window Shopper," an address by Lew Hahn, anaging director, National Retail Dry Goods ssociation.

Better X-Words

late orders from

MIAMI DAILY NEWS
PROVIDENCE NEWS
DENVER EXPRESS

The International Syndicate
Baltimore, Md.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

LIQUOR DRINKING

To Editor & Publisher: A long absence from the office prevented my keeping up with my periodical reading and so I have just recently come across the editorial in the July 31 number of Editor & Publisher, headed "A Transparent Falsehood," in which you give the impression that you believe that liquor drinking has not been increased by the prohibition amendment.

I am very glad to read such expressions and I thank you.

American Osteopathic Association,
Dr. Ray G. Hulburt.

THE PINKHAM FLIGHT

Lynn, Mass., Sept. 17, 1926.

To Editor & Publisher: Such a gross misstatement of facts has been called to my attention in the Sept. 11 number of Editor & Publisher, that in the interest of truth I ask you to correct the error in the next number of your paper. The article is called "Pinkham puts over big publicity stunt. Contest with airplane trips to California as prizes won large space in news columns—four winners named."

First, let me introduce myself. I am Lydia Pinkham Gove, granddaughter of Lydia E. Pinkham, assistant treasurer of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, and actively engaged in the management of the business in the capacity of advertising manager and purchasing agent. While travelling with my brother's widow, Mrs. William Pinkham Gove, and her three children, the idea occurred to me and the conductor of our little party, Rev. James Luther Adams, assistant pastor of the Second Unitarian Church in Salem, to fly from Los Angeles, Cal., to Portland, Me., and land in Boston. Both Mr. Adams and I had enjoyed so much our flights from Los Angeles to San Diego, Riverside and Santa Barbara, that we decided immediately to cross the continent by airplane, and the next day we were on our way, leaving the rest of the party to proceed homeward by train.

The experience was so thrilling, particularly when we left the air mail routes and flew across the Grand Canyon, that we decided either to return to California ourselves with the pilot or to send some friends back that they might enjoy a similar pleasure. Then an enterprising Boston newspaper, recognizing the stupendous news value of such a story, suggested that the choice of return passengers be settled by a contest. The Boston Post deserves all the credit of this idea. Having run several successful contests in the past, this seemed to hold wonderful possibilities of news interest. Rev. James Luther Adams, who is a wide-awake minister and will be better known to the public later by his writings, heartily endorsed the plan. My mother, Mrs. Aroline C. Gove, treasurer of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, is personally paying for the cost of the airplane. Mr. Adams suggested that the Pinkham Medicine Company pay the personal expenses of the four successful contestants at the rate of $500 a piece. This suggestion was gratefully adopted by the other officials of the company. The cost to the Pinkham Medicine Company amounts to only $2,000.

Whether Mr. Adams is as clever an advertising man as he is a successful preacher, remains to be seen. But I will state right here that the Lydia Pinkham Gove's trans-continental flyers are making history rather than advertising her grandmother's famous Vegetable Compound. The news is first, the advertising is purely incidental.

Lydia Pinkham Gove,
Assistant Treasurer.

"WOULDN'T MISS E. & P."

Concord, N. H., Sept. 18, 1926.

To Editor & Publisher: I must add my tribute to the many you must surely receive from many other sources as to the inestimable value of Editor & Publisher to those of the newspaper fraternity. All during my newspaper career I have been a consistent reader of this one particular journal and would rather miss my three squares any day than one issue of Editor & Publisher. It is the most comprehensive journal published appealing to its particular clientele. The circulation page recently started is a very valuable addition. Much success to you.

R. C. Bishop,
Circulation Manager, Concord (N. H.) Daily Monitor and Patriot.

MR. OCH'S SUCCESS

To Editor & Publisher: May I ask space in your valued periodical to comment on James Melvin Lee's article about Adolph S. Ochs? When Dr. Lee writes, he writes with authority. His article is splendid and its subject deserving of all and more than he has said.

BUT . . . . .

I treasure the fact that I was a cub reporter on the Chattanooga Times when Adolph S. Ochs had personally to see after raising the payroll. I have read all that has ever been written about Mr. Ochs and has come to my attention, and whenever I have heard of an article about or a speech by him, I have hunted it up and studied it carefully.

The thing I want to find said somewhere about him, and I suppose one way to see it in print is to say it myself, is the thing that I KNOW, and here it is:

The success of Adolph S. Ochs is due to the fact that he applied business methods to the development of a newspaper that he would not be ashamed to show his Mother.

Henry Edward Warner,
Baltimore Sun.

CONGRESS PARTIES ON TOUR

U. S. Publishers, Delegates to Geneva Meet, Now Sightseeing Abroad

(By Cable to Editor & Publisher)

Lucerne, Switzerland, Sept. 22.— Forty American Press Congress of the World delegates under the leadership of retiring Secretary-Treasurer James W. Brown, arrived here yesterday from Interlaken via the Bernese Oberland Alps. The party included United States Press Congress Vice-President R. C. Snyder, Norwalk (O.) Reflector-Herald, and C. K. Blandin, St. Paul (Minn.) Pioneer Press and Dispatch. It leaves here tomorrow for Paris, arriving there Sept. 24, where the Hotel Commodore will be headquarters.

Leaving Paris Sept. 29, the party will go to Brussels for two days, and thence to London, where Hotel Cecil will be headquarters from Oct. 4 to Oct. 8.

Dean Walter Williams, of the School of Journalism, University of Missouri, will leave Paris Oct. 5 with a party of delegates for a tour of Germany and Central European countries.

Another American group, 35 in number under the leadership of Wallace Odell, Tarrytown, (N. Y.) News, is leaving for a tour of Italy. The party includes William Southern, Independence (Mo.) Examiner, president of the Inland Daily Press Association; A. Nevin Pomeroy, Chambersburg (Pa.) Repository; Thomas J. Blain, Port Chester (N. Y.) Item; C. A. Rowley, Ashtabula (O.) Star-Beacon; John Leahy, Painesville (O.) Telegraph; and William O. Dapping, Auburn (N. Y.) Citizen.

The World

These two newspapers offer the most powerful all-day service in New York available as a unit under a single contact. The 600,000 Daily World — Evening World readers constitute a highly concentrated force to be reckoned with in any campaign designed to effect distribution in Greater New York.

The Evening World
Pulitzer Building, New York
Tribune Tower, Chicago

The Tampa Morning Tribune
Tampa, Florida

LEADS

In Local Advertising
In National Advertising
In Classified Advertising
In City Circulation
In Suburban Circulation
In Total Circulation
Substantial Proof of Superiority
200,000 Daily Readers
300,000 Sunday Readers

Represented Nationally by

The S. C. Beckwith Special Agency

In Financial Advertising

The Sun

Leads All New York Evening Newspapers

Both in Volume and in Gain.

The Paris Fashion Board

The Greatest Fashion Feature Ever Offered For Weekly Release

BOARD MEMBERS

Jenny	Agnes
Lelong	Redfern
Premet	Patou
Doeuillet	Martial et Armand
Lanvin	Cheruit
Drecoll	Boulanger

These world-famous couturiers, constituting the Paris Fashion Board, will contribute in turn beginning October third, a weekly signed article of about 2,000 words with fine illustrations, giving the fullest and most authoritative interpretation of fashions. There will be a cable news lead for each weekly signed article sent direct from Paris.

COSMOS NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE INC
Covering the World
NINE EAST THIRTY-SEVENTH STREET NEW YORK CITY

AUTOMOBILE PRIZE CAMPAIGNS

Get the Circulation
Get the Money For It
Get It Quickly
Get It Right

Conducted on THE KENDALL PLAN

Contracts for
FALL and WINTER
CIRCULATION DRIVES
are being made
— NOW —

WIRE OR WRITE FOR DETAILS, REFERENCES OR SPECIMEN CONTRACT.

W. S. Kendall Company
104 NORTH BAILEY AVE.
LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY

DO YOU NEED A TRAINED MAN?

The Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, an organization of college trained newspaper, magazine and advertising men, wants to help you find him. The Bureau puts you in touch with experienced, energetic men—it saves you time by recommending only those who meet your requirements.

If you expect a vacancy, please write Robert B. Tarr, Director, Personnel Bureau of Sigma Delta Chi, P. O. Box 115, Pontiac, Michigan.

NO CHARGE TO EMPLOYERS

VANDERBILT IN DEBUT AS "BOXING CRITIC"

Former Tabloid Publisher Reports Dempsey-Tunney Fight—Believes He May Yet Establish Family Name in U. S. Journalism

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., erstwhile publisher of tabloids, tried his hand at fight reporting this week, covering the Dempsey-Tunney championship bout for the New York Mirror. He said he liked it.

But, in an interview with Rodney Dutcher, of United News, Sept. 19, he told of bigger ambitions. He believes, he said, he may yet stage a come-back, which will permanently establish the family name in American journalism.

Dutcher's story said:

"It was not altogether easy to make Vanderbilt stop talking features and get him to talk about himself, but he has great faith in his future and his subsequent discourse was revealing.

"'Experience has taught me,' he said, 'not to trust anybody—not even my closest friends. In fact, I would be inclined to trust my friends less than those whom I might hire.'

"'I know now,' he went on, 'that it is necessary in all transactions involving money to have a contract, no matter how small they are.'

"Young Vanderbilt thinks, despite his family's vigorous opposition, that he is a good newspaperman.

"'I don't think I'll go it alone, if I get another paper,' he said. 'I'll go into the editorial and writing end and let someone else handle the business.

"'Meanwhile, I'll continue writing. My doctors said I needed two years' rest, but I can't rest. I want to get a permanent newspaper job soon and do any kind of straight feature writing—or a column. Between now and the time I take over another newspaper I don't want to go stale. Also I need the job as a matter of finance, as I am not getting income from any source other than a few small investments.

"I don't think I'll ever start a paper. I think I'll buy one under someone else's name and run it for awhile without making myself known. I don't want both workers and readers to feel at once that the man in charge was once a failure and to begin worrying as to what will happen."

McGRATH RESIGNS FROM BOARD

Banker Out of Sympathy with American Type Founders Company

Raymond D. McGrath, member of the banking firm of Lazard Freres, has resigned from the board of the American Type Founders Company.

His action resulted from differences of opinion within the board of American Type Founders, which have grown since the death of Robert Nelson, the former president, and in which Mr. McGrath found himself out of sympathy with the present management. Mr. Nelson died about two months ago. Frank B. Berry now is president of the company.

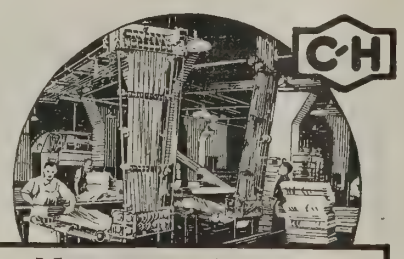
The action of the banking firm in severing its interest in the company was considered significant in Wall Street, since the bankers and their customers had been interested for years in American Type Founders and during the last year had sold an issue of the company's bonds. Executives of Lazard Freres refused to add to the statement that Mr. McGrath was out of sympathy with the present management. Mr. McGrath now is in Europe.

President Berry said yesterday that a large majority of the directors were in complete accord on matters of business and that the management remains in the hands of the former associates of Mr. Nelson. He added that the company was prosperous and that sales in the fiscal year ended Aug. 31, 1926, were the largest in its history.

EDITOR IS V. P. OF PANAMA

Tomas Gabriel Duque, editor and publisher of the Panama Star and Herald was recently elected vice-president of the Republic of Panama by vote of the National Assembly. Mr. Duque is manager of the National Bank of Panama, a vice-president of the Press Congress of the World, and ex-Secretary of Agriculture and Public Works of Panama.

Read EDITOR & PUBLISHER—$4 a year.



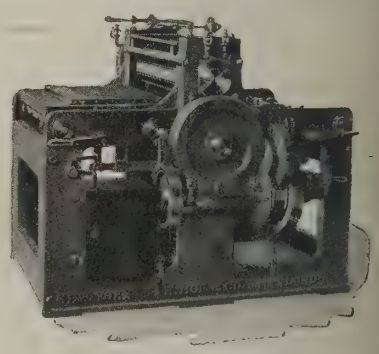
ENLARGES MAGAZINE SECTION

The enlarged 32-page magazine secti of the New York Herald-Tribune w appear for the first time on Sept. 2 edited by Mrs. William Brown Melone formerly editor of the Delineator.

Supplies and Equipment

Rebuilt
GOSS & HOE
PRESS
BARGAINS
ALL TYPES
SEND for LIST
THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO.
CHICAGO—NEW YORK—LONDON

FOR BETTER PRINTING
use
Herrick Inks
Cost more. Worth it.
No substitutes. Made from the best materials.
Specializing to requirements of each pressroom.
Ask the Publishers who use them.
WM. C. HERRICK INK CO., INC.
401 West 33rd Street
New York City
Factory: Rutherford, N. J.



Newspaper Conveyors
take the papers in a steady stream, as fast as the presses can deliver them, up, overhead, around corners, through a ceiling or a wall to wherever they're wanted for mailing or delivery. Eliminating waste and delay by their speedy, dependable operation they are profitable equipment for papers large or small. Newspaper plants from London to Tokio have been using them for years.
Let us tell you how you can speed deliveries from your presses.
The CUTLER-HAMMER Mfg. Co.
Pioneer Mfrs. of Electric Control Apparatus
1203 St. Paul Avenue
MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN
CUTLER-HAMMER

Modern
Composing Room Furniture
as made by us will speed up production and reduce costs—a real saving in your Pay Roll. Are you interested? If so, consult your regular dealer in printers' supplies or write us direct.
Do it now!
HAMILTON MFG. CO.
TWO RIVERS, WIS.

Don't "Pig" Metal
It Wastes Money
Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.
MONOMELT SLUG FEEDER
Eliminates the Metal Furnace
The Monomelt Co.
4509-19 Ravenswood Ave.
Chicago Illinois
World Bldg., New York City

USED NEWSPAPER PRESSES
Scott 16, 24 and 32-Page Presses
GOSS 24 and 28-page presses good for blac or color work, also Goss Sextuple.
HOE Pony Quadruple, Quadruple, Sextupl Sextuple color Press, Octuple and Double Sex tuple Presses.
DUPLEX Metropolitan Quadruple stereotyp presses—print up to 32 pages.
Available For Early Delivery
WALTER SCOTT & COMPANY
Main Office & Factory.....Plainfield, N. J
New York Office..Brokaw Bldg., 1457 Broadwa
Chicago Office.....Monadnock Bloc

THE MARGACH FEEDER
for Linotype, Intertype, Monotype, Ludlow, and Elrod machines
$75.00 each
Further inquiries may be directed to the
N. Y. Times Phila. Bulletin
Chicago Tribune Boston Herald
or several hundred other publishers upon request.
Margach Mfg. Co., Inc.
211-215 Centre St., New York

HOE New-Design Heavy-Duty Matrix Roller
Built especially for heavy-duty work from the best grade of materials. Heavy supporting Frames are cast in one piece and secured by two substantial crossbar castings. Bed, with five second travel in one direction for wet mats and twenty second travel for dry mats, accommodates the largest single and double-page chases in ordinary use.

Designed Especially for Dry Mats
R. HOE & CO., INC.
7 South Dearborn Street
CHICAGO, ILL.
504-520 Grand St., New York City also at DUNELLEN, N. J.
7 Water Street
BOSTON, MASS.

A copy of EDITOR & PUBLISHER reaches practically every Publisher and his executives. Your advertisement in its columns is a salesman every present—backed by the prestige gained and maintained by this publication in every newspaper office.

Employment—Equipment—Services

Classified

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Classified Advertising Information

TRANSIENT RATES

SITUATIONS (Cash with Order)
1 Time — .40 per line
3 Times — .30 per line
ALL OTHER CLASSIFICATIONS
(Cash with Order)
1 Time — .60 per line
4 Times — .55 per line

White space charge at same rate per line per insertion as earned by frequency of insertion. Special rates quoted for 13, 26 and 52 insertions. The Editor & Publisher reserves the right to classify, edit or reject any advertisement.

COUNT SIX WORDS TO LINE

ADVERTISING

General Promotion

Advertising Promotion—If you want more business, communicate with the International Publications Service, Incorporated, Suite 1004, 1841 Broadway, New York City.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Brokers

Very Desirable Weekly and Job Plant.—Within 25 miles of New York; exclusive field; splendid equipment; gross business $25,000; returns for time and investment over $8,000; price $25,000; initial payment $10,000; will stand the acid test. J. B. Shale, Times Bldg., New York.

The Only Paper (weekly) in Mississippi county seat town. Not a better field in the state. Nets nearly 20 per cent on investment under employed management. A $25,000 property, and worth more. Write at once for particulars. Prop. 1459x. The H. F. Henrichs Agency, Litchfield, Ill.

Newspapers Wanted

Experienced Young Man wants to buy, all or part interest in small southern daily. Must be in progressive town. Box A-934, Editor & Publisher.

CIRCULATION

Promotion

Circulation—When quick, additional circulation coverage becomes necessary, remember that our twenty years in this one line of endeavor is your proof against experimenting. Write or wire Pacific Coast Circulation Service, Bell Block, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Circulation Builders—Blair & Austin, 1504 Centre Ave., Reading, Penn. Originators of Salesmanship Club Campaigns.

Premiums

Publishers-Circulation Managers. We offer a special new dinner set that can be used at a price that will attract circulation, yet pay all promotion cost. The Albright China Co., Palmyra, N. J.

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

Circulation Promotion Manager for New York business daily. Must be experienced man: A-1 references. Box A-955, Editor & Publisher.

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted

City Editor wanted by morning newspaper with over 11,000 circulation. Must be young, willing to settle in progressive mid-west city of 20,000; have reportorial and executive ability; pep enough to organize and get the best out of his staff; and be able to adapt the latest and best in modern newspaper making to local conditions. Salary $55, starting at $40. Write A-919, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Promotion Man. Must have wide experience in planning campaign. Above all must have classified angle. Paper located in large eastern city of nearly a million population and rapidly becoming the leader in its field. In reply state age, experience and send proofs of work. Address Box A-958, Editor & Publisher.

Experienced Advertising Solicitor, who can make layouts and write good copy, wanted at once by Southern daily. Must be a good salesman and of clean habits. Give age and experience. Address Box A-960, Editor & Publisher.

Syndicate Salesman for several territories with live feature service fast developing with good material that real newspapers buy. Commission basis and exclusive territory with credit for all contracts closed by mail. Semi-monthly settlement and drawing account or salary after sixty days. Tell us something about yourself, what you can do for us and where. Box A-956, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted, Two Display Advertising Salesmen. Must have original sales ideas and be able to create and hold new accounts. No has-beens or beginners. Production alone will govern salary. Position open October 1st. Write giving experience, references, age, married or single, religion. Send copy of layouts and photograph. Give salary now receiving. Mt. Clemens Daily Leader, Mt. Clemens, Mich.

Wanted, Young Man with enough experience and education to handle news desk on only afternoon daily. Must be able to edit press service, write heads and direct efforts of others, as well as doing some writing. College man preferred. Write giving references, experience, education, age, married or single, religion. Also sent photograph. Give salary now receiving. Position open October 1. No has-beens or beginners. Mt. Clemens Daily Leader, Mt. Clemens, Mich.

Situations Wanted

Advertising Manager, now employed, seeks new connection. Age 28. 10 years' versatile experience in copy writing and selling advertising. Producer of new business, successful in developing accounts into permanent advertisers. Can furnish best of references. Box A-954, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Salesman—Special Page and Special Edition experience. Desires connection, temporary or permanent, preferably near New York. Interview anytime. Box A-933, Editor & Publisher.

Assistant Publisher, business manager, advertising manager, of wide experience and unbeatable record as organizer and business getter seeks wider field with greater opportunity. Now employed as business manager by Eastern city newspaper. Box A-942, Editor & Publisher.

Business Manager or assistant to Publisher. Accountant, College education. An analyst who believes in maximum results with minimum expense. Knows costs and can find the leaks. Thorough knowledge in circulation, promotion, advertising and credits. A-921, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation position where hard work and knowledge qualifies for advancement. College graduate with five years' experience in all phases of circulation work, including A. B. C. Best references. Box A-935, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Builder—Newsdealers, newsboys and home delivery expert wants position on established evening newspaper in town over 100,000 population. At present employed, but can make myself available in thirty days. A-900, Editor & Publisher.

Circulating Manager—With record of accomplishment, know promotion, office routine, A. B. C. and Mailing. 7 years in last position. A No. 1 reference. Address Box A-948, care Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager, at present employed, twenty-eight years of age, and efficient. Experienced in city and state work. Address Box A-959, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager seeks advancement. 14 years going up, with success. References from all past employers. Write A-957, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager—Fifteen years' experience from carrier to Circulation Director on large dailies. Morning and afternoon experience. Know how to manage boys to get results. Know how to manage agents, canvassers and solicitors; also mail order campaigns. Am good organizer. Know A. B. C. and office detail. Solicit interview at my expense. A-936, Editor & Publisher.

EMPLOYMENT

Situations Wanted

Circulation and Promotion Manager. Fast, clean promotion manager, specialty home delivery installation and building. Well versed circulation executive. Trained in Hearst and Scripps Howard organizations; excellent references. Salary $5,720. Located Atlantic Seaboard. Conference and go anywhere in U. S. Address Circulator, Box 203, Palmyra, N. J.

City Editor of small daily wants editorship of weekly. Box A-950, Editor & Publisher.

City-Telegraph-News Editor—Now managing editor small daily. Desires connection larger paper with opportunity of promotion. Good executive. Married. Box A-945, Editor & Publisher.

Desk Man—Seeks position on daily. Reporting and rewrite also. Available at once. Box A-940, Editor & Publisher.

Editor—Now completing 15 years' engagement as researcher, writer and editor for I. N. Phelps-Stokes' Iconography of Manhattan Island, desires responsible new position in New York City as editor of magazine, encyclopedia, or book of local history or biography. Skilled organizer and executive; American, Christian, university graduate. Address Thomas W. Hotchkiss, Box 342, Peekskill, N. Y.

Editor, Reporter, 28, small city and metropolitan experience, open for desk or beat on P. M. daily in city above 75,000. Box A-928, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor-Editorial Writer—Now in city of 20,000. Desires change because of political disagreement with management. Good organizer, leader and disciplinarian. Best of references present and former employers as to ability, habits, personality. Married. Box A-944, Editor & Publisher.

Mechanical Superintendent or Foreman of composing room wants to get located with good paper. Good reason for wanting to change present position. Best references as to character and ability. A-947, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Woman, experienced in reportorial, editorial, feature and column writing, now employed, would like to connect with paper in South or Middle West. Can furnish clippings. Address A-924, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Pressman, 30 years old, with several years' experience on presses and in stereotyping. Have worked as foreman last seven years. Am married, sober, steady and reliable. Can furnish best of reference. Box A-953, Editor & Publisher.

Pressmen, 27 years' experience on newspapers and job work, executive ability desires connections. Address Mayo Blackwell, care Editor and Publisher.

Soliciting-Advertising Manager. Ten successful years in selling and directing, capable in copy, layout, campaigns and in local and foreign advertising. Produce business either alone or with staff on small or large paper. Full details given on inquiry. Box A-951, Editor & Publisher.

Sports Editor—National reputation metropolitan field. Original small town man; like it better. Young. Married. Wants permanent job as sports editor city 100,000—200,000 population. Now employed. Box A-952, Editor & Publisher.

Telegraph and Local Editor now working, on small morning daily. Want job on evening daily, good weekly, or on writing end special edition crew. Also had Chamber of Commerce and political experience. No kid. References. Address, Currie, Democrat, Durango, Colorado.

MECHANICAL

Equipment for Sale

Complete Newspaper Plant for sale. Two tubular duplex presses with stereotype equipment; seven intertype machines; photographic and photo engraving departments located San Francisco; Wesel saw and planer and photo engraving plant, Miami, Florida. Whole or in part as is, where is. Address John W. Brodix, receiver. Vanderbilt Newspapers, Inc., 56 Twelfth street, San Francisco, Calif.

Cox Duplex Perfecting Press cheap for quick sale. Midway Driller, Taft, Calif.

For Sale—Direct Current, 220 volt, 50 hp. Press Drive and control at a great bargain for delivery about Oct. 1. All in perfect condition and with an extra new armature which alone cost $550. For price and terms write The Zanesville Publishing Company, Zanesville, O.

MECHANICAL

Equipment for Sale

Job Presses, Paper Cutters, Wire Stitchers, etc.—A complete line. Overhauled and guaranteed machines at bargain prices. Easy terms. Hoffmann Type & Engraving Co., 114 E. 13th St., N. Y. City.

Presses—Goss Comet Press and Duplex 8 page press. First class condition. Immediate delivery. Griffiths Publishers Exchange, 154 Nassau Street, New York City.

Printers', Bookbinders' Outfitters—Modern cut-cost equipment, also rebuilt machinery. Conner, Fendler Branch, A. T. F. Co., New York City.

Photo-Engraving plant for sale. Ideal for one or two men. Miles Machinery Co., 409 W. 26th St., New York.

Used Goss Matt Roller for wet mats only, for sale cheap. The Goss Printing Press Co., 1535 So. Paulina St., Chicago, Ill.

Equipment Wanted

All Kinds of Photo-Engraving, electrotyping and stereotyping equipment wanted. We pay cash. Miles Machinery Co., 409 W. 26th St., New York.

For Sale—Miscellaneous

For Sale—Splendid Mortgage Bargain. Five first mortgages, eight per cent interest, income properties totalling $46,500 at heavy discount for immediate sale at $35,000 cash. Liberally secured by $115,000 valuation. Advertiser, to settle estate, requested to sell and distribute in cash, mortgage assets comprising five separate and independently secured mortgages on five prosperous Florida newspaper plants (one daily, four weeklies) in splendidly located, rapidly growing communities. In each case publications are popular, making good profits and are without opposition. Highest bankers' references furnished responsible parties. Write or wire only if you are prepared to buy. Splendid investment. George B. Walker, Harder-Hall Bldg., attorney-at-law, Sebring, Fla.

We offer
New York State Daily
Exclusive in its field
City population close to 20,000
County population close to 100,000
Only daily in city
and county now
paying handsome investment
on price asked. Inquiries considered from investors with $75,000 cash
Palmer, Dewitt & Palmer
350 Madison Ave., N. Y. City

CONSOLIDATION

The merging of newspaper interests is a subject that has received special study and investigation by this firm for nearly 17 years. It is a big subject and requires considerable technical knowledge, both as to valuation and operating methods. When properly organized, the results are never disappointing.

We have been factors in many important consolidations, sales and appraisals.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

We Have Moved

Into new and larger offices in Springfield's finest office building. Please note our new address:

509-511 Security Bldg.,
44 Vernon Street

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC
-SECURITY BLDG. SPRINGFIELD, MASS

DOLLAR $ $ $ $ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

IT'LL soon be time for the householder to start his annual worry over the fuel situation. Interview coal and oil dealers on the prospects for a steady supply of fuel this winter and the probable variations in prices if any. An interesting sidelight on the situation would be how much of an inroad oil has made on the use of coal.—F. D. H.

"School Days Are Ford Days!" This was the idea back of a page ad that the solicitor for the Bloomington (Ind.) Evening World sold to the Graham Auto Company, Ford dealers. The Graham Company took half the space to advertise new and used cars and two other dealers who had used Fords to sell took the rest of the page. The idea that pupils who have to come in to high school from the country would have more time for school work and for helping on the farm was featured.—Norman J. Radder, Bloomington, Ind.

Garages are frequently hard places to solicit and sell advertising. But a Huntington, Ind., newspaper has solved part of the problem and has at least one garage for a steady advertiser. This garage advertises "Cars Washed—$1.00 on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday; $1.50 on Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday Mornings." One 3 x 12 ad early in the week brings in business during a slack time. Another ad helps week-end business.—Ralph Gibler, Huntington, Ind.

Aurora (Ill.) newspapers recently attracted extra advertising through a "Children's Wednesday" put over by the Aurora merchants. Included in the advertising offers were clothing, shoes, watches, books, radio parts, musical instruments, bicycles, bank accounts, and so forth.—F. D. H.

In view of the fact that Oct. 3rd to 9th will be Fire Prevention Week, to be nationally observed, a group of local fire insurance ads may be secured by each local newspaper at that time. Text to accompany the ads may consist of a message, or advice to citizens on how to avoid fires, from the local fire chief.—C. M. L., Seattle.

Get a group of clock and watch ads from jewelers, stressing the necessity for correct time in the home, since neither the telegraph or telephone companies will now give out the time. Householders are thus being compelled to have correct timepieces in their homes. Clock and watch repair-men may likewise be good prospects.—C. M. L.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "H U N C H" PUBLISHED

MANY stories have been written about the favorite books read by adults. What are the favorite books of children who patronize your public library? The Kansas City Star recently found that the old-time favorites, such as "Alice in Wonderland," "Huck Finn," "Robinson Crusoe," and "Tom Brown at Rugby," were still being eagerly read by the younger generation of today.—L. C. Pratt.

Is your city growing materially as well as in population? There are many familiar ways of gauging the growth of a city, but some new ones were recently employed by a reporter on the Pasadena Star-News. He compared not only the bank clearings and building records of this year with those of last year, but also the number of school buildings and pupils, the number of theaters, business establishments, automobile agencies and professional men, showing that in every way the city was becoming bigger.—L. C. Pratt.

Oil paintings of children were offered as prizes in a Children's Beauty Contest conducted by the St. Louis Times which aroused much interest upon the part of young parents. Three divisions divided the children, those from two to five years, those from five to nine years, and those from nine to thirteen years. A local photographer made the picture of any child entered in the contest free of charge. Beauty experts picked the winners from the pictures, several of which were published each day during the contest.—David Resnick.

Visit the librarian and get statistics from her showing the rate of increase in book reading as the months get cooler. The story can be made more complete by noting if there is any change in the quality of reading most in demand during the winter months.—F. D. H.

SAYS LEADERSHIP WINS

Good Foreman Key to Good Shop Conditions and Productive Capacity

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Relations between employer and employes in this country are better today than ever before, in the opinion of Robert H. Spahr, industrial relations expert of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, as expressed in an address before the First Annual Industrial Extension Conference, held at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N. J. Mr. Spahr said this greatly improved relationship was attributable in a large measure to better foremanship.

"The foreman," he declared, "occupies a strategic position in modern management. He is in a position to make or break amicable relations, in view of the fact that to the employe he represents the management; he wields an untold influence; he is the boss to the men and they judge the company accordingly, and in the final analysis a company is judged by the acts of its individuals and in the same manner that a man is judged by the company he keeps. The company's labor policy is no sounder than the actual working policy of each of its foremen. On the other hand, the foreman represents the men to the management, and naturally if the men in the ranks do not have confidence in him he works at a tremendous disadvantage. The job of the foreman is to get results—he holds the key to productive capacity."

"It is a commonly recognized fact," Mr. Spahr went on to say, "that the human being responds to leadership rather than pressure. Consequently the older type of foreman is passing out and the modern foreman is taking his place. Experience has shown that he must have a square deal for everyone, that he must be dependable, that he must be open-minded, that he must be the one who truly serves. Better foremanship as a modern business policy is a paying proposition from every angle."

AID FOR FLOOD VICTIMS

K. C. Journal-Post and K. C. Star Raise Relief Funds

Before the flood waters ceased rising in western Kansas last week, the Kansas City Journal-Post began with its own subscription a fund for flood sufferers, which this week reached $25,000. The fund was contributed to by the Kansas City Star, which gave $1,000. The Star also maintained a subscription list of its own.

A fund was started Sept. 17 by the Kansas City Star for the surviving families of eight "muckers" who were killed two days before in an explosion in a tunnel under the Missouri river in Kansas City.

8-PAGE ROTO AD SECTION

The Fort Worth (Tex.) Star-Telegram on Sunday, Sept 12, printed an eight-page rotogravure advertising section devoted to Mrs. Baird's Bakery.

E. F. S.
Editors' Feature Service

Over 100 independent newspapers throughout the country subscribe to this fine daily service as a protection against rising feature costs.

Six Pages Daily
Illustrations in Mat Form

Write or wire for samples, price and territory.

Editors' Feature Service, Inc.
1819 Broadway, New York
Allied with Johnson Features, Inc.

Kerney's Story of Wilson
for the first time released for NEWSPAPERS
is being bought by editors from coast to coast

Territory closing rapidly

The McClure Newspaper Syndicate
373 Fourth Avenue New York

NS
The Psychology of Crime
Ten Weekly Articles
By DAVID SEABURY
Author of "Unmasking Our Minds"
FIRST ORDERS RECEIVED
New York World
Detroit Free Press
Milwaukee Journal

The O'Dell Newspaper Service
Fifty-Five Fifth Avenue New York City

COMPLETE WIRE REPORTS FOR EVENING AND SUNDAY PAPERS
International News Service
"Get It FIRST but First Get It RIGHT"
63 Park Row
NEW YORK CITY

BILLY EVANS

America's foremost authority on baseball writes only for our clients.

NEA Service, Inc.,
1200 W. 3rd St., Cleveland, Ohio
NEA

How To Play GOLF
By JOHNNY FARRELL
Famous Teacher of That Game
24 LESSONS
Illustrated
For release daily
KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, Inc.
New York City

THE WELFARE COMMITTEE
of the
INTERNATIONAL CIRCULATION MANAGERS ASSOCIATION

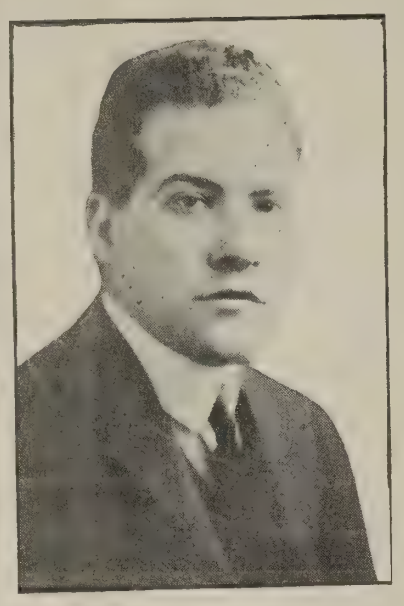
Can supply you with competent circulation men of capacity and ability capable to take entire charge of your department or to fill important posts in the department.

Address the Secretary-Treasurer please, Mr. Clarence Eyster, care Star Building, Peoria, Ill.

~Buys and sells for the whole World~

New York State is not only the greatest buying market—but is equally as great a selling market, possessing all the natural geographical advantages of being a seaport state, bordering the great lakes and covered with a network of fine railroads—the world's commerce enters and passes thru its doors.

A center of population—industry—farming — finance and commerce. Its inhabitants are great earners and spenders. They want and get the best from life.



New York State is unquestionably the Country's greatest buying market. Every advertiser can get his share of the business by going after it.

The papers listed below will help you

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
Albany Evening News (E)	34,444	.10	.10
Albany Knickerbocker Press (M)	34,018	.11	.11
Albany Knickerbocker Press (S)	56,924	.16	.16
Amsterdam Recorder-Democrat (E)	7,310	.04	.04
††Auburn Citizen (E)	6,389	.065	.055
Brooklyn Daily Eagle (E)	73,764	.22	.22
Brooklyn Daily Eagle (S)	84,997	.22	.22
 ∫ Buffalo Courier-Express (M)	116,000	.22	.22
∫ Buffalo Courier-Express (S)	155,000	.30	.30
Buffalo Evening News (E)	138,294	.25	.25
Buffalo Evening Times (E)	115,000	.21	.21
Buffalo Sunday Times (S)	135,000	.21	.21
††Corning Evening Leader (E)	9,339	.05	.05
Elmira Star-Gazette Advertiser (E&M)	33,487	.11	.11
Freeport Daily Review (E)	7,991	.05	.05
††Geneva Daily Times (E)	5,040	.04	.04
Gloversville Leader Republican (E)	7,238	.035	.035
††Ithaca Journal-News (E)	7,751	.05	.05
Jamestown Morning Post (M)	11,722	.04	.035
Middletown Times-Press (E)	7,127	.04	.04
Mount Vernon Daily Argus (E)	10,437	.05	.05
Newburgh Daily News (E)	12,132	.06	.06
New Rochelle Standard-Star (E)	8,598	.04	.04
The Sun, New York (E)	257,067	.60	.56
New York Times (M)	356,471	.80	.784
New York Times (S)	610,041	1.00	.98
††New York Herald-Tribune (S)	345,484	.693	.672
††New York World (M)	287,682	.595	.58
††New York World (S)	582,929	.595	.58
††New York Evening World (E)	294,442	.595	.58
Niagara Falls Gazette (E)	20,629	.07	.07
Port Chester Item (E)	4,732	.03	.03
Poughkeepsie Star and Enterprise (E)	12,824	.06	.06
††Rochester Times-Union (E)	70,406	.21	.20
††Syracuse Journal (E)	65,326	.16	.16
Troy Record (M&E)	22,679	.06	.06
Watertown Standard (E)	17,617	.07	.07
Watertown Times (E)	17,334	.08	.08

 A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1926.
†† Government Statement, March 31, 1926.
 Merged as Buffalo Courier-Express, June 14, 1926.

RUKEYSER — meets a need

"Study of the situation over the country reveals that more and more attention to finance and business is being demanded from newspapers by the investing public. . . . To make profits, the publisher must reach the public with interesting financial news and information, thus building up an interest that makes a fertile field for profitable financial advertising."
—Frank Thayer in "Editor & Publisher."

Because he was one of the first to fill this need, M. S. Rukeyser has achieved for himself and the newspapers for which he has written outstanding success in his field.

He has discovered and uncovered the "human side" of finance.

He discusses getting money and spending money in terms of the actual experience of people of all classes, those who are building successful careers and those who have already achieved success.

He writes of business and domestic budget problems as intimate and personal as the questions answered in the lovelorn column and as important as those passed upon by the banker and the lawyer.

These are the RUKEYSER features

Men and Money

There is a wealth of color in the personalities and the institutions that figure in the day's financial news. This "human side" of finance is covered in a half-column daily feature the stories of the "big deals," the life and atmosphere of the financial district. It helps the "new investor" understand the current financial news of the day.

The Business of Getting Ahead

Here is a field wherein Rukeyser is a past master. His successful book "Common Sense of Money and Investments" is evidence. In a half-column he discusses the domestic and business problems revealed in his thousands of letters touching the worker, housewife, the professional man and the business man, the obstacles and the opportunities in their respective fields.

Makers of America

Once a week M. S. Rukeyser will give, in his "Makers of America," an interview-sketch of some important figure of the business or financial world who is in the news. These "talking pictures" present the news and views of the prominent figures of the day.

Released beginning September 27. Wire for remaining territory.

Current News Features

INCORPORATED

520 Evening Star Building, Washington, D. C.

LIBRARY OF THE UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS-CHAMPAIGN

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS-URBANA
3 0112 072556886